Airplane crashes in downtown Burley

Minor injuries for those onboard; crash knocks out power around town for hours

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — A vintage airplane with a pilot and one passenger onboard crashed Wednesday about three-quarters of a mile west of the Burley J.R. “Jack” Simplot Airport.
Burley Fire Department

Chief Steven Hamilton, whose department was on the scene as first responders, said the two men suffered from cuts and lacerations and were transported to Cassia Regional Medical Center.

Kim Johan Paulsen, 46 of Klamath Falls, Ore., a student pilot, was in control of the plane during the crash, according to Cassia County Undersheriff George Warrell.

The passenger was instructor Christopher G. Butler, 34, of Harper, Ore.

Warrell said the two men were conscious and able to

More charges filed in Twin Falls fraud case

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

Three people are now charged with receiving medically unnecessary prescriptions from former Twin Falls nurse practitioner Jan Sund.

Sund, who already faces a possible prison sentence on charges of prescription fraud involving a former Twin Falls police detective, is named in newer cases involving two former patients.

Sund pleaded guilty on April 30 to two counts of conspiracy to commit prescription fraud and two counts of prescription fraud involving painkillers oxycodone and hydrocodone. She is scheduled to be sentenced on July 10 in Twin Falls 5th District Court and allegedly over-prescribed the painkillers for drug and money kickbacks.

Sund is named in the newer criminal allegations filed June 24 against two of her former patients, Donald Schaeffer and Debra K. Brandebourg — also known as Debbie Schaeffer, court records show.

Schaeffer and Brandebourg were each charged June 24 with three felony counts of prescription fraud, along with two counts of conspiracy to commit prescription fraud during 2006 and 2007 in Twin Falls County, according to court records.

The allegations follow similar ones filed May 27 against Curtis Gambrel, a former longtime Twin Falls Police detective who was on the force at the time of the alleged acts but retired in April 2007. He has a July 17 preliminary hearing set in the case charging him of two counts of conspiracy to obtain a prescription by fraud, and three counts of obtaining a prescription by fraud.

EPA weighs wastewater permit for Twin Falls

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency will take comments until July 15 on a proposed new permit for the city of Twin Falls to discharge treated wastewater into the Snake River.

The permit, a draft of which can be read online, regulates the flows out of the city's wastewater plant west of the Perrine Bridge — one of the largest dischargers on this stretch of the river.

It's been more than nine years since the city's last permit was approved. The current comment period was originally set to end in June, but was extended after a request from the city — giving interested parties another month to weigh in on changes such as maximum levels for phosphorus and suspended solids. The city will also partner with the U.S. Geological Survey to put a new stream gauge in the river just upstream of the wastewater plant's discharge, an attempt to better calculate how low river flows past the plant can get.

The EPA currently uses data from a USGS station near Kimberly, 8 miles upstream, which city officials say may only record a third of the water that passes the wastewater plant. But even at that lower level, EPA calculations found the city wasn't likely to violate its permit.

QUILT WALK WARMS UP DOWNTOWN BUSINESS

MEAGAN THOMPSON/Times-News

Scrappin' Girlfriends owners Lisa Fairbanks, left, and Michele Hamilton hang quilts in downtown Twin Falls Wednesday morning in preparation for the inaugural Downtown Quilt Walk. Two hundred locally made quilts are on display today through Saturday, both inside and outside businesses on Main Avenue. 'The idea is to get people downtown,' says event organizer and owner of downtown business Stitchin' Time, Cathy Reitz.

Even in July, a quilt may help warm up downtown business.

Quilts began lining the streets and shops of Main Avenue East in historic downtown Twin Falls Wednesday, and will stay there until Saturday.

The inaugural Downtown Quilt Walk features large and small quilts designed and made by area quilters, as well as other Idaho quilters from as far away as Sandpoint, said organizer Cathy Reitz.

Reitz, owner of Stichin' Time, a quilting store located on Main Avenue East, and a member of the Historic Downtown Business Im-provement

District, organized the event as a way to entice people to explore the shops in downtown Twin Falls.

The event, sponsored by the Historic Downtown BID, features nearly 200 quilts hanging inside and outside most stores and restaurants along two blocks of Main Avenue East. "People were hesitant at first," said Reitz about hanging the quilts in their business, "but now everyone is getting involved."

Lisa Fairbanks, owner of Scrappin' Girlfriends, a scrapbook store located on Main Avenue, said that she was surprised at all the people she had seen downtown in only the first hour. Fairbanks said that the quilt

The Northern Leopard frog is being considered for the Endangered Species List.

Feds to study health of northern leopard frog

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

Federal biologists said Wednesday they plan to examine whether a frog whose habitat includes southern Idaho should be listed as an endangered species.

The northern leopard frog lives in 19 Western states, but has disappeared across vast portions of its historic range in the U.S. and Canada, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service announced. The agency says the species is threatened by habitat loss, disease, non-native species, pollution and climate change.

Eight environmental groups petitioned the agency in 2006 to protect the frog's Western population, and scientists will now conduct a thorough review of its status before deciding whether to propose a listing.

In the Magic Valley, the smooth-skinned frog can be found near Lake Walcott and less commonly in other areas of the valley, said Jim Klott, a wildlife biologist with the U.S. Bureau of Land Management's Jarbidge Field Office. In some areas — Salmon Falls Creek, for example — the frogs have disappeared over the years, he said. But a widespread lack of historical data means it's hard to conclude just what that says about population trends, Klott said.

"If you saw one 15 years ago, was that the only one? Or were they numerous, and the data doesn't exist?" he asked.

The frogs can be green, brown or yellowish, and their dark spots are ringed with a lighter bronze color, Klott said. They are not the same species as the spotted frog, which also calls southern Idaho home.

The outside quilts will go up every morning and come down every night, Reitz said, until Friday. The inside quilts will continue to be displayed until Saturday, she said.

Many of the quilts tell a story, Reitz said, either about their maker or owner. Most quilts have a label or story attached that tells about the quilt including when it was made and why.

One unique quilt is made entirely of neckties from the family of Vesta Emery, 88, of Wendell, and sits outside Scrapper's Girlfriends. Another quilt was made for Twin Falls war veteran and double amputee, Cpl. Travis Greene, after he returned from Iraq.

Quilts will also be on display inside the former Fashion Cents building at the corner of Main Avenue East and Second Street East, including some dating back to the early 1900s brought in from the Twin Falls County Historical Museum.

talk to officers after the crash in the hospital but no further condition information was available Wednesday.

The plane landed across the street from Mulholland Positioning Systems Inc. and the crash was witnessed by several people.

Warrell said Paulsen told officers that the plane lost power and was flying low when it apparently caught a north-south power line at 9:52 a.m. before going down on East Ninth Street between Hansen Avenue and Albion Avenue. Power was out in much of the downtown Burley area for several hours.

The single-engine, fixed-wing plane was registered to Paradise Landing LLC out of Gilbert, Ariz., according to a registry report from the Federal Aviation Administration.

The FAA lists the aircraft as a Republic RC-3 built in 1946. Warrell said Paulsen had just purchased the plane in New York.

The scene was turned over to Craig Karel with the FAA out of Boise about an hour after the crash.

Sharon Campbell, who works at the airport, said she refueled the plane at the airport before it took off.

"It had some problems," Campbell said. "It had a fuel leak and a crooked tail that my husband took a look at."

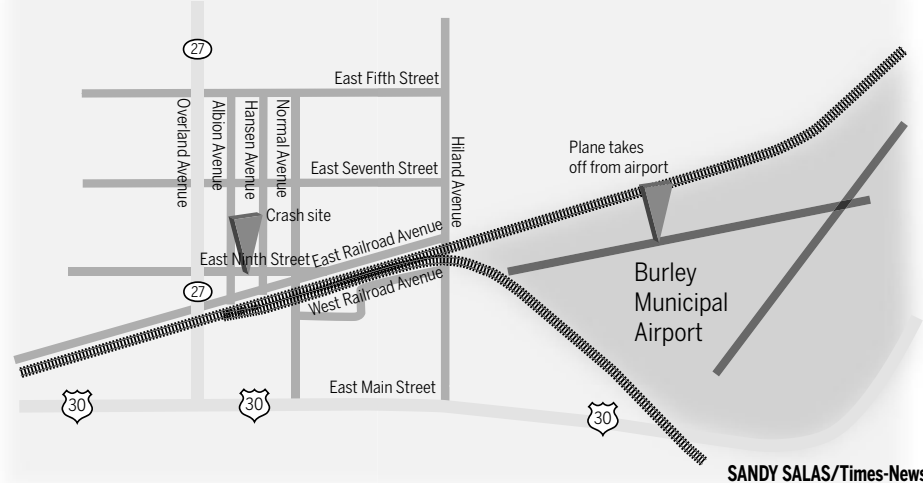

Campbell said the plane was heading to Caldwell where one of its occupants was going to give lessons to student pilots this summer.

The crash left many people in the dark until power was restored at about 5 p.m.

"It took out a transmission line above the distribution line," City Administrator Mark Mitton said, "so it was a fairly major outage for us. The wires looked like spaghetti. It was a real mess."

Burley purchases power from the Bonneville Power Administration, a federal agency under the U.S. Department of Energy, and sells it to its businesses and residents.

Mitton talked about the outage Wednesday afternoon, when much of the area surrounding the crash site on Albion Avenue and beyond remained dark. About 1,000 businesses and residents were affected in areas on the east side of Overland Avenue spanning from Fifth Street to 16th Street, he said.

SANDY SALAS/Times-News

Mitton said repairing a transmission line, aside from the obvious labor of putting the wires back up, is a complicated process.

"You have to re-route (power) from different locations. You flip the switches, but you turn some on and some off," Mitton said. "It just takes time — safety first. We don't want to blow anything up or electrocute any of our crews."

Mulholland Positioning Systems Inc. employee Sonya Keebler helped provide first-aid to the men in the plane before the ambulance arrived.

"We heard a couple of explosions and the lights went out," Keebler said. "We dialed 911 and got some rags and got them all laid down."

Mulholland employee Kevin Larson was also on scene helping the plane's occupants.

Larson said he heard a loud sound that he thinks was the plane's engine, and then it just stopped.

"We heard a big bang and the power went out," Larson said.

Cassia County Sheriff Randy Kidd said the pilot didn't get much altitude and "didn't have much of a choice about where to land."

"I think the whole community is very fortunate that it went down where it did," Kidd said. "Mr. Gas is right there with fuel tanks. Overland is close. There were a lot of places it could have come down and caused a lot of damage ... Putting the best spin on it I can, if it had to come down, we're fortunate it came down where it did ... I'm very happy nobody was more injured than they were."

Shawn Smith, an assistant manager at Mr. Wash, said he saw the plane go down and ran down the block to assist its occupants.

Smith said when he heard the plane it was sputtering and when he first saw it in the sky it was about the same height as the power poles.

"I was on the cell phone with my wife and I said 'there's a plane that's going to crash' and sure enough it did," Smith said. "When I got there one of the guys was on his way getting out and one was stuck in there."

Frogs

The leopard frogs were the focus of a BLM report 11 years ago that called for further population surveys and reported frogs found at Lake Walcott, Murtaugh Lake and locations in Power, Oneida and Bannock counties. The species also still lives at Bruneau Dunes State Park, Klotz said. The 1998 report noted it had disappeared from the Blue Lakes area, Deep Creek east of Rogerson and the upper Raft River.

Information on the frogs maintained online by the Idaho Museum of Natural History and state universities says the species favors heavily vegetated ponds, lakes and marshes along the Snake River Plain, though populations also exist in north Idaho. They generally eat small invertebrates, but have been known to eat birds, garter snakes, small frogs and other creatures. Males can be picked out by the noise they make, gathering to produce a "guttural chuckling."

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

permit writer in EPA's Seattle office, said she's not really sure why the city's concerned about the flow levels. The only requirement the change may alleviate, she said, could be the need for additional testing if certain toxicity levels are reached.

But city officials say the gauge and the improved readings will help keep the river clean and save city ratepayers money, reducing the need for expensive projects when they aren't really needed. Mike Trabert, a city staff engineer, said the city and the USGS hope to set up the new system on the site of a former gauge taken down in 1957.

It will cost $15,000 to install and another $15,000 each year to maintain, costs split with the federal agency. "The river's ours as much as somebody else's," City Engineer Jackie Fields said. "We want to have a nice river."

Though Wilson expects most public comments to arrive on the last day, she has received one comment to date, a letter from the Idaho Conservation League outlining its concerns about allowing the city to trade credits for phosphorus limits with other entities.

The environmental watchdog group wrote that Idaho hasn't established a firm, official framework for the trading — which allows a polluter who doesn't reach its phosphorus limit to pass its excess allowances on to another polluter — and the practice will be ineffective as a result.

Trabert and Fields, however, said they're excited about the system's potential, pointing to EPA's own policy encouraging such trading programs and the success such programs have had in the eastern U.S.

The gauge should be operational by the end of August. But it may still be several months before the permit actually takes effect, including time needed to review submitted comments.

Make-A-Wish hosts concert

By Nichole Carnell
Times-News writer

After the fireworks have all gone out, the Make-A-Wish Foundation, a non-profit that grants the wishes of children with life-threatening medical conditions, will host an outdoor benefit concert to help two area children's dreams come true.

On Sunday, storyteller and songwriter Eric Herman will perform a mixture of poetry and songs from 3 to 4:30 p.m. at Rotary Park in Ketchum.

Make-A-Wish hopes to raise $13,000 to grant the wishes of 13-year-old Twin Falls resident Kolby Alires and 12-year-old Ketchum resident Claire Reyburn, who were recently referred to the Idaho Make-A-Wish Chapter.

All proceeds from the outdoor concert will go toward sending Alires and Reyburn on their dream vacations. Herman is also donating $5 for every CD sold at the concert.

Alires' wish is to attend the X-Games in Los Angeles. Later this month, with his mother and grandfather, Alires will receive special access to the X-Games while staying in Los Angeles.

Reyburn was diagnosed with cancer, and told Bigelow she is still thinking about her wish.

Both Reyburn and Alires will attend the event, as well as Eli McNees, a Wood River Valley resident and wish

From June 21 police reports:

Vandalism:
A 19-year-old Burley male reported that two girls broke his windshield by throwing "something" at him when they pulled up next to him on Overland Avenue.

He went directly to McDonald's and then called the cops. He told police that the window was already broken "but that they had cracked it more than it was already."

According to the report, he said both of the girls were white, one who had "blonde hair with brown tints," and "described the girls as one being chunky and the other was skinny."

From June 22 police reports:

Found:
A 53-year-old Burley man, listed in the report as a city employee, turned in a purple Sharpie that he told police he found on his mom's doorstep, along with an ID card.

The ID belongs to a 20-year-old man from Illinois. "I have placed the ID card and the purple sharpie pen into evidence for safe keeping at this time," Deputy Kenny Emery's report notes.

Information:
A 67-year-old Burley woman reported that her neighbor, a 61-year-old woman, has been harassing her for the past eight years.

The type of harassment varies, according to the report, but the woman said her neighbor "leaves her garbage cans in front of her driveway so she can't use it," and, more recently, the neighbor "wired a six foot fence to hers."

The city building inspector placed a cease-construction tag on the neighbor's addition to the complainant's fence. "I attempted contact with (the neighbor) twice today, but she refuses to answer the door," Deputy Jarrod Thompson's report reads.

County officials looking for energy funding

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Twin Falls County officials are getting closer to knowing what engineering firm they want to hire for the creation of energy-efficient plans.

For the time being, though, they're holding off to see if the city and county can hire the same firm — and save money in the process.

The county and the city of Twin Falls are applying for separate federal stimulus grants through the same Department of Energy program that, if awarded, will provide money for the creation of energy-efficiency plans and any projects that are part of the plans.

The county's expecting $128,000, while the city is seeking $183,600.

County commissioners got an update on Wednesday from Mark Brunelle, the county's research and development director.

