IDWR rejects pumpers' attempt to keep water flowing

More than 300 wells could be shut off Friday By Nate Poppino

Times-News writer

The state's top water official said Wednesday afternoon that a proposal from two area groundwater districts wasn't good enough to keep their wells running past today.

As part of a deal to provide water that the director of the Idaho Department of Water Resources ruled the districts owe to Clear Springs Foods of Buhl, the districts had pledged to maintain about 9,300 acres of land converted to use surface water instead of groundwater.

Upon learning earlier this month that as much as half of that land had reverted back, IDWR Interim Director Gary Spackman announced last week that he will shut down more than 300 wells in the area of the North Snake and Magic Valley groundwater districts conclusions that may reassure critics who fear a bloated bill that prompts businesses to abandon the coverage they currently provide.

Across the Capitol, House Democratic leaders gave in at least temporarily – to numerous demands from rank-and-file rebels, socalled Blue Dogs from the conservative wing of the party who had been blocking the bill's passage in the last of three committees.

The House changes, which drew immediate opposition from liberal lawmakers, would reduce the federal subsidies designed to help lower-income families afford insurance, exempt additional businesses from a requirement to offer insurance to their workers and change the terms of a government insurance option.

At their core, both the House bill and the plan under negotiation in the Senate are designed to meet President Obama's goals of spreading health coverage to millions who now lack it, while slowing the skyrocketing growth in health care costs nationally.

Obama has placed the issue atop his domestic agenda, and as recently as two weeks ago was pressing the House and Senate insistently to pass separate bills by the end of July or early August.

The White House issued a statement praising the development in the House, and with appearances in North Carolina and Virginia, the president sought to minimize the significance of the slippage in his timetable.

"We did give them a deadline, and sort of we missed that deadline. But that's OK," Obama said. "We don't want to just do it quickly, we want to do it right."

In his appearances, Obama stressed that any legislation he signs will include numerous consumer protections, including a ban on insurance company denials of coverage based on pre-existing medical conditions.

Rear-end crash sends Red Cross employees to hospital

By Ariel Hansen Times-News writer

HAILEY – On their way to a blood drive in Ketchum, four American Red Cross employees narrowly escaped needing a blood donation themselves.

As several vans full of employees from Boise were turning into the parking lot of Our Lady of the Snows Catholic Church on Sun Valley Road on Tuesday morning, the last van in the line was reportedly rear-ended by a Lexus SUV.

No one in the Lexus, driven by 59-year-old Patricia Boyd of Ketchum, was injured, but four people in the van were taken to St. Luke's Wood River Medical Center, complaining of neck and back pain and headaches. They are Kara Stutzman, 23, Erik Hulme, 23, April Knapp, 25, and Delicia Dhruva, 22, all of Boise.

"We have a couple people with sprained necks, a little bit of whiplash. Our van is sicker than our people," said Lani Gerber, donor services manager for the Red Cross in Idaho.

She said two of the employees returned to help with the blood drive, while two others returned to Boise following their release from the hospital. The blood drive was a success, she said, with 88 units of blood donated.

Sun Valley Police reported they have not issued any citations, and that an investigation continues.

Jerome school bond may get a replay

Missing boy's mom fractured other son's head

The mother of a Boise boy missing since Friday is on probation for fracturing the skull of the boy's infant half brother, who was removed from her custody by the state.

Robert Manwill, 8, was last seen near the apartment of his mother, Melissa Scott Jenkins, in Boise on Friday. Police detectives, FBI agents and more than 100 volunteers have searched extensively, but haven't found the boy.

Boise police have said there is no evidence of foul play in the disappearance of Robert, and that the family is cooperating fully.

The missing boy's father, Charles Manwill, has had custody of him since 2008. Jenkins has visitation rights, and the boy was visiting her the night he disappeared.

Court records show a history of family tragedies involving children.

Melissa Scott Jenkins pleaded guilty in March to a misdemeanor charge of injury to a child following an October 2008 incident that fractured her infant son's skull, according to The Idaho Statesman.

Court records Jenkins "did willfully inflict" the injury to her other son "by striking the child's head on a surface,

Say so long to Glenns Ferry's audacious celebration of our past dition in which townsfolk dress up in pioneer costumes and ride wagons and horses through more than 100 yards of fast-flowing water, will end after the Aug. 8 Crossing.

Participants – essentially the same people who helped Bud Allen with the original Crossing in 1986 and subsequently – are aging and it's hard to find the vintage wagons and gear to keep the event going.

That's a loss for Glenns Ferry, Elmore County and the Magic Valley. For nowhere was the past more authentic and as vivid — as at the Three Island Crossing.

Thousands of Oregonbound pioneers made the traverse in the years between 1843 and 1863, when Gustavus Glenn began running a ferry across the river. The passage was perilous on horse or mule, especially towing all your earthly possessions in a rickety wagon. But it sure beat the 100-mile overland journey through the desert to Fort Boise along the south bank of the river.

No less intrepid a character than explorer John C.

Fremont tangled with the river in 1843, and lost: "About 2 o'clock, we arrived at the ford where the road crosses to the right bank of the Snake River. An Indian was hired to conduct us through the ford, which proved impractical for us, the water sweeping away the howitzer and nearly drowning the mules which we were obliged to extricate by cutting them out of the harness ..."

In the Crossing's 23 years, nobody has drowned — although a few horses and mules have been lost. But it's always dangerous, and even the appreciation of the 2,000 or so spectators who gather each year doesn't make it less daunting.

But truth be told, the Crossing has bolstered the character of the old railroad town of 1,388, which has lost 14 percent of its population since 2000 and 8 percent in the past five years. The community's major employer, North American Foods, pulled out in 2008, taking 110 jobs with it.

The folks who remain are survivors, just like the pioneers who fetched up on the north bank of the Snake River a century and a half ago.

We'll miss their personification of our heritage, and most of all the audacity of the Crossing. That's how life used to be lived in the Magic Valley, and the spirit endures.

lavery and racism have been like a soiled garment that America has diligently and at great expense tried to wipe clean. President Obama acknowledged at his news conference earlier this month that America has made "great progress" in the direction of racial reconciliation and he is living proof of that. Having acknowledged these truths, what should be learned from the incident in Cambridge, Mass., in which African-American scholar Henry Louis "Skip" Gates Jr. was arrested in his home after a neighbor, Lucia Whalen, called 911 to report "two men" on Gates' porch trying to force open the front door. According to a statement issued by her attorney and backed by Robert Haas, commissioner of the Cambridge Police, she did not mention the race of the two men. If Whalen were African American would that change the dynamic of the conversation we're having? That two of the officers who came to Gates' home were minorities - one African-American, one Hispanic apparently doesn't count because the arresting officer, Sgt. James Crowley, is white. It also doesn't count that Crowlev teaches a class on racial profiling and no good and that I could be that he was named to that post by his boss, an African-American, who attests to his non-racist bona fides. Like President Obama, I know Skip Gates. He recently gave me a personal tour of the African-American museum at Harvard after we had corresponded about his excellent PBS program "African American Lives." Gates is a classy guy with excellent social skills and a sharp mind.

