State again threatens well closures

IDWR director concludes pumpers failed to follow obligations

By Nate Poppino Times-News writer

A number of Magic Valley wells are once again at risk of being shut off, just months after groundwater pumpers devised a plan to avoid a similar curtailment.

Gary Spackman, interim director of the Idaho Department of Water Resources, released an order Wednesday afternoon concluding that the North Snake and Magic Valley groundwater districts have not followed through on part of their obligations to provide water owed to Clear Springs Foods of Buhl.

Stating that the districts have violated what IDWR expected of them, Spackman ordered that they have until July 30 to come up with the missing water - just .36 cubic feet per second if given directly to Clear Springs. Should they not meet the deadline, IDWR will shut off about 315 wells belonging to 250 waterright holders on July 31. All of the rights carry priority dates newer than Jan. 8, 1981.

If the wells are shut off, the water will eventually make its way through the Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer to the springs Clear Springs and other water users rely on.

The well closures would

Hailey's hope

Allison Sker, 16, cries as she and other members of the community listen to speakers at the 'Standing with Bowe' candlelight vigil for captured U.S. Army Pfc. Bowe Bergdahl Wednesday night in Hailey. 'He was like a brother to me,' said Sker, who said she's known Bergdahl for years through dance and other activities.

HAILEY - "We're running a marathon now; the Baldy climb is over." Those words from the family of captured U.S. Army Pfc. Bowe Bergdahl, passed by a family friend to a crowd of nearly a thousand holding vigil Wednesday night in Hailey, hold special meaning for Wood River Valley locals.

They know the climb up Bald Mountain is steep and difficult kind that avid bicyclist Bergdahl would have loved to gear up for.

To honor the soldier captured weeks ago in Afghanistan, many locals rode their bikes to the Hop Porter Park vigil, some with ribbons of yellow or red, white and blue strung between the spokes.

Others wore yellow flowers, or held up freshly printed bumper stickers praying for Bergdahl's safe return. Savannah Rush and Maya Lizano of Ketchum, both 7, had written all afternoon on sheets of paper, "Bowe needs to come home" and "It's hard without Bowe" in Magic Marker, and passed the signs out to strangers.

At the park, messages were read from Bergdahl's family, including his sister, Sky. There was also an e-mail from his girlfriend, Monica, read by Gloria Gunter, who said the young woman did not wish to be identified further or contacted by the press. She had been mentioned in the Taliban's Internet video of Bergdahl by him as the girl he hopes to marry. "I pray daily for his return," her e-mail read. "I love him with all my heart, and miss him with all my soul."

Many friends of Bergdahl's, as well as strangers from across the region, came bearing candles and flashlights, including Allison Sker, 16, who has known Bergdahl since she was 7. "He was like a brother to me," she said,

Burley plane crash still a mystery

By Laurie Welch Times-News writer

The National Transportation Safety Board's preliminary report on a plane that crashed near downtown Burley three weeks ago says the cause of the crash is still undetermined.

According to the NTSB, it could take up to a year before the final report on the crash's cause is released.

NTSB Public Affairs Officer Peter Knudson said the initial fact-finding investigation at the crash site of the 1946 Republic RC-3 fixedwing single-engine plane, owned by student pilot Kim Johan Paulsen, 46, of Klamath Falls, Ore., was conducted by the Federal Aviation Administration after the July 1 crash.

Information gathered by the FAA was turned over to NTSB Investigator Joshua Cawthra, who will conduct the investigation's second phase and affect a little less than 9,000 irrigated acres in Cassia, Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln, Minidoka and Twin Falls counties. That's just one-fourth of the acres that were threatened when former Director Dave Tuthill issued a curtailment notice in March.

Tuthill withdrew his notice after the groundwater districts came up with a plan to provide water that their pumping denied to a fish farm owned by Clear Springs. The bulk of that March plan was later put on hold for two years, but the districts still had to follow through with some smaller actions, including maintaining 9,300 acres converted to use surface water rather than groundwater.

groundwater pumpers were following through with this month that the districts had passed the costs of the converted acres on to individual landowners.

From July 8 police reports: Malicious injury to property:

An unemployed 24-year-old Colorado man was arrested for malicious injury to property after allegedly breaking a window at a Burley residence.

He was reportedly found at 4:30 a.m. walking along Albion Avenue carrying a backpack. According to Deputy Brice Nelson's report, the man said "he found an abandoned house over there." Nelson took the man to the house, which was not abandoned. While he initially denied breaking the window, he eventually changed his account — telling police "he didn't mean to but was very frustrated," according to the report. The man offered to pay $25 for the window, but the owner pressed charges. The estimated value of the window is $30.

Information: Police responded to a dispute in Burley between a 17-year-old male and his neighbor, a 43-yearold man.

According to the report, the juvenile was sitting in a parked vehicle with his friend while "spitting out of the car when his neighbor Stan came out of the house and told him to 'quit spitting on my (expletive) lawn."

The juvenile said his neighbor challenged him to a fight and threatened to "kick his ass." The neighbor, however, told police that he simply asked the boy to stop spitting, adding that the teenager allegedly got out of the car and told the man to "(expletive) off."

The man said he never threatened the teen and, according to the report, "was not upset that they were parking in front of his house but he did not appreciate (the teen) spitting on his lawn."

Lee and Sheriff Doug McFall will meet soon to discuss necessary square footage so that she could determine the jail's exact cost, which is required for the ballot question.

Also discussed was the possibility of public tours of the existing jail so that voters could see the need.

A question that remains unanswered is which of several locations the sheriff's department will choose for the proposed facility and whether the Jerome Police Department will move into leased space at the new jail. While there was a proposal to build a regional jail in Gooding, McFall said Jerome County's costs would be higher with a multi-county facility.

McFall said a time will come in the near future when the county will not be able to keep the existing, 35-year-old facility open because of liability issues.

A regional jail in Gooding, McFall said, would cost Ierome County more than a new facility because of transportation costs for inmates and travel expenses for defense attorneys. He said Jerome County would have to retain a booking facility in Jerome with staff even if a regional jail was built in Gooding.

"We'd still have to build a jail in 20 years or so and the cost would be higher in 20

The groups must have "long-standing ties" to the community in order to be eligible for approval, a provision council members concede is subjective.

Mayor Lance Clow opposed the amendment to require approval from City Council and said it was micromanaging. If a donation was unusually large, it would be brought to their attention anyway, he said.

Buhl drops controversial renter policy

Property owners and rental managers applaud council's decision

BUHL - Residents will remain primarily responsible for their monthly city utility bills in Buhl after the council postponed passing an ordinance with language that would have shifted renter's bills to their landlords. meeting city representatives discussed why landlords, and not necessarily the actual users of the service, would be responsible for monthly bills.

It all comes down to being considered a "creditor" by Federal Trade Commission, said Mayor Charles Sheridan, since the city's utility charges are due the month after actual consumption of water, sewer and sanitation services.

"Since we give credit we must provide identity theft and credit protection under federal law," Sheridan said.

Kempthorne papers catalogued in state archive

Former Gov. Kempthorne and his wife, Patricia, visited the state archive in Boise this week to observe the cataloguing of his gubernatorial records.

The Kempthorne papers will be available for full public access early next year.