The city and county advertised jointly, asking companies to provide their qualifications. Five responded, and the county narrowed the list down to three possible companies, Brunelle said.

County officials agreed that if the city and county hire the same firm, that money could be saved in areas such as the company's travel costs to Twin Falls.

"I'd like to collaborate with the city if we can on this," Commissioner Tom Mikesell said.

Brunelle said he hasn't heard yet if the county's top choices will match the city's top choices. He told commissioners he'd look into it.

"I'll make some calls to the city and see if we can't get this going," he said.

Even though the grant hasn't been officially awarded yet, Brunelle said he wants to have a firm ready to begin planning when the grant comes through. That's because there's a 120-day window to develop an energy conservation strategy after receiving the grant.

He's hopeful that most of the money can go toward projects recommended in the study rather than the study itself.

No city officials were at the meeting. Travis Rothweiler, the assistant city manager who's overseeing the grant application, was on vacation Wednesday and unavailable for comment.

Forest Service quashes fire at Redfish campground

BLM reminds public of fines for negligently starting fires

LEARN MORE

For more information about penalties for negligence and the process BLM follows, call your nearest BLM field office.

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

Sawtooth National Forest firefighters fought their first notable blaze of the summer on Tuesday evening, responding to and halting a fire at a Redfish Lake campground before it could cover more than an acre.

The fire at Sockeye Campground was reported late Tuesday afternoon, said acting forest spokeswoman Julie Thomas. U.S. Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management crews, including two air tankers and a helicopter, contained it by 9 p.m. and

— Sky Buffat, BLM spokeswoman declared it controlled Wednesday evening.

All campgrounds at the lake are still open to the public, Thomas said. But the incident highlights the care fire officials encourage the public to take as the Fourth of July weekend approaches.

Despite the wet spring, Thomas said, the plants that fuel wildfires are perfectly capable of burning. Tuesday’s fire is believed to be human-caused, given the lack of lightning or other natural triggers, she said, and may have come from an abandoned campfire. It’s still under investigation.

The BLM wants people to know what penalties they face for negligently starting wildfires.

The agency sends trained fire investigators to each reported wildfire to uncover how it started.

When they conclude fires were caused by people not being cautious while outdoors, the agency then recovers its costs from those people, said Fire Management Officer Chris Simonson.

In the West Canal Fire of 2006, welders worked within a few feet of cheat grass that caught on fire. The BLM concluded that the welders could have moved a few feet away into a green, irrigated area, and didn’t carry a fire extinguisher or other fire-suppression tools with them. They were given a fine of more than $50,000.

Negligence fines can vary widely based on the costs of the fire, from a few thousand dollars to more than $200,000.

Suspects have a chance to provide their side of the story and even challenge fines, Simonson said. People who work with the agency on their cases can generally end up with lesser fines, he said.

Fines stay in the local area to pay for additional rehabilitation in each fire area, Simonson said.

The BLM views it as a better use than putting it toward the ever-growing national costs of wildfires. And ideally, the money isn’t needed. BLM spokeswoman Sky Buffat said her agency encourages people to be cautious while understanding how hard that can be.

“It’s easy to not see a place to park when you’re out and about and park over some dry grass and start a fire, even though you know better,” she said.

AROUND THE VALLEY

Police investigating vehicle fire

Authorities are investigating what caused a vehicle to catch fire early Wednesday morning at about 4:32 a.m., along the 700 block of Monroe Street in Twin Falls.

Twin Falls Police Sgt. Terry Thueson said it has yet to be determined if the fire was caused by criminal wrongdoing.

A neighbor or passerby called authorities about the fire, said Thueson, which consumed the vehicle’s engine compartment.

BLM: Fireworks illegal on public land

The U.S. Bureau of Land Management reminds the public that using or possessing fireworks is illegal on land the agency manages in Idaho. The U.S. Forest Service and the Idaho Department of Lands also prohibit fireworks.

Violating a fire-prevention order issued by BLM

State Director Tom Dyer is a misdemeanor that can carry fines and jail time. People who start wildfires can also be liable for the costs of damage and suppression.

Legal and illegal fireworks account for dozens of wildfires across Idaho each year, according to a BLM press release. The order also prohibits incendiary bullets, tracer ammunition and exploding targets, which can also cause wildfires — even if they’re promoted as safe, the agency stated.

A normal snowpack and mild spring have kept fire season in check so far, but rising temperatures will dry out Idaho vegetation and make it easier to burn, the BLM warned. The fire order is in effect until Oct. 20.

T.F. police ask people to arrive early for fireworks

The Twin Falls Police Department asks all spectators planning to attend the annual fireworks show at the College of Southern Idaho to arrive early due to the large amount of vehicle and pedestrian traffic in the area. The presentation is planned to begin at 10 p.m. Saturday and will last approximately 25 minutes, according to a Twin Falls Police Department release.

Sections around Falls Avenue, as well as Washington Street North, will be closed starting at 9 p.m. to protect pedestrians in the area. North College Road will be closed at 7 p.m.

Twin Falls Police are asking spectators to be patient after the show and anticipate route changes and delays. Because of traffic collisions at previous fireworks displays, the department also warns against driving while under the influence, noting that the CSI area will be highly patrolled and all drivers suspected of DUI will be arrested.

Family Health Services to use stimulus for expansion

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Family Health Services is receiving nearly $1.1 million in federal stimulus funding that will pay for three different expansion projects throughout the Magic Valley.

Family Health Services will use the funding to add onto the existing clinic buildings in Twin Falls and Buhl and build an entirely new, larger clinic in Jerome, said Lynn Hudgens, chief executive officer of FHS.

It may not end there, either. FHS is also seeking another round of stimulus dollars that would pay for a new clinic in Burley.

The new Jerome clinic, which will be at a different location, will have medical services, behavioral health services and dental services in a 6,000-square-foot building, Hudgens said. He declined to identify the new location because FHS is still in finalizing details with the landowner for the site's purchase.

The addition to the Twin Falls clinic will provide a pharmacy that provides low-cost prescriptions through a federal program. The addition to the Buhl clinic will provide dental services.

Currently, a mobile dental unit brings dental services to Jerome and Buhl.

Work on the additions in Twin Falls and Buhl is expected to start later this summer.

FHS currently has three different buildings that provide services in Burley. If FHS receives federal stimulus, it will go toward building a new, centralized facility that will house dental, medical and behavioral health services in one building.

"We really pick up some economies of scale and it reduces some of our current operation costs," Hudgens said. "We're very excited about that."

That building would be at least 10,000 square feet and be built in Burley. The application for competitive stimulus funding for capital projects is due by Aug. 6.

An exact dollar amount hasn't been determined yet, but it's expected to be at least $2 million, Hudgens said.

FHS's nearly $1.1 million in stimulus is part of $851 million provided in federal stimulus grants to help community health centers with facility construction and equipment needs.

the charges against Gambrel.

Debbie Brandebourg allegedly told police in October that Sund came to her house and would pay $10 to $20 cash for the filled prescriptions, court records show. "Brandebourg stated that she told Sund she was afraid to do this and Sund told her it was okay, that a lot of people do it, and they would never get caught."

Donald Schaeffer told Twin Falls police in October, according to court records, that he went to Sund for help with back pain, and she prescribed him an opiate-based pain reliever.

"Mr. Schaeffer stated that Ms. Sund began to ask him for favors, by asking him to fill a second prescription at the pharmacy," police say in court records. "However, Ms. Sund would tell Mr. Schaeffer that the prescription was for her husband."

Authorities assert that Schaeffer filled prescriptions for Sund, though he exchanged some of the drugs with her for cash, according to court records. Police also assert in records filed with the court that the alleged prescription drug hand-offs happened at Schaeffer's house, as well as at Sund's Twin Falls office and "in a parking lot."

Court records say Schaeffer told police he gave Sund his prescribed medication at least 12 times for money, though police believe 15 times is more likely, according to court records.

The cases against Sund and Gambrel were filed by authorities with the Ada County Prosecutor's Office and the Attorney General's Office. Twin Falls Police did not handle the case against Gambrel because he worked there, said Twin Falls Police Sgt. Terry Thueson. "The conflict there was obvious."

The case against Sund was also farmed out, Thueson said, "because of the severity of that particular case," adding that federal authorities were also involved.

Twin Falls police have said they learned of the allegations against Gambrel in June 2008 — a year after his retirement — and after the DEA and Idaho Board of Pharmacy provided them with a report.

According to court records, police were investigating Brandebourg and Schaeffer in October as the result of the investigation into Sund. City police did an internal investigation of Gambrel last year, which also ended in October, authorities have said.

Sund's medical office was located at 496 Shoup St., Suite C in Twin Falls, and she had surrendered her controlled substance registration with the Idaho Board of Pharmacy by October 2007, according to meeting minutes from the board.

The Idaho Board of Pharmacy and the DEA had received numerous complaints about Sund as far back as almost seven years ago, according to court records.

Ninth Circuit finds few friends on Supreme Court

To the long list of reasons that Idaho politicians have given why the sprawling Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals should be broken up, add this: Its decisions are increasingly likely to be tossed out by the U.S. Supreme Court.

During the term that ended this week, the high court disagreed with 94 percent of the Western appeals court's rulings, according to the Los Angeles Times. One reason, experts say, is that the California-based court is perceived as too liberal.

In addition to California, Oregon, Washington and Hawaii, the 9th Circuit includes some conservative states — Idaho, Montana, Alaska, Nevada and Arizona. For years, judges, lawyers, defendants, plaintiffs and crime victims have often seen Idaho federal court decisions reversed by the 9th Circuit.

Now the appeals justices are seeing something similar happen when their rulings reach Washington, D.C.

Sixteen 9th Circuit decisions went to the high court this term; 15 were reversed. That's part of a trend: The 9th Circuit — the only one in which a majority of judges were appointed by Democratic presidents — has had a larger-than-average share of its cases overturned in eight of the past 10 years.

One reason, certainly, is that the Supreme Court has a conservative majority — Chief Justice John Roberts and Associate Justices Antonin Scalia, Anthony Kennedy, Clarence Thomas and Samuel Alito — that pays critical attention to cases from the 9th Circuit. Especially Kennedy, who served as a 9th Circuit justice for 13 years before Ronald Reagan named him to the high court.

Adam Samaha, a professor of constitutional law at the University of Chicago, told the Times it's common knowledge that decisions made in some circuit courts get closer scrutiny than others.

“Is it really a circuit being profiled, in a sense, or really a smaller set of judges who set off alarm bells?” Samaha said. “I would suspect it's the latter.”

Especially cases decided in part by Judges Stephen Reinhardt and Harry Pregerson, two Jimmy Carter nominees who seem to be 9th Circuit lightning rods.

Reinhardt, 78, is a former member of the Democratic National Committee who also served as an adviser to former California Gov. Jerry Brown and to then-Los Angeles Mayor Tom Bradley. Pregerson, 85, is a longtime judicial activist who once upheld California's legalization of medical marijuana and ruled against California's three-strikes law for felons.

Idaho Congressman Mike Simpson, who has led the charge in recent years to reorganize the 9th Circuit, is correct that such activist judges would be less likely to reach the appeals court bench in a circuit that included just Idaho, Montana, Nevada, Arizona and Alaska. Some California jurists are as unfamiliar with the realities of life in the Intermountain West as a federal circuit judge from Massachusetts or Florida might be.

Whether it's because of 9th Circuit appeals judges' liberal leanings or not, the San Francisco-based court isn't working as it should. It's time for Congress, finally, to split it in two.

Our view:

The judicially activist Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals shouldn't include Idaho.

Rules for the wronged political spouse

Stay focused, ladies. Here is the Practical Guide to Help Spurned Political Wives Survive Old Problems in the Era of New Technology.

MAUREEN DOWD

1. Skip the press conference, especially when your husband is copping to call girls, gay pickups in airport bathrooms or “tragic” and “forbidden” telenovela-style love stories. Stoicism at the skunk's side is overrated and, as Larry Craig's wife learned, sunglasses don't help.

2. When there's an Associated Press bulletin quoting your husband saying that he has found his soul mate but he's going to try to fall back in love with you, change the locks (at your second home, too).

3. If you can't maintain a dignified Silda Spitzer silence; if you can't find a girlfriend, a shrink, a personal trainer, a hairdresser or a yoga instructor to confide in; if you must unburden yourself of your fury about your loser husband, go to Jesse Jackson, Al Sharpton or even Deepak Chopra before crying to the AP. A news wire is not a spiritual adviser.

4. When your husband turns into a Harlequin romance, babbling to the AP — yes, even the AP thought it was TMI — about a magical encounter on an open-air dance floor in Uruguay, “a soul that touches yours in a way that no one's ever has,” and the “left brain and right brain” compartmentalization of “the world of ideas that impact this country and state” and “the pursuit of happiness, whatever that is,” just beat it.

5. If you think the worst is over, it's probably only beginning. On Tuesday, after you thought Mark Sanford had already emoted and bumbled more than any man in history, he volunteered to the AP (again!) that he had “crossed lines” with a handful of women on trips out of the country, but only “crossed the ultimate line” with his enchanting Maria. And just when you thought John Edwards could not sink any lower, there is news of a sex tape, in which Rielle Hunter shows off her skills not only in videography but pornography.

6. No matter how revolting your husband's behavior is, don't be passive-aggressive in public. Refrain from making any remarks that have a veneer of dignity but derogatory subtexts such as: “We're trying to reconcile but it's going to be tough because he has irreparably damaged my children” or “He has no integrity and I want my kids to have integrity” and “Sure, I'd like to give him a chance if he weren't such a sleazeball.”

7. Don't bring the children into it. They suffer enough being the kids of politicians. In the era of Facebook, texting, Google and iPhones, calling him out as a bad father will just go viral in the kids' circles. Don't trot out the family on “Oprah,” as Elizabeth Edwards did, or weepily show the AP the report cards of your two oldest sons from their elite private school in Columbia, S.C., as Jenny Sanford did.

8. Even if you're a clever, competent woman, you risk sounding like a stereotypical harridan if you use the kids as a bludgeon and tell the press, as Jenny did: “You would think that a father who didn't have contact with his children, if he wanted those children, he would toe the line a little bit.” When kids are involved, it's best to chill when dishing out revenge.

9. Don't slam his girlfriend for lying when you know she's telling the truth. Don't refer to the baby your rival had with your husband as “it.” Don't trash a mistress, as Hillary and Elizabeth did, as a wacky stalker. No one — except the wife — blames the other woman as much as they blame the husband. Besides, you invite The Other Woman's retaliation, as when Rielle decided after watching Elizabeth spill to Oprah that she might want that DNA test after all.

10. High-powered women such as Hillary, Elizabeth and Jenny who give up their careers to focus on their husbands feel doubly betrayed. But it's not your husband's fault if you sacrifice more for the relationship than he does. Like an investor in a down market, you took a risk without a guarantee it would pay off. If you make your husband your career and you lose your husband, you lose your career too.

11. Cut your losses and keep going. Don't let yourself get dragged into his drama or your reputation may follow his down the well. Hillary refused to let that happen. She salvaged her long investment in Bill Clinton and turned a profit when she became a senator.

12. As you stay out of the spotlight that sings your husband, listen to whatever messages he is sending you through the press. When your husband says “that” is a world-class love story, ask him what “this” is. Just don't do it through the AP.

Who railroaded the Amtrak inspector general?

Watchdogs are an endangered species in the Age of Obama. The latest government ombudsman to get the muzzle: Amtrak Inspector General Fred Weiderhold. The longtime veteran employee was abruptly “retired” this month — just as the government-subsidized rail service faces mounting complaints about its meddling in financial audits and probes.

On June 18, Weiderhold met with Amtrak officials to discuss the results of an independent report by the Washington, D.C., law firm Willkie, Farr and Gallagher. The 94-page report has been made publicly available through the office of whistleblower advocate Sen. Charles Grassley, R-Iowa. It concluded that the “independence and effectiveness” of the Amtrak inspector general's office “are being substantially impaired” by the agency's Law Department.

