Fond memories mark Jerome woman's 105th

By John Plestina Times-News writer

JEROME – Sitting at her older sister's 105th birthday party Wednesday, Erma Wall couldn't help but come up with a horse tale.

Wall recalled how her older sibling - Lela Whiteker - once saved a horse from choking over 80 years ago.

It was one of many fond memories Whiteker's family and friends shared as they honored her with a party at St. Benedicts Family Medical Center long-term care unit in Jerome.

"My dad had just come in from the field. He had unhitched the horses and tied them to a post," said Wall, who was 12 at the time. "A horse named 'Goofy' just reared up in the air and Lela was in the house. She wasn't feeling very good."

Rezone for Shoshone condo project approved

By John Plestina Times-News writer

SHOSHONE – A pro-posed residential development cleared a major hurdle Tuesday as the Shoshone City Council approved the rezoning of 11 lots for multi-family housing.

The requested ordinance to allow two- and four-unit condominium buildings in the proposed North Park Subdivision met no opposition during a public hearing, but council members raised several questions about changes to the proposed development.

Until Tuesday, the proposal had also included a later second phase with single-family homes.

One concern by the council was that the twophase development proposal grew to three phases in its latest iteration.

of Spokane, Wash., told the council she wants to change her development agreement with the city to include a first phase of one four-unit building that would include a sales office the market by preselling units not yet built.

The second phase would be four condominium is assisting with the develbuildings, while a larger opment plan.

single-family section would come in a third phase.

Maher said the proposal developed because the real estate market has changed. The units could sell for between $120,000 and $140,000.

Condominiums are "the only economic scenario that would work for us at this time," she said and asked the council for economic flexibility to make her development feasible.

"We know the demand is gone for $199,000 homes," Maher said. "Otherwise, we have no choice but to wait until the economy turns around."

Councilman Dan Pierson questioned whether the new three-phase proposal would fall outside the existing development plan the city has with Maher.

In early June, the council Developer Laurie Maher extended a development agreement for 60 days. Tuesday, it approved a 90day extension, allowing additional time to change the agreement.

"These are tough economic times. I think Laurie and a model home to test might need more time between phases," said Mike Choat of Galena Engineering of Hailey, who

Jerome County sheriff seeks info on sex offender

The Jerome County Sheriff's Department is seeking information on a registered sex offender who failed to notify the sheriff of a change of address.

A felony warrant has been issued for the arrest of Frank Bedke described as a 5-foot, 10-inch white male weighing 180 pounds with brown hair and green eyes.

Bedke, 33, has two prior arrests for failure to register as a sex offender in Idaho, and was convicted in Cassia County in 1999 for lewd conduct with a minor under 16, according to a Tuesday release.

A felony forgery warrant is also issued for Bedke out of Minidoka County.

Those with information pertaining to Bedke are encouraged to call 644-2700, 324-1911 or contact their local law enforcement agency.

DEQ reminds growers to register before field burning

The Idaho Department of Environmental Quality reminds farmers that they need to register their fields before conducting any crop burning.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency gave Idaho permission to resume crop burning last year after the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals tossed the state's program out in January 2007, according to a DEQ Wednesday release. Southern Idaho farmers received a new set of requirements in the process that put them on par with what their northern counterparts have to follow.

Growers are encouraged to register their fields early to plan for the 30-day processing time. They must also complete field-burning training once every five years and pay a fee of $2 per acre. Training sessions in the Magic Valley are planned for Wednesday at the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare office in Twin Falls, and July 16 at the Minidoka County Extension Office in Rupert.

Burn days are limited to daylight hours only during weekdays - usually 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The Legislature prohibited burning on weekends, holidays and after sunset.

From July 1 police reports: Driving under the influence:

A 26-year-old woman was pulled over for allegedly swerving in Burley.

According to Deputy Brynn Blacker's report, the smell of alcohol was prevalent. The woman said she didn't have her driver's license because it was in her purse, and she left her purse in "some guy's van" at a bar.

"She said she was so drunk she forgot it," the report reads. After nearly falling over during the field-sobriety tests, she was arrested for driving under the influence.

From July 2 police reports:

Burglary:

The woman from the aforementioned DUI arrest reported that her vehicle had been burglarized.

According to the report, she said the last person to drive it was "someone named Shannon," but she didn't know Shannon's last name adding that she was "very intoxicated last night and doesn't remember much."

The items listed as stolen include a pink tank top, pink pants, a pink bathing suit, GED transcripts, $100 cash, and a bottle of mouthwash. Burglary:

A 69-year-old Burley man reported that someone stole his Disabled American Veterans hat, American Legion hat, vehicle registration and insurance card from his vehicle.

The missing items are valued at $12.

The man showed police, according to the report, a partial footprint that was on the driver's seat. No suspects.

Wendell has little crime, so why does it need a curfew?

endell - population 2,418 doesn't have a lot of juvenile crime, nor a lot of kids on the streets at night. So it doesn't need another curfew.

An Idaho appellate court in March struck down the city's previous curfew law, siding with a Wendell boy who had argued that the ordinance under which he was cited in 2008 was unconstitutional. But last week, Police Chief Kirtus Gaston presented a new curfew proposal with language designed to pass judicial muster. The curfew would be in effect from 12:01 a.m. to 5 a.m. and would make exceptions for emergencies, minors accompanied by a parent or guardian, employment, errands or attending official school, religious or recreational activities sponsored by the city, a civic organization or other organization providing adult supervision of children under 18 years.

Curfew exemptions are also made for married or emancipated minors and youth exercising their First Amendment rights to free speech, assembly or practice of religion.

"I'd like to see it (passed) as soon as possible," Gaston said.

We disagree. Unnecessary laws, even those enacted with the best intentions, tend to make folks disrespect the legal authority.

Plus they cost money to enforce – money that Wendell simply doesn't need to spend right now.

According to the Uniform Crime Report for 2008, Wendell ranked 35th out of 63 Idaho cities in serious crimes, and the city's crime rate has declined 39 percent since 2004. Wendell has a lower crime rate than any nearby city except Hagerman.

In 2008, there were just 31 juvenile arrests in Wendell, and only 11 for serious crimes.

Even in Idaho, there are few safer places. The City Council shouldn't pass a new curfew because Wendell doesn't need one.

Our view: More criminal laws don't necessarily make safer communities.

s Sarah Palin the answer the Republican Party is looking for?

Not likely. Palin's abrupt announcement that she's quitting as governor of Alaska may be part of a long-term strategy that leads to the Oval Office. But at the moment, it looks more like the impulsive act of a hot-headed politician who can't abide criticism.

Take Palin at her word: She decided to quit because she didn't think she could get much done for Alaska in her remaining 18 months in office, beset as she was with ethics charges that never seemed to go away.

"My staff and I spend most of our day ... dealing with this stuff instead of progressing our state," she complained.

It's possible that Palin knows something we don't about "this stuff," and that's what spurred her to resign. But even if she doesn't, it's easy to see why being governor wasn't much fun anymore.

