T.F. officers cleared in shooting at motel

Holler shot 17 times by 4 officers

By Nichole Carnell
Times-News writer

Four Twin Falls police officers were justified in shooting and killing Randy J. Holler Jr. at the Dunes Motel last March 17, Ada County Prosecutor Greg Bower announced Wednesday.

In a press conference at the Twin Falls County Courthouse, Bower revealed that the four officers fired 20 shots — hitting Holler 17 times — when Holler brandished a pistol as they attempted to arrest him for a probation violation.

Holler, 20, of Twin Falls, was on probation for a grand theft conviction. He did not fire his pistol, Bower said.

FATAL SHOOTINGS

The shooting of R.J. Holler was the third fatal shooting by police officers in Twin Falls County in two years.

- On June 30, 2007, a shooting at WinCo Foods by city police officers Ben Mittelstadt and Steve Benkula ended in the death of Logan Brizzee, 19, a suspected shoplifter who drew a loaded gun on the lawmen. Both officers were cleared of criminal wrongdoing.
- On Aug. 16, 2008, ISP Trooper Michael Wendler fatally shot 29-year-old Cody Hanks during a traffic stop near Kimberly, and was cleared by prosecutors of any wrongdoing.

Police investigate Boise boy's death as homicide

The Associated Press

BOISE — Police say the death of an 8-year-old boy who was missing for more than a week before his body was found in a canal was not an accident.

Deputy Chief Jim Kerns said Wednesday Robert Manwill's death is an active homicide investigation.

Kerns says there is no evidence the boy was abducted by a stranger.

The child reportedly disappeared July 24 after leaving his mother's apartment in Boise. A passerby called emergency workers Monday to report a body in the canal near Kuna at about 1:30 p.m.

The boy was visiting his mother, who was previously convicted of hurting another child, the night he vanished.

Teachers moving into Canyon Ridge High School

WATCH a video interview with teachers moving in to the new Canyon Ridge High School.

Canyon Ridge High School will have a public dedication at 6 p.m. Aug. 14.

Classes at Canyon Ridge High School are still nearly three weeks away from starting, but the new high school is already showing signs of life.

Teachers on Wednesday were allowed to begin setting up their classrooms and settle into the school. About 25 teachers — roughly half of the faculty — showed up to check out their classrooms and begin unpacking school supplies.

"It's just been a whirlwind of activity," Principal Brady Dickinson said. "Now, it's really feeling like a school. The next thing will be to see the excitement on students' faces when they come in."

Construction at Canyon Ridge is essentially done. All that remains is a final walk-through and minor tasks such as touch-up painting.

The turnout of teachers gave Dickinson a clue about their enthusiasm. Teachers' contracts don't begin until mid-August, which means that the educators were coming even though it wasn't required.

"I'd have had them in a week ago if I could let them in then," Dickinson said. "The excitement's incredible."

Classes begin on Aug. 24. Mike Ridgeway, an earth science teacher, said he likes the building's technology. For example, images from a computer monitor can be projected on a screen.

"It's nice to be a part of something new," said Ridgeway, who formerly taught at Robert Stuart Junior High School.

Kathy Dabestani, a math teacher, was equally excited — even though her husband is a wrestling coach at Twin Falls High School.

"I was ready to move in two weeks ago," she said. "I'm ready to go."

Gov't insurance would allow coverage for abortion

By Ricardo Alonso-Zaldivar
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Health care legislation before Congress would allow a new government-sponsored insurance plan to cover abortions, a decision that would affect millions of women and recast federal policy on the divisive issue.

Federal funds for abortions are now restricted to cases involving rape, incest or danger to the life of the mother. Abortion opponents say those restrictions should carry over to any health insurance sold through a new marketplace envisioned under the legislation, an exchange where people would choose private coverage or the public plan.

Abortion rights supporters say that would have the effect of denying coverage for abortion to millions of women who now have it through workplace insurance and are expected to join the exchange.

Advocates on both sides are preparing for a renewed battle over abortion, which could jeopardize political support for President Barack Obama's health care initiative aimed at covering nearly 50 million uninsured and restraining medical costs. The dispute could come to a head with

House and Senate floor votes on abortion this fall, a prospect that many lawmakers would like to avoid.

"We want to see people who have no health insurance get it, but this is a sticking point," said Richard Doerflinger, associate director of pro-life activities for the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops. "We don't want health care reform to be the vehicle for mandating abortion." The church can't accept a public plan that covers abortion, he said.

Donna Crane, policy director for NARAL Pro-Choice America, said abortion opponents "want an abortion ban in private insurance, and that's not neutrality at all — that's a radical departure from current law. They want something far more extreme than where I think the American public is."

A compromise approved by a House committee last week attempted to balance questions of federal funding, personal choice and the conscience rights of clinicians. It would allow the public plan to cover abortion but without using federal funds, only dollars from beneficiary premiums. Likewise, private plans in the new insurance exchange could opt to cover abortion, but no federal subsidies would be used to pay for the procedure.

"It's a sham," said Douglas Johnson, legislative director for National Right to Life. "It's a bookkeeping scheme. The plan pays for abortion, and the government subsidizes the plan."

Rep. Lois Capps, D-Calif., author of the compromise, said she was trying to craft a solution that would accommodate both sides. Her amendment also would allow plans that covered no abortions whatsoever — not even in cases of rape, incest or to save the life of the mother — to be offered through the insurance exchange.

"With all due respect, not everyone adheres to what the Catholic bishops believe," said Capps, who supports abortion rights. "Our country allows for both sides, and our health plan should reflect that as well."

But Senate staffers said Capps' compromise is unacceptable to Republican senators.

For years, abortion rights supporters and abortion opponents have waged the equivalent of trench warfare over restrictions on federal funding. Abortion opponents have largely prevailed, instituting restrictions that bar federal funding for abortion, except in cases of rape and incest or if the mother's life would be endangered.

A law called the Hyde amendment applies the restrictions to Medicaid, forcing states that cover abortion for low-income women to do so with their own money. Separate laws apply the restrictions to the federal employee health plan and military and other programs.

The health overhaul would create a stream of federal funding not covered by the restrictions.

The new federal funds would take the form of subsidies for low- and middle-income people buying coverage through the health insurance exchange. Subsidies would be available for people to buy the public plan or private coverage. Making things more complicated, the federal subsidies would be mixed in with contributions from individuals and employers. Eventually, most Americans could end up getting their coverage through the exchange.

The Democratic health care legislation as originally introduced in the House and Senate did not mention abortion. That rang alarm bells for abortion opponents.

Since abortion is a legal medical procedure, experts on both sides say not mentioning it would allow health care plans in the new insurance exchange to provide unrestricted coverage.

A&B water call could now be appealed to court

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

A&B Irrigation District officials will have to turn to the courts now if they want to recoup water they argue groundwater pumpers deprived them of.

Gary Spackman, interim director of the Idaho Department of Water Resources, on Tuesday affirmed a previous finding that outside pumping hasn't contributed to any of the district's problems.