Kempthorne became interior secretary in May 2006, about seven months before his second term ended.

Last fall, Kempthorne decided to house his gubernatorial papers at the Historical Society rather than the University of Idaho or Boise State.

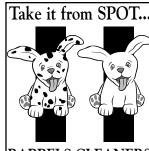

Receiving almost 300 cubic feet of documents prompted the Historical Society to create a Governor's Room for records from every governor except Cecil Andrus, whose papers are at BSU.

Kempthorne said during his visit Monday that he chose the Historical Society for its focus on gubernatorial records.

The Latino population of the Magic and Wood River valleys grew by about 5 percent last year. Nineteen percent of south-central Idaho now is Latino; within 20 years it could be double that percentage.

The median age of Idaho Latinos is 23 years, eight months — fully 11 years younger than that of the population as a whole.

So while the challenge for the state today is educating Latino kids, the challenge for the future will be finding jobs for them.

This isn't their fathers' workforce. A large majority of Idaho Latinos under age 15 are bilingual, and like any second- or third-generation Americans they're looking for a better life than their parents had.

Institutions such as the College of Southern Idaho will be critical in that transition. CSI's student body is now 10.6 percent Latino, including 13.6 percent of fulltime students. Fifteen years ago, Latinos comprised just 4.5 percent of CSI students.

And a demographic title wave is cresting on the horizon. Twenty-seven percent of students in the Cassia County School District are Latino. In Jerome, it's 35 percent and in Minidoka 40 percent.

Their dads work construction or agriculture. These kids will be looking for jobs in tech, manufacturing and services.

As south-central Idaho as a whole gets older, there will be a niche for younger workers.

Question is, can we find jobs for them? According to the U.S. Department of Labor, nearly 3 million people aged 16 through 29 have lost jobs in this recession. That follows an already steep decline in employment opportunities for young workers in recent years.

So when good times finally return, economic development in the Magic Valley must take into account a changing workforce. Non-Latino workers will tend to be older and stay in the job market longer, so the entry point to the new economy for younger workers will be in professions such as health care, where it's possible to earn a good salary after a relatively short period of education, and emerging industries such as wind power, where CSI is attempting to establish a training program for technicians. If we as a community are smart, we'll give young Latinos the tools they need to tap into that economy. For in south-central Idaho, their future is also ours.

President Obama's stimulus ain't that stimulating

ASHINGTON — It's not surprising that the much-ballyhooed "economic stimulus" hasn't done much stimulating. President Obama and his aides argue that it's too early to expect startling results. They have a point. A $14 trillion economy won't revive in a nanosecond. But the defects of the $787 billion package go deeper and won't be cured by time. The program crafted by Obama and the Democratic Congress wasn't engineered to maximize its economic impact. It was mostly a political exercise, designed to claim credit for any recovery, shower benefits on favored constituencies and signal support for fashionable causes.

ROBERT SAMUELSON

As a result, much of the stimulus' potential benefit has been squandered. Spending increases and tax cuts are sprinkled in too many places and, all too often, are too delayed to do much good now. Nor do they concentrate on reviving the economy's most depressed sectors: state and local governments; the housing and auto industries. None of this means the stimulus won't help or precludes a recovery, but the help will be weaker than necessary.

How much is hard to determine. By year-end 2010, the package will result in 2.5 million jobs, predicts Mark Zandi of Moody's Economy.com. But as Zandi notes, all estimates are crude. They involve comparing economic simulations with and without the provisions of the stimulus. The economic models must make assumptions about how fast consumers spend tax cuts, how quickly construction projects begin and much more. Depending on the assumptions, the results vary. When the Congressional Budget Office made job estimates. it presented a range of 1.2 million to 3.6 million by year-end 2010. Whatever the actual figures, they won't soon mean an increase in overall employment. They will merely limit job losses. Since late 2007, those have totaled 6.5 million, and there are probably more to come.

On humanitarian grounds, hardly anyone should object to parts of the stimulus package: longer and (slightly) higher unemployment benefits; subsidies for job losers to extend their health insurance; expanded food stamps. Obama was politically obligated to enact a campaign proposal providing tax cuts to most workers — up to $400 for individuals and $800 for married couples. But beyond these basics, the stimulus plan became an orgy of politically appealing spending increases and tax breaks.

More than 50 million retirees and veterans got $250 checks (cost: $14 billion). Businesses received liberalized depreciation allowances ($5 billion). Health care information technology was promoted ($19 billion).

Ignored was any concerted effort to improve and less political power than consumer and business confidence by resuscitating the most distressed economic sectors.

Vehicle sales are running 35 percent behind year-earlier levels; frightened consumers recoil from bigticket purchases. Falling house prices deter homebuying. States suffer from steep drops in tax revenues and face legal requirements to balance their budgets. This means raising taxes or cutting spending - precisely the wrong steps in a severe slump. Yet, the stimulus package barely addressed these problems.

To promote car sales and homebuying, Congress could have provided temporary but generous tax breaks. It didn't. The housing tax credit applied to a fraction of first-time buyers; the car tax break permitted federal tax deductions for state sales and excise taxes on vehicle purchases. The effects are trivial. The recently signed "cash for clunkers" tax credit is similarly stunted; Macroeconomic Advisers estimates it might advance a mere 130,000 vehicle sales. States fared better. They received $135 billion in largely unfettered funds. But even with this money, economists at Goldman Sachs estimate that states face up to a $100 billion budget gap in the next year.

Already, 28 states have increased taxes and 40 have reduced spending, reports the Office of Management and Budget.

There are growing demands for another Obama "stimulus" on the grounds that the first was too small. Wrong. The problem with the first stimulus was more its composition than its size. With budget deficits for 2009 and 2010 estimated by CBO at $1.8 trillion and $1.4 trillion, it's hard to argue they're too tiny. Obama and congressional Democrats sacrificed real economic stimulus to promote parochial political interests. Any new "stimu-lus" should be financed by culling some of the old.

Here, as elsewhere, there's a gap between Obama's high-minded rhetoric and his performance. In February, Obama denounced "politics as usual" in constructing the stimulus. But that's what we got, and Obama likes the result. Interviewed recently by ABC's Jake Tapper, he was asked whether he would change anything. Obama seemed to invoke a doctrine of presidential infallibility. "There's nothing that we would have done differently," he said.

Change constitution to benefit Idaho education

Self-described "tax activists" like David Frazier of Boise criticize Tom Luna, Idaho superintendent of education, because he supports an amendment to the Idaho Constitution that would reduce the two-thirds supermajority needed to approve public initiatives, like school bonds, to a 60 percent supermajority of voters.

First, few are capable of amassing the necessary political capital needed to pass measures by a margin as large as two-thirds, so the current threshold has never "leveled the playing field," as Frazier claims. On the contrary, it has only allowed the powerful few (not the masses) to maintain their political influence and power over public policy and resources. Secondly, teachers have less of a "voice" at the polls large property owners and big business lobbies. Teachers cannot show a monetary bottom-line profit, nor can they "belly up to the bar" where political deals are made or line campaign war chests with lucrative donations, or promise powerful political connections. Not only that, but students have even less power and "voice" than teachers do. So, asking education advocates to pity business and property owners whose interests have been protected for centuries is like asking David to take pity on Goliath and help the giant keep and use his unequal power!

