Long-ignored transmission project gets new life

Southwest Intertie could run through Magic Valley by 2011

SANDY SALAS/Times-News; Source: Great Basin Transmission LLC

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

A high-voltage transmission-line project first proposed in the early 1990s is once again moving forward, this time propelled by a Missouri company.

Idaho Power Co. first acquired the rights-of-way for the Southwest Intertie Project about 15 years ago, and the U.S. Bureau of Land Management performed an environmental study of its route at the time. But the project was shelved until 2005, when Great Basin Transmission LLC — an affiliate of LS Power Development — picked up the rights from the Idaho utility.

Now, the project is on the edge of becoming reality. The 500-kilovolt line would run more than 500 miles from the Midpoint Substation — near Shoshone — to Las Vegas. Construction could start on its southern half this year, and the segment that includes Idaho could be operational by 2011.

Great Basin is gathering bids for space on the future lines and arranging funding to begin work on the project. But the company said Thursday that it may start construction before completing the bid negotiations through a partnership with Western Area Power Administration and funding from this spring's economic stimulus act.

The project would be Nevada's first major north-south power transmission line and primarily would handle energy from new renewable-energy projects, said Mark Milburn, assistant vice president of LS Power and the Intertie's project manager. But it will also provide additional reliable transmission infrastructure for the West, he said, as well as construction jobs and tax revenues for local government.

"We equate more transmission to more supply to better electricity costs," he said.

The Intertie would also link to another proposed transmission project — Gateway West, expected to stretch 1,150 miles across southern Idaho and Wyoming. The Nevada project would essentially provide the Gateway segment from the Midpoint station south to a proposed station in Twin Falls County called Cedar Hill, Milburn said — though Idaho Power may decide another line is needed in the same area. A separate Great Basin project would also connect the Shoshone power station to wind farms in Wyoming, following Gateway's northern route.

Dispute laid to rest

Sheriff: No crime found at Murtaugh cemetery

By Jared S. Hopkins
Times-News writer

The Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office has closed its investigation of alleged desecration of the Artesian City Cemetery near Murtaugh, and County Prosecutor Grant Loebs will file no criminal charges.

The Sheriff's Office completed the nearly-three month investigation on June 29. On Friday, deputies cleaned up the area because weeds had grown back, and replaced a headstone that had been removed as evidence. A rededication ceremony is set for 10:30 a.m. today.

The investigation began in response to complaints that graves were disturbed when trees and weeds were removed from the historic site. Deputies also wanted to determine whether the landscaping was initiated by Murtaugh Mayor Dee Hunsaker or farmer Darrell Funk, who did the work.

They determined that one headstone did sustain some "fresh" scratches but there was no criminal intent by Funk or Hundaker.

"I don't think there is a crime there," Loebs said. "I think it was a whole host of misunderstandings and neglect of years all coming to head in one thing."

Capt. Don Newman, who's been leading the investigation, plans to meet with all the stakeholders in the next few weeks to determine how the cemetery will be maintained in the future.

The old burial ground was long believed to be owned by the city of Murtaugh, but last month officials said records show the parcel belongs to the Coiners, a longtime farming family in the Magic Valley. The city no longer wants the land and neither does Chuck Coiner, a state senator who said he wasn't aware his family owned it. "All we're trying to do at this point is make it right," said Twin Falls County Sheriff Tom Carter.

"Somebody needs to take responsibility and try to get this cemetery back into some kind of state of dignity. And, as it turns out, we're the only ones who care."

Alleged rape victim takes stand

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

A woman clad in men's clothes took the stand Friday in a Twin Falls courtroom to say she is a lesbian who was raped in May by a man she has known for two years.

"I said 'no,'" the woman recounted. "I got raped ... Forced against my will to have sex."

Authorities say in court papers that Marty Wade Stone, 37, of Buhl, raped the woman after she went with him to his home to retrieve some darts. Magistrate Judge Howard Smyser bound the case over to district court.

The woman's sexual preference has become a factor in the case because she told authorities she has been a lesbian since she was in the sixth grade and never would have consented to sex with a man.

Two sheriff's employees face investigations

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

Two Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office employees are facing allegations from city and state police involving off-duty inattentive driving and police impersonation.

Idaho State Police said Friday that an off-duty Twin Falls County Jail deputy pulling a trailered boat with a personal vehicle ran a stop sign and collided with a bicyclist Wednesday at the intersection of 3500 East Road and Falls Avenue.

The jailer, David Hartgrave, is currently on duty as normal, Sheriff's Capt. Tim Miller said Friday.

The police report indicates that the deputy was at fault, said Jerome-based ISP Sgt. Kevin

Idaho lawmakers want money for child immunization

BOISE (AP) — A joint legislative task force has voted unanimously to ask Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter to shift Idaho Department of Health and Welfare funds to help pay for child immunizations in the state.

The lawmakers voted Thursday to call for reversing budget cuts of $2.1 million to restore the state's child immunization program at least through the rest of this year.

"I'm already getting calls from parents," Sen. Tim Corder, R-Mountain Home, told The Spokesman-Review. "We already have a number of young parents who are planning not to immunize because they don't have the money. We really need to do something about that."

Idaho had covered the costs of vaccinations for every child. That program ended amid statewide budget cuts on July 1.

Now, only kids who are uninsured, underinsured or who qualify for Medicaid are eligible for free vaccines. The average cost to immunize a child up to age 18 is $4,300 for diseases such as measles and polio.

The National Immunization Survey in 2007-08 found Idaho's overall child immunization rate was 57.6 percent, well below the national average of 77.2 percent.

Unlike Gateway West, the Intertie's route was largely secured in the 1990s. But Magic Valley residents back then had many of the same concerns they now voice about high-voltage lines, including whether they had any effect on human health.

Great Basin technically has the rights-of-way it needs to proceed, but is still working with landowners to tweak the established route, Milburn said. Among the changes will likely be a detour around the Minidoka National Historic Site.

Wendy Janssen, the site's National Park Service superintendent, said she met twice this spring with developers and was told they are looking for alternate routes through the area. She's concerned not only about the effects of the lines within the site's boundaries, but also just outside of that area where many historic structures and cultural resources still exist. At the same time, she also wants to work with the farmers who live next to the site.

Though Janssen said the 1994 BLM study is now "outdated," Milburn said his company doesn't expect another to be needed. He's very interested in working with NPS and others to address remaining route concerns, he said.

"We're going to be neighbors there for a long time," Milburn said. "We want to participate in the preservation of the site."

Cemetery

But Carter said his office's work was a one-time deal to prepare the land for today's ceremony.

In cleaning up the area last week, deputies located an additional headstone after digging through dirt and branches. Newman said all headstones are now accounted for.

"Our contention and our desire is to get this cemetery addressed and handled appropriately by the people that need to be involved with its restoration or getting back to some sort of resemblance to what it was," Newman said.

He said Funk appears to have been motivated by a desire to clean up the area, not by any benefit to his adjacent farm.

Funk declined comment Friday but in a three-page statement to deputies he said he wanted to help Boy Scouts maintain the cemetery.

Newman said the cemetery was a popular hunting area and was the scene of debauchery by Murtaugh kids for years while maintenance and upkeep was ignored by the community.

"I'm not saying what Darrell Funk did is right, but I don't think the intent to desecrate the cemetery was anything he was considering when he did what he did," Newman said.

Mychel Matthews, the most vocal resident who early on was critical of Funk, said she's comfortable with the decision. "Our main goal was the restoration and not necessarily prosecution," she said.

Coiner said his family isn't sure what to do with the land but prefers a transfer to some public entity or historical commission.

Sheriff

Haight, stressing his agency's investigation is not yet finished.

No charges or citations for the Wednesday collision have been issued against Hartgrave, according to online court records.

The bicyclist, Gary Flora, of Twin Falls, was wearing a helmet and was transported to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center, where he is listed in good condition. He suffered a broken nose; broken ribs; road rash and a collapsed lung, said Haight. Flora has not been charged or cited in connection with the crash, online court records show.

Another sheriff's office employee, maintenance man Dennis L. Anderson, has been charged with a felony — unlawfully exercising the function of a police officer. He was arraigned Friday in Twin Falls 5th District Court.

Anderson, 52, was placed on administrative leave this week. He has been a civilian employee of the office for about four months, Miller said.

Anderson allegedly went to a family's home on the 1000 block of Starlight Loop on July 1, claiming to be an off-duty police officer and threatening to take a woman and her son to jail, according to court records.

The mother, according to court records, told city police that Anderson flashed "an employee ID" card and stated "I'm a police officer and I work for the sheriff's department ... I want all your information so I can throw you all in jail."

The woman told city police that she told Anderson to get off her property, but Anderson told her "I'm law enforcement and I can do whatever I want and go wherever I want."

Anderson started snapping photographs of the family's vehicles, and the family called police, according to court records.

Anderson allegedly left the family's property and returned, but before leaving a second time he allegedly said "I'm going to take care of you guys because you're a bunch of Mexicans," court records show.

City police went to Anderson's home in the 1000 block of North College Road, where Anderson allegedly told them he was tired of children riding a mini-bike up and down the road, and that he had warned them to stop before going to the home on Starlight Loop.

Anderson told police he used a sheriff's department notepad and camera to photograph the family's vehicles and to record license plate numbers, court records show.

Anderson allegedly told city police that he told the woman "you don't understand where I work," and then he flashed his county employee identification card to "show her who I am and who I work for," according to court records.

City police say Anderson told them he works maintenance for the sheriff's office and he allegedly went to the home himself rather than calling police because "of the kids' attitude and his bad attitude towards me."

An attempt to reach Anderson at a phone number listed for him in court records was unsuccessful on Friday.

Andrea Jackson may be reached at ajackson@gmagicvalley.com or 735-3380.

Stone denied the allegations when confronted by police and allegedly said he had consensual sex with the woman after she initiated the contact, according to court records.

The woman testified Friday that she has a female partner, who also testified that the woman returned from Stone's house in tears after the alleged rape.

Asked why the woman didn't play darts that night, she said "because I got raped."

"He (Stone) asked me if I would go with him," the victim said, adding she had been drinking beer at another home with Stone and friends before leaving with him.

"I tried to head butt (and) scratch," she said in describing attempts to stop the alleged rape.

Police, however, did not note any injuries or bruising to either Stone or the victim after they met her at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center.

The woman testified she consumed beer before Stone raped her and also said she is on medication for depression, seizures and other medical problems. Stone's lawyer argued Friday that those issues raise questions about the victim's ability to reflect on the alleged rape.

The victim testified Friday that she told Stone about her sexual preference and relationship status before the rape.

In other court news, a separate rape case stalled Friday in Smyser's courtroom.

The rape charge against Timothy Campeau, 23, was re-filed two months after prosecutors had dismissed it without providing a reason.

On Friday, a preliminary hearing in the case was postponed because Campeau's lawyer, Keith Roark, had asked for more time to examine information about the case given to him by prosecutors late Thursday. Roark said the new information, which Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loeb declined to discuss Thursday, sheds "new light on this case."

Deputy Twin Falls County Prosecutor Julie Sturgill asked Smyser to proceed with the hearing anyway because the victim had traveled from Washington for the proceeding.

But Smyser ruled that Campeau's rights outweighed inconvenience to the victim and rescheduled the hearing.

Vaccine

Otter would have to approve shifting money from other Department of Health and Welfare programs for immunization. The task force is sending him a letter asking him to make that move.

Otter's office said the governor wouldn't comment until he receives the letter.

Even if Otter approves the change, lawmakers will have to find more money for Health and Welfare to keep the immunizations going past 2009.

"I believe there's actual evidence that the lack of immunization actually costs us more," said Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert.

Idaho health officials say another problem is that some Idaho residents distrust immunizations, and that younger parents haven't seen the diseases the shots prevent.

"People don't think these diseases exist anymore," said pediatrician Stephen Ryter, medical director of Blue Cross of Idaho.

He added, "I've had a number of my patients die of meningitis."

Gridley residents still have few answers for algae issue

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

HAGERMAN — The good news is that the algae and the plants got a late start this year.

High flood-control flows in the Snake River this spring washed the shore and the riverbed clean near Gridley Island, just south of Hagerman. The massive sprawl of plant matter and debris that clogged the north bank of the river last summer has dwindled away.

But a thin band returned over the last couple of weeks. And P.J. Byrne, who rents one of the homes along the scenic stretch of river, fears the debris could rebuild itself.

Magicvalley.com

The plant matter has appeared off and on for years. But one year after one of its most impressive appearances, some residents of the island — actually a peninsula — say they'd still like help finding a permanent solution.

Like last year, the problem isn't with the algae floating on top of the water — private-property owners are allowed to remove floating debris. But the plants growing up from the riverbed and clogging boat docks and the river's edge aren't as easily taken care of.

Local, state and federal agencies told the Times-News last year that they either didn't have jurisdiction or weren't sure how to help residents address the problem. Many said the work was in the landowners' hands. Gooding County officials said they were advised they'd have to clear significant regulatory hurdles to spray the plants or drag them out. And the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality did locate a contractor who could break up the plant debris, but some residents balked at the price tag.

On Thursday, Byrne said he's reluctant to do more to clean out the river because he believes the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers will fine him for the work. At the same time, he argued, if an agency can levy a fine, that agency should be working itself to fix the problem.

"How could they fine me for something if they're not responsible?" he asked.

A few houses upriver, Bobbie Duke said she believes Gooding County should take care of the issue. While the plants haven't quite made their way as far as her home this year, she said, more mosquitos have shown up again and made it hard for her to enjoy her back porch at night.

"Nobody accepts responsibility for it," she said. It's easy to see the underwater plants invading Bob Whipkey's dock, because the algae on the surface has been kept away. Whipkey said health problems make it hard for him to get in and out of boats. But he used to be able to keep his dock clean, he said, and never ran into problems with the Corps.

While no one seems happy that the plants keep coming back, not all of the island's residents agree with Byrne's aggressive approach to solving the problem. Charlie Crego, while pointing out that Byrne doesn't speak for the entire island, said it's up to each landowner to try to keep the plants and algae away and noted how hard it could be to permanently solve the problem.

"It won't go away until the fish farms and the farmers go away," he said.

House passes Gooding wall funding

Idaho Congressman Mike Simpson, a member of the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Energy and Water Development, announced Friday the inclusion of $100,000 to initiate improvements to a wall channeling the Little Wood River through Gooding, as part of legislation funding the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers.

Simpson in a written statement said he sought the funding in response to a request from the city of Gooding.

"My staff and I have visited Gooding on a number of occasions and seen firsthand the condition of the River Wall and the threat it poses to human safety and adjacent property owners," Simpson said in the release.

"The city of Gooding has been hoping for this opportunity to begin work on the River Wall for many years. I am very excited that the funding process has been initiated," Gooding Mayor Duke Morton said in the release.

Approximately 1.5 miles of the Little Wood River runs through Gooding, according to city officials. A rock wall, built in the 1930s and 1940s to protect the city from flooding, has deteriorated at an increasing rate, the release said.

The project will remove and replace the existing rock wall and the boxed culverts that severely restrict the stream channel flow, according to the release.

The funding was included in the Fiscal Year 2010 Energy and Water Development Appropriations bill. The bill funds programs within the U.S. Department of Energy, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation, and a number of smaller independent agencies, the release stated.

The bill now awaits action in the Senate.

Minidoka Co. schools re-elect Duncan as chairman

The newly reorganized Minidoka County School District Board of Trustees looks much like it did a year ago.

The five-member board re-elected Brian Duncan as its chairman, Doyle Price as the vice chairman, Michelle DeLuna as the treasurer and Patricia Knoblauch as board clerk Wednesday during the district's monthly meeting.

Re-elected board members Duncan and George MacDonald were also sworn into office.

The board members voted to move the monthly board meeting to the third Monday of each month, except for the March meeting, which falls during spring break.

That meeting will be held on March 11.

Three Creek area still seeking cell phone coverage

By Kimberly Williams-Brackett
Times-News correspondent

ROGERSON — The Three Creek Highway District is spearheading a project to bring cell phone coverage in the remote area in southern Twin Falls and Owyhee counties.

District Road Foreman Harlan Mink said Twin Falls-based White Cloud Communications Inc. has recommended a number of rugged hybrid radios and phones that would be practical for operation in the isolated area.

If enough interest is shown and a grant is funded for the project, Mink said, a tower could be built on Elk Mountain. He said interest may expand beyond Three Creek residents to the U.S. Bureau of Land Management.

Mink said the district still doesn't know what the cost associated with bringing cell phone service and possibly wireless broadband Internet access to infrastructure-starved Three Creek would be.

On an unrelated issue, the highway district will post notices informing it doesn't maintain any roads, structures or bridges in Murphy Hot Springs and, in accordance with Idaho law, is not liable for any injury or damage resulting in the condition of the road.

Mink said he meets with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to examine an area where the east and west forks of the Jarbidge River are eroding into Jarbidge Road, but are also habitat of threatened bull trout.

The district also approved a resolution to manage the traffic route more effectively on roads on the Inside Desert.

"It will provide better access for firefighters," said Mink.

The district maintains 250.6 total miles of road, only 20 of which are paved. There are 187.1 miles of improved roads which are graded and drained according to state standards, and 63.5 miles of unimproved, "two-track" roads.

Law & Disorder...

... in Cassia County

From July 4 police reports:

Domestic battery, attempted strangulation, resisting/obstructing officers:

Police responded to a Burley residence about a domestic argument. The occupants of an apartment were questioned about the loud argument but William Arend, 40, according to Deputy Shannon Taylor's report, said, "he was having problems with the air conditioner and was yelling at it as he worked on it."

His wife, 33, and their infant son were also in the apartment. The woman denied that there was a problem, but according to the report, she had red marks and scratch marks on her neck, as well as a bloody mark near her jaw. She told police that she and her husband were "wrestling" in the living room, and he "began 'hugging' her tightly around her neck with his arms. (The woman) said she also 'hugged' William," the report reads.

Arend, according to the report, had blood on both of his hands, which he attributed to air-conditioner repair. As Taylor attempted to arrest him, Arend allegedly "spun away."

He was eventually placed in handcuffs and charged with felony domestic battery in the presence of a child, attempted strangulation, and resisting/obstructing officers. Arend, according to the report, was later found to have had cuts on his chest, in addition to his hands, ear and left calf.

Later, his wife was asked if she had protected herself against her husband. "She told me she did not need to protect herself," the report reads. She was cited with misdemeanor domestic battery.