Palin's popularity in Alaska has sunk from 93 percent in 2007 to 54 percent in May, still a respectable rating but a huge drop.

She faced a tough fight for re-election in 2010. She had few strong allies among Republicans in the Alaska Legislature after alienating many with her headstrong style. She had few prospects of closing out her term on a wave of landmark achievements that would boost her as a national candidate.

And she had a few laurels to rest on. After two years in office, she had accomplished her three main goals: higher taxes on oil production, legislation authorizing a new natural gas pipeline and ethics reform. The rest of her agenda looked more difficult and less rewarding. She quit, in short, to cut her losses while she could still plausibly claim to be ahead.

"The problem for Palin and her party is that she doesn't have what Republicans need most: an idea."

Palin's main asset, of course, is a base of fervent support among social conservatives who see her as fresh, exciting and embattled - the people who responded to her resignation by sending contributions to her fundraising committee, SarahPAC.

The problem for Palin and her party is that she doesn't have what Republicans need most: an idea.

For the last half-century, the GOP has prided itself on being the "party of ideas," a coalition that constantly invented new ways to apply its basic principles to the nation's problems.

Under George W. Bush, the string of successful ideas ran out. In 2008, it was the Democrats of Barack Obama, not the GOP, who won by proposing a detailed agenda of new policies and new initiatives.

In Congress, a notably uncharismatic collection of Republican leaders continues to reaffirm the ancient tenets of their faith: Government spending is bad, and taxes should be reduced. But that won't add up to a winning national platform unless Obama turns out to be a miserable failure and voters reflexively turn the other way.

Hence the search by many Republicans for an attractive idea or two. In 2000, Bush won votes from independents and centrists by proclaiming himself a "compassionate conservative," a governor who reformed his state's education system even as he kept a close eye on the purse strings.

Palin has been a champion not so much of ideas as of attitudes: anger at the national media, fear of a "big-government takeover," and the charge that unnamed liberals "deride" American ideals. Those aren't ideas; they're slogans conservatives, but it won't attract votes from the 38 percent who call themselves moderates - and who remain the key to any presidential election.

Palin may have the recipe for winning the hearts of the 37 percent of Americans who describe themselves as mcmanus@latimes.com.

Which brings us to Palin's second flaw as a national candidate: She's a polarizer, not a unifier.

Bush won the White House twice by tempering his conservatism just enough to win a hearing from independents. Palin knows no such urge. It is easy to imagine her winning an Iowa caucus, but almost impossible to imagine her winning a primary in New Hampshire or Michigan, let alone a general election in 50 states.

And there's a third flaw. Republicans prize another old-fashioned virtue: steadiness. Palin's abrupt career change has confirmed Republicans' sense that she's not merely a "maverick" but a flake.

For a party working to regain its footing as the champion of conservative ideas in a nation whose electorate will soon be ready to listen, this sled dog won't pull.

Government care poses health hazard to private insurance ost of us are familiar with the old expressions: Look before you leap; a stitch in time saves nine; if it sounds too good to be true, it probably is. These phrases remind us to think before accepting anything as fact. And never have they been more applicable then now, as the Obama administration attempts to re-fashion the healing arts.

Before buying a car, a shopper might be expected to ask people who own the same brand how they like theirs, or at least consult Consumer Reports. Before we buy the biggest transformation of health care in history and its consequences, shouldn't we first look at countries where government makes most health care decisions to see how things are working for them?

Britain's National Health Service was created in 1948. As with America's Medicare, British politicians said the cost would never exceed their projections. But within the first year, according to "The Problems with Socialized Health Care," (http://www.libertvpage.com/issues/healthcare/socialized.html). NHS operating costs "were 52 million pounds higher than original estimates, as Britons saturated the so-called free system."

Canada established a single-payer health system in 1984. To ensure a government monopoly, "Canadian provinces outlawed private health insurance." Last month, the Canadian Supreme Court struck down that law, but the damage will take a long time to repair. British and Canadian newspaper headlines over several years foretell what Americans might face should the Obama administration and a Democratic

their version of socialized medicine.

And make no mistake, it may not start out that way, but with government undercutting private insurance, it will end up putting much, if not most, of the private sector out of business, leaving government as the dominant player – perhaps the only player - deciding who receives care and who does not based on an arbitrary value assigned to each life.

Here is what Britons face: "Kidney Cancer Patients Denied Life-saving Drugs by NHS Rationing Body NICE" (Daily Mail 4-29-09); "Girl. 3. Has Heart Operation Cancelled Three Times Because of Bed Shortage." (Times online 4-23-09); "Our Cancer Shame: Survival Rates Still Lag Behind EU Despite Spending Billions." (Daily Mail 3-20-09); "1,000 Villagers Wait for a Dentist After Just One NHS Practice Opens" (Daily Mail 3-10-09). This may explain the headline, "Number of Children Going to Hospital to Have Teeth Pulled Soars by 66 Percent Since 1997" (Daily Mail 4-12-09).

In Canada, which has far less access to advanced medical technology than the United States, waiting for treatment is also a common occurrence, as reflected in these headlines: "Surgery Postponed Indefinitely for 1,000 Kelowna Patients" (Globe and Mail 4-8-08); "Majority of Ouebec Dentists Quit Health-Care System" (CTV 3-27-08); "Why Ontario Keeps Sending Patients South." (Globe and Mail 2-22-08); and "Will Socialized Medicine in the U.S. Kill Canadians?" (Acton Institute 3-3-08)

What the U.S. faces is what Canadians and Britons already experience. To quote another headline, it is a case of "Dogma Trumps Truth in Health-Care Issues." (Ontario Business News 7-7-05)

The Obama administration is promoting dogma at the expense of truth. If the government effectively runs health care in this country, there will be no turning back, at least not for a generation or more.

Why should government be trusted to put our houses in order when it can't put its own house in order?

Look at the debt being rolled up by the federal and state governments. California is issuing IOU's. Other states are facing similar financial challenges. Do we want government telling us what type and quality of health care we can have? Should government decide whether your grandmother ought to die because her recommended treatment is "too expensive"? Will tolerance for euthanasia follow the acceptance of abortion after another category of humanity is deemed unfit, unwanted and too expensive to maintain?

We'd better think seriously about this before a health care bill is rushed through Congress. Its members will never have to use the new system, but the rest of us will.

THE LIGHTER SIDE OF POLITICS

The irrepressible impulse to create ometime around 35,000 years ago, in what is now Germany, a man or woman sat down and undertook the task of fashioning a flute from a griffon vulture bone.

The flute was recently found. The melody is lost.

But just as archeologists have been able to piece together the eight sections of bone found in a cave, we can piece together at least a little of the story. Stone Age life was hard, all the more so in the overlapping ice age.

Survival was a daily uncertainty. Food had to be gathered, hunted, fished. Farming was 20,000 years in the future. Protection from the weather? Animal skins, caves.

