For second time, Tuthill denies A&B water call

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

Idaho's top water official on Tuesday once again denied an attempt by A&B Irrigation District to recover water it claims other groundwater pumpers took from it.

On his last day on the job, Idaho Department of Water Resources Director Dave Tuthill released a final order stating the Rupert-based district has not had to exceed "reasonable pumping levels," placing no burden on nearby groundwater users to provide mitigation water.

The order marks a turning point for the last of three major Magic Valley water-call cases Tuthill has considered in his two years on the job. A&B's case was actually quite old — the call was initially made in 1994 — and was kick-started in 2007 when the district alleged the state failed to follow through on a previous promise to manage the aquifer it relies on.

Responding to a court-ordered deadline, Tuthill denied the call in January 2008. A&B officials then requested a review of his decision, but hearing officer and former Idaho Chief Justice Gerald Schroeder came to a similar conclusion in a recommendation issued this March.

Tuthill had shortened deadlines this month to file exceptions to Schroeder's opinion, citing his own pending retirement and prompting complaints from A&B. The director's Tuesday order was short and to the point, stating that pumping

Otter to name IDWR interim director next week; permanent hire still to come

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

Idaho Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter will likely name an interim director of the Department of Water Resources sometime next week as he continues the search for a successor to retired Director Dave Tuthill.

Meanwhile, Tuthill celebrated his last day on the job Tuesday by issuing a couple of final orders on pending water matters.

Tuthill, who spent 33 years with IDWR and helmed the agency for the past two and a half, announced in late May that he would retire and become a private water consultant. Jeff Peppersack — head of the agency's water-allocation bureau — will now fill in as acting director for the next few days.

Otter spokesman Jon Hanian said the HAGERMAN — Gooding County Sheriff's Department deputies recovered the body of a Castleford man who drowned in the Snake River Tuesday evening.

Zachary Baird, 19, drowned near the Bell Rapids access area two miles southwest of Hagerman, Gooding County Sheriff Shaun Gough confirmed shortly after searchers recovered Baird's body at 10 p.m.

Gough, while at the scene, told the Times-News a group of four or five swimmers were swimming no more than 50 yards from the shore when, as Baird swam toward a floating buoy, he yelled for help before going underwater.

State responds to appeal in Sarah Johnson murder case

HAILEY — The state of Idaho says the latest appeal by Sarah Johnson, a Bellevue woman convicted of killing her parents in 2003 when she was 16, lacks merit to proceed in district court.

Writing for the state, Deputy Attorney General Jessica Lorello denied many of the assertions in Johnson's appeal made this spring, including that Johnson's counsel was ineffective in several ways.

Lorello listed four affirmative defenses for her conviction, including that the petition fails to state claims upon which relief may be granted, that claims that could have been raised on

Bus accident shakes local day care children

By Nichole Carnell
Times-News writer

FILER — A bus travelling from Filer to Buhl on U.S. Highway 30 Tuesday morning left 25 local day care children shaken but unharmed.

At around 10:30 a.m. 25 children and two employees from the Sunshine & Rainbows day care center in Filer were headed west-bound to Buhl when day care owner and driver, Diana Goff, suffered a medical condition causing her to lose control of the bus.

After hitting eastbound driver Scott Collins, 55, of Twin Falls, the bus stopped in a corn field located on 4000 North and U.S. 30, according to a press release by the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office.

Collins was driving a J.R. Simplot Co. truck

Pennsylvania man sentenced in Sun Valley rape case

The Associated Press

BOISE — A Pennsylvania man has been sentenced to life in prison in Idaho for sexually assaulting a woman at his Sun Valley condominium in 2005.

Jeffrey Marsalis, 35, was sentenced Tuesday by 5th District Judge Daniel Hurlbutt Jr., who said Marsalis must serve at least 15 years before being eligible for parole in the date rape case.

Marsalis was extradited to Idaho last fall from Pennsylvania, where he is serving a 21-year sentence for 2007 convictions on two counts of sexual assault.

Prosecutors say Marsalis drugged the victim's drink while the two were at a bar.

He later raped the 21-year-old while she was incapacitated. During the trial, defense attorney Doug Nelson argued that the night was nothing more than a date between two people who got drunk and had consensual sex.

An Ada County jury found Marsalis guilty in April of one count of felony rape.

Marsalis' father, Forrest Marsalis, appealed to the judge for leniency before sentencing, and Jeffrey Marsalis apologized to the victim for his actions.

"I am sorry," Marsalis said in court. "I was drunk." Marsalis will be returned to Pennsylvania to finish serving out his sentence there before serving his latest punishment.

In Philadelphia, he was portrayed as a smooth talker who met women on the online dating site Match.com, telling them he was an astronaut, doctor or spy and then slipping something into their drinks to incapacitate them. A jury there convicted him of two counts of sexual assault but acquitted him of eight counts of rape.

His Idaho victim told the jury that she'd met Marsalis shortly after moving to the resort town of Sun Valley. He was a security guard at the resort; she was a new employee who had moved to the region for work and to be closer to her younger sister.

levels had been "thoroughly reviewed."

"The director agrees with the hearing officer ... that A&B's poorest performing wells cannot per se be the measure of whether reasonable pumping levels have been exceeded; that the (aquifer) is not being mined; and that A&B has not been required to exceed reasonable pumping levels," Tuthill wrote.

Tuthill only departed from Schroeder's findings when he stated the case will maintain a separate record and interpretation from the other two water cases, which are both now in the courts.

He told the Times-News on Tuesday afternoon that he felt it was important to issue the order before leaving his post, having been the director when it started back up in 2007. The order now allows the delivery-call process to move forward — he said he fully expects it to be appealed to a judge.

A&B Manager Dan Temple could not be reached Tuesday for comment. But the district and the other parties in the case now have 14 days to petition Tuthill's successor to reconsider the order. The parties can also appeal to district court.

The director's job is expected to be only temporarily filled for the near future, but Tuthill said IDWR staff should provide the support needed for acting or interim directors to respond to any petitions.

governor had hoped to name a new director by the end of June, but had to delay because one candidate wasn't available for interviews until this month. The expected interim director — not necessarily Peppersack — will provide Otter more time to pick a candidate who meets the numerous requirements laid out in state code and who the governor feels will be able to handle the job. For example, Hanian noted, the IDWR director has to be an engineer.

"We'll take as long as it takes to find the right person," Hanian said, adding that the governor takes the same approach to every state official he appoints.

It wasn't entirely clear Tuesday if candidates for the permanent job are being interviewed. Hanian said he thought some interviews had begun, while Tuthill said he understood the job will still be advertised for a couple of months. Hanian did not commit to any sort of timeline for a hire.

A number of IDWR issues have quieted down for the moment, providing an opening for whomever Otter appoints to get up to speed. But the new director will have plenty to do. Tuthill issued final orders on two major issues just on Tuesday — including a change in how injury to canal companies with senior water rights is calculated.

A district judge recently issued his decision on a challenge of how Tuthill handled a water-delivery call, with a similar decision pending. And state officials and water users are in the process of refining a new plan to manage the Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer.

Tuthill has pledged to avoid conflicts of interest in his new job, which he said he will start in earnest next week. He said once again Tuesday that he believes he's leaving the job in good hands.

"As I depart the agency, I feel it's a very strong agency," he said.

Twin Falls County sheriff's deputies, officers from Filer and Buhl's police departments, and the Filer Fire and Quick Response Unit all responded to the call.

"I understand the kids were all a little shaken up," said Twin Falls County Sheriff Tom Carter, "but I'm grateful no one was injured today."

Burley Wal-Mart worker faces burglary charges

By Laurie Welch

BURLEY — A Burley Wal-Mart employee allegedly involved in a burglary scheme that defrauded the company of nearly $4,400 worth of merchandise will be arraigned Monday in district court.

Adam Macaalay White,

21, of Burley, will be arraigned on five counts of felony burglary in Minidoka County 5th District Court at 9 a.m. Monday.

According to court records White, along with three accomplices, stole the merchandise from the store, while he was on duty in the photo department.

Amanda L. Petersen, 24, of Burley, will face a jury in district court at 8:30 a.m. on Aug. 26 on five counts of felony burglary. Kyle Casey Hotchkiss, 30, is slated for a preliminary hearing in magistrate court at 1 p.m. on July 15. He is also charged with five counts of felony burglary. Monica Rocha, 17, charged with five counts of felony burglary, will appear in magistrate court at 1:30 p.m., July 8.

According to court reports, when White's accomplices, who were all his roommates, would come into the store he would allegedly scan high-priced items and bag them up and charge his accomplices for lesser-priced merchandise.

direct appeal can't be raised now in a petition for post-conviction relief, that many of the claims in this appeal are past the one-year statute of limitations, and that the claims are not supported by the evidence presented in them.

Lorello also argued for the state that the 5th Judicial District is not the proper venue for this appeal, saying that "this court is without authority, under any circumstances, to grant petitioner's request to vacat(e) the order, decision and opinion of the Supreme Court of Idaho in State v. Johnson ..."

The state is asking Judge Barry Wood to dismiss the petition and deny Johnson's appeal. Johnson is in prison at Pocatello Women's Correctional Center, serving two life sentences without possibility of parole.

Johnson's appeal is partially based on the recent identification of fingerprints found on a rifle scope and ammunition box found at the scene of her parents' deaths.

Blaine County Sheriff Walt Femling has previously said he is confident the man to whom the fingerprints belong had legitimate reasons to have touched the items, and that Johnson is guilty of the crime.

In the state's response, Lorello admits that a police investigation followed the identification of the fingerprints.

According to court records, there are no scheduled hearings pending in the case.

Accused molester Lynch free from jail on bond

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

GOODING — Accused of molesting two young girls in 1996, a Hagerman man has been free on bond since January, awaiting a trial scheduled for Aug. 3.

More charges involving additional victims are possible against Leslie Lynch, 69.

To date, Gooding County Prosecuting Attorney Calvin Campbell has charged Lynch with three counts of lewd and lascivious conduct with a child younger than 16 years old and one count of sexual abuse of a minor younger than 16. The four existing charges stem from alleged incidents in 1996 involving two sisters, ages 8 and 11 at the time.

During a pretrial conference in Gooding County 5th District Court Tuesday, Judge Barry Wood said he had just received a briefing on the case and scheduled another pretrial conference for July 28.

Following the pretrial conference, Campbell responded to a question about possible additional charges and more alleged victims.

“There are no additional charges against him at this point,” he said.

“There is a motion from us (prosecuting attorney’s office) to use testimony from other individuals who have made allegations,” Campbell said.

Gooding County Sheriff’s Detective Gerlyn Walker filed an affidavit in 2008 saying there might be additional victims.

The same affidavit states that Lynch had obtained silence from victims by claiming he had killed someone in the past.

Gooding County filed four charges of lewd conduct against Lynch in 1997 but dismissed all of them before they got to trial because the victims were too young to give viable testimony.

Burley infant killed when run over

By Damon Hunzeker
Times-News writer

BURLEY — A 1-year-old Burley girl, Libertee Dawn Lee, died Monday from injuries sustained after she was run over by a car.

According to the Cassia County Sheriff’s Office report, a 15-year-old female neighbor had been helping the victim’s mother, Angela Dawn Woodbuy, 28, with some yard work at a residence south of Burley.

The juvenile told police that she was backing Woodbury’s 2007 Mazda out of the garage to wash it on the grass. “She was backing and turned a little, still backing, and she saw the baby lying on the driveway and she stopped,” the report reads.

The infant’s 8-year-old brother picked up his sister and carried her to their mother, who immediately called for help. She met the ambulance on the street, where Lee was transported to Cassia Regional Medical Center.

She was taken by air ambulance to another hospital — presumably Primary Children’s Medical Center in Salt Lake City, Utah. Cassia County Undersheriff George Warrell confirmed that Lee later died from the injuries.

Nobody will be charged in the incident.

Idaho DMV increases ID requirements

By Nichole Carnell
Times-News writer

Lines at the DMV may be a little longer due to new registration requirements. Effective today, identification requirements for vehicle registration and titling will increase in an effort the Division of Motor Vehicles is calling an improvement in customer service, law enforcement efforts and record keeping.

Individuals registering must provide full legal name established by presenting a driver’s license, passport, birth certificate, military I.D. card, or another form of identification approved by the Idaho Transportation Department.

In addition to proof of identity, an Idaho driver’s license number or Idaho-issued identification card will also be required, along with a verifiable address and mailing addresses.

Individuals without an Idaho driver’s license, official Idaho-issued identification card or a Social Security number may submit a letter from the Social Security Administration confirming the agency has not issued a number.

These requirements

already must be met for anyone who seeks an Idaho driver’s license or identification card from the DMV, said Barry Takeuchi, titles program supervisor.

From June 21 police reports:
Vandalism:

A 36-year-old Burley woman reported graffiti on her sidewalk and on some old lockers she keeps behind her house.

According to the report, the words “JERKY” and “AERO” were spray-painted on the sidewalk. “OSEK” was written on the lockers with a black marker.

“I advised her that I would look for the people whose monikers were “OSEK,” “AERO,” and “JERKY,” the report reads.

Meth possession, et cetera:

Police responded to the East Park Motel in Burley regarding two males smoking marijuana.

Earlier, the complainant, an employee of the motel, walked into the room after knocking and “could smell the strong odor of ‘drugs,’” Deputy Jarrod Thompson’s report reads.

The employee said he asked a male juvenile, who was sitting on the bed, “Where’s the dope?”

The juvenile allegedly walked into the bathroom, grabbed a bag of weed and a pipe, and placed them on the dresser.

When questioned about other drugs, the juvenile allegedly took Thompson into the bathroom and showed him an orange plastic spoon with a “chunk of white-colored substance” in it, later determined to be meth.