Fire protection agreement ahead for Jerome Fairgrounds

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

JEROME — A verbal agreement has been reached to resolve the Jerome Fire Department's concerns about potential protection problems stemming from low water pressure at the Jerome County Fairgrounds.

Jerome city, county and fair board officials discussed this week a new prefabricated barn that won't be assembled in time for the Jerome County Fair in early August due to what county officials called a slow Jerome city inspection process.

County Commission Chairman Charlie Howell said the unassembled metal building has been at the fairgrounds awaiting a building permit for about three weeks. He said the county had waited about two weeks for an inspection by the city fire department, one of the necessary components for gaining a building permit.

City Administrator Ben Marchant said the city would not issue a building permit based on the lack of adequate water pressure at the site.

"The more global concern is that AmeriGas has 45,000 gallons of propane across the road from the fairgrounds," he said. "The city's only concern is protecting the public and the facilities from a fire."

Marchant suggested that tapping into another part of the city's water system could resolve the issue.

"The city is very open to a plan to resolve this issue and provide for more fire suppression," he said.

Following a fair board meeting Tuesday night, the entities moved closer to a possible solution involving Marchant's suggestion, with the city providing manpower and the county paying for materials, Howell said.

The Fair Board tabled assembling the new building until after the fair due to time constraints.

"It was probably stupid on my part. It would've been really funny if you hadn't been there."
—Twin Falls County Commissioner Tom Mikesell regarding his joke bid on a used SIRCOMM vehicle

Taxpayers don't get the joke, Commissioner Mikesell

JEERS: To Twin Falls County Commissioner Tom Mikesell for an ill-considered joke:

Bidding to buy a truck from a public agency he helps oversee, the Southern Idaho Regional Communications Center.

Under Idaho law, it's illegal for SIRCOMM to sell a surplus vehicle to its own governing board chairman.

It would have been a sweet deal for Mikesell, who offered $2,250 for a vehicle valued at $8,000 after seeing that no other bids were tendered by the deadline. Cooler heads on the SIRCOMM board instead voted to negotiate a sale to Jerome County, which dropped a late bid.

Mikesell offers multiple explanations for his dumb-founding actions.

"I could've left it (the bid envelope) empty had I thought the press was going to get there and make something about it," the three-term Twin Falls Republican said. "It was probably stupid on my part. It would've been really funny if you hadn't been there."

Then he said he was just trying to give the new SIRCOMM director a shot of self-esteem. Come again?

Regardless of his motives, Mikesell's odd behavior doesn't inspire confidence in an elected official who should know better.

CHEERS: To the Minidoka Memorial Hospital board of directors, for testing the waters about a possible switch to a not-for-profit entity.

The Magic Valley's only remaining county-owned hospital plans a $6 million upgrade that could be grounded by lack of support from lenders unless the board takes action, perhaps converting to 501(c)3 non-profit status.

The sour economy isn't the only obstacle to expansion. In 2006, the Idaho Supreme Court ruled that cities and counties can't issue bonds to buy equipment or build infrastructure or city and county buildings without two-thirds voter approval. There are exceptions for emergencies such as an imminent health and safety hazard or legal obligations.

The decision applies to county hospitals because they have taxing authority. MMH would spend revenues generated by hospital operations to pay off bonds used to finance construction.

An alternative would be for Minidoka County to stay in the hospital business and ask for judicial confirmation of a financing plan. Or it could ask the Legislature to loosen restrictions on public entities incurring debt for "ordinary and necessary" expenses. State Rep. Fred Wood, R-Burley, is considering legislation to do that.

The only other option would be for the county go to the voters to finance construction. That would require two-thirds approval.

Upgrading is a matter of survival for the 25-bed MMH. Good for the hospital board for bringing the public into the loop.

JEERS: To the Idaho Legislature, for insisting the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare charge "premiums" to the families of disabled children who receive government-covered health care under a special program.

That will force many families to choose between medical care and other bills.

About 2,100 Idaho kids are on the Katie Beckett program, which costs $1,400 per child each month.

The federal government picks up most of the tab; the state pays between $7 million and $11 million.

The change would charge families earning more than 150 percent of the federal poverty level a premium of $15 per child. Families earning between 185 percent and 300 percent of the federal poverty level would pay between about $85 and $137 a month per family and those making more than 300 percent of the federal poverty level would be billed for 4.5 percent of gross income.

Other programs administered by DHW already have premiums, including the Children's Health Insurance Premium and programs for workers with disabilities, older adults and adults with disabilities. Requiring copayments is good public policy — but not if they price Medicaid recipients out of the health care they need.

Obama and company out to destroy country

Wake up, America, before it's too late. We are under siege from our own president and he and his cronies are out to destroy our great country. This appeal is for all Americans, not just Republicans and conservatives but for level-headed Democrats and liberals as well. Our president is creating debt at such a fast rate that we will not be able to sustain the burden it will place on all of us.

At this point in time, we are already paying $1 million a day in interest only to pay down the debt and that will be going up as he continues to spend more on all the programs that he wants to put in place. Also the president has created a new branch of government that only he controls with no interference from anyone else and that is his 32 czars. He and only he appointed these people and they answer only to him. They were never vetted and Congress never had a word to say about it. Let me ask you who is going to pay for all this added burden. They will need offices and staff and cars and salaries. So how much is this going to cost? Why do we have a Congress if you have all these czars?

Health care reform as he wants it will bury this country with a trillion more dollars of debt and it goes on and on. He has spent more time on Air Force One than he has in the White House and he has asked us to conserve while he and his wife and kids are all over the world on shopping sprees and visiting other countries at taxpayers' expense.

I say to you, my fellow Americans, hold on to your wallets because taxes are going up big time, which he promised they would not, and we will see our income dwindle even more and more people will be out of work. He has made us weak around the world and he wants to lead us into socialism. Make your voices heard; contact your congressmen and senators and let them know how you feel before it's too late.

God bless America.

Can't live with 'em? Can't live without 'em

Can't stand your boring husband? Thinking of calling it quits? Well, you should have mustered the nerve to leave him well before this economic crisis. Now you might not be able to afford to live without him, literally.

It's a well-known fact that financial woes are the biggest cause of marital spats. With the economy the way it is, you'd expect many husbands and wives to be at each other's throats. But the conventional wisdom is wrong. This recession is so bad that you can count divorce lawyers among those professions that have taken a hit.

That's good news, right? People are now forced to stay together and work things out. Well, not if history tells us anything. The Depression also saw a decline in the divorce rate, but, according to marriage historian Stephanie Coontz, incidents of domestic violence and outright family desertion went up.

In any case, despite the fact that divorce can cause all sorts of emotional and financial turmoil, its statistical decline isn't as positive a social indicator as one might think. As economist David Friedman has written, divorce is actually a reflection of "an increase in the range of choice available to individuals," and a high divorce rate and the general weakening of marriage "are bad things only to the extent that they reflect a failure of our institutions and expectations to adjust completely to new circumstances."

In other words, in more traditional days, in which social changes occurred more slowly, we all shared a general idea as to what marriage was and how it functioned. From an economic standpoint, we all understood how the marital division of labor worked. But in a rapidly changing society, it's harder to figure out what kind of arrangement we should make with our spouses. Such changes as the entrance of large numbers of women into the workplace and the mechanization or outsourcing of household duties (from washing clothes to curing bacon) undermined that tradition.

As the basic marriage deal has shifted, our notions and ideals haven't shifted with it, and the disconnect explains the astronomical divorce rate in contemporary America. We haven't figured out a new marriage model that takes into account the greater range of choices for both women and men.

This fits right into the fact that we're divorcing less in hard times. In the context of this recession, we have fewer choices, and fewer choices means we're back to a good fit with the marriage model of old. Still — and a little paradoxically — the fact that there are untraditional marriages may also be helping husbands and wives withstand some of the emotional and financial stress of economic hard times. During the Depression, the ego blow to a man who lost his job caused marital problems. Today, if a man loses his job — and his wife is the breadwinner — it's less likely to create as much unhappiness.

If it's distasteful to you to look at marriage in economic terms, then it might be easier to consider the economics of divorce. Not only are there attorney's fees to be paid, but the value of the two biggest assets of most marriages — a home and a retirement plan — has diminished dramatically. Faced with the prospect of halving their shrunken assets, many couples are deciding to stick it out a while.

A recent survey conducted by the Institute of Divorce Financial Analysts — who knew? — found that 68 percent of its members "have seen clients who could not afford to get divorced because of recession-related financial problems."

So even as most of us are looking forward to happier days of an economic recovery, there must be a number of Americans who are waiting patiently to be able to afford to experience the pain and suffering of divorce. You've heard of the pent-up desire and aspiration that are released after times of war? That's why we get such phenomena as baby booms. When this economic recovery finally arrives, prepare yourselves for a boom of an entirely different sort.

THE LIGHTER SIDE OF POLITICS

Doonesbury

Mallard Fillmore

By Bruce Tinsley

Fixing the economy? It's women's work

While the pin-stripe crowd fixates on troubled assets, a stalled stimulus and mortgage remedies, it turns out that a more sure-fire financial fix is within our grasp — and has been for years. New research says a healthy dose of estrogen may be the key not only to our fiscal recovery, but also to economic strength worldwide.

The sexy new discussion in policy circles around the world, thanks to the recession, is whether a significant shift of power from men to women is under way — or whether it should be. Accounting giant Ernst & Young pulled out charts and graphs at a recent power lunch in Washington with female lawmakers to argue a provocative bottom line: Companies with more women in senior management roles make more money. The latest issue of Foreign Policy magazine sweepingly predicts the “death of macho.” Adding to this debate is the fact that the laid-off victims of this recession are overwhelmingly men.

All those right-brain skills disparaged as soft in the roaring '90s are suddenly 21st-century-hot, while cocky is experiencing a slow fizzle.

The numbers make a compelling case. The studies Ernst & Young rounded up show that women can make the difference between economic success and failure in the developing world, between good and bad decision-making in the industrialized world, and between profit and loss in the corporate world. Their conclusion: American companies would do well with more senior women. And it's not only one study, but at least half a dozen, from a broad spectrum of organizations such as Columbia University, McKinsey & Co., Goldman Sachs and Pepperdine University, that document a clear relationship between women in senior management and corporate financial success. By all measures, more women in your company means better performance.

Pepperdine found that the Fortune 500 firms with the best records of putting women at the top were 18 to 69 percent more profitable than the median companies in their industries. McKinsey looked at the top-listed European companies and found that greater gender diversity in management led to higher-than-average stock performance.

It's time to admit the obvious. Men and women are different, and our management styles are different. Research by the University of Pittsburgh and Cambridge University

Women in the mix

In hedge funds
Average annual returns from 2000 to the present:
• 9.06 percent for women-owned funds
• 5.82 percent for broader composite index

In the boardroom
Return on equity for Fortune 500 firms:
• 13.9 percent for those with highest representation of women on their corporate boards
• 9.1 percent for those with lowest representation of women on their corporate boards

— Sources: Hedge Fund Research Inc., Catalyst finds that some of those differences are intrinsic, thanks to hormones.

Gender stereotypes aren't politically correct, but the research broadly finds that testosterone can make men more prone to competition and risk-taking. Women, on the other hand, seem to be wired for collaboration, caution and long-term results.

According to a 30-year study of fund managers released last month by the National Council for Research on Women, female investors and professional money managers used more measured strategies. They didn't take huge risks, but they also didn't lose big. Their returns were consistent. Men took larger risks and wound up with results that varied more widely. A study by the French Fund association found that funds managed by women had more consistent results over one-year, three-year and five-year measurements. Female-managed funds weren't usually top performers, but they were never at the bottom.

Luckily, that freedom makes economic sense, too. That's why companies such as Wal-Mart, Capital One, Best Buy, Sun Microsystems and Sara Lee, to name just a few, say they have glimpsed the future of work and have decided it's an extremely manageable place. They've discovered that allowing people to work the way they want — from home; at night; from the sidelines of the soccer field — actually increases productivity. Best Buy found that changing the work rules boosted productivity by an average of 40 percent.

Corporate America, take the first step toward economic recovery. Open your minds and offices to new ways of working and succeeding. Not because you are nice guys — but because it will help the economy and your bottom line.

Health care can't be fixed if inflation isn't

Over the past few decades, health care inflation has exceeded the general rise in prices by about 2.5 percent a year. These inexorably rising costs are bankrupting the nation, wallowing businesses and squeezing middle-class salaries.

The health care bills now winding their way through Congress would cover many of the uninsured. They would pay for most of the costs associated with that expanded coverage. But they would do little to change the fundamental incentives that drive health care inflation.

for expanded coverage. We're going to have to tax people in the middle class more. The congressional bills effectively do that by mandating coverage and then failing to subsidize middle-class consumers. But that burden, too, is to pay for new coverage.

change the fundamental incentives that drive health care inflation.

Health care providers would still largely rely on a fee-for-service system. They could still ignore cost-benefit analyses when deciding what treatments to provide.

The basic problem is that the American people have gotten used to high-tech, all-everything health care, under the illusion that they don't have to pay for it and that it's always better for them. Politicians are unwilling to force voters and donors to give up that sort of system, even the parts that are ineffective.

There are several ideas floating around that could reduce inflation, but they are neutered in the current bills. For example, many people believe that comparative effectiveness research would bend the cost curve. The current bills would pay for that research but negate the effects by allowing everybody to ignore the findings.

Many people believe that ending the tax exemption on employer health benefits would reduce costs and make consumers more conscious of cost considerations. But the House has rejected that, and the Senate is walking away from even capping that tax exemption.

Many people believe that a public plan would save money through lower administrative costs and because a government-controlled system would allow the government to ram through cost reduction. But lower administrative costs, even if they materialized, would not affect the fundamental incentives driving inflation.

And the current public plan wouldn't really change the system. A Congressional Budget Office analysis of the public plan provisions in the bill from the Senate committee on Health, Education, Labor and Pensions projected that they would neither increase the total number of people insured nor substantially affect costs, “largely because the public plan would pay providers of health care at rates comparable to privately negotiated rates.”

Then there are all these mysterious deals the White House is cutting with industry groups. They sound good, but it's not clear what industry is getting in return, and they, too, would not alter the fundamental incentives.

Keith Hennessey, the former chief of the National Economic Council, studied the HELP bill and wrote on his blog that aside from one provision, “I can find nothing that would provide information and incentives to consumers, medical professionals, health plans, employers or government to slow the growth of long-term private health care spending.”

Wait, it gets worse. The bills not only fail to reduce health care inflation, they make it harder to fix the larger fiscal mess later. They do that by taking the chits we could use to balance the overall budget and using them to cover the $1.3 trillion in new federal health spending.

To get our overall fiscal house in order, we're going to need to raise taxes on the rich. The House bill would use that chit to pay for expanded coverage. We're going to have to take a bite out of Medicare spending. The administration plan does that to pay

Instead of brightening the fiscal picture, these bills make it immeasurably worse.

Health care inflation is not some optional side issue that can be left out of reform. It is the core problem that undermines the viability of the health care system, the federal budget and the economy as a whole. Maybe the administration will provide some last-minute solution in conference or somewhere else. But right now the prospects don't look good.

Smokin' Cowboys crosses the canyon

New Twin Falls location to offer unique apple-wood smoked barbecue

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

Smokin' Cowboys is bringing the distinctive taste to the other side of the canyon.

Less than two years after Bob German and Dale Hellwinkel opened their first Smokin' Cowboys restaurant on Jerome's South Lincoln Street, they have expanded to a second location on Blue Lakes Boulevard following requests from customers for a Smokin' Cowboys in Twin Falls.

The new location, which will offer the unique smoking process of cooking with a rotisserie smoker fueled by apple wood, opened July 1 in a remodeled building next to Fred Meyers at 837 Blue Lakes Blvd. N.

When German and Hellwinkel opened their first location at 222 South Lincoln St., in October 2007, they beat the odds by growing and expanding to a second location in less than two years at a time when the economy was tanking.

German said he thinks the success might be linked to Citigroup profit soars on Smith Barney sale

By Stephen Bernard
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Citigroup Inc. surprised Wall Street Friday, reporting a $3 billion second-quarter profit instead of the big loss analysts expected.

Citigroup became the fourth big bank to report strong results for the quarter. Citi announced its results shortly after Bank of America Corp. also beat expectations with earnings of $2.42 billion. The pair of profit reports follows strong earnings from Goldman Sachs Group Inc. and JPMorgan Chase & Co. earlier in the week.

However, Citi's profit was not driven by improved trading like other banks, and instead came from the gain on the sale of its Smith Barney unit and the increasing values of some of its riskier assets that had plunged during the credit crisis. Citi recorded an after-tax gain of $6.7 billion on the sale of a majority stake in its Smith Barney brokerage unit to Morgan Stanley.

After paying preferred dividends, the New York-based Citigroup earned 49 cents per share versus a loss of $2.59 billion, or 55 cents

In bank profits, less than meets the eye

By Ieva M. Augstums and Stephen Bernard
Associated Press writers

Analysis

NEW YORK — The big banks are making big money again, but they won't be back to health as long as they have to deal with a recession and customers defaulting on mortgages and credit cards.

That the banks managed to turn a profit at all is remarkable. Just 10 months ago, many of them looked to be on the verge of collapse. The stock market staged a huge rally this week, driven by the signs of health in banking.

But Bank of America CEO Ken Lewis had some sobering words during a conference call with Wall Street analysts after his company's results were released Friday: "Profitability in the second half of the year will be much tougher than the first half."

Bank of America Corp., JPMorgan Chase & Co. and Goldman Sachs Group Inc. earned profits this spring largely on investment banking and trading — not traditional banking businesses, which still look shaky.

Strip away those money-makers, and the banks have to rely on customers who are losing their jobs or earning less money. The banks will suffer as long as their customers do.

Bank of America, JPMorgan Chase and Citigroup Inc. all reported they lost more money on loans during the second quarter. Bank of America alone set aside $13.4 billion to cover loan losses. But the banks also saw signs that loan delinquencies were starting to stabilize.

The profits announced this week raise more questions about when banks will be able to repay their bailout money. Goldman Sachs and JPMorgan Chase have already repaid their loans. Others, like Bank of America and Citigroup, have not.

Discounts may drive back-to-school shopping

By Andrea Chang
Los Angeles Times

Coupons and discounts will be the hottest styles for back-to-school shoppers this year.

Summer's not even half over, but retailers are gearing up for back-to-school season with new youth fashions, nifty office supplies and steep bargains.