There cannot have been much in the way of leisure. Certainly nothing in life obliged the creation of any word for frivolity. Yet someone took the time and care to hollow that bone and to drill five spaced holes in it so that music could be fashioned.

The body's needs must be met or it will perish. The soul, too, has needs that must be met, lest it wither and our very humanity with it. So instrumental music, quite deliberately wrought, now joins as a contemporary the earliest drawings and paintings that chance has privileged us to see.

Indeed, in the same cave near Ulm where the flute was found, and of the same age, were paintings of animals and the carved figurine of a busty nude.

The findings at Hohle Fels Cave add to humankind's store of its most ancient treasures the famous cave paintings of Chauvet in France. 32,000 years old; the Furmane Cave paintings near Italy's Verona, at least 32,000 years old, some think perhaps 36,000 years old; the pictures of bison and the erotic drawings at Cussac in France's Dordogne Valley, dated 37,000 years old.

These, we now can understand, are root markers of civilization and it is telling that we find them in a time long before humans had puzzled out agriculture or commerce even in their crudest forms, the usual benchmarks for civilization.

Here and there, pockets of Neanderthals still held out. Yet the impulse to create – to paint, to draw, to sculpt, to make music and, if to make music, then surely to dance, too - was so strong that it was asserting itself when no circumstance would seem to have favored it.

Today's anti-tax groups and local school boards to the contrary notwithstanding, our most ancient progenitors did not dismiss the arts as frills, not even in our kind's toughest times.

Apparently there has been something in us from the beginning that has felt compelled to reach through the mundane and feel around for the transcendent.

Transient or enduring, from the moment's solace of a pleasing ditty to a lifetime's afterimage from a painting that remained in mind long after the retina was done with it, we have made our culture from the work of that impulse.

Whatever simple music it was that was played on that bone turned into a flute, and however tentatively it may have been played, in time it became Bach's B-minor Mass, Mozart's Requiem, Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. Maybe the melody wasn't lost after all.

Obama's promise on taxes unrealistic

By Stephen Ohlemacher Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON - President Obama promised to fix health care and trim the federal budget deficit, all anyone but the wealthiest Americans. It's a promise he's already broken and will likely have to break again.

Obama and the Democratic-controlled Congress have already increased tobacco taxes which disproportionately hit the poor - to pay for extending health coverage to 4 million children in working low-income families.

Now, lawmakers are looking for more revenues to help pay for providing medical insurance to millions more who lack it at a projected cost of $1 trillion over the next decade.

The floated proposals include increasing taxes on alcohol, which could raise $62 billion over the next decade, and a new tax on sugary drinks, which could raise $52 billion.

Senate Democrats this week pretty much rejected a proposal by Finance Committee Chairman Max Baucus, D-Mont., to tax health benefits, an idea that Obama repeatedly criticized during the presidential election campaign but has refused to take off the table.

Sen. Chuck Schumer, D-N.Y., said negotiators are still looking for revenue alternatives. Asked during an interview with The Associated Press if they included tax increases on families with incomes less than $250,000 a year, Schumer said, "There are lots of things on the table now."

The health care bill is a long way from Obama's desk, but tax experts say the debate illustrates a stark reality: It is simply implausible for the vast majority of Americans to get a free ride while the nation tackles such an incredibly difficult – and expensive – issue.

"We're all going to have to contribute," said Eugene Steuerle, a former treasury official in the Reagan administration and now vice president of the Peter G. Peterson Foundation.

sive federal budget deficits for the foreseeable future.

"The dilemma is trying to do the new while the old is still unpaid for," Steuerle said.

The federal budget deficit without raising taxes on is projected to hit an unprecedented $1.8 trillion this year – on top of a national debt that has already topped $11 trillion. Obama insists that any bill on health care or climate change not add to the debt.

Obama says much of the $1 trillion needed for his health care overhaul will come from cutting costs. So far, drug companies and hospitals have agreed to provide 10-year savings of $235 billion.

Health care experts say cost cutting alone won't produce enough money to insure the nearly 50 million Americans who lack coverage. Moreover, Congress is obligated to follow budget rules that might not recognize many of the promised savings.

"The administration has an extremely difficult educational problem on its hands," said Henry J. Aaron, a health care expert at the Brookings Institution. "They understand that at some point tax increase are going to be necessary across the board.

"Yes, for the middle class, too;' he added.

Obama made a firm tax pledge during the presidential campaign, repeating it numerous times in the weeks and months leading up to Election Day: no tax increases for individuals making less than $200,000 a year or couples making less than $250,000.

"Not your income tax, not your payroll tax, not your capital gains taxes, not any of your taxes," Obama told a crowd in Dover, N.H., last year.

But less than a month after taking office, Obama signed an expansion of child health care financed by 62cent tax increase on each pack of cigarettes.

Obama also signed an anti-smoking bill in June that grants authority to the Food and Drug Administration to regulate tobacco. To pay for the new program, a fee is being imposed on the industry -

Idaho Statesman, Boise

Tom Luna ... has picked a whale of a top legislative priority for 2010.

(The state superintendent of public instruction) wants to give local districts a fight ing chance to repair aging schools or build new schools. So he will try to persuade lawmakers to rewrite a longdebated ... section of the Idaho Constitution.

The constitution requires a two-thirds majority to pass a school bond issue. Coupled with the Legislature's refusal to put any state dollars directly into school construction ... Idaho is the toughest state in America to build a school.

Luna wants to change that. Not because he's a free spender: Luna's conservatism is pretty much

The scenario isn't hard to imagine.

Suppose some sort of business doesn't like the way it's being treated by the state, so one of its executives decides to contact an influential legislator via e-mail and offer a substantial amount of money to churn out some favorable bills ...

The lawmaker deletes the electronic correspondence and pockets the cash, and pro-business proposals start popping up during the subsequent legislative session.

Since the state law requiring such e-mails to be retained is not clearly defined, the private industry executive is able to manipulate the system and the public is none the wiser.

Don't think such a thing could happen in Idaho?

aligned with many of his fellow Republicans in the Legislature.

But Luna does recognize that fair is fair.

In 2009, legislators ... came up with an election consolidation law that will make voting more convenient - and put an end to the stealth elections school districts scheduled to sidestep the two-thirds hurdle. Districts would quietly run bond issues on odd election days – sometimes in coniunction with popular school events – and try to get out the parent and patron vote.

Starting in 2011, school districts will be able to hold elections only on four designated dates, including primary and general election davs ..

All of this makes the twothirds supermajority requirement more dated than ever ... Luna would require a 60 percent majority, so districts would still need considerable local buy-in ...

(Luna) will need a twothirds majority in both the House and the Senate -ahard sell, particularly in an election year, when legislators are apt to resist anything that even resembles a tax increase. If lawmakers say yes, voters also would have to approve a constitutional amendment.

... If Luna is serious about this, he will have to make an impassioned case to lawmakers, and to Idaho voters. The fact that Luna is broaching this sensitive issue now -16 months before he would stand for re-election himself – is an encouraging sign.