The only voice children have is when dedicated private citizens and public servants like Tom Luna speak up. Luna is trying to provide Idaho youth with the kind of quality education they need to earn their way in the world with dignity and help them become responsible citizens and lifelong supporters of our free, democratic society. Education is an investment that gives back, not only to individuals who receive it but to the whole society. If our laws need to change to benefit education, then, let's give Idahoans what they need to succeed!

CSI pick for president smells of nepotism

On the morning of July 16, I read with interest the appointment of the new president of the College of Southern Idaho in Burley.

I found it most unusual that the article spent so much time referring to individual quotes trying to justify President Beck's 26year-old daughter's appointment. For a trustee member to make comments like he didn't even connect the names is ludicrous.

Not having any privilege to the appointment process, I would venture to say that this appointment smells of nepotism. I do not believe that any individual at her stage in life is prepared for such a responsibility with her limited experience in the college environment. I am sure that there were applicants more qualified, with local knowledge of the community, and with more investment into the community than she has or ever will have.

For a college that provides such a great service to our area, I would have expected better. This is not any personal attack on Kristin but rather an attack on the committee which I am sure had more qualified candidates to consider.

Idaho Mountain Express, Ketchum

The ongoing war on terrorist groups in Afghanistan came home to the Wood River Valley this week when residents learned that Army Pfc. Bowe R. Bergdahl had been captured and is being held by a group associated with the Taliban.

The Taliban is the group of Islamic fundamentalist militants that controlled the Afghan government and gave safe harbor to al-Qaida, the group that killed nearly 3,000 innocent people when its members flew jumbo jets into the World Trade Center in New York City on Sept. 11, 2001.

July has been one of the deadliest months in the eight-year struggle to root out terrorists in Afghanistan.

The signs in windows of valley businesses, homes and cars, and the yellow ribbons tied on trees up and down the Wood River Valley say it all: We want Bergdahl back safe and sound.

Everyone in the Wood River Valley is disturbed about his capture and about the Taliban-scripted video of the young man released early this week ... With the family in seclusion, it's difficult for the community to express its support and heartfelt wishes, but they are part of every ribbon and sign.

Bergdahl is one of the thousands of courageous young Americans who answered the call to protect and defend our nation against enemies who prefer inflicting terror to abiding by the will of a people expressed through a ballot box.

As a means to undermine American resolve to continue to confront terrorism, the video failed miserably ... It inspired only solidarity in a community that values democracy, hates terror and wants to see all soldiers returned to the embrace of family and friends.

... escape from prisons

Lewiston Tribune

A year ago, Idaho sent hundreds of its criminal offenders out of state.

(This month), the last of those inmates came home.

That's the latest development in a policy that has seen Idaho halt and slightly reverse what had been one of the fastestgrowing prison populations in the United States. Credit belongs in part to dwindling state revenues ... But credit also belongs to a more enlightened approach to handling offenders whose drug addiction or mental illness placed them in the criminal justice system in the first place.

A year ago, Idaho's prisons were so overcrowded that it lacked space for 722 inmates. So they wound up in prisons operated in places such as Oklahoma and Texas.

It was expensive. These states billed Idaho $61 day for its prisoners. Holding someone in an Idaho penitentiary costs about $40 a dav.

It was dangerous. Idaho lost two inmates — one to murder, another to suicide – at private prisons in Texas where the guards were poorly trained and too few in number ...

Making the transfer possible, in part, was the opening of 628 beds at the privately-managed Idaho Correctional Center. But the real story that began a year ago was the drop in how many people this state sends to prison.

Last year, that number stood at 7,338. Had trends then in place continued, Idaho would have had 7,563 today and 7,854 a vear from now.

Instead, the state prisons hold 7,266.

Some of that reflects falling crime rates, although Idaho managed to increase its prison population throughout a decade of falling crime.

What's taken hold is a new philosophy at each end of the system. At the front, judges have diverted offenders into drug and mental health courts, getting them treatment and keeping them in the community.

At the back, the state Department of Correction has provided more resources for inmate rehabilitation, substance abuse counseling and education, thereby enabling the parole board to release more inmates.

Probation and Parole also has implemented a more lenient policy toward parolees who break the terms of their release without committing a new crime. Such technical violations often equaled a trip back to prison. Now a technical parole violation may provoke a more calibrated response.

All of which yielded a dividend ... for these inmates, their families and the Idaho taxpayer.

Many methods being used to lead U.S. down the wrong path

Wake up, America!

Communism is nearly dead but already it is renewed in another form and color. We can now see a design to "socialize" our United States of America and later establish Global Governance. The vehicle to bring this about is painted green and powered by economic control. The only bulwark against the establishment of socialism is our Godinspired Constitution of the United States. Congress is our only hope against drastic changes, yet subtly, like a snake, Congress is being by passed or becoming part of the problem.

Following are some of the methods used to bypass Congress:

- Summit meetings at key cities throughout the world are being held where international social organizations converge, being interconnected through the United Nations. World leaders are expected to attend and sign consensus agreements for later ratification. If ratification cannot be obtained, many organizations can influence compliance.
- Rules and regulations are placed in force by the Environmental Protection Agency effecting the whole by piecemeal regulations over time.

- Political and economic pressures are applied through congressmen, government officials, civic and religious leaders, educators and the judicial systems.
- Presidential appointments of social czars with power to override the constitutional safeguards.

The liberals feel that everyone should have everything, and they are active in pursuing that dream. Meanwhile, the conservative tends to sleep assuming that someone else will make good things happen. Someday we may wake up, look around and say," What's happening environmental and economic controls equal chaos and death!

Chrysler to match incentive

The Associated Press

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. Chrysler Group Wednesday it is offering $4,500 in cash toward the purchase of a new vehicle as it seeks to match a government incentive for people to trade in their old gas guzzlers.

The automaker said it will offer cash or zero percent financing for six years on most of its 2009 Chrysler, Dodge or Jeep models. The incentive begins Thursday and lasts through Aug. 31.

Chrysler said in a statement that buyers are eligible for the new incentive even if they are not trading LLC said in a vehicle under the government's "cash for clunkers" legislation.

That program's final rules will be announced Friday. It offers tax credits to car shoppers who trade in their old, fuel-inefficient vehicles for a cleaner new vehicle.

Not all vehicles qualify under the legislation, however. Car shoppers get a voucher worth $3,500 if they trade in a vehicle getting 18 mpg or less for one getting at least 22 mpg.

The voucher grows to $4,500 if the new car's mileage is 10 mpg higher than the old vehicle.

Owners of sport utility vehicles, pickup trucks or minivans getting 18 mpg or less could receive a voucher for $3,500 if their new truck or SUV got at least 2 mpg higher than their old vehicle. The voucher would increase to $4,500 if the mileage of the new truck or SUV was at least 5 mpg higher than the older vehicle.

That means some consumers could, in theory, get up to $9,000 off a new Chrysler vehicle if they trade in and buy the right combination of vehicles. According to the auto Web

Wells Fargo posts 2Q profit, surpasses Street

CHARLOTTE, N.C. – Wells Fargo & Co. joined other big banks in announcing a big second-quarter profit and tempering the news by reporting it is still contending with losses from failed loans.