"All eyes are shifting to back-to-school — it's the only catalyst where consumers have to go out and spend between now and the holiday shopping season," said Ken Perkins, president of research company Retail Metrics Inc. But "you look at things heading into the season, and the macro picture on the spending front isn't promising. It's really going to be need-based, bargain-based, discount-based shopping."

The depressed economy will cause 85 percent of Americans to make changes to their back-to-school plans this year, according to a survey released Tuesday by the National Retail Federation trade group.

The average family with students in kindergarten through high school is expected to spend $548.72 on back-to-school merchandise this year, a decline of 7.7 percent from $594.24 last year, the survey found.

Idaho settles case with DISH Network

BOISE — Attorney General Lawrence Wasden says Idaho residents are eligible for refunds and the state will get $125,000 in a settlement with DISH Network.

Wasden announced the legal deal Thursday that settles allegations the satellite television provider engaged in several deceptive business practices.

Idaho was one of 45 states that alleged violations of consumer protection laws and the Telephone Solicitations Act. The settlement with all states totaled $5.9 million.

Wasden says 179 Idaho consumers have filed complaints with his office since 2004 over the allegations that DISH Network violated do-not-call rules, failed to disclose all terms and conditions of service agreements and other infractions.

Female heli pilot finishes tour with Marine One

By Darlene Superville
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Jennifer Grieves wanted independence, exposure and something she could be proud of when she joined the Marine Corps. She got all that, and more — including a place in history as the first woman to ever pilot Marine One, the president's helicopter.

For about 40 times in the past 14 months, she has been the one responsible for ferrying President Barack Obama, former President George W. Bush and former Vice President Dick Cheney to and from Andrews Air Force Base, and other points in their world travels.

Her 14-month rotation as a "Marine One" ended Thursday with another first: An all-female crew, led by Grieves, landed on the South Lawn of the White House to take Obama to Andrews for a day trip to New Jersey and New York.

For Grieves, enlisting was not about piloting the president or being the first woman with the responsibility.

"It's just about being a Marine," she says matter-of-factly.

Grieves, 38, joined nearly 20 years ago in her hometown of Glendale, Ariz., seeking broader horizons. Until then, her only exposure to the military was a grandfather who had served in the Navy.

"I think I just wanted some independence. I wanted some exposure. I wanted to be a part of an organization that I could be proud of," she said Friday in an interview with The

Maj. Jennifer Grieves waits on the South Lawn of the White House for President Barack Obama to board Marine One on Thursday, her last day in rotation as pilot of Marine One. Grieves is the first female Marine One pilot, and the Marine One crew was made up entirely of women Thursday in honor of her achievement. She was designated the helicopter aircraft commander of Marine One in May 2008.

Associated Press. "I had no idea initially that it would turn into something that I've been more proud of than anything else in my life. I got lucky in that respect, and I made a good decision and it ended up turning out very well."

Grieves came to helicopters by chance. A college mentor recommended that she take an aptitude test. She did, and it pointed her toward flying. She was accepted to flight school and "ended up realizing that I should have wanted to do that ever since I was a kid."

"It's something I love," Grieves said of flying; she can fly three different types of helicopters.

A supervisor who had served in the Marine One squadron recommended that she apply. She joined in 2005, spent a couple of years as a co-pilot and then became qualified to fly vice presidents and visiting heads of state.

She was given the ultimate responsibility, being designated a "Marine One," in 2008.

The native of Alameda, Calif., said she didn't realize the significance of her achievement until her rotation ended Thursday. Next comes leadership school in Quantico, Va., starting in August. Grieves expects to finish in June 2010 and return to flying, either in North Carolina or Afghanistan.

"Yesterday, I realized that it might be significant, and it might be important," she said, adding that she was proud of her crew and all the Marines who support her. "And I guess, a little bit, I'm kind of proud of myself, too."

Teen fined $25,000 for cost of rescue

By Holly Ramer
Associated Press writer

CONCORD, N.H. — A Massachusetts teenager who spent three nights alone on Mount Washington in April after he sprained an ankle and veered off marked trails has been fined more than $25,000 for the cost of his rescue.

Scott Mason had been praised for utilizing his Eagle Scout skills — sleeping in the crevice of a boulder and jump-starting fires with hand sanitizer gel. But authorities say he wasn't prepared for the conditions he encountered and shouldn't have set out on such an ambitious hike.

"Yes, he'd been out there in July when you could step across the brooks. And people have been out there in winter in hard-packed snow. But with these spring conditions, it was soft snow, it was deep snow," said Fish and Game Maj. Tim Acerno.

Acerno said he believes Mason's fine is the largest ever sought under a 9-year-old New Hampshire law that allows lost hikers and climbers to be charged for rescue costs. Mason's rescue was particularly expensive because the helicopters the state typically used were unavailable, and a helicopter from Maine had to be brought in, Acerno said.

Mason, 17, of Halifax, Mass., had planned to spend one day hiking 17 miles in the New Hampshire mountains but ended up lost after he hurt his ankle and decided to take a shortcut. The shortcut led him into rising water and deep snow caused by unseasonably warm weather.

Mason was negligent in continuing up the mountain with an injury and veering off the marked path, Acerno said. Negligence, he said, is based on judging what a reasonable person would do in the same situation.

Adoption groups decry horror film with evil orphan

By David Crary
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Often divided over policy and practice, America's adoption community has unified in dismay over "Orphan," a horror movie opening next week that its critics say will fuel negative attitudes toward real-life orphans.

Some adoption advocates are urging a boycott of the movie, which opens July 24. A coalition of prominent national adoption and foster care groups, while not joining the boycott call, has asked for a meeting with Warner Bros. CEO Barry Meyer to discuss their concerns.

"We are concerned that in addition to its intended entertainment value, this film will have the unintended effect of skewing public opinion against children awaiting families both in the United States and abroad," said a letter to Meyer from the Congressional Coalition on Adoption Institute.

Warner Bros. said it has taken the concerns seriously. Spokesman Scott Rowe told The Associated Press the company is considering adding a pro-adoption message at the end of the film when it comes out in DVD form.

Trailers for the film, shown nationwide for two months, make the basic plot clear without revealing the twist at the end. A couple mourning the loss of an unborn baby decide to adopt a girl from a local orphanage — and their hopes for happiness give way to unease and fear as the new family member turns out to be far different from what they expected.

The trailer itself prompted outrage from many adoption advocates and adoptive families, and Warner Bros. responded by removing a much-criticized line from it in which the orphan, Esther, says, "It must be hard to love an adopted child as much as your own."

Rowe, while noting that virtually every film Warner Bros. makes offends someone, has stressed that "Orphan" is a make-believe story.

"It is not a depiction of any real-life events or situations and has never been portrayed as anything but an entirely fictional story," he said. "We apologize if we appeared insensitive with the initial trailer, as it's never our intent to offend anyone with our products."

Rowe said he'd not yet seen the letter from the adoption coalition requesting to meet with Meyer.

The letter, co-signed by leaders of 11 adoption and child-welfare groups, noted that an estimated 129,000 children are in U.S. foster care system waiting to be adopted, and that millions of children abroad also need adoptive families.

The letter said the film "may impede recruitment efforts by feeding into the unconscious fears of potential foster and adoptive families that orphaned children are psychotic and unable to heal from the wounds of abuse, neglect, and abandonment."

Among those signing the letter were leaders of the Dave Thomas Foundation for Adoption, the National Council for Adoption, and the American Academy of Adoption Attorneys.

Another signatory was Jedd Medefind of the Christian Alliance for Orphans. His group has launched a Web site — OrphansDeserveBetter.org — featuring a petition urging Warner Bros. to add a pro-adoption message at the end of the film and to donate a portion of box office receipts to aid orphans.

Space shuttle Endeavour arrives at space station

By Marcia Dunn
Associated Press writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — The space shuttle and space station hooked up Friday after a round-the-world chase, making for the biggest crowd ever gathered in orbit — 13 Earthlings.

Endeavour docked at the international space station as the two craft soared 220 miles above the Australian coast.

Once the hatches popped open, the seven shuttle astronauts floated into the space station, one by one, and embraced their six station colleagues. It was a bit of a mob scene, a floating jumble of dark shirts, beige pants and shorts, and white socks.

"Welcome," said the station's skipper, Russian Gennady Padalka, positioned at the entrance.

"Thirteen is a pretty big number, but it's going to be an outstanding visit for us," said shuttle commander Mark Polansky. "We are just thrilled to be here."

Besides being the biggest space gathering ever, it was the most diverse: seven Americans, two Russians, two Canadians, one Japanese and one Belgian. Twelve men, one woman. Four medical doctors. And engineers and pilots galore.

The station doubled in size, people-wise, at the end of May, and this was the first shuttle visit since then. Although 13 people have been in orbit before, they were scattered in separate spacecraft. The old under-the-same-roof crowd record was 10.

Their first team effort comes Saturday, when two of the astronauts venture out on the first of five planned spacewalks to help hook up a porch for Japan's space station lab. The porch will be used to hold outdoor experiments.

Endeavour's astronauts had barely settled in when Mission Control informed them that a piece of space junk was threatening to come too close and they would have to dodge it. Later in the evening, the shuttle thrusters were fired, pushing the entire complex into a slightly higher orbit.

Earlier Friday, as it was closing in for the linkup, Endeavour performed a backflip from 600 feet out so the station crew could photograph its entire surface and uncover any severe launch damage. Endeavour's fuel tank lost more foam insulation than usual during Wednesday's launch, and some of the smaller pieces struck the shuttle, leaving a series of minor dings.

Space station residents snapped and beamed down a few hundred digital pictures of Endeavour, a routine procedure put in place after the 2003 Columbia accident. Shuttle program manager John Shannon later said no significant damage had been found spotted, although the analysis was continuing. An inspection by the shuttle crew Thursday found the wings and nose — the most vulnerable spots — to be intact.

The bulk of the lost foam peeled away from the central area of Endeavour's fuel tank in 6-inch strips, six minutes after liftoff when it's too late to pose any threat. That part of the tank normally does not shed like that, and NASA has assembled a team to figure out what happened. Another engineering team is organizing tests for the tank that will be used on the next shuttle flight, now delayed.

Fla. sheriff confirms couple's safe had jewelry

PENSACOLA, Florida (AP) — A Florida sheriff has confirmed that the safe taken from the home of a slain Panhandle couple held only adoption papers and other documents, heirloom jewelry and some of the family's prescription medication.

Escambia County Sheriff David Morgan would not say Friday if the killers of Byrd and Melanie Billings expected to find other items in the microwave-sized safe.

Morgan said investigators have not yet determined whether the killers even managed to open the safe, which was found buried in a Pensacola-area backyard with bricks piled on top.

The sheriff's news conference came the afternoon after the Billings' funeral. The couple was known for adopting 13 special needs children.

They were shot to death in their nine-bedroom home west of Pensacola last week.

New NASA photos show Apollo 11 leftovers on the moon

By Sthe Borenstein Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — New NASA photos of the moon show the leftovers from man's exploration 40 years ago.

For the first time, photos from space pinpoint equipment left behind from Apollo landings, and even the well-worn tracks made by astronauts on the moon surface.

The photos were released Friday, in time for the 40th anniversary of the first moon landing on July 20, 1969. A picture of the Apollo 11 site shows the Eagle lunar module used by Neil Armstrong and Buzz Aldrin.

"It was really great to see the hardware sitting on the surface, waiting for us to come back," said Arizona State University scientist Mark Robinson, who runs the camera on the orbiter.

But that's only if you know where to look. NASA helps out by putting a giant arrow on each photo. The lunar landers look to be square white blobs; the Eagle is a fuzzy image near a crater.

NASA landed on the moon six times, but the orbital camera so far has only photographed five of the landing sites. Apollo 12 will be done later. That leaves Apollo 11 and Apollo 14 through 17. Apollo 13 never landed on the moon because of an explosion on board the ship on the way to the moon.

The images for Apollo 14 are the best so far. Taken on Wednesday, they show the path made by astronauts Alan Shepard Jr. and Edgar Mitchell as they went back and forth from the lander to the work site.

Robinson said the route was "a high traffic zone, sort of like when you go in an old building and the carpet is worn down." A similar but lighter path could be seen at the Apollo 17 site.

Also at the Apollo 14 site, a close examination shows a trail made by the cart used to carry tools, Robinson said.

The photos varied in quality based on how high up the satellite was and the angle of the sun. For Apollo 11, the spaceship was taking pictures from 70 miles above. For Apollo 14, it was six miles closer.

In the next couple months, as the lunar satellite starts its mission to map the moon for future landing sites for astronauts, it will get much better photos, Robinson said. The mission is a first step in NASA's effort to return humans to the moon by 2020.

Other robotic probes, including those launched by Japan and India, have looked for signs that man was on the moon, but their cameras weren't strong enough, NASA officials said.

The Lunar Reconnaissance Orbiter was launched with a second spacecraft that was designed to crash into the moon in the fall to try to find buried ice. The total cost of the mission is $583 million.

1st day of Florida hunt nets nearly 10-foot python

By Brian Skoloff Associated Press writer

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — A program to eradicate invasive pythons from Florida's Everglades began Friday with a slithering success: Trappers caught a nearly 10-footer within about an hour of setting out, a shock to even the experts.

"It surprised us," said Shawn Heflick, a herpetologist who helped capture the snake Friday. "If you would have told me yesterday I was going to go out there today and that quickly find one, I would have called you a liar."

The Florida Fish and Wildlife Conservation Commission announced just this week the state would allow a few permitted snake experts to begin hunting, trapping and killing the nonnative pythons in an effort to eradicate them from hundreds of thousands of acres in South Florida.

Gov. Charlie Crist had asked for the program two weeks after a central Florida child was strangled in her bed by a pet python that escaped its enclosure.

The number of pythons in South Florida and throughout Everglades National Park has exploded in the past decade to potentially tens of thousands, though wildlife officials aren't sure exactly how many are slithering around South Florida. Scientists believe pet owners have freed their snakes into the wild once they became too big to keep. They also think some Burmese pythons may have escaped in 1992 from pet shops battered by Hurricane Andrew and have been reproducing ever since.

Officials say the constrictor snake can produce up to 100 eggs at a time.

The FWC held a news conference in the Everglades on Friday morning, explaining to anxious reporters that it would be highly unlikely to catch a glimpse of the giant snakes.

Then they climbed aboard several airboats and headed to a hunting camp on a tree island in the wetlands about 30 miles west of downtown Fort Lauderdale.

"We wanted to show everyone the habitat," said FWC spokeswoman Pat Behnke.

The reporters saw more than habitat: They witnessed the first capture in the state's fledgling python hunt program.

"We're walking along a boardwalk and one of the experts looks down, and there's a python!" Behnke said.

One of the experts spotted it slithering from a dense cover area. Heflick, along with another trapper, "jumped on it and hauled it out!"

After measuring the snake and collecting data, the trappers severed its brain from its spinal column, he said.

Pythons have no natural predators in Florida, so their populations grow unchecked as they feed on birds, small rodents and other native species, disrupting the ecosystem's natural balance.

The first phase of the hunting program will last several months. Depending on the results, officials may license more trappers.

Earlier this week, Democratic Sen. Bill Nelson and Republican U.S. Rep. Tom Rooney, both from Florida, sought the federal government's blessing for python hunts in the Everglades.

King of Pop creamed in online butter statue vote

By Melanie S. Welte Associated Press writer

DES MOINES, Iowa — Jesus Christ and his apostles made the cut. So did John Wayne, Elvis and Tiger.

But Michael Jackson will not have his buttery likeness displayed at the Iowa State Fair in Des Moines this summer, after support for a creamy statue of the King of Pop melted in an online vote.

Kent Lehs, a manager with the Midwest Dairy

Association, which sponsors the display, said Friday it wasn't a question of Jackson's achievements that drew complaints.

"They were more pointed toward what they felt they understand Michael Jackson's reputation was and not as a singer and dancer, but more some of the things he was implicated in in his personal life," said Lehs.

Jackson

Jackson was accused of molesting a child in 1993 and settled the case without a trial, and he was acquitted of child molestation charges in a separate case in 2003.

Butter sculptures have been popular part of the fair since 1911, and fairgoers jostle for position in front of the glass-enclosed displays to watch the artists at work. Besides a life-size Butter Cow, which always makes an appearance, sculptors usually whip up another display.

Past works have included statues of Elvis Presley and Tiger Woods, Harry Potter, a Harley Davidson motorcycle and even a slippery rendition of Leonardo da Vinci's "The Last Supper." And this year's display will celebrate the 40th anniversary of the moon landing.

Fair staff first announced plans for a Jackson sculpture days after his June 25 death.

Tiger Woods reacts after putting on the No. 18 green during the second round of the British Open Golf championship at the Turnberry golf course in Scotland on Friday.

Turnabout at Turnberry

Watson leads, Woods leaves

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press writer

TURNBERRY, Scotland — In one unforgettable hour, as nostalgia gave way to disbelief, Tom Watson and Tiger Woods walked off the 18th green at Turnberry headed in opposite directions few could have imagined.

The oldest player at the British Open was leading.

The best player was leaving. Even a tournament that has been around for 149 years can still serve up a shocker or two.

"It's as if the spirits are on my side," said Watson, a 59-year-old wonder who made history Friday afternoon as the oldest player to lead a major championship.

"Kept making mistake after mistake," said Woods, the No. 1 player in the world.

Watson played his best golf on the toughest stretch at Turnberry, then finished with a pair of birdie putts that were nearly as long as his odds of winning another claret jug. The last one was a 45-footer on the 18th that gave him an even-par 70, putting him in the lead with British Open rookie Steve Marino, who had a 68.

Woods came through an hour later, and was at his worst.

He hit one tee shot that was never found in the high grass along the dunes right of the 10th fairway. He hit into a fairway bunker for the first time all week. It took him two shots to

Tiger not so great at British

TURNBERRY, Scotland — The obligatory handshakes were over, and there wasn't much left for Tiger Woods to do other than sign his scorecard and tell his pilot to gas up the Gulfstream.

The chef had to be notified, too, because Woods had worked up quite an appetite kicking away his British Open chances in a stunning collapse on the Scottish coast.

TIM DAHLBERG

Greatest player in the world. Maybe the greatest golfer ever.

Gagging it up in front of everybody but the Queen.

Thankfully, Queen Elizabeth was off watching cricket so she didn't have to see the mess Woods made at Turnberry. She probably was waiting to come on Sunday, when she and the rest of Britain presumed he would be holding the claret jug trophy.