The decision clears the way for the third of three recent Magic Valley water-call cases to shift into the courts — a place A&B's call has already visited. First filed in 1994, proceedings were kick-started in 2007 when the district alleged the state failed to follow through on a previous promise to manage an underground aquifer.

Responding to a court-ordered deadline, Tuthill denied the call in January 2008. A&B officials then requested a review of his decision, but hearing officer and former Idaho Chief Justice Gerald Schroeder upheld it in a recommendation in March and Tuthill reaffirmed it on his last day on the job in June.

A&B petitioned on July 14 for one last reconsideration of Tuthill's June order, including among its arguments the concern that the new order creates a new standard for injury to a water-right holder and that A&B has dry wells not because it doesn't need them, but because they aren't producing water. The district's attorneys also insisted that Tuthill effectively shrank its water right, which has already been decreed through the Snake River Basin Adjudication, by creating a slightly lower benchmark for diversion. And, they wrote, Tuthill didn't provide all information required by state law to appear in such orders.

The Idaho Ground Water Appropriators and the city of Pocatello replied two weeks later, arguing that the district didn't raise any new substantial issues in the case. Spackman's decision this week was short and to the point, noting the previous filings and then concluding "that no further action is necessary."

Idaho Code now provides 28 days from the date of this week's decision for parties to appeal the matter for judicial review.

Wells

Foods of Buhl of water it receives through springs in the Snake River Canyon.

The pumpers were required to file plans to replace the water through two area groundwater districts, and IDWR Interim Director Gary Spackman concluded last month that the districts failed to maintain as much as half of 9,300 acres of land converted to use surface water to leave more water in the ground for the springs.

Spackman ordered more than 300 water rights feeding businesses and cities and irrigating just less than 9,000 acres to be shut off starting Friday. Wednesday's discussions in Boise centered on a plan from the pumpers that would restore all but 1,500 of the converted acres this year, provide for late-season aquifer recharge using the North Side Canal Co.'s system and finish restoring the conversions in 2010.

The director and others who sat in on the meeting said that questions still remain over some details of the plan, but that the discussions at least brought questions to the forefront. Spackman said discussions currently focus on the conversions over the recharge, and the latter may require a full hearing to approve.

"There's some opportunity to work here, see if we can get something done," said Lynn Carlquist, chairman of the North Snake Ground Water District.

Travis Thompson, an attorney for Clear Springs, said the company believes it may be a little late now to remedy the pumping that has already happened this year.

"There may be a path forward with additional conditions," he said.

While noting that both sides seemed to be working together at the meeting, Spackman said that his agency is still obligated to enforce the current closures. Employees are finalizing which water users need to be directly contacted about stopping use of the shuttered rights, he said, and active enforcement is "imminent" — set to start within a few days or even hours of his Wednesday afternoon interview with the Times-News.

"We can't sit on our thumbs and wait for negotiations to be complete," Spackman said.

IDWR so far has made checking irrigation rights a priority over other uses, partly because irrigators make up the bulk of the rights in question. Three towns that had rights affected were expected to be in good shape — Jerome and Wendell, at least, have been able to rely on other rights. But Wendell Mayor Rick Cowen said his town may be in trouble if things get worse; similar closures threatened just this March affected rights with a date of 1972 and later, and another order like that would sweep up more of Wendell's rights.

"We would have to look at some changes," Cowen said.

In their newest proposal, the districts almost recovered all of the conversions they lost earlier this year. Of 17 water users who reverted to groundwater, just two refused to convert back to surface water when asked by the districts, said Carlquist and Idaho Ground Water Appropriators Executive Director Lynn Tominaga.

Jerome commissioners want ITD to address U.S. 93 safety

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

JEROME — A fatality two weeks ago and several other recent serious crashes prompted the Jerome County Commission Monday to ask the Idaho Department of Transportation to make U.S. Highway 93 safer and to ask when and why a five-mile stretch of the roadway in Jerome County was removed from the state's projects list.

The commissioners unanimously approved a letter to ITD and expressed their concern and disappointment that the state agency has neither plans nor funding to restructure U.S. 93 between Interstate 84 and Idaho 25.

The letter cited the poor condition of the roadway and its failure to meet state standards, and specifically refers to the Crossroads Point interchange that accesses the Flying J Travel Stop as unsafe and falling below state standards.

"We are shocked and alarmed that other projects in the valley have been given preference over this important and unsafe highway," the letter stated.

The commission requested that the ITD place an improvement project for the five-mile stretch of roadway on its list of approved projects for 2010.

"What we've been told is all of the projects have come in under budget. We can't count on that but it is possible (that funding might be available)," Commission Chairman Charlie Howell said.

He said that leaves hope that the state might schedule the project for next summer.

Howell said the commission hopes to meet with ITD's director or deputy director.

Frank Orth, 65, of Wendell, died July 23 and two other people were injured after a vehicle he was a passenger in was struck from behind while slowing to turn left from U.S. 93 onto 200 South in Jerome and was pushed into oncoming traffic.

Jerome County Sheriff

Doug McFall provided the Times-News with statistics from an ITD study of crashes. The state findings show a 5.5 percent decrease in the number of motor vehicle crashes statewide from 2007 to 2008. McFall said crashes in Jerome County decreased significantly during that period.

There were six fatal crashes in Jerome County in 2008, down from 17 the previous year and seven in 2006.

Only one of the 30 crashes over the three-year period was in the city limits of Jerome. Several occurred on U.S. 93.

In other business, the commission by a 2-0 vote approved the ballot question voters will ponder Nov. 3 over the proposed new jail. Commissioner Joe Davidson was not present when the board voted.

The county is seeking permission to borrow more than $12 million for a new facility that would replace the aging jail adjacent to the Courthouse that was built during the early 1970s.

The commission chose one of two options that would not grant the county authority to levy taxes to pay for the jail, but would carry a higher interest rate.

The other option available to the board would have included language allowing the commission to impose a special levy to pay for the jail, but only if a future financial crisis were to warrant a levy.

Not raising taxes for the project and avoiding the appearance of an intended levy increase has been a concern of the commissioners.

The commission voted June 21, after several months of discussions, to send the question of funding a new jail to voters. At that time, the board left unresolved a decision of which funding option to place on the ballot.

Two-thirds voter approval is necessary before the county can enter into a long-term lease for the jail facility.

Jerome budget writers expect drop in expenses

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

JEROME — The Jerome City Council approved a tentative budget Tuesday for the next fiscal year that reflects a need for an $883,985 increase in revenue generated by property tax. But that might not translate to a significant increase on tax bills, according to City Administrator Ben Marchant.

Marchant explained that the increase showing up on tax bills will be minimal because most property valuations in Jerome decreased by 5 percent from the previous year due to economy-driven factors.

Total projected property tax revenue for the fiscal year beginning Oct. 1 is $3,547,039, up from last year's $2,663,054. Property tax revenue was $2,229,539 two years ago.