The juvenile said he had been in the room with a 29-year-old male and, the report reads, “smoked a ‘bowel’ (sic) with him ... he said he had spent the night in the motel room and had smoked a ‘bowel’ (sic) with him earlier today but he did not use any methamphetamines.” He was arrested for possession of methamphetamines, possession of marijuana and possession of drug paraphernalia. A warrant for the 29-year-old male has been issued for the same charges.

State changes injury calculations to canal water rights

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

When ruling last year on a water-delivery call made by seven south-central Idaho canal operators, Idaho's top water official promised to revamp by the end of the year how his agency calculates harm done to their water rights.

The turn of the year came and went. But on Tuesday, before he retired from public service, Idaho Department of Water Resources Director Dave Tuthill set forth a lengthy and complex description of how the new process will work.

The outgoing director characterized the changes, developed over a number of months with input from various water users, as "a course adjustment, but not a brand-new course" for how the state handles allegations that users with junior rights are taking water belonging to seniors. The new set of steps replaces "minimum full supply" with "reasonable in-season demand" as the measure of how much water canal companies and irrigation districts should be able to receive. They also specify how harm to carry-over storage water kept in reservoirs should be treated.

ASHLEY SMITH/Times-News

A car drives over a bridge Tuesday afternoon at the Twin Falls Canal Company low line south of Twin Falls. On his last day on the job Dave Tuthill, director of the Idaho Department of Water Resources, issued an order Tuesday changing how the state calculates injury to canal company water rights.

The "reasonable demand" is defined for each entity through a number of calculations using climate, crop growth, water supplies, delivery efficiencies and other variables. It also calls for reference to a "baseline year" with average climate and water supplies, suggesting 2006 as a start. A series of water forecasts throughout each irrigation year are intended to calculate and provide mitigation water from junior users in the season that senior users need it.

Tuthill's Tuesday document is an interlocutory order, he said, meaning it can't yet be appealed to district court. He said he released it that way to allow for future modifications to what he said was "the most technically challenging order" he's written — including a review by his successor.

"The approach identified in the protocol is workable," he said. "(But) there are so many technical aspects that we have opened the door for additional approaches and additional perspectives."

Water users of all types seem skeptical of the new system, according to IDWR records. Twin Falls Canal Co. General Manager Brian Olmstead — whose system was used as an example in the order — said Tuesday he still has many concerns after a first read.

Among his criticisms: The new protocol only looks at one year at a time, and takes control of storage water away from the companies that own it. Its one-year-at-a-time focus, he said, will lead to a "train wreck" in back-to-back dry years. And senior users still believe juniors get off easier than they do.

"These are issues that will come out to haunt us in the next drought," Olmstead said.

Asked about the concerns, Tuthill said the various water users are so

"polarized" on the issue that he didn't expect any of them to be fully happy with the changes.

"This strikes a reasonable balance between competing issues," he said.

Idaho, Nevada governors, legislators convene in Three Creek for ride

By Kimberly Williams-Brackett
Times-News correspondent

ROGERSON — Idaho Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter and Gov. Jim Gibbons of Nevada were joined Monday by a convoy of legislators, federal and state representatives, and others to discuss wild land issues during a trail ride along the Idaho-Nevada border.

Otter's Special Assistant for Energy John Chatburn said the Idaho governor chose the Three Creek area in south Twin Falls County for his ninth annual governors' trail ride because he wanted to look at fire rehabilitation, endangered species of sage grouse and slickspot peppergrass, and grazing management issues.

Otter said he started the trail ride while he was in Congress. "Every year we get an update and we see agencies working together." He said for the rides they "pick an issue to study in resource management."

U.S. Department of Fish and Wildlife Snake River Office Field Supervisor Jeff Foss said the main threats to slickspot peppergrass are wildfires, encroachment of non-native plants and development. A slickspot peppergrass enclosure that was first monitored in 2004 hasn't been grazed since 2005, and the population of the grass is still declining within the enclosure viewed on the tour.

Slickspot peppergrass, a rare herbaceous plant found exclusively in southwestern Idaho, appears to follow a portion of the Oregon Trail. Mountain Home rancher Ted Hoffman said, "It was probably some Bohemian plant that could have fell off the wagon."

The tour also viewed reseeded efforts made after the 2007 Murphy Complex fire. Approximately $16 million was spent in seeding where the fire burned, said Ken Crane, a Bureau of Land Management rangeland management specialist.

Rancher Mike Guerry said 400 miles of fence was rebuilt after the fire. He expressed his desire to start grazing again on the land.

"We've been driving a 450-mile loop with 10 camps" of cattle and sheep, said Guerry. "It has doubled the cost of my operations in freight."

Guerry called for a more timely rotation of livestock grazing to avoid looking at "a black resource."

"If spring grazing is eliminated, it just adds fuel to the fire," he said.

"We need to look at how quickly ranchers can get back on the land," said Otter. "We can do something about wildfires by grazing grass down instead of letting it get tall like it is now. It will be fuel in about three weeks."

The tour continues through today, after Tuesday's Nevada trail ride from the Cottonwood Ranch. Otter said he brought his own horse, Snuff, a 22-year-old roping quarter horse, while first Lady Lori Otter will ride another family-owned horse, Cooper.

Don't Ask Me

Your rights as a slob are on the line

As you may have heard, the Obama administration is expected to significantly tighten federal environmental laws in a number of ways.

Last Friday, the U.S. House of Representatives passed a bill that would place mandatory limits on the emissions of greenhouse gases which cause global warming.

Tougher clean-water and clean-air legislation is also in the offing, as well as stricter toxic waste standards.

The latter, I believe, significantly threatens my cultural heritage.

See, I'm a guy, but more than that, an Idaho guy. We're not at all fussy, and darn proud of it.

Cases in point:

Bait buckets in the refrigerator. This has been tradition honored through three generations of my family, even through my Uncle Fred's phase of fishing with limburger cheese. So some pointy-head Environmental Protection Agency bureaucrat is gonna tell me I gotta fish with dead worms?

The inside of my rig. It's true that my wife won't ride in my vehicle because of a few alleged crumbs, some supposed residue of fry sauce on the steering wheel and the purported remnants of several dozen cups of spilled coffee on the passenger seat. But she's originally from California, where regulation is oppressive. I say to heck with government spillage standards.

Soiled gym socks and work socks.

Currently, these are stored in an old coffee can with a plastic lid out in the garage, until I forget they're out there and my wife quietly throws them away.

But what happens if some inspector comes across them while he's checking for, say, radon? I could get sued.

The garage itself. There are enough pockets of pesticides, herbicides, fungicides, chain-saw oil, motor oil and oily rags out there to ignite a fire big enough to burn Chicago twice over and release more rogue chemicals than a '73 Bel-Air in need of a valve-and-ring job. I just think it infringes on my rights to have a Superfund site on my property.

The '73 Bel-Air in need of a valve-and-ring job that's sitting in my driveway. Hands off, Uncle Sam! (Unless it qualifies as Cash for Clunkers).

Laugh if you must, but more stringent environmental rules are on the first step on a slippery slope toward loss of our lifestyle and cultural treasures.

Including, I daresay, the couch in your front yard and the fridge without a door on your front porch.

Plea deal may develop in Gooding shooting

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

Bolanos

GOODING — The defense attorney representing accused murder suspect Jesus Valencia-Bolanos said Tuesday in Gooding County 5th District Court that a plea-bargain is possible before a scheduled trial July 14.

Gooding attorney Joseph James told Judge Barry Wood during a pre-trial conference that he would like to leave the scheduled trial on the July court calendar but a there was a possible resolution.

James later told the Times-News a plea agreement during the next two weeks is possible but he would not discuss specifics.

Valencia-Bolanos, 24, is accused of shooting Gustavo Flores Quintana in the back of the neck with a .22-caliber rifle in a rural area of Gooding County on Nov. 8, 2007.

Valencia-Bolanos was charged with the murder in February of this year after Gooding County Jail inmate Robert Temes alleged that Bolanos told him that he had arranged to buy drugs from Quintana, but did not intend to pay, and instead shot Quintana and stole drugs and cash, according to court records.

The Times-News reported Sunday that James has filed documentation that Bolanos' girlfriend will likely offer testimony that another man, Carlos Villanueva-Martinez Jr., claims to have killed Quintana.

During the pretrial conference Tuesday, James said he has filed a motion to compel discovery, which would hasten the delivery to him of police reports and past felony convictions of witnesses.

Gooding County Prosecuting Attorney Calvin Campbell said he would see to it that all necessary documentation is delivered to James by Friday.

Mountain Home teen drowns in river

MURPHY — Owyhee County authorities say a 15-year-old boy drowned while swimming with friends in the Bruneau River.

The Owyhee County Sheriff Department identified the victim as Garrett Bradshaw, of Mountain Home. Investigators say Bradshaw got stuck in a whirlpool underneath a diversion dam on the river Monday afternoon.

Bradshaw is the second teen to drown in southwest Idaho waterways since Sunday.

On Monday, rescue crews in Gem County recovered the body of 17-year-old Travis Jakovac, a student at Caldwell High School, from an irrigation ditch near Emmett.

Smith's expands recall on beef

SALT LAKE CITY — Smith's Food and Drug Stores says it is expanding its recall on beef to include packages weighing two pounds or more of store-brand labeled beef grind 85/15 with sell-by dates of April 27 to June 1.

Smith's says the beef was supplied by JBS Swift Beef Co. and may be contaminated with E. coli.

Smith's says the product is no longer in stores and it is asking customers to check their freezers at home for ground beef with one of four UPC codes.

Smith's stores in Arizona, Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Utah and Wyoming are included in the recall. Customers with questions should call 800-632-6900.

Man diagnosed with West Nile virus

IDAHO FALLS — State health officials say a Bonneville County man has been diagnosed with the state's first case of West Nile virus this season.

The man, in his 70s, has been hospitalized, according to the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare. His condition was not released.

West Nile virus is usually spread through the bite of an infected mosquito. Last year, 36 Idahoans became ill and one died from the virus.

Utah ushers in new alcohol laws

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — For the last 40 years, dropping into a bar in Utah has been a complicated affair: Patrons have to fill out an application, pay a fee and become a member before they can go in for a drink.

It is one of several restrictive rules governing alcohol consumption in Utah that made the heavily Mormon state one of the toughest places in the nation to get a drink.

But some of that will change today when a new state law kicks in eliminating the need for people to become members of bars to go inside.

"I've owned clubs for eight years now, and I never thought this was going to happen," said Jason Rasmussen, owner of A Bar Named Sue. "This is huge."

Bars and drinkers are so thrilled by the new rules that they are planning what is expected to be the largest pub crawl in state history Wednesday, complete with free shuttle buses and taxis to 16 bars to commemorate what some are calling Private Club Independence Day.

The change is being made in an effort to make the state more appealing to tourists and to give businesses and employees considering moving here one fewer reason to stay away.

"We're rolling out the welcome mat to the world," Gov. Jon Huntsman, a non-drinking Mormon, said in a statement.

Huntsman wanted to scrap the private club system to improve economic development ever since taking office in 2005, but it wasn't politically feasible until he won a second term in November by the largest margin in state history.

Huntsman had pledged not to seek a third term and was willing to spend political capital in a state primary ly comprised of teetotalers to usher in the changes.

About 60 percent of Utah residents and more than 80 percent of state lawmakers belong to The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, which tells its members to abstain from alcohol and has always helped shape alcohol policy in the state.

Scott Beck, CEO of the Salt Lake Convention and Visitors Center, said the top reason Salt Lake City loses convention business is because of a perception of a lack of nightlife and entertainment that was exacerbated by the state's private club system.

Senate considers wolf kill payments

BOISE (AP) — Ranchers in Idaho, Wyoming and Montana who lose sheep or cattle to wolves may soon have a federal fund to turn for reimbursement.

Idaho Sens. Mike Crapo and Jim Risch have helped establish a $1 million account to repay ranchers for any losses tied to wolf kills. Language creating the account was recently approved by a Senate committee, but must still be approved by the full Senate and House.

Ranchers had previously been compensated by the Defenders of Wildlife for wolf losses. But that funding ended when wolves in Idaho and Montana were removed from the Endangered Species List earlier this year. Gray wolves remain on the endangered species list in Wyoming.

Crapo says with state officials now in charge of wolf management, it's important to ensure that ranchers have a place to turn for losses.

Theodore H. Ryan

Theodore (Ted) H. Ryan passed away Friday, June 26, 2009, at the age of 81.

He was born in Twin Falls on Jan. 19, 1928. Ted grew up in Twin Falls and graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1946. In high school, he starred on the football, basketball and baseball teams and served as student body president. After graduation, Ted enlisted in the U.S. Army and served for two years, receiving his honorable discharge. The G.I. Bill allowed him to go on to college. He attended his freshman year of college at Utah State and his last three years at Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y. He graduated with a degree in agronomy.

At Cornell, he met Colleen Collins, who was working on her master's degree in education. Ted described her as the most beautiful woman he had ever seen and couldn't believe that he was lucky enough to date her. They were married Aug. 31, 1952.

Armed with his agronomy degree, Ted began his lifelong career in the seed business in Caldwell. There he worked for Allied Seed Company from 1952 to 1961. He left Allied to start an agri-business company called Farmaterials in Baker, Ore. He left that business in 1964 and began working for Albert Dickinson Seed Co. in Twin Falls. He moved with that company to Nampa in 1966. The ownership of that seed company changed hands several times over the years and had various names such as Rudy Patrick Seed Company, W.R. Grace Seed Company, North American Plant Breeders and Agripro. Nevertheless, Ted remained with the same group for the remainder of his career. In 1971, he moved to the company's national headquarters in Kansas City and assumed the position of national sales and marketing director. That position evolved into vice president of operations, which is where he stayed until his retirement in 1990.

Ted was a devoted family man. He and Colleen had five children, Tom, Pat, Tim, Kelly and Shauna. He loved spending time with his family and was always available to be the coach, driver, cheerleader, umpire, referee or whatever was needed to promote his children's sports and other extracurricular activities. He was deservedly proud that he and Colleen were able to put all of their children through college.