Instead, Woods was heading home early for only the second time in 49 major championships as a pro.

Heading home from a major championship a 59-year-old recovering from hip replacement surgery is leading. A tournament where a 16-year-old amateur from Italy easily made the cut.

Sure, Turnberry was hard. But it wasn't that hard.

Tom Watson proved that with two rounds that were 10 shots better than Woods. Watson, who is eligible for Social Security in three years, was playing just a few groups in front of the great one, so there was no difference in conditions.

Steve Marino played when the weather was even worse, and he's never even seen a links course before this week. Yet he was also 10 shots clear of Woods, the supposed master of the links.

Bookies figured Woods would run away with this tournament. Instead, he was last seen running away with two rounds left to be played.

All because of a six-hole collapse that proved even the great Tiger Woods is mortal after all.

So cancel the Nike commercials. Hold the texts to Roger Federer.

And give a nod to Jack Nicklaus, too. Woods has had a great run but winning majors is a tough business, and Nicklaus has still won more than anyone.

The only thing more shocking about Woods missing the cut for the only

Twin Falls routs Minico in doubleheader

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Two teams with proud baseball traditions experiencing completely opposite summers met at Warburton Field for an American Legion Baseball Class AA doubleheader on Friday.

After Area C-leading Twin Falls beat the struggling Minico Spartans 10-0 and 12-1 in a pair of five-inning run-rule victories, the Cowboys' attention turned to the district tournament, which gets under way next Thursday in Pocatello.

"We're going to hit (districts) with everything we've got," said Twin Falls' Braden Box. "Instead of playing good baseball, we're trying to play great baseball."

For Minico (3-31), on the other hand, facing the red-hot Cowboys this late in the season put the upcoming district playoffs in perspective as the Spartans carry a mix of frustration and apathy.

"There are things we're just not capitalizing on right now," said Minico assistant coach Erin Runyon. "Hopefully when we get to districts we will capitalize on those things. We have the guys to do it, we're just not doing it yet."

Twin Falls (33-8, 18-2 Area C) got gems from pitchers Cy Sneed and Jacob Coats. Sneed pitched the four-hit shutout in Game 1 with four strikeouts and no walks.

Coats, who saw his first action since suffering a hamstring tear during the Cowboy Classic over two weeks ago, faced 20 batters in Game 2, struck out five and walked two while allowing no earned runs with five strikeouts.

The Twin Falls coaches had Coats on a 50-pitch count, which he surpassed after the fourth inning, but the Cowboys' ace felt good enough to finish out the five-inning rout.

"My arm feels great, but picking up the leg felt slower," Coats said. "I'm about 85 or 90 percent."

Twin Falls totaled 26 hits on the day, led by Zeb Sneed, who had solo homers in each game and batted a combined 5-for-6.

Against Minico pitcher Casey Christiansen in Game 1, Remington Pullin was 3-for-4 with a pair of doubles and two RBIs. Box

Armstrong stays third at Tour de France

By Jamey Keaten

COLMAR, France — Lance Armstrong stayed in third place after a wet and chilly ride Friday and lost a crucial ally for the rest of the Tour de France when teammate Levi Leipheimer withdrew because of a broken wrist.

Germany's Heinrich Haussler won the 13th stage by outclassing the pack with a solo breakaway, and Italy's Rinaldo Nocentini kept the yellow jersey for a seventh straight day.

Armstrong, the seven-time champion, remained eight seconds behind Nocentini. Astana teammate Alberto Contador, the 2007 Tour champion, is second, six seconds back. Armstrong, Contador and other favorites were 6 minutes, 43 seconds behind Haussler.

Buhl bats throttle Green Sox

Times-News

Behind five home runs, Buhl battered Burley in an American Legion Baseball Class A double-header on Friday.

The Tribe got four homers in their 16-5, run-rule win in Game 1, including Cader Owen's grand slam in the sixth inning. Dylan Brooks added a three-run shot, while Matt Hamilton and Marco Avelar added solo shots.

Buhl totaled 26 hits in the two games, including 10 for extra bases.

Burley kept it tight in Game 2 until Nick Hamilton's three-run homer in the fifth put Buhl up 6-3.

Buhl (25-9, 24-8 Area C) could finish at high as No. 3 in Area C, depending on other teams' results today.

CLASS A CYCLONES COME UP SHORT

The Jerome Cyclones capped their Class A American Legion Baseball season with a pair of losses at Hillcrest on Friday.

After being held to one hit in a 7-2 opening loss, Jerome nearly got the win in Game 2 before falling 4-3.

The Cyclones had a runner at third with one out in the seventh, but couldn't bring the tying run across.

Ryan Foster's RBI double highlighted Jerome's Game 2 performance.

Jerome, which forfeited its games against Bonneville today, ends the regular season 3-29. The Cyclones will play in an Area C Tournament play-in game on Monday with time and place to be determined.

King Felix coasts to win over Tribe

CLEVELAND — Felix Hernandez allowed two runs in eight innings and Seattle's Franklin Gutierrez homered against his former team as Seattle earned a 6-2 win over Cleveland on Friday evening.

Hernandez (10-3) allowed five hits, walking one and striking out eight. He lowered his ERA to 2.51, ranking him second in the AL behind Kansas City's Zack Greinke (2.12).

Since his last loss on May 19, Hernandez is 6-0 with a 1.30 ERA in 10 starts.

The Indians didn't get a runner past second base until the sixth, when Grady Sizemore tripled and scored on a sacrifice fly.

Gutierrez, acquired from Cleveland in a three-team trade last December, hit his 11th homer in the second inning. He entered with a league-best .385 average since June 18 and has hit in 23 of his last 25 games.

RED SOX 4, BLUE JAYS 1

TORONTO — Kevin Youkilis hit a two-run homer and Clay Buchholz pitched 5 2-3 innings to earn his first major league win in more than a year.

David Ortiz added a two-run double in the Red Sox's fourth straight victory.

Seattle Mariners outfielder Franklin Gutierrez, left, is congratulated by Ryan Langerhans after Gutierrez hit a solo home run Friday.

TWINS 5, RANGERS 3

ARLINGTON, Texas — Jason Kubel hit a tiebreaking three-run homer and Minnesota put a damper on Josh Hamilton's first home game in more than six weeks.

Kubel's homer in the third, after consecutive one-out hits by Joe Mauer and Justin Morneau, put the Twins up 5-2 against Vicente Padilla (7-5).

YANKEES 5, TIGERS 3

NEW YORK — Mark Teixeira hit a go-ahead, three-run homer in the seventh for New York.

The Yankees trailed 3-1 against rookie Luke French, then started the comeback with an unearned run in the fifth.

Joel Zumaya (3-3) relieved to start the seventh, gave up a leadoff single to Derek Jeter and a long double to Johnny Damon. Rather than issue an intentional walk that would load the bases for Alex Rodriguez, Zumaya pitched to Teixeira, who hit 22nd homer, his third hit of the game.

WHITE SOX 12, ORIOLES 8

CHICAGO — Jim Thome hit a grand slam and a three-run homer for a career-high seven RBIs.

With 14 RBIs in the last three games, Thome increased his career total to 1,545 and passed Harry Heilmann and Willie Stargell into 41st place on baseball's all-time list. The home runs were the 556th and 557th of Thome's 17-year career and moved him within six of Reggie Jackson for 12th place. It was his 43rd multihome game.

ST. LOUIS — Albert Pujols hit two homers to add to his major league-leading total.

The multi home run game was the eighth for Pujols, who has 34 homers and 89 RBIs, which also leads the majors. He has 31 multi home run games in his career.

Chris Carpenter (8-3) blanked the Diamondbacks over eight innings, allowing seven hits and striking out seven.

BRAVES 11, METS 0

ATLANTA — Brian McCann drove in four runs in the first three innings and Atlanta's Jair Jurrjens combined with three relievers on a two-hitter.

Jurrjens (8-7) gave up both hits and two walks in six innings after the Braves retired the No. 31 worn by former ace Greg Maddux. Boone Logan, Luis Valdez and Kris Medlen each pitched an inning after Jurrjens left.

Yao Ming likely out next season with foot injury

HOUSTON — The Houston Rockets thought they had become championship contenders last summer when they acquired Ron Artest to join Tracy McGrady and Yao Ming, a pair of perennial All Stars.

Less than a year later, the Rockets are rebuilding from scratch with no Artest and no idea when McGrady or Yao will play again.

The final blow came Friday, when Yao announced he would have surgery next week on his broken left foot, a decision that will likely keep him out all of next season. The team said there is no timetable set for the return of the 7-foot-6 Yao, a seven-time All Star, but that he is "expected to be available for the team's training camp in 2010."

McGrady, also a seven-time All Star, could be sidelined until next February as he recovers from risky microfracture surgery on his left knee.

Artest? He said at the end of last season that he wanted to stay in Houston — but only if he felt the Rockets had a legitimate chance to win the NBA title. He's now getting ready to play with Kobe Bryant and the NBA champion Lakers after signing a multiyear deal a few days after the start of the free agency negotiating period.

The Rockets knew some of this was coming, asking the NBA for a disabled player exception several weeks before free agency began. The NBA granted the Rockets' request, an acknowledgment that the league doubted Yao would play next season.

The team promptly used the money to land forward Trevor Ariza from the Lakers.

JAZZ REALIZE KEY OFFSEASON GOAL IN KEEPING MILLSAP

SALT LAKE CITY — Paul Millsap is staying with the Utah Jazz.

The Jazz matched the Portland Trail Blazers' $32 million offer for the restricted free agent, keeping Millsap in Utah with a new four-year deal.

"Keeping Paul on our roster was one of our main goals this off-season," general manager Kevin O'Connor said in a release Friday. "We look forward to watching him play a key role on this team for many years to come."

But it's going to cost the Jazz. Portland structured its offer with a promise of $10.3 million up front, requiring the Jazz to quickly come up with the cash to keep the promising young forward on Utah's roster and off the division rival Trail Blazers'.

IDAHO COACH HEADED TO THE NBA

BOISE — The head coach of Idaho's NBA developmental league team is headed to the pros.

Idaho Stampede officials say head coach Bryan Gates has accepted a job as assistant coach for the Sacramento Kings.

Bill Ilett, managing investor of the Stampede, says the team is proud of what Gates has accomplished during his three seasons as head coach both on and off the court in Boise.

Gates led the Stampede to the NBA D-League title in 2008, got in the playoffs all three seasons and compiled a record of 100-51.

Ilett says a search for a replacement begins immediately.

Gates is the fourth straight Stampede coach to earn a job in the NBA, joining Joe Wolf and Larry Krystowiak, who coached the Milwaukee Bucks, and Rory White, who coached the Los Angeles Clippers.

CHILDRESS HEADED FOR SECOND YEAR IN GREECE

ATLANTA — Josh Childress said Friday the Atlanta Hawks' "hardball" negotiations forced him to return for a second season in Greece with Olympiakos.

Childress signed a three-year, $20 million deal with Olympiakos last year after scoring in double figures in each of his four seasons with the Hawks.

The Hawks retained rights to Childress, who as a restricted free agent could negotiate with other NBA teams. Meanwhile, Childress also faced a Wednesday deadline to commit to his return to Greece.

Childress and his agent, Jim Tanner, said in a telephone interview on Friday that they visited Milwaukee and had interest from other teams. They said those teams couldn't reach an agreement with the Hawks.

CLIPPERS TRADE RANDOLPH TO MEMPHIS FOR RICHARDSON

LOS ANGELES — The Clippers have traded leading scorer Zach Randolph to Memphis in exchange for Quentin Richardson.

The deal was announced Friday. Richardson averaged 10.2 points and 4.4 rebounds in 72 games with the New York Knicks last season. He's returning to the Clippers, where he played from 2000-04 after being drafted by the team out of DePaul.

The 29-year-old guard-forward was acquired by Memphis on June 25 in exchange for Darko Milicic. Randolph was acquired in a trade with the Knicks in November 2008. The forward averaged 20.8 points and 10.1 rebounds in 50 games for the Clippers last season.

hit 3-for-4 with four RBIs and Jayson Welker was 3-for-3 with two doubles and a triple.

"We've struggled against (Christiansen) in past games, and we really took the mentality of staying loose and staying inside the ball," Box said. "We worked on those smooth details, getting the ball in play rather than trying to hit the ball far. We came at this game with the mentality to do the little things right."

Minico's only score on the day came in the first inning of Game 2, when a rare Twin Falls error allowed Pete Coats to cross.

Minico, which will likely take the No. 7 seed heading into the district tournament, will host Idaho Falls today. With a first-round bye for the district tournament, Twin Falls is off until next Friday.

Stingers second championship run of the season.

Tonight, Russell Dalton and Taylor Patrick continue their quest for main-event wins while Newhouse defends her lead in the series. The Legends Cars will be making one of their rare appearances at MVS this season while the Super Sixes are returning after an exciting performance last Saturday at MVS.

Kids 12 and under are invited to participate in the First Federal Penny Gold Rush to be held at intermission. Kids can keep all the pennies they can pick up off the track. Special prizes will also be given away.

Gates open at 3 p.m., qualifying begins at 5:30 and green flag racing starts at 6.

Tour

blow to Astana and Armstrong. He is a four-time top-10 finisher at the Tour, including third place finish in 2007. He had been in fourth place, 39 seconds behind Nacentini.

He had surgery on the wrist Friday, and Astana said he would return to the United States as soon as possible to begin his recovery.

"My wrist hurts a lot but it doesn't compare to the pain of watching the Tour leave me behind and not be able to ride the Tour with my teammates," Leipheimer said in a statement. "We've had a big battle so far. We're the favorites, and I wanted to be part of that."

Leipheimer and Armstrong have a close relationship within Astana, which Armstrong says is riven by "tension" with Contador.

"He's a good friend of mine so it makes it even more unfortunate, but that's cycling," said Armstrong, stressing that Leipheimer's absence is a big loss.

"You saw even there, in some stages in the Pyrenees, when there was an attack, we had four guys there. And now, one's gone," Armstrong said. "Not only does it hurt us, I think it helps the others in terms of morale, and thinking perhaps that the team has been weakened."

Leipheimer fell off his bike less than two miles from Thursday's finish line in a crash involving two-time Tour runner-up Cadel Evans. He pulled out before riders began the day's 124-mile stage through the rolling hills of northeast France that featured three big climbs, including the demanding Col du Platzerwasel.

Hausler, a Cervelo rider who won a stage at Paris-Nice in March, raced ahead of the second of two fellow breakaway riders in the last 31 miles and distanced himself from the peloton as the finish neared.

Hausler cupped his face in his hands and choked up with emotion as he crossed the line in 4:56:26 — 4:11 ahead of second-place Amets Txurruka of Spain. Brice Feillu of France was third, 6:13 back.

"I was really happy. I just got teary," said Hausler, who was born in Australia to a German father. "I just couldn't believe it. ... I was just so nervous that I was going to crash."

Leipheimer's injury was not the only thing to trouble Armstrong. He was angered by the criticism from French Sports Minister Roselyne Bachelot, who said Astana riders stayed out of sight too long during a random doping check last week.

"Enough is enough," the 37-year-old Texan said. "This is ridiculous. We've been controlled more than anybody else on the race. We have had this team for a long time. We've never had a positive control. Yes, we are successful. Yes, we are the strongest team in the race. But enough of the (outcry) in the media."

Just one of the guys

Brett Favre enjoys life as a summertime teammate at Oak Grove High in Mississippi

By Christ Talbott
Associated Press writer

HATTIESBURG, Miss. — Micah Williams doesn't show up to summer workouts at Oak Grove High School without gloves.

Thanks to the fourth guy in the quarterback rotation — the tall one with the gray beard — they're required gear.

"He's still throwing like he used to," Williams said. "Still with the zip. Hard. If you don't wear gloves, your hands are going to be through."

The senior wide receiver is talking about his summertime teammate, Brett Favre. Yeah, that Brett Favre. The 39-year-old quarterback, Super Bowl winner and three-time NFL MVP.

Anyone who thinks Favre is adrift without a team as he contemplates a return for a 19th season, this time with the Minnesota Vikings, is very wrong. Favre has everything he needs right here at Oak Grove, where coach Nevil Barr agreed to let him join in team workouts five summers ago while Favre was still in Green Bay.

"It's hard to run 110s on Quarterback Brett Favre practices with the Oak Grove High School football team in Hattiesburg, Miss., as he prepares for a possible return to the NFL.

your own," Favre said Wednesday morning after a session under a sweltering sun. "It's hard to run stadiums on your own. I can remember pulling tires out here. That's very hard to do on your own. So I was at a point in my career I felt like I needed some motivation, someone to kind of kick me into gear. So I came out."

He's been having a great time since. There's an endless supply of hands waiting to be graced with a pass from a guy who's started in the Pro Bowl and has made a yearly ritual of keeping the football world uncertain about whether he'll play again or not.

Then there's the camaraderie — joking around and just hanging out.

And there's a common goal: to be ready to give it all this season.

"He's got a good sense of humor," junior quarterback John Mark said. "He's a laid back guy. He's just like one of us. He's out there having a good time."

Favre doesn't hog valuable practice time. He takes his turn in the rotation, throwing to any receiver in the group, from savvy seniors who love to run under one of his deep end zone passes to the new guys making their way up from the junior varsity. The All Pro usually takes pity on the little guys.

"With the small ones, you've got to learn to take a little bit off when you throw it," Favre said. So far "I haven't had a parent call me and say, 'Are you trying to kill my son?'"

Favre joined the team after classmates of his daughter asked "Mr. Brett" — "which is weird," he says — to come work out. He liked it immediately.

Now there are few star-struck moments out here, though the occasional visiting camera or journalist can cause a stir.

Most days, though, there have been no pictures this summer, just Favre — work-out after workout. He's missed just one since he was cleared to start throwing. He jokes with the Warriors, gives tips on footwork and preaches the importance of a quarterback's eyes.

"Our kids are used to it, as strange as it seems," Barr said. "They love it. Believe me, they know who he is and what he's done, but they feel comfortable around him."

As you might imagine, Oak Grove players often use the words "awesome" to describe the experience of playing with Favre and "cool" to describe the man.

Like this, from sophomore quarterback Steven Papis: "It's pretty awesome. It's not, like, every day you get to talk to a Hall of Famer pretty much. And I mean he's cool. It's cool just being around him."