The bank also followed its rivals Wednesday in forecasting loan losses would continue in the coming quarters as more consumers are unemployed and can't make their payments. The company said some of its second-quarter loan losses came from the continuing cleanup of the loan portfolio acquired along with struggling Wachovia Corp. in December.

Wells Fargo said its earnings after

The earnings surpassed the 34 cents per share forecast of analysts surveyed by Thomson Reuters. Wells Fargo's revenue of $22.5 billion also beat their forecast.

Wells Fargo said its results reflected a $700 million creditreserve build, a $565 million charge to bolster a federal deposit insurance fund, and merger-related and restructuring expenses of $244 she's working in her bedroom, the door is closed. For her older children, "knowing I'm home but not available has been an adjustment for them," she said.

Sometimes the kids forget what that closed door means, and Kantra is interrupted anyway. One way Kantra tries to help them with the enforced separation is not to do any work around the time they come home from school. That way, she can give them all her attention as they tell her about their day.

Learning to live with a home business can be a challenge for older kids, too.

Diane Shader Smith was laid off from a big public relations firm right before Christmas, and started her own Beverly Hills, Calif.based company under her name. She had to set limits for family members, and, along the way, cope with some guilty feelings.

Shader Smith's son would show up with several of his fraternity brothers, looking for something to eat. "I have established a 'you must call first' rule," she said. And, she put a sign on her office door that says "working" to deter family members from interrupting conference calls. Shader Smith felt bad when her parents would drop by with groceries and she just didn't have time to talk. "They don't really mind that I don't talk to them." said Shader Smith, who said she's learned to "just say no" to all kinds of distractions, including the refrigerator and the laundry.

Some owners don't want clients and customers to know they work out of their homes, fearing that they won't be seen as being professional enough. But home-based businesses have become so commonplace, and many of them so successful, that they may be worrying unnecessarily.

Still, Nancy Juetten, who runs Main Street Media Savvy out of her Bellevue, Wash., home, said owners should be careful not to burden business relationships with their personal issues. So, if it turns out that an owner has to juggle a client meeting and child care, he or she shouldn't tell the client, "I have to take my child to the doctor and can't meet you at that time." The client might start feeling a little short-shrifted.

Juetten suggested saying something along the lines of, "I have two windows when we could meet. Which works for you?"

Also, children shouldn't be playing in the room where you talk on the phone with clients or other business associates. Some owners might be worried about the family's Labrador retriever barking in the background, but Juetten said she laughs about it with clients. If the barking is interfering with the conversation, though, it's time to move yourself or the dog to another part of the house.

Even single home-based entrepreneurs have to get used to a new way of life.

Stephen Fishman, who started a San Francisco home-based business as an author after being laid off 18 years ago, recalled that feelings of isolation were a big problem during the first few years after he lost his job in a big company. "You don't have co-workers to interact with," he said.

"I would often go out to a cafe to do work in the afternoon and just be with people," Fishman said. And that was long before the days of coffee houses where people could take their laptops and get free WiFi. When Thomasina Tafur was laid off from a big corporate job in April, she was excited about the prospect of starting a business from her Memphis, Tenn., home. But, she said, "there were a few things that did catch me off guard."

Tafur described herself as an introvert who likes to spend time by herself. "To go from an office environment where I see people all the time to an office environment where I see nobody, I was a little surprised at how much I enjoyed the human interaction with my colleagues," she said.

Her solution is to try to get out of the house at least once a day for a business lunch or networking activity. And she's learned to monitor her emotions: "If I'm starting to feel a little funny, a little down, it could be because I'm holed up in my office."

Many home-based owners get a bit of a rude awakening when they realize they no longer have support staff or people to deal with hightech issues and keep track of invoices. Tafur recalls thinking, "it's truly me, myself and I."

The solution she and other owners have found is to outsource work that they either don't know enough about, or that distracts them from building the business.

GOP Sen. Graham to support Sotomayor

Republican Sen. Lindsey firmed in early August. Graham said Wednesday that he will vote for Supreme Court nominee Sonia Sotomayor, breaking with his party's conservative leaders to back President Barack Obama's justice.

The South Carolinian, who had hinted during Sotomayor's confirmation hearings that he might back the 55year-old judge, said he would vote yes because "elections matter," and he believes she's a mainstream record that shows her "troubling" statements on race and gender don't drive her decisions on the bench.

Multiplying like bunnies? Not this jackrabbit

Associated Press writer

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. Rabbits are certainly known for their propensity for multiplying, but one species of jackrabbit is having trouble keeping up.

There are an estimated 150 white-sided jackrabbits left in the United States, and federal wildlife officials Wednesday announced they will study the elusive rabbit to determine if it needs to be protected under the Endangered Species Act.

It's not lack of libido that's holding back the white-sided jackrabbit.

The Fish and Wildlife Service's decision to review the rabbit is the result of a petition and lawsuit filed by environmentalists.

The rabbit's name comes from a conspicuous white area along its body, most noticeable when the rabbit runs. The jackrabbits, usually seen in pairs, mate for life. While they can produce several litters a year, the litters are usually small between one and three young.

The rabbit's large ears and long limbs are disproportionate to its body, creating more surface area to help the animal dissipate the heat that's part of living in the desert.

Besides the white-sided jackrabbit, WildEarth Guardians is seeking protections for other species, including the Sonoran desert tortoise. Dead shark left in Miami street after failed sale

MIAMI (AP) - The bodyof a shark was left lying in the middle of a downtown Miami street after two men tried to sell it to several fish markets.

The men apparently carried the five or six-footlong fish around on the city's Metromover downtown train, prompting calls to police.

News footage Tuesday night showed the dead animal in the street with police officers and cruisers nearby. Two stations reported that a pair of men had tried to sell the animal to at least three fish markets for around $10.

Rob Orta, an employee at Casablanca Fish Market, told television station WSVN that the men offered his business the shark.

"But we don't buy sharks off the street," Orta told the station.

Wildlife officials later determined the animal was a nurse shark. The case could result in misdemeanor charges of improper killing and disposal of an animal and selling a shark without a license.

One resident of the area where the shark was dumped said he didn't know what was going on at

Concealed guns law rejected in close vote

By Jim Abrams Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON - The Senate on Wednesday rejected letting people carry hidden guns in 48 states if they have a concealed weapon permit in any one of them, a rare victory for gun control advocates in a Democratic-controlled Congress that has been friendly to the gun lobby.

Opponents said it would force states with tough concealed weapon permit restrictions to let in gun carriers from states that give permits to convicted criminals, minors and people with no firearms training.

"It's extremely dangerous policy," said Sen. Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., noting that her state demands fingerprinting, federal background checks, a course of training, and verification by a local sheriff before issuing a permit to carry a concealed

A strong majority of the Senate, in a 58-39 vote, supported the measure, which would require most states to concealed the honor weapons permits issued by other states. But the tally was two votes short of the measure as an amendment to a defense bill.

Twenty Democrats, mainly from western or rural states, joined all but two Republicans in voting for the measure, which was promoted by the National Rifle Association and other gun rights groups. They included Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid of Nevada and both Democratic senators from Colorado, Arkansas, Virginia.