Also like President Obama, I wasn't at the scene of the Cambridge confrontation. If one accepts the police report, Gates apparently said things he ought not to have said. Is that understandable? It is certainly human nature. I sometimes get upset when "profiled" by Transportation Security Administration employees because I've had difficulty getting off a terrorist suspect list. It is tempting to say, "If I were a terrorist shouting 'death to America' vou'd probably let me go through," but because I know it would do arrested and miss my flight, I hold my tongue.

To the larger point made by Gates and the president about blacks disproportionately singled out for stops and arrests because of their race. The media have some responsibility in this. Most news reports show blacks as the perpetrators or victims of violent crime. Most news interviews with black mothers (and many TV commercials) have no man in the picture, because in far too many cases there isn't one. He is either the absent father, deceased or in prison.

Much of the violent crime in America occurs in low-income neighborhoods. Race isn't the cause of these crimes; a social system put in place by liberal Democrats is to blame. That system does not encourage minorities to succeed. It enables them in their victimhood and sense of impoverishment. Liberal Democrats refuse to allow poor black children to escape failing government schools. The welfare system, revised by a Republican Congress and reluctantly signed into law by President Bill Clinton, has doomed several generations of African-Americans to misery, complacency and despondency. Black children who do succeed are accused of "acting white" and urged to fall back into the cycle of failure experienced by many of their friends.

President Obama properly apologized to Sgt. Crowley and his department for suggesting they acted "stupidly." He is also doing the right thing by inviting Professor Gates and the officer to the White House for what one hopes will be a moment of reconciliation. He thankfully has begun (at the recent NAACP convention) to attack the underpinnings of an attitude that still reigns in much of the black community: that failure is someone else's fault. Obamacare for Megal ane ig Nanny Democrats want to ration health care for everyone in America - except those who break our immigration laws. Earlier this month, the House Ways and Means Committee defeated an amendment that would have prevented illegal aliens from using the so-called "public health insurance option." Every Democrat on the panel voted against the measure.

Nevada GOP Rep. Dean Heller's measure would have enforced income, eligibility, and immigration verification screening on all Obamacare patients. Unlike most everything else stuffed into the House Democrats' plan, the citizenship vetting process would not have required building a new bureaucracy. Rep. Heller proposed using existing state and federal databases created years ago to root out entitlement fraud.

If the congressional majority were truly committed to President Obama's quest to wring cost savings from the system, why won't they adopt the same antifraud checks imposed on other government health and welfare beneficiaries? Maybe an intrepid reporter can ask the president at his next Obamacare show to explain.

The Democratic leadership denies that an estimated 12-20 million illegal immigrants will receive taxpayer-subsidized health insurance coverage. Senate Finance Committee Chair Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont. calls the proposition "too politically explosive."

But President Obama lit the fuse in February when he signed the massive expansion of the State Children's Health Insurance Program. That law loosened eligibility requirements for legal immigrants and their children by watering down document and evidentiary standards - making it easy for individuals to use fake Social Security cards to apply for benefits with little to no chance of getting caught. In addition, Obama's S-CHIP expansion submit to the Obamacare revoked Medicaid application time limits that were part of the 1996 welfare reform law. Immigration activists see the provisions as first steps toward universal coverage for illegals.

"Explosive?" The applause certainly was. President Obama's praise of the weakened immigrant eligibility rules drew the strongest claps and cheers from members of Congress at the SCHIP signing event.

Immigration analyst James R. Edwards, Jr. reported in National Review that "no health legislation on the table requires federal, state, or local agencies — or private institutions receiving federal funds — to check the immigration status of health-program applicants, so some of the money distributed via Medicaid and tax credits inevitably would go to illegal aliens." Moreover, the Senate Finance Committee plan creates a new preference for illegal aliens by exempting them from the mandate to buy insurance.

That's right. Law-abiding, uninsured Americans would be fined if they didn't prescription. Law-breaking border-crossers, visa-overstayers, and deportation fugitives would be spared.

The solution is not to give them health insurance, but to turn off the magnets that draw them to enter illegally in the first place.

At a time when Democrat leaders are pushing rationed care in a world of limited resources, Americans might wonder where the call for shared sacrifice is from illegal immigrant patients like those in Los Angeles getting free liver and kidney transplants at UCLA Medical Center. "I'm just mad," illegal alien Jose Lopez told the Los Angeles Times last year after receiving two taxpayer-subsidized liver transplants while impatiently awaiting approval for state health insurance.

Now, multiply that sense of entitlement by 12-20 million illegal immigrants. Welcome to the open-borders Obamacare nightmare.

Newly installed State Board of Education President Paul Agidius of Moscow says he wants to be engaged with the state's institutions of higher learning without micromanaging them.

The state board has found itself on both sides of that question.

Agidius is the fellow assigned to fill a vacuum left Parma and ISU will tell you when the state board's dominant figure, Idaho Falls attorney Blake Hall, abruptly resigned last spring.

Yet, Agidius openly concedes he's learned more from reading newspapers than from his own university administrators. The University of Idaho's decision to close down its Parma Post Register, Idaho Falls agricultural testing station caught the state board by surprise, even though any program cut of $500,000 or more requires the agency's approval. The decision now is on hold ...

Take note also of how much vigor Luna brings to the task of convincing legislators to support lowering the percentage required to pass a school bond, from 662/3 percent to 60 percent.

That would require a constitutional change. But for the voters to get their crack at the question in 2010, Luna needs two-thirds support from both the Idaho Senate and House of Representatives.

It's a brutal fight, but one Luna picked.

Luna is willing to travel this road because last year lawmakers did away with stealth school bond elections by specifying four dates districts could seek money from patrons.

Luna acknowledges that will make it more difficult to build new schools and repair old ones.

The disciplining power of posterity

🛮 very day, I check a blog called Marginal Revolution, which is famous for its erudite authors, Tyler Cowen and Alex Tabarrok, and its intelligent contributors. Last week, one of those contributors asked a question that is fantastical but thought-provoking: What would happen if a freak solar event sterilized the people on the half of the earth that happened to be facing the sun?

If you take an individualistic view of the world, not much would happen immediately. There are millions of people today who do not reproduce, and they lead happy, fulfilling and productive lives.