Barr believes Favre's willingness to sweat alongside the players as they work toward a shared goal has improved his football team, which has made it to the state semifinals five of the last six seasons and is expected to contend in Class 5A again this season. The Warriors turn out by the dozens to work out three days a week.

"I'm a part of this team," Favre said.

"And as much as Nevil says it helps these kids, it probably has helped me equally if not more than it's helped those kids. When I was 17, 18, I was just happy to be wherever. You don't want to get up and work out, but you do it. Me, I REALLY don't want to get up and work out. So coming up here kind of keeps you young."

Feds arrest felon in sale of gun in McNair killing

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Federal prosecutors announced gun charges Friday against a convicted murderer who admitted he sold the pistol that was used to kill ex-NFL quarterback Steve McNair.

Adrian J. Gilliam Jr., 33, of LaVergne, Tenn., was arrested by agents of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco, Firearms, and Explosives.

He is charged with being a convicted felon in possession of a firearm. Conviction could bring a maximum sentence of 10 years in prison and a fine of up to $250,000, federal prosecutors said.

A criminal complaint says that Gilliam — who was convicted in 1993 in Florida for murder and attempted armed robbery — told police he sold the gun to the woman who later shot McNair.

McNair was shot to death on July 4 at his condo by his 20-year-old mistress, Sahel Kazemi, who then turned the gun on herself.

Investigators said Friday that Gilliam used a photo provided by police to identify Kazemi as the person who bought the gun. Gilliam was assigned a public defender at a hearing Friday afternoon, but a hearing to set bond was delayed until Wednesday.

"No one denies this is a tragedy," Gilliam's public defender Hugh Mundy said. "Steve McNair was one of Nashville's heroes. A lot of lives have already been ruined. But Mr. Gilliam is a decent, hard-working family man and there's no reason to ruin his life too."

Detectives traced the gun, a 9 mm Bryco/Jennings, to its 2002 sale at a pawn shop, according to the complaint. Gilliam eventually bought it from an individual for $100 about a year or year and a half ago.

Investigators said Gilliam told them he bought the gun for protection after his home was burglarized, and police reports indicate he did report a burglary about the time of the gun purchase.

According to court documents, Gilliam told detectives he sold the gun to Kazemi for $100. Nashville Police Chief Ronal Serpas said at a news conference of federal and local officials Friday that Gilliam decided to sell the gun because his wife was afraid to have it in their house.

Gilliam was in federal custody awaiting his initial court appearance Friday afternoon. It wasn't immediately clear if he has an attorney.

Aikman says college career wasn't complete

SOUTH BEND, Ind. (AP) — Troy Aikman goes into the College Football Hall of Fame with a feeling his school days weren't complete.

It has nothing to do with the fact he didn't earn a degree before he was the first player selected in the 1989 NFL draft by the Dallas Cowboys. He filled that void last month when he earned his sociology degree from UCLA. The incomplete feeling comes from losing the two regular-season finales against USC his junior and senior years, costing the Bruins berths in the Rose Bowl both times.

"The one I regret I have on any level is that I didn't lead a team to the Rose Bowl," the three-time Super Bowl champion said. "I think a lot of times in the NFL a quarterback is measured by whether or not you lead a team to a championship. For me at UCLA, it was whether or not you led your team to the Rose Bowl. I failed to do that."

Aikman leads a class of 21 former players and coaches who will be enshrined at the hall Saturday night. Others being honored include former Oklahoma State tailback Thurman Thomas, 1959 Heisman Trophy winner Billy Cannon of LSU, former Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz and former Ohio State coach John Cooper.

Aikman, now a Fox

UCLA quarterback Troy Aikman looks for a receiver in the Cotton Bowl, on Jan. 3, 1989, in Dallas. Aikman is being enshrined into the College Football Hall of Fame today.

Sports analyst, accomplished a lot during his college career, leading the Bruins to back-to-back 10-2 seasons. Many people don't remember, though, that he helped Oklahoma win a national championship in 1985.

"Nor should they," Aikman quips.

Aikman signed to play with his home-state school after graduating from Henryetta High School in 1984. The strong-armed quarterback is still asked by people who know he played for the Sooners the same question over and over: "Why did you go to Oklahoma?"

The Sooners had switched from the wish-bone to the I-formation in 1982 because it better fit the style of freshman tailback Marcus Dupree. Aikman thought he was being brought in to add a more potent passing dimension.

Aikman ended up working out of a modified wish-bone and never felt comfortable. In his first start as a freshman when the starter was injured, the 17-year-old Aikman went 2-of-14 passing for 88 yards with three interceptions as the second-ranked Sooners lost 28-11 to a Kansas team that entered the game with a 2-5 record.

Aikman won the starting job for the Sooners in 1985, but it never felt right.

"I was never real happy with the football side of it," he said.

Although Aikman wasn't always at his best, Oklahoma managed to win its first three games. He was having his best game, completing 6-of-7 passes for 131 yards and a touchdown midway through the second quarter against Miami, when he broke his ankle in the Sooners' only loss that season.

"After he broke his leg we didn't have anybody else who could throw, so we went back to a true 'bone,'" said Jim Donnan, the offensive coordinator for that team who went on to coach Marshall and Georgia and also is being enshrined on Saturday.

British

Continued from Sports 1 stretch, and not even two late birdies could spare him the indignation of missing the cut in a major for only the second time in his professional career, and the first time in any tournament in more than three years. Needing to chip in for birdie on the 18th hole, he came up a few feet short and tapped in for a 74.

"I kept compounding my problems out there," he said.

Forget about Woods' pursuit of Jack Nicklaus' 18 majors.

Now it's about Watson going after Harry Vardon and his six British Opens.

"I wouldn't be here if I didn't think I could win," Watson said.

He was at 5-under 135 with Marino, a 29-year-old American who didn't know until last weekend that he had gotten into the British Open, and then had to fly his father from Virginia to his home in Florida to fetch Marino's passport.

"I wasn't even expecting to play in this tournament," Marino said.

Norman made a stunning bid to win the British Open at 53, the prospects of Watson winning at 59 are staggering. The oldest major champion was Julius Boros, who was 48 when he captured the 1968 PGA Championship.

Watson won his first of his five British Open at Carnoustie in 1975, five months before Woods was born.

"I guess the memories are with me, all the wonderful memories I've had playing links golf," Watson said. "Walking down the fairways, walking up onto the greens, people showing their respect for me, showing my respect for them. And it's been since 1975 — 34 years I've played links golf. And it's a fabric of my life, I can tell you that."

One shot behind was 49-year-old Mark Calcavecchia, who won 20 years ago on the coast at Royal Troon. He survived the stretch along the Firth of Clyde in a stiff wind that demanded so much of every shot. Calcavecchia made a 40-foot birdie putt on the 10th that sent him to a 69.

Dahlberg

Continued from Sports 1 time since the U.S. Open at Winged Foot, when his father had just died, was how it happened. He was cruising along the coastal holes of Turnberry making pars when a misplaced 3-wood off the tee on No. 8 set off a chain reaction — including a lost ball — that Woods could not bring under control until the 14th hole.

"It was just problem after problem," Woods said. "I just kept compounding my problems."

By the time Woods scrambled for par on 14 he was 7-over, all but done. He made two birdies coming in, but after missing the green on 18 needed to hole a chip from off the green to play on the weekend.

It came up short, and now he was done for good. A 71-74 might have kept him in contention in some majors, but in this one all it got him was a quick trip home.

"Obviously, you can't make mistakes and expect to not only make the cut but also try and win a championship," Woods said. "You have to play clean rounds of golf, and I didn't."

For Woods that has been the story in majors all year. He fought a bad swing at the Masters and fell short in a late run, and his putter cost him any chance at the U.S. Open.

Now he must win the stepchild of the majors, the PGA Championship, next month in Minneapolis or be shut out for the year in the only measure — other than his checkbook — that he keeps.

Unlike his other losses, this one can't be explained by a bad draw, a lousy swing or a balky putter. This was a pure mental meltdown by a guy whose mental toughness has never before been questioned.

"You don't often see him play shots like that, some of the shots he played," playing partner Lee Westwood said. "But everybody is entitled to a bad day every now and again. It happens to all of us."

It doesn't happen to Woods. Not like this, anyway.

That it happened this week is something he will have to learn from if he is to return to the intimidating player we once knew.

It might take some time. The disappointment from this one was deep. This was a collapse that could shake even his confidence.

Knowing Woods he'll analyze it all until he figures out what went wrong. As the sun went down over Turnberry, though, he had just one thing in mind.

"Head home," he said.

Sotomayor wins GOP backers after smooth hearings

By Julie Hirschfeld Davis and Jesse J. Holland
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — Supreme Court nominee Sonia Sotomayor won her first public pledges of support from Senate Republicans and one prominent GOP opponent, after a smooth performance at her confirmation hearings that has placed her firmly on track to become the high court's first Latina and the first Democratic-named justice in 15 years.

Three centrist Republicans announced they'd support Sotomayor even as the Senate's minority leader, Sen. Mitch McConnell of Kentucky, said he'd vote no. The split was a vivid reflection of the divisions in the GOP as the party faces a tricky vote on Sotomayor, wary of alienating its conservative base but equally afraid to anger Hispanic and women voters.

GOP Sens. Richard Lugar of Indiana, the Senate's most senior Republican, Mel Martinez of Florida, its lone Hispanic Republican, and Olympia Snowe of Maine all announced they'd vote for Sotomayor, praising her qualifications and her testimony at four days of Judiciary Committee hearings this week.

"I was pleased that Judge Sotomayor repeatedly recognized in her responses this week that 'the job of a judge is to apply the law' rather than independently make policy, and that it is the law, rather than one's own sympathies that 'compels conclusions in cases,'" Snowe said in a statement.

McConnell planned a speech Monday in which he'll say the 55-year-old appeals court judge's past statements demonstrate an "alarming lack of respect for the notion of equal justice," and question her ability to separate her sympathies and prejudices from her decisions.

McConnell joins other GOP conservatives who are lining up firmly against Sotomayor, including Sen. Robert Bennett, R-Utah, who announced Friday that he'll vote no, citing her position on gun rights and comments he said indicate "a tendency toward judicial activism." But with solid backing from Democrats, who enjoy a lopsided majority, and a growing number of Republicans, there's virtually no doubt the judge will be confirmed as the 111th Supreme Court justice.

Republicans have said they won't try to block or even delay a vote to confirm her, which is expected in early August.

Sen. Jeff Sessions of Alabama, the senior Republican on the Judiciary Committee, said Thursday that neither he nor any GOP senator he knows of is interested in holding up the vote. The panel is likely to cast the first votes on Sotomayor's nomination in late July, although Democrats were pushing for a committee vote as soon as Tuesday.

Obama to Congress: Don't lose heart on health care

By David Espo
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — President Obama, worried about growing resistance to his health care plan, exhorted Congress not to "lose heart" Friday and urged deeper cost cuts to calm concern over the huge expense of covering millions of uninsured Americans.

"What we want to do is force the Congress to make sure that they are acting" on recommendations to hold down Medicare and Medicaid spending, the president said, rather than allowing reports to sit unused on a shelf.

Aiming to rally lawmakers, he spoke from the White House near the end of a week of tumult for the legislation atop his domestic agenda.

"Now, I realize that the last few miles of any race are the hardest to run, but I have to say now is not the time to slow down, and now is certainly not the time to lose heart," he declared.

A few hours earlier, two House committees approved their portions of the sweeping health care bill over Republican objections.

That left one more panel to act, but conservative Democrats were rebelling, demanding additional measures to hold down skyrocketing costs.

Given the complexities, as well as fresh calls for delay in the Senate, House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., opened the door to pushing off a vote past the early August timeline she and Obama laid out weeks ago.

Whatever the difficulties, she predicted legislation would pass that will transform the nation's health care system, extending coverage to millions who lack it while slowing the growth in costs generally. "It is really historic. It's transformation. It's momentous," she told reporters at a news conference.

If anything, Obama tried to project even more confidence.

Ticking off a list of accomplishments to date, he said, "We are going to get this done. We will reform health care. It will happen this year. I'm absolutely convinced of that."

U.S. military in Iraq says 3 soldiers killed

By Deb Riechmann
Associated Press writer

BAGHDAD — The U.S. military said Friday that three of its soldiers were killed in the south in an attack on a base outside Iraq's second largest city of Basra.

Also, three Iraqis were killed and more than 40 others were injured in bombings in Baghdad as huge crowds of pilgrims gathered to commemorate a revered Shiite saint. In Karmah, 50 miles west of the capital, the daughter and granddaughter of a police officer died in a bombing at his home.

The security situation in Iraq has improved dramatically in the last two years, though militants still carry out lethal attacks on a regular basis.

"Three Multi-National Division-South Soldiers were killed when Contingency Operating Base Basra was attacked by indirect fire," the U.S. military said, referring to a mortar or rocket attack.

Britain, which had a large force there, has ended combat operations and begun pulling out its troops. The British bases around the city and the airport were once subject to regular mortar barrages by Shiite militias believed to have received funding and training from Iran.

Last year, Iraqi forces, with U.S. support, routed Shiite militias from their strongholds in Basra.

Col. Butch Kievenaar, the top U.S. military commander in southern Iraq, said in a Defense Department briefing earlier this week that some Iraqi extremists who had gone to Iran have returned to the Basra region.

Maine town fights phase-out of curbside public mailbox

By Clarke Canfield
Associated Press writer

OTISFIELD, Maine — The folks of Otisfield are so fond of their lone public mailbox that they blocked it with a snowplow and a backhoe to prevent the Postal Service from taking it away in the gloom of night. Town officials also threatened to chain themselves to the blue box if necessary.

The box is still there, for now at least. But it's probably a losing battle.

The familiar blue street-corner mailbox is going the way of the pay phone. More than 188,000 boxes nationwide have been removed this decade as e-mail, online bill-paying and Internet catalogs cause a drop-off in the volume of mail handled by the Postal Service.

This town of 1,700 people 35 miles from Portland doesn't have a post office. It doesn't even have its own ZIP code. And it isn't about to give up its mailbox without a fight.

"It's the town of Otisfield's post office," said Marianne Izzo-Morin, the town's administrative assistant. "We can't buy stamps there, but we can put mail in there and know it'll be delivered."

On June 30, a notice reading "This Box Will be Removed From Service in 10 Days" was taped to the box outside Town Hall. Postal officials said the box gets only six pieces of mail a day on average, far below the 25-letter threshold that makes a mailbox worth the money.

But when a postal worker showed up to remove the box this week, Izzo-Morin and the town clerk blocked his way and prevented him from taking it away. Izzo-

Administrative Assistant to the Otisfield Board of Selectmen, Marianne Izzo-Morin, left, and Otisfield Town Clerk, Treasurer and tax collector, Sharon Matthews, pose Tuesday in front of the public mailbox outside of the town hall in Otisfield, Maine. The U.S. Postal Service has proposed removing the box, which is the town's only public mailbox, in the name of efficiency and cost-effectiveness.

Morin was also prepared to padlock herself to the box. And the town's road commissioner blocked the box with heavy-duty machinery so it couldn't be removed while folks were asleep.

Izzo-Morin has also called state legislators and contacted Maine's U.S. senators (alas, via e-mail). And a "Save Our US Mailbox" sign was put up outside Town Hall.

The Postal Service decided to leave the box for now, pending further review.

The Postal Service has been removing the boxes nationally at the rate of more than 60 per day this decade. As of Wednesday, 176,936 remained, said spokeswoman Sue Brennan. The agency projects it will handle fewer than 180 billion pieces of mail this year, down from 213 billion pieces two years ago as people increasingly turn to other means of communication and other shipping services.

The Postal Service said putting the boxes out to pasture saves money because it doesn't have to paint or otherwise maintain them or pay somebody to pick up the mail in them.

"Removal of underused blue collection boxes has become fairly routine, unfortunately, because it makes good sense," said Tom Rizzo, a postal spokesman in Maine.

Powerful Iranian cleric says country in crisis

By Ali Akbar Dareini
Associated Press writer

TEHRAN, Iran — In a sign of endurance for Iran's protest movement, demonstrators clashed with police Friday as one of the nation's most powerful clerics challenged the supreme leader during Muslim prayers, saying country was in crisis in the wake of a disputed election.

The turnout of tens of thousands of worshippers for former President Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani's sermon at Tehran University and the battles with police outside represented the biggest opposition show of strength in weeks. Protesters faced fierce government suppression and hundreds were arrested following the disputed June 12 presidential election.

Outside the university, protests grew from several hundred before the sermon to thousands afterward as worshippers joined in, chanting, "death to the dictator," a reference to President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad.

Protesters were confronted by riot police and a menacing line of pro-government Basiji militiamen on motorcycles, who charged with batons. Plainclothes Basijis fired volleys of tear gas, and young protesters with green bandanas over their faces kicked the canisters across the pavement. Some set a bonfire in the street and waved their hands in victory signs. Dozens were arrested, taken away in trucks, witnesses said.

Protests, which flared following the election, had been stifled in recent weeks. The sometimes tearful sermon by Rafsanjani could be a significant boost to the movement's staying power. It was an open challenge to Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, aired live on nationwide radio from one of the country's most potent political stages.

Afghan bombs kill 12 including British soldier

KABUL (AP) — Bombs killed a dozen people, including a British soldier and five children, in southern Afghanistan, authorities said Friday, as U.S. and British officials consider sending more troops to combat the growing Taliban insurgency.

The five children were among 11 people who died Friday when a roadside bomb struck their vehicle in the Spin Boldak district of southern Kandahar province near the border with Pakistan, according to police Gen. Saifullah Hakim.

The victims, all members of an extended family, were traveling to a local Muslim religious shrine for Friday prayer services, Hakim said.

Kandahar is the birthplace of the Taliban, and Hakim blamed the Islamic militants who plant bombs along roads in the area to target Afghan and foreign troops for Friday's blast.

"Innocent civilians are dying as a result," he said.

In London, the British Ministry of Defense announced that a British soldier was killed Thursday when a bomb exploded near a foot patrol in Gereshk, an industrial city of Helmand province where fighting has been raging this month. The soldier's death brings to 48 the number of NATO soldiers killed in Afghanistan in July — the deadliest month for the international force since the war began in 2001.

Idaho bar owner a pawn in vast cybercrime

POCATELLO (AP) — An eastern Idaho bar owner has become a pawn in a vast cybercrime operation involving Eastern European criminals who hacked into a company that processes hundreds of millions of credit card payments.

Odyssey Bar owner Andy Kordopatis of Pocatello says he gets three or four phone calls a day from people wondering about electronic transactions at his bar that appeared on their credit card.