There were also notable defections. Sen. Claire McCaskill, D-Mo., and Sen. Arlen Specter, D-Pa., who voted to strip the District of Columbia of its gun control laws last February, opposed the concealed weapon measure. Specter was a Republican at the time of the previous vote.

Sen. Kirsten Gillibrand of New York, a pro-gun rights Democrat who faces a primary challenge next year in a state with strong gun consentiments, opposed it. "I strongly believe that the gun laws that are right for New York are not necessarily right for South Dakota, and vice versa;" she said. NRA executive vice president Wayne LaPierre told

GreenFire Stoves may hold key to cleaner environment

n inexpensive clay stove invented by a nonprofit in Oregon may hold a key to easing pollution in developing nations. This stove may help poor women and children by minimizing the tremendous workload associated with cooking and washing each day. Or, it could help fight deforestation near third-world villages around the planet.

GEAR JUNKIE Stephen Regenold

Those are promises Aprovecho Research Center, a non-profit organization in Cottage Grove, Ore., is touting with its StoveTec "rocket" stove, which is an alternative to the cook fires used by millions each day from rural Asia to slums in South Africa.

Aprovecho has created a simple wood-burning stove with a clay elbow that focuses the heat and fire in the combustion chamber directly toward a cooking pot. According to the organization, this setup dramatically reduces fuel consumption compared to open fires used for cooking by millions around the plan-

The stove's primary market is the 50 percent of the world that still cooks by open flame – people who use fire pits or stoves that burn biomass and cannot afford a modern fuel stove. Aprovecho's refugee stoves are sold for as little as $5 to the world's poor.

For their efforts, Aprovecho beat out hundreds of humanitarian organizations and was awarded first place in the International Ashden Awards for Sustainable Energy earlier this summer. It is a U.K.-based competition that recognizes innovation in sustainable energy solutions that "address climate change, alleviate poverty and improve quality of

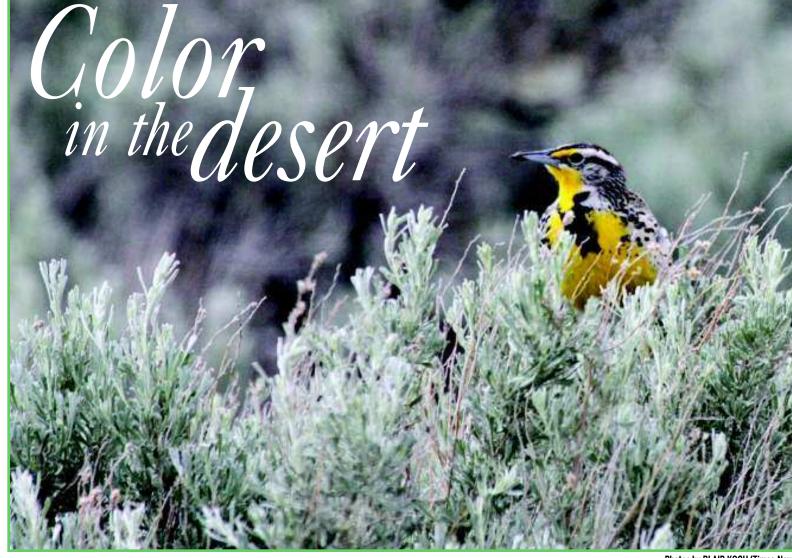

With its success in the humanitarian realm,

StoveTec (www.stovetec.net) has made an unlikely expansion into the consumer camping market. The organization is now selling commercial versions of its stove to outdoors enthusiasts. They are made for camping and general outdoors cooking applications, like a BBQ in the backyard.

JARBIDGE, Nev. – History and adventure are the yin and yang to Jarbidge, Nev.

While you won't find many people in town — the population is about 20 year-round — you may come across folks hiking, dirt biking, four wheeling, horseback riding, fishing, hunting, camping or sightseeing.

During the evening those same visitors may make their way back into town for an evening of gossip and plenty of beer.

Where hunting has been on the decline, ATV enthusiasts are on the rise and a welcome sight to Dot Creechley, owner of the Outdoor Inn, along the town's Main Street.

"ATVs are becoming a big thing," Creechley said. "There are a lot of trails around and just beautiful outdoors to see."

Creechley's right about the beautiful outdoors.

The town, tucked in the Jarbidge Mountain Range that runs along the Idaho-Nevada boarder, is about 70 miles southwest of Twin Falls.

The mountain peaks tower more than 11,000 feet, a welcome site from the miles of Snake River Plain that visitors must drive through from the Magic Valley. It's almost like driving toward heaven.

"We're right at 6,200 feet in town, and just miles out the mountain passes are 8,500 feet, so it's straight up," Creechley

My family recently visited Jarbidge and were impressed by the relaxed, slow atmosphere of a town seemingly from days gone by. While in town we stopped at the Trading Post for a bag of ice, passing an old jail, the Nevada Hotel, and even old brothels. My 9-year-old son pointed out that one store, a quaint wooden building, was decorated with a line of shovels along the outside front wall.

"Look, Mom," Parker said. "All the buildings seem to have shovels ... what's up with

I explained the shovels are reminiscent of the city's battle when South Canyon Road was washed out 10 years ago. The fight over repairing and reopening the road or keeping it closed led to protests, lawsuits and the formation of the Jarbidge Shovel Brigade.

Once inside, we were greeted by owner Rey Nystrom, who promptly guided us to the guest book.

"I've got 24 years worth of signatures," Nystrom said.

Some people visit the area from nearby Murphy Hot Springs, just north of the town on the Idaho side: others have come from as far away as Tasmania and beyond.

"I'd say the furthest was from Antarctica. You don't expect that," Nystrom said.

What we didn't expect was wanting to come back.

Helicopter tours proposed around Crater Lake

By Jeff Barnard Associated Press writer

GRANTS PASS, Ore. -ABend company wants to fly helicopter tours over Crater Lake National Park, but managers of the nation's deepest and clearest lake first want to see whether flights will significantly disrupt one of the rarities of national parks – silence.

The park wants to assure flights do not diminish the experience for visitors or bother northern spotted owls and peregrine falcons nesting in areas near the said Superintendent Craig Ackerman. Tour boats on the lake already are regulated for noise.

"We are noted for our quietness," he said.

Located at the crest of the Cascade Range in southern Oregon, Crater Lake was formed after the Mount Mazama volcano erupted more than 7,000 vears ago.

Leading Edge Aviation has applied for permission to fly over the lake 300 times a year with the number of flights per day and times of year depending on demand, said company vice president Travis Warthen.

A proposal from Leading Edge shows helicopters flying in from the northeastern corner of the park to where the north entrance road hits Rim Drive, and following Rim Drive to the east past Cleetwood Cove.

Shorther tours of about 30 minutes would turn around between Wineglass and Pumice Castle on the southeastern rim and retrace their route out of the park. Longer tours of about 50 minutes would go down to the Pinnacles in the southeastern corner of the park.

Leading Edge Aviation's helicopters would also be available for search and rescue operations, Warthen

Helicopters give tours over several national parks, including Grand Canyon. But no new tours have been authorized in national parks since 2000, when a federal law regulating them was enacted, said Sean Smith, Northwest policy analyst for the National Conservation Association in Seattle.