What would happen if a traditional Idaho school constructed a curriculum around the Bible?

The diverse constituencv that inhabits a school district would look skeptically, but not cynically, at the idea. Among them would be non-Christians and non-believers who also pay taxes. Their voices and votes would be heard – at school board and bond elections or even in the courtroom. This dynamic tension helps maintain a healthy balance between church and state.

So what happens if a charter school attempts to do the same thing?

The Nampa Classical Academy opens next fall with more than 550 students. Ninth-graders will be exposed to a history of Western civilization featuring the Bible as a primary text.

Organizers insist they're not mixing religion with public instruction – which would violate Idaho's strict constitutional ban on the practice, not to mention fed-

However sincere they may be, the idea of teaching the Bible as literature and history has been promoted by people who are anything but objective. Charles Seldon and his group, Our Godly American Heritage, are pushing an initiative to allow literary and historical biblical studies in the schools. Idaho Values Alliance Executive Director Bryan Fischer is dismissing criticism of Nampa Classical Academy for "violating the mythical wall of separation . . ."

If enough parents agree that a charter school is an appropriate place to blur the lines between secular and religious instruction while using public dollars – who is to stop them? Not parents whose children inhabit a more pluralistic school setting. They concern themselves with what happens in their own classrooms.

That responsibility falls to the Idaho Public Charter School Commission ...

Montana, Idaho prepare wolf hunts

By Matthew Brown Associated Press writer

BILLINGS, Mont. Montana and Idaho are moving to host the first open gray wolf hunts in the lower 48 states after the animal's removal from the endangered list across much of the Northern Rockies. Montana wildlife commissioners voted Wednesday to let hunters throughout the state shoot 75 wolves, or 15 percent of Montana's population, beginning in mid-September

In Idaho, commissioners meet later this month to set their quota. A prior plan called for hunting almost 250 wolves.

Legal challenges to the hunts are certain as environmentalists argue wolves could again be driven toward extinction.

Experts, however, said wiping out wolves would be difficult. And state wildlife managers said the quotas are crucial to keep the fastbreeding predators in check and limit attacks on domestic sheep and calves.

"We're signaling our commitment to being responsible wildlife managers," said Montana's lead wolf biologist, Carolyn Sime.

Without hunting or another means to manage wolves, she added, "you either eliminate all the wolves or vou eliminate all the livestock."

Gray wolves once ranged from Alaska to Mexico. Hunting, trapping and government-sponsored poisoning wiped out the species across most of the lower 48 states by the 1930s.

Listed as endangered in 1974, wolves did not return America's Northern to Rockies in significant numbers until the mid-1990s. when 66 Canadian wolves were relocated to Idaho and Wyoming.

Last year, when the region's wolves were briefly pulled from the endangered species list, Wyoming let its residents kill a small number in a designated predator zone before the animals were reinstated to the list.

Government wildlife agents and ranchers protecting livestock killed 264 wolves in the Northern Rockies in 2008, including 21 entire packs, according to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Crowley's seeks new tenant to make nostalgic soda fountain thrive rowley's Soda Fountain on Main Avenue in downtown Twin Falls has closed its doors.

But Richard Crowley, the owner of the nostalgic eatery, is hoping it won't be for long.

"It's in transition right now," he said. "We are looking for a new tenant, who would like to keep the soda fountain going."

Crowley's has been an icon of downtown Twin Falls for more than 90 years, but the business has struggled as of late.

Neighboring business owners say there were disagreements between the former manager and the owner of Crowley's. They also say the business was rarely open during peak hours in the evenings and on weekends.

However, most say the business has the potential to be successful again - with the right management.

Crowley said several people have expressed interest in managing the soda fountain, but he said it was difficult to say with a surety if or when it would reopen.

Many economists predict since December 1993. The that consumers will stay cautious in the months ahead, $768.8 billion – was the most boding for a lethargic recovery if the downturn ends later this year as many expect. The Federal Reserve said Wednesday that consumer credit fell at an annual rate of 1.5 percent, or by $3.2 billion, from spend some of that savings." April. Economists expected a deeper cut of $9.5 billion. But the new figures still mark the latest move by consumers to curb borrowing, pay

Microsoft had no immediate comment Wednesday.

A duel between the two technology powerhouses has been steadily escalating in recent years as Google's dominance of the Internet's lucrative search market Microsoft in ways that few other companies can.

Google already has rankled Microsoft by luring some of its top employees and developing an online package of computer programs that provide an alternative to Microsoft's top-selling word processing, spreadsheet and cal-

Suspected U.S. drones kill at least 44 people in Pakistan

By Joshua Partlow and Hag Nawaz Khan The Washington Post

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan -For the second consecutive day, unmanned U.S. spy planes pounded suspected Taliban targets in the South Waziristan region of Pakistan on Wednesday, killing at least 44 people. according to a Pakistani official.

The deadliest of the two strikes targeted a convoy of five vehicles heading toward the Makeen area, thought to be the headquarters of Baitullah Mehsud, a top Taliban commander. DeAlba is big on catchand-release, saying he's not much of a fish eater himself. The only reason he decided to keep the fish he did, he said, was so his visitors could enjoy fresh trout.

Though DeAlba and his group were the only ones fishing the creek at the time, Rick Novacek, director of Twin Falls County Parks and Waterways, said it's an area that gets used quite a bit during summer.

Greg DeAlba, who's only recently taken up fishing, said he's hooked. When he returns to Idaho later this summer, he'd like to bring his grandchildren to the park to fish.

"This is nice," added Greg Ir. "It's definitely relaxing, especially coming from California." The waters there, he said, often become crowded.

Everything you've ever wanted to know about landowner permission hunts uestion: "Now that the big-game regulations are out. I have noticed several new hunts and extra tags. Several of them have notations in the margin labeled as 'landowner permission hunts.' What is a landowner permission hunt, and can I apply for this opportunity?"

Answer: Landowner permission hunts are a special class of big-game hunting opportunity targeted toward resolving agricultural damage by big game in areas that do not contain general hunts.

Listing them as controlled hunts in the biggame brochure is confusing to sportsmen, because hunters cannot apply for these hunts.

Landowner permission hunts are used by big-game managers to directly involve landowners in quickly locating hunters to remove animals once a depredation has been validated by department biologists.

Once depredation has been identified and validated by department staff, they will allocate a portion of the available permits to a landowner or group of landowners. Landowners will designate hunters to participate in resolving the depredation by providing them with a signed department authorization form. Hunters designated by landowners to participate in opportunity for that a landowner permission hunt must take the authorization form to the regional office authorizing the hunt and purchase a controlledhunt permit and big-game tag. Hunters with permits for a landowner permission hunt are restricted to hunt ing only on the private property of the landowner(s) specified in the hunt.

Some landowner permission hunts have the same rules as controlled hunts, such as if you accept the landowner permission hunt, you may not participate in any other hunt for that species.