The 2009-10 tentative budget calls for expenditures projected at $3,865,862, a decrease from last year's total of $4,222,055.

Total projected non-tax revenue, including irrigation, water, the library and other sources, is $18,424,553, an increase of more than $1.7 million from last year's $16,689,803.

The council amended the 2008-09 budget for an additional amount of nearly $1.8 million in revenue bringing last year's revenues to about $18.3 million.

Marchant said the almost $1.8 million is revenue not anticipated when the council passed the budget for the current fiscal year last September.

"This will maintain a balanced budget for this year," he said.

The council also scheduled a public budget hearing for Aug. 24. The council has until Sept. 8 to make changes to the tentative plan.

The Idaho Code requires that the city must certify the tax levy for the next fiscal year to county commissioners by Sept. 10 and to publish the adopted appropriations ordinance by Sept. 30.

Marchant explained some new expenditures for the coming year.

"We did a salary survey in January that showed a significant deficiency in several areas especially public safety employees. In order to retain our employees we had to be able to compete with other communities," he said of the increase in spending.

He said the city also needs to catch up on deferred water system and streets maintenance.

"I saw toilet paper hanging from the trees," Deputy Shannon Taylor's report reads. The man said a key to his friend's Honda ATV was stolen and that several solar lights from his flower bed had been "removed and thrown around the yard." The man saved the most disturbing act of vandalism, possibly related to the toilet paper, for last. "He told me someone had defecated on the front step outside his home," the report states. Blaine Co. won't support airline revenue guarantee

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Blaine County commissioners Tuesday declined to pledge support for a minimum revenue guarantee to retain daily Horizon Air service, despite warnings that loss of the service would be a significant blow to the community's economy.

All three commissioners said there was no way they could pledge the $37,000 they were asked for, given a $500,000 budget deficit.

Carol Waller, executive director of the Sun Valley/Ketchum Chamber and Visitors Bureau, spoke on behalf of Fly Sun Valley Alliance, a nonprofit organization made up of representatives from cities, Friedman Memorial Airport and private businesses.

She said that Sun Valley Co. was able to retain daily Horizon Air service from Seattle, which the community has had for more than 20 years, and daily service from Los Angeles only through aggressive negotiations and the commitment of a substantial minimum revenue guarantee.

A minimum revenue guarantee promises that a business or public entity will make up the difference

"I can't tell you the exact amount of the commitment because it was a confidential agreement. But I can tell you it was over a half-million dollars."

— Carol Waller, executive director of the Sun Valley/Ketchum Chamber and Visitors Bureau to an airline if bookings do not provide a certain level of revenue. Historically, Sun Valley Co. has been able to provide the entirety of such guarantees.

But the guarantee asked for this year was substantially increased, Waller said, necessitating Fly Sun Valley to ask local governments to commit a portion of pledge support.

"I can't tell you the exact amount of the commitment because it was a confidential agreement," Waller said. "But I can tell you it was over a half-million dollars."

Waller said Fly Sun Valley needs to come up with $250,000 in addition to what Sun Valley Co. has pledged. It has asked Ketchum to provide $50,000, Hailey, $10,000; Bellevue, $2,000, Carey, $1,000, and the local business community independent of Sun Valley Co. for $100,000.

The city of Sun Valley has already agreed to put a $50,000 minimum revenue guarantee in its budget, said Councilman Nils Ribbi, but added that the city still has to determine whether it's legal for the city to pledge such support.

Maurice Charlat, president of Fly Sun Valley, warned that Friedman could be reduced to one provider — SkyWest — if the guarantee to Horizon isn't met.

"This is an economic necessity," he said.

Len Harlig, a member of the airport authority and a former county commissioner, reminded the commissioners that, while Sun Valley Co. is the primary beneficiary of air service, all valley residents benefit from it.

Waller said that Blaine County's lack of support means that her group will have to scramble to raise funds for the guarantee.

"We have to come up with the money some way," she said.

BID polishes parking recommendations

By Nichole Carnell
Times-News writer

Downtown Twin Falls parking may soon have a different feel.

The Business Improvement District met today to discuss recommendations to be presented to the Twin Falls City Council later this month.

Of the nine recommendations discussed by the board, eight were adopted with minor alterations.

One of the most highly discussed changes that will be presented concerned parking meter enforcement.

Michele Hamilton, co-owner of Scroppin' Girlfriends, said she was concerned with Saturday meter enforcement.

"We need to look at something that is a win-win," Hamilton said. "I think Monday through Friday, nine to five, is win-win."

Economic Development

Director Melinda Anderson said eliminating Saturday enforcement may decrease revenue by more than $5,700.

Board members agreed after some discussion that enforcement revenue losses would be compensated by an increase of metered parking rates from 25 cents per hour to 25 cents per half-hour on new meters.

"No one complained about raising the meter price," said Hamilton, speaking about the public forum held this month.

Some concerns over the recommendations made by the BID Parking Subcommittee included changing free three-hour parking for customers to two hours in city lots to increase customer turnover.

Hamilton expressed concern with some businesses, specifically hair salons, which may not be able to get people in and out in three hours. Suggestions were made to initiate a system where businesses would be given tags to pass out to customers who park longer than three hours.

Woody Cullen, the city's sole parking enforcement officer, said decreasing this limit may have little impact because enforcement is difficult for one person no matter what the time limit.

"There is only one Woody," said Jeff Buckley, BID board chair.

Other changes to be presented to the city council include installation of new meters along Main Avenue between Gooding and Hansen streets and a change from one warning per month to one per year.

While the board was concerned with new businesses that may bring additional employees downtown, City Councilman, Don Hall advised that board that changes can be made later on if needed.

The board will meet again Aug. 27 to present the recommendations.

A man whose body was found on a street in Hailey Tuesday was identified Wednesday as Dennis Lyke of Hailey.

Lyke, 38, was found Tuesday morning slumped over on a railroad tie in front of the Peak Media Building on Spruce Street.

Lyke worked for his family's business, Lyke Insulation and Garage Doors.

U.S. 20 road work near Picabo to be suspended

All work on a road rehabilitation project near Picabo will be suspended until this fall, the Idaho Transportation Department has announced.

The planned construction includes a pavement rehabilitation involving Cement Recycled Asphalt Base Stabilization (CRABS) to increase the structural value of the section. Despite expectations for moist conditions in the area of Silver Creek, excessively wet conditions this spring increased soil moisture and caused severe soft spots in the road base that is complicating the CRABS process.

The soft spots encountered have been repaired. Nevertheless, moist soil conditions are still prevalent throughout the project leading to the decision to postpone the work.

The project includes rehabilitation of U.S. 20 between Gannett Road and the Silver Creek bridge east of Picabo (milepost 186 to 192) and an already completed bridge approach slab replacement at milepost 187. During the suspension of work the speed limit will be 55 mph through the construction zone. No other restrictions are currently in effect.

An expected return date has not been designated but advanced notice will be given to the public. Western Construction Inc. of Boise is the contractor for the project.