In a word, no. The largest hardware left on the moon was the descent stages of the lunar excursion modules (LEMs), which were about 14 feet

Using a little high school geometry (see, it is good for something!) one can calculate that, at the moon's average distance (about 238,000 miles), the LEMs appear no bigger than a dime in Minneapolis as seen from Twin Falls.

That's why even giant telescopes like those in Hawaii or Chile (or Hubble, above the blurring atmosphere) fall short of being able to discern Apollo's artifacts, despite being able to capture images of enormous galaxies at the most far-flung reaches of the universe.

To see the physical legacy of the twelve Apollo astronauts' extraterrestrial exploits requires a closer vantage point, provided at long last by the Lunar Reconnaissance Orbiter, now spiraling toward a mountain-skimming orbit around our natural satel-

Chicago teachers visit finally glimpsed on Montana to dig dinosaurs

The teachers from Chicago are in Montana through a fellowship program known as the Science Teacher Field Institute, which aims to invigorate urban science teaching with a healthy dose of digging, star-gazing and other experiences rare in city living. "I think what's important is the emphasis on doing instead of just observing from the outside as from a glass case," said Matt Knoepke, previously a fellow and a teaching assistant for this year's expedition.

"It's helpful having a practical experience to give reference to in the classroom, so you can talk about how a specimen got to the Field Museum of Chicago from the rock in which it was found."

The science-teaching fellowships are the brainchild of Lyon and her husband, University Chicago paleontologist Paul Sereno. Appeals court upholds Grand Canyon's plan for Colo. river management FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) An appeals court on Tuesday rejected a challenge by environmentalists to federal rules allowing the use of motorized rafts at the Grand Canyon.

Several environmental groups sued the National Park Service in 2006 over Colorado Management Plan, which permits the use of motorized rafts in the canyon. The groups argued that the park service ignored its own rules and policies that say canyon uses shouldn't impair the wilderness character of the area.

In rejecting that argument, the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in San Francisco upheld a lower court's decision that said the plaintiffs failed to show the park service acted arbitrarily and capriciously when it adopted its river management plan.

Park Superintendent Steve Martin said he's pleased with the decision. The plan, he said, took years of work and took into account alternatives that would have excluded motorized rafts.

"Really, a lot of thought was given to it, and it's one of those where we can certainly appreciate the perspective of the wilderness groups," he said.

The park service adopted the river management plan in March 2006 after four years of study by a group of scientists, park service managers and other professionals, with input from tour operators, American Indian tribes and members of the public. It's meant to be an adaptable plan in that alterations can be made if necessary.

The plan changed how motorized and nonmotorized rafts are allocated time-slots on the upper Colorado River below the Glen Canvon Dam, spreading them over more months while cutting summertime use. The result is more tourists

The plan also eliminated a waiting list for those who wanted to raft the river in noncommercial boats, replacing it with a lottery system.

More than 7,000 trip leaders were on the waiting list, with many waiting more than a decade for one of the coveted slots.

It has the same type of efficient combustion chamber as on the humanitarian stoves though with a handle, metal case walls, and a painted exterior finish. It comes with a pot skirt to focus flame heat and a stick support shelf where the wood sits.

At a camp site last month, I cut a few small pieces of wood and dropped some shredded newspaper in the stove door. A match whooshed the tinder to life, and the little sticks started to burn from the tip on back.

As the fire burned, I pushed the sticks into the stove where they slowly charred to bright coals. The combustion chamber routed the flame and hot air toward a cooking pot, boiling a couple liters of water in about 10 minutes.

Overall, the StoveTec GreenFire was an interesting alternative to a gas camp stove. It is heavy and not very portable. It does not have the jet-like flame output of a canister stove.

But in my test, the GreenFire proved to be easy to use and efficient, requiring just a few small pieces of wood to boil water or cook a meal in a pot.

Draining boats can help Idaho Fish and Game keep exotic species out of water uestion: "I heard some folks at Salmon Falls Creek Reservoir were issued citations for not draining their boat live wells. How can that be a violation?" Answer: Over the last several years exotic or introduced fish species such as walleye, crappie and smallmouth bass have been detected in waters where they would not normally be found, including a number of ponds on private property.

Organized fishing groups routinely encourage department fisheries biologists to expand angling opportunities for many of these species.

The "rumor mill" indicates fish were being caught by anglers and transported in live wells to distant bodies of water where they were released in the hopes of establishing new fishing populations.

This "Johnny Appleseed" approach by the public to stocking fish is problematic for several reasons.

The species of fish being transported and released pose a serious threat to native fish species.

For example, throughout much of its range the cutthroat trout, Idaho's state fish, is being threatened by a competitor — the rainbow trout. Much of this is because of stocking efforts.

Hybridization is also a concern for department biologists concentrating on ensuring wild populations of fishes, such as cutthroat and red-band trout, thrive in their native streams.

Transporting fish from one area to another area also moves fish diseases. Many of these diseases can be devastating to native wild fish populations.

Idaho Fish and Game Commission rules, in part, says: "No person shall possess, transport or cause to be transported within the state of Idaho any live fish or fish eggs without having first obtained a permit from the director of the Idaho Department of Fish and Game. To monitor the unlawful transport of live fish, conservation officers are using check stations. Once anglers leave lakes, reservoirs or streams, live

wells and coolers are being inspected to ensure sportsmen are not unlawfully transporting live fish. Boat and bank anglers can easily comply with fishing rules by ensuring their live wells and coolers are drained before leaving the waters where the fish were obtained. If you have any further

Bison gores visitor at Yellowstone

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. -A bull bison at Yellowstone National Park gored a 55year-old tourist after the man got within 10 feet of the animal in a campground.

man's name was not immediately available.

The park requires visitors to stay at least 25 yards from bison. The animals can weigh up to 1 ton and run 30 miles per hour.

Iranian president defiant over choice of deputy

By Ali Akbar Dareini and Lee Keath

Associated Press writers

TEHRAN, Iran Mahmoud President Ahmadinejad showed rare defiance of his strongest backer, Iran's supreme leader, by insisting on his choice for vice president Wednesday despite vehement opposition from hard-liners that has opened a deep rift in the conservative leadership.

The tussle over the appointment comes at a time when the clerical leadership is facing its strongest challenge in decades following last month's disputed presidential election.

Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei's top concern appears to be keeping the strong support of clerical hard-liners so he can withstand attempts by the more moderate, pro-reform opposition to erode his authority.

Conservative clerics

and politicians have denounced Ahmadinejad's choice for the post of first vice president, Esfandiar

Mashai

Rahim Mashai, because Mashai said last year that Iranians are friends with Israelis. There are also concerns because Mashai is a relative of Ahmadinejad – his daughter is married to the president's son.

Khamenei ordered Ahmadinejad to remove Mashai, semiofficial media reported Wednesday.

Arguing for a further chance to make his case, Ahmadinejad said, "there is a need for time and another opportunity to fully explain my real feelings and assessment about Mr. Mashai."

The president may be digging in because he fears an attempt by hard-liners to dictate the government he is due to form next month.