Amtrak bosses have effectively gagged their budgetary watchdogs from communicating with Congress without pre-approval; required that all Amtrak documents be “pre-screened” (and in some cases redacted) before being turned over to the inspector general's office; and taken control of the inspector general's $5 million portion of federal stimulus spending.

Moreover, the report revealed, Amtrak regularly retained outside law firms shielded from IG reach. In another case, Amtrak's Law Department appeared to meddle in an inspector general investigation of an outside financial adviser suspected of inflating fees. The consultant ran to the Law Department when the IG demanded documents, and the Law Department repudiated the IG's instructions on complying with a subpoena.

These interventions (ongoing since 2007) have “systematically violated the letter and spirit of the Inspector General Act,” according to Grassley. IG staffers now fear retaliation — and with good reason. Their boss, Weiderhold, lost his job on the very day Amtrak received the Willkie, Farr and Gallagher report. It may be hot and humid in the rest of the Beltway, but every inspector general's office is feeling an Arctic chill.

The transparent sacking comes just as Amtrak is awash in more than $1.3 billion in new federal stimulus money. It comes on the heels of the unceremonious dismissal of Gerald Walpin, the AmeriCorps inspector general who dared to probe financial shenanigans by Obama cronies.

Question the timing? You betcha.

So, who is behind the rail-roading of the Amtrak inspector general? As with the story of the AmeriCorps firing, which has First Lady Michelle Obama's fingerprints on it, the Amtrak case smells like cronyism. Investigative journalist Robert Stacy McCain, who has watchdogged the watchdog stories, noted last week that Amtrak's vice president and general counsel is Eleanor Acheson.

Acheson, an old friend of Hillary Clinton, also has close ties to Vice President Joe “Mr. Amtrak” Biden. She hired Biden's nominations counsel Jonathan Meyer to serve as her deputy general counsel. The two had also worked together in the Clinton Justice Department. Meyer called his hiring at Amtrak by Acheson a “happy coincidence,” according to Legal Times. (In another “happy coincidence,” Biden's lobbyist son, Hunter, sits on Amtrak's board of directors.) Acheson oversees the very Law Department accused of interfering repeatedly with the taxpayer advocates in the inspector general's office.

Grassley has requested that Amtrak supply information on Weiderhold's unexpected retirement, as well as internal and personal materials related to his departure and the report on Amtrak managers' meddling. On the House side, Reps. Edolphus Towns, D-N.Y., and Darrell Issa, R-Calif., announced a probe Monday into Amtrak's actions. They zeroed in on Amtrak's choice of Lorraine Green to replace the “retired” Weiderhold.

Who is Lorraine Green? She's a former Amtrak human resources executive and faithful Democrat donor with no experience in the inspector general business.

Here's what Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

... the fire next time

Idaho Mountain Express, Ketchum

... A study released ... by researchers at the University of Colorado-Boulder criticized the federal government's National Fire Plan, which aims to reduce fuel for wildland fires, for conducting fuel reduction and mitigation projects far from the communities the plan was designed to protect.

Nonetheless, the study concluded that the government will have difficulty fulfilling the plan's mission because many of the fuel-laden wildlands are near homes on private property.

... federal efforts to reduce wildland-fire risks had not been effective in protecting homes because just 11 percent of the efforts had been targeted where cities and suburbs meet fuels — at the urban-wildlands interface.

The Wood River Valley and its developed side canyons are one big interface. When wildlands burned during the 2007 Castle Rock Fire, the blowing embers from the fire fell on private flammable rooftops, landscaping and decks — property that federal fire agencies can't control, but local governments can.

The Colorado researchers suggested a "significant shift in fire-policy emphasis from federal to private lands."

We read that to mean that local government and private residents can't expect the federal government to bear the entire responsibility for fire suppression and prevention. Interface communities and property owners need to help themselves.

Putting out the Castle Rock Fire cost more than $15 million — not including the cost of the loss of local business. Nationwide, suppression costs are running $1 billion a year.

Despite Castle Rock, the valley's cities and the county still do not have mandatory wildland-fire protection measures in place, i.e. requirements for clear zones around homes and for use of fire-resistant materials in new and remodeled homes.

... It's a lot easier and cheaper to prevent fires from engulfing homes and businesses than it is to put them out.

... unhappy trails

Idaho Statesman, Boise

It may have ended the 2009 legislative session — but the last-minute transportation funding "deal" didn't deal with much of anything.

All it did was shift some money around and create new problems. Just ask Idaho recreationists, who are starting to fight for $4.7 million a year to maintain trails and boat docks and groom snowmobile routes.

They have a valid point. Fairness and foresight dictate putting this money into the great outdoors.

Recreationists rightfully feel like they've been had. They say lawmakers have violated a long-standing agreement to put 3 percent of gas tax dollars — their share of fuel purchases — into recreation projects.

The $4.7 million won't do much to fix roads. According to estimates, Idaho has a $240 million-a-year shortfall in state and local road and bridge maintenance. But $4.7 million accounts for about half of the money spent on trails, snowmobile trail grooming and boating facilities.

... Well-maintained trails and boat docks aren't merely a convenience for Idaho weekend warriors. They are a marketable commodity for rural communities making the transition from timber or mining jobs. Idaho's road-repair campaign is driven first by safety issues, but also by economics — and providing more reliable and convenient roads for commuters and shippers. It doesn't accomplish much to make this economic investment at the expense of the recreation sector.

... Desperate to give Gov. Butch Otter some $55 million for roads ... lawmakers played a shell game. They decided to get $21.1 million by cutting off the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation and the Idaho State Police from the gas tax.

... Starting (this) week, an eight-member legislative task force will try to find ways to replace the $21.1 million. Let's hope for an end to the creative accounting, and some actual problem-solving.

... special part-timers

Lewiston Tribune

Idaho's part-time state workers will pay more to retain health insurance for themselves and their families.

That is, every part-time employee group except one.

Citizen legislators continue to draw full-time benefits. Lucky them.

Under Idaho's system, anyone who works 20 hours a week — 1,040 hours a year — for the state qualifies for healthcare benefits. The Department of Administration is charging more for those policies. Full-time employees aren't affected.

When the system takes effect Nov. 13, here's what it will mean:

- A transportation worker who spends no more than 1,450 hours a year on the job would pay 10 times more for state health insurance.

- A Fish and Game staffer who works between 1,456 and 1,867 hours a year would pay four times more.

The change affects 1,700 state workers and will save the taxpayers about $10 million.

Even with a marathon session this year, the typical state legislator spent no more than 700 hours on the job. He's also entitled to a state pension and life insurance.

Technically, legislators ... are considered elected officials. They can collect full-time state benefits, work a few months each year in Boise and return home to their regular occupations — presumably which also offer health insurance.

A part-time community college teacher who works 1,040 hours a year can be forced to spend $450 a month to cover his family of four, while a lawmaker who works half that much gets the same policy for $168.75.

Why leave the most prominent group of Idaho's part-timers — the one class capable of fighting back — insulated from the real working world? ...

Tired of turning other cheek to racism

The past 19 years it's been my pleasure to call the Magic Valley my home. My time here has been enjoyable; however, there is an issue that I must address. Many of you are insulated from this problem — racism.

I moved to Idaho in the mid-'80s searching for a better life. Equality is a dream that is far from realization in this area, and it is discouraged. Recently, I was called a racial slur in one of Twin Falls' oldest establish-

Wal-Mart's prices are not lower in Twin Falls

I am writing to correct a statement I made to your staff while attending the Wal-Mart grand opening in Twin Falls on June 25.

While being interviewed, I said that prices were lower in Twin Falls than in Jerome, but this is simply not true. All Wal-Mart stores are known for their low costs and competitive prices.

On that particular day, Wal-Mart of Twin Falls was competing with another local business on certain items I happened to be purchasing.

I only meant to say that I am grateful to now have the convenience of two stores to better serve my needs, and I was shopping at the Twin Falls store because I worked there that day.

I was surprised to see that out of my entire interview, this was the statement printed.

Idaho F&G plan to kill pelicans hits obstacles

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Federal officials have told the Idaho fish and game officials that their plan to halve the number of pelicans nesting in southern and eastern Idaho by 2013 to boost fisheries is an “eradication program” that needs more work.

The Idaho Fish and Game Commission in May approved a five-year plan to kill and haze American white pelicans in southeastern Idaho to protect sport fish and Yellowstone cutthroat trout populations. The plan calls for shooting some pelicans and applying oil to eggs to suffocate the embryos.

Pelicans are protected under federal law, so anything to cut their numbers requires U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service approval.

“We didn’t feel the management plan had enough data in it right now to issue the permits required,” said Brad Bortner, the Fish and Wildlife Service’s migratory birds chief in Portland, Ore. on Wednesday.

Idaho wildlife officials took exception to characterizations of their proposal as a

“pelican eradication program” by wildlife officials in Utah

“Absolutely not,” said Jeff Gould, chief of Idaho’s Bureau of Wildlife. “It’s a management plan for pelicans, with the primary goal of reducing impacts to fish.”

Gould expects to meet with federal Fish and Wildlife officials later in July to discuss their questions about Idaho’s plan, as well as what additional scientific justification will be needed to obtain permits to proceed with management of the big birds.

Pelicans at the Blackfoot Reservoir colony have increased from 1,400 breeding birds in 2002 to 2,400 breeding birds in 2008, while a colony on Lake Walcott on the Snake River increased from about 400 breeding birds in 2002 to more than 4,000 breeding birds.

The agency’s plan calls for reducing bird numbers by more than half, while still maintaining a viable population: 700 breeding birds at the Blackfoot Reservoir and 2,100 in Lake Walcott.

Two Fish and Wildlife Service offices — in Oregon and in Utah — panned Idaho’s plan, saying that implementing the proposal would undo pelican conservation accomplishments from the last 25 years and any damage could be irreversible.

“Given the conservation status assigned by Idaho and other western states, and given the threats to the species, we believe it is unwise to begin a pelican eradication program,” wrote Larry Crist, Fish and Wildlife Service’s Utah field supervisor.

Idaho seizes Iraqi dinars from investment scheme

COEUR D’ALENE (AP) — The state of Idaho has seized about $1 million worth of Iraqi currency used in an investment scheme run by a former school teacher.

Coeur d’Alene resident Jack Lee Smiley was found guilty of securities fraud last year and ordered to pay $1.2 million in restitution to investors he misled in a scheme to invest in Iraqi currency. Authorities said Smiley told investors they could make $1 million on $1,000 invested in his plan to buy and hold Iraqi dinars after the currency backing from foreign governments, including the U.S.

Smiley told potential investors that “Halliburton, large banks, corporations, politicians and the U.S. military” would make millions of dollars from the new currency, according to court records.

The department’s records show that about 130 investors gave Smiley about $1 million to buy dinars. About half of the investor were in Idaho.

Jim Burns, investigations chief with the Department of Finance Securities Bureau, wouldn’t say how or where the 1.2 billion dinars were recovered. The dinars, worth less than a penny each, will be used to pay restitution.

“While the Iraqi dinar has appreciated only a fraction of the amount promised by Mr. Smiley, recovery of the dinars should provide investors with an opportunity for substantial recovery,” Finance Department Director Gavin Gee said in a statement.

Smiley had been ordered in June 2005 by the state Department of Finance to end his investment pitch after finding he was violating the Idaho Commodities Act when he asked investors to take part in the venture.

Feds won't fund GM after July 10, official says

By Bree Fowler
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — A senior member of President Obama's auto task force testified Wednesday that the U.S. government will not continue to fund General Motors Corp.'s operations if the automaker doesn't get approval to sell its assets to a new company within the next 10 days. "We have no intention to further fund this company if the sale order is not entered by July 10," Harry Wilson, one of the Treasury Department officials overseeing GM's restructuring, said while being cross-examined by an attorney for a group of GM bondholders opposing the sale.

The No. 1 U.S. automaker's government-backed plan for a quick exit from bankruptcy hinges on the sale plan, which would allow it to leave behind many of the costs and liabilities that have made the company unprofitable in the past.

The Detroit-based automaker, whose June 1 filing for bankruptcy protection was the fourth-largest in U.S. history, is hoping to avoid a lengthy court battle over the sale. Last month, objections from bondholders and other groups dragged out rival Chrysler LLC's hearing on its sale for three days. This is day two of the GM hearing.

After Auburn Hills, Michigan-based Chrysler's sale was approved by the bankruptcy court, the bondholder and consumer groups appealed the decision all the way up to the Supreme Court before it ultimately went through and Chrysler subsequently emerged from Chapter 11 as a new company.

Hundreds of parties including bondholders, unions, state officials, consumer groups and individuals have filed objections to GM's plan, threatening to hold up its sale as well.

As part of a deal brokered with the auto task force, the U.S. government will get a 60 percent stake in the new company in exchange for the billions in tax dollars it has pumped into GM over the past several months in order to keep it afloat.

The Canadian government, which has also contributed billions in aid, will

Manufacturing index shrinks less than expected

By Tali Arbel
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — A report on manufacturing activity shows the sector contracted less than expected in June, posting its best showing since last August and another sign that a recovery may be near.

Manufacturing sectors overseas also are rebounding a bit, according to new reports, but other U.S. economic data were mixed. Construction spending fell more than expected in May, while pending home sales edged up.

The Institute for Supply Management, a trade group of purchasing executives, said its manufacturing index registered 44.8 in June, up from 42.8 in May. Analysts polled by Thomson Reuters had expected a reading of 44.5.

"A slow recovery for manufacturing is forming," said Norbert Ore, chair of the ISM's manufacturing business survey committee.

A reading below 50 indicates contraction. June's

Migration from rural communities slows

State labor officials say recession discourages more people from moving

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

The eight-year exodus of people from rural communities in Idaho is showing some signs of slowing down, according to U.S. Census Bureau Estimates for 2008.

Most communities in south-central Idaho even saw their populations increase slightly between June 2007 and June 2008 — a far cry from the previous year when the combined loss in the region's rural areas was almost 2 percent.

State and regional economists attribute the reversal to a national recession that has hindered the job market in metropolitan areas like

Boise, while leaving rural economies mostly unchanged.

Jan Roeser, regional economist with Idaho Department of Labor, said Minidoka and Cassia counties saw the most change — likely caused by new businesses moving into the area.

"I expect that we will also continue to see the growth in our bedroom communities like Filer, Buhl and Kimberly," she said. "But overall, I expect that our region as a whole will continue to see decent growth."

Besides slowing the migration out of rural communities, state labor officials say the national recession reduced migration to Idaho from other states 2008.

Between mid-2007 and mid-2008, 69 of Idaho's 200 cities either experienced no population growth or modest population losses. According to agency analysts, the length and depth of the current recession that

Idaho's endeavor to recruit foreign and domestic renewable energy producers

With all the stimulus money circulating, what is Idaho doing in terms of renewable energy businesses?

Renewable energy production is one of Idaho's fastest growing new industries. There's Hoku in Pocatello, gearing up to build a $400 million solar polysilicon manufacturing facility and Nordic Windpower, making its trademark two-bladed wind turbine blades.

Exergy Development Group just announced it will build 152 wind turbines in 14 different wind parks in southern Idaho this summer. And U.S. Geothermal continues to drill deep to tap into this natural and resource that Idaho has in abundance.

Commerce is working to recruit companies in this sector and our pipeline of potential new projects includes a number of companies in the renewable energy industry. We're seeing interest in Idaho not just domestically, but from around the world.

That's just a bit of what we have now. Stimulus funds, some targeted incentives and savvy investors from around the world are also fueling growth and Idaho expects to benefit even more from this.

There is so much emphasis on improving roads. How does this help our economy?

Having good transportation corridors is critical to the flow of commerce, whether we're talking about airports, a seaport, rail or roads. There has to be some reliable method of transport to move goods. If that doesn't exist, is difficult to navigate or is unreliable, then the flow of money from outside a community into the community stops. A healthy community has to have some type of inflow of new money or it stagnates and shrinks. New money comes in a business' ability to send goods outside a community or the ability of tourists and travelers to come in to a community. If this can't happen easily, this hurts current businesses and scares away potential new businesses.