Wendell expands student drug testing

Random testing not just for student-athletes anymore

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — From members of the band to the football team and thespians onstage, if you're a Wendell High School student involved in extracurricular activities you've got to take a drug test to play.

The Wendell School Board of trustees, during its July 21 meeting, unanimously decided to expand the district's random drug testing policy to be, "for all high school students involved in extracurricular activities including Idaho High School Activities Association (IHSAA) is necessary..."

The policy also dictates that students enrolled in FFA, professional technology, school clubs, academic clubs and any other activity through the school, will be required to sign up for mandatory urinalysis of illegal substances and/or alcohol use.

The philosophy states that expanding the program is necessary for the "health and safety of the individual and others" and that "many students will be able to say 'no' to drugs because they will have a legitimate reason; 'I want to participate.'"

Trustee Gay Petersen said expanding the policy was "mainly for fairness issues." "We felt it was only fair that if we tested the kids in sports than we should test all kids involved," Petersen said.

Petersen said that expanding the policy was the only change made to it.

"It wasn't a big deal. It's something a lot of other districts do and we all supported it because we, the board, are there to look after the kids," Petersen said.

Superintendent Greg Lowe explained that 10 percent of students enrolled in activities will be tested weekly. The district also has the option of testing all students at the beginning of any activity season.

Students without a parent/guardian signature allowing the random tests will not be eligible to participate.

"There wasn't a particular incident or issue that happened to have trustees want to look at the policy," said Lowe. "The board felt that if athletes are held to such high standard then why not all students that represent our school?"

Lowe said that increasing the student testing pool would likely increase the cost of the program but he didn't know what the costs were.

He said that the cost of the urine tests were mostly covered through the district's Safe and Drug Free School grant, paid in part by state and federal funding.

The Wendell School District does not have a random drug testing policy for its staff or administrators.

While no such policy is in place Trustee Charlene Stouder said not only would she volunteer to be tested she would probably support random drug testing of district employees as well.

"You know, I hadn't thought of it," Stouder said. "But I probably would be in favor of something like that."

The expanded student policy was immediately put into effect during the July meeting.

Paul proposes smaller '09-'10 budget

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

PAUL — The Paul City Council will hold a hearing Wednesday to pass a slightly smaller city budget this year.

The meeting is set for 7:30 p.m., Aug. 12, at Paul City Hall. It is open to the public.

The city's proposed 2009-10 budget of $1,943,150 is down $326,110 from last year's $2,269,260, with a General Fund decrease of $320,210 in expenses from the previous year.

Capital improvement spending will be cut $376,638 from last year's budget level, and the city plans a $1,722 decline in administration expenses. The city's general contingency fund will increase $30,000 to $50,000.

The proposed budget shows an increase of $24,372 in street department expenses, an increase of $2,130 in irrigation costs and the city plans to spend $1,648 more in recreation and parks this year. It also calls for no increase in the public safety fund, which is $58,000.

The city expects to receive $200,000 less in grant money than it did the year and shows a $75,000 drop in its contingency and savings fund. The city's state revenue of $142,000 is expected to remain constant.

The city will receive $55,500 less revenue from miscellaneous and recreation this year, a $2,000 drop in county road revenue and a $1,000 decline in revenue from fees, fines and licenses.

The budget shows an increase in tax revenue of $8,290 and an increase of $5,000 for franchise revenue.

Officers

division, were also present but did not fire their weapons.

They, too, were placed on leave on March 19 and all officers underwent psychological screening according to protocol, said Munn.

All were believed to have returned to duty by March 25, though Munn could not confirm that date.

"The officers involved acted responsibly and professionally under circumstances which happened so fast that a number of split-second decisions had to be made," said Bower. "We decline, in this case, to file any charges against officers."

Munn called the incident "a tragedy in our community, but the officers did act in a professional and responsible way."

Bower said the incident began when a citizen called law enforcement to report Holler after seeing a "wanted" poster in the window of a bail bond agent.

A written news release summarized the investigation's findings as follows:

Two officers went to the Dunes Motel on West Addison Avenue and found Joseph Goins and Solomon Hanks in Room 2. The men were later identified as "close associates" of Holler, said Ada County Deputy Prosecutor Shawna Dunn.

The officers saw Holler come out of the motel room's bathroom carrying a 9 mm handgun.

Silvester — the only officer named in the news release — struggled with Holler, shooting him in the chest.

Holler then broke free from the two officers and ran into the motel parking lot.

An officer in the parking lot said he saw Holler "sweeping" his gun at him. Another officer reported seeing Holler point his gun back toward the motel room, where Silvester and the other officer were standing in the doorway. All four officers then fired at him from three different positions.

Paramedics at the scene determined they could not save Holler's life and ceased treatment.

Dunn said authorities believe Holler was shot a total of 17 times. She said one bullet was recovered from a parked car; one spent slug was found nearby; and one was never accounted for.

Bower said no shots were fired by Holler and the officers ceased fire after Holler was down. The press release did not indicate if Holler's weapon — stolen in an earlier residential burglary — was loaded, but did say ammunition was found in a small black bag in the bathroom. Goins and Hanks had seen Holler with the bag that day.

Munn declined comment on details of the incident.

Autopsy and lab reports indicate that Holler had methamphetamine and THC (marijuana) in his system. Additionally, a plastic bag with 2.58 grams of methamphetamine was found in his clothing, according to Dunn.

Goins and Hanks told authorities Holler was "tweaking" — agitated from the effects of drug use — and instructed them not to open the door for police "because he would go to jail."

The black bag with the ammunition also contained drug paraphernalia, Bower said.

Goins said he saw Holler with a gun earlier that day, according to the press release. Hanks reported seeing "something black" in Holler's hand but believed it to be the small bag.

Hanks and Goins were not charged with crimes related to this event, said Idaho State Police Det. Jerod Sweesy.

Holler was originally placed on two years probation for charges of grand theft in 2007. According to court records, Holler was over drug money that led to the theft of a cellular phone in the parking lot of the Bel Isle Apartments, 750 Sparks St., in Twin Falls.

Holler completed a RIDER program and was released after six months on two years probation.

Warrants for Holler's arrest were issued on Feb. 11 after he failed to attend required meetings and again on Feb. 19 for alleged malicious injury to property.

According to court records, the second warrant was issued after Holler broke down the front door of his former girlfriend's apartment.

Holler also had a previous history of possession of drug paraphernalia, possession of a controlled substance, domestic battery and a juvenile history of petit theft, according to court records.

force is ongoing but should be finished soon, Munn said.

That review is considered a personnel matter and results will not be made public, he said.

"The officers had to make split-second decisions that had to be evaluated for three to four months," Munn said, "and I think that's a reflection of their training and professionalism."

Otter leads state officials in fundraising for 2010

LEWISTON (AP) — Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter received more than $102,000 in campaign donations during the first six months of the year, by far the most of any of Idaho's top elected state officials, new campaign finance reports show.