Even after the event, material conditions would be exactly the same. People would still have an incentive to go to work, pay off their bills and educate the children who were already with us. For 20 years, there would still be workers flowing into the labor force. Immigrants from the other side of the earth could eventually surge into the areas losing population. If anything, the mass-sterilization might reduce the environmental strain on the planet. People might focus on living for the moment, valuing the here and now.

But, of course, we don't lead individualistic lives. People live in a compact between the dead, the living and the unborn, and the value of the thought experiment is that it reminds us of the power posterity holds over our lives. If, say, the Western Hemisphere were sterilized, there would soon be a cataclysmic spiritual crisis. Both Judaism and Christianity are promisecentered faiths. They are based on narratives that lead from Genesis through progressive revelation to a glorious culmination. Believers' lives have significance because they and their kind are part of this glorious unfolding. Their be shattered, too. Anything worth doing is the work of generations - ending racism, promoting freedom or building a nation. America's founders, for example, felt the eyes of their descendants upon them. Alexander Hamilton felt that he was helping to create a great empire. Noah Webster composed his dictionary anticipating that America would someday have 300 million inhabitants, even though at the

There would be a radical increase in individual autonomy. Not sacrificing for their own society's children, people would themselves become children, basing their lives on pleasure and ease instead of meanings to be fulfilled. Some people might try to recruiting people from the fertile half of the earth. But that wouldn't work. Immigration is the painful process of leaving behind one culture and way of living so that your children and children's children can enjoy a different future. No one would be willing to undertake that traumatic process in order to move from a society that was reproducing to a society that was fading. There wouldn't be the generations required to assimilate

They wouldn't be like current immigrants because they wouldn't be joining a common project, but displacing it. There would be no sense of peoplehood, none of the untaught affections of those who are part of an organic social unit that shares the same destiny.

Within weeks, in other words, everything would break down and society would be unrecognizable. The scenario is unrelievedly grim. An individual who does not have children still contributes fully to the future of society. But when a society doesn't reproduce, there is nothing left to contribute to.

But, of course, that's the beauty of this odd question. There are no sterilizing sunspots. Instead, we are blessed with the disciplining power of our posterity. We rely on this strong force - these millions of unborn people who give us the gift of our way of life.

This research promises to help America's doctors better target treatments to patients who can benefit from them as well as cut unnecessary health-care spending. It's also good that lawmakers recognized that research comparing one therapy to another should take into account that patients respond to treatments differently.

As Congress begins to enact health-care reforms, advancing understanding of which treatments work for which patients is critical. To that end, Congress should move swiftly to make our stimulus investment sustainable with a permanent comparative effectiveness institute.

But that doesn't have to Because government funding is likely to be scarce, life-science companies should be encouraged to be part of the effort. Tapping into the considerable expertise of their researchers could also dramatically increase the number and quality of studies.

Of course, comparative effectiveness research is not a silver bullet. It won't address all the drivers of health-care costs. CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) released. She refused to - The woman who dialed answer questions about the 911 to report a possible break-in at the home of black Harvard scholar Henry Louis Gates Jr. said Wednesday she raised by two loving parents was wrongly labeled a racist based on assumptions about her and words she never said and hoped the recently released recording of the call would put the controversy to rest.

With a trembling voice, Lucia Whalen, 40, said she was out walking to lunch in Gates' Cambridge neighbornear Harvard University when an elderly woman without a cell phone stopped her because she was concerned there was a possible burglary in progress.

Whalen says she was vilified on blogs as a racist after a police report said she described the possible burglars as "two black males with backpacks?' Her lawyer has said mainstream media outlets and bloggers had concluded she was a privileged white neighbor.

Tapes of the call released earlier this week revealed that Whalen, a first-generation Portuguese-American who doesn't live in the area, did not mention race. When pressed by a dispatcher on whether the men were white, black or Hispanic, she said one of them might have been Hispanic.

"Now that the tapes are out, I hope people can see that I tried to be careful and honest with my words," Whalen said. "It never occurred to me that the way I reported what I saw be analyzed by an entire nation."

Cambridge police Commissioner Robert Haas acknowledged that the police report contains a reference to race, but said the report is merely a summary of events. The arresting officer, Sgt. James Crowley, has said his information on the race of the suspects came during a brief encounter with Whalen outside Gates' house; she contradicted that Wednesday, saying she made ior" appropriately. Whalen, a Harvard alumni magazine employee, said she lived in fear during the immediate aftermath of the arrest when she was dogged for comment and maligned based on the information attributed to her in the police report.

"The criticism at first was so painful I was frankly afraid to say anything. People called me racist. Dems, GOP spar over Sotomayor vote

WASHINGTON (AP) -The Senate debate over Supreme Court nominee Sonia Sotomayor turned bit-Wednesday, Democrats warned the GOP it would pay a steep price for opposing the judge who would be the first Hispanic justice, and a top Republican charged they were playing destructive racial politics.

Majority Leader Harry Reid implored Republicans Wednesday Democrats in voting to confirm Sotomayor next week, warning that GOP opposition would bring the same sort of public backlash that followed the party's spirited opposition to measures that would have given some illegal immigrants a chance to gain legal status.

"I just think that their voting against this good woman is going to treat them about the same way that they got treated as a result of their votes on immigration," said Reid, D-Nev.

But the debate over her nomination has raised tricky questions of identity politics for both parties. Process could double world's oil reserves, say scientists

By John Porretto Associated Press writer

HOUSTON - Imagine having a nice ripe orange, ready for squeezing, but being able to get out only a small amount of juice. There's got to be more, you just can't get at it.

That's the frustration of the global oil business. The industry is spending billions on technology to increase the amount of oil it can extract from the ground. Oil companies typically recover only about one in three barrels of oil from their fields, but they can't afford to leave so much crude untapped at a time when it's difficult to access new reserves. Recovering more oil has enormous implications, not only for the companies' balance sheets but also for the world's diminishing supply.

One of the latest attempts to learn where the oil is hiding would involve injecting hundreds of millions of tiny carbon clusters deep into natural underground reservoirs, changes to their chemical makeup would signal whether they've come across oil, water or other substances.

Current and future earning reports from major oil companies

· ConocoPhillips reported plunging profits for the second quarter, saying Wednesday its earnings fell a whopping 76 percent because of the yearover-year fall in oil and gas prices and lousy refining results. Valero Energy Corp.,

the largest independent U.S. refiner, reported Tuesday a $254 million second-quarter loss and said it could lose money in the third and fourth quarters · Exxon Mobil Corp., the world's largest publicly traded oil company, and Royal Dutch Shell PLC are scheduled to report first-half results Thursday, followed by Chevron Corp. on Friday.