Ted, Colleen and family made Lawrence, Kan., their home beginning in 1971. Colleen received her doctorate degree in education at the University of Kansas in 1979 and worked at the university until 1990. They were avid supporters of KU for many years. Ted was a stroke victim and in a wheelchair for many of his later years following retirement. However, it gave him and Colleen a handicap seat on the floor of Allen Fieldhouse for many years. Ted really enjoyed the KU basketball teams over that time.

Ted was preceded in death by his wife, Colleen; and his daughter, Shauna. He is survived by his sister, Julie Blandford of Twin Falls; and by four sons and a son-in-law, Tom (Diane) of Caldwell, Pat of Gladstone, Mo., Tim (Tor) of Washington, D.C., Kelly (Becky) of Lawrence, Kan., and Jardon Bouska (Kelly) of Atlanta, Ga. He is also survived by 14 wonderful grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

Services in Lawrence, Kan., include Mass of Christian Burial, which will be held at 10 a.m. Thursday, July 2, at Corpus Christi Catholic Church, with burial to follow at Oak Hill Cemetery. A rosary service will be held at 6 p.m. Wednesday, July 1, at Rumsey-Yost Funeral Home. The family will receive friends at the funeral home immediately following the rosary service at 6:30 p.m.

Memorials may be made to Corpus Christi Catholic Church in care of the Rumsey-Yost Funeral Home. Online condolences may be sent at www.rumsey-yost.com.

Guy M. Lattimer

Guy M. Lattimer passed away in his sleep Monday, June 29, 2009, at River Ridge Care Center in Twin Falls at the age of 95.

A viewing for Guy will be held from 5 until 7 p.m. Wednesday evening at White Mortuary "Chapel by the Park." A graveside service will be held at 3:30 in the afternoon Thursday, July 2, at Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls.

Guy was born March 2, 1914, in Rupert, to George Lattimer and Verda Judson Lattimer. He grew up in Eden, where he attended school with his five siblings. He married Veda Hall in November 1932. They had two children, Kenneth and Karen. They were later divorced. Guy farmed and owned a grocery store in Eden when he was young. While Guy was working as a salesperson for Wonder Bread, he met Hazel Wilbourn. They quickly fell in love and were married Sept. 14, 1964, in Twin Falls.

Dad always loved to golf, bowl and fish and never lost his sense of humor. He and Hazel loved to travel. After his retirement from Wonder Bread, they traveled all over the United States. He and Hazel took daily walks collecting fallen change. This change was spent on numerous trips to Jackpot, Nev. He especially loved to spend time in his garden and with his lovely rose bushes. He spent countless hours in his shop building feeders for his pets — the local squirrels and birds. His kids and grandkids were always special gifts to him. They will never forget the swing he built in the weeping willow tree in the backyard. Trips to the driving range on the weekend were something special he shared with his grandchildren.

During a recent visit, Guy reminded his family of what a good, long life he had lived and was especially "tickled" by the good things he had accomplished. His family feels extremely blessed to have shared so many wonderful memories over the years with such a wonderful man.

He is preceded in death by his father and mother; his brothers, Willard Lattimer, Dorrance Lattimer and Morris Lattimer; sister, Thelma Thompson; and son, Kenneth Lattimer. Matthew Carl Hays

Matthew Carl Hays, 27, formerly of the Wood River Valley, died in a car crash in Chino, Calif., on Friday, June 26, 2009.

Matt lived a full and happy life in the short time on this earth. He grew up in the Wood River Valley since the age of 12. He graduated from Silver Creek Alternative School in 1999. He then moved with his friend to California and attended Chico State University for a short time. Matt loved the outdoors. When he was in his teens, he would fill up a backpack and disappear into the mountains for days. He always made people laugh. Actress Farrah Fawcett remembered at LA funeral

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The life of "Charlie's Angels" star Farrah Fawcett was celebrated Tuesday at a private funeral in the Cathedral of Our Lady of the Angels.

Her longtime companion, Ryan O'Neal, 68, was among pallbearers who accompanied the casket, covered in yellow and orange flowers, into the Roman Catholic cathedral.

Fawcett's friend Alana Stewart and "Charlie's Angels" co-star Kate

Jackson were among early arrivals before the hearse pulled up, accompanied by 10 motorcycle officers.

The funeral program said Fawcett's and O'Neal's 24-year-old son, Redmond, was to do the service's first reading.

We're in trouble if JFAC process falls apart

Four-fifths of the way through the rumble that was the first session of the 60th Legislature last winter, Idaho politics took a turn for the worse.

At the insistence of the House Republican Caucus, the Appropriations Committee passed a different budget than the Senate Finance Committee, over the strong objections of Joint-Finance Appropriations Committee Co-Chairmen Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, and Rep. Maxine Bell, R-Jerome.

That's happened infrequently in the past quarter century, and it was a mistake every time. JFAC is the one institution in the Idaho Legislature that's widely admired by lawmakers from other states.

And why shouldn't they? It works.

JFAC and its professional staff have taken the partisan politics, the petty feuds and the interminable dithering out of the budget-making process as much as is possible in a representative democracy.

Trouble is, when tax revenues grow short — and they'll be short again next session — the long knives come out. Legislators dig in their heels, scrap for the limited funds available and behave like politicians instead of statesmen.

So the ideology gap widens, as if it weren't already wide enough between the moderate Senate and the conservative House.

Without JFAC, the two houses approve widely divergent budgets, then fight about them while March turns to April and April turns to May — for 117 days this year.

In part, that's happening because lawmakers perceive weakness in the governor's office. Under former Gov. Phil Batt, a Republican, and his two Democratic predecessors, Cecil Andrus and John Evans, JFAC was often where compromises were hammered out. When the governor and the Legislature were far apart on any budget issue, both sides trusted the expertise and the integrity of the 20 JFAC members enough to let them find the common ground.

JFAC isn't any less skilled than in the old days — Bell and Cameron, committee vice chairmen Rep. Darrell Botz, R-Caldwell, and Sen. Shawn Keough, R-Sandpoint; and committee members Sen. Joyce Broadsword, R-Sagle; Rep. Wendy Jaquet, D-Ketchum; Rep. Fred Wood, R-Burley; Sen. Bert Brackett, R-Three Creek, and Rep. Cliff Bayer, R-Boise, are widely respected. But they can't broker compromises that aren't there.

Especially since there's some doubt that the House GOP leadership is as firmly committed to the JFAC process as their Senate counterparts.

In the 6 1/2 months before the gavels fall on the second session of the 60th Legislature, legislative leaders and Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter — who clashed with Cameron and Bell last session — need to make a firm and public commitment to the JFAC process.

Separate House and Senate budget-making is the royal road to California-style gridlock in this tight economy. Idaho just can't afford it.

Our view: The leaders of Idaho's Legislature should do their constituents a favor and unequivocally commit to a joint House-Senate budgeting process in the next session.

Health reform that only hurts a bit

WASHINGTON — By tradition in Washington, a president's budget has a short shelf life. No sooner does the tome land on Capitol Hill than lawmakers toss it and write their own. President Obama's fiscal blueprint, unveiled on Feb. 26, followed the same well-worn path.

CECI CONNOLLY

But buried in that document is a tidy chart that provides a glimpse into the minds of a new president with an ambitious agenda and his battle-tested chief of staff, Rahm Emanuel.

There on Table S-6 of the "Mandatory and Receipt Proposals," the pair revealed how they hope to win over the formidable players who have much at stake in the administration's push to overhaul the nation's $2.3 trillion health-care system. Hidden under a bureaucratically bland title, the "Health Reform Reserve Fund," is actually $634 billion worth of carefully calibrated pain. It's basically a list of budget cuts certain to make every lobbyist in town wince a little, but not so horribly as to prompt war. And that's the key to understanding the Obama-Emanuel touch — sock it to 'em, but don't knock 'em over.

Call it the Goldilocks Strategy. Cut too deep, and the industry will rise up to thwart the hopes of yet another president eager to remake health care. Don't cut enough, and he won't have the money to pay for it. Find just the right amount, and perhaps, just perhaps, despite the recent bickering on Capitol Hill, there's a chance of success.

Under the Goldilocks Strategy, everyone shares the pain. True, the pharmaceutical industry doesn't like the prospect of paying out $19.5 billion more over the next decade in higher rebates for Medicaid, the government program that insures the poor, but that's nothing compared to the industry's $291.5 billion in U.S. sales last year alone. Few retirees, even if they are wealthy, would be happy paying higher Medicare premiums, but the senior citizens' lobby AARP immediately recognized that Obama's plan targeted only a fraction of its 40 million members. And though home health care firms protested recommended cuts in reimbursements, the objections were muted by references to the industry's healthy profit margins.

Even though all sorts of businesses and special-interest groups get pricked, not a single proposal sounds a death knell for anyone. And that's what distinguishes this White House strategy. Other attempts to change America's health system have seemed to place the very existence of some constituencies at risk. But Obama's plan merely asks everyone to take a hit and keep on fighting.

"Obama is approaching this as a homeopathic course of treatment," said Ross Baker, a presidential scholar at Rutgers University. "He injects people with a sub-toxic dose of pain to let them know they're going to have to give up something, but it won't make them really sick."

Every president since Harry Truman has tried to close the wide gaps in coverage in this country. The Obama team, which includes many veterans of the failed Clinton administration effort, has charted a different course, leaving the bill-writing to Congress while it tries to charm an industry that controls nearly one-fifth of the U.S. economy.

Even a savvy plan for dealing with industry does not guarantee a quick run through Congress. Still, the Obama political strategy shows promise, in part because it complements the economic realities that drove the industry to the bargaining table in the first place.

What was most striking about the reaction to Obama's original batch of health-care cuts was that there was almost no aggrieved response from the targeted groups. The tone struck by Obama contrasts with the us-against-them message from the Clintons 16 years ago, said Thomas Scully, a health-care expert who worked in both Bush administrations.

The Obama team has "done a hell of a job keeping all the sheep herded so far," said Scully. "By a factor of 100, it's way better than '93-'94."

Obama floated the tantalizing prospect of medical malpractice reform with soothing words about physicians' fears of lawsuits. But there was a catch: "I'm not advocating caps on malpractice awards."

Most important, Obama said he was willing to eliminate the unpopular "sustainable growth rate" formula used to calculate what doctors earn caring for Medicare beneficiaries. If the formula is not changed, physicians will see Medicare payments cut by 21 percent in January.

Obama's passing mention of this formula, as obscure as Table S-6 in his budget, means real money to the doctors. And though it was only a bit of rhetoric you can be sure that the doctors will be hanging on to that pledge. It might just be the right antidote to whatever pain is headed their way.

Media focus should be on Sund, not Gambrel

Jan Sund has left many victims behind. Yes, I said victims. The whole case seems to surround Curtis Gambrel when it is really about her. Victims going back at least 15 years that I personally know of. She found vulnerable or naïve people to supply her with drugs.

Officer Gambrel was a talented and honest detective that honorably served this community for many years. The focus by the media needs to be on Sund. He should be treated no better, no worse than any of her other victims.

Immigration reform needs to be passed

On Thursday, June 25, a historic meeting was convened by President Barack Obama, where 30 key members of Congress with 15 representatives from each party came together to promote the passing of comprehensive immigration reform by 2010.

Our current economy demands that we pull immigrant workers and employers from the underground economy and on to a regulated system that will bring in more tax dollars.

I encourage Sens. Crapo, and Risch and Rep. Simpson to join their colleagues at the national level to help in moving forward with the passage this much-needed reform.

It is time to stop the hate so that heinous crimes such as the cowardly act that recently happened in Arizona, where anti-immigrant zealots were involved in the killing of a 9-year-old Mexican girl, Brisenia Flores.

Reader concerned about Gateway West project

I need to voice my opposition on the Gateway West Transmission Line Project.

I am very upset Idaho Power and Rocky Mountain Power have the right to plow through Cassia County simply because it is "the most cost efficient option."

What about the cost their option will place on me as a private homeowner in the farming community? Are the electrical companies going to discount my electrical bills for the eyesore metal masses that will be right out my window? Will I get a credit on my account for the amount my property value will go down once this project is erected in my backyard? What about my five young children? How are these high-voltage power lines going to affect their learning abilities and their health?

Apparently there is a regulation that says cattle and livestock must be a certain distance from high voltage power lines. Shouldn't there be a regulation that requires these power lines to stay 100 miles from children? I feel these power lines are extremely dangerous to my children. I don't want my children near them and I don't want my children or myself to suffer adverse health and learning problems because the power company insisted the lines be in my neighborhood!

I really don't think the power companies care about anything but their bottom line and profit margins! Shouldn't something as degrading as this project will be to our private lands be put up to a vote by those who live on and own the land?

I'm sure if Cassia County had this issue on the ballot, the power companies would have to go elsewhere. This project belongs on public land, especially where it is being built to serve the future needs of the public!

Why isn't gay community proud?

Seems like the gay community and the Times-News will not use the word "gay" in their headlines about "Pride" Week.

I can only assume this means you are ashamed of what you are because you know it is wrong. I can understand the Times-News doing this as it is a liberal rag, but what is the gay community so afraid of?

Nobody is hard-wired to do anything

Has there ever been a time when there were so many different views of human nature floating around all at once?

The economists have their view, in which rational people coolly chase incentives. Traditional Christians have their view, emphasizing original sin, grace and the pilgrim's progress in a fallen world. And then there are the evolutionary psychologists, who get the most media attention.

For 99 percent of human history, they observe, our species lived in small hunter-gatherer bands. The people who survived developed certain mental modules, which have been passed down to us through our genes. Some of these traits serve us well in the modern age. Children have the capacity to learn language with astonishing speed. Some of these traits don't. Humans have an insatiable craving for fatty and sugary foods.