"It's crazy," Kordopatis told the Idaho State Journal. "What do I do?"

So far he's been referring the callers to Lawrence

Baldwin, a cybercrime investigator from Georgia.

Baldwin said criminals got the credit card numbers after hacking into Heartland Payment Systems.

He said the criminals are using Odyssey Bar not to make purchases, but to see if the stolen card numbers are still valid by checking to see if there is authorization for a pending charge.

If the cards are active, the thieves use them to go on shopping sprees, Baldwin said.

Some of the card holders who keep close watch on their credit cards online are calling Kordopatis after seeing small pre-authorization charges.

Baldwin said Kordopatis has done nothing wrong and is not at risk of losing money. He said Kordopatis is one of thousands with merchant accounts that criminals are using as phony charge sites for pre-authorization checks.

"There's all different classes of people that are using these systems," said Baldwin. "Some of them are basically street criminals who are on the ground, trying to use these cards at Wal-Mart and Target and such."

If a card number is valid, the criminals have equipment to electronically write the number onto the magnetic strips of a blank card.

"Five minutes later, they run in the store and buy a $500 camera," Baldwin said.

He said the pre-authorization typically never appears as a charge, and is usually only spotted by banks with careful fraud precautions or card holders who frequently check their accounts online.

Baldwin said even he's been a victim.

"I had it happen on my own card," Baldwin said. "It was because of the Wyndam Hotel breach (last July). The ironic thing is I was meeting with law enforcement at the time to discuss identity theft issues."

Free entry at Yellowstone, Teton parks this weekend

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Visitors to Grand Teton and Yellowstone national parks today and Sunday won't have to pay the $20 admission fee.

The parks are among 147 nationwide that will be open to the public without admission charges over the weekend. All other park fees will apply.

The standard one-day admission rate to both Grand Teton and Yellowstone national parks is $20 per vehicle. Those who can't make it this weekend get another chance next month: No admission will be charged on Aug. 15 and 16.

AROUND IDAHO

Idaho tax revenue in FY2009 comes up $80 million short

BOISE — Idaho came up about $80 million short of already reduced fiscal year 2009 tax revenue projections due to the slumping economy and rising unemployment.

As a result, Idaho state controller Donna Jones said Friday she transferred money from a budget reserve fund and a public education stabilization fund to balance the books that closed June 30.

The 2009 Legislature and Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter had made sure Idaho financial officials had access to rainy day accounts to balance the 2009 budget, as required by the Idaho Constitution.

Unlike other states like California, Idaho still has millions in reserves, should its economy — and tax revenue — deteriorate further as fiscal year 2010 progresses.

Jones said in a statement, "State government leaders had the foresight to set aside savings when times were good to help make these difficult times a little easier."

4 Idaho inmates have swine flu

BOISE — Four inmates at the Idaho Correctional Center have confirmed cases of swine flu.

Cultures were sent to the state laboratory on Tuesday and the inmates and their units were quarantined.

With the four cases now confirmed, the facility near Boise will be locked down, with access restricted to staff only, until the possibility of contracting the virus has passed.

No visitors or volunteers will be able to access the center during the lockdown. Visitation normally scheduled for Friday, Saturday, Sunday and Monday has been canceled.

The medical needs of the affected inmates are being provided for by facility medical staff.

No mussels found on Wyoming boat

BOISE — A Utah wildlife official says a boat that was stopped at a southeastern Idaho lake last week was not contaminated with the larvae of an invasive mussel.

Larry Dalton, aquatic invasive species coordinator for the Utah Division of Wildlife Resources, says technicians called in by Idaho to inspect the boat found no evidence of larvae on the hull. Dalton says the craft was also decontaminated before being allowed to enter Bear Lake, which rests in both states.

The Wyoming boat was intercepted last week after officials at the Bear Lake Regional Commission became suspicious of a gritty scum on the hull.

Idaho fish and game officials are trying to prevent introduction of quagga and zebra mussels into state waters. The mussels can spread quickly, clog water pipes and damage aquatic ecosystems.

Write an essay and win a house

MISSOULA, Mont. — An Idaho couple wants to move to Montana, and they're offering their house in Coeur d'Alene to the winner of an essay contest.

Dick and Wendy Webb decided after 17 years that it was time to move on. But, instead of going the traditional route and selling their home, they decided to hold an essay contest and award the house to the winner.

The three-bedroom, two-bath house in Coeur d'Alene sits on 11 acres with a shop, a pond and landscaping.

The couple are asking applicants to write a 1,500 word essay by November, accompanied by a check for $150. Then a college English class will pick the winner and the Webbs promise to hand over the title.

The couple has a Web site and they've received essays from as far away as New York.

Police: Driver at fault in fatal cow crash

CALDWELL — Idaho State Police investigators say a cattle transport driver who crashed July 10 — killing 20 head of livestock — was operating the truck illegally because he had a suspended license.

Paul Edwards, 44, of Meridian, has been cited for operating the vehicle while disqualified. He faces up to six months in jail or a $1,000 fine if found guilty.

Troopers said Edwards was driving for Weeks Trucking when he lost control just outside of Parma. He was hauling 72 head of cattle. Trooper Shawn Klitch said Edwards was badly injured in the crash, with a broken facial bones, three cracked vertebrae and head injuries.

Edwards told police an oncoming vehicle came into his lane, but ISP officials say they haven't found any witnesses to the actual crash.

Minidoka Co. Fair reminds exhibitors to preregister

The Minidoka County Fair Board reminds everyone entering open-class exhibits for the 2009 fair that they need to preregister at the fair office. All exhibitors, with the exception of those in the flower department, will need to get entry tags before check-in day.

Information: 436-9748. Fair book and entry forms can be found at www.minidoka.id.us. The fair will be held July 27-Aug. 1.

Minidoka fair board seeks Grandma Queen candidates

The Minidoka County Fair Board is looking for candidates for the 2009 Grandma Queen.

To nominate someone, write a short story about your favorite person and tell why she should be the Grandma Queen. The only requirements are that she must be at least 50 years old and a grandma. Mail to: Minidoka County Fair Board, P.O. Box 151, Rupert, ID 83350. Deadline for nominations is July 24.

Information: 436-9748.

Lindsay earns college honors

College of Court Reporting announced that Stephanie Lindsay, of Rupert, received highest honors with a 4.0 grade-point average for the winter 2009 semester.

The College of Court Reporting was founded in 1984 by Kay Moody and teaches courses necessary for a court reporting career. Students have the opportunity to enroll in additional courses for broadcast captioning or communication access real-time translation (CART) reporting, which aid the deaf and hard of hearing.

Hieb attends Utah State engineering program

Joshua Hieb, a student excelling in math and science at Minico High School, was among 212 students attending Utah State University's 20th annual engineering state program in Logan, Utah, held June 8-11.

The four-day program introduces high school students to the engineering profession. Students participate in a variety of challenge sessions taught during the week.

Among the 14 hands-on, competitive exercises called challenge sessions, students construct a small bridge, design and fly balsa wood aircraft in a wind tunnel, make electromagnetic cannons, take lab measurements of "bioreactors" which result in the production of bioplastics and biofuels and fly in an aircraft simulator.

Law doesn't say how old latchkey kids should be

Q: How old does my child have to be before I can leave him or her at home alone?

A: If you are talking about a daughter, I'd say 21 is a good age. Sons, I'd say, would have to be 40 or older before you can trust them alone at home.

This subject gets a lot of discussion, partially because the law doesn't give a specific age of when a child can be left alone at home. It does, however, give officers the right to take children from a home they believe poses the threat of serious physical or mental injury to the child or children.

Police must prove to a judge that physical or mental injury occurred or could occur. Police usually aren't in the habit of removing children from a home unless dire circumstances can be proven.

Many professionals agree that the age most children are able to take care of themselves is 12. It's not a guideline to live by for every child, but is a good time to teach children some responsibility and independence.

I suggest that all children need to know not only what 911 is, but how and when to use it. Children should also learn some simple first-aid, including what to do if somebody is choking. Teaching children about dealing with strangers is also a must.

Finally, if your child is going to babysit, he or she should take a basic babysitting class, which will offer good information and be a selling point to help drum up business.

Q: Have car companies stopped putting working turn signals on cars? I'm joking, but you are supposed to signal when you change lanes to pass someone on the freeway, right? Also, how many car lengths should you be ahead of the car you passed before re-entering the right lane?

A: Turn signals were put on vehicles for a reason — to let people know you intend to turn left or right. Failing to signal any turning intention could cost $75 if you get caught.

As for when to re-enter a lane after passing, the general rule I use is to allow one second of distance for every 10 mph you're traveling. For example, if you're going 35, follow four seconds behind the vehicle you're following, or wait four seconds after passing a vehicle to re-enter the right lane. Also, be sure to look, as they may have sped up.

To judge your following distance, pick a fixed point along the road, like a sign or marker, and count the time between when the car in front of you passes it and when you pass it.

Officer down

Please put this officer, killed in the line of duty, and his family in your prayers.

Rare genetic muscle disorder causes pain and weakness

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have had a condition since infancy that causes abnormal fatigue in the muscles. It was not diagnosed until June 2007, when I was 75. A muscle chemical biopsy showed that I have McArdle's disease. The first reported case was in 1951. As far as I can tell, there has been very little research on this disease because it is so rare. There is also no treatment or cure.

I am writing in the hopes that you or someone out there knows something about this condition that may be of use to me. My physical activities have steadily become more limited.

DEAR READER: McArdle's disease, also known as glycogen-storage disease type V, is a genetic disorder. It is caused when the body does not produce a specific enzyme used to make "fuel" for skeletal muscles.

It commonly begins in young adulthood as exercise intolerance and muscle cramping. Some patients may recall symptoms of muscle weakness, lack of endurance and muscle pain starting in early childhood or adolescence. Overall, it is considered to be a relatively benign disorder in that life expectancy is no different than that of other people.

Symptoms include severe muscle pain and fatigue within the first few minutes of exercise. If continued, muscle spasms or contractures may develop. This causes muscle damage, which can result in myoglobinuria, a dark discoloration of the urine after exercise. This comes and goes, depending on the severity of the damage done during exercise.

There is no treatment or cure, but there is some evidence that drinking a sugary beverage before exercise may reduce or prevent symptoms. Gentle aerobic

5 black bears shot, killed in Utah in July

By Mike Stark
Associated Press writer

SALT LAKE CITY — Five black bears that have wandered too close to people and livestock have been shot in the past two weeks in Utah.

Wildlife officials said Wednesday they were looking into the shootings, pointing out that no black bears had been shot last year.

"We're just scratching our heads wondering why," said Mark Hadley, a spokesman for the Utah Division of Wildlife Resources.

The bears have been shot after wandering into campgrounds and developed areas, or in one case getting caught eating livestock.

Hadley said in some cases people have left out food and other items that attracted the bears. However, a wet spring has provided plenty of food for bears in wild areas.

A young bear was shot at a campground early Sunday near Barker Reservoir in Garfield County. A day earlier, a bear was shot after killing a calf and trying to chase down another in southern Utah, Hadley said.

Biologists estimate there are 3,000 to 4,000 black bears living in Utah. As the weather warms, more people travel into wooded areas where the bears live and bear sightings tend to increase.

The Division of Wildlife Resources typically gets dozens of calls each summer reporting black bear incidents — everything from sightings in the distance to a close encounter in a campground.

Most of the time, wildlife officials can either chase it away or trap and relocate it. As many as six cases a year result in bears being euthanized, often as a last resort because the bear shows no fear of people.

Authorities have euthanized one black bear this year after it was caught rummaging through a tent at a church camp near Kamas.

But it's unusual, Hadley said, for so many people to take up arms against bears.

One bear was killed on July 1 at a Uintah County campground after it refused to leave and posed a threat to a camper, who shot and killed it.

Similar instances were reported near Springville, where a campground host shot a bear July 3. A day later, a cabin owner shot a bear he thought posed a threat to neighbors in the South Fork of Provo Canyon.

In both cases, the bear apparently didn't respond to attempts to scare it away.

Hadley said Uintah County prosecutors decided the man in the July 1 case was justified in killing the bear. Other cases have not been decided.

If prosecutors determine a shooting is not justified, the shooter can face a charge of wanton destruction of protected wildlife, a crime that can bring jail time, a fine and temporary loss of hunting privileges.

Hadley urged campers to keep a clean camp and call wildlife officials when they spot a black bear.

exercise is important because it can help condition the muscles and improve performance and quality of life. Obesity must be avoided because it will decrease exercise capabilities and lead to worsened symptoms.

Because muscle damage can cause kidney damage or failure, it is important to be under the care of a physician familiar with McArdle's disease. He or she can monitor the situation and give specific advice regarding diet and exercise.

I also recommend you go online to the Muscular Dystrophy Campaign Web site at www.muscular-dystrophy.org for more information.

DEAR DR. GOTT: My husband is 84 years old and, for the past six years, he has experienced cold chills in his chest and other parts of his body. He wears thermal underwear all the time but is still always cold.

His doctor told him that he is anemic but that he didn't know what was causing it. What should we do?

DEAR READER: If your husband is anemic, it is likely the cause of his constant chills. If his doctor is unwilling or unable to order further testing, request a referral to a hematologist (blood specialist). He or she should be able to determine the cause of the low red blood cell count and offer advice on treatment options.

In the meantime, I suggest he begin taking iron supplements, since most anemia is due to a low iron level. He should start with a low dose of slow-acting iron to reduce the risk of constipation.

Anemia can have many causes, including a low B-12 level, internal bleeding, cancer, low red blood cell production, a lack of a certain hormone, low levels of certain vitamins or minerals, and certain disorders that cause abnormal destruction of blood cells.

To give you related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Blood — Donations and Disorders." Other readers who would like a copy should send a self-addressed, stamped No. 10 envelope and a check or money order for $2 to Newsletter, PO Box 167, Wickliffe, OH 44092. Be sure to mention the title.

Idaho judge sues state Supreme Court

BOISE (AP) — A district judge sued five Idaho Supreme Court justices in federal court, contending they're violating his civil rights as he fights an effort to eject him from office for not living where he was elected.

Second District Judge John H. Bradbury, who filed the U.S. District Court lawsuit on Friday, bought a house in Idaho County after his 2002 election, but also lives in a Nez Perce County house because it cuts his commute to other courts in his far-flung district.

The Idaho Judicial Council, which probes alleged judicial misconduct, contends that violates an Idaho law requiring Bradbury "actually reside at the place designated as resident chambers."

The Council wants him dismissed; there's a Supreme Court hearing on the matter next week that Bradbury wants halted.

In federal court documents, he contends due-process violations, because Supreme Court Chief Justice Daniel Eismann is also chairman of the Idaho Judicial Council, but hasn't recused himself from the case; and because Bradbury contends the residency law is "unconstitutionally vague."

The Boise Guardian, a Web site, reported on the federal lawsuit Thursday.

Man uses chain saw to fend off mountain lion

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — A Colorado man used a chain saw to fight off a mountain lion that attacked him during a camping trip with his wife and two toddlers in northwestern Wyoming.

The adult male lion, described as emaciated and showing other signs of starvation, was later killed by wildlife officials after it attacked a dog brought in to track it.

Dustin Britton, a 32-year-old mechanic and ex-Marine from Windsor, Colo., said he was alone cutting firewood about 100 feet from his campsite in the Shoshone National Forest when he saw the 100-pound lion staring at him from some bushes.

The 6-foot, 170-pound Britton said he raised his 18-inch chain saw and met the lion head-on as it pounced — a collision he described as feeling like a grown man running directly into him.

"It batted me three or four times with its front paws, and as quick as I hit it with that saw, it just turned away," he said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press.

Wildlife officials said Sunday evening's attack about 27 miles west of Cody was highly unusual because mountain lions are reclusive by nature. Only eight cases of mountain lions acting aggressively toward humans have been documented in Wyoming over the last decade.

Given the animal's low body weight — male lions in Wyoming typically weigh 140 to 150 pounds — it may have attacked Britton out of desperation, said Mark Brusino, a Wyoming Fish and Game biologist who responded to the incident.

"Starvation is a strong motivator for any animal in chasing a meal," he said.

It was uncertain why it was starving. Britton's campsite, near the North Fork of the Shoshone River, was in an area heavily populated by the lion's typical prey — elk, deer and bighorn sheep.

Episcopal bishops OK prayer for gay couples

By Michelle Rindels
Associated Press writer

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Episcopal bishops authorized the church Wednesday to start drafting an official prayer for same-sex couples, another step toward acceptance of gay relationships that will deepen the rift between the denomination and its fellow Anglicans overseas.

The bishops voted 104-30 at the Episcopal General Convention to “collect and develop theological resources and liturgies” for blessing same-gender relationships, which would be considered at the next national meeting in 2012.

The resolution notes the growing number of states that allow gay marriage, civil unions and domestic partnerships, and gave bishops in those regions discretion to provide a “generous pastoral response” to couples in local parishes.

Many Episcopal dioceses already allow clergy to bless same-sex couples but there is no official liturgy for the ceremonies in the denomination’s Book of Prayer. The measure still needs the approval of the lay people and priest delegates at the assembly, which ended Friday.

National Guard units strained by chaplain shortage soldier's soul

By Nomann Merchant
Associated Press writer

MINNEAPOLIS — When patriotism inspired the Rev. Jerry Fehn a decade ago to serve soldiers in combat zones abroad, the 45-year-old was afraid he had waited too long.

He needn't have worried. The National Guard, wrestling with a chronic shortage of priests, cleared the roadblocks that might have kept Fehn out.

“They didn't really want to take someone over 40,” Fehn said. “But because there's such a shortage of Catholic priests in the military, they said they would grant me a waiver if I could pass the physical.”

Fehn went on to serve in Bosnia, Kosovo and Iraq. Meanwhile, the guard has made significant strides in adding chaplains to its ranks, though many units still struggle to recruit for a position seen as crucial to morale. About 200 positions are open in the Army National Guard and 45 in the Air National Guard.

“It makes it harder to provide religious support,” said Chaplain Samuel J.T. Boone, commandant of the U.S. Army Chaplain Center and School at Fort Jackson, S.C. “There are some people who we can't provide their religious rites and sacraments as we can back here in the States.”

Chaplains serve as more than ministers for guardsmen in harm's way. They are confidants, counselors and arbitrators. In Iraq and Afghanistan, unit commanders have used chaplains to communicate with local leaders and clergy. Many chaplains are embedded with units and travel through war zones, putting them within arm's reach of soldiers.