That's why projects to

Stocks began their ascent before the quarter began, after the S&P and Dow Jones than 15 percent in the industrial average skidded to April-June period, its best performance since the four-quarter of 1999.

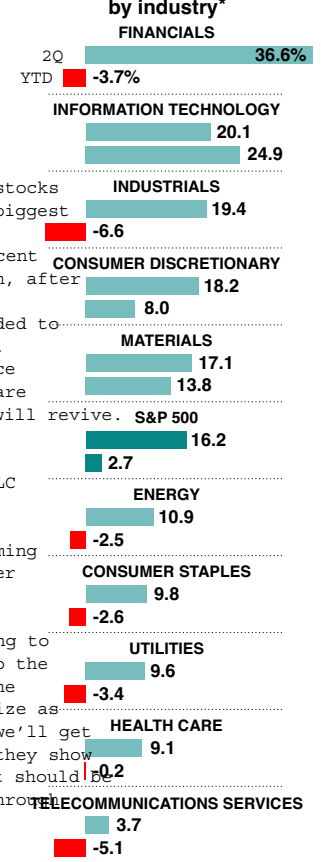

But even with the spectacular gain, the rally in stocks is still a long way from the recovery of 2007. The economy is indeed stabilizing.

The earnings are going to be absolutely crucial to the market," he said. "If the earnings don't materialize as anticipated we'll get a pullback. I think if they show signs of stability, that should be enough for us to limp through another quarter."

Flight diverted to N.M. after passenger gets naked

By Heather Clark
 Associated Press writer

ALBUQUERQUE, New Mexico — A passenger stripped naked during a US Airways flight and resisted a flight attendant's efforts to cover him with a blanket before two off-duty law enforcement officers on board subdued and handcuffed him, authorities said Wednesday.

Keith Wright, 50, of the Bronx in New York, was taken into custody after he disrobed while sitting in his seat in the back of Flight 705 on Tuesday evening, authorities said. The plane was carrying about 148 passengers from North Carolina to Los Angeles, the airline said.
 Wright was unresponsive when a flight attendant asked him to put his clothes back on, said Dan Jiron, a spokesman for the Albuquerque airport. "She asked him on more than one occasion to put on his clothes. She covered him with a blanket and he took that off," Jiron said.

 Wright punched and kicked the flight attendant, who asked two off-duty law officers for help, according to a criminal complaint. A Los Angeles police officer and sheriff's deputy helped the flight attendant subdue and handcuff Wright before the flight landed, Jiron said.

 The flight attendants also were dealing with an unrelated onboard medical emergency at the same time, which exacerbated the situation, the FBI said.
 The aircraft was diverted because of the medical emergency, and Wright's actions were a secondary reason for the unplanned landing, the complaint said.

 Roger Finzel, an assistant federal public defender representing Wright, said he has not yet met with his client and had no information about the case other than what was in the complaint.
 Wright told the FBI he is suffering from a bipolar disorder and had not taken his prescribed medication before leaving New York that morning, the criminal complaint said. Wright told the FBI he recalled nothing about the flight or his behavior, it said.

 Wright had been seen dancing in a crowded boarding area before the flight, but when approached by Flight Service Supervisor Claudia Kearney, he told her he had drunk one beer.

Story and photos by Mike Cothorn

Times-News correspondent

The large swath of desert in western Twin Falls County often goes unnoticed beyond those who graze cattle on its mostly public lands. The higher terrain near the Nevada border serves as an attraction to many, but the area between those hills and cultivated farm country northward is generally devoid of recreationists.

But upon closer inspection, that relatively flat rangeland offers much more than one might imagine. On a hike from my house near Castleford to the base of those hills, the landscape revealed several points of interest. Focusing on Cedar Creek, the 30-mile trek's highlights included a variety of natural and man-made wonders.

Salmon Falls Creek

Ten miles south of Castleford, Cedar Creek's drainage ends as it converges with a much larger gorge. This canyon, cut by Salmon Falls Creek, is formidable enough that only two roads cross it over a 40-mile distance below Salmon Dam.

Access spots into the 400-foot deep chasm even by foot are at a premium and wildness engulfs an explorer

Exploring the west

One doesn't have to walk to discover western Twin Falls County. It can be accessed by several main roads, including the Three Creek Highway, Antelope Springs Road and Seventeen Mile Road. A number of two-track roads branch off from these arterials, allowing for prolonged desert exploration. The Bureau of Land Management's 'Rogerson' 1:100,000 topo map is the best guide for the region.

The latest in high-tech family tent options

Swapping nylon and linked poles, zippered doors, screened windows, and stakes in the dirt holding it down — the humble formula for a tent has long prevailed as an ultimate outdoors habitat for humans in need of a temporary home.

But today's campground cabanas are far from the basic designs of decades past. Indeed, leaky roofs, clammy quarters, and complex setups that take away from your fireside time are not a trait to any quality tent today.

This column highlights new tents made for families of four or more. Be it in the backcountry, on a canoe trip, or car camping at an area state park, one of these shelters is sure to fit your family's preference for sleeping outside under the summer stars.

 Made for year-round use — winter camping included — the Flying Diamond features a zippered partition wall to create a two-room suite. The tent body is a breathable polyester with nylon mesh windows. Its rain fly and floor are made of polyester rip-stop nylon with a waterproof polyurethane coating. There are 10 mesh storage pockets and a vestibule off the main room. For setup, the behemoth comes with a total of 20 lightweight aluminum stakes. Price: $599.95. Contact: www.bigagnes.com

• Kelty Yellowstone 4 Tent

A budget buy from Kelty, the Yellowstone 4 (available for $144.95 on sites like REI.com) is a freestanding four-person shelter good for car camping or canoe trips. It packs for transport to a manageable 10 pounds, 14 ounces, and its nylon walls are watertight, as expected. A mesh ceiling promotes breathability on hot nights. Put on the rain fly and this three-season tent will ensconce you and your little campers even if gray skies and rain drops try and ruin your weekend away. www.kelty.com

• Nemo Asahi

Gear storage is the name of the game with the Asahi, a 63-square-foot shelter that sleeps four and has an optional “garage” vestibule attachment big enough to set up beach chairs inside or store bicycles standing upright. While the garage is optional — it costs an extra $139 — Nemo includes a standard vestibule and four large interior pockets. A gear loft, which hooks to the ceiling and adds a mesh shelf inside the tent, is an extra $18. For dog owners, the Asahi can be fitted with Nemo’s

Pawprint floor, a polyester covering that snaps on and protects the fabric from dog claws running in and out of the nylon den. Price: $399 (tent only). Contact: www.nemoequipment.com

• Eureka N!ergy 9 tent

Light up the backcountry with this two-pole dome tent. The Eureka N!ergy 9, touted as a “powered home away from home,” is compatible with the company’s E! Power Pack batteries. Charge up the pack at home. Then at your campsite pick from a fan, lights, vacuum cleaner and other accessories. Further, a 12v DC (cigarette-lighter type) outlet lets campers power items such as laptops, iPods, cell phones or air-mattress pumps with the appropriate plugs and adapters. The tent weighs about 15 pounds and sets up to a nine-by-nine foot shelter to sleep four to five people. Price: $209 (tent only; accessories extra). Contact: www.eurekatent.com

• Sierra Designs Lightning XT 4

Backpackers take note: This mesh tent weighs less than seven pounds but can accommodate four campers and their gear. With 57-square-foot of floor space the Lightning XT 4 — which comes with a rain fly for bad weather — is an ultimate big tent for use on the trail. Divvy up its contents — stakes to one hiker, poles to another — and each person only has to add 2 pounds of weight to his or her pack. (Exact total tent weight is 6 pounds, 13 ounces.) Two doors and two vestibules add easy access to gear stowed outside. Price: $449. Contact: www.sierradesigns.com

Hidden

 at the bottom. No trail parallels the creek and walking is often severely restricted by steep basalt boulder fields or, where flatter ground can be found, nearly impenetrable thickets of willow, currant and dogwood. Patches of poison ivy also find its home near the water, motivating hikers to remain alert.

The difficulty experienced getting into and navigating through the corridor is countered by rewards, however. Except for occasional soaring birds of prey, including golden eagles, the solitude is intense. Deep in the canyon one easily forgets that civilization is close by.

The restrictive access also makes for productive trout and bass angling, as the diminutive fish are not well-schooled about lures or other imitations. Doug Megargle, regional fisheries manager for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, said the creek’s red-band trout can be thought of as a “resident rainbow” and is the only sport fish native to the locale.

Cedar Creek Crossing

Two fascinating historical features are located about 10 miles upstream from Cedar Creek’s mouth. The first of these consists of a freight road and rest station used in the 1870s. The Toana Road’s route is still quite noticeable where the grade slips into and out of the canyon. Remains of the station, marked by stone foundations, can also be seen in the meadow.

Upstream from the station a two-track road descends into the canyon where several segments of an old irrigation flume still hang along the canyon side. Ken Tverdy, long-time area resident, said the flume was built in late 1910 and delivered water beginning in 1921. Not used since the 1960s and in various stages of deterioration, the structure is a testament to the efforts taken to transform the desert.

Roseworth Reservoir

Four miles upstream from where water once entered the old canal and flume, but is now piped out of the canyon, stands an earthen dam that in good years creates a large impoundment. Officially named Cedar Creek Reservoir, the water body is known locally as Roseworth, sharing the name of the farming tract benefiting from its delivery.

The reservoir is a well-liked location by boat or bank fisherman seeking stocked rainbows. While the annual irrigation draw-down does not make for ideal conditions, Megargle describes the fishery as “resilient” as evidenced by the surprising number of annually planted trout that survive through the winter even during years of extreme drought. While success at the reservoir on any one day can be hit or miss, the RVs that frequently dot the south shoreline are proof of its ongoing popularity.

Cedar Butte

While not a jaw-dropping landmark by any stretch of the imagination, a hill rises slowly from the base of the reservoir and tops out a couple of miles away. Cedar Butte offers a clear vista of the Jarbidge Mountains along with a front-row seat to Elk Mountain and a connected ridge that descends slowly eastward, spawning several drainages that tumble down toward the reservoir.

An excellent view back north toward Magic Valley farmland provides a clear contrast between arid desert and irrigated cropland. In an interesting twist, one side of the butte is composed of private property that long ago attempted to support a dry-land farming enterprise.

The .22 LR Rimfire: Your summer fun gun

At this time of year as we gather to commemorate the Founding Fathers’ effort and sacrifice to create a country and government ruled “by the People; for the People,” why not exercise your Second Amendment right by bearing firearms chambered for the most popular — and fun — cartridge of all time, the .22 LR (Long Rifle). With 2-2.5 billion rounds fired annually, it is the undisputed king of modern metallic cartridges.

So what are the attributes that make this 112-year-old cartridge so appealing?

Boosting good accuracy, low noise effect, negligible recoil and modest cost, the .22 LR is the perfect cartridge to introduce new shooters to the sport. Because the .22 is easy to shoot, it’s fun to shoot. And everyone knows — whether you’re a novice or an experienced shooter — the more trigger time you put in, the more accomplished marksman you will become.

The .22 LR cartridge originated in the workshops of J. Stevens Arm & Tool Company in 1887. Like all rimfire cartridges, the .22 LR begins life as a thin sheet of brass stock. The brass is drawn into a tube .59 inches long. One end is closed and “bumped” to create a rim. Priming compound paste is then spun into the rim of the case. After the primer dries, the powder charge is added and the bullet seated.

SHOOTING THE BULL

Upon firing, the case rim is crushed between the firing pin and the gun’s chamber lip. This blow causes the priming material to explode, igniting the powder; hence we have a rim fire cartridge. If you examine the rim of a fired .22 case, you’ll notice the telltale indent left by the firing pin. Be sure to check the owner’s manual to see if your weapon can be dry-fired without damaging the critical chamber lip.

Modern .22 LR ammunition is offered in a staggering array of options. There are specialty loadings tailored to recreational shooting, small game hunting, varmint sniping, target/competitive shooting, special purpose applications (such as shooting galleries, garden/barn pest shotshells), and even self-defense.

Today I’d like to focus on the .22 LR’s use for plinking or informal recreational shooting. While any type of .22 ammo will suffice, I prefer to tackle this high-volume blazing with the cheapest ammunition available. This is usually the bulk-packed promotional ammo available at local sporting good or big box stores.

The major players promote their economy .22s with dramatic names such as Winchester’s Wildcats, Remington’s Thunderbolts, and Federal’s American Eagles. Though these high-velocity rounds lack the accuracy and consistent performance of their makers’ premium lines, they are more than adequate for informal plinking sessions.

Targets run the gamut from clots of dirt or aluminum cans to specialized reactive metal and synthetic targets shaped like small game or varmints. My kids and I really enjoy blazing away at cheap reactive targets: Necco candy wafers, discarded (fired) shotgun shells, and clay pigeons.

So this weekend, why not gather the kids together and head for the hills to celebrate our uniquely American right to keep and bear arms. As famous rock-n-roller and Second Amendment advocate Ted Nugent says, “You can’t do this in France.”

Good shooting!

All about mushroom collecting

Question: “I heard there was a problem with people picking mushrooms on the forest this year. Do you know what that is all about?”

Answer: Joe Griffin, a local U.S. Forest Service law enforcement officer, told me he is encountering several unlawful commercial mushroom-collecting operations within Sawtooth and Boise National Forests within the perimeter of the South Barker fire in the South Fork Boise River drainage.

He also said a maximum of 10 gallons of mushrooms may be collected per household annually on a personal use collection permit.

Take a trip, join powwow in E. Oregon

By John E. Swayze
 Times-News correspondent

It’s called fancy dancing — a colorful whirl of feathered headdresses, leather fringe and beadwork in rhythmic step with the beat of a drum. Native Americans who practice this form take pride in demonstrating their skill at cultural gatherings across the country.

Eastern Oregon is the site for at least two such events: The 39th Spring Powwow and Friendship Feast, which was held May 19 in Le Grande, Ore., and the Tamkaliks Celebration on July 17-19, in Wallowa, Ore.

The Tamkaliks Celebration, “from where you can see the mountains,” is a free three-day gathering focused on Nez Perce heritage in the Wallowa Valley. The event will be held on 320 acres next to the Wallowa River on Whiskey Creek Road. The property was purchased in 1997 as the future site for a tribal longhouse, museum and other cultural attractions to educate the public.

“Right now, all that’s out there is a dance arbor,” Beulah Wynans, director of the Wallowa Band Nez Perce Trail interpretive Center, said. “It’s hard to say how many dance or drum participants we’ll get this year, but when this first started we used the high school and have since outgrown that.”

Festivities open at 7 p.m. July 17 with a social dance. Competitive dancing will begin at 1 p.m. after the 9 a.m. horse parade July 18.

That day all military veterans, regardless of time or place of service, will be encouraged to participate in the Tamkaliks Celebration honor dance.

The next day, Sunday’s traditional 9 a.m. Washat prayer service will be followed by a friendship feast at 11 a.m. and the championship dance round begins at 1 p.m.

“The men go out and hunt before the feast, everyone brings something to eat,” Wynans said. “There’s always an unbelievable amount of food.”

Rocky Mountain Arsenal gets $7.4 million wildlife center

By Judith Kohler
Associated Press writer

COMMERCE CITY, Colo. — Once a Superfund site that was the U.S. military's biggest chemical weapons factory, the Rocky Mountain Arsenal National Wildlife Refuge is getting a "green" visitor's center that will be an urban showpiece for the American West's wildlife system.

The refuge — where hawks swoop down for prey and bison roam over rolling hills — will receive $3.2 million in federal stimulus funds to help complete the center just 11 miles northeast of downtown Denver.

Powered by a wind turbine, solar panels and geothermal heat, the center will be the gateway to miles of prairie, woods and wetlands that is home to deer, coyotes and hundreds of bird species.