If the landowner permission hunt has been designated as an extra tag, an animal harvested during the hunt is extra, over and above other big-game hunting species.

Previous attempts to resolve big-game depredations have not always been successful. Landowner permission hunts are an effort to include landowners in solving the depredation problems and speeding up the process of removing animals doing the damage. Also, to those expecting to pick up a landowner permission controlled hunt at regional offices July 15 most of those hunts have not yet been authorized and will not be available that day.

Feds: Desert fish warrants protection

By Susan Montoya Bryan Associated Press writer

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. A fish once found throughout the lower Colorado River basin warrants protection under the Endangered Species Act, but the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service said Tuesday the roundtail chub will have to wait its turn.

The agency said it will add the chub's populations in New Mexico and Arizona to the federal list of candidate species while it works on listing proposals for other species that are at greater risk of extinction.

The decision comes after a six-year legal battle with the Center for Biological Diversity, which had appealed an earlier ruling by the agency that chubs in the lower Colorado River basin didn't warrant protection because they weren't distinct from populations in Colorado, Utah U.S. Fish and and Wyoming.

After studying the fish, the agency determined that chubs in the lower basin were significant and that losing that population would wipe out roughly half of the species' range.

Program to preserve fishing communities PORTLAND, Maine -

Conservation groups and state officials say initiatives to purchase commercial fishing rights and distribute them to local fishermen will help preserve Maine's fishing communities.

The groups are giving recently had been fishing in those fishing rights to Down East and midcoast fishermen for research on fish population, fishing gear and fishing practices.

The Portland Press Herald says the Department of Marine Resources is also developing a permit bank using $1 million in federal money to buy fishing days and then lease them to Maine fishermen who need more time at sea to stay in business.

Galileo is widely recognized as the first person to employ a telescope for astronomical observation. While Galileo rightly deserves a place of honor for his thorough study of a variety of celestial objects. an obscure Englishman actually beat him to the punch in observing the moon.

Thomas Harriot, who accompanied Sir Walter Raleigh on his 1585-86 voyage to Roanoke Island, was a mathematician, translator, astronomer and ethnographer. (Some accounts credit him with introducing the potato to the British Isles.)

In early 1609 he obtained a telescope shortly after its invention by the Dutch lens maker Hans Lippershey, and on July 26 of that year became the first person to draw an astronomical object based on telescopic observation. His crude moon map predated Galileo's first such effort by four months.

Posterity overlooked Harriot because, unlike Galileo, he did not publish his work, despite eventually producing lunar maps that would not be improved upon for a decade.

Harriot's record of the changing appearance of sunspots, beginning in late 1610, also predates

So, as we mark the great achievement of the Apollo 11 crew in this the International Year of Astronomy, celebrating the quadricentennial of the telescope, perhaps it would be appropriate to note the explorations of Thomas Harriot, who took the first quiet steps in preparation for mankind's giant leap onto our neighboring world.

We are a debt relief agency. We help people file for bankruptcy relief under the bankruptcy code.

nswer: The Bankruptcy Abuse Prevention A and Consumer Protection Act of 2005 requires that in order to be a debtor in bankruptcy, an individual must first obtain a "pre bankruptcy credit briefing" from a non-profit credit counseling agency approved for that purpose. Because there are no approved local counseling agencies, the counseling may be obtained by telephone or online. Debtors cannot receive a bankruptcy discharge until they have also completed a course in personal financial management to be taken through one of the approved counseling agencies. There is disagreement among legal scholars and credit experts whether the counseling is actually useful in helping avoid bankruptcy, or whether the requirement wa included in the law merely to create another obstacle for those seeking debt relief through bankruptcy. In my experience, people file bankruptcy only a a last resort, and by the time they reach my office, they are well past the point where credit counseling can help. For my readers who recognize that they are in trouble financially, but wish to avoid a bankruptcy if possible, I suggest they call Consumer Credit Management Services at (208) 733-2227. Consumer Credit ha provided credit counseling and debt management services on a non-profit basis in Twin Falls for around 40 years and has helped many people with their debts.

A new position and new challenges

While voters in May turned down a $15.8 million bond proposal that would have provided a number of building improvements to Jerome High School, Layne said the current $650,000 supplemental levy is integral to the district.

"I really don't know what we would do if we lose the one-year levy," he said.

And while Jerome High School will remain crowded without the improvements planned in the defeated bond, the district can weather lean times without having a load of projects weighing on its budget.

Breath mints not appropriate to treat dry mouth

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband and I have read many times about people suffering from dry mouth. We, too, have this problem, which we think is caused by some of the medications we take.

Somewhere, I read that Tic Tacs are good for this problem, so when I go to bed at night, I place one between my lower gum and cheek. It slowly dissolves during the night and keeps the saliva glands excreting fluid. DEAR READER: I am glad that you have had success with this treatment, but I am not willing to recommend it. Tic Tacs are a candy with high sugar content. By repeatedly placing the sugar in contact with your teeth, you are risking cavities.

I suggest you discontinue the practice and consult your physician or a dentist about more appropriate options to relieve your dry mouth. This may involve a review and change of your current medications both over-the-counter or prescription, toothpastes, mouthwashes or artificial saliva ointments or sprays.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I eat a fairly healthful diet. I'm in pretty darned good shape for an 89-year-old lady but have to admit to having a conversation with myself that goes like this: "For heaven's sake, go ahead and indulge, you could make your grand exit anytime."

I am crazy about Doritos ranch-style chips, and I have them guite often with my before-dinner cocktail. I am easy on salt and never add it to my foods, not even corn on the cob. I know the chips are loaded with salt because I enjoy licking my fingers afterward.

Other than the salt, are Doritos that bad for me when they taste so good?

DEAR READER: You are correct that Doritos ranchstyle chips carry a high concentration of salt (170

Annual Quality Drinking Water Report For 2008 City of Jerome

This report contains very important information about your drinking water.

Este reporter contiene una información muy importante acerca de su agua domestica. Por favor, traduzca ó hable con alguien que entienda este reporte.

We are pleased to present to you this year's Annual Quality Water Report. This report is designed to inform you about the quality water and services we deliver to you every day. Our constant goal is to provide you with a safe and dependable supply of drinking water. We want you to understand the efforts we make to continually improve the water treatment process and protect our water resources. We are committed to ensuring the quality of your water. Our water source is wells. Our wells draw from the Snake River Aquifer.

We have a wellhead protection and a source water protection plan available at our office that provides information about potential sources of contamination.

> We are pleased to report that our drinking water meets federal and state requirements.

If you have any questions about this report or concerning your water utility, please contact Doug Buell at 324-7122. We want our valued customers to be informed about their water utility. If you want to learn more, please attend any of our regularly scheduled council meetings. They are held on the 1st and 3rd Tuesday of every Month at 5:30 PM in the Council chambers located at 100 East Avenue A.