The chaplain shortage contrasts with general Guard recruiting, which is at capacity. And clergy ranks in full-time military branches remain full.

The guard's shortfall stems primarily from a lack of Roman Catholic priests willing to volunteer. Catholic dioceses that face a national shortage of priests may find it difficult to replace chaplains — even for one weekend a month.

“The priest has those responsibilities on weekends, and two weeks of training,” Fehn said. “That impacts the priest's ability to be with the congregation on weekends for weddings and funerals. And then that priest might be gone for deployment.”

The Army National Guard has just six rabbis and no imams for its 362,000 guardsmen. Clergy from smaller Christian denominations and other faiths also are needed.

Though he was 45 at the time, the National Guard granted his request to serve because of the shortage of Catholic priests in the military.

Exactly how many clergy are deemed enough per guard unit varies. The Army National Guard's goal is a chaplain for every battalion, which range from 500 to 700 soldiers. The goal for Air National Guard units is three chaplains and three chaplain assistants per wing; wings generally have about 1,000 members.

Guard units are responsible for their own recruiting, and shortages are worse in some regions. Units in the more Protestant South and Midwest generally fare better, while the Mountain West states and the more Catholic Northeast struggle, according to personnel chaplains for both the Army and Air National Guards.

Certain states also have more military families and a culture that celebrates joining the armed forces, said Chaplain Bruce Marciano of Bells take toll on community, judge rules

Nicholas Riccardi
Los Angeles Times

PHOENIX — After nearly 20 years on an impersonal commercial strip, the Cathedral of Christ the King moved to a quiet residential neighborhood in the northwestern edge of this metropolis. Church leaders were eager to be part of a community.

Then, on Palm Sunday 2008, they started ringing the church bells every half hour during the day.

The complaints soon began, so church leaders cut back the tolling to once per hour. They put up Styrofoam to muffle the sound. But they didn't see how they could stop tolling the bells. “We ring our bells as a part of our worship, just like singing, praying and preaching the Word of God,” they wrote in a statement.

The only force that could silence the bells was City Hall.

Prosecutors filed two charges against the head of the church, and last month Bishop Rick Painter, 67, was convicted of disturbing the peace.

Some communities, wary of bells, parochial schools and bustle, have tried to keep out churches with zoning changes and public hearings.

But officials with the Alliance Defense Fund, a religious liberties legal group representing the church, said the case is the first they know of in which criminal law has been used to keep a church quiet.

“It's frankly a little bit astonishing,” said ADF attorney Gary S. McCaleb, contending the case violates the church's First Amendment freedom to practice its religion. “It's very clearly an expression and outworking of their faith.”

But Phoenix officials and some of the church's neighbors see it differently. “It wasn't an isolated incident. It happened repeatedly,” said City Prosecutor Aaron Carreon-Ainsa. Al Brooks, who lives behind the church, offered a more vivid description. “We were living in a bell tower.”

The Cathedral of Christ the King sits on a busy thoroughfare just off Interstate 17, but immediately behind it spreads a typically tranquil Phoenix subdivision of ranch homes. The functional square chapel is flanked by several smaller, detached buildings.

A 21st century equivalent of a bell tower sits atop its two-story school building, an electronic device that replicates a church bell's sound over loudspeakers.

Lawsuit seeks to block ‘In God We Trust’ engraving

By Ryan J. Foley
Associated Press writer

MADISON, Wis. — The nation's largest group of atheists and agnostics filed a lawsuit Tuesday seeking to block an architect from engraving “In God We Trust” and the Pledge of Allegiance at the Capitol Visitor Center in Washington.

The Madison-based Freedom From Religion Foundation's lawsuit, filed in U.S. District Court in western Wisconsin, claims the taxpayer-funded engravings would be an unconstitutional endorsement of religion.

The House and Senate passed identical resolutions this month directing the Architect of the Capitol to engrave “In God We Trust” and the pledge in prominent places at the entrance for 3 million tourists who visit the Capitol each year.

The resolution came in response to critics who complained Congress spent $621 million on the new three-story underground center without paying respect to the nation's religious heritage. The center opened in December after years of construction.

The foundation is seeking a court order to stop the engravings, which the Congressional Budget Office estimates will cost less than $100,000.

“In God We Trust” has been the national motto since 1956 and has appeared on U.S. currency since 1957.

Utah Episcopal leader elected to national board

SALT LAKE CITY — The chancellor of the Episcopal Diocese of Utah has been named to a seat on a national board of the Episcopal Church.

Diocese spokesman Craig Wirth says Stephen F. Hutchinson was elected to the Executive Council of the Episcopal Church. The election was held Wednesday during the faith's 2009 General Convention in Anaheim, Calif.

The 38-member council serves as the governing body of the church between conventions, which are held every three years. The council is comprised of bishops, priests, deacons and laypersons.

As chancellor of the Utah diocese, the 62-year-old Hutchinson is the church's lawyer and administrative officer.

Jury to resume work in Oregon faith-healing trial

OREGON CITY, Ore. — An Oregon jury is heading into its second full day of deliberations over whether two believers in faith healing should be convicted for denying their daughter medical care as she was dying of pneumonia.

The jury in the trial of Carl Brent and Raylene Worthington went home Thursday without reaching a verdict on the charges of manslaughter and criminal neglect.

Jurors are to resume deliberations Friday, the end of the third week of the trial in Clackamas County.

The Worthingtons' 15-month-old daughter, Ava, died in March 2008. A medical examiner said she could easily have been saved.

The Worthingtons belong to a church in Oregon City, the Followers of Christ, that shuns conventional medicine.

Russian Orthodox museum to close

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — A museum that chronicled the history of the Russian Orthodox church in Alaska with artifacts and artwork dating back as long as a century will close its doors in August.

Low attendance and expensive bills have doomed the Russian Orthodox Museum in Anchorage. The church that operates the museum decided it is time to close the doors. Artifacts will be returned to the churches that donated them.

Rev. Mikel Bock says the closure has to be done because the diocese is hurting because of the economy.

Priest dropped from immigrant's lawsuit

MIAMI — An illegal immigrant from Indonesia has dropped a former Catholic priest and TV star from a lawsuit in which he claims he was arrested to protect the priest's wife.

Maxi Paulus Ratunuman (RAH' -too-noo-mahn) was arrested June 6 on false trespassing charges by an off-duty police officer whom he says provided security for the Rev. Alberto Cutie (KOO'-tee-ay). Ratunuman, who overstayed a tourist visa, was in immigration custody in Miami, his lawyer said Tuesday.

Ratunuman claims he is the ex of Cutie's wife Ruhama Bune Canellis. He alleges she conspired to get him deported because he was asking for money she owed him.

Cutie's attorney says Cutie has been vindicated and his wife will soon be as well.

Recruiters are using new methods to lure would-be guard chaplains. They attend more religious conferences and seminaries to identify candidates. In the past, the guard created a student loan repayment program and offered cash rewards to chaplains who refer clergy who complete training.

And in underrepresented faiths, the guard has allowed age exceptions for older clergy who meet physical standards join and stay longer.

The efforts have paid off. The Army National Guard boosted its chaplain ranks from 52 percent capacity in 2000 to its current 70 percent. Personnel Chaplain Bruce Farrell predicts more growth in the next few years.

The Air National Guard jumped from about 70 percent capacity in 2006 to almost 90 percent today, Marciano said. "We're not there yet, but we hope to get to 100 percent," he said.

"We certainly feel a deep need to be able to proclaim the love of God in the midst of a changing reality," said Suffragan Bishop James Curry of the Diocese of Connecticut, one of six states that are legalizing same-gender marriage.

A day earlier, the convention had declared gays and lesbians eligible for "any ordained ministry" even though Anglican leaders had sought a clear moratorium on consecrating another gay bishop. The vote effectively lifted a self-imposed Episcopal pledge from three years ago to use "restraint" in approving another bishop in a same-sex relationship.

The Episcopal Church, which is the Anglican body in the U.S., caused an uproar in 2003 by consecrating the first openly gay bishop, V. Gene Robinson of New Hampshire.

To calm tensions and keep the global Anglican Communion together, Anglican leaders five years ago pressed Episcopalians for a temporary ban on electing gay bishops, and asked that the church refrain from developing an official prayer service for same-sex couples.

From Amish to vampires, Christian fiction expands

By Eric Gorski
Associated Press writer

DENVER — The Christian book business, optimistic that a little literary escapism might be an antidote for readers in hard times, is turning to bonnets, buggies and bloodsuckers.

Even as Christian publishing suffers during the recession — one study found net sales for Christian retailers were down almost 11 percent in 2008 — several publishing houses are adding or expanding their fiction lines with both the tame (Amish heroines) and boundary-pushing (Christian vampire lit).

The undisputed industry leader is so-called Amish fiction — typically, romances and family sagas set in contemporary Amish communities. They're a surprise hit with evangelical women attracted by a simpler time, curiosity about cloistered communities and admiration for the strong, traditional faith of the Amish.

The success of the genre has spawned not just new Amish fiction authors but spinoff series about other cloistered communities. If you want to sell it, as one literary agent put it, put a bonnet on it.

But not all new Christian fiction is prairie wholesome. There's building buzz — and some trepidation — about upcoming titles that bring a Christian perspective to tales of vampires and the undead.

The consensus of publishers, authors and others gathered in Denver this week for the annual International Christian Retail Show, which closed Wednesday: there's a growing audience for Christian fiction that both comforts and challenges, now more than a decade after the apocalyptic "Left Behind" series took Christian fiction out of obscurity and onto Walmart shelves and the New York Times best-seller list.

"If you look at 'Left Behind,' the moon turns to blood and one-third of the people die," said Karen Watson, associate publisher, fiction, for Tyndale House, which published the series. "Or you have people with bonnets on drawing water from the well. It just tells me there are a wide range of things you can talk about, and Christian books can be a lot of things."

Christian fiction often has mimicked successful genres: Romance. Sci-fi. Legal Thrillers. But in Amish fiction, Christian publishing has something it can genuinely claim as its own.

Much of the credit goes to Beverly Lewis, a Colorado author who gave birth to the genre in 1997 with "The Shunning," loosely based on her grandmother's experience of leaving her Old Order Mennonite upbringing to marry a Bible college student. The book has sold more than 1 million copies.

Lewis tapped into a fascination with the Amish, who base their morals on a literal interpretation of the Bible and are known for their plain clothes and rejection of modern technology.

"For every lineup of Amish women at a gathering of any kind, you'll always see one of them that has her hand kind of on her hip," said Lewis, who grew up a Pentecostal preacher's daughter in Pennsylvania Amish country. "That's my character. She's the one that's pushing boundaries."

Bonnet fiction does play to the base of the market: Three in four Christian fiction readers are women, according to publishing research from the firm R.R. Bowker.

Lewis also credits the genre's growth to public fascination with Lancaster County, Pa., Amish who forgave a gunman who killed five girls at an Amish one-room schoolhouse before killing himself in 2006.

Wanda Brunstetter, who is probably No. 2 to Lewis on the Amish fiction roster, said she's heard from readers turning to her fiction not just for escape but for lessons during tough economic times.

"People are learning from the Amish novels how they can simplify and set their priorities straight," Brunstetter, who writes Amish romance, said between book signings at the retail show.

Lewis' publisher, Bethany House, which specializes in historical fiction, has published Puritan and Shaker stories. Next spring it will release fiction about the Amana Colonies of Iowa, where German pietists lived communally until the mid-1930s, said Steve Oates, vice president of sales and marketing.

"Historical fiction is a great way to have a nice clean story when a certain set of values didn't seem out of place," Oates said.

Mindy Starns Clark, an author of gothic mysteries scrubbed clean of foul language and premarital sex for a Christian audience, set her latest novel, "Shadows of Lancaster County," in Amish country.

"It's got a buggy on the cover," said Clark, who emphasized that she picked the setting before Amish books became a Christian publishing sensation. "But it's also got genetic engineering. It's definitely not your grandmother's Amish novel."

On the darker side is Eric Wilson's "Jerusalem's Undead" trilogy from Thomas Nelson, which follows characters who have risen from the dead after being tainted by the blood of Judas, betrayer of Jesus.

Bells

was sensitive to the complaints. They eventually cut back to hourly bells, 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. They took a sound reading and found the bell registered 67 decibels — the volume of a regular conversation.

Some neighbors liked the bell, church leaders said. They heard from people who set their clocks by it, and a postman who used it to time his rounds.

But, Brooks pointed out, none of those people lived next to the bells. He and other immediate neighbors contacted a company that manufactures electronic church bells to ask what distance they should be played from residences. The response: 400 feet.

Brooks' house is 40 feet from the building with the bells.

The Phoenix city prosecutor's office took up the case.

The office filed 774 noise cases last year, but Carreon-Ainsa said he's unaware of any others targeting churches. He said the case was handled like any other noise complaint. "It really doesn't matter if it was a church or a person next door ringing the bells."

The trial in front of a municipal court judge lasted only a few hours. In the end, Judge Lori Metcalf gave Painter a 10-day sentence — suspended as long as the bells stayed quiet and the bishop stayed out of trouble.

She permitted the ringing of bells only on Sunday and certain church holidays.

The ADF has vowed to appeal, contending that Phoenix's noise pollution statute violates the First Amendment.

McCaleb noted that the law includes an exemption for commercial vehicles like ice cream trucks but not for religious institutions.

Ever since the June 3 ruling, the bells have remained silent, even on Sundays. Painter does not want to risk jail should the bell toll too loudly or at the wrong time. "We miss them," he said of the bells. "It just seems there's an absence."

Brooks, on the other hand, is cheered by the silence, though he's a bit startled at the threat of incarceration hanging over the bishop's head. "We didn't want the man to go to jail," he said. "We just wanted the bells to stop."

Episcopal conservatives who have stayed with the denomination lamented the latest votes and predicted the already splintering Anglican fellowship would fracture.

tion last week, the Anglican spiritual leader, Archbishop of Canterbury Rowan Williams, told delegates, "I hope and pray that there won't be decisions in the coming days that could push us further apart."

A spokeswoman for Williams said Wednesday that he would not comment. The 77 million-member communion is the third-largest grouping of churches worldwide, behind Roman Catholic and Orthodox Christian churches.

Most overseas Anglicans believe Scripture bars same-sex relationships and disagree with how liberals interpret the Bible on a wide range of issues. Liberal Anglicans emphasize biblical social justice teachings and believe their fellowship can contain conflicting views.

Last month, breakaway Episcopal conservatives and other like-minded traditionalists formed a rival national province to the Episcopal Church called the Anglican Church in North America.

The new body includes four seceding Episcopal dioceses and is supported by several overseas Anglican leaders who have broken ties with the Episcopal Church.

Pope has surgery after breaking wrist in a fall

By Ariel David and Luca Bruno
Associated Press writers

Benedict has been healthy during his five-year pontificate. There have been no reports of medical problems.

AOSTA, Italy — Pope Benedict XVI broke his right wrist in a fall in his Italian Alps and underwent successful surgery Friday, hospital officials and the Vatican said.

Pope Benedict XVI

The operation was performed under local anesthesia and went well, said Tiziano Trevisan, a spokesman at the Umberto Parini hospital in Aosta. Surgeons operated on the wrist to reduce the fracture, a procedure to realign the broken bone fragments, he said.

A Vatican statement said the 82-year-old pope fell in his room in a nearby chalet overnight and despite the accident, celebrated Mass and had breakfast before going to the hospital.

Doctors took an X-ray of the pope's right wrist and found a fracture, Trevisan said.

Vatican spokesman Rev. Federico Lombardi said earlier Friday that Benedict had slipped and was hurt, but that it did not seem serious.

He said the pope went to the hospital in the northwestern Italian town for an examination after the accident. ANSA reported that Benedict arrived at the hospital by car and walked into the first aid ward with an aide.

Benedict has been vacationing at a chalet in the village of Les Combes in the Valle d'Aosta region near the French border since Monday. His predecessor, Pope John Paul II, also spent several summers at Les Combes. While John Paul liked to hike, Benedict spends most of his time inside the chalet that looks out on Mont Blanc, the highest peak in the Alps.

Protesters stage 'kiss-in' near Mormon temple

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — About 100 people gathered near the Mormon church's downtown temple to stage a "kiss-in" protesting the treatment of two gay men who were detained by security guards on a plaza owned by the church and later cited by police for trespassing.

Matt Aune said he and his partner, Derek Jones, were confronted by guards after they hugged and kissed on the plaza.

Former Salt Lake City Councilwoman Deeda Seed helped organize Sunday's kiss-in, which occurred on public property.

The Salt Lake Tribune reported on its Web site that heterosexual and gay couples exchanged small kisses and pecks at the plaza's south entrance, which faces downtown. Church security was present, but the Deseret News of Salt Lake City reported that no altercations occurred.

All for all

Mom could have saved herself a lot of trouble if she'd just had Dick and Bob as twins. My older brothers were always together anyway. For as long as I can remember it was never just "Dick" or "Bob," but always "Dick and Bob." Sort of like "Stanley and Livingston." Or "Lewis and Clark." Or perhaps even more appropriately, "Laurel and Hardy."

One day when Dick was in the fifth grade and Bob was in third, they were playing in a sandlot baseball game. Bob was the smallest and youngest player on either side, so they stuck him out in right field — deep right field. Dick, on the other hand, played first base because ... well, because Dick always was first base.

But when Dick and Bob's team ran out to take the field late in the game, a sixth-grader new to the neighborhood walked up to Dick and informed him that he was taking over at first. Dick, a sweet and gentle boy by nature, tried to ignore him. The sixth-grader, almost a head taller and probably 30 pounds heavier than Dick, told him to move ... or else. Dick suggested (politely, I'm sure) that he take a flying leap. Angriely, the hulking older pushed Dick out of the way, then shoved him to the ground.

Bob had been creeping in front right field since the first sign of conflict, and he was on the older boy's back in an instant. While the stunned sixth-grader whirled around trying to get his hands on his attacker, Dick wrapped himself around the would-be first baseman's knees. Within seconds they had him down on the ground and pleading for mercy. As the newcomer hurried from the ball field, his nose bloodied and his ego in shreds, little Bob bravely shouted after him: "Remember — if you want to fight one of us, you have to fight both of us!"