The clusters, referred to as "nanoreporters" and roughly 30,000 times smaller than the width of a human hair, also can tell the temperature, pressure and other factors that can help a company zero in on more oil.

Major oil companies, including Royal Dutch Shell, BP, ConocoPhillips and Marathon, are funding the research at Rice University. Scientists at Rice say they hope to begin field tests in the next year.

The industry is also upgrading the ways it plies more oil out of the earth, techniques that involve heat and chemical injections or gas and water pressure. These methods account for 3 percent of world oil production, according to the International Energy Agency, the Paris-based policy adviser to 28 countries.

If oil companies could recover 50 percent of the crude in their fields instead of 35 percent, it would double the world's proven reserves of about 1.2 trillion barrels, the IEA says.

Though it could take a couple of decades to reach 50 percent, even a modest increase in the amount of oil recovered in coming years will alter the debate about peak oil — the point at which half the world's reserves have been depleted.

Loyalty from the boss may help prevent staff defections any employees of small businesses are grateful to have a job, even as salaries are frozen or cut and they're asked to take on more responsibility. Company owners shouldn't take those good attitudes for granted — they need to show workers some loyalty so staffers don't jump ship when the economy gets stronger.

"This is a crucial time," said Leigh Branham, owner of Keeping The People Inc., an Overland Park, Kan., human resources consulting firm. "Employees are testing you to see how loval you are to them, to decide if they're going to stay."

Beverly Kaye, an employee retention consultant in Sherman Oaks, Calif., warned that owners who don't show loyalty to their workers could see talented staffers leave even before the recovery. "In this economy, it's a gigantic non-truth that no one's hiring," Kaye said. "Good people have options."

Showing workers you're loyal is critical when they're making sacrifices to help your business weather the recession. HR professionals say that means implementing painful staff and salary cuts in a sensitive way. Imposing such changes without any discussion will create resentment, not loyalty.

"Don't make the decisions from on high," Branham said.

Branham suggests, for example, asking employees if they're willing to take pay cuts to save jobs. That way, "there's a sense of ownership in what needs to be done," he said.

Many HR consultants also advocate letting workers know how the company is doing. Staffers may not need to know the smallest details of the firm's finances, but the boss should let everyone know what challenges it faces. That not only makes for a more open atmosphere, it will put employees in a better position to help the company.

Many companies are holding meetings or forums in which the boss fields questions from workers, Branham said. "You win so much respect when you do that."

Kaye has held group meetings when she had to break bad news to her own employees.

"We downsized from 30 full-time people to 21 fulltime, and we cut people's salaries by 10 percent," she said. "Every time we had to lay someone off, we had an all-hands meeting and an all-hands (conference) call. I told everyone what was happening."

Kaye suggested owners not wait until there's a layoff or salary reduction to meet with staffers. And she recommends individual as well as group meetings.

"It's about reassuring the people on your team that you need them, that you care, that you're concerned about them," she said.

Another way a boss can foster loyalty is to acknowledge and show appreciation for how hard staffers are working, especially

"It comes back to asking, 'how are you doing with all this?" Branham said.

There are times when the pressure is going to be more intense, when a lot of work just has to be done in a short amount of time. In such cases, Kaye, suggested owners tell their staffs, "these are tough times. I know you're working harder than ever for less money than ever. I want you to know I notice, I appreciate it, I want you to stick with me. We'll get through this."

Branham also suggested what he called spontaneous acts of caring.

For example, go to a staffer who's had a tough day and say, "it's 3 p.m., you've worked hard today, go on home." Or, give a staffer an extra day off.

Be proactive in such flexibility, Kaye said. "Ask people, 'what do you want. ... I don't have dollars to offer you, but boy, would I love to offer you whatever I can."

Victims' lawyer: 'Candid' Madoff tells all

By Larry Neumeister Associated Press writer

NEW YORK - A lawyer for victims of Bernard Madoff's Ponzi scheme says the financier told him during a 4 1/2-hour prison interview plenty of details about the fraud, including how it took place and how securities regulators missed catching him.

The San Francisco lawyer, Joseph Cotchett, said he planned to use what he learned on Tuesday to add defendants to a lawsuit to be filed in Manhattan this week on behalf of investors harmed by the multibillion-dollar scam. "It was an extraordinary visit," Cotchett said. "He was very candid, very open, and answered every one of our questions." Madoff, 71, pleaded guilty in March and was sentenced to 150 years in prison. He was taken two weeks ago to the Butner Correctional Federal Complex, about 45 miles northwest of Raleigh, N.C., where the interview took place.

Cotchett said Madoff repeatedly apologized for the harm he caused victims, about a dozen of whom are represented by Cotchett. The lawyer said he would describe much of what he learned from Madoff in his lawsuit.

Nancy Fineman, a lawyer who works with Cotchett and attended the interview, said Madoff described his meetings with the Securities and Exchange Commission while he was committing the fraud and the fact the SEC was unable to catch him, which didn't seem to surprise him.

Authorities say Madoff thousands investors over several decades at least $13 billion as he told them the money had grown to about $65 billion. By the time he was arrested in December, only several hundred million dollars remained in the accounts of his private investment business.

Madoff and his wife have relinquished more than $100 million in assets, and authorities have identified more than $1 billion in assets that can be distributed to victims, many of them elderly and living in the New York area and Florida.

A lawyer for Madoff was in the room Tuesday as the lawyers asked questions designed to learn if there were new avenues to pursue money to compensate his victims.

Cotchett said Madoff did not believe there was money that was unaccounted for or had not been discovered by investigators.

Still, Cotchett said he believed there was money that hadn't been located, including overseas.

"But it might be in many different venues, and by that I mean I don't think that Bernie knows where all the money is because money was paid out to feeders," he said.

Cotchett said he expected to add to his lawsuit some defendants who worked for those feeder funds that sent clients to Madoff. He said his interview left him thinking that many people were negligent in the Madoff fraud, including the government's watchdog agencies.

THESE HILLS WERE MADE FOR RIDING

Planner Max Yingst said riders have been coming to the site for decades.

"Riding's been transpiring there for 40-plus years," Yingst said. "It's a draw because it's close and offers great opportunities to ride."

Hundreds of acres of trail mean there's something for every level rider: easy-going trails on flat surfaces, washes, steep terrain for challenging hill climbs, and even sandy loams.

The land offers off-road opportunity for bikes, four-wheelers and some area for larger, off-road vehicles, such as Jeeps.

Twin Falls' Jeff Sharp, owner of J&C Motorsports, said riders sing Hagerman Hills praises all the time.