City of Jerome routinely monitors for constituents in your drinking water according to Federal and State laws. This table shows the results of our monitoring for the period of January 1st, 2008 to December 31st, 2008. All drinking water, including bottled drinking water, may be reasonably expected to contain at least small amounts of some constituents. It's important to remember that the presence of these constituents does not necessarily pose a health risk.

Maribelle Taylor Matthews

MURTAUGH – Maribelle Taylor Matthews, 91, passed away Saturday, July 4, 2009, at her home, ending a threeyear-long battle with Alzheimer's disease. The Fourth of July truly was her Independence Day.

Maribelle was born June 6, 1918, in Knox County, Tenn. She was the only daughter of Mary Minerva Harmon and Benjamin Franklin Taylor. Maribelle led a full, vibrant life, and was deeply loved by family and friends. When she was young, her family left Tennessee for the Gallatin Valley in Montana a place that remained out her life. She was a graduate of Belgrade High School.

In 1938, she married John Yasaitis, a pilot who worked Station. Two years later, Maribelle, John and their - on a mountain, tending two babies moved to Seattle, where she received training Agency – a forerunner of the Federal Aviation Agency. took jobs as civil aircraft communicators at the emergency airstrip at Strevell, a long-defunct town near Malta. While in Strevell, their third child was born. When the government closed the airstrip in 1951, she and John were assigned to separate sites, and the marriage later ended.

She continued her work as an aircraft communicator for a short time in Dubois, before being assigned to the Burley Airport. She and her three children moved to Burley in 1953. She loved everything about flying and was just a few hours shy of earning her pilot's license. She could explain any weather phenomenon or cloud formation in the sky. She could identify what kind of plane was flying overhead just by the sound of it. Maribelle took great pride in her position in a time when careers for women were scarce.

Her life as a single mom ended abruptly when Maribelle met her cowboy. married Grant Matthews in February of 1955, barely two months after they met. She continued to work for nine more years, while she and Grant had another litter of kids. She retired from the FAA

Vassily Aksyonov dies at 76; author was stripped of Soviet citizenship for writings

By Adam Bernstein The Washington Post

Vassily Aksyonov, 76, who was one of the most gifted and eminent Russian writers of a generation that emerged in the post-Stalin cultural thaw of the 1960s and who evolved into a dynamic, racy and surreal stylist, died July 6 at a clinic in Moscow after a stroke last year.

Aksyonov was shaped by the paranoia of Stalin's rule. Despite their ardent communism, his parents were sentenced to labor camps, and he was raised in an orphanage for "children of enemies of the state." His mother, Evgenia Ginzburg, later wrote two crushing memoirs of the gulag and pushed her son to become a doctor. He gave up medicine for a thriving, and dangerously controversial, career as a novelist.

Aksyonov spent part of his youth listening to jazz and reading American novels that were to him vivid symbols of the possibility of artistic and spiritual freedom. In his book "The Burn," published in the United States in 1983, he aroused disgust at the highprovided description of a jazz party of not only for his literary outthe late 1950s: "The spirit of put but for his vocal opposi-

Aksyonov sought to channel the disenchantment and disillusion of his generation into books about individual revolt. Pharmacists must dispense Plan B pill, court rules

By Carol J. Williams Los Angeles Times

Pharmacists are obliged to dispense the Plan B pill, even if they are personally opposed to the "morning after" contraceptive on religious grounds, a federal appeals court ruled Wednesday.

In a case that could herald judicial policy across the erroneous finding that the Western states, a supermarket pharmacy owner in Exercise Clause of the Olympia, Wash., failed in a bid to block 2007 changes to pharmacy requiring all Washington pharmacies to stock and dispense the contraceptive.

Government Web sites are operating normally following attack

By Julian E. Barnes and Josh Meyer Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON - Despite a broad and persistent cyber attack that targeted Web sites for the White House, the New York Stock Exchange and The Washington Post, government Web sites were operating normally on Wednesday, officials said.

The attack began Saturday and caused little damage but touched off a debate among experts over whether it represented a mild nuisance or the opening salvo of a potential electronic war.

Federal officials and experts said it would be impossible to determine who was behind the attack, at least for now. But intelligence officials in South Korea, where Web sites also were attacked, reportedly have fingered North Korea.

One senior congressional official briefed on the attacks said U.S. computer hackers than hostile and Department, security officials also consider North Korea a suspect. Police: McNair shot in sleep by girlfriend

By Lucas L. Johnson II Associated Press writer

NASHVILLE. Tenn. Sahel Kazemi was determined to be with her boyfriend, former NFL star Steve McNair - even in death.

As he dozed on a sofa early Saturday, Kazemi shot him in the head, then twice in the chest, then again in the head.

Before shooting herself, the 20-year-old sat next to his body and "tried to stage it so she would fall in his lap," Police Chief Ronal Serpas said Wednesday at a press conference where police confirmed the deaths were a murder-suicide. She did, but her body slid to the floor and ended up at McNair's feet. The gun was found underneath her.

Serpas said police believe McNair was asleep when he was killed.

Interviews with friends revealed that Kazemi "was spinning out of control."

She was making payments on two cars, her rent was doubling and she suspected the married McNair was having a second affair with another young woman.

She told a friend on Friday that "My life is a ball of s-and I should end it," Serpas said.

Police earlier had labeled McNair's death a homicide, but waited for further tests before concluding that she pulled the trigger of a 9 mm semiautomatic pistol in a condominium McNair rented with a friend.

Ratings might be better if they simply played Michael Jackson tribute videos between innings, but the presidents were already booked. You can't move them to the Home Run Derby the night before, because even they must know that has become unwatchable.

The All-Star game isn't what it once was either, despite Bud Selig's effort to make sure it really counts. Yes, home field advantage in the World Series is at stake, but interleague play has taken all the mystery and much of the fun out of the game.

It does, however, signal the traditional middle of what up to now has been an intriguing season - though not always for the right reasons. Although there's another half season vet to be played, it's a good time to look back and find some winners and losers as baseball prepares to take its annual break.

A few highlights, beginning with winners:

• Baseball itself. Faced with the worst economy since the Great Depression the game has managed to survive, if not exactly flourish. Attendance is down in 20 out of 30 markets, but aggressive promotions and pricing have helped trim losses. On an average night nearly a half million people manage to find their way to a major league ballpark to enjoy a game. Despite the aberrations in New York, owners seem to have figured out they need to compete for a shrinking pile of money Americans have set aside for entertainment, something that bodes well for the game in the future. • Juicers. Yes, Alex Rodriguez was forced to admit to things he didn't want to admit to. Yes, Manny Ramirez lost more than $7 million for his enforced summer vacation. But the welcome back both superstars got from steroidweary fans speaks volumes, and there are still 100 or so players who tested positive in 2003 whose names remain secret.

"We do know that she was clearly sending a message during the last five to seven days of her life that things were going bad quickly," Serpas said, though there was no indication she told anyone she planned to harm McNair.

Serpas said detectives learned that Kazemi recently found out about another young woman she thought McNair was romantically involved with and had even followed that woman home, though she did not confront her.