At the center of the dispute between the president and supreme leader is Mashai, a member of Ahmadineiad's personal inner circle. Iran has 12 vice presidents, and Mashai has been serving in one of the slots in charge of tourism and culture. Ahmadinejad said last week he was elevating Mashai to the first vice presidency. That is the most important of the 12 because it is in line to succeed the president if he dies, is incapacitated or removed. The first vice president also leads Cabinet meetings in the president's absence.

Ahmadinejad is a member of the hard-line camp, but throughout his first term he had disputes over policy and appointments with fellow conservatives, some of whom accused him of hoarding too much power for close associates rather than spreading it among factions.

Most surprising is Ahmadinejad's defiance of Khamenei's order for Mashai's removal. The supreme leader has been the president's top defender in the election dispute, dismissing opposition claims Ahmadinejad's victory in the June 12 vote was fraudulent. The opposition says pro-reform candidate Mir Hossein Mousavi was the real winner and calls Ahmadinejad's government illegitimate.

Ex-Va. Tech official had gunman's mental records

By Sue Lindsey Associated Press writer

BLACKSBURG, Va. -The Virginia Tech gunman's missing mental-health records have been found at the home of a former university counseling official more than two years after the bloodbath — a discovery that angered victims' families struggling to understand how the killer fell through the cracks so disastrously.

The belated emergence of Seung-Hui Cho's file, a development disclosed in a memo obtained Wednesday by The Associated Press, represents another embarrassing lapse in the case and raises questions about how such potentially explosive evidence could be lost for so long.

Cho

"Deception comes to my mind in my first response," said Suzanne Grimes, whose son Kevin Sterne was wounded. "It gives me the impression, 'What else are they hiding?""

The contents of the file have not been made public, and Gov. Tim Kaine said it is unclear why Dr. Robert C. Miller, former director of the campus clinic where Cho was counseled because of his disturbing behavior, took the records home more than a year before Cho killed 32 people and committed suicide on April 16, 2007.

Because Miller brought the file to his attorney's attention and it was not found by law enforcement, its discovery calls into question the thoroughness of the criminal investigation and the findings of a commission appointed by the governor. The commission never interviewed Miller.

Victims' families want to know whether the file contains warning signs that could have prevented the nation's deadliest shooting rampage.

"Would things have been different if we had this information? What information is in those records?" asked Lori Haas, whose daughter Emily was wounded in the shootings.

Miller, 54, declined to comment when reached by telephone at his private practice.

State officials said they would release the records publicly as soon as possible. either by getting consent from Cho's estate or through a subpoena. The medical records are protected under state privacy laws.

Miller told his attorney about Cho's file last Thursday, said Mark E. Rubin, the governor's chief legal counsel. According to a university memo shared with victims' families, Miller took the records for Cho and several other students home around the time he left his job at the center in 2006.

After the massacre, the counseling center conducted an exhaustive search for the records, and Miller told investigators at the time that he didn't know where they were, university spokesman Mark Owczarski said.

Survivor shares her breast cancer success story

I decided to do a little research, too, and called the National Cancer Institute at 1-800-4CANCER. The material sent to me stated it was an indication of cancer and was very often in both breasts. I then heard from the biopsy surgeon, who stated he felt he could do a limited excision. I explained that my daughter insisted I get a second opinion and would get back to him. A surgical nurse I knew gave me the names of two surgeons whom nurses frequently went to for mastectomies.

The surgeon I selected was very familiar with Paget's, and he told me that I should have a double mastectomy, because the cancer could possibly be in both breasts; however, all my nodes were negative. This happened 10 years ago, and I have had no can-

First grandmother says it's a wonderful life

By Darlene Superville Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON - First lady Michelle Obama's mother summed up her life at the White House in one word: wonderful.

Marian Robinson says the mansion is "much bigger than anything I've ever been accustomed to" and has "lots of people to take care of you." But the people she moved here to care for granddaughters Malia and Sasha – are growing up so fast she's beginning to feel "left out."

Robinson, 71, provided a glimpse into her life at 1600 Pennsylvania Ave. after she read "The Napping House" to a group of elementary students school Montgomery County, Md., Education the Department's outdoor plaza on Wednesday. The story is about a grandson, a dog, a cat and a mouse who fall asleep on top of a grandmother but are awakened by the commotion after a flea bites the mouse.

breast cancer that begins in the ducts and extends to the skin of the nipple and areola. While the name is the same, it isn't at all related to Paget's disease of the bone.

Symptoms can include redness, discharge, a flattened or inverted nipple, changes in one breast only, scaly skin on the nipple, itching and burning.

There is routine testing that often precedes a diagnosis. The first step is commonly a mammogram, followed by an ultrasound, MRI, possible needle biopsy and ultimately surgery in most cases. Two common procedures from which to choose are a lumpectomy, in which only the diseased portion of the breast is removed, or a simple mastectomy, that removes the entire breast but not the lymph nodes.

Annual mammograms are extremely important. Follow-up with a trained specialist can be a matter of life and death. Beyond that, the American Cancer Society is a tremendous resource, both for answering questions and for providing support. You certainly received appropriate guidance and are an inspiration

Cody Wadsworth wrestled his way into third place in Wednesday morning's final performance of the first go-round, taking down his steer in 5.736 seconds for the third best time of the session. Wadsworth's time was good enough for 24th when balanced with all the times in the first go-round, leaving him squarely on the bubble for qualification Saturday's short go.

That bubble all but popped when Wadsworth stepped out for his second go-round Wednesday evening, in which he struggled to a time of 22.762 that almost certainly rules him out of short-go contention.

Wadsworth was the only area participant to compete on Wednesday.

At the conclusion of the first go-round, there were three area participants in the top 10 of their respective disciplines and a fourth in 11th place. Tanisha Adams inning but scored twice in the fourth and once in the fifth to rally for the win. Evan Jerke fanned 11 in five innings of work for the Astros, in the losing effort.

"We did everything we needed to do, they just scored one more run was all. Either team could have won that game. It was a real good baseball game," said Kimberly coach Tom Myers. "It's just too bad we were on the wrong end of it."

In the opener, Kimberly got two doubles each from Nate Harmon and A.J. Schroeder, while starting pitcher Braden Osborne homered for the Astros.

Kimberly plays the Pocatello Rebels at 9 a.m., today in an elimination game. The Astros are upbeat about their chances despite needing to win four games in two days to reach the state tournament Orofino.

"There are four teams sitting pretty good, and there's the rest of us that have to sit there and battle it out," Myers said. "I think we have a good chance. We have some arms rested, and we played really well. We'll battle and see what happens."

Timberwolves pick Rubio to leave Spanish club

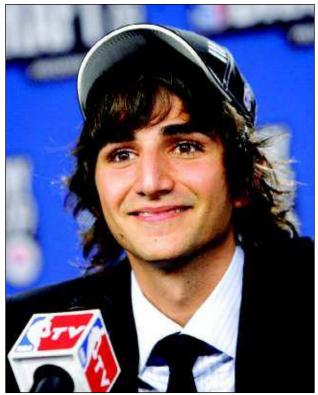

GERONA, Spain (AP) -Ricky Rubio plans to part ways with Spanish basketball club DKV Joventut even the Minnesota Timberwolves cannot reach a deal to bring their first round draft pick to the NBA.