Nationwide, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service received $280 million in stimulus funds, and $30 million of that went to its eight-state Mountain-Prairie region.

The Arsenal will be the region's gem, officials say.

"Really, our only big urban area in this eight-state region is Denver and this place is unique because we're smack dab in the middle of that big urban area," said agency spokesman Matt Kales.

The 14,000-square-foot visitor's center will feature an observation deck, an aviary, an auditorium and exhibits chronicling arsenal history. The $7.4 million center is scheduled to be completed by the fall of 2010, said park ranger Sherry James, who heads visitors' services.

Refuge officials had socked away nearly $4.7 million for the center by selling 920 acres of land to suburban Commerce City. Officials weren't sure where the rest would come from.

"We held out long enough, then the stimulus package came through," James said.

Visits are expected to jump from 35,000 to 200,000 a year when the center opens, she said.

Arsenal construction began in 1942 as the U.S. Army scrambled to match a chemical weapons threat from the Axis powers during World War II. It produced mustard gas, lewisite, chlorine gas and more than 100,000 tons of incendiary bombs such as those used on Tokyo in March 1945.

In the 1950s and 1960s, the Army produced incendiary cluster bombs, nerve gas and rocket propellant at the facility. For three decades, Shell Chemical Co. manufactured herbicides and pesticides there.

Production stopped in 1982, and the arsenal was declared a priority under the federal Superfund hazardous waste cleanup program. Soil, buildings, surface water and groundwater were contaminated from decades of toxic waste disposal.

Shell and the Army reached agreements in the 1990s over how much each should pay for cleanup and what to do about polluted groundwater.

The Army is responsible for five groundwater treatment plants.

Wildlife made itself at home despite ponds of chemical goo and trenches containing munitions and pesticide byproducts. The discovery of bald eagles nesting in winter led to the idea of turning it into a national wildlife refuge. Congress approved the Rocky Mountain Arsenal National Wildlife Refuge Act of 1992.

A $2.4 billion cleanup begun in 1997 is expected to be completed next year. The Army will maintain control of a 1,100-acre parcel where contaminated material is capped and contained.

Sixteen buffalo were moved to the arsenal from the National Bison Range in northwestern Montana in 2007. The herd has grown to 27 and, if all goes well, could surpass 200.

Critics questioned the safety of the site, along with a planned wildlife refuge at the former Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant northwest of Denver.

There were reports of dead birds on arsenal grounds when cleanup started.

In 2001, workers found sarin-filled bomblets about the size of grapefruit. Last year, the arsenal was closed when crews excavating a trench detected lewisite. Arsenal officials said only trace amounts were found.

The Army is confident property turned over to Fish and Wildlife will be safe, said Charlie Scharmann, the Army's program manager. Landfills have multiple liners, and barriers and caps will prevent water and snow from spreading contamination. An Army contractor will monitor the arsenal.

Stimulus dollars are funding other western projects, including an improved irrigation system at the National Elk Refuge in northwest Wyoming.

The refuge will spend $3.2 million to increase forage and reduce the need for supplemental elk feeding in winter.

In south-central Colorado, the Alamosa National Wildlife Refuge will spend about $1.5 million to build a dam to divert water from the Rio Grande for wetlands. Refuge manager Mike Blenden said the dam failed in 2001.

"It has been a high priority for regional funding, but there has been so little construction funding since this thing washed out," Blenden said.

Tiger muskies returning to Utah

SALT LAKE CITY — Tiger muskies are returning to Utah.

The big fish with a big fight haven't been stocked in Utah since 2005 because of concerns about aquatic diseases. But the Nebraska Game and Parks Commission has disease-free tiger muskies that are being sent to Utah.

As many as 9,000 tiger muskies are scheduled to arrive in Utah Wednesday. They'll be stocked in six Utah reservoirs.

The Utah Division of Wildlife Resources first introduced tiger muskies in 1988.

State officials say tiger muskies are a sterile, hatchery-produced hybrid that don't occur naturally anywhere in the world.

They can grow to be more than 40 inches long and provide a sought-after challenge for freshwater anglers.

18,000 mule deer, for a record total of more than 91,000 deer.

That is an increase of more than 4,000 deer from 2007 and nearly double the 46,000 deer killed in 1999. The department said it was the ninth straight year that the deer harvest increased.

Nebraska fisherman snags bag of guns

HASTINGS, Neb. — A weekend fishing trip for a Hastings man brought in a bigger catch than he expected.

Hastings police say a man hooked what he thought was a big fish on the north side of Lake Hastings on Saturday night. It turned out to be a duffel bag with four guns inside.

Police Sgt. Bill Mann says with the help of some nearby boaters, the man was able to get the bag ashore. Inside it were four black-powder pistols and some related equipment.

Police are unsure how long the guns had been in the water.

Father, son to fish 50 states in 50 days

TOPEKA, Kan. — A Virginia man and his 17-year-old son are on a special quest this summer — trying to fish all 50 states in 50 days.

Jeff Turner he grew up in Kansas and graduated from Kansas State. He and his 17-year-old son, Taylor, are taking on the challenge of fishing 50 states in 50 days.

Turner says their journey will span 15,000 miles by land, 6,000 miles by air and 500 miles by water. Hawaii and Alaska are included.

The trip began June 13 in Pennsylvania. Last week, the father and son were in Kansas at Milford Reservoir, where they hooked bass and walleye.

S.D. deer season another record

PIERRE, S.D. — State wildlife officials say South Dakota's 2008 deer season was another record-breaker.

Harvest surveys compiled by the Game, Fish and Parks Department show that hunters killed about 74,000 white-tailed deer and

BLM tighten access to S. Utah cave

ST. GEORGE, Utah — Starting next month, only 30 people a day will be allowed into southern Utah's largest cave.

The Bureau of Land Management put locked gates at two entrances to Bloomington Cave this spring and is limiting entry to only those with a permit.

The changes take effect July 6.

For nearly a century, access to 1.3 mile-long Bloomington Cave was largely unregulated. Although popular with serious explorers, untrained spelunkers and Boy Scouts, the cave was also a hit with vandals, partiers and litter bugs.

BLM officials hope the changes will help keep the cave clean and protect fragile geologic formations and wildlife, including a declining number of Townsend's big-eared bats.

The cave is about 15 miles west of St. George.

The moon is shrinking, in a way

By a crude approximation, the moon orbits the earth once each month. But describing the moon's motion in the most accurate terms possible could fill volumes.

That's not hyperbole. Volumes literally have been written attempting to elucidate a "lunar theory" — that is, a mathematical description of the moon's complex motion.

In the 17th century Johannes Kepler discovered that planets (and moons) orbit on elliptical paths. A generation later Isaac Newton refined Kepler's law to say that the moon follows an elliptical orbit about the center of mass of the combined earth-moon system.

Newton was aware that the sun and planets' gravity must also affect the moon, but lacked the theoretical tools to address this so-called "three-body problem."

Later, it was discovered that a general solution to the three-body problem is mathematically impossible, meaning that predictions of the moon's motion could, at best, be approximations.

Life gets more complicated when the earth's non-spherical shape is considered. The earth bulges a bit below the equator, which has its own gravitational effect on the moon. And, since it takes energy to raise the ocean tides, that energy is stolen from the moon's orbital energy, causing it to slowly recede.

All told, the moon's orbit varies in a number of ways: Its elliptical shape lengthens and shortens, its tilt from the plane of earth's orbit increases and decreases, and the tides push it away around an inch-and-a-half each year.

Tuesday brings the smallest full moon of 2009, with our natural satellite appearing about 5 percent smaller than average. Due to the complexities described above, each year's smallest moon won't necessarily be farther away than the previous year's, but over many centuries the overall trend will cause its apparent size to steadily shrink.

Next week: Two important anniversaries in lunar exploration.

BANKRUPTCY

Chapter 7 & 13
Stop Collections, Foreclosures & Garnishments
Fast • Experienced

Question: I was recently divorced and because I wanted it to be over quickly, I agreed to pay for the bank loan on my wife's car. Now that I am thinking straight, I realize there is no way I can pay that loan and my other debts. If I file bankruptcy, can I get rid of that car loan?

Answer: Prior to the enactment of the Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention and Consumer Protection Act (BAPCA) in October of 2005, a chapter 7 bankruptcy discharge would prevent the bank from collecting that debt from you, but your wife could still ask the divorce court to make you pay. The divorce court would decide using a balancing test to determine whether you had the ability to pay. Under the new law, in a chapter 7 bankruptcy, your discharge will not include that bank loan. If you fail to pay the loan and the Divorce Decree contains the appropriate language, your wife can still ask the divorce court to make you pay. Since your wife may be able to collect from you if you don't pay the bank, a chapter 13 bankruptcy might serve you better because you could structure a plan to repay that debt on your terms, and depending on the circumstances of the bank loan, you might be able to get a reduction in interest and in the amount owed. This is a hyper-technical area of the law, and you should consult an experienced bankruptcy attorney before proceeding.

Area college grads taking first uncertain steps

Post-college career search a daunting task in recession

By Michelle Milliken
Times-News correspondent

College graduation is a cause for celebration. No more cramming sessions, all-nighters, or stale lectures to endure.

For this year's graduates, however, a fair amount of apprehension taints that excitement. While a number of new grads end up working their first post-college jobs in fields unrelated to their course of study regardless of the economic climate, times of recession put an even more discouraging pinch on those with limited experience as they cruise shrinking lists of help-wanted ads.

Nick Turner, 21, of Twin Falls, began looking for a job in hospitality management three months before he graduated from the College of Southern Idaho in May.

"I applied at five different hotels and never even got a call back to say no," he said, "and that's after I called them to see about a possible interview opportunity. Altogether through restaurants, local businesses, and the hotels, I don't even know how many I went through.

"If anything, I memorized all my information to the point of walking in with nothing but a pen, filling out the application and leaving."

Turner found a job at a hardware store right before graduation, something he said he's content with for the time being, as it provides a measure of job security and the possibility to eventual transfer to a city with more opportunities in the hotel industry.

"Right now I am waiting for my girlfriend to be done with school because she just graduated in the vet-tech program and has some of her core classes to finish up," he said. "From there, we would like to move to Washington or Seattle, somewhere where my field opens up a lot more in the hotel industry. Twin Falls really does not have what I am looking for job wise."

Jerome County Airport manager works to improve site

By Mary Hanson
Times-News writer

JEROME — Bonnie Dietrick has seen the Jerome County Airport undergo a number of changes in her 10 years as its manager. Of course, she's participated in most of those changes.

Dietrick said that over the airport's 60-year existence, it's evolved from a dirt strip to a 5,000-by-75-foot asphalt runway that handles an average of 21,000 flights per year. During her tenure at the airport three miles east of Jerome on Idaho Highway 25, Dietrick and her husband, Gary, and aircraft mechanic, have participated in that evolution.

"When I first took the job, things were a mess," Dietrick said. "I hauled off seven loads of kasha weeds from around the runway and fueling area, and my husband and I and one part-time county maintenance man painted signs, buildings and restarted the landscape from years ago."

Dietrick, who previously worked in Filer in the school district's food services department, said she applied for the job of managing the Jerome County Airport and Hazelton Municipal Airport at the urging of her husband. She said she didn't know much about managing an airport before she took the job, but read related books, learned various aspects from the Federal Aviation Administration and area pilots, and participated in the Idaho Airport Manager's Association, which she is now the treasurer for.

"I took advantage of everything I could to learn about airport managing when I took this job," she said.

At the Jerome airport, classified as a general aviation facility, Dietrick said hangar rentals have doubled in the past 10 years, as area businesses and various governmental agencies and figures, including Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter, make use of the airport.

Dietrick said that the Idaho Department of Transportation Division of Aeronautics estimated the airport's economic impact on Jerome County at nearly $1.9 million in 2008.

"Our users are from many places," Dietrick said. "The various types of jumpers from all over the world who come to jump from the Perrine Bridge are regulars here just about year-round ... We have about 95 percent corporate jets, as far as who lands here. There is an active skydiving school and we have private flying instructors who are quite busy."

Both airports operate under a county board overseen by the Jerome County Commission. Dietrick said that the airport was self-sufficient last year, and did not require taxpayer funds to balance its budget.

"We are really proud of that," she said.

According to the ITD, the Jerome County Airport is host to two fixed-base operators, Airpower Unlimited and Jerome Flying Service, who offer services at the airport. The smaller Hazelton Municipal Airport, classified as a community airport, features a 2,800-by-60-foot gravel runway that services agricultural operations.

"I wear many hats, from operating heavy machinery to managing," Dietrick said. "My goal when I came was to make this into the nicest, friendliest little airport in this area and I think we have done that."

An oldie but goodie remedy works for gout problems

DEARDR. GOTT: I am a 72-year-old male who suffered from gout for years, and I mean suffered. My big toe would swell up to twice the normal size. My doctor prescribed colchicine with directions to take one every four hours until I got diarrhea. Then I was to discontinue the medicine until the diarrhea stopped. Once it did, I'd begin the regimen all over again. I tried the cherry cure, stayed off beer and booze for a while, tried other remedies and still got gout.

One day, a young female intern suggested I ask my doctor to give me a prescription for allopurinol, 100 milligrams. Well, I did, and I haven't had an attack since. That was almost three years ago. Is allopurinol a secret? No one I talk to has heard about it. Believe me, it works, and am I ever glad. Any comments?

DEAR READER: If allopurinol is a secret, it's one

ASK DR. GOTT
Dr. Peter Gott

I've known of for 40 years, since the product has been available since August 1966.

Gout is essentially caused by too much uric acid in the body and can be brought on by the ingestion of excessive amounts of organ meats, anchovies, beer, gravy, shellfish and more.

Treatment consists of dietary and lifestyle changes and may include medications such as colchicine, allopurinol and nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs (NSAIDs). NSAIDs are usually given during an acute attack. As you discovered, no one medication works for everyone. This was obviously the case with the colchicine your physician prescribed. Side effects include abdominal cramping, nausea, vomiting and the dreaded diarrhea you experienced.

For some people, allopurinol also carries side effects of rash, lowered white blood cell and platelet counts, drowsiness, headache, fever, bruising, jaundice and pain or bleeding on urination.

Fortunately, it appears you do not suffer any of those consequences. The drug is often prescribed for gout sufferers. Those with kidney or liver disease, diabetes, hypertension or congestive heart failure might be directed to use another product. That decision should be left to the discretion of your prescribing physician.

To provide related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "About Gout." Other readers

Turner said the value of having any steady employment is also on his mind. "After I got out of school, I thought that I would be able to get a job pretty easily. Yeah, no, that's not how it works these days," he said. "It is no longer you quit a job and get another one in the same day." Some students have decided to further education in order to enhance their future career opportunities. Donna Quach, 22, a 2005 graduate of Twin Falls High School, finished her undergraduate chemistry degree at the University of Idaho in May. Even though she wasn't sure she wanted to before, the economy convinced her to attend graduate school. "I hope going to grad school will pay off. Having a bachelor's in chemistry isn't very useful since it only provides me with an introduction to the various areas of chemistry," she said. "With a masters or Ph.D., it will give me the chance to better focus on a specific field, which is more valuable to employers when hiring. "My only fear would be going through all this work and not finding a worthy job." Others are content to wait on the economy to right itself before pursue a degree-related job in earnest. Lacey Lemmon, 21, a 2005 Hagerman High School graduate, finished her bachelor's in communications with an emphasis on public relations at Boise State in May. She's working the same two jobs she did before she graduated but will stick with them until she sees signs of more opportunity in her desired field. "Out of the two jobs I have, I would say at one time I wanted them, but now that I have a degree, I feel I am settling," she said. "Of course my fingers are crossed, hoping to get a better-paying job and one that is in my field when the economy turns around." For these graduates, along with the rest of the nation's 2009 graduating class, only time will provide the answer to if their post-college strategies pay off in the long run.