The reports also show Lt. Gov. Brad Little collected $62,934 during the period, with more than $50,000 of that total coming in during the 117-day session of the 2009 Legislature.

Otter leads the fundraising among the state's top officeholders even though he has yet to officially declare his bid to seek a second term in 2010.

The Republican governor reported $90,305 in expenditures during the period and ending it with $117,800 in cash on hand. Little, who was appointed to the post by Otter in January, reported expenditures of $19,039, leaving him with $43,895 cash on hand to spend if he announces a bid to campaign for the job next year.

The deadline for the reports was July 31. State lawmakers have a separate deadline for filing campaign finance reports.

The reports indicate that most of the contributions to Little and Otter came from lobbyists, industry groups and political action committees.

The timing also shows the majority of those contributions came during legislative session.

Some Democrats voiced objections to allowing campaign donations during the session, arguing it sends the wrong message to the public.

Sen. Kate Kelly, D-Boise, introduced a bill that would have banned individual lobbyist contributions to elected officials while lawmakers are meeting, but the measure failed to even get a vote.

At the time, Little said he supported the spirit of the bill, saying it was "best practice" for elected officials to shun in-session contributions.

But seven days later, Little attended an event where he received thousands of dollars in donations from lobbyists. Little later acknowledged the conflict between his statements and actions.

Other top state officials, all Republican, submitting midyear reports include:

- Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna reported contributions of $3,500 and $24,000 in debt.
- Attorney General Lawrence Wasden had $7,600 in contributions and more than $17,000 in debt.
- Secretary of State Ben Ysursa claimed $3,635 in donations, leaving him with $22,663 in cash on hand.

Court reinstates road ban in national forests in 38 states

By Matthew Daly
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON A federal appeals court Wednesday blocked road construction in about 50 million acres of pristine national forests.

Lawyers involved in the case said the 9th Circuit ruling reinstated the Clinton era rule everywhere except Idaho and the Tongass National Forest in Alaska. Idaho created its own plan for roadless forests and the Tongass was exempted from roadless protection in a separate 2003 decision.

The decision by a three-judge panel of the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals reinstates most of a 2001 rule put in place by President Bill Clinton just before he left office that prohibited commercial logging, mining and other development on about 58 million acres of national forest in 38 states and Puerto Rico. A subsequent Bush administration rule had cleared the way for more commercial activity there.

The latest ruling, issued in San Francisco, sides with several Western states and environmental groups that sued the Forest Service after it reversed the so-called "Roadless Rule" in 2005.

But it is not the final word on roadless forests.

A separate case is pending in the 10th Circuit Court of Appeals, where environmental groups are appealing a Wyoming district court decision repealing the Clinton roadless rule.

"It's up and down like a yo-yo," said Tom Partin, president of the American Forest Resource Council, a timber industry group. "It seems to be bouncing from one court to the other."

The one state not affected by the "bouncing" so far has been Idaho, where a state roadless rule was developed but due to a fluke of timing was submitted under the federal Administrative Procedure Act. That act was first put in place in the 1940s and governs how federal agencies can propose regulations.

U.S. Sen. Jim Risch, R-

Idaho, at that time Idaho's governor, originally intended to submit the state's roadless plan under the Bush rule. But a California judge reinstated the Clinton rule on the same day Risch unveiled the plan, leading to a revision Risch said he believes will set the state apart for years to come.

"Sometimes you just get lucky," Risch told the Times-News on Wednesday.

That tweak also kept Idaho out of a May 28 directive by U.S. Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack that gave him sole decision-making authority over all proposed forest management or road construction projects in designated roadless areas in the other 49 states, for the most part creating a one-year moratorium on most road-building in national forests.

Though Colorado also developed a plan, it hasn't been formally approved. Other states could still avail themselves of the process Idaho used to create its plan, and Risch said he's surprised more haven't been interested.

DOE to store 15,000 drums of depleted uranium in Utah

By Brock Vergakis
Associated Press writer

SALT LAKE CITY — Nearly 15,000 drums of depleted uranium oxide will be shipped from South Carolina for disposal in Utah under a contract awarded by the Department of Energy.

The 14,800 drums of Savannah River Site waste will be disposed of at EnergySolutions Inc.'s facility about 70 miles west of Salt Lake City. The shipments will take place over 14 months, although it was unclear Wednesday when they would start.

The announcement, made by the Energy Department in mid-July, comes as EnergySolutions fights an effort to place a moratorium on the disposal of depleted uranium in Utah.

Depleted uranium is classified as the least dangerous type of low-level radioactive waste and has been disposed of for 18 years at the EnergySolutions' facility.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission has acknowledged, however, that the material is different than other low-level waste because it becomes more radioactive over time for hundreds of thousands of years. The NRC is now studying whether new rules are needed for its disposal.

Since May, Utah's radiation control board has stalled on making a decision on whether to place a moratorium on the waste until the NRC develops new rules, which could take several years. Nuclear waste watchdog group Healthy Environment Alliance of Utah, also known as HEAL Utah, requested the moratorium.

HEAL's executive director, Vanessa Pierce, said the South Carolina shipment is evidence of why a moratorium is needed and the state's radiation control board needs to move quickly.

"It's really frustrating. Honestly, we've been working on this for over two years," Pierce said.

EnergySolutions believes there's no need for a moratorium. It has voluntarily asked state regulators to amend its license to require additional safeguards for depleted uranium, which company officials believe will meet or exceed any new rules the NRC develops for the material's disposal.

"It would turn our voluntary requirement into an absolutely legally (binding license) and we would be subject to that," said spokeswoman Jill Sigal. "We fully expect we will meet any additional requirements or regulation if they come out with any?"

A radiation control board meeting scheduled for later this month was canceled this week so the board could hear from NRC staff while in town for a public hearing on depleted uranium.

Officials say woman's fall may be accidental

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — A coroner says preliminary evidence indicates that the death of a tourist who fell from a 12th floor balcony at the Coeur d'Alene Resort may have been accidental.

Lynnea M. Sprung Hambrice, 36, of Baton Rouge, La., died July 30 when she plunged from her guest room balcony and landed on the deck of the main floor of the resort.

The police investigation into her death could take another six weeks.

But Deputy Kootenai County Coroner Jody DeLuca says preliminary toxicology reports show Hambrice's blood alcohol was above the legal limit. DeLuca also says the way Hambrice landed indicates an accidental fall.

Hambrice, a mother of two, visiting Coeur d'Alene with her boyfriend, Ian E. James, 38, to attend his class reunion in Kellogg.

Police say James is not under investigation and is cooperating with detectives.

Why council-manager government works — and why it doesn't

In only three Idaho cities — Twin Falls, Lewiston and McCall — a professional manager runs the day-to-day operations of government. The council-manager system survived a strong challenge in McCall Tuesday night, but not by much.

Voters in the central Idaho town of 2,600 decided not to return to a strong-mayor form of government, which is the norm in 196 of Idaho's 199 cities and towns. The vote was 293-212.