Kazemi's family told reporters that the woman was so confident McNair was divorcing his wife of 12 years that she was preparing to sell her furniture and

• The Los Angeles Dodgers. They're the biggest winner on the field so far. Not only did they get through the Ramirez suspension intact, they are probably going to be a better team because of it. The idea of Joe Torre possibly managing in a World Series against the Yankees in New York makes the second half of their season even more tantalizing.

• Albert Pujols. He was already regarded as one of the best in the game. Now we have to start wondering if he is one of the best ever. Entering the All-Star break, Pujols is leading the National League in home runs and RBI and is tied for second in batting average, giving him a legitimate chance to become the first triple crown winner since Carl Yastrzemski did it 42 years ago. Too bad it has to happen in the steroid era, where the accomplishments of every player automatically fall under suspicion.

And some losers:

• New Yorkers. The new stadium in the Bronx is a bandbox, and the padded $2,500 seats behind home plate an affront to all Americans still lucky enough to be drawing a paycheck. The jury's still out, meanwhile, on the $243 million given to CC Sabathia and A.J. Burnett, and Yankee fans aren't going to tolerate A-Rod hitting .246 forever. The Yankees have played well lately, though, unlike the hapless Mets, who seem determined to celebrate the past in their new ballpark by posing as members of the bumbling 1962 team that lost 120 games.

• Juan Pierre. He started in the Dodger outfield before Ramirez arrived and was the best everyday player on the team when he was gone. His reward was a trip back to the bench. His only consolation is that baseball contracts are guaranteed, and he's making $9 million a vear.

• Toronto Blue Jays. Right now they have a winning record and the best pitcher in the American League. Soon they may have neither. Trapped in a division they can't win, they're open to offers for Roy Halladay, while fans are showing their displeasure by staying away in large numbers.

• Chicago Cubs. Throwing a lot of money at Alfonso Soriano and Carlos Zambrano couldn't get the team past the first round of the playoffs; now, the Cubs are a mediocre team hamstrung by long-term contracts. Things got worse a few days ago when starter Ryan Dempster broke his toe while jumping out of the dugout to celebrate a win and will be out for a month or so. Do the proposed new owners really know what they're getting into?

Probably not, but neither do we. Good or bad, baseball has been throwing us curves for a long time now.

The best news right now is we have another half a season to enjoy it.

STEWART: HE AND BUSCH ON 'SAME PAGE' AFTER WRECK

INDIANAPOLIS - Tony Stewart called his last-lap dust up with Kyle Busch at Daytona International Speedway last weekend "just a part of racing," and Busch apparently agrees.

Stewart said he spoke to Busch on Tuesday and that the two NASCAR stars were on the "same page" following the accident that sent NASCAR's appeal did not Busch to the infield care center and Stewart to Victory Lane in the final moments of the 400-mile race on Saturday night.

Busch took the lead on the Even though Mayfield has next-to-last lap and tried to fend off a hard-charging Stewart. He successfully blocked Stewart once, but when he tried to do it again Stewart hooked Busch's "He's not a danger, and noon to enter his Mayfield right rear fender instead, series of 10to 12-lap sprints.

Stewart, the points leader heading into this week's race in Chicago, said it was important to clear the air with Busch as quickly as possible.

"When something like that happens, you want to make sure that both guys are on the same page with what happened and we definitely were." Stewart said. "I mean. there was no question on either one of our parts of what happened."

Stewart also said Wednesday he is confident Goodyear has solved the tire problems that plagued last year's Allstate 400 race at the Brickyard.

Stewart is among the drivers who have participated in Goodyear's seven test sessions at the track since last year, when severe tire wear turned the race into a - The Associated Press

Mountain West reluctantly agrees to BCS deal

SALT LAKE CITY – After taking its fight to change the Bowl Championships Series to Congress, the Mountain West Conference is reluctantly agreeing to a BCS television deal.

That doesn't mean the conference is finished pushing for a playoff.

University of Utah president Michael Young issued a statement on behalf of the conference Wednesday, one day after he testified before a U.S. Senate subcommittee.

In the statement, Young said the Mountain West felt it had no choice but to sign the agreement with ESPN, which runs through the 2013 season. The Mountain West champion would still not automatically qualify for a spot in one of the top-tier bowls.

"While the Mountain West has expressed serious concerns with the various fundamental flaws in the current BCS system, our various good faith initiatives to generate reform have thus far not been accepted," Young said. "If a conference wishes to compete at the highest levels of college football. and the only postseason system in place for that is the BCS, no one conference can afford to drop out and penalize its football programs and student-athletes."

The other major conferences that make up the BCS, along with Notre Dame, rejected a Mountain West proposal for an eight-team playoff to determine a national champion.

Utah Valley officially Division I

OREM, Utah - Utah Valley has complet ed the jump from junior college athletics to NCAA Division I.

The Wolverines have spent the last six years as an NCAA provisional school, meaning they could compete in Division I but were not eligible for postseason play.

Athletic director Mike Jacobsen learned Tuesday that Utah Valley had been approved by the NCAA to lift the provisional tag.

The school was known as Utah Valley State College and was competing as a junior college when it first applied to the NCAA nine years ago. The school officially became Utah Valley University a year ago and fields teams in 15 NCAA sports.

Former Valley High track star Zandrea Nelson competes for UVU, as will former College of Southern Idaho baseball pitcher

Sam Armstrong and softball catcher Megan Zimmerman next season.

MAGIC VALLEY Boyd sinks hole-in-one

Ron Boyd made a hole-in-one at the annual RMSPGA pro am at the Jerome Country Club on Monday. The ace came on the 169-yard No. 12 hole using a 6-iron and was witnessed by Zach Abels, Gary Cook and John Mauughan.

CRHS holds conditioning camps

TWIN FALLS - Canyon Ridge High School will host speed and conditioning camps for all sports starting Monday, July 27.

There will be four sessions per week for the following two weeks, and they will run from 6 to 8:30 p.m. each Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday those weeks. The cost is $75 per athlete, and the camp is open to any athletes from the Canyon Ridge district. Pre-registration will go through Friday, July 24, but registration will still be taken after this date. The staff will include athletes and coaches who have competed at places such as the University of Hawaii, University of Washington, University of Puget Sound and Montana State University.

Information: CRHS athletic director/head football coach Bill Hicks at 360-490-2980 or Susan at 360-791-5285.

TFPR holding flag football meeting

TWIN FALLS - The City of Twin Falls Parks and Recreation department will hold and organizational meeting for the men's adult flag football league at 6 p.m., next Wednesday at the Parks and Recreation Office at 136 Maxwell Ave.

All teams wishing to participate need to have a representative attend the meeting. Information: 736-2265.

BUILDING A MEAN LAWNMOWER RACING MACHINE

As owner of "Why Not Repair" in Rupert, Joe Phillips' experience working on small engines is an advantage. He has built several lawnmower racers and lets others ride them in competition. While there are about 25 local drivers, only five guys are building all the machines.