DAVID BROOKS

In 2000, Geoffrey Miller, a leading evolutionary psychologist, published a book called "The Mating Mind," in which he argued that the process of sexual selection among early human groups hardwired many of the behaviors we see in humans today. Some of the traits are physical. Men generally prefer women with a 0.7 waist-to-hip ratio (that's a 24-inch waist and 36-inch hips). Women generally prefer men who are taller and slightly older.

Some of these traits are more subtle. Men tip better in restaurants, because they've been programmed to show how much surplus wealth they have. The average American adult knows 60,000 words, far more than we need. We have all those words because we like to mate with people who caress us with language.

Now Miller has published another book, "Spent," in which he takes evolutionary psychology to the mall. The basic argument is that each of us is born with our own individual level of six big traits: intelligence, openness to new things, conscientiousness, agreeableness, emotional stability and extraversion. These modules are built into humans and other animals.

We are all narcissists, Miller asserts. We spend much of our lives trying to broadcast our excellence in these traits in order to attract mates. Even if we're not naturally smart or outgoing, we buy products and brands that give the impression we are.

According to Miller, driving an Acura, Infiniti, Subaru or Volkswagen is a sign of high intelligence. Driving a Cadillac, Chrysler, Ford or Hummer is a sign of low intelligence.

Listening to Bjork is a sign of high intelligence, while listening to Lynyrd Skynyrd is a sign of low intelligence. Watching Quentin Tarantino movies is a sign of high openness. He theorizes that teenage girls may cut themselves as a way to demonstrate their ability to withstand infections.

Evolutionary psychology has had a good run. But now there is growing pushback. "Spent" is a sign that the theory is being used to try to explain more than it can bear.

The first problem is that far from being preprogrammed with a series of hardwired mental modules, as the EP types assert, our brains are fluid and plastic. We're learning that evolution can be a more rapid process than we thought. It doesn't take hundreds of thousands of years to produce genetic alterations.

Moreover, we've evolved to adapt to diverse environments. Different circumstances can selectively activate different genetic potentials. Individual behavior can vary wildly from one context to another. An arrogant bully on the playground may be meek in math class. People have kaleidoscopic thinking styles and use different cognitive strategies to solve the same sorts of problems.

Evolutionary psychology leaves the impression that human nature was carved a hundred thousand years ago, and then history sort of stopped. But human nature adapts to the continual flow of information — adjusting to the ancient information contained in genes and the current information contained in today's news in a continuous, idiosyncratic blend.

The second problem is one evolutionary psychology shares with economics. It's too individualistic: individuals are born with certain traits, which they seek to maximize in the struggle for survival. But individuals aren't formed before they enter society. Individuals are created by social interaction. Our identities are formed by the particular rhythms of maternal attunement, by the shared webs of ideas, symbols and actions that vibrate through us second by second. Shopping isn't merely a way to broadcast permanent, inborn traits. For some people, it's also an activity of trying things on in the never-ending process of creating and discovering who they are.

The allure of evolutionary psychology is that it organizes all behavior into one eternal theory, impervious to the serendipity of time and place. But there's no escaping context. That's worth remembering next time somebody tells you we are hardwired to do this or that.

Just too much to choose from nowadays

If there's one thing we don't need, it's more choice in life. Take the supermarket. It's tough enough sifting through the variations of each product on the shelves, but it's a miracle if you make it home with the right one. So what does Coca-Cola do? Come out with a new flavor.

As if Coke, Coke II, caffeine-free Coke, Coke Zero, Coca-Cola C2, Coca-Cola Citra, Cherry, Cherry Vanilla, Lime, Raspberry and their diet versions weren't enough, now you can sip a relaxing Green Tea Coca-Cola. It kind of makes you yearn for the return of New Coke, doesn't it?

True, if you want to pick up a six-pack of Green Tea Coke, you have to go to Japan — at least for now — but hey, can anywhere be too far to go to purchase something that doesn't exist in nature? If you do decide to go, be sure to pick up a can of Pepsi Shiso while you're there. That's the Japanese basil cola coming out later this month. Seriously. What's next? Tuna Sprite? Broccoli Nehi?

Back in the good old days — which is defined as the time before the Jonas Brothers were a twinkle in their father's Stratocaster — telephones, Coke, Oreos and cars came in one form and one form only. Henry Ford reputedly said about the Model T, "Any customer can have a car painted any color he wants so long as it is black." Now you can get a car in almost any color you can dream up, without regard for taste or how far neighborhood home values drop when it's parked out front. And Oreos? There are at least 17 types, including peanut butter, mint, fudge-covered, banana split, double creme and the affirmative-action, role-reversed white cookies with chocolate creme — the favorite of liberals everywhere.

For reasons best known to the companies' marketing departments, the label on a line of products stays the same, with the variant printed in tiny, unobtrusive letters — often using invisible ink. At least half the time, I get home and discover I accidentally bought fat-free, low-sodium anchovy-flavored cream cheese. (Here's a handy shopping tip: Look for the word "original" on the package.)

Restaurants are another place where we're getting too many choices. A menu shouldn't be as long as a Stephen King novel. Of course, neither should a Stephen King novel, but because I don't need to finish "The Stand" before I can eat dinner, I'm not concerned about it. Simply put, I don't want to spend more time reading a menu than it will take to eat my dinner. It's a personal rule, much like "don't drink a cocktail that comes in a hollowed-out fruit."

There's really only one place where we could use more choices: elections. We get two choices, three if we're lucky and don't care about the quality of the third candidate.

Why can't elections be more like Cokes and Cokes more like elections?

And while we're at it, can we trim things back so there are only, say, 16 kinds of Oreos?

Yemeni plane with 153 crashes off Comoros islands

MORONI, Comoros — A Yemeni jetliner carrying 153 people crashed into the Indian Ocean on Tuesday as it attempted to land amid severe turbulence and howling winds. Officials said a teenage girl was plucked from the sea, the only known survivor.

The crash in waters off this island nation came two years after aviation officials reported equipment faults with the plane, an aging Airbus 310 flying the last leg of a Yemenia airlines flight from Paris and Marseille to Comoros, with a stop in Yemen to change planes.

Most of the passengers were from Comoros, a former French colony. Sixty-six on board were French nationals.

Khaled el-Kaei, the head of Yemenia's public relations office, said a 14-year-old girl survived the crash, and Yemen's embassy in Washington issued a statement saying a young girl was taken to a hospital. It also said five bodies were recovered.

GOP's Coleman concedes election

ST. PAUL, Minn. — Republican Norm Coleman conceded to Democrat Al Franken in Minnesota's contested Senate race Tuesday, hours after a unanimous state Supreme Court ruled the former "Saturday Night Live" comedian should be certified the winner.

Coleman announced his decision at a news conference in St. Paul, bringing an end to a nearly eight-month recount and court fight over an election decided by only a few hundred votes.

"The Supreme Court has made its decision and I will abide by the results," Coleman told reporters outside his St. Paul home.

Franken, accompanied by his wife, told reporters outside his downtown Minneapolis town house that "Franni and I are so thrilled that we can finally celebrate this victory."

"I can't wait to get started," he added. "I've been trying to keep abreast of what's going on, and I'll do the best I can."

Coleman, appearing relaxed and upbeat, said he had congratulated Franken, was at peace with his decision to concede and had no regrets about the fight, which started almost immediately after the Nov. 4 election.

Promoter: Michael Jackson tribute shows likely

LONDON — The promoter who booked Michael Jackson for a sold-out comeback tour said Tuesday that footage of the singer's rehearsals may be released in future, and that an all-star tribute show based on his canceled concerts is likely to take place.

Randy Phillips, chief executive of promoter AEG Live, told Britain's Sky News that a tribute featuring members of Jackson's family, and other world music stars, would likely utilize dance routines, sets and costumes created for the singer's scrapped tour.

Phillips, described Jackson as a close friend and said the singer had been excited about the upcoming concerts — confiding to him the day before his death that he felt ready for his 50 sold-out performances at London's O2 arena.

The promoter said he spoke with Jackson after a rehearsal June 24. "He gave me a hug and he whispered into my ear 'Now I know I can do this,'" he said.

SC governor says mistress is soul mate

COLUMBIA, S.C. — South Carolina Gov. Mark Sanford declared his Argentine mistress his soul mate Tuesday but said he is committed to reconciling with his wife in hopes of saving his family and what is

Sanford, who also admitted meeting his lover more times than he had previously claimed, told The Associated Press in emotional interviews that he "crossed lines" with a handful of other women during 20 years of marriage.

But he said he never went as far as he did with Maria Belen Chapur, the woman at the center of the scandal that has derailed his once-promising political future.

Even with the latest revelations, Sanford maintains he is fit to govern and has no plans to resign. And he insisted his relationship with Chapur, whom he met at an open air dance spot in Uruguay eight years ago, was more than just sex.

"This was a whole lot more than a simple affair, this was a love story," Sanford said. "A forbidden one, a tragic one, but a love story at the end of the day."

N. Korean ship changes direction

WASHINGTON — U.S. officials said Tuesday that a North Korean ship has turned around and is headed back toward the north where it came from, after being tracked for more than a week by American Navy vessels on suspicion of carrying illegal weapons.

The move keeps the U.S. and the rest of the international community guessing: Where is the Kang Nam going? Does its cargo include materials banned by a new U.N. anti-proliferation resolution?

The ship left a North Korean port of Nampo on June 17 and is the first vessel monitored under U.N. sanctions that ban the regime from selling arms and nuclear-related material.

The Navy has been watching it — at times following it from a distance. It traveled south and southwest for more than a week; then, on Sunday, it turned around and headed back north, two U.S. officials said on condition of anonymity to discuss intelligence.

Wal-Mart backs employer health insurance mandate

WASHINGTON — Wal-Mart has embraced President Barack Obama's call for requiring all large employers to offer health insurance to their workers, adding momentum to the president's push for far-reaching changes to the nation's health care system.

Wal-Mart, the nation's largest private employer, announced its position in a letter to congressional and administration officials Tuesday. It was joined by a major labor union that sometimes has criticized Wal-Mart as stingy with employee benefits.

"We are for an employer mandate which is fair and broad in its coverage," the letter said.

More than marshmallows: Campfire cooking on a stick

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

Sick of hot dogs cooked over a campfire? Want something more for your Fourth of July in the hills without dragging out the Dutch oven?

Think outside of the hot dog bun for your next camping adventure. Marshmallows and franks aren't the only foods that can be cooked on a stick.

So what is the allure? Stationing the whole family around the fire relieves Mom or Dad from kitchen duty.

And Robert Evans, district executive for the Snake River Council of Boy Scouts of America, said the practice reminds him of poking at a campfire with a stick as a boy.

"It's the fun, knowing you're doing something," he said. "You're in control."

Almost any food that can be cooked in a skillet can also be cooked on a stick, said Gloria McCuistion, office manager for Snake River Council.

"You can get very creative," she said. Evans agreed, saying most of his experiments have worked.

"The hardest thing I've ever tried to cook on a stick was lasagna," Evans said. "It didn't work too well."

But with these tips, you can have a more successful dining experience while camping:

- What is the ideal cooking stick? Something thin enough to penetrate your food and sturdy enough to support its weight. Make sure it's long enough to keep your hands comfortably away from the flames.

For vegetables and other dense foods, use long, thin metal skewers called hot dog sticks. They can be purchased at camping supply stores.

If looking for a cooking stick in the forest, use one from a green wood, like willow, said Donna Arrington, owner of A Happy Camper in Twin Falls. Dry wood will catch on fire, landing your meal in the coals. Whittle the point until it's sharp enough to pierce the food without tearing it apart.

- There are plenty of meat options beyond hot dogs for your camping entree.

"If you catch a squirrel, you could do a squirrel," Arrington said.

ASHLEY SMITH/Times-News

Hunter O'Berg, 8, a Cub Scout with Pack 42, roasts a hot dog last week at the Cub Scout Day Camp at the College of Southern Idaho. But this is no ho-hum hot dog — it's wrapped in bread dough for a pig in blanket meal.

"Or any type of meat, like a snake?"

For less adventurous campers, try weaving a hamburger patty or fish fillet onto a stick, and you're set for a fire-roasted treat. Just make sure that everything is fully cooked before consuming.

- Practically any hardy veggie is suitable for roasting over a fire. Think roasted onions, peppers, zucchini and mushrooms as a delish side to your skewered squirrel (or fish fillet).

Fruits are also a good side.

Try roasting apples, pineapples or peaches.

- Need a dessert, but sick of s'mores? Try an outdoorsy banana flambe.

Put a banana on a metal hot dog stick, then heat it over an open flame, McCuistion suggested. Roll in melted chocolate and sprinkle with nuts or crushed candy. Pair with cherries for a banana split without the ice cream.

- Forget trying to cook your dinner by waving it in the flames. The bed of coals is the hottest, most evenly heated spot in the fire pit.

- Be mindful of what wood you are using to fuel the fire. Hard woods, like oak and alder, are the best choice. Pine and other conifers can lend an unpleasant flavor to your food.

Turning fruit into firework finish on the Fourth

By Jim Romanoff
For The Associated Press

With so many fruits in peak season by July Fourth, summery desserts almost make themselves.

Fruits are always a treat when eaten unadorned and out of hand, but they're also the perfect starting place for an impressive variety of pies, cakes, bars, tarts and crumbles.

"This is not the time to be mucking about with complicated recipes," says cookbook author Barbara Kafka. "I just want it simple so I can taste the fruit when it's at its best."

For the Fourth, Kafka likes a classic strawberry shortcake. She makes it special by layering classic shortcake biscuits with sponge cake, then whipped cream and strawberry filling inside and topping with more cream and whole berries.

The shortcake concept is both fuss-free and versatile, Kafka says. Almost any fruit can be substituted for the strawberries. For a truly extraordinary take on the idea, she suggests using cut up fresh figs.

Diana Henry, author of "Pure Simple Cooking," also favors no fuss. For an elegant, but easy dish she hulls and quarters fresh strawberries, then douses them with enough Beaujolais (or pinot noir) wine to cover,

Just for the adults, this Raspberry and Beaujolais Granita is a good way to cap off a July Fourth party.