Be sure to mention the title. DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm an 86-year-old female who constantly gets bruise spots on my arms and legs. If I bump or scrape them lightly, a bruise mark appears. I've been told it is old age. Is it really, or am I lacking something in my system? I have friends in my age group that don't seem to have this problem. DEAR READER: Bruises often form when small blood vessels just under the surface of the skin break. Blood leaks out and appears as a blackish-blue or purple contusion under the skin. The body ultimately heals itself by reabsorbing that blood. Skin becomes thinner and loses some of the protective fatty layer as we age. And the tissues that support those capillaries become fragile and are more prone to rupture. Furthermore, drugs are often prescribed for medical conditions as we age. Aspirin, warfarin, clopidogrel and a number of other medications reduce our blood's ability to clot. Bruising may occur even if the medications are taken at proper doses. Some dietary supplements can also increase the risk to bruise. If your bruises come from simple bumps, we can likely consider your age. If not, I recommend you see your physician. He or she may choose to order laboratory testing, perform an examination, and rule out potential issues.

Oscar-winning actor Karl Malden dead at age 97

By Beth Harris
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — Karl Malden, the Academy Award-winning actor whose intelligent characterizations on stage and screen made him a star despite his plain looks, died Wednesday, his family said. He was 97.

Malden died of natural causes surrounded by his family at his Brentwood home, they told the Academy of Motion Picture Arts & Sciences. He served as the academy's president from 1989-92.

"Karl lived a rich, full life," Academy president Sid Ganis said. "He has the greatest and most loving family; a career that has spanned the spectrum of the arts from theater to film and television, to some very famous commercial work."

While he tackled a variety of characters over the years, he was often seen in working-class garb or military uniform. His authenticity in grittier roles came naturally: He was the son of a Czech mother and a Serbian father, and worked for a time in the steel mills of Gary, Ind., after dropping out of college.

Malden said he got his celebrated bulbous nose when he broke it a couple of times playing basketball or football, joking that he was "the only actor in Hollywood whose nose qualifies him for handicapped parking." He liked to say he had "an open-hearth face."

Malden won a supporting actor Oscar in 1951 for his role as Blanche DuBois' naive suitor Mitch in "A Streetcar Named Desire" — a role he also played on Broadway.

He was nominated again as best supporting actor in 1954 for his performance as Father Corrigan, a fearless, friend-of-the-working-man priest in "On the Waterfront." In both movies, he costarred with Marlon Brando.

"When you worked with him, he was the character," said Eva Marie Saint, who garnered a supporting actress Oscar for her role in "Waterfront." "He was the consummate actor and he loved acting. He was dear and smart. Whatever he did he enjoyed life."

Among Malden's more than 50 film credits were: "Patton," in which he played Gen. Omar Bradley, "Pollyanna," "Fear Strikes Out," "The Sting II," "Bombers B-52," "Cheyenne Autumn," and "All Fall Down."

One of his most controversial films was "Baby Doll" in 1956, in which he played a dullard husband whose child bride is exploited by a businessman. It was condemned by the Catholic Legion of Actor Karl Malden in 1950. Malden, a former steelworker who won an Oscar for his role as Mitch in the 1951 classic 'A Streetcar Named Desire,' died Wednesday. He was 97.

Decency for what was termed its "carnal suggestiveness." The story was by Tennessee Williams.

Malden gained perhaps his greatest fame as Lt. Mike Stone in the 1970s television show "The Streets of San Francisco," in which Michael Douglas played the veteran detective's junior partner.

"Karl 'The Mentor' Malden was a great actor, father and husband. I admired and loved him deeply," Douglas, who was in Europe, said through his publicist.

Douglas saluted Malden last month when he received the American Film Institute's Lifetime Achievement Award.

"It was Karl who, more than anyone, got me to understand that an actor is just one part of a whole team that makes a TV series or movie work," Douglas said in the upcoming July 19 airing of the event on TV Land.

In the '70s, Malden gained a lucrative 21-year sideline and a place in pop culture with his "Don't leave home without them" ads for American Express.

"The Streets of San Francisco" earned him five Emmy nominations. He won one for his role as a murder victim's father out to bring his former son-in-law to justice in the 1985 miniseries "Fatal Vision." He and Saint played husband and wife.

Malden played Barbra Streisand's stepfather in the 1987 film "Nuts;" Adm. Elmo Zumwalt Jr. in the 1988 TV film "My Father, My Son;" and Leon Klinghoffer, the cruise ship passenger murdered by terrorists in 1985, in the 1989 TV film "The Hijacking of the Achille Lauro."

In 2004, Malden received the Screen Actors Guild's Lifetime Achievement Award, telling the group in his acceptance speech that "this is the peak for me!"

Gale Storm, 1950s TV sitcom star, dies at 87

By Adam Bernstein and Martin Weil
The Washington Post

Gale Storm, 87, an actress and pop singer whose chirpy, upbeat charm made her a leading television star on two 1950s sitcoms, "My Little Margie" and "The Gale Storm Show," died June 27 at a convalescent hospital in Danville, Calif. No cause of death was reported.

Storm

Storm, who was born Josephine Owaissa Cottle, won a talent contest in her native Texas that led her to Hollywood at 17. Despite her perky, fresh-faced appeal, she proved less than the forceful screen personality studio executives hoped when they manufactured her name.

She jokingly blamed her lackluster film career on her debut role as a 10-year-old in "Tom Brown's School Days" (1940) opposite Freddie Bartholomew. "That was a rip-roaring start!" she said.

Dropped by RKO Studios, she worked for a series of cheapie independent studios and managed leading roles in more than 30 films. She suppressed her fear of horses to star opposite Roy Rogers, Bob Steele and Johnny Mack Brown in Westerns, and she sang in forgettable film musicals such as "Swing Parade of 1946," "Let's Go Collegiate" and "Campus Rhythm."

She revived her moribund career by going into television — a risky step for a

Hollywood leading lady in the early 1950s, when the small screen was viewed as a major step down. Almost immediately, Storm became a household name through "My Little Margie," which began on CBS in 1952 as a summer replacement for "I Love Lucy."

Always well-meaning but frequently daffy, Storm's energetic, enthusiastic Margie Albright lived in Manhattan with her widowed onscreen father and showed a gift for concocting kooky schemes to keep him from new romantic entanglements. Her TV father was played by another veteran film actor, Charles Farrell.

By the end of each episode, difficulties were resolved in a way that enabled Storm's patient but put-upon father to sigh, shrug and proclaim to laugh-happy living rooms all across America: "Well, that's my little Margie."

The show, which ran until 1955 and lasted many decades in syndication, helped shape one of the stock characters of popular entertainment: the wacky woman, a fount of endearingly comic mistakes and misadventures.

In 1956, CBS launched Storm in a new series, "The Gale Storm Show," which ran until 1960.

The show, sometimes known by its subtitle, "Oh! Susanna," referred to Storm's role as the social director on a luxury cruise ship. She and her friend Esmerelda, the ship manicurist played by Zazu Pitts, often teamed up to make life difficult for the pompous captain.

NATION & WORLD

Emotion, few details, in Obama's health care pitch

By Philip Elliott and Charles Babington
Associated Press writers

ANNANDALE, Va. — President Obama wanted to put a human face on his plans to overhaul health care, and a Virginia supporter did just that Wednesday.

Fighting back tears, Debby Smith, 53, told Obama of her kidney cancer and her inability to obtain health insurance or hold a job.

The president hugged her — she's a volunteer for his political operation — and called her "exhibit A" in an unsustainable system that is too expensive and complex for millions of Americans.

"We are going to try to find ways to help you immediately," he told Smith as hundreds looked on at a community college forum — and countless others watched on television. But the nation's long-term needs require a greater emphasis on preventive care and "cost-effective care," he said.

Smith, of Appalachia, Va., is a volunteer for Organizing for America, Obama's political operation within the Democratic National Committee. She obtained her ticket through the White House.

The health care changes that Obama called for Wednesday would reshape the nation's medical landscape. He says he wants to cover nearly 50 million uninsured Americans, to persuade doctors to stress quality over quantity of care, to squeeze billions of dollars from spending.

But details on exactly how to do those things were generally lacking in his hour-long town hall forum before a friendly, hand-picked audience in a Washington suburb. The lingering questions underscore the tough negotiations awaiting Congress, the administration and dozens of special interest groups in the coming months. Lawmakers will return to debating the issue when they return from a one-week recess on Monday.

Some of Obama's questioners Wednesday were from friendly sources, including a member of the Service Employees International Union and a member of Health Care for America Now, which organized a Capitol Hill rally last week calling for an overhaul.

White House aides selected other questions submitted by people on YouTube, Facebook and Twitter.

Mississippi's still fattest but Alabama closing in

By Lauran Neergaard
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Mississippi's still king of cellulite, but an ominous tide is rolling toward the Medicare doctors in neighboring Alabama: obese baby boomers.

It's time for the nation's annual obesity rankings and, outside of fairly lean Colorado, there's little good news.

In 31 states, more than one in four adults are obese, says a new report from the Trust for America's Health and the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation.

And obesity rates among adults rose in 23 states over the past year, and no state experienced a significant decline.

"The obesity epidemic clearly goes beyond being an individual problem," said Jeff Levi, executive director of the Trust, a nonprofit public health group.

It's a national crisis that "calls for a national strategy to combat obesity," added Robert Wood Johnson vice president Dr. James Marks. "The crest of the wave of obesity is still to crash."

While the nation has long been bracing for a surge in Medicare as the boomers start turning 65, the new report makes clear that fat, not just age, will fuel much of those bills. In every state, the rate of obesity is higher among 55- to 64-year-olds — the oldest boomers — than among today's 65-and-beyond.

The report provides one of the first in-depth looks at obese boomers, and its implications are sobering. This first wave of aging boomers will mean a jump of obese Medicare patients that ranges from 5.2 percent in New York to a high of 16.3 percent in Alabama, the report concluded. In Alabama, nearly 39 percent of the oldest boomers are obese.

Health economists once made the harsh financial calculation that the obese would save money by dying sooner.

But more recent research instead suggests that better treatments are keeping them alive nearly as long — but they're much sicker for longer, requiring such costly interventions as knee replacements and diabetes care and dialysis. Medicare spends anywhere from $1,400 to $6,000 more annually on health care for an obese senior than for the non-obese, Levi said.

"There isn't a magic bullet. We don't have a pill for it," said Levi. "It's not going to be solved in the doctor's office but in the community, where we change norms."

South is the nation's heaviest region

Nine of the top 10 states with the highest obesity rates were located in the South from 2006 to 2008.

Girl survives air crash

Surrounded by doctors, the only survivor of the Yemenia Airbus 310 jet crash, 14-year-old Bahia Bakari, is seen through the window of the room where she is being cared for Wednesday at El Maaruf Hospital in Moroni, Comoros. Sole known survivor of Yemen crash flown to Paris

MORONI, Comoros — Despite a fractured collarbone, a teenage girl clung to the wreckage of a plane for more than 13 hours before rescuers found her floating in the Indian Ocean, authorities said. The only known survivor of the crash, she was being flown back to Paris on Wednesday night.

The Yemenia Airbus 310 jet was carrying 153 people when it went down in howling winds early Tuesday in the sea north of the Comoros Islands.

French officials late Wednesday retracted claims that one of the plane's black boxes had been found. French Commander Bertrand Mortemard de Boisse told The Associated Press that a signal detected from the debris of Yemenia Flight IY626 was from a distress beacon and not from one of the plane's black boxes.

The flight data and cockpit voice recorders in those black boxes are crucial to help investigators determine the cause of the crash off this former French colony.

An Associated Press reporter saw 14-year-old Bahia Bakari in a Comoros hospital Wednesday as she was visited by government officials. She was conscious with bruises on her face and gauze bandages on her right elbow and right foot. Her hair was pulled back and she was covered by a blue blanket but she gamely shook the hand of Alain Joyandet, France's minister for international cooperation.

Her uncle, Joseph Yousouf, said Bahia also had a fractured collarbone. "It is a true miracle. She is a courageous young girl," Joyandet said, adding that Bahia held onto a piece of the plane from 1:30 a.m. Tuesday to 3:00 p.m., then signaled a passing boat, which rescued her.

"She really showed an absolutely incredible physical and moral strength," he said. "She is physically out of danger, she is evidently very traumatized."

The girl was traveling with her mother, who is feared dead. They had left Paris on Monday night to see family in the Comoros.

"She's asking for her mother," Yousouf told the AP. For fear of upsetting Bahia, Yousouf told her that her mother is in the room next door.

Joyandet said the girl left Wednesday night on a chartered executive jet and would be put in a Paris hospital upon arrival.

The passengers on the downed plane were flying the last leg of a journey from Paris and Marseille to Comoros, with a stop in Yemen to change planes. Most of the passengers were from Comoros, sixty-six were French citizens.

The girl's father told French radio that his oldest daughter could "barely swim" but managed to hang on. Kassim Bakari, who spoke with his oldest daughter by phone, said Bahia was ejected and found herself beside the plane.

"She couldn't feel anything, and found herself in the water. She heard people speaking around her but she couldn't see anyone in the darkness," Bakari said on France's RTL radio. "She's a very timid girl, I

Plan to bury Michael Jackson at Neverland fizzles

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A plan to bury Michael Jackson at his sprawling Neverland ranch fizzled Wednesday, leaving details about his funeral undecided as another mystery was solved: His newly unveiled will says his mother should raise his children, or failing her, Diana Ross.

The investigation into the singer's death, meanwhile, deepened late Wednesday when the Drug Enforcement Administration was asked to step in by the Los Angeles Police Department, a law enforcement official in Washington told The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of the investigation.

The changing funeral circumstances thwarted many will says his mother should raise his children, or failing her, Diana Ross. The investigation into the singer's death, meanwhile, deepened late Wednesday when the Drug Enforcement Administration was asked to step in by the Los Angeles Police

"We're terribly disappointed," said Ida Barron, 44, who arrived with her husband Paul Barron, 56, intending to spend several days in a tent.

"We were going to listen to music and watch Michael Jackson DVDs and party all night long, not just to have fun, but in memory of Michael Jackson," Paul Barron said. "Now we're going to have to just go home."

Jackson's 7-year-old will, filed Wednesday in a Los Angeles court, gives his entire estate to a family trust and names his 79-year-old mother Katherine and his children as beneficiaries. The will also estimates the current value of his estate at more than $500 million. Katherine Jackson was appointed their guardian, with entertainer Diana Ross, a longtime friend of Michael Jackson, named successor guardian if something happens to his mother. Ross introduced the Jackson 5 on the Ed Sullivan Show in the late 1960s and was instrumental in launching their career.

Meanwhile, Jackson family spokesman Ken Sunshine said a public memorial was in the works for Jackson but wouldn't be held at Neverland. In addition, it appeared more likely that a funeral and burial would take place in Los Angeles, a person familiar with the situation told the AP.

But the person, who is not authorized to speak for the family and requested anonymity, said nothing was planned for Neverland, at least through Friday.

The person said billionaire Thomas Barrack, who owns Neverland in a joint venture with Jackson, sought an exemption to bury the singer at the ranch. But the person says it's a complicated process and it couldn't be done for a burial this week.

"The family is aware a Neverland burial is not possible. They are expected to make decisions about whatever funeral and memorial service" will take place, the person said.

Heavy construction equipment and workers were seen passing through the wrought-iron gates of Neverland on Tuesday. It wasn't clear what they were doing. The property is about 120 miles northwest of Los Angeles.

At once a symbol of Jackson's success and excesses, Neverland became the site of a makeshift memorial after his death.

never thought she would escape like that." Sgt. Said Abdilai told Europe 1 radio that Bahia was too weak to grasp the life ring rescuers threw to her, so he jumped into the sea to get her. He said rescuers gave the trembling girl warm water with sugar. Said Mohammed, a nurse at El Mararouf hospital in the Comoros capital of Moroni, said the girl was doing well.

The crash a few miles off this island nation came two years after aviation officials reported equipment faults with the plane, an aging Airbus 310 flying the last leg of a Yemenia airlines flight from Paris and Marseille to the Comoros, with a stop in Yemen to change planes.