What does that mean to Twin Falls, which has operated under council-manager government since the early 1950s? Just this: Any system of governance is only as effective as those running it.

In McCall's case, leadership has been sketchy. The resort community lost a $5-million lawsuit to the contractor it hired to build a winter waste storage lagoon — and then fired because city leaders weren't satisfied with the work. With interest and legal fees, it will cost McCall more than $7 million.

In 2007, U.S. District Judge Lynn Winnmill held McCall in contempt because it hadn't paid up, and for a while the city considered bankruptcy. That crisis was averted when 4th District Judge Thomas Neville last year ruled the cost was an “ordinary and necessary” expense under Idaho law, and that McCall didn't have to ask taxpayers for a bond issue. Instead, a generation of ratepayers will pay higher sewer fees.

The city manager at the time, Robert Strope, was widely criticized for his handling of the so-called “J-Ditch” imbroglio and resigned. Strope's predecessor quit after losing a power struggle with the mayor.

Before that, the city manager was fired after he was charged with domestic battery for allegedly beating up his girlfriend, according to the weekly Star-News.

Lewiston's 55-year-old manager-council system has been challenged six times, most recently in 2001 when 61 percent of voters upheld it.

Twin Falls' manager-council government, the oldest in Idaho, has only once been seriously challenged — in 1979. So stable is the system that Twin Falls has had only two city managers in the past 39 years.

Although City Council membership regularly turns over, the professional management of Twin Falls doesn't. That has bred some complacency, as the city's recent close-to-vest efforts at a public-private partnership to redevelop a four-block section of downtown demonstrated so vividly.

Only one-fifth of registered voters showed up for the last city election. Twin Falls residents take for granted that their city is running on auto-pilot, and that's a reckless assumption. We're just one or two bad electoral choices — or unfortunate hires — away from the kind of turmoil McCall has seen.

McCall dumped its strong-mayor system in 1993 after then-Mayor Larry Smith tried unsuccessfully to fire the city administrator and take over his duties — and his pay — as well as his own. Seventy-seven percent of McCallites voted for manager-council government to take politics out of city administration.

Clearly, it hasn't always worked out that way. Nor will it for Twin Falls if we don't hold our leaders' feet to the fire.

Our view:
 McCall's tempestuous debate over the same form of city government that Twin Falls uses should be a lesson to local voters, city employees and office-holders.

What do you think?
 We welcome viewpoints from readers on this and other issues.

A big, fat challenge to America's future

As if President Obama does not have enough on his plate, he should tell us to stop piling more on ours. The time is right for a national address to look us squarely in the eye and say, “You're fat!”

Derrick Z. Jackson

Now, no one wants to be shamer-in-chief, and Obama and his advisers might be tempted to sidestep the obesity crisis with delicate deli diplomacy, merely asking us to try a little hummus instead of that pound of pastrami. But the crisis is now so serious that he cannot attempt to finesse fat.

Last month, Obama told the American Medical Association that the nation needs to “invest more in preventive care so that we can avoid illness and disease in the first place. That starts with each of us taking more responsibility for our health and for the health of our children. It means quitting smoking. It means going for a run or hitting the gym and raising our children to step away from the video games and spend more time playing outside. It also means cutting down on all the junk food that's fueling an epidemic of obesity, which puts far too many Americans, young and old, at greater risk of costly, chronic conditions.”

But that was deep in the middle of his pitch for health care reform. Our national waistline has to be front and center. This week, researchers published a study in the journal Health Affairs that found that as obesity rose 37 percent over the last decade, the cost of obesity to the nation has nearly doubled from $78.5 billion a year to $147 billion a year. Obesity now accounts for nearly 10 percent of all health care spending. The per capita cost of medical care for someone who is obese is $1,429 a year, 42 percent more than for the care of someone of normal weight.

“Without a strong and sustained reduction in obesity prevalence, obesity will continue to impose major costs on the health system for the foreseeable future,” the study concluded. “And although health reform may be necessary to address health inequities and rein in rising health spending, real savings are more likely to be achieved through reforms that reduce the prevalence of obesity and related risk factors, including poor diet and inactivity. These reforms will require policy and environmental changes that extend far beyond what can be achieved through changes in health care financing and delivery.”

“Obesity now accounts for nearly 10 percent of all health care spending. The per capita cost of medical care for someone who is obese is $1,429 a year, 42 percent more than for the care of someone of normal weight.”

Evidence of the possible imposition came in a study published a few weeks earlier in Health Affairs, one that found that the cost of obesity hospitalizations for children nearly doubled between 1999 and 2005. The money we now lose in just one year to obesity is five times the budget of Massachusetts. It is nearly 16 times what the federal government has made available to states from 1992 to 2008 for transportation enhancements such as bicycle and pedestrian paths.

It is nice that the first family has a garden at the White House, but Obama has made no dent in farm subsidies that help agribusiness overproduce worthless calories and help Coke, Pepsi, and McDonalds rank among the Fortune 500's most profitable companies for trash food and drinks. Meanwhile, 24 million Americans have diabetes and 57 million have prediabetes, according to the Centers for Disease Control.

When a quarter of your population has diabetes or is at risk for it, that screams for a prime-time address. Obama is right that fighting against obesity involves smart individual choices (and I do hope he can find a way to finally quit smoking). But just as Americans need him to bluntly tell us we're fat, Capitol Hill has to cut the fat of subsidies, impose taxes on trash food producers, and support cities and suburbs in redesigning streets and parks to support people who want to cycle or go out for a run and children who want to play outside. In a crusade against fat, flabby politics will not do.

Response to article only proves CSI's problems

Thank you for your recent coverage and questions concerning the actions of the College of Southern Idaho leadership. No one disputes the significant role CSI plays in our community. Still, the somewhat cavalier approach to day-to-day decision-making seems to support the perception that rules, which routinely apply to others, can be bent or overlooked by the tight-knit CSI team in the Taylor Building.

In both the hiring of President Beck's daughter and the awarding of the construction contract to Starr/CTA, our community is left with an impression of less-than-stellar performance by both elected and appointed leaders who should know better. The refusal to answer face-to-face questions and President Beck's testy written response to the Times-

News only reinforce a sense that CSI's officials don't expect to have their decisions scrutinized and don't appreciate it when they are.

Thomas wrong about Episcopal Church

We are members of the Episcopal Church at Ascension and would like to correct some bias comments in a column by Cal Thomas run in the Times-News on July 25. It appears the columnist and Fox News commentator fails to go beyond the headlines in his pithy understanding of the Episcopal Church and its history of taking a measured approach toward sensitive and controversial church issues. Here are a few of his objectionable comments followed by our response:

• Church of What's Happenin' Now. As the presiding bishop of the Episcopal Church declared following the recent national convention “... this is where the church ought to be.” Episcopalians have recognized that theological questions addressed by scientific facts and social realities regarding same-sex relationships may not be ignored. Legislation passed at the convention affirms the openness of the ordination process regarding those relationships. Episcopal doctrine is to include not exclude. It follows we need to be honest and truthful about whom and where we are regarding all relationships.