The first step to build a racing lawnmower is to strip it down to the frame, removing all unnecessary parts, including the blades. For better handling, it's best to lower the machine and widen the tires.

Next, using the stock engine, install a five- to six-inch pulley on the motor and a four-inch pulley on the transmission (stock pulleys come with three-inch pulley on motor and seven-inch pulley on transmission).

To reach its top speeds, it's necessary to override the mower's governor. From the manufacturer, a normal riding lawnmower is set at around 3,000 rpm. The modified racers are pushed to 5,500 rpm.

"Yeah, it blows 'em up," Phillips admits. "Once in a while we'll break one, but that's part of racing. If you're not breaking them, you're not getting all you can out of them."

Drag racers are much more powerful, as they are fitted with motorcycle or snowmobile engines. Phillips can get his dragster up to 40 mph in just 200 feet.

Phillips builds and sells racers, but he says it's more rewarding for someone to build their own.

"It's a hoot," he says. "It's just fun, the idea of taking a lawnmower that was designed to go six miles an hour and making it go 35 or 40 miles per hour. Then being able to ride it – they're twitchy. They'll dart on you."

NASCAR is a rich man's sport, but lawnmower racing is affordable. Car racing was way too expensive, so I thought this would be

LEGAL NOTICE

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game was informed by the Bureau of Fisheries that weekly angler surveys indicate the nontribal fishery will have harvested approximately 100% of the State's harvest share of adult hatchery Chinook salmon (greater than or equal to 24 inches total length) returning to the South Fork Salmon River by Tuesday July 7, 2009, but that Chinook salmon less than 24 inches total length will remain available for harvest by that date. The Bureau therefore recommends that the salmon fishery on the South Fork Salmon River be closed to the retention of Chinook salmon greater than or equal to 24 inches total length at the end of fishing Tuesday, July 7, 2009 but remain open to the retention of Chinock salmon less than 24 inches total length until the end of fishing Friday, July 10, 2009 when the fishery will be closed to fishing for Chinook salmon.

Pursuant to his authority under Idaho Code Section 36-106(e)(6) (A), the Idaho Department of Fish and Game Director hereby closes the South Fork River to the harvest of Chinook salmon greater than or equal to 24 inches total length effective the end of fishing Tuesday July 7, 2009 and closes the South Fork Salmon River to fishing for Chinook salmon effective Friday, July 10, 2009

Couple's hearts were fonder when distance was greater

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend, "Kent" and I have been together almost three years. It started out as a long-distance relationship, but my children and I have recently moved to his town. When we were long-distance, we'd talk several times a day and say how much we loved each other. Now we don't talk that often except when we fight over stupid things, and the "I love yous" are almost nonexistent. I say it to Kent all the time. During a couple of our fights he actually told me he doesn't love me, and his actions sometimes show me he means it. When I try to discuss it, he says he was just mad and that he really does love me.

Abby, what bothers me is when we have "alone time" the kids are asleep or away Kent would rather watch sports, play on the computer, go out to the movies with his best friend or sleep. When it comes to romance it doesn't happen more than twice a month or unless he's drunk.

When we first got together, Kent wanted to do everything with me. Now I have to fight for us to spend any time at all together. What can I do?

IF JULY 9 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You must be patient this summer even if your ambitions are stirred and you would like to take your business or career to a new level. During the next eight weeks you will find the biggest satisfaction through groups, clubs or friends. Some new doors will open in late September and late October and if you accept the wise advice or opportunities that appear then, you will realize many of your dreams in November. If a relationship is the key question on your mind then wait until next March to make important decisions or plans for the future.

understand how important it is that a person's words and actions match. Kent may tell you he loves you occasionally and under pressure, but his ACTIONS prove otherwise. What you have described is a romance that's going nowhere positive, and if you still have the option, you should pack your bags and go back where you came from.

moved out west to be with her girlfriend, "Leslie."

Kate and Leslie break up every year. Then Kate flies back to visit the family. Everyone tells her not to reconcile with Leslie and to start a life without her. After a few weeks, Kate goes back, gets back together with Leslie, and the cycle starts all over again.

It's always the same story: Leslie initiates the breakup. Kate gets lonely and calls us for comfort at all hours of the night because she doesn't work a "normal" job, and it's still early for her. My wife and I both work and we have to get up very early.

I have told my wife that Kate needs to break this repeating cycle. I want to speak up but don't think it's my place as a non-blood relative. Is there anything anyone can do to get through to her that what she's doing is not only hurting her, but other family members?

 SLEEP-DEPRIVED IN SPRINGFIELD, VA. DEAR SLEEP-

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your shrewd maneuvering

You may be presented with the option to act with cool professionalism or warm friendliness.

> Five years ago: A Senate Committee Intelligence report concluded the CIA had provided unfounded assessments of the threat posed by Iraq that the Bush administration had relied on to justify going to war. The International Court of Justice ruled that Israel's planned security barrier in the West Bank violated international law. Paul Klebnikov, the American editor of Forbes magazine's Russian edition, was gunned down near his Moscow office. Actress Isabel Sanford died in Los Angeles at age 86.

One year ago: Prosecutors cleared JonBenet Ramsey's parents and brother in the 1996 killing of the 6-yearold beauty queen in Boulder, Colo. Massachusetts Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, battling a brain tumor, walked into the Senate to cast a dramatic vote in favor of longstalled Medicare legislation. Iran test-fired nine missiles, including ones capable of hitting Israel. Gunmen stormed a guard post at the U.S. consulate in Istanbul, touching off a firefight that killed three police officers and three assailants.

0 THE ACES ON BE

"Healing is a matter of time, but it is sometimes also a matter of opportunity."

Hippocrates

Today's heart game occurred during a recent Women's Trials. In one room West started with a top diamond. Her partner (using count signals) played the seven and declarer the queen. Since declarer would have been perfectly capable of dropping the queen from Q-J-x, West still did not know what to do, so played a second diamond in the hope of giving her partner a ruff.

This gave declarer a chance to shine. After ruffing, she played the heart ace, a heart to the dummy, ruffed dummy's last diamond, and played the club queen, covered by the king and ace. Now, knowing the complete distribution of both defenders' hands, she led the club nine. East was forced to win the trick and broach spades, allowing declarer to make a trick with her jack. Even if West had been able to win, the best she could have done was to switch to a spade. Declarer would have ducked in dummy, and East would have been endplayed to give South a second spade trick.

In the other room West chose to lead her singleton spade at trick one. While this could easily have been wrong, she thought that the circumstances for giving her partner a diamond ruff were unlikely and that leaving her diamonds intact would give her more options later on. Declarer now would have needed to read the position very accurately to make her game, and did not do so.

ANSWER: Although you may be worried that you will find a dummy with only three-card support for your clubs, it looks right to bid three clubs now. You have a decent hand, a decent suit and no great defense to either diamonds or spades, so get into the auction while you can.