A top French official said the Airbus 310 crashed in deep water nine miles north of the Comoran coast and 21 miles from the Moroni airport.

The French air accident investigation agency BEA was sending a team of safety investigators and Airbus experts to Comoros, an archipelago of three main islands 1,800 miles south of Yemen, between Africa's southeastern coast and the island of Madagascar.

A respected pilots group, the London-based International Federation of Air Line Pilots Association, said the plane may have been attempting a go-around in rough weather for another approach when it hit the sea.

The 2,900-meter (9,558-feet) long runway at Prince Said Ibrahim International Airport on Moroni island is adequate for modern airliners. But the airport is considered a difficult one for pilots due to prevailing weather conditions and hills to the east of the runway. Some airlines provide special training to pilots who need to fly in there.

Pilots coming in from the north also must land their planes visually and don't have any all-weather instrument landing system to help them.

"The field in question is thought of as being challenging, and certain operators consider it a daytime-only airport," said Gideon Ewers of the London-based pilots' association.

The Yemenia plane was trying to land in the dark, about 1:30 in the morning, amid bad weather.

French and American teams carried out rescue operations Wednesday, fighting heavy seas. Abdul-Khaleq al-Qadi, chairman of Yemenia's board, said the black boxes, once retrieved, will be taken to France for analysis.

Rescue boats plied the waters north of the main island and scores of people gathered on nearby beaches to watch.

"The search is continuing," Joyandet said. "No other survivors have been found."

A French military cargo plane flew over a zone 50 miles (80 kilometers) north of Grand Comoros Island, while two inflatable dinghies sent by French forces on La Reunion island combed waters closer to the coast.

"The sea is pretty rough at the present time, the wind is blowing hard and the drift is strong ... there are any survivors, the bodies of the victims and the debris are drifting rapidly towards the north," said Christophe Prazuck, spokesman for the French military.

designed to help Obama, not to inform the public.

"Americans are already skeptical about the cost and adverse impact of the president's health care plans," Republican National Committee spokesman Francis said. "Stacking the audience and preselecting questions may make for a good TV, but it's the wrong way to engage in a meaningful discussion about reforming health care."

Obama made no new proposals at the sometimes emotional event. But he vigorously defended his plans while fielding seven questions from the live audience at the forum and on the Internet.

The president would bar insurance companies from turning down applicants because of their "pre-existing conditions." He would establish health care exchanges that would spread the costs of treating patients such as Smith over a large number of people.

Obama called for shifting huge sums of money from current health care spending to new goals. About two-thirds of the overall new costs "will come from reallocating money that is already being spent in the health care system but isn't being spent wisely," he said.

He restated his pledge to cut $177 billion over the next decade from Medicare Advantage insurance plans. And he noted that doctors, hospitals, corporations and others have promised to decrease the annual rate of spending growth by 1.5 percent, or $2 trillion over 10 years.

Such savings are not guaranteed, however, and many Republican lawmakers say Obama's plans will prove too costly.

Bats, gloves and brooms for Cyclones in sweep of Minico

By John Derr
Times-News writer

JEROME — One by one. Slowly but surely the Jerome Cyclones American Legion Baseball Class AA team got the clutch hit and just kept building the lead. Though Cyclones threatened to explode several times, they did more than enough to earn a 7-1 victory over visiting Minico Wednesday afternoon in the first game of an Area C doubleheader. Jerome also won the nightcap 3-1. Nolan Stouder gave up just a single run and four hits in the opener, frustrating the Spartan hitters all afternoon.

"I was a little shaky early on, but when I settled down I felt like I was in a zone. I just let my fielders back me up," said Stouder, who struck out four.

Minico played musical chairs most of the game, going through five different hurlers.

"I planned on going through a lot of guys since we don't play for a week," said Minico coach Ben Frank, who added that he had several players gone. "It came down to execution, and they did a better job. Mistakes cost us runs, and every time they got up they came through."

The Cyclones jumped on top early as a single by Stouder and a sacrifice fly by Josh Walgamott plated a pair of runs in the bottom of the first.

The Spartans struggled early but finally got on the board in the third with an RBI single by Casey Christiansen.

Minico later threatened with two in scoring position and only one out, but the Spartans failed to get a run across, making the 2-1 deficit in the third as close as Minico got to tying or taking the lead.

As the Spartans went through three pitchers in the first three innings, Jerome kept the pressure on.

Stouder added another RBI in the third while Kris Bos' deep fly to right in the fourth plated another expanding the Cyclones' lead to 4-1.

Wimbledon semis set: Federer-Haas, Murray-Roddick

The Associated Press

WIMBLEDON, England — Roger Federer neutralized Ivo Karlovic's huge serves Wednesday to reach the Wimbledon semifinals and move a step closer to a record 15th Grand Slam championship. Two-time finalist Andy Roddick, Andy Murray and Tommy Haas completed the final four.

In a match featuring short points and few rallies, Federer conjured up a few great returns to break the 6-foot-10 Croatian twice and secure a 6-3, 7-5, 7-6 (3) victory on another sunbaked day at the All England Club. Federer, closing in on his sixth Wimbledon title, reached his 21st consecutive semifinal at a Grand Slam tournament and extended his winning streak to 17 matches with another vintage performance on his favorite Centre Court.

"I love the record I have of reaching so many semifinals in Grand Slams in a row — 21 is quite a number," Federer said. "It shows how consistent I've been."

It was Federer's ninth win in 10 matches against Karlovic, who was playing in his first Grand Slam quarter-final.

CLASSIC START

Cowboys ground out win over Triple Play

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

It certainly wasn't the most polished of wins, but they all count the same.

Despite being limited to just four hits and committing two errors, the Twin Falls Cowboys American Legion Baseball Class AA team contrived to make fewer mistakes than its opposition, grinding out an 8-4 win over the Triple Play Hornets in the first game of the Cowboy Classic tournament at Bill Ingram Field on Wednesday.

Remington Pullin struck the crucial blow in a five-run third inning for the Cowboys (16-5), clubbing a two-run double to the center-field wall — were the Classic not a wood bat tournament it would have certainly left the yard.

Twin Falls head coach Tim Stadelmeir thought Pullin had a great mental approach all game long, but the College of Southern Idaho catcher disagreed to an extent.

"I grounded out on the exact same pitch in my first at bat. The first time I pulled up on the pitch, and the second time I stayed inside it with my swing," said Pullin, who recently committed to return to CSI for his sophomore season. "I like having the wood bats at this tournament. When I swing a metal bat I change my swing because you can get away with more, but with the wood bats you're forced to stay with a good approach and stay inside the ball."

Pullin's two-bagger was the only real momentum-building hit for either side in the game. Triple Play managed just five hits and committed three errors, leading to a pair of unearned runs, while the Hornets themselves got a two-run single from Nic Cuckovich.

Judge lifts suspension, says Mayfield can race

By Mike Cranston
Associated Press writer

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — A judge issued a temporary injunction on Wednesday to lift Jeremy Mayfield's drug suspension, leaving the NASCAR driver free to race at Daytona this weekend.

U.S. District Court Judge Graham Mullen concluded the "likelihood of this case is quite substantial." The decision came after NASCAR's lawyers portrayed Mayfield as a danger to the sport after he tested positive for methamphetamines on May 1. He was suspended indefinitely eight days later.

Mayfield's lawyers argued he never used recreational drugs and that NASCAR's testing system was flawed. "This is huge for us. This means more to me probably than any race I've ever won or anything," a smiling Mayfield said outside the courtroom, with his wife, Shana, at his side. "To come out here and do what we did today. ... All the attorneys worked tirelessly and endlessly. It all paid off for us!" Still, Mayfield said he was unsure if he would be able to secure the money needed to bring his car to Daytona. The deadline to enter Saturday's race was June 23. Mayfield, however, still can join the race as a late entry until the garage opens at 8:30 a.m. Thursday though he would not earn any championship points.

Mayfield also suggested he might drive a car for another team and said a decision would be made soon.

"It's kind of late in the game right now, but we're able to go. That was our goal, to be able to go back to work and race cars," Mayfield said. "The main thing is to clear the air and let the fans know. It just feels good to get this off our back, and now we'll move forward."

NASCAR chairman Brian France said the organization has no immediate plans to file an appeal, but he didn't rule it out.

"We're disappointed, but we'll honor the court's wishes. That's where we stand," France said. "I'm not going to comment on what we're going to do yet on the next legal process."

Lance Armstrong braced for tough last week in Tour de France

The Associated Press

PARIS — For Lance Armstrong to win an eighth Tour de France, he will not only have to beat the best rider in the world — his teammate and rival Alberto Contador — he will also need to master an innovative course with a grueling last week that includes four mountain stages.

The 37-year-old American rider, back in competition this season after more than three years of retirement, said in an interview with The Associated Press on Tuesday that this year's race, starting Saturday in Monaco, was more likely to favor pure climbers like Contador.

"There is only (about 34 miles) of time trials, which is much less than normal," Armstrong told The AP in a telephone interview. "And the final week is extremely hard with a lot of climbs. So all the way from Colmar (stage 14), to Verbier, the Alps, the time trial and then the (Mont) Ventoux ... I've never seen a final week of the Tour like that!"

Armstrong has never won at the fabled and dreaded

Ventoux — one of the few climbs where's he's come off second-best.

"It owns a special place in my heart," Armstrong said. "Obviously it would be a sweet feeling to win there finally, but if you want to win there you have to be the best."

Traditionally, the Tour finishes with a time trial on the penultimate day, before a largely ceremonial ride into Paris on the last day.

But this year, Ventoux, a huge moonscape of rock in Provence with no vegetation, will be the 20th of the 21 stages. The punishing climb, on which British rider Tom Simpson died in 1967, could possibly decide the outcome.

In his heyday, Armstrong had two occasions to triumph on the so called "Bald Mountain."

In 2000, when he won the Tour for a second time, he allowed the late Marco Pantani of Italy to pass him at the finish line, later regretting having given away the victory.

Two years later, Armstrong's team reacted

Report on Ky. player death: Coach followed rules

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — A school system report released Wednesday on the heat-related death of a football player concluded a Louisville coach and his staff did not break any high school athletic rules, and found evidence the sophomore was ill with a headache and other symptoms before the practice.

The Jefferson County Public Schools report comes after the death of 15-year-old sophomore Max Gilpin, who collapsed while running sprints known as "gassers" at the end of a preseason practice last August. He died three days later of septic shock, multiple organ failure and heat stroke.

Pleasure Ridge Park coach David Jason Stinson has been charged with reckless homicide in a rare criminal case of coach in a heat death. He has pleaded not guilty and a trial is set to begin Aug. 23.

The report, which is separate from the criminal case, concluded that Stinson and his assistants may not have used "appropriate means" to motivate the players but did not break any athletic rules.

The report also said the district's independent physician, Dr. Daniel Rusyniak, found that there was evidence Gilpin was ill prior to the Aug. 20 practice. The doctor concluded that an illness would have made Max more susceptible to heat stroke, but with no autopsy, the cause of his sepsis was more difficult to confirm.

An attorney for Gilpin's mother, Todd Thompson, said the conclusions were not a surprise because the school system has from the beginning sought to exonerate itself and the coaches in the teen's death. He also called the medical findings "incorrect."

Gilpin's parents have sued Stinson, five assistant coaches and school administrators in a case set for trial in January.

In the criminal case, Louisville police took statements from Stinson, 89 football players, nine coaches and 25 other witnesses, including parents at a soccer game on an adjacent field.

In the police reports, players and coaches described a routine practice for much of the afternoon — watching film, stretching and positional drills. But players told police that after about two hours on the field, Stinson, a former college offensive lineman, became upset over goofing off and a "lack of hustle."

Stinson has said he didn't see the 6-2, 220-pound Gilpin collapse.

Jefferson County Schools Superintendent Sheldon Berman said there was no evidence the players were denied water, and the evidence also points to something other than dehydration as the cause of Gilpin's death.

Stinson is still employed in a non-teaching position. He will remain reassigned pending the outcome of his criminal trial. Berman said if he's cleared, he will eligible to apply for a coaching job again.

Tiger wants to be 'greedy host' at Congressional BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — It's not often that a player is bold enough to challenge Tiger Woods on the golf course. Rarer still is when it happens during a pro-am round from one of his amateur partners.

"That still puts me 1 up," Dallas Cowboys quarterback Tony Romo said to him Wednesday morning.

"Does it, now?" Woods replied, not sounding the least bit concerned.

The world's No. 1 player then smoked a fairway metal down the 17th at Congressional Country Club. Romo, a scratch player who asked to play from the championship tees, followed with a 3-wood that traveled about a yard farther.

On the par-3 second, Romo appeared to have the edge when Woods bladed a bunker shot over the green and into the gallery. He didn't finish out the hole, and when Romo three-putted from the fringe, the quarterback said, "You wouldn't have made 4 from there?"

They didn't mention the stakes or how many shots Woods gave Romo — if any — although it had a familiar conclusion.

"He contributed to my spending fund, which is nice," Woods said later on his Web site.

The bold move by Woods was playing with the Cowboys' quarterback in Washington Redskins country, and while it attracted a large gallery for the 6:30 a.m. tee time, the cheers and jeers were relatively tame.

"How about an autograph?" one fan said to Romo. "I've got a Tony Romo jersey on and I've already been in three fights?"

Romo kept walking. "Jason Campbell signed it," the fan called to him.

Campbell, the Redskins quarterback, played in another pro-am group, while Woods and Romo were joined by House Minority Leader John Boehner, who spent most of his day picking up his ball before he reached the green.

There was plenty of star power at Congressional, even during the opening ceremony when Jessica Simpson sang the national anthem.

When the AT&T National gets under way Thursday, the biggest star will be the tournament host.

Woods missed his own tournament last year, which was played a week after he had season-ending knee surgery. He had to watch from his couch as Anthony Kim closed with a bogey-free 65 for a two-shot victory.

"I thought he was here last year," Kim said. "His name was all over the place."

It is everywhere but the trophy.

One obscure piece of trivia that could come out of this tournament is a chance for Woods to match Jack Nicklaus by winning his tournament on the second try. Nicklaus won the Memorial in 1977, the second year of the tournament.

The only Nicklaus record that matters to Woods is 18 professional majors, and that's on his mind, too.

Woods is playing for the first time since he failed to defend his title in the U.S. Open at Bethpage, largely due to his putting. Next up is the British Open in two weeks at Turnberry, a links course he has only seen on television.

For now, he is intent on being a "greedy host."

He wants the 120-man field at Congressional to have a great week, as long as he goes home with the trophy.

"I always put in as much as I possibly can to win an event," he said. "It is fun winning your own event."

He has won the Chevron World Challenge, his charity tournament in California, four times. Woods also is going for a hat trick of sorts by trying to win three tournaments in one year hosted by PGA Tour players, having previously won the Arnold Palmer Invitational at Bay Hill and the Memorial, which Nicklaus runs.

Blissfully bleary U.S. returns for CONCACAF Gold Cup

TUKWILA, Wash. (AP) — Bob Bradley was walking off the practice field toward the team bus when a father stopped the coach of the United States national team with a cheerful yell from a playground.

"Hey, good job on the Confederations Cup, man!" the dad shouted through a chain-link fence as a little girl played nearby. He then raised his coffee cup to salute the coach.

Two weeks ago, the guy might have thrown his mug at Bradley — if he'd even known who he was.

Now, strangers are toasting the U.S. coach and his team.

Three days after its stunning success in the Confederations Cup in South Africa, a younger, scaled-down U.S. team was back home preparing for Saturday's game against Grenada, its opener in the CONCACAF Gold Cup. Wednesday morning's 90-minute practice on a back field with only a girls' team watching through a fence was a relatively quiet plateau off the peak of becoming the first U.S. team to reach the final of a FIFA men's tournament.