It didn't take neighborhood kids long to learn that lesson. Which is not to say that my brothers terrorized the block or anything like that. I mean, Dick is an accountant, for Pete's sake. That skirmish, which may have been the only altercation either one of them was ever involved in, wasn't about domination, intimidation or control. It was about loyalty. And unity. And being willing to stand up for what's right even when you're not the one being wronged.

Children seem to understand these traits intuitively, perhaps because they are more reliant upon others for their safety and happiness. But as we become more competent, capable and independent, community-oriented traits and characteristics seem to become less relevant in a world that values individual conquest above group accomplishment, and where "all for one and one for all" has been replaced by "what's in it for me?"

Take loyalty, for example. There was a time when there were few higher compliments you could pay a person than to call them "loyal." Brave warriors were knighted for it, duels were fought over it, business was conducted through it and passions were subdued because of it. You could always count on your spouse and your friends to be loyal — to be there for you, no matter what. And if your employer considered you a loyal employee, you probably had a job for life.

VALUE SPEAK

It's clear to see that loyalty's value has slipped a little through the years. The cultural narcissism of the past couple of decades has left society with a little "I" trouble. It seems to me that we're missing something important if we're not including group values as part of our approach to strengthening the individual. You find something special within yourself when you lose yourself in others. Loyalty to something greater than "self" — a cause, a faith, a family, a community — deepens one's sense of "self." It means you're capable of caring. It means your life matters to someone or something else. It means you belong.

And who knows? Someday it might also mean that you get to play first base.

A proud third generation Twin Falls resident, Fred graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1947 and the University of Colorado with a bachelor's degree in economics in 1951 before volunteering for the draft in 1952. He served 13 months in Korea as a supply sergeant and chief of firing battery for the Charlie Battery of the 96th Field Artillery Battalion.

When Fred returned from Korea in the spring of 1954, he tried his hand at farming. At the same time he filled out an application to work at the Twin Falls Bank & Trust thinking he might like to work at the bank "until something better came along." On Sept. 13, 1954, Fred began his banking career. In 1961 he graduated with honors from the Pacific Coast Banking School. Fred was named Assistant Vice President in 1967, the same year he married the love of his life Patricia (Pat) Dyer. He always said that he had done a lot of shopping around but couldn't let this one get away. Together they raised daughter, Ari and son, Rick.

After being promoted to Vice President of the bank in 1971 he was appointed manager of the Kimberly Office a year later. He was elected to the Board of Directors of the bank in 1976 and in 1980 was named Executive Vice President of Twin Falls Bank & Trust. He retired in 1991. Fred was actively involved in many banking organizations during his career including serving as president of the Idaho Independent Bankers Association, state president for the National Association for Bank Audit and Control, Treasurer of the Idaho Bankers Association and the Executive Council of the IBA. He also served on the Board of Directors of the Magic Valley Chapters of the Bank Administration Institute and the American Institute of Banking.

Fred contributed his administrative abilities to his community through local and state organizations including the Twin Falls Industrial Development Corporation, Magic Valley Chapter of the American Red Cross, the Snake River Area council of Boy Scouts of America, Board of Deacons of the Twin Falls Presbyterian Church, the Parent's Board of the University of Idaho, the Twin Falls Toastmasters. Fred also served as a past president of the Blue Lakes Country Club.

Fred believed in teaching by example, both in his career and his family life. He was a wonderful role model to his children and grandchildren and a supportive, caring partner to his wife.

Fred enjoyed a full life of travel, friendships and family. He and Pat traveled to every continent and enjoyed vacation homes in Mexico and Sun Valley. One of Fred's most special adventures was a recent saltwater fly fishing trip to Belize with his son. Fred was an avid golfer and after retirement he could be found golfing year-round, regardless of the weather, and was lucky enough to score two holes in one at his favorite course, Blue Lakes. Other favorite activities were fishing with the grandkids in the back yard, enjoying dinner and bridge with friends, caring for his roses, and showing off his skills on the dance floor. Fred was both a snow and water skier and spent a lot of time as a young man on the water near his cabin in Hagerman. He prided himself on having skied on Bald Mountain every year since the resort opened, except during his military service. One of his favorite accomplishments was skiing with all four of his grandchildren on Baldy, capped off with what was to become his final run with them at age 80 this April.

Dad was the rock of the family.

Fred is survived by his wife of 42 years, Pat; his children, Ari (Steve) Carlson of Eagle; Rick (Molly) Harder of Boise; grandchildren, Taylor, Dylan, Keira and McKenna; brother, Don (Vivian) Harder; many nieces and nephews; and lifelong friend, Harry (Gerry) Turner.

A celebration of Fred's life will be held at 3 p.m. on Monday, July 20, 2009, at the Presbyterian Church in Twin Falls, with a reception following at Blue Lakes Country Club. Donations in Fred's name may be made to the College of Southern Idaho Foundation or the Magic Valley Regional Medical Center Foundation.

Arrangements have been entrusted to White Mortuary "Chapel by the Park".

"You are not forgotten, loved one, nor will you ever be. As long as life and memory last, we will remember thee."

Maybelle Silva Walker Warbis

Maybelle Silva Walker Warbis passed away June 11, 2009, in Boise, Idaho. She had been a resident of the Heritage Retirement Center since 2004.

Maybelle was born to Joseph and Elsie Silva on May 23, 1917. She was the last surviving member of her immediate family of three brothers and two sisters.

Maybelle is survived by three daughters and their families, Donna Leeper of Beaverton, Ore., and Sharon SoRelle and Bobbi Cadi of Meridian, Idaho.

At her request a private inurnment was held in Gooding, Idaho, where she had been a long-time resident.

Mary 'Liz' Hoxie

Mary "Liz" Hoxie, age 73, went home to her Father in Heaven, Wednesday, July 15, 2009, at her home in Twin Falls.

Mary was born in Eden, Idaho, on May 31, 1936, to Rowe and Mary Rogers. She married Bob Martin in 1951, they later divorced. In 1964 she married Edward Hoxie who preceded her in death.

Mary enjoyed her roses and gardening, going to Jackpot with her granddaughter Stephanie, yard sales, dancing, and was a devoted mom and grandmother. She taught her children to work as hard as she did. She had a special love for her grandson Dave. We will miss her a lot.

Mary was preceded in death by her parents and husband, Ed. She is survived by her sons, Steven Martin, Mesa, Ariz., Linc Hoxie, Jerome, Idaho; daughters, Karen Skeen, Twin Falls, Idaho, Debbie Broner, Kimberly, Idaho, Cindy Martin, Twin Falls, Idaho, Tracy Vance, Jerome, Idaho; sisters, Carol Jennings and Barbara Kimball, Twin Falls, Idaho; 11 grandchildren and 10 great-grandchildren.

A celebration of her life potluck picnic will be held at 1 p.m. Saturday, July 18, 2009, at Kimberly City Park. Arrangements are under the direction of Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home of Twin Falls.

Legendary CBS anchor Walter Cronkite dies at 92

By Frazier Moore
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Walter Cronkite, the premier TV anchorman of the networks' golden age who reported a tumultuous time with reassuring authority and came to be called "the most trusted man in America," died Friday. He was 92.

Cronkite's longtime chief of staff, Marlene Adler, said Cronkite died at 7:42 p.m. at his Manhattan home surrounded by family. She said the cause of death was cerebral vascular disease.

Adler said, "I have to go now" before breaking down into what sounded like a sob. She said she had no further comment.

Cronkite was the face of the "CBS Evening News" from 1962 to 1981, when stories ranged from the assassinations of President John F. Kennedy and the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. to racial and anti-war riots, Watergate and the Iranian hostage crisis.

It was Cronkite who read the bulletins coming from Dallas when Kennedy was shot Nov. 22, 1963, interrupting a live CBS-TV broadcast of the soap opera "As the World Turns."

Cronkite was the broadcaster to whom the title "anchorman" was first applied, and he came so identified in that role that eventually his own name became the term for the job in other languages. (Swedish anchors are known as Kronketers; In Holland, they are Cronketers.)

"He was a great broadcaster and a gentleman whose experience, honesty, professionalism and style defined the role of anchor and commentator," CBS Corp. chief executive Leslie Moonves said in a statement.

His 1968 editorial declaring the United States was "mired in stalemate" in Vietnam was seen by some as a turning point in U.S. opinion of the war. He also helped broker the 1977 invitation that took Egyptian President Anwar Sadat to Jerusalem, the breakthrough to Egypt's peace treaty with Israel.

TV SPECIAL

CBS has scheduled a prime-time special, "That's the Way it Was: Remembering Walter Cronkite," for 7 p.m. Sunday.

He followed the 1960s space race with open fascination, anchoring marathon broadcasts of major flights from the first suborbital shot to the first moon landing, exclaiming, "Look at those pictures, wow!" as Neil Armstrong stepped on the moon's surface in 1969. In 1998, for CNN, he went back to Cape Canaveral to cover John Glenn's return to space after 36 years.

"It is impossible to imagine CBS News, journalism or indeed America without Walter Cronkite," CBS News president Sean McManus said in a statement. "More than just the best and most trusted anchor in history, he guided America through our crises, tragedies and also our victories and greatest moments."

He had been scheduled to speak last January for the 50th anniversary of the U.S. Space & Rocket Center in Huntsville, Ala., but ill health prevented his appearance.

A former wire service reporter and war correspondent, he valued accuracy, objectivity and understated compassion. He expressed liberal views in more recent writings but said he had always aimed to be fair and professional in his judgments on the air.

Off camera, his stamina and admittedly demanding ways brought him the nickname "Old Ironpants."

But to viewers, he was "Uncle Walter," with his jowls and grainy baritone, his warm, direct expression and his trim mustache.

When he summed up the news each evening by stating, "And THAT's the way it is," millions agreed. His reputation survived accusations of bias by Richard Nixon's vice president, Spiro Agnew, and being labeled a "pinko" in the tirades of a fictional icon, Archie Bunker of CBS's "All in the Family."

Two polls pronounced Cronkite the "most trusted man in America": a 1972 "trust index" survey in which he finished No. 1, about 15 points higher than leading politicians, and a 1974 survey in which people chose him as the most trusted television newscaster.

"He was the most trusted man in America and he was a reporter. Imagine. Who could we say that about today?" said Jeff Fager, executive producer of "60 Minutes," who began working at CBS News the year Cronkite stepped down from the anchor job.

Like fellow Midwesterner Johnny Carson, Cronkite seemed to embody the nation's mainstream. When he broke down as he announced Kennedy's death, removing his glasses and fighting back tears, the times seemed to break down with him.

And when Cronkite took sides, he helped shape the times. After the 1968 Tet offensive, he visited Vietnam and wrote and narrated a "speculative, personal" report advocating negotiations leading to the withdrawal of American troops.

"We have been too often disappointed by the optimism of the American leaders, both in Vietnam and Washington, to have faith any longer in the silver linings they find in the darkest clouds," he said, and concluded, "We are mired in stalemate."

After the broadcast, President Johnson reportedly said, "If I've lost Cronkite, I've lost middle America."

Boyfriend questions wisdom of long-distance commitment

DEAR ABBY: I am a 20-year-old woman who has been in a committed relationship with my boyfriend, "Ian," for three years. I attend a university out of the country, so our relationship is mostly long-distance. We are in love and have discussed a future after I graduate. Ian says I'm the reason he has goals and wants to live a meaningful life.

Every now and then he says he's afraid that he is holding me back — that because I'm so committed to him I am missing out on some of the most important experiences I could have at the university. I have told Ian I'm happy with what we have and wouldn't trade it. If I wasn't with him, I would probably see other men, but more sexual freedom wouldn't make me happier. All my single friends say they would rather have what I have.

Our relationship means far more to me than the odd fling would. Ian says he has no desire to be with other women, but he's afraid I don't know what I want because I haven't had experience with other men. How can I convince him that this is what I really want? — DECISIVE IN SCOTLAND

DEAR DECISIVE: Tell your boyfriend that while some women may enjoy quantity, you have an eye for quality, and he is the grand prize you have waited for all your life. Then tell him you're a one-man woman,

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

and he's stuck with you. (This should do the trick, unless he's projecting his own feelings of ambivalence onto you.)

DEAR ABBY: In May 2001, you printed my letter alerting former prisoners of war and their widows to the special veterans' benefits available to them from the Department of Veterans Affairs. The response was great; many former POWs and their dependents now have their VA benefits because of that column.

Now, as chairman of VA outreach for American Ex-Prisoners of War, I write to alert all veterans (not just former POWs) of a recent VA ruling.

On Sept. 23, 2008, Lou Gehrig's disease, amyotrophic lateral sclerosis, was made a presumptive condition for all veterans who served in our armed forces for at least 90 days.

This means that the widows of those veterans who died of Lou Gehrig's disease in years past are eligible for the VA widows' monthly benefit, which is very substantial. Many people are not aware that a veteran's death due to this disease is now considered service-connected. One claim I handled recently involved an ALS death 46 years ago, in 1963.

Thank you for your help in getting the word out, Abby.

— FRED CAMPBELL, AMERICAN EX-PRISONERS OF WAR

DEAR FRED: I'm pleased to help you and America's veterans once again. Readers, Fred welcomes inquiries at 3312 Chatterton Drive, San Angelo, TX 76904. He can also be e-mailed at fredrev@webtv.net.

DEAR ABBY: I am 8 years old. My mom told me our neighbor's dog was old and sick, so he had to put his dog to sleep. I hate this. I know it is what is best for the dog, but I can't stop thinking about it. How can I get over this?

— HENRY IN AUSTIN, TEXAS

DEAR HENRY: Your neighbor's dog was put on this earth to run and play and enjoy his doggie life. When an animal is no longer able to do that and spends his days and nights in pain, then the kind — but very difficult — thing for a pet guardian to do is to let him go. Being put to sleep was a gentle way to go, and when you think about your neighbor's dog, you should remind yourself of that.

IF JULY 18 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY:

Your electric personality seldom shocks anyone this summer, but often gives other people a buzz of excitement. Until late August, you are riding on a wave of excitement, developing new interests, meeting people from unusual places and breaking away from tradition. You will receive plenty of notice in December through February and could capture the heart of someone special or land a new job or change careers successfully. Final decisions and major commitments will unfold delightfully if you wait until early May to set your plans into motion.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Socialize with friends and neighbors. Your friendliness oozes over and can win new friends no matter the activity.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): File down the rough edges with regular acts of kindness. Employ friendly competition to break down barriers and build a romantic mood.

Today is Saturday, July 18, the 199th day of 2009. There are 166 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On July 18, 1969, a car driven by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., plunged off a bridge on Chappaquiddick Island near Martha's Vineyard; although Kennedy managed to escape the submerged vehicle, his passenger, 28-year-old Mary Jo Kopechne, drowned. (Kennedy subsequently pleaded guilty to leaving the scene of an accident and received a suspended two-month jail sentence.)

On this date:

In A.D. 64, the Great Fire of Rome began.

In 1536, the English Parliament passed an act declaring the authority of the pope void in England.

In 1792, American naval hero John Paul Jones died in Paris at age 45.

In 1872, Britain enacted voting by secret ballot.

In 1918, American and French forces launched a counteroffensive against the Germans during the Second Battle of the Marne in World War I.

In 1932, the United States and Canada signed a treaty to develop the St.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Break away from the people or situations that have blemished your happiness. You could get a great deal of attention from others.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Declare a personal independence day. Do what you want to do, with those you want to do it with. New admirers may gather around.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Free yourself of preconceptions and give partners lots of space. Make a competitor an ally by supporting that person's favorite charity.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Rather than fighting a riptide that has disturbed your peaceful existence in the past, you will find it easy to move with the flow.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Cast a line to catch a fish and you may hook up with a romantic trophy winner. You might also need to practice "catch and release."

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): This weekend you can accentuate athletic abilities or sports prowess to attract those whom you desire. New friends add sparkle, too.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Unexpected inspiration or intuition could show you just how to reach financial freedom. Seek out like-minded companions.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Adventures of the amorous kind could be in the stars for you and a significant other this weekend. Depend upon trusted friends.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Accept your blessings at face value and don't be suspicious of a friendly stranger. Trust and sincerity smooth out relationships.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): The restless need for excitement might keep you on pins and needles. You may need to adapt to swiftly changing conditions.

become "search and recovery." David Cone of the New York Yankees pitched a perfect game against the Montreal Expos, leading his team to a 6-0 victory. Paul Lawrie won the British Open in a three-way playoff after Jean Van de Velde triple-bogeyed on the 72nd hole.

Five years ago: A spokesman said California Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger would not apologize for mocking certain lawmakers as "girlie men," despite criticisms from Democrats that the remark was sexist and homophobic.

Todd Hamilton beat Ernie Els in a playoff to win the British Open. Former EPA chief Anne Gorsuch Burford died in Aurora, Colo., at age 62.

One year ago: One of the world's largest mobile cranes collapsed at a refinery in southeast Houston, killing four people and injuring seven others. Two French humanitarian aid workers were kidnapped in Afghanistan's Day Kundi province. (They were released about two weeks later.) The epic Batman sequel "The Dark Knight," starring Christian Bale as the caped crusader and Heath Ledger as the Joker, premiered.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Ignorance itself is without a doubt a sin for those who do not wish to understand; for those who, however, cannot understand, it is the punishment of sin."
— St. Augustine

When this hand arose in a recent Cavendish pairs, quite a few of the world's best players lost themselves some money through ignorance of a key suit-combination.

If you are going to play slam, six clubs might be best here, but six no-trump looks normal enough. How should you play the spades? It looks natural to lead out the ace and follow up with the 10. When East plays low, you should rise with the queen. That picks up the doubleton jack off-side. However, when the suit is 3-3, it is a blind guess whether to play low or to rise with the queen against competent opponents. Bear in mind that if West started life with the doubleton king, there is no winning option. You have to lose two tricks, whatever you do next.

So far so good, and most people's analysis would stop there. But actually the best play in the suit does not start with cashing the ace, but with running the queen! If the suit is 3-3, we know that it is a complete guess as to how to play the suit. If the suit is 4-2, you can pick up three of the four honor-doubletons by leading the queen. No other play caters to that.

It is only fitting that Fred Gitelman, author of BridgeMaster, which features this precise combination in its training section, was one of the declarers in six no-trump. He made the right play and was rewarded when the cards cooperated.

ANSWER: Unless your partner has taken leave of his senses, he has at least 5-5 in the minors (probably more shape, because a call of one no-trump by a passed hand would have shown that pattern). Since the opponents must be cold for at least game in one of the majors, take their bidding space away by jumping to five diamonds. You may not make it, but you won't make your opponents' life easy either.