Fourth

plus a generous sprinkling of sugar. "Leave them to macerate for 30 minutes," she says, "and there you have it."

Rhubarb, one of the first crops of the season, can be cooked down with strawberries and enough sugar to balance the tartness, to create a fruit compote that is quintessentially summer.

Kafka uses this blend as a filling for pies and tarts, and as the base for crumbles or cobblers. It's also wonderful on its own, or spooned over ice cream or pound cake.

Stone fruits are heading into high season by the Fourth.

Henry says she adores roasted stone fruits. Her method is straightforward: Take peaches, apricots and plums, halve or quarter them (depending on size), then place them in a shallow baking dish. Dust liberally with sugar, add some red wine and cassis (the French black currant liqueur), then bake until the fruit is completely tender and caramelized.

"I am always amazed at how luscious and easy this dessert is," she says. "The heat really brings the best out of even substandard or unripe fruit, and the oven does all the work for you."

Similarly, grilling fruits caramelizes their sugars and intensifies flavors. Plus, it's a fun and easy dessert for backyard barbecues.

Brush the cut face of halved peaches or nectarines with melted butter or vegetable oil, then grill, cut-side down, over medium-high until lightly browned, about 5 minutes. Turn the fruit over and, if you like, spoon some blueberry or blackberry preserves into the cavity of each, then continue grilling until the fruit is tender but not mushy, about 5 to 7 minutes longer.

These grilled stone fruits are delicious on their own and especially nice served with a scoop of vanilla ice cream or frozen yogurt.

Frozen desserts are another crowd pleaser, and fresh fruits make a perfect base. Ice cream makers are relatively inexpensive and easy to use, but if you have a food processor it's even easier to make icy, fresh fruit sorbets.

The basic sorbet technique is simple. If using berries, they should be rinsed and frozen on trays until they are solid. Larger fruits should be peeled and cut into smaller pieces before being frozen so your food processor can puree them easily.

Place about 3 cups of frozen fruit and a cup of juice, or a blend of frozen juice concentrate and water, in the bowl of a food processor, then process until smooth. Serve it right away, or transfer to a plastic container and freeze to enjoy later.

For a creamy variation, instead of using juice, freeze a cup of low-fat yogurt or sour cream, then process it in to your sorbet. For a bit more decadence use frozen whipping cream.

Of course, if you have fruit that is absolutely exquisite, the simplest and often most enjoyable approach is to serve it on its own. For instance, Henry likes to fill a shallow bowl with ice cubes and serve really sweet ripe cherries on top.

Blueberry Lemon Squares will travel well for a Fourth of July picnic.

"Cherries on ice," she says, "what could be better?"

Or for what Henry describes as an "utterly chic" and hassle-free dessert, give each guest a perfect peach, a sharp knife and a glass of cold, muscat dessert wine. Let each diner peel a peach and slice it into the glass of wine. Leave the peach flesh macerate for 10 minutes, then give out the spoons and watch them eat an elegant do-it-yourself treat.

RASPBERRY AND BEAUJOLAIS GRANITA

Start to finish: 9 hours (20 minutes active). Servings: 8.

Save this grown-up dessert for the adults; the kids will be just as happy with fudge pops, anyway. Fresh raspberries and the lush flavor of Beaujolais red wine combine for a cooling treat. A granita has a crystallized texture that is less smooth than a sorbet.

1 1/2 pounds fresh raspberries (4 cups)

3/4 cup superfine sugar, divided

3/4 cup Beaujolais red wine

In a medium bowl, toss the raspberries with 1/4 cup of the sugar. Set aside.

In a medium saucepan, stir together the remaining 1/2 cup sugar with 10 tablespoons of the wine. Boil over medium-high heat for 2 minutes, stirring to dissolve the sugar. Set aside to cool.

In a food processor, puree the sugared berries. Use a mesh strainer to strain the puree into a medium bowl. Mix in the cooled syrup and remaining wine.

Transfer the mixture to a large baking dish. Cover with plastic wrap and freeze. After 2 hours, use a fork to scrape the frozen mixture from around the edges of the container and mix it into the rest of the liquid. Cover and return to the freezer.

Repeat the scraping and mixing every 2 hours three more times (for a total of 6 hours additional freezing time). The texture should be crystallized and icy, not smooth like a sorbet.

If prepared a day ahead, defrost the granita in the refrigerator for 20 minutes and mix with a fork before serving.

(from Diana Henry's "Pure Simple Cooking," Ten Speed Press, 2009)

BLUEBERRY LEMON SQUARES

Start to finish: 50 minutes (15 minutes active). Servings: 15.

Fresh or frozen blueberries work equally well in these simple and delicious dessert bars. Once cooled, they transport well and don't need refrigeration, making them a perfect choice for a July Fourth picnic.

For the crust:

1 cup butter, softened
1 cup powdered sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla extract
2 cups all-purpose flour

For the filling:

1/2 cup granulated sugar
3 tablespoons all-purpose flour
lemon and zest of 1 lemon
1/8 teaspoon salt
3 eggs
2 cups fresh or frozen unsweetened blueberries

Heat the oven to 400 degrees.

To make the crust, coat a 9-inch square baking dish with cooking spray.

In a medium bowl, use an electric mixer on low to beat together the butter, powdered sugar and vanilla until fluffy. Add the flour and beat just until the mixture forms small crumbs.

Press about two-thirds of the crumb mixture evenly over the bottom of the prepared baking dish. Set the remaining mixture aside. Bake for 12 to 15 minutes, or until lightly browned. Reduce the oven to 350 degrees.

Meanwhile, make the filling. In a medium bowl, mix the sugar, flour, lemon zest and salt. Add the eggs and lemon juice, then whisk until smooth.

Spread the blueberries in an even layer over the crust. Pour the filling over the blueberries. Sprinkle the reserved crumb mixture evenly over the top. Bake for 30 to 40 minutes, or until the crumb topping is golden and the filling is puffed.

Transfer to a wire rack and let cool completely. Cut into squares.

Twice the fun: Double-coupon days

Last week, I mentioned that pairing dollar coupons with dollar sales at the grocery store is one of my favorite ways to get items for free. Another easy way? Double-coupon days.

Coupon "doubling" occurs when a store matches a coupon's face value and passes the added savings to you, the shopper. Here's how it works. When you go to the checkout and hand the cashier a 50-cent coupon during double-coupon days, the cashier scans it and the cash register automatically doubles the value of that coupon to $1. You receive a dollar savings on one item with one 50-cent coupon.

Grocery stores handle double-coupon promotions differently. Some stores double coupons up to a certain amount every day. Others offer double-coupon promotions on certain days of the week or certain weeks of the month. Still others offer double coupons on some days and triple coupons on others. During a triple-coupon promotion, a 50-cent coupon is worth $1.50.

These sales are definitely worth checking out, because stores that double coupons make it very easy for shoppers to get groceries for free or at big discounts. However, in my experience, many stores have specific rules for the ways they double coupons.

You'll want to refer to your store's coupon policy to determine exactly how your store handles these promotions. Visit the store's Web site for the information or ask for a copy of the guidelines next time you're shopping.

For example, one national grocery store

COUPON QUEEN

chain will double all coupons worth up to 55 cents every day of the week. Another national chain doubles coupons up to $2, but it runs this promotion for only one week each month. Some stores will double Internet coupons; others won't. It's important to find out exactly how your store handles doubles so that you aren't disappointed at the checkout.

Let's go back to our example from last week, the "dollar sale" at the grocery store. Our store has many items on sale for $1, including cans of soup, toothbrushes and bags of frozen vegetables. Our store also doubles coupons up to $1 in value. How can we get things for free? Well, any coupon with a value of 50 cents will automatically be doubled to $1. I have a 50-cent coupon for the soup, a 55-cent coupon for the toothbrush and a 75-cent coupon for the vegetables. With those three coupons doubling in value, I'll be taking home a can of soup, a toothbrush and a bag of frozen veggies all free.

It's important to note, too, that coupons typically do not double over the value of the item. This is different from the way some stores handle "average," which is when your coupon's value exceeds the cost of the item you're buying. At many stores, using a $1 coupon on an item that is on sale for 75 cents will not only give you that item for free, it will also take an extra quarter off your total purchase.

However, when stores offer double coupons, they're matching the coupon's value out of their own pockets. So, using a $2 coupon on a $3.79 bottle of spray cleaner will get you the cleaner for free, as the coupon doubles up to $4, but it will not give you that extra 21 cents in average.

Now, don't fret if no stores double coupons in your area. Coupon doubling tends to be a regional phenomenon. Here in the Chicago area, none of our grocery stores double coupons, ever! The closest stores that do are 45 minutes from where I live. (And yes, I take "coupon field trips" to them on occasion.) But I do the bulk of my weekly shopping in a store that does not double coupons, and I still manage to cut my bill by half or better with coupons each week.

5 DRINKS THAT AIM TO MAKE MOJITOS BUT A MEMORY

By Lavanya Ramanathan
The Washington Post

It's one of the divine pleasures of warmer days: backyard barbecuing or sunning at a patio bar somewhere, a summery cocktail in hand.

But this summer, we don't want that cocktail to be a mojito. After more than a decade of downing the rum-mint-and-lime concoctions, we are parched for something new.

We asked a handful of cocktail gurus — those known for reinventing the classics and those who approach drink-making like mad scientists — to make us a new summer drink.

Not the mojito — the NOjito. Almost 30 cocktail recipes poured in, and we took on the utterly arduous task of whittling them down. Then, we tasted (and then we tasted a little more).

Finally, we arrived at the five drinks we offer here, each one truly summer in a glass. One surprises with coconut milk and cilantro; another blooms with lavender and fresh flowers.

To help you be the star of your summer barbecue, all the participants also generously provided recipes.

Mojito, meet your match.

THAI'S THE LIMIT

Makes 4 cocktails. The coconut mix needs to be prepared at least 40 minutes in advance.

Were she not one of D.C.'s hottest mixologists, Gina Chersevani might have made a fine chef.

When she helped launch the South Asian-inspired cocktail menu at Rasika a few years ago, she began in the spice pantry, nibbling on the fenugreek, sniffing the cardamom. At Tallula, she crafted her cucumber cocktail through a trial-and-error process that led to a discovery only a chef could make: To get that mildly sweet flavor she sought, she'd have to ditch the peel.

And when we approached Chersevani, now the mixologist at PS 7's, to top the mojito, she enlisted the chef, Peter Smith, for ideas, and they cooked up ... Thai soup. Okay, not really, but the sweetened coconut cocktail is inspired by tom yum soup: It's seasoned with fresh lemon grass and lime, scented with cilantro and fresh ginger, and kicked up with Thai chili.

The drink is — in a word — stunning. Despite the strange inspiration and curious ingredients, it's sweet, refreshing and incredibly drinkable. The lime cuts the sweetness, the coconut milk is light (Chersevani says the cooking process reduces the fat), the ginger is subtle. Gin and of-the-moment Domaine de Canton ginger liqueur make this the ultimate nojito, but the virgin version could just as easily relegate lemonade to the back of the fridge.

Says Chersevani: "When you've achieved layers of flavor — 'Oh, I taste the coconut. What's that, lemon grass?' — then you know you've got it."

For the coconut mix:

27 ounces (2 cans) coconut milk, preferably Chaokoh brand

1 stalk lemon grass, pulverized

1 ounce ginger root, peeled and grated

1 small Thai (bird) chili, stemmed and minced (not seeded)

3/4 cup sugar

For the drink:

Ice

6 ounces gin, preferably Plymouth

4 ounces Domaine de Canton (ginger liqueur)

8 ounces coconut mix

Juice of 4 to 5 limes

Cilantro leaves cut into thin strips

For the coconut mix: Combine the coconut milk, pulverized lemon grass, ginger, Thai chili pepper and sugar in a medium saucepan over high heat. Bring to a boil, stirring to dissolve the sugar, then reduce the heat to medium-low. Cook for 10 minutes, stirring occasionally, then remove from the heat and let the mixture steep for 20 minutes.

Transfer to a blender and puree until smooth. Strain through a fine-mesh strainer.

For the drink: Fill a cocktail shaker halfway with ice. Add the gin, Domaine de Canton, coconut mix and lime juice. Shake for 30 seconds, then strain into Collins glasses filled with ice. Garnish with the cilantro.

For a nonalcoholic version, combine 4 ounces of coconut mix and 3 ounces of lime juice in a cocktail shaker filled halfway with ice. Shake and serve.

MAY FLOWERS

Makes 4 cocktails

Credit the mojito, with its fresh mint and subtle sweetness, for changing the palates of tipplers everywhere. Without it, we might have all gone on ordering rum and Cokes and cloyingly sweet, synthetic amaretto sours and never learned any better.

Firefly's Alice Gaber met our challenge by taking the mojito's fresh-from-the-garden taste up a notch. Her herbaceous cocktail May Flowers takes its name from her signature house-made lavender liqueur, which she blended with gin and fresh grapefruit juice, and topped off with a dry Riesling that mellows lavender's medicinal edge. Then, the final touch: Floating delicately on top are edible flowers, including Johnny-jump-ups and violas.

The resulting drink is a perfect post-brunch indulgence that you first taste with your nose, then with your tongue.

But can it really be done at home? As daunting as it might seem to make your own infusion, Gaber, who has been making her own liqueurs since 2006, says it requires only a few steps. Lavender, rose, jasmine and any number of fruits will give vodka a lovely hint of their flavor; use dried flowers for intense flavor, and let it sit for at least a week (refrigerate if you're using fruit).

"When you buy Stoli Lemon, you don't know how much sugar is in it," Gaber says. "When you do it yourself, you can use fresh, even organic ingredients."