That came after the U.S. looked outclassed while losing its first two matches in South Africa, 3-1 to world champion Italy 3-1 and 3-0 to South American champion Brazil. Some were calling for Bradley to be fired before a final first-round match against Egypt.

Then, the Americans advanced to the semifinals on the second tiebreaker by blanking Egypt 3-0 as Brazil beat Italy. There, the revitalized Americans shocked top-ranked Spain. And they led five-time World Cup champion Brazil, the world's new No. 1 as of Wednesday, by two goals at halftime before losing 3-2 in Sunday's championship match.

"People are excited," Bradley said Wednesday, looking anything but following a trek halfway across the globe in the previous two days. "We all feel good that you get to a big tournament and your performance gets soccer people up and going. And now it gives us momentum to keep it going."

Bradley and players Charlie Davies, Freddy Adu, Heath Pearce and Luis Robles were slow to get out of South Africa because of limited flights. Then they traveled more than 10,200 air miles through Amsterdam, Paris and elsewhere across nine time zones Monday and Tuesday before practicing through jet lag Wednesday.

All in an effort to win a fourth consecutive title in the Gold Cup, the championship for North and Central America and the Caribbean.

"Yeah, traveling halfway across the world definitely has an effect," said Davies, the only American on the Gold Cup roster who appeared in games in South Africa.

"It's just a matter of getting refocused. ... It feels really good to be back in the U.S."

Bradley, who is letting most of the national team regulars either return to their clubs or take a break, was home barely long enough to brush his teeth before arriving in Seattle.

"I went Johannesburg-Dakar-Washington, D.C., to LA," Bradley said.

"Come home for three hours, and then into Seattle."

No wonder CONCACAF, soccer's North and Central American and Caribbean governing body, is allowing the U.S. to add seven players to its Gold Cup roster. The national team will likely announce those reinforcements Thursday, to swell the roster to 30. Teams can dress up to 18 for a match.

What clicked for the Americans to go from international flops to international force in a week?

"The work that's gone on for the last few years. The competition we've played against. The experience that we've had together. That all comes into play," Bradley said.

"The first two games, the results were disappointing. But there were positives, especially against Italy. And we knew going up against Egypt that we still had a chance. We talked at halftime about how 3-0 was probably what we needed. And the response was strong. And you could tell that momentum carried over."

Bradley and his four weary travelers were met in Seattle by the only two regular national team starters on the Gold Cup roster, Hannover right back Steve Cherundolo and Houston forward Brian Ching, who are returning from injury.

Ching missed the last two World Cup qualifiers and the Confederations Cup because of a strained hamstring.

Cherundolo, whose 51 international appearances lead the U.S. Gold Cup roster, is coming off hip surgery. The defender, who helped win the 2005 Gold Cup with current teammates Jimmy Conrad and Santino Quaranta, hasn't appeared for the national team since last Oct. 11 against Cuba.

The U.S. completes first-round play next Wednesday against Honduras at Washington, D.C., and July 11 against Haiti at Foxborough, Mass.

Tiger's actions speak volumes

WASHINGTON — Tiger Woods may not want to be defended on this issue; he certainly didn't ask to be defended. But he's going to be, in this space anyway, because Jim Brown's recent comments to HBO that Tiger's social contributions are inadequate are way off base, even inaccurate. Just because Brown perhaps isn't aware of the depth and range of Tiger's contributions, or that they differ from his own social agenda doesn't mean Tiger is lacking a social conscience — because he isn't.

Don't get me wrong, I've admired Brown's activism my entire adult life. One of the unforgettable experiences of my life came during the 1992 riots in Los Angeles, when Brown through his determination, concern and sheer force of personality convinced gang members from the rival Crips and Bloods to call a truce to the violence and talk out their differences at Brown's Hollywood home.

But the battles must be fought on different grounds; surely Jim Brown knows this. Tiger has committed millions of dollars, some of the money raised and some of it donated out of his own pocket, to enriching the lives of kids who couldn't possibly find the help elsewhere.

Overwhelmingly, we're talking about children from poor and working-class homes, kids crammed into inadequate housing, sometimes kids whose choices come down to joining a gang or going to the Tiger Woods Learning Center in West Anaheim, Calif.

Totally misguided, Brown said to Bryant Gumbel recently that Tiger is "A monster competitor ... he is a killer. He'll run you over, he'll kick your (butt), but as an individual for social change, or any of that kind of (stuff) ... Terrible. Terrible. Because he can get away with teaching kids to play golf and that's his contribution."

First, that's dead wrong. It's inaccurate. The Tiger

MICHAEL WILBON

Woods Foundation doesn't teach golf. Maybe Brown presumed it does because the Learning Center is attached to the course where Woods grew up playing as a kid.

But it's not a golf academy. Brown should check out the list of courses kids can take there, like engineering, robotics, marine biology.

A kid with a totally different orientation can get into animation and graphic art. There's an editing suite, a music studio, a computer lab for children who otherwise don't have access to computers to do homework. It is technology based, also career and college based. The scope and effectiveness of this learning center ought to be praised, not wrongly dismissed as "teaching kids to play golf?" And the learning center is just one part of Tiger's efforts.

When Earl Woods, Tiger's father, died a few years ago folks who wanted to do something were discouraged from, say, sending flowers and encouraged to make contributions to the Earl Woods Scholars program, so they did ... to the tune of $1 million. Tiger matched that with his own contribution of $1 million. The program has produced 25 scholars, 10 of them from the Washington D.C. area, where Tiger is looking to expand his program. The foundation funds those students for up to four years. All 25 have mentors and internships guaranteed. They attend Georgetown, Spellman, Penn State, UDC, Marymount, the University of Arizona, the University of Idaho.

Jim Brown might want to know they're not on golf scholarships.

This learning center, which opened in 2006, has had somewhere between 20,000 and 25,000 kids come through the doors. There are partnerships with schools that have come to depend greatly on the supplemental help the learning center provides. The one Tiger is trying to build here in Washington can't arrive quickly enough.

Tiger Woods is too sophisticated a man to get into a public back-and-forth with the great Jim Brown. And beyond saying, "I think we've made our impact," Tiger doesn't attempt to specifically defend himself against the criticisms leveled by Brown and others. But I will.

Everybody's method and manner of being socially active is different.

Brown grew up in a world where bigotry was omnipresent for black people.

If Brown wakes up angry every day even now, 50-some years after racial bias kept the Heisman Trophy from him, it would be perfectly understandable.

And it's fine, where I'm concerned, for Brown and the generation of men and women who felt the unrelenting heat of oppression to look at those who are blessed with opportunity now and say, "What are you doing to move the culture along?"

But don't then demean the efforts and the results of a man who is answering the call already, in his mid-30s as Tiger Woods is. Brown should also remember, Tiger plays golf but he didn't grow up some kid who didn't understand the need for a conscience. As Tiger related to Charles Barkley and me for Barkley's book, "Who's Afraid of a Large Black Man?" in 2004, he became aware of his own racial identity on the very first day of school, kindergarten, when a bunch of white sixth graders tied him to a tree, spray-painted "nigger" on him and threw rocks at him when he was the only little brown child in Cypress, Calif. And his dad encountered a whole lot worse than that.

Just as important, Brown has to realize that the expression of social consciousness isn't a matter of people singing the same song. Jim Brown took on the Crips and Bloods, and a lot of other demons. Tiger Woods attacks the problem as he sees fit, through education, which has always been at the root of Brown's preaching anyway. And because men like Brown and Earl Woods fought the toughest, bloodiest battles for decades, Tiger's approach to activism ought to be different.

Plowing the exact same ground would suggest Brown and Earl Woods made no progress, which we know isn't the case. We move on, probe for the newest ways to attack the old problems and new ones, too, using the most advanced methods we can find. People need to know that Tiger Woods' presence here in the D.C. area isn't only about golf. The moment Tiger announced he was hosting a golf tournament, the AT&T National, at Congressional Country Club, I suspected I knew why he wanted it here, specifically.

He could invite large-scale participation of the military community, which is the life Tiger grew up in and includes men and women he genuinely adores. And he could bring the Learning Center concept east, which would benefit tens of thousands of more kids in need. When we talked Tuesday at Congressional about a number of topics, one of the things Tiger spoke of is "a foundation that will be here for the long haul ... but I just want to do it right. We've taken our time, because I want to get it right ... I don't want to make any mistakes."

I asked Tiger if it's possible that a conversation with Jim Brown might be productive, and Tiger answered, "That depends on whether both parties show up open minded."

One would hope that actual facts will open Brown's mind to the efforts of a young man who doesn't share the same personal history, but clearly shares the belief that actions speak louder than words.

Michael Wilbon writes for the Washington Post.

Courteous customers keep express lanes up to speed

DEAR ABBY: Your response to “Frustrated Shopper in Idaho” (April 5) made me very upset. I am a cashier in a local grocery store. I understand a shopper's frustration when she/he gets in the express lane only to find someone with a full cart up ahead. But we cashiers are between a rock and a hard place. If we ask a customer to please go to another lane, the customer will get upset, tell us we're rude and complain to the manager. If we say nothing to avoid upsetting that one customer, then the others waiting in line get angry.

Customers need to be respectful and not assume they're entitled to bring their fully loaded cart into the express lane. It's not the cashier's fault, and we do not need “more training”!

— CHRISTY IN OHIO
DEAR CHRISTY: Mea culpa. I heard from a slew of angry cashiers across the country echoing similar sentiments. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I am a checker, and I'm frequently assigned to the express lane. I was trained very well and usually politely tell customers that it is a “10 items or less” line. However, it is beyond my control when the managers push them down my line to get them out of the store sooner, or when a manager tells me he/she is sending someone down with “a few extra things” without asking for my input. It is neither the customer's fault nor mine. I try to enforce this rule, but not all customers are polite or willing to listen.

DEAR ABBY

— ANNOYED CHECKER
DEAR ABBY: A simple and effective solution to this problem would be to program the express lanes to accept no more than the posted limit for that lane, e.g., 10 items. If businesses can program their systems to accommodate senior discounts, bag rebates, double coupons, buy-one-get-one, etc., surely they can program an express lane limit.

— VIRGINIA SHOPPER
DEAR ABBY: I was a manager for 24 years at a national supermarket chain, and I can answer “Frustrated Shopper.” A cashier would not be fired for enforcing the rules, but because of a high number of customer complaints. Supermarkets want friendly cashiers. It's not the cashier's job to enforce rules; that's the manager's job.

To risk losing customers by embarrassing them is not something most managers are willing to do. Think about it: Who's spending more — the person with a few items or someone with a full cart?

— FORMER MANAGER IN ORLANDO

DEAR ABBY: I'm a checker for a national grocery chain, and I'll share with you a checker's “wish list” for grocery shoppers:

1. If you're shopping with a friend and have more than one order in the cart, please use the regular checkout line. While each order may be less than 15 items, two 10-item orders take more time than one large order, so please be considerate of others. They're in a hurry, too.

2. If you're buying liquor, have your ID, wallet, debit card, cash, etc. on your person, not out in your car.

3. If you have special bagging needs, please use the regular lines. The express lane is not the place for this type of special handling.

4. While you're at the register, please stay off your cell phone. Checkers are people, too, and we may have questions and need your attention. Distracted customers slow us down.

In other words, treat the express lane (and the checker) the way you would like to be treated if you were in a hurry and the person who is standing behind you in line.

— FRUSTRATED CHECKER IN THE USA

IF JULY 2 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You are very likely to develop helpful connections this summer and have plenty of enthusiasm, but your practical experience and expertise need more polish to achieve ambitions. Late October and very early November is the best time to put busi-ness, career and financial plans into motion. But you can also wait until late February and early March to make crucial decisions, because you may be presented with heaven-sent opportunities that solve your problems and needs, and can successfully make major decisions or launch new initiatives.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Even well-intentioned actions could backfire with the object of your desire. Keep everything out in the open and aboveboard today.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Don't be fooled by flattery or by what seems like a great investment. Your hard-earned money is much too precious to squander.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Use your charm to encourage trust. Those who were suspicious or leery earlier this week might be willing to listen to you now.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Birds of a feather flock together. Interconnected people who gather for a common purpose give you the chance to spread your wings.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may think that respect is shown by a romantic prospect who avoids intimacy, but you must admit it: You crave caresses — and more.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The right to come and go freely is only acceptable when there is mutual trust and consideration. Grant you partner the trust you seek.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22):

Don't mistake togetherness for intimacy. Discussion will fare better than passion this weekend. Get to know someone thoroughly first.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Dispel the rumor that you have no practical abilities. You may be needed by loved ones at home. Wait until next week to seal deals.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Draw upon your reserves of stamina to push things into being. Watch out for mix-ups on the phone or a drain on your finances.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You can't please all of the people all of the time. Establish reasonable goals — and beware of your desire for excitement.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Don't give in to an impatient thirst for excitement. If money burns a hole in your pocket, put it in the bank before you lose it.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Take pride in your ability to cope with any upset or contingency. Your celestial conditions are improving by leaps and bounds.

Today is Thursday, July 2, the 183rd day of 2009. There are 182 days left in the year.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Ketchum, Idaho. In 1964, President Lyndon B. Johnson signed into law a sweeping civil rights bill passed by Congress.

In 1909, Shawnee leader Tecumseh began organizing an Indian Confederacy to resist the growing spread of white American settlers.

In 1881, President James A. Garfield was shot by Charles J. Guiteau at the Washington railroad station; Garfield died the following September. (Guiteau was hanged in June 1882.)

In 1926, the United States Army Air Corps was created.

In 1937, aviator Amelia Earhart and navigator Fred Noonan disappeared over the Pacific Ocean while attempting to make the first round-the-world flight along the equator.

In 1961, author Ernest Hemingway shot himself to death at his home in three-day shooting rampage by white supremacist Benjamin Nathaniel Smith that targeted minorities in Illinois and Indiana. (One other person was killed and several wounded before Smith committed suicide.) “Godfather” author Mario Puzo died on Long Island, N.Y., at age 78.

Five years ago: Elijah Brown, 21, described by police as a disgruntled employee, went on a shooting rampage inside a meat-packing plant in Kansas City, Kan., killing five of his co-workers before taking his own life.

One year ago: Colombian military spies tricked leftist rebels into freeing 15 hostages: ex-presidential candidate Ingrid Betancourt, three U.S. military contractors, and 11 Colombian policemen and soldiers. Police in Randolph, Vt., unearthed the body of 12-year-old Brooke Bennett from a makeshift grave, ending a weeklong search. (The girl's uncle, convicted sex offender Michael Jacques, has been charged in the killing.)

THE ACES ON BRIDGE

Bobby Wolff

"Actors must practice restraint, else think what might happen in a love scene."

—Cedric Hardwicke

Against four spades partner leads the heart jack to declarer's king. At trick two, the club six is played to dummy's king, partner following with the five. Do you jump on this trick?

If you win the trick, it looks best to return a second heart to the ace. Declarer next plays three rounds of trump, West's queen winning the third. Partner must play a diamond now, hoping that you have the K-J, in which case you could dislodge dummy's diamond ace, the entry to the long clubs.

However, you can do no better than win the diamond king and exit with a heart, which declarer ruffs. He then draws the last trump and ruffs the clubs good. The diamond ace remains as an entry to dummy; 10 tricks made.

The key to the defense was partner's card at trick two. His play of the club five shows an odd number of clubs, so you know the club suit is distributed 5-3-2-3 around the table. (With 10-8-5-4, for example, he should have played the eight to give you the count as clearly as possible.)

If you allow the club king to win trick two, declarer requires two more entries to dummy, one to set up the clubs and one to enjoy the suit. Since the diamond ace is his only entry, he will have no way to access dummy's winners, assuming best defense. Not capturing honors with honors kills a re-entry within the suit itself and defeats the game.

ANSWER: West's double calls for East to lead his shorter or weaker major and suggests West has a solid major or the equivalent and a side entry. Since whichever major East leads will find you with nothing, are you prepared to sit this one out and risk a sizable penalty? Run to four clubs and live to fight another day.