Timberwolves president David Kahn was in Spain this week to try and help the fifth overall pick negotiate a buyout of his contract with Joventut. Rubio is at odds with his boyhood club over a buyout clause that could cost the 18-year-old point guard as much as $6.6 million. The NBA's collective bargaining limit rules Timberwolves' contribution to $500,000.

Regardless of whether Rubio makes the trip across the Atlantic next season, he won't be playing at Joventut.

"I want to continue with the club but, after everything that's happened, I don't think they're too comfortable having me in their squad," Rubio Wednesday. "I want to play in a winning team, on a team that can achieve many things."

Rubio signed Joventut at 14 years old, becoming the youngest player ever to play in a Spanish ACB League game. He rose to prominence over professionally. That's what prompted Kahn to hop a plane to Spain on Monday. He met with Joventut officials to see if he could help resolve the issue, but declined to comment both on the news that Rubio will leave Joventut and the trip in general – when reached by The Associated Press on Wednesday.

Spanish basketball clubs Real Madrid and Barcelona are both interested in signing Rubio if he cannot make it to the NBA this season. Unlike the Timberwolves, they are not subject to the collective bargaining rules of the NBA and could pay the entire buyout fee to get him.

Kahn has said in the past rebuilding the Timberwolves are willing to wait a year, or even two, for Rubio to come to Minnesota. But the sooner Rubio can get there, the better for a franchise that has struggled to fill seats at Target Center since trading Kevin Garnett to Boston two years ago.

The Timberwolves chose point guard Jonny Flynn out of Syracuse with the sixth overall pick right behind Rubio last month, so the team has a backup plan if the Spanish sensation decides to play another year in Europe and reduce the cost of his NFLPA: Vick met with union leader on Tues.

NFL Players Association executive director Deformer Atlanta Falcons quarterback served 23 months in federal custody for a dogfighting conviction.

George Atallah, assistant executive director for external affairs of the player's union, says Vick and Smith one-on-one on Tuesday. Atallah gave no additional details.

NFL commissioner Roger Goodell has suspended Vick indefinitely, and said Tuesday that he'll decide whether to reinstate Vick "in the near future." Goodell did not elaborate.

NFL training camps open for veterans next week.

The union's position has been that it will support Vick on a personal level until Goodell decides how to proceed, but Atallah said Smith will likely raise the issue with Goodell.

JUDGE TO RULE BY AUG. 7 IN VIKINGS SUSPENSIONS

MINNEAPOLIS

Minnesota Vikings linemen Kevin Williams and Pat Williams will have to wait a bit longer to find out if they will be going to trial before the season begins.

A state judge said Wednesday he will rule by Aug. 7 whether to put their lawsuit against the NFL on hold, as the league has requested. The two are fighting their pending suspensions for violating the NFL's policy against performance-enhancing drugs.

NFL attorney Dan Nash asked Hennepin County District Judge Gary Larson to stay the proceedings in state court while the federal 8th Circuit Court of Appeals considers other issues in the complicated case. The 8th Circuit has scheduled arguments in St. Paul for Aug. 18 and indicated it could rule before the regular season begins a few weeks later.

HARRISON'S ACCUSER SHOT AGAIN IN PHILADELPHIA

PHILADELPHIA - A Philadelphia man who says he was shot by NFL receiver Marvin Harrison last year remains in critical condition after being shot again.

Dwight Dixon was found shot multiple times in the city's Fairmount section late Tuesday morning.

spokesman Hahnemann University Hospital said Dixon, 33, remained in critical condition Wednesday.

Police have not made an arrest in the case.

Dixon was convicted of a misdemeanor in January for lying to police about the 2008 shooting. His lawyers said he lied because he feared Harrison, at the time a member of the Indianapolis Colts.

Investigators determined that a gun owned by Harrison was used in that shooting. No charges were filed because authorities said there were conflicting accounts of who pulled the trigger.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Civilizations break down and go to pieces if and when a challenge confronts them which they fail to meet."

 Arnold Toynbee

From a pair game in the finals of a recent U.S. Nationals came a deal misplayed by almost every declarer who encountered it. Can you do better? You may want to consider it as a single-dummy problem by covering up the East and West cards.

Having been pushed to three spades, how should you play this contract on the lead of the club queen?

Assume from East's takeout double that the most likely lie of the cards includes a 4-1 trump break onside. If so, you have eight easy tricks but no comfortable route to reduce your trumps, a necessary move to achieve the trump coup that will allow you to score an extra trump trick in dummy.

The right line (which combines deception and technique) is to duck the first club smoothly. There is no way the defenders will be able to work out what is going on in this suit. Win the expected club continuation and play a third club to pitch a diamond from dummy. Now lead a spade to finesse dummy's 10, then play a diamond to the ace and ruff a diamond. After a spade to the ace (as East discards), dummy is down to three trumps. You can now ruff a diamond and exit with a heart. The defenders can cash three rounds of that suit, but must then lead a plain card, allowing the spade K-J to take the last two tricks.

Dad deciphers son's secret through keystroke recording

DEAR ABBY: My 16-yearold son, "Derrick," recently stopped talking to me, Frustrated about not being able to open the lines of communication, I installed a keystroke recorder on our home computer. It enabled me to see what Derrick was writing in his e-mails. I know it was a violation of his privacy, but I was afraid and up until he has finally told didn't know who else to ask you what is wrong. what was going on.

I learned that Derrick has various options, and he is thinking about running racial? away from home.

How can I help my son through this, having gained underhanded way? If I reveal how I learned about this, I will lose his trust forever. But if I don't help him, I don't know what will happen. Please help me.

- SPY DAD IN TEXAS

DEAR SPY DAD: You may not have to tell Derrick how you got the information. You are his father. Sit him down, tell him you love him, that he's the most important thing in this world to you and that you're worried sick because he has become secretive and uncommunicative. Tell him that if he's in any sort of trouble he won't be punished or lectured to and that you will do this information in an is both. The term African-American is used in this country as a label that describes skin color although in President Obama's case he is literally African-American because his father was an African from Kenya, and his mother was an American from Kansas. However, the term bi-racial is equally accurate because it describes mixedrace ancestry.

> DEAR ABBY: I have been a professional musician for more than 25 years, playing piano in restaurants, lounges, stores, etc. My problem is I have never been able to talk and play at the same time. I must wait until I'm through with a song to talk to a customer.

I know that pianists appear to do this in movies, but those are actors who aren't really doing the playing - someone else is.

When someone tries to talk to me in the middle of a song, I can either: (a) stop playing and answer the question, making the rest of the audience unhappy, or (b) struggle to answer and end up making mistakes and, perhaps, even losing my job.

I can't be the only pianist with this problem. Do you have any advice for me and can you print this so people will be more respectful to musicians?

> - WAIT 'TIL IT'S OVER INOHIO

DEAR WAIT: I have it on good authority, as well as personal experience in piano bars years ago, that many pianists can not only play and talk, but also play and sing. Having made it through a quarter of a century at the keyboard, I doubt you need much advice, but I'll offer this tidbit: Post a discreet sign atop your piano asking listeners to please from making refrain requests while you're playing. You might also consider a small metal tray upon which they can place their