• Inclusivity has nothing to do with foundational truths set forth in Scripture. Say what? The powerful liturgical tradition of our faith dating back to the First Century established a method and guide to apply scripture in our daily lives. How we treat others is the principal biblical lesson practiced by Jesus.

• Biblical references no longer have the power to conform or compel.

Discerning Episcopalians view the Bible in its overall context and not as individual texts condemning sexuality. The gospels teach us to eliminate barriers that separate all human beings. If people were not compelled by the teachings of the Bible, there would have been no progress in the civil rights movement or in the continuing development of equal rights for women. Episcopalians continue to play a major part in both movements. The Bible has not changed but our maturity as a faith has been unquestionably solidified.

How has this inclusivity changed Mr. Thomas and like-minded others' relationship with God? For us it has not.

Idaho National Laboratory is no place for mercury dump

If you're old enough to remember having your temperature taken with a household mercury thermometer, you may be wondering why all the concern over mercury these days.

We've come a long way from yesterday's mercury thermometers. Sound scientific evidence now shows that exposure to mercury, in its many forms, can be poisonous to humans. The severity of effects depends largely on the type, amount and timing of exposure. Short-term exposure to high concentrations of mercury vapor can cause harmful effects on the nervous, digestive, and respiratory systems, and the kidneys. Chronic exposure can permanently damage the brain and kidneys.

READER COMMENT
Toni Hardesty

Because fetuses, infants, and children are still developing, they are particularly sensitive to the effects that a common organic mercury compound called methylmercury can have upon the nervous system, even at low levels of exposure.

Mercury can be emitted as part of certain industrial processes, carried by the wind, and eventually deposited in water bodies where it is converted to methylmercury. Methylmercury in turn is consumed by and builds up in fish, prompting fish consumption advisories. This phenomenon occurs globally.

It's no wonder then why Idaho is looking into ways to address mercury emissions. For example, the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality has conducted numerous studies on the sources and types of mercury in Idaho, operates a mercury deposition monitoring network, develops water quality plans to improve streams impaired by mercury, issues air permits to limit mercury emissions from industrial sources, and regulates the transportation, storage, and disposal of mercury.

A handful of Idaho industrial operations emit mercury into the air. The volume emitted is relatively small when compared to global sources outside Idaho. Nonetheless, just last week the Board of Environmental Quality voted to approve a petition to initiate rulemaking to further strengthen air permitting rules for Idaho's largest industrial sources of mercury emissions. The board's action came after more than a year of work and debate on this issue, all conducted in an open and fair public forum.

Contrast this to the U.S. Department of Energy's selection of the Idaho National Laboratory in eastern Idaho as one of only seven potential sites in the entire country for the establishment of a national mercury repository. Compared to Idaho's open processes to address mercury emissions, this federal decision was made without open consultation or input from any state. Furthermore, the criteria for the selection of these sites and the merit of the selected sites versus all other potential sites across the country are unknown. Idaho and the rest of the country have been deprived of any open and fair consideration of the best sites available.

The INL sits atop porous basalt formations and the Snake River Aquifer, which provides water to thousands of farms and people across eastern and southern Idaho. Protection of this resource is essential. Given the availability of sites across the country, locating the nation's mercury repository materials atop these porous formations and the aquifer is an obvious and unnecessary risk.

Mercury-related issues facing Idaho are important, whether it is the appropriate level of regulation of Idaho sources or the long-term storage of the nation's entire mercury stockpile. It is clear that mercury merits the attention it is getting from Idaho's leaders, environmental groups, businesses, and citizens.

Revenge of the Agricrats

Climate change legislation was moving along in the House in June when it ran into a tractorcade. Dozens of farm-state lawmakers, led by the blunt-talking Minnesotan who chairs the House Agriculture Committee, blocked the way.

Only after Democratic leaders agreed to a raft of changes drawn up by Rep. Collin Peterson, D-Minn. did the bill squeak through the House, 219 to 212.

It was a striking demonstration of agricultural interests stamping their imprint on key parts of the Democratic program. That may surprise those who thought the "farm bloc" disappeared sometime around the end of the Eisenhower administration. In fact, its clout has been reshaping — and in some cases halting — the ambitious agenda of President Obama and Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif.

A bloc of moderate-to-conservative rural Democrats in both houses now holds the fate of health-care legislation in its hands. Meanwhile, the American Farm Bureau Federation, the nation's largest farm organization, has vowed to kill the climate change bill in the Senate. And last week, farm groups forced significant changes in food safety legislation by limiting the Food and Drug Administration's role in tracing suspected pathogens back to farms.

You might call these newly empowered farm-state lawmakers the Agricrats. They're Democrats, all right. In the House, many of them are newcomers who defeated Republicans in 2006 or 2008. In the Senate, Democrats have 12 of the 18 seats in the central farm belt and northern Great Plains.

Over the years the farm bloc has fought off efforts to reduce farm subsidies and raise gasoline mileage requirements for cars and trucks. But this latest rise of the Agricrats poses a dilemma for the Democratic Party. Rebuilding the urban-rural coalition that enabled Democrats to control Congress for most of the final two-thirds of the last century has been a major achievement. Last year, 49 House Democrats were elected in districts carried by the Republican presidential candidate, Sen. John McCain. But Agricrats are putting the needs of farmers, ranchers and rural communities ahead of party loyalty, often to the chagrin of more liberal lawmakers.

"The good news for Democrats ... is that they now dominate the marginal districts," said Scott Lilly, a senior fellow at the Center for American Progress. "And the bad news for them is that they dominate those districts."

The Agricrats overlap roughly with the Blue Dogs, a formal caucus of moderate-to-conservative House Democrats. They share a prairie-populist wariness of Wall Street and Washington, heightened by last year's financial meltdown and the ensuing government bailouts.

Like the Blue Dogs, many Agricrats have reservations about the price tag of health-care reform proposals, and they have fought for money for rural hospitals and doctors. But they have mainly been mobilized by a recent series of White House and Democratic initiatives that would directly affect farmers, ranchers and the economies of rural communities.

As head Agricrat in the House, Peterson has cast himself as a mediator, rewriting legislation to bring rural lawmakers on board. While many liberals smart at his activism, Pelosi has praised him publicly for helping pass the climate bill. And more accommodations may be coming on immigration and the administration's plan to help African farmers grow more food.

Thanks to his committee's oversight of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, Peterson was instrumental in killing a proposal by Treasury Secretary Tim Geithner to merge it with the Securities and Exchange Commission. The CFTC has long been seen as a defender of farmers against manipulation in the grain markets. The issue also enables Peterson to hoist a populist torch against Wall Street speculation in derivatives and energy futures (to which ethanol prices are closely tied).