"A lot of guys think it's the bomb," Sharp said. "I think it's because of all the different terrain offered. There's everything tracks to burn out to desert hills and even big sandy areas to play in." The Hills is a destination for riders across southern Idaho.

Kimberly resident Shane Lee, 20, learned to ride there as a child and keeps coming back for more.

"Every time I go out there it's fun," he said.

Lee said he enjoys its wide expanse; a lot of people can ride there but it isn't crowded. He worries, however, that the terrain won't be open forever.

Yingst said the future will bring changes to the land usage management plan within the Jarbidge Field Office jurisdiction, but users will have a voice in that plan.

"At this time the land is open to cross country motorized use," Yingst said. "However, the BLM recommends riders stay on developed trails."

At the Hills, riders will find plenty - you just have to get there.

t's not quite offroad, but it's definitely outdoors. I'm referring to the Sturgis rally that takes place in South Dakota every summer. The event draws literally thousands of street bikers to the Black Hills, there to ride blacktop through the scenic landscape of lush rolling hills and dense forest.

America is filled with spectacular forests, and the Black Hills, I've recently decided, is one of my favorites. I visited the Hills recently, and they are nothing like I thought them to be. They are greener, much more dense, and much prettier than I first imagined.

No wonder bikers love to ride them.

I wasn't there on a bike, but noticed several bikers in Rapid City to Keystone, the famed tourist town that boasts Mount Rushmore. Later on the banks of the Wind River in Dubois, Wyo., on my roundabout way home, I met a Baptist minister from Portland, Ore.

He was traveling the West and Midwest with his buddies, and plans to attend the 69th annual Sturgis Rally, Aug. 3-9.

There's at least 500,000 bikers from all over the country who visit the Black Hills for the annual event, he said.

One year there was an estimated 800,000, he said. Why? He said it's all about the scenery - and the fact that nearly seven decades later it has become a tradition for bikers of all ages. And you know what's been said about traditions - some are tough to break.

Visit the Black Hills, if you haven't.

There's definitely plenty of outdoors to see, including the four presidents. And according to my Baptist friend, it's best seen on a bike.

Deneen made the case for bird's importance. "What's one species?" he said. "Not much. Get rid of them. But if you modify the whole habitat, when you wipe out hundreds, thousands of species, that is not very smart. We like to call ourselves 'man wise': Homo sapiens. The best from the Outdoor Retailer trade show he Outdoor Retailer trade show is a twice-annual peek at what's coming to market soon in the outdoors industry. This summer's show, held in Salt Lake City, revealed a spread of innovations – from the upgrade of a popular GPS messenger device to a vest jacket that provides warmth via fabric cells inflated with argon gas.

Indeed, Klymit's line of vests, available now at www.klymit.com, inflate at the press of a button to create a suit of insulating cells.

Argon gas is pumped into the vests via a small valve in a side pocket.

The result, according to the company, is a system that is "not only adjustable, but warmer, thinner and lighter-weight than other insulators."

Klymit's NobleTek insulation, which employs flexible, gastight chambers, is looking to take on goose down and synthetic insulating fibers in winter jackets and sleeping pads. The company's debut line of vests, which cost $199, come with a small CO2-like cartridge device that lets you insert and inflate for varying levels of warmth at will.

The popular SPOT Satellite GPS Messenger has been upgraded. The emergency signal and GPS track-

The unit's GPS chipset and antenna have been upgraded for better connection. And one thing I really like: There are now safety covers over the SOS and Help buttons, giving users peace of mind that they can not accidently hit "911" and send in the search-and-rescue troops by mistake. The new SPOT will be available in mid September; price is forthcoming.

Jupiter has taken (another) one for the team

t was pretty big news 15 years ago when the fractured Comet Shoemaker-Levy 9 crashed into Jupiter's southern hemisphere. Images from the Hubble Space Telescope showed a chain of black splotches in the giant planet's multicolored atmosphere, the largest of which were as wide as Earth. It was heralded as a once-in-a-lifetime event.

SKY CALENDAR THROUGH THURSDAY:

Full moon Wednesday, 6:55 p.m.

"Once-in-a-lifetime" is, of course, merely a statistical metaphor.

Still, it was surprising when, last Monday, an Australian amateur astronomer captured an image of Jupiter sporting a previously-unseen dark blemish in its southern hemisphere. At first, astronomers suspected it was simply a dark storm, until infrared images showed it glowing with the heat of a recent impact.

Unlike Comet Shoemaker-Levy 9, the culprit – probably no more than a few miles wide – was not seen prior to the impact. That's not surprising, since Jupiter is currently 380 million miles away, rendering such a small object quite faint. (Shoemaker-Levy 9 stood out because, prior to impact, Jupiter's tidal force had fragmented it into 21 pieces shrouded in a cocoon of bright, reflective dust.) In addition to being excited about this rare event, we should be at least a little bit thankful. Other than the sun, Jupiter has the most gravity in the solar system, which makes it the biggest planetary target. Every time Jupiter sports a black eye, there's one less rogue rock or flying iceberg out there that might otherwise cross Earth's path. After all, it was only a six-milewide object that slammed into the northern Yucatan peninsula 65 million years ago, wiping out the dinosaurs (along with three-quarters of all life on Earth). And the more impacts we can see and study, the better we can assess the risk from asteroids and comets whose future paths might cross ours some day.

Next week: A Chinese legend of bright summer stars.

nswer: In a chapter 7 bankruptcy you receive a "discharge" from your debts without any requirement of repayment, although you may voluntarily repay any debt you wish, such as your mortgage or car loan In a chapter 13 bankruptcy, you are required to repay at least some of your debts by making a monthly payment to the Bankruptcy Trustee who in turn distributes the money to your creditors. You do not receive a discharge from your remaining debts until after you have made all your payments to the Trustee. Chapter 13 plans can run from 36 to 60 months. Most people prefer a chapter 7 to avoid making plan payments for 3 to 5 years. Debtors whose household incomes exceed the state median income for the same size family are required to file a chapter 13. Some debtors prefer a chapter 13 because the chapter 13 "plan" can be structured to stop foreclosures remove judicial liens, remove 2nd mortgages, stop garnishments for back taxes and/or back child support, and lower the interest rate on certain secured debts, like car loans. An experienced bankruptcy attorney car quickly determine which chapter is best for you.

JEROME – Rodeo fans attending the Jerome County Fair, held Saturday through Aug. 8, are being asked to pony up $50 and don pink for a cause. Those who do will get to try their hand at roping and ride a special mechanical bull used to train rodeo cowboys.

In Jerome, the Aug. 7 event will be called Babes 'n Buckles. It will be the first time the event has been held at the fair.

For a $50 fee, participants will meet and have dinner with the rodeo cowboys. The fee also includes a T-shirt and admission to the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association rodeo at 7:30 p.m. that night.