Ice
2 ounces gin, preferably Bluecoat American Dry gin

2 ounces Riesling
2 ounces freshly squeezed grapefruit juice

2 ounces lavender liqueur (may substitute St-Germain elderflower liqueur or Creme de Violette)

Edible flowers, for garnish
Fill a cocktail shaker halfway with ice. Add the gin, wine, juice and liqueur. Cover and shake well, then divide among cocktail (martini) glasses. Garnish with petals of edible flowers. Another option: Make ice cubes or an ice ring-mold with flowers frozen inside. It will look beautiful and really make an impression, says Gaber.

Note: If you'd like to make your own liqueur, soak 1 cup of food-safe flowers (such as honeysuckle, violets, roses and elderflowers) or 1/2 cup lavender petals in one 750-ml bottle of vodka or neutral-grain alcohol. Let it sit for 7 to 10 days, then strain. Add up to 1/2 cup sugar (to taste); stir until dissolved. For a nonalcoholic version, simmer lavender petals in a simple syrup (see recipe for L'Enfant Lemonade).

STRAWBERRY SMASH

Makes about 5 cocktails

It's Tuesday afternoon, which means Todd Thrasher's lab of libations is bubbling over. A mesh sack of fruit hangs near the bar of his Alexandria, Va., speakeasy, PX, its sanguine drippings collecting in a small vat below. Apothecary bottles filled with homemade bitters sit on the windowsill. A potful of ginger is boiling on the bar.

Thrasher, the sommelier for Restaurant Eve and PX, is best known for bringing the spirit of gastronomy to, well, spirits. But when we asked him to deliver a drink to rival the mojito, he opted to channel the simple pleasures of farmers market fruit and herbs.

"Summer is my favorite," he says. "I love going to the market right now; it smells like strawberries. Some of the best strawberries in the world come from right here."

He created the Strawberry Smash, a tart cocktail whose sweetness is tempered by the green notes of rhubarb and purple basil. Hendrick's gin, with its infusion of cucumber and roses, provides subtle botanical notes while syrupy, citrusy French wine Lillet Blanc brings out the basil's floral quality, Thrasher says.

One secret is that mesh sack: Rather than puree the berries, Thrasher strains out the bitter seeds and pulp, and uses the juice. The result is a refined strawberry cocktail that has nothing in common with a daiquiri.

"One of the things I never really liked about a mojito — and trust me, I love them — is that they're a salad. There's too much texture to them."

For the strawberry-basil-rhubarb mixture:

1 pint of fresh strawberries, rinsed and hulled
6 stalks of rhubarb, cut into 2-inch pieces

15 purple basil leaves (may substitute Italian basil)

1 1/2 cups sugar

Juice of 2 lemons (2 ounces)

For the drink:

Ice

2 ounces Lillet Blanc

1 ounce Hendrick's gin

1/2 ounce freshly squeezed lemon juice

4 ounces strawberry-basil-rhubarb mixture

Basil leaves, for garnish

For the strawberry-basilrhubarb mixture: Combine the strawberries, rhubarb, basil, sugar and lemon juice in a deep container. Use your hands to squish the ingredients together; do not puree in a blender or food processor, because the seeds will cause the mixture to become bitter. Cover and refrigerate for 3 hours; the pulp will rise to the top.

Strain the mixture through a fine-mesh strainer, being careful not to force any pulp through. Discard the pulp. You should have 1 1/2 cups of strained liquid. Reserve 4 ounces. Remaining mixture may be kept refrigerated for 3 to 4 days.

For the drink: Fill a cocktail shaker halfway with ice. Add the Lillet Blanc, gin, lemon juice and the 4 ounces of strawberry-basil-rhubarb mixture; stir well, then divide among glasses.

L'ENFANT LEMONADE
Makes 4 cocktails

The mojito can seem like the drink of the nightclub crowd, best served over ice and pumping techno music. In fact, the beverage is the definition of the classic cocktail, having been the potion of choice for Ernest Hemingway, Fidel Castro and Cubans everywhere long before the Nuevo Latino craze of the 1990s brought the drink to American hipsters.

So who better than a classic cocktails guy — adept at both history and simplicity — to deliver the nojito? Dan Searing, of forthcoming D.C. wine bar Room 11, is that guy.

"You don't want to make making a cocktail like deboning a chicken every time," Searing says of his approach.

For this summer, Searing, who is tending bar at the Warehouse Theater until Room 11 opens, created L'Enfant Lemonade, a masculine concoction.

Searing built the drink around Laird's Applejack, an apple brandy-and-grain liquor blend that counted notables among its fans: George Washington famously asked for the recipe, and Abraham Lincoln served it at his Illinois tavern.

Searing pairs the applejack with a bit of Lillet Blanc, a sweet wine; a bit of simple syrup; and fresh lemon juice. Rather than club soda, he tops it off with Perrier or another sparkling mineral water.

The garnish is a lemon wheel — a wink at Washington's ubiquitous traffic circles designed by the drink's namesake, architect Pierre Charles L'Enfant.

- 6 ounces applejack, preferably Laird's
- 3 ounces Lillet Blanc
- Juice of 3 lemons
- 2 ounces simple syrup
- Ice
- 3 ounces sparkling mineral water, such as Perrier
- Thin slices of lemon, for garnish

Combine the applejack, Lillet Blanc, lemon juice and simple syrup in a small pitcher; stir to combine.

Fill 4 tall glasses with ice. Divide the drink mixture evenly among them, then top each with some of the sparkling mineral water. Stir to combine. Garnish with a lemon wheel.

Notes: To make simple syrup, combine 1 cup sugar and 1 cup water, stirring until the sugar dissolves. Bring to a slow, rolling boil,

Stocking your bar for summer

WASHINGTON — In researching this story, we found that a few trendy spirits turned up again and again. We asked the experts how home bartenders can work these ingredients into their repertoires and knock the socks off of any backyard barbecue. (Don't forget to visit the spirits' Web sites, which have a trove of recipes.)

- Lillet Blanc: This citrusy French wine aperitif is a classic ingredient that's making a comeback. "Because of the aromatics and complexity, it's delicate enough to drink on its own, on the rocks," says Room 11's Dan Searing, who used it to sweeten and blend his L'Enfant Lemonade. Searing encourages mixing it with spirits; try it in a martini, James Bond-style, instead of the more herbal vermouth.
- Domaine de Canton: Ginger isn't the latest thing in cocktails, but this cognac's balanced flavoring (it's made with "Vietnamese baby ginger") has made it one of the hottest liqueurs around. PS 7's Gina Chersevani uses it in three drinks, and credits it for helping to blend her Thai's the Limit unusual mix of gin and coconut flavors. "It probably goes best with gin," she says. "Second, champagne, and some pineapple juice." • Elderflower liqueur: Taste this mild and sweet liqueur, and lychees, or perhaps pears, come to mind, but it's actually derived from the fragrant blooms of European elder trees. Just a few years old, St-Germain is the brand you'll see on the shelves of some better bars. PX's Todd Thrasher made his own home-made elderflower spirit, which he works into a gin and tonic cocktail. Says Firefly's Alice Gaber: "I think it's great with gin, but if you don't like gin, vodka is good." Or champagne.

• Gin (yes, gin): Gin, it turns out, is simply vodka infused with botanicals and herbs, making it an ideal ingredient for an aspiring mixologist looking to take flavors up a notch from vodka cocktails. And no longer is gin relegated to gin and tonics; three of our five nojitos were built around the spirit, and not one tasted of juniper. "I always thought the taste of gin was the taste of tonic," Gaber says, but manufacturers are now using different herbs and infusions, so each gin is different. Hendrick's, for example, is scented with roses and cucumbers. Chersevani's heady concoction: Top a floral gin with ice, lime and a couple of drops of rose water.

— The Washington Post

then reduce the heat and cook for 5 minutes. Transfer to a glass container and let cool to room temperature. Cover tightly and refrigerate until chilled; store indefinitely.

Sparkling lemon soda such as San Pellegrino Limonata may be substituted for the lemon juice, simple syrup and mineral water.

THE MYLAN
Makes 1 cocktail

There's a thrill that comes from ordering a mojito. For a moment, your bartender stops ignoring you and throws himself into mashing your limes and mint — all that labor, time and care, for your drink alone.

Bar Pilar's former bar manager, Adam Bernbach, preserves that little pleasure in his more-exotic-than-it-seems nojito, which he dubbed the Mylan. Bernbach muddles cubes of cantaloupe drizzled with agave syrup, then adds tequila and ice. A few quick shakes, then he pours it all back into a glass and tops it with beer.

Beer and tequila? In one glass? Bernbach held court over a weekly series at Bar Pilar in D.C. called Cocktail Sessions, where he developed a reputation for mixing up unusual flavors, including barbecued scotch and tarragon-plum gastrique. The Mylan is named for his girlfriend's Arkansas-based mother, Ginger Milan, who adds a splash of Corona to her margaritas. Indeed, the sweet and peppery Mylan enjoys a certain simple Southern charm.

"I should point out that I really made it my mission to use ingredients that are available at any supermarket and liquor store," he says. The beer is pilsner and the tequila is the herbal Partida Blanco, but it could just as easily be Budweiser and Patron, he says. Agave is an increasingly popular, neutral sweetener that comes from the same source as tequila (cactus), so the two blend well. Skip the garnish, and head straight to the sipping.

It tastes like the exact sort of elixir you would drink sitting on a porch in Austin, waiting for the sun to set.

3/4 ounce agave syrup or nectar

1 large slice cantaloupe, peeled and cut into 4 one-inch chunks

1 1/2 ounces blanco or silver tequila

Ice

1 1/2 ounces pills or pil-

ner-style beer
Place the agave syrup or nectar in a mixing glass or cocktail shaker; add the chunks of cantaloupe and muddle to release their flavor. Add the tequila and fill with ice. Cover and shake vigorously for 30 seconds, then pour into a highball glass. Add ice as needed. Top with the beer.

Consumer confidence falls in June

By Anne D'Innocenzio
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Mounting job losses and other economic realities caught up with Americans this month, pushing down a key barometer of consumer sentiment after a streak of gains built on glimmers of hope.

Some economists say the reality check offered by Tuesday's report from the New York-based Conference Board may not augur well for spending in the critical months ahead.

The Conference Board said its Consumer

Confidence Index now stands at 49.3, down from its revised May level of 54.8.

The drop coincided with mixed messages in the housing market. A report from the Treasury Department showing foreclosures jumped in the first quarter compared with 2008's fourth quarter. But a key housing price index showed price declines moderating.

Job security — a key factor in shoppers' willingness and ability to spend — continued to plague consumers surveyed by the Conference Board. And the Labor Department, which reports

June's job data Thursday, is expected to show unemployment climbed. Because consumer spending accounts for more than two-thirds of economic activity in the United States, economists and investors watch it closely. The Dow Jones industrials fell 84.1 points, or 0.99 percent, to end Tuesday at 8,448.06 and reverse a small gain in the morning before the Conference Board report came out.

Both components of the consumer confidence gauge fell this month. The Present Situation Index of how shoppers feel now about the economy declined to 24.8 from 29.7 in May. And the board's Expectations Index, shoppers' outlook for the next six months, dropped to 65.5 from 71.5.

Consumer sentiment has risen markedly from its new historic low of 25.3 in February. But confidence is still well below what's considered healthy. A reading above 90 means the economy is on solid footing. Above 100 signals strong growth.

Economists surveyed by Thomson Reuters had projected confidence would hold steady at 55 this month after surges in April and May helped by a stock market

Administration sends Congress consumer legislation

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The Obama administration sent Congress legislation Tuesday to create a new Consumer Financial Protection Agency designed to protect Americans from unscrupulous practices and make financial products easier to understand.

The 152-page draft bill would create a five-member board to run the agency with four members nominated by the president and confirmed by the Senate. The fifth member would be the director of the new National Bank Supervisor, the merged agency the administration is proposing to create to take over bank regulation duties.

The consumer agency is part of what would be the most comprehensive rewrite of the government's financial rules since the 1930s.

The administration said it would ensure that consumers are provided with simple, transparent and accurate information on financial products like credit cards and mortgages.

"Those ridiculous contracts with pages of fine print that no one can figure out — those things will be a thing of the past," Obama said in a statement. "And enforcement will be the rule, not the exception."

Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner said the new agency's one mission would be to protect consumers. He said the new agency would have "the authority and accountability to make sure that consumer protection regulations are written fairly and enforced vigorously."

The finance industry opposes the idea, arguing that the agency will stifle development of new products. However, the proposal has the backing of key lawmakers including House Financial Services Committee Chairman Barney Frank, D-Mass., and Senate Banking Committee Chairman Christopher Dodd, D-Conn.

In a statement, Dodd said the administration's proposal would address "the colossal failures that led to the economic crisis with a bold and aggressive plan."

Addressing opponents of the proposal, Dodd said, "It is unbelievable that some of the same irresponsible actors that helped create the current financial mess would argue that we are doing too much for consumers."

In a fact sheet, the administration said the new agency would ensure that financial products include clear information to allow consumers to

Home prices post 18.1 percent annual drop in April

By J.W. Elphinstone
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — There is a clear trend that home price declines are moderating — another sign the beleaguered housing market is stabilizing, according to data released Tuesday.

While the Standard & Poor's/Case-Shiller index of 20 major cities tumbled by 18.1 percent, it marked the third straight month the decline was not a record. And yearly losses in 13 metros improved compared to March.

"The stock market bottomed in March and measures of consumer confidence have turned upward. This report shows that these better spirits are also appearing in the housing market," said David M. Blitzer, chairman of the S&P

But rising foreclosures fueled by layoffs could derail a meaningful turnaround. The number of homeowners at least two months behind or in foreclosure jumped in the first quarter from the previous quarter, a Treasury Department report said Tuesday.

Defaults from borrowers with good credit contributed to much of the increase in seriously delinquent loans, echoing data last month

Stocks spring forward

The second quarter was good for stock investors worldwide. Markets in most big economies rose even though economic forecasts for some countries actually got worse. And just as in the first quarter, emerging markets rose faster than developed ones.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Micron posts $290M loss in quarter

BOISE — Boise-based computer chip maker Micron Technology Inc., citing flat sales of flash memory products, has posted another financial loss for fiscal third quarter.