DEAR READER: I am glad to hear that you found an easy solution to your problem. Skin rashes can have many causes from allergies to infections; even the weather or emotion can cause problems.

To the best of my knowledge, the Mayo Clinic dermatologist was wrong when he told you that everyone tests positive for detergent allergies. Since I am neither a dermatologist nor an allergist, I cannot say this definitively. But it stands to reason that the test could never have been created if everyone had the same results — there would be no way to tell what was abnormal.

Cowboys turn tables on nemesis Gems

Times-News

The Boise Gems have had Twin Falls' number, both in high school and in American Legion Baseball. On Wednesday, the number was up.

Jared Jordan hit a threerun homer in the top of the third inning and drove in four runs in total as the Cowbovs beat Boise 6-5 in the first round of the Class AA state tournament in Lewiston.

Boise scored four times in the first inning, but the Sneed brothers, Cy and Zeb, were able to hold the Gems scoreless until the bottom of the ninth and give their bats a chance. Three runs each in the third and fourth inning proved to be enough as the Cowboys (36-8) got a tournament win against the team that beat them in the last two tournaments. Timberline, the Gems' drawing school, beat Twin Falls in the Class 5A state tournament in May and the Gems knocked off the Cowboys in last year's American Legion Baseball state tourney in Pocatello.

"We hit three balls hard right out of the gate, so we were getting good timing and we knew it was a matter of time if our pitching held us in it," said Twin Falls coach Tim Stadelmeir. "Jared's homer really got us going. Cy really settled in and then Zeb came in and just competed."

Zeb Sneed ran into trouble in the bottom of the ninth after first baseman Jacob Coats tripped trying to field a pop fly to put two runners on with one out and the Cowboys clinging to a 6-4 lead. A walk loaded the bases and a hit batter brought the tying run to third, but Sneed bore down and made the all-important pitch when he needed to, inducing a double play ball to end the game.

"We were really on the ropes, but Zeb made a great pitch and we rolled the double play. It was a great baseball game, two great teams really battling it out. Our pitching was just a little bit better than theirs today, and we had some kids really step up," Stadelmeir said. "Our kids were extremely excited, and today was a great day for us. But we didn't come up here just

WAC commish squelches talk of Broncos leaving for MWC

By Dustin Lapray

Times-News correspondent

SALT LAKE CITY - Western Athletic Conference commissioner Karl Benson said five years from now he expects his league to include the same group of nine teams that it does today.

The imbalance in the WAC recent dominance by Boise State and abysmal play by a handful of teams at the bottom of the league — has led many to believe that a great change is coming to the conference, perhaps in the form of Boise State bolting to the Mountain West ference.

TODAY'S SCHEDULE

Players and coaches from Idaho, Utah State and Hawaii will meet with the media at the Airport Hilton in Salt Lake City. Idaho is being represented by head coach Robb Akey and senior lineman. Mike Iupati.

Benson can't silence those beliefs, but he muffled them Wednesday in Salt Lake during the WAC's football preview meetings at Airport Hilton.

"There perhaps was some exaggeration by some media," Benson said of BSU potentially leaving the conference. "It's a great story ... but sometimes it just isn't fact."

Benson added that the WAC doesn't plan to expand to 10 teams because it would add another game to the football season and hence a row of losses in the league. The expansion would make basketball and volleyball tournaments easier to run by eliminating round-robin tournaments, but would decrease the opportunity for scheduling non-conference games in football.

Bratvold to play for Danish hoops club

By Mike Christensen Times-News writer

The last time Amy Bratvold traveled to Denmark, it was as a tourist. When she returns in mid-August, she'll be there as a professional basketball player.

Bratvold recently inked a one-year contract with the Vaerlose Basketball Club, a professional women's team located in Vaerlose, Denmark, about an hour Vaerlose, southwest of Copenhagen. Signing with the Danish club capped a whirlwind couple of weeks in which Bratvold decided to seek a pro career overseas, signed with an agent and landed contact. "It

Idaho's Class 5A player of the year during her senior season with the Bruins, Bratvold averaged 15.3 points, 6.7 rebounds and 2.0 assists, helping Twin Falls to a third-place finish at state in 2005.

The 6-foot shooting guard played two seasons as a part-time starter at CSI before spending her final two years of eligibility at Eastern Washington University, where she averaged 6.8 points and 3.4 rebounds. During her senior season at EWU, a conversation with friend's father who had played overseas sparked her interest in doing the same. Unsure if an opportunity overseas would materialize, she decided to ioin her former Eastern Washington coach Tom Webb at Cameron (Okla.) University as a graduate assistant.

But when the opportunity to play for pay came to fruition, she faced a tough choice.

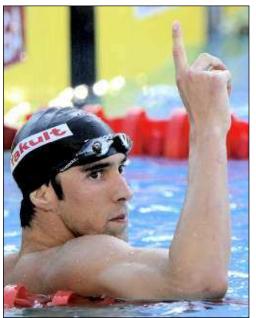

"I had two great opportunities and I had to make a decision," said Bratvold.

The coaching staff at EWU connected her with Belguim sports agent Thomas Roijakkers and less than two weeks later, Bratvold had a deal. Her contract with Vaerlose

After stunning loss, Phelps rebounds with record

Michael Phelps reacts after winning the gold medal in the final of the men's 200meter butterfly at the FINA Swimming World Championships in Rome, Wednesday.

The Associated Press

ROME - Michael Phelps had another swimsuit issue.

It didn't slow him down this time. Phelps bounced back from a stunning loss with something more familiar - a world record in the 200meter butterfly Wednesday. For good measure, he surpassed another of Mark Spitz's accomplishments with the 34th world record of his career, one more than Spitz had during his

One night after he was soundly beaten by Germany's Paul Biedermann, Phelps sliced the time in what he calls his "bread and butter" to 1 minute, 51.51 seconds, more than a half-second lower than his gold medal-winning time of 1:52.03 at the Beijing Olympics.

With all the hullabaloo over swimsuits, everyone wondered about Phelps' decision to wear one that stretched only from his waist to his he normally does in the fly, and paid ankles, leaving his upper body bare. Was he trying to make a fashion statement?

GIANTS GET 3-TIME ALL-STAR SANCHEZ FROM PIRATES

SAN FRANCISCO - Freddy Sanchez offered handshakes and hugs and bid farewell to the Pittsburgh Pirates before walking some 100 yards down the hallway to his new team.

San Francisco swept the Pirates on Wednesday, then plucked one of their top players.

The Giants acquired Sanchez and made it a convenient switch for the three-time All-Star hours after double-play partner and shortstop Jack Wilson was traded to Seattle.

The teams announced the swap following the Giants' 1-0, 10-innings victory — so Sanchez merely had to change clubhouses to join his new organization, which is in the thick of the NL wild-card race.

"It's crazy," said Sanchez, who's unsure when he'll make his Giants debut because of a knee injury. "I'd be lying if I didn't say it's a little crazy, a little hectic.

Moving in, moving on: Without Favre, Vikes arrive

MANKATO, Minn. -Once again, Brett Favre ran away from a Minnesota rush.

Brad Childress insisted the chase is over.

The Vikings coach said Wednesday evening he's "more than content with" a competition between Tarvaris Jackson and Sage Rosenfels for the job the team tried so hard to give to Favre, only to find out he's decided to remain retired.

"He's gone his way, and we've gone our way," Childress said Wednesday, after discussing the matter with both Jackson and Rosenfels earlier in the day.

Childress described their demeanor as excited, and said Jackson was the first player to report to the residence hall on the Minnesota State University campus where the Vikings have held training camp for 43 years. Neither player was immediately available for comment outside the dorm, as players began the annual move-in process with pillows, luggage and TVs in

In an interview posted on Sports Illustrated's Web site, Favre added another subtle twist to this endlessly open-ended story: "I truly, truly believe it's over. But if someone calls Nov. 1, who knows?"

Asked whether the Vikings would revisit the possibility should Favre change his mind again, Childress repeated his "more than content" stance about the current quarterbacks, but avoided saying

Lax hospitals may be fostering kidney-selling

A look-the-other-way attitude at some U.S. hospitals may be fostering a black-market trade in kidneys, transplant experts

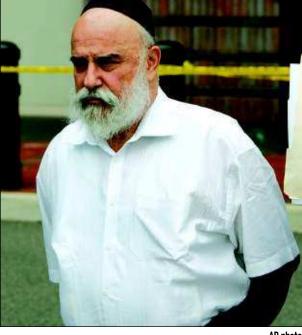

Some hospitals do not inquire very deeply into the source of the organs they transplant because such operations can be highly lucrative, according to some insiders. A single operation can bring in tens of thousands of dollars for a hospital and its doctors.

Despite guidelines from groups various Medicare, U.S. transplant centers are mostly free to write their own rules for screening donors to make sure they are not selling their organs. The questions they ask vary widely. Some hospitals require long waiting periods to weed out shady donors; others don't.

Holocaust museum shooter indicted

WASHINGTON (AP) - A federal grand iury indicted an elderly white supremacist

Wednesday on charges that could earn him the death penalty in the fatal shooting of a security guard at the U.S. Holocaust Memorial Museum in Washington.

Hate crimes charges were added to the case against James von Brunn, who has been in a hospital since the shooting last month.

Officials say the 89-year-old shot and killed museum guard Stephen T. Johns on June 10. Von Brunn was shot in the face by other guards but survived.

A seven-count indictment was handed up Wednesday in U.S. District Court, charging von Brunn with first-degree murder, killing in a federal building – both charges already lodged against him - and a new charge of bias-motivated crime. Four of the charges make him eligible for the death penalty.

The indictment accuses von Brunn of seeking to intimidate Jewish people at the museum.

FBI Assistant Director Joseph Persichini said he believed the indictment will "send a message" to those who would try to turn hatred into violence.

"We knew what Mr. von Brunn had done, and we had to determine why, and I think this indictment shows exactly why, because of hate and prejudice," Persichini said. He said investigators tracked leads all over the country to build a case against von Brunn.

The case has sparked renewed calls for expanded hate crimes legislation.

Authorities say von Brunn walked up to the museum carrying a rifle and shot Johns, who was black, as the guard was opening the door for him.

Von Brunn had a racist, anti-Semitic Web site and wrote a book titled "Kill the Best Gentiles," alleging a Jewish conspiracy "to destroy the white gene pool." He also claimed the Holocaust was a hoax.

The study was only a small proof-of-principle test, and its approach is not practical on a large scale. However, it shows that scientists may finally be on the right track to developing an effective vaccine against one of mankind's top killers. Exit poll: Pro-Europe parties win in Moldova

CHISINAU, (AP) – A leading exit poll predicted that pro-Europe parties will win enough combined votes to defeat Moldova's ruling Party in Communist elections national Wednesday - raising the likelihood that the impoverished ex-Soviet republic will move closer to the West.

The poll by the Institute for Public Politics projected that four center-right opposition parties won 54.9 percent of the vote in parliamentary balloting widely seen as a referendum on whether to linger in Russia's loose orbit or edge toward the European Union.

It said President Vladimir Voronin's Communists who have held power since 2001 – were trailing with 40.5 percent.

The institute said the poll was based on interviews with about 17,000 voters in 200 polling stations around Moldova. It had a margin of error of plus or minus 2 percentage points.

NOTICE OF APPLICATION FOR APPROVAL OF GROUND WATER USERS' 2009 JOINT MITIGATION PLAN TO COMPENSATE BLUE LAKES TROUT FARM, INC.

Notice is hereby given that on July 6, 2009, North Snake Ground Water District and Magic Valley Ground Water District, c/o Randall C. Budge, Racine Olson Nye Budge & Bailey, PO Box 1391, Pocatello ID 83204-1391, submitted a Joint Mitigation Plan for 2009 (plan) to the Idaho Department of Water Resources (Department).

The plan is intended to satisfy the mitigation or replacement obligations of the North Snake Ground Water District and Magic Valley Ground Water District as well as the obligations of the Southwest Irrigation District, the Goose Creek Irrigation District and the Carey Ground Water District (collectively referred to as "the districts"). The districts are regulated by the watermaster of State Water Districts 130 and 140.

The members of the districts hold numerous ground water rights for domestic, municipal, commercial, industrial and irrigation uses located within Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln, Minidoka, Blaine, Twin Falls and Cassia Counties. Certain of these ground water rights have priority dates junior to the priority dates of certain water rights from surface water sources dependent on springs that discharge to the Devil's Washbowl to Buhl Gage reach of the Snake River. The ground water and the springs are interconnected sources of water. The districts have proposed the plan to compensate for injury to earlier priority surface water rights that may result from depletions under later priority ground water rights. The surface water rights which the plan proposes to benefit are: 36-2356A, 36-7210 and 36-7427 held by Blue Lakes Trout Co. LLC for use at its hatchery facility. The plan provides for direct delivery of replacement water to the Blue Lakes Trout Co. LLC hatchery of 10 cfs of spring flow from Alpheus Creek under water right 36-2603C. The plan also provides for continued or maintained conversions of irrigation of land from ground water to surface water via the North Side Canal Co. delivery system and ongoing enrollment of ground water irrigated lands in the Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program.