The company reported a loss of $290 million Thursday, or 36 cents per share, compared to a $236 million loss posted in the same period a year ago.

Micron reported revenue of $1.1 billion, up from $993 million in the previous quarter. Those results beat expectations by a survey of Thomson Reuters analysts, who predicted a loss of 43 cents per share.

Micron finished the period, ending June 4, with $1.3 billion in cash and investments. The company has lost about $3.8 billion since late 2006 due to falling global prices and saturated markets.

BEFORE THE PLANNING AND ZONING COMMISSION IN AND FOR CASSIA COUNTY, STATE OF IDAHO

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

ON PROPOSED AMENDMENTS TO THE CASSIA COUNTY CODE'S ZONING REGULATIONS

BE IT KNOWN that on Thursday, the 16th day of July, 2009, beginning at 2:00 p.m., the Planning and Zoning Commission for Cassia County, Idaho shall hold public hearing on the Petition of Magic Valley Poultry International, filed by Matt Thompson, P.E., of AG Tec Engineering, requesting to amend and add provisions to the current Cassia County Zoning Regulations. This hearing will be held at the Burley City Council Chambers, 1401 Overland Avenue, Burley, Idaho.

A summary of proposed changes is as follows:
Zoning Ordinance, Title 9:

Section 9-2-2: Definitions adding new terms and definitions for: "Bio-Security Plan - A plan that identifies best management practices employed by a farm to protect their livestock from infectious agents, practices to reduce the spread of infectious agents to other farms and mortality management provisions." "Processed CAFO Waste Excreta from animals that is treated, processed or manufactured into a commercial product that is different in form and appearance from excreted manure. This definition specifically excludes wind row or static pile compost. The excreta may or may not include bedding."

Section 9-11-3E: To allow the maximum size limit on CAFOs located in the Prime Agricultural zone to exceed the 7,500 animal unit limitation if a conditional use permit is granted to an applicant.

Section 9-11-9: Add a new section entitled "Bio Security for Swine and Poultry Operations" requiring new swine or poultry CAFO operations to submit a bio security plan that outlines the facility's planned efforts in regard to bio security for the proposed facility with its CAFO application.

Section 9-11-10: Add a new section entitled "Alternative Waste System" providing that any CAFO applicant may substitute an alternative waste system composed of Processed CAFO Waste, instead of demonstrating required animal unit density, but still must meet other CAFO ordinance requirements. Also provides that to qualify under this section all waste must be contained within 48 hours within enclosed structures for processing and storage, and not within one hundred year flood zones or wetland area. Any entity providing storage, treatment, processing or manufacturing shall be required to have a conditional use permit. Applicant for an alternative waste system must also submit real property equivalent in acres that the system will replace to determine allowable density of animal units.

All interested persons and citizens shall have an opportunity to be heard on this matter. At the public hearing, those signing up to testify concerning the proposed amendments will be allotted time to do so, with the total hearing time being divided in equal measures amongst those signing up. The Commission reserves the right to limit repetitive testimony and to halt irrelevant testimony. Spokespersons for those groups sharing the same or similar testimony are encouraged.

Written testimony concerning the proposed amendments may also be submitted. Written submissions exceeding one (1) typewritten page, single spaced in no less than 12 point font, must be filed at the County Administrative Office, Courthouse Room #4, 1459 Overland Avenue, Burley, Cassia County, Idaho by Thursday, July 9, 2009 at 4:00 P.M. Written submissions may be made from 8:30 A.M. to 5:00 P.M., Monday through Friday on normal business days, at the County Administrative Office, Courthouse Room #4, 1459 Overland Avenue, Burley, Idaho. Any written submission of one (1) typewritten page or less, single-spaced in no less than 12 point font, may be submitted to the Planning and Zoning Commission up to the time that the hearing is closed, after which time no additional written or oral testimony will be received, unless specifically requested and invited by the Planning and Zoning Commission hereafter.

Girlfriend can't get clearance to see man's top-secret list

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend, "Beau," and I moved in together and already we have trust issues. He doesn't trust me around his computer. He said he has things on it that are part of his past, and it's none of my business.

One of the things he doesn't want me to see is "The List." He keeps a list of all the girls he has slept with — including one-night stands. I have asked Beau how many there have been, but he doesn't want to tell me "because it will hurt me." He has revealed that it's a number between 10 and 50.

I have asked him to delete the list, but he said that if he gets a weird disease in the future, he can always refer back to it. I have nightmares about this.

Should I drop the matter?
— UNLISTED NUMBER
IN TEXAS

DEAR UNLISTED: No, honey. You should drop him. If Beau was simply afraid you would see how many women he has slept with and was trying to protect your feelings, he would print out the list and stash it in a safety deposit box. What he's afraid of is that you'll see the list is GROWING.

I don't blame you for having nightmares. A man who is seriously worried that he'll get a weird disease in the future is exposing himself and YOU to them now. So pack your bags, get out of there and schedule an appointment with your gynecologist ASAP.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: My older sister, "Carole," has been dealing with breast cancer for almost a year. Although my family and I live three hours away and are struggling with problems of our own, we have always been supportive of her.

Last week, Carole called to tell me she'll be going to Australia at the end of the year — a "reward" from her husband for everything she has been through. I was happy for her until she informed me that I would be taking care of her kids for two weeks while she's on vacation.

I joked, "It doesn't sound like you're giving me any choice in this." She replied: "No, I'm not. I went through cancer. I deserve this trip."

I reminded Carole that when I watched her kids just two months ago, things didn't go well. They are completely different from my children, and they don't like each other. Her 5-year-old daughter cried all night, every night while she was here. Her son destroys everything he comes into contact with — we still have a hole in the bedroom wall — and has a vocabulary I don't want my kids exposed to.

Do I have a right to just say "no" and offer my best wishes in finding a sitter? I feel guilty, but I don't feel she's entitled to demand this from me. Am I being a bad sister?

— NEEDS RESOLUTION
IN THE MID-ATLANTIC
DEAR NEEDS RESOLUTION: Your reasons for declining your sister's edict seem perfectly reasonable to me. You took care of your niece and nephew before — it didn't work out. You are perfectly within your rights to be firm with Carole and let her know she's going to have to make other arrangements for her little ones while she's on holiday. A perfect solution would be for them to be looked after by either set of grandparents.

DEAR ABBY: Does anyone know what the protocol is for providing food for house sitters? Should they bring their own, or should it be provided for them?

— NOT CERTAIN
IN ALBANY, ORE.

DEAR NOT CERTAIN: I think the answer depends upon who is doing the sitting and for how long a period of time. However, if you're wise, you will make sure to have a clearly stated agreement in advance so there are no misunderstandings.

IF JULY 1 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Concentrate on exercise and developing your physical prowess during the summer months. You may improve your body and simultaneously expand your social life by joining a health club or latching onto an exercise buddy. Your aspirations are developing at the same time, but for the best success, wait until October to put your business and career ambitions into motion. February, however, is the very best month to make life-altering decisions or to put your dreams into action because Lady Luck will oversee everything you do.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You can't put a price on love. Keep your money in your wallet. Avoid misunderstandings by staying clear of contracts and investments.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Talk it over. You aren't out of the woods where relationships are concerned. Your intuitions could lead you in the wrong direction.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your good judgment can be your good friend. You might have some important ideas or beneficial insights that solve a major problem.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Avoid mushy sentiments and savory. Conversation could be based on an underlying misunderstanding that you wouldn't dream could happen.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): The castle in the sky you built might need remodeling. The path you have shared with a special someone may have diverged over time.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your confidence is back due to support from a family member or praise from the boss. That doesn't mean you can invest with impunity.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Speak up. You may be slightly confused by someone's reaction. Get help from a trusted friend and talk through your fears and concerns.

HOROSCOPE Jeraldine Saunders

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Romantic yearnings could be based on opposites attracting. It is best, though, to keep a new relationship on the track of friendship.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Avoid financial decisions. The seeds of a great idea might not be ready to sprout, but should be set aside for favorable soil.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Small change has nothing to do with sizeable misunderstandings. Delay key decisions. This is a time for planning, not action.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Someone may misunderstand intentions in a social setting or a business transaction. Lay it on the line and write down every detail.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Stick it out a little longer. Good advice can be found in a book, from a professional or from a distant relative or close friend.

Today is Wednesday, July 1, the 182nd day of 2009. There are 183 days left in the year. This is Canada Day.

Today's Highlight:
On July 1, 1867, Canada became a self-governing dominion of Great Britain as the British North America Act took effect.

On this date:
In 1859, the first intercollegiate baseball game took place in Pittsfield, Mass., between teams from Williams College and Amherst College. (Amherst won the nearly four-hour, 26-inning contest by the score of 73-32.)
In 1863, the Civil War Battle of Gettysburg, resulting in a Union victory, began in Pennsylvania.

In 1934, Hollywood began enforcing its Production Code subjecting motion pictures to censorship review.

In 1946, the United States exploded a 20-kiloton atomic bomb near Bikini Atoll in the Pacific.

In 1959, the controversial motion picture "Anatomy of a Murder," starring James Stewart, was released.

In 1968, the United States, Britain, the Soviet Union and nearly 60 other nations signed the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty.

In 1969, Britain's Prince Charles was formally invested as the Prince of Wales by his mother, Queen Elizabeth II.

In 1980, "O Canada" was proclaimed the national anthem of Canada.

In 1984, the Motion Picture Association of America established the "PG-13" rating.

In 1997, Hong Kong reverted to Chinese rule after 156 years as a British colony.

Ten years ago: Exactly six months before the year 2000, Congress passed legislation to shield businesses from a potential flood of Y2K computer-related lawsuits. A gondola in the French Alps ripped away from its cables, killing 20 people aboard.

African nationalist Joshua Nkomo died in Harare, Zimbabwe, at age 82.

Five years ago: Legendary film and stage actor Marlon Brando died in Los Angeles at age 80. Saddam Hussein scoffed at charges of war crimes and mass killings, making a defiant first public appearance in an Iraqi court since being hunted down seven months earlier. Hundreds of thousands of people marched in Hong Kong to demand democratic rights from China. The Cassini spacecraft sent back photographs of Saturn's shimmering rings.

One year ago: Ex-convict Nicholas T. Sheley, suspected in eight grisly slayings in two states, was arrested outside a bar in Granite City, Ill. The Roman Catholic Archdiocese of Denver agreed to pay $5.5 million to settle 18 more claims by people who said they'd been sexually abused by priests when they were children. Clay Felker, founding editor of New York magazine, died at age 82.

An older Armstrong awaits Tour

THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

PARIS — Lance Armstrong believes he can win an eighth Tour de France title, well aware his aging legs are not as strong as they used to be. He is also willing to put such ambitions aside if it means helping teammate Alberto Contador win.

Contador, the 2007 winner, and Armstrong will ride for the Astana team in the three-week race that starts Saturday with a time trial in Monaco. The pairing raises an intriguing question: Can the two Tour de France champions ride together or will their fierce individual agendas divide them?

The 37-year-old Armstrong won the last of his record seven straight Tours in 2005, and his startling comeback has fans worldwide eager to see if he can add to his cycling legend.

“Now it’s 2009, not 2004, 2005 or 2001, that’s different,” Armstrong said in an interview with The Associated Press on Tuesday. “I would love to be eternally young, but I’m not. That’s just the reality.”

“It’s not going to be easy to win,” Armstrong added. “In December and January, I thought it would be easier. It ends up being more difficult than I thought. Perhaps because of the crash, of the complicated season or simply because I’m older now.”

Armstrong said he would be willing to support Contador if it becomes clear the Spaniard is the likelier rider to win the grueling race.

“Out of respect for him, out of respect for the team and out of respect for the rules of cycling, I would do it with pleasure,” Armstrong said by telephone after previewing the 18th stage of the Tour, a time trial in Annecy.

When riders take the start line in Monaco, just one rider — the 40-year-old Spaniard Inigo Cuesta — is likely to be older than Armstrong. The Tour’s oldest champion is Belgium’s Firmin Lambot, who was 36 when he won in 1922.

Armstrong knows the odds are against him, and he would love to prove his doubters wrong.

“They would say that my time has come and gone and that I’m too old, that it’s very complicated, that there are other things now,” Armstrong said. “I know those things and you could use those for motivation. I know where I am. I’ve studied my performances in training very closely, and I’m excited to race. I’m not sure that I can win, but I can tell you that the person who thinks that I get 10th ... he is dead wrong.”

Armstrong overcame testicular cancer to win his first Tour in 1999 and finished a creditable 12th place recently in the Giro d’Italia.

New T.F. Legion team to debut in 2010

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

Then there were three. Next summer, a third American Legion Baseball team will take the field in Twin Falls, but there’s a lot of work to be done. Travis Tarchione, the Canyon Ridge High School head varsity baseball coach, is helping to organize the team.

“The first thing is to apply for a charter and set up a board,” he said.

More involved planning will happen as early as this fall as everything has to be built from the ground up. There’s no coach, no name, no mascot, no color scheme, no uniforms and no money. About the only thing for sure is that the team will play at Canyon Ridge’s field and will compete in Area C at the Class A level.

“We’ve got to set up a board for fundraising, hire a coach, get jerseys, get hats, come up with a name,” Tarchione said. As of now he has no plans to coach, and the job will most likely go to a Canyon Ridge assistant.

The team won’t be affiliated with the Twin Falls Cowboys program, meaning there will be three teams based in Twin Falls. Division of the baseball talent will fall loosely along the lines of the high school zones as well, but there’s the possibility of a few crossovers or players from neighboring towns.