The Department will process this plan pursuant to the Department's Conjunctive Management Rules (IDAPA 37, Title Chapter 11).

The Department has not determined the adequacy of the proposed plan. A complete copy of the proposed plan is available for review at either the Department's State Office in Boise, the Department's Regional Office in Twin Falls, or may be viewed online at the following website along with other related documents:

LEGAL NOTICE NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING PROPOSED BUDGET FOR FISCAL YEAR 2010 URBAN RENEWAL AGENCY OF THE COUNTY OF JEROME, IDAHO

A public hearing for consideration of the proposed budget for the Jerome County Urban Renewal Agency for the fiscal year that begins October 1, 2009, and ends September 30, 2010, will be held at the Jerome County Commissioner Chambers, 300 N. Lincoln, Room 300, Jerome, Idaho, on Thursday, August 13, 2009, at 12:00 noon, pursuant to Idaho Code 50-1002. Written or oral comments about the proposed budget are welcome. Written comment may be submitted prior to the meeting to: Jerome County Urban Renewal Agency, c/o Mr. Joseph Davidson, Chairman, c/o Board of County Commissioners, County of Jerome, 300 North Lincoln, Room 300, Jerome, ID 83338.

The Agency budget funds the programs, services and capital projects that the Agency Board has determined to be important to meet the Agency's strategic goals as outlined in the Jerome County Crossroads Urban Renewal Project Urban Renewal Plan.

During 2008 the Agency worked on the preparation of the urban renewal plan. The Agency expenses have been limited to legal expenses, consultant expenses, and other planning expenses. Those activities have been funded through an advance from the County of Jerome of approximately $30,000. Expenses through June 30, 2009, total approximately $17,000 leaving approximately $13,000 remaining from the original advance. Under Idaho Code §50-1002, the two prior fiscal years' information is required for publication of the tentative budget. As the Agency was not established until October 21, 2008, by Resolution No. 2008-38, no budget for FY 2009 was processed as the mandated dates had elapsed. The budget below shows the breakdown of anticipated expenses for FY 2010. Again, for FY 2010, the Agency's revenues will be limited to the County's initial advance plus a pending request for an additional $10,000.

This public hearing on the proposed budget is required for formal adoption of the FY 2010 budget. The proposed expenditures and revenues for FY 2010 have been tentatively approved by the Jerome County Urban Renewal Agency Board of Directors on July 2, 2009.

Daughter should be spared pain of knowing she was unwanted

DEAR ABBY: I just had to respond to "Daddy Who Cares" (June 2), whose wife is threatening to tell their teenaged daughter, "Gina," she was not wanted. For me a person's most defining trait is not gender, age or race. It's whether or not he or she was wanted. The other traits are things that nature or society put on you. Once you know people who put you here, it can easily define you, and it brings pain that will never go away.

It doesn't matter how much you achieve or how much your parents say they love you. A piece of your life just doesn't fit. Those of us who carry this knowledge understand the sadness very well. It is something that can't be taken back.

So please inform "Daddy Who Cares'" wife that what she felt so many years ago is nothing compared to the sadness that "Gina" will bear and examine throughout her life. There is no unhappiness more lasting than knowing you were not welcomed into this world.

WOUNDED HEART IN NEW YORK WOUNDED: DEAR

Thank you for your heartfelt letter. Readers extremely vocal on this subject and agree that telling "Gina" would be devastating and only cause her undeserved and unnecessary pain.

DEAR ABBYJeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: Kudos on your advice to "Daddy Who Cares." When I was a you were not wanted by the teenager I overheard my mother tell a friend of hers that I was an unplanned pregnancy. To the best of my knowledge, my parents never considered abortion, but nonetheless, it destroyed my self-esteem.

In the case of "Daddy," where abortion was considered and planned, I suspect emotional damage would be far worse. It's a good thing "Daddy" has custody because the mother seems willing to disregard her child's welfare in order to get vengeance on her husband. You're right, Abby absolutely no good can come from the disclosure of that information.

ONE WHO KNOWS IN CHICAGO

DEAR ABBY: I was a child who was both unplanned and unwanted. When I was 13, my mother, in a fit of anger, told me she wished she had the abortion she planned to have before I was born. It was then that I realized that the "gut" feeling I'd had all my life to that point and beyond was correct my mother never wanted me. Neither of my parents ever told me the whole truth nor did they ever say how glad they were not to have gone through with the plan.

I have always had difficulty trusting my parents, and I have always known I wasn't wanted. Years of therapy have healed the deep wounds. "Daddy" should tell his daughter the story and also tell her how much he loves her and wants her in his life, and that he is glad they never went through with the original plan. If he does, she will be able to trust him and know she was not a "mistake."

DEEPLY WOUNDED IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

DEAR ABBY: Ever since I can remember, my mother has told me her "funny story" about how she was "horrified" when learned she was pregnant with me and asked the doctor for an abortion. And as a result, I have struggled with low self-esteem and feelings of worthlessness my entire

As an adult and mother, I can pinpoint this "amusing anecdote" as the root cause of many of these issues. I pray that the young girl in that letter never finds out that her parents considered abortion. No matter how many times her dad say he "thanks God everyday that she is here," the damage to her psyche will be forever.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

"Live fast, die young and have a good-looking corpse.

Willard Motley

One of the curiosities of the 2008 Summer Nationals was a relatively new national event called the Fast Pairs. Even stranger was the fact that the winning pair is not known for speed.

Neither Adam Wildavsky nor Doug Doub has a reputation for playing particularly fast. However, Doub, declarer in today's deal, showed that time is not always important. See whether you can match him for low-down cunning.

Against four hearts, the opening lead of the club king drew the club three from East (upsidedown count, suggesting an even number). After some thought, West shifted to a heart to dummy's nine and you dropped the eight. What should you do now?

Doub realized that he needed to attack diamonds. If he found the suit 2-2, he would be home, but how could he make it if diamonds were 3-1? Even if West ducked the diamond ace, there would still be no lie of the cards that declarer could cope with. If declarer drew trumps, he would lose two spades; if he did not, he would run into a diamond ruff.

So at trick three Doub ingeniously led the diamond king from dummy and dropped the diamond queen under it, as East perforce played the diamond nine. West decided that his partner had three diamonds, so ducking the trick could not gain. He won his diamond ace and tried to cash out the clubs. Contract made, with an overtrick!

ANSWER: Two spades is forcing and guarantees a good hand. Although you do not have a real club stop, your duty is to rebid two no-trump now, suggesting a club guard. Bear in mind that although you pre-empted, you do not have a minimum hand, so you have nothing to be ashamed of.