The addition will bring the Area C conference up to 19 teams (the new team, Bear Lake, Blackfoot, Bonneville, Buhl, Burley, Highland, Hillcrest, Idaho Falls Rangers, Jerome, Kimberly, Marsh Falls, Pocatello Razorbacks, Pocatello Rebels, Shelley, Skyline, Twin Falls, Krzyzewski: ‘I’m not going to the Lakers’

The Associated Press

DURHAM, N.C. — Mike Krzyzewski made it clear: He’s not ever going to coach the Los Angeles Lakers.

During his annual summer meeting with reporters Tuesday, one of the first topics covered by the Duke coach was the simmering buzz that had him leaving the Blue Devils for the Lakers if Phil Jackson retires.

“I’m not going to the Lakers. They have one of the great coaches in the game,” Krzyzewski said. “I don’t know where that rumor started, but there has been nothing done like that, and I’m not leaving Duke. Whatever you hear about anything like that, I will never leave Duke until I leave coaching.”

Recent reports fueled the latest round of Krzyzewski-to-the-Lakers chatter. Jackson had raised the possi-

After three decades in Durham, Krzyzewski sounds like he is planning to stick around for quite a while longer.

Williams sisters, 2 Russians reach Wimbledon SFs

The Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Her 19th consecutive victory at the All England Club already wrapped up, Venus Williams grabbed a seat and watched younger sister Serena win easily to reach the semifinals, too.

Five-time champion Venus beat No. 11-seeded Agnieszka Radwanska of Poland 6-1, 6-2, before two-time champion Serena defeated No. 8 Victoria Azarenka of Belarus 6-2, 6-3, a pair of overwhelming performances Tuesday that moved the siblings closer to another all-in-the-family final at Wimbledon.

“They are both playing super-well. They’re playing ‘The Williams Way,’” their father, Richard Williams, said. “And when you’re playing ‘The Williams Way,’ it’s very difficult for anyone to touch you.”

If No. 3 Venus gets by No. 1 Dinaara Safina of Russia in Thursday’s semifinals, and No. 2 Serena eliminates No. 4 Elena Dementieva of Russia, the siblings would meet Saturday in their second consecutive final at the All England Club and fourth overall.

It also would be the eighth all-Williams Grand Slam championship match; Serena leads 5-2.

“I would love it to be a Williams final,” Venus said, “and so would she.”

Venus is trying to become the first woman since Steffi Graf in 1991-93 to win three consecutive Wimbledon titles; Serena wants to add to the trophies she earned in 2002-03 by beating her sister in the finals.

FEDERER TO FACE HARD-SERVING KARLOVIC AT WIMBLEDON

WIMBLEDON, England — Roger Federer has already been through a “serving contest” at Wimbledon this year. It’s probably nothing compared to what’s coming next.

Federer used the term after his fourth-round match, which included two tiebreakers and only one break of serve. Up next in today’s quarterfinals is Ivo Karlovic, who makes a living smacking aces and service winner.

Boozer, Okur decide to stay with Jazz

SALT LAKE CITY — Carlos Boozer has reconsidered free agency, or at least put it off a year, and center Mehmet Okur has decided to stay with the Utah Jazz for the final year of his contract.

Boozer let the Utah Jazz know on Tuesday that he will stay with the team for the final year of his contract rather than opting out and becoming a free agent — which he once said he intended to do.

Boozer backed off his original statement and said when the season ended he wanted to consider all of his options.

He chose not to chance an iffy free agent market for more money and possibly a long-term deal, taking the $12.7 million he's guaranteed next season from the Jazz.

Boozer took until the final day to reach a decision.

When healthy, Boozer has been the Jazz's top scorer and rebounder and helped lead Utah to three straight playoff appearances. He's been an All-Star twice and was a member of last year's U.S. Olympic gold medal team, but injuries have taken him out for large chunks of three of his five seasons in Utah.

Okur is due $9 million next season. He has averaged 16 points and eight rebounds since joining the Jazz five years ago and is the team's top 3-point shooter.

PISTONS FIRE COACH MICHAEL CURRY AFTER 1 SEASON

DETROIT — All or nothing seems to be the formula for coaching the Detroit Pistons. Bring home an NBA championship or hit the road.

First-year coach Michael Curry became the latest Pistons coach to get the ax as president for basketball operations Joe Dumars fired him Tuesday after watching his team stumble to a sub-.500 record and an embarrassing first-round exit from the playoffs.

Curry and Dumars shared playing days together with Detroit. That may have helped Curry land the coaching job last year, but it wasn't enough to keep him in it.

The Pistons went 39-43 in 2008-09 and were swept in the postseason in four lopsided losses to the Cleveland Cavaliers after six straight conference finals appearances. Dumars said after that series that Curry would return, but changed his mind by Tuesday.

Pistons spokesman Kevin Grigg said the timetable for naming a new coach was up in the air.

Cabrera hits key double, Yanks beat M's

NEW YORK — Melky Cabrera hit a go-ahead double in the eighth inning and Mariano Rivera tossed out the first ball — and threw the final pitch — as the New York Yankees beat the Seattle Mariners 8-5 Tuesday night for their sixth straight win.

Alex Rodriguez hit his 565th career homer and Cabrera drove in three runs. The Yankees won their ninth in a row at home over Seattle, a streak dating to 2007.

WHITE SOX 11, INDIANS 4, 6 INNINGS

CLEVELAND — Paul Konerko and Jermaine Dye drove in two runs apiece, Chicago chased Cleveland ace Cliff Lee in the fourth inning and the White Sox pounded the miserable Indians 11-4 in a game called in the seventh inning on Tuesday night to move above .500 for the first time since May 2.

Konerko hit a two-run homer off Lee (4-7) in the first for Chicago, which has won four straight and 11 of 15. The White Sox haven't had a winning record since they were 12-11.

RAYS 4, BLUE JAYS 1

TORONTO — B.J. Upton, Carl Crawford and Willy Aybar hit solo homers and the Tampa Bay Rays won their seventh straight game, 4-1 over the Toronto Blue Jays 4-1 on Tuesday night.

Matt Garza (6-5) allowed one run and seven hits in seven innings to win consecutive starts for the first time since April 30 and May 5. The right-hander is 4-2 with a 0.60 ERA in his past six starts against the Blue Jays.

TWINS 2, ROYALS 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Justin Morneau homered for the third straight game and Scott Baker labored through five tough innings, lifting the Minnesota Twins to a 2-1 victory over the hapless Kansas City Royals on Tuesday night.

Baker (6-6) fought through a high pitch count to keep Minnesota in a tight game early and the Twins took advantage of another defensive miscue by the Royals for the go-ahead run in the sixth inning.

RANGERS 9, ANGELS 5

ARLINGTON, Texas — Marlon Byrd homered twice to drive in five runs and the Texas Rangers again had their way at home against Joe Saunders, beating the AL West-leading Los Angeles Angels 9-5 on Tuesday.

Ian Kinsler, Nelson Cruz and David Murphy also went deep for Texas, which ended what had been one of the worst offensive months in team history with a season-high five home runs — four in 3 2-3 innings off Saunders (8-5).

ORIOLES 11, RED SOX 10

BALTIMORE — Nick Markakis hit a two-run double off Boston closer

NATIONAL LEAGUE MARLINS 7, NATIONALS 5, 7 INNINGS, RAIN

MIAMI — Hanley Ramirez homered and drove in four runs, and the Florida Marlins erased a four-run deficit to beat the Washington Nationals 7-5 Tuesday night in a game that was called in the seventh inning because of rain.

Ramirez's two-run single in the seventh put the Marlins ahead 6-5. Jorge Cantu followed with an RBI single moments before play was stopped, and Washington never got another chance to bat.

BREWERS 6, METS 3

MILWAUKEE — Ryan Braun hit a three-run double and scored on Johan Santana's throwing error, sending the Milwaukee Brewers to a 6-3 victory over the Mets on Tuesday night that extended New York's losing streak to a season-high five games.

Prince Fielder added a 452-foot solo homer for the NL Central leaders, who have won four of five and provided a fitting end to New York's worst month in nearly six years.

GIANTS 6, CARDINALS 3

ST. LOUIS — Randy Johnson won his third straight decision and 303rd of his career despite surrendering two home runs to Albert Pujols in the San Francisco Giants' 6-3 victory over the St. Louis Cardinals on Tuesday night.

The Cardinals couldn't overcome Chris Carpenter's first shaky outing of the season, which left them trailing 6-1 after five innings. St. Louis has lost three straight since acquiring Mark DeRosa, who is a quiet 0 for 9 thus far, and has dropped six of seven overall.

BRAVES 5, PHILLIES 4, 10 INNINGS

ATLANTA — Martin Prado hit a game-ending RBI single in the 10th inning for his career-best fourth hit and the Atlanta Braves beat Philadelphia 5-4 on Tuesday night for their first home win over the Phillies since 2007.

Prado also homered and finished with a career-high four RBIs for Atlanta, which went 0-9 against the Phillies at Turner Field last year.

DIAMONDBACKS 6, REDS 2

CINCINNATI — Dan Haren held the Cincinnati Reds scoreless into the seventh inning, showing why he's been the NL's stingiest pitcher in June, and connected on his first career homer Tuesday night during a 6-2 victory that snapped the Arizona Diamondbacks' longest losing streak of the season.

PIRATES 3, CUBS 0

PITTSBURGH — Ross Ohlendorf pitched seven innings and Freddy Sanchez got the depleted Pirates going by scoring from second on a ball that bounced only a few feet from home plate during the fourth inning, helping Pittsburgh beat the Chicago Cubs 3-0 on Tuesday night.

According to Cowboys Class AA coach Tim Stadelmeir, the annual Area C meeting has addressed the expanding conference, but there is no plan to break it into smaller conferences.

"Every year it's brought up, but we haven't done anything," Stadelmeir said. "Something's got to be done, but I'm assuming it will be 20 teams before (a possible split)."

Beyond the initial setup, it is hoped that the new Twin Falls team can co-host a tournament with the Cowboys, the Donnelley Sports Wood Bat Classic as a Class A program and the Cowboy Classic Wood Bat Tournament if the team grows to Class AA.

"I like those sorts of challenges," said Federer, who is seeking his sixth Wimbledon championship and record 15th Grand Slam title. "It's maybe not the most fun match to go through. But I like to beat this guy, because he makes it hard on us to beat him."

Instead, Krzyzewski's top priorities this summer include coaxing along a Blue Devils team that returns only two scholarship guards and weighing whether to sign on for another stint as coach of the U.S. men's basketball team. Krzyzewski, who guided the Americans to the gold medal last summer at the Beijing Games, said the coach for the 2012 Olympics will be announced July 21 in Las Vegas. He didn't hint which way he might be leaning.

"I've thought about it since then, a lot, and discussed it with a lot of people. If I do it again, it's not going to be the same experience, which is good, because in order to have that, you couldn't recreate that experience," Krzyzewski said. "So what would the new experience be like? Whether you're a player or a coach, it's going to be different, and each of the guys who are making decisions as far as if they're going to play have to look at it that way. The great thing about it is, there's a camaraderie there, and it's been a good thing."

Still, most regard Contador as favorite for the world's biggest multistage race.

Before the Giro, Armstrong broke his collarbone in a crash during the Vuelta of Castilla and Leon in March. Now he has recovered fully.

"The indication I have in training and the tests that I did tell me that my condition is good," he said. "Maybe not the best of my life, but not too bad."

As meticulous as ever, Armstrong spent the last four days scoping out the big difficulties he will face during the third and final week of the race — a sure sign his ambition still burns.

However, Contador's legs are 11 years fresher than Armstrong's, and Spain's supreme climber is just as hungry to win.

Armstrong insists there are no conflict of interests on his team.

"We really have a clear-cut favorite (Contador) that we can say he is better than the other contenders," he said. "Nobody wants to lose. I'm not going to act irresponsibly. Neither will Levi (Leipheimer), neither will (Andreas) Kloeden. And, at the end of the day, we will have to follow the orders of the team's director."

Armstrong and Contador, one of only five riders with victories in the three main tours (Spain, Italy and France) don't know each other well and they have spent little time together.

"The relationship is cordial and respectful — there is not a lot of interaction" Armstrong said. "The language is an issue, a challenge. His English is similar to my Spanish, so the crossover is not easy"

Astana manager Johan Bruyneel, who oversaw Armstrong's seven Tour wins, recently said Contador would be team leader.

Armstrong told the AP that Contador would wear the team's No. 1 jersey on Saturday for the 9.6-mile time trial.

The opening clock race could establish a clear hierarchy within Astana. If Armstrong wins it, it would be hard for the 26-year-old Contador to claim leadership later.

"Of course it's important, but it's a long way from Verbiers, the (Mont) Ventoux, (the Col du) Grand Colombier," Armstrong said, looking toward the brutal third week.

This year, Contador has improved his speed and won the Spanish time trial last week. Armstrong predicts Contador will be fast in Monaco, but tabs Swiss star Fabian Cancellara as Saturday's winner.

Armstrong also thinks his team will win the Stage 4 team time trial in Montpellier and take the yellow jersey then. It could be on his shoulders that day, or on those of Contador, or draped on his American teammate, Leipheimer.

During his heyday, Armstrong usually destroyed his rivals at the first hilltop finish. The first such finish this year is Sage 7, at Arcalis in the Pyrenees. Armstrong preaches patience this year.

"There are too many difficult parts in the final week," he said. "Honestly speaking, I plan to be careful in Arcalis. It's not like before when you had two stages in the Pyrenees and then one week through the middle of France pretty easy and then two stages in the Alps and then one week to Paris."

According to Armstrong, the major threats to the Astana team will come from Australian rider Cadel Evans, the runner-up in 2007 and 2008, from the Schleck brothers, Andy and Frank, and from defending champion Carlos Sastre of Spain.

Armstrong has said he's riding again to help fight cancer. He's also back because of his passion for the sport.

"I'm racing for free because I love it," said Armstrong, who doesn't get paid by his team. "I don't think a lot of people would do it for free. I'm doing it because I want it, because I love it and also because I can. The sport was good to me. I had many years at the top and I've made plenty of money. My life is comfortable and I can do whatever I want."