In the case of the food safety bill passed Thursday by the House, Peterson worked behind the scenes to limit new FDA powers to make farmers keep records to help trace food-borne illnesses. And in regulating small growers and organic farmers, the FDA will now have to consider the impact the new rules will have on them.

All this shows that the Agricrats are a force to be reckoned with. When the Obama administration proposed phasing out a principal farm subsidy over three years for all except the smallest farmers, Peterson pronounced it "dead on arrival," then said, "We might cremate it."

Spoken like a true Agricrat.

OTHER VIEWS

Here's what Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

... Sun Valley's dysfunctional council

Idaho Mountain Express, Ketchum

Watching the Sun Valley mayor and City Council spend six hours trying to decide how to allocate $75,000 or just 1 percent of its $6.1 million budget last week was like watching a bad reality TV show about a dysfunctional family.

Instead of discussion, the public saw little more than pronouncements about the positions of the mayor and members of the City Council.

The public saw discussion displaced by posturing and parliamentary procedure wielded as a weapon to silence dissent.

It saw a presentation about $2.7 million in rainy day funds the city has in the bank — an amount equal to 44 percent of its total budget. Yet, the public heard no discussion about whether keeping the amount that high when it's raining economic cats and dogs is really necessary.

It saw providers of services to the city ... come before the council requesting contract renewals. Yet, given their reception at the meeting, they could have been mistaken for welfare cheats in line for big checks.

The public saw the mayor insist on and succeed in protecting raises for city employees at the same time people in the private sector are losing jobs and wages.

It saw polarized council members criticize the proposed budget, but offer no alternatives for shifting money around.

Instead, the public saw low-level grudges played out, demeaning lectures delivered and parliamentary gamesmanship engaged.

And if things weren't tense enough, Mayor Wayne Willich took potshots at the City of Ketchum and made clear his personal disdain for its elected officials and its operations.

All of this took place under a strained veneer of good humor.

Sun Valley's family of elected officials contains a domineering mayor, a favored council member who is allowed nearly free reign to speak his mind or present information, another who intermittently is the object of the mayor's wrath, one who looks sullen and says little, and one who persistently tries to bring peace to a group that isn't getting along well.

It was embarrassing to watch the mayor stop the meeting and verbally upbraid Council member Joan Lamb for violating procedure by using a BlackBerry while the meeting was underway.

Mayor Willich proudly insists that his city doesn't do "Kumbaya" retreats or group hugs.

He ought to rethink that position.

If there were ever a group of elected officials that needed a discussion about how to disagree without being disagreeable, this mayor and council are it.

Which would you prefer: Spending federal money to help cover medical bills for Idahoans in need?

Spending the state's limited dollars?

Or even some of your own property taxes?

Therein lies one of Idaho's great health care riddles.

When someone enters a hospital's emergency room, he gets treatment. If he can't pay, the hospital passes the bill onto the county, which by law is the source of last resort for so-called medically indigent persons.

From property taxes, the county pays a deductible. Then it passes the remainder to the state, which draws from a catastrophic health care fund, or CAT for short.

In five years, CAT's hit on the state treasury has jumped 79 percent to $23.3 million.

At one time, Idaho seemed poised to embrace a Medicaid-funded medically needy program to resolve its medically indigent problem. Democrats liked the idea. Republicans preferred going with CAT, and installed one of their own, former Idaho GOP Medicaid's costs have grown at almost the same clip, but the feds pay 71 percent of the bill. And because it provides a range of services, Medicaid offers the promise of containing future costs.

When CAT responds to an ER case, it pays for an episode of treatment. If the patient has a chronic condition, he'll probably be back. The ER will repeat the care and process the bill. And so on.

With Medicaid, there's the prospect of ongoing or even less expensive, more appropriate options. For instance, an ER patient could be transferred to a rehab center. Preventive medicine offers the chance for reducing expenses even more.

In one of the 2009 Idaho Legislature's unheralded successes, the state has moved closer to the Medicaid-based model. Legislative budget committee co-Chairman Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, shepherded a bill that essentially put CAT under state management. It means a slightly larger hit on property taxes — an $11,000 deductible versus a $10,000 bill charged to counties in the past.

It also gives the Department of Health and Welfare authority to pre-screen CAT patients to see if they're eligible for Medicaid, Medicare, Veterans Administration or third-party insurance.

The state, not the counties, will process the bills.

State appointees will join what had been a CAT board comprised exclusively of county commissioners.

All told, this is supposed to drive down CAT's costs to $19.7 million. Still, the situation leaves two questions:

• Why isn't Idaho moving more quickly to a Medicaid-sponsored medically needy program?

• And how much longer will Idahoans need to pay Hall's $205,000 salary to run this program?

IDAHO Judge approves Smoky Canyon Mine expansion

BOISE — A federal judge has given approval for the expansion of the Smoky Canyon phosphate mine into a roadless area near Yellowstone National Park, but an environmental group is already promising to appeal the ruling.

In a 53-page decision handed down late Tuesday evening, U.S. District Judge Mikel Williams said the U.S. Forest Service and the Bureau of Land Management followed the necessary steps when considering the expansion request from the J.R. Simplot Company.

Marv Hoyt, executive director of the Greater Yellowstone Coalition, said the group would appeal the decision to the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals. Hoyt said they believe the expansion violates several federal environmental and clean water rules.

Simplot spokesman David Cuoio said the company was delighted by the decision and that it looked forward to continuing to mine phosphate in an environmentally responsible manner.

McDonald says some parents can no longer afford to send their kids to the private school, where tuition ranges from $190 a month for kindergarten students to $280 a month for fifth and sixth graders.

The school also lost a lot of its older students to Nampa Classical Academy, which will become the third-largest public charter school in Idaho when it opens this fall.

Helicopter struck by lightning, 4 injured

MCCALL — Four people were injured when lightning struck a firefighting helicopter in central Idaho while it was on the ground.

None of the employees of Siller Brothers, Inc., a contract firefighting company, suffered life-threatening injuries in Tuesday evening's incident, but they were transported to hospitals in the region for treatment.

The Sikorsky S64E sky-crane helicopter was on a national contract with the Payette National Forest to help fight forest fires in the region.

The incident Tuesday at about 8:45 p.m. took place just as the four crew members were doing end-of-day maintenance.

They were tying the chopper down as high winds hit the area following heavy rain and lightning.

Damage to the aircraft is still being surveyed.

Post, who once lived in Butte County, Idaho, faces up to five years on prison

Judge Darren Simpson also ordered Post to undergo a psychosexual evaluation before sentencing.

Defense attorney Ron Bird says Post pleaded guilty as part of an agreement that includes a recommendation that he be placed on probation.

WYOMING Yellowstone Park visitor numbers hit all-time high in July YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK — A record number of people visited Yellowstone National Park in July.

America's first national park hosted more than 900,500 people last month, up more than 11 percent from July 2008 and 6 percent higher than the previous all-time monthly record set in July 1995.

This year is on pace to set a record for visitors. More than 1.9 million people have visited Yellowstone through July, up 100,000 from the previous seven-month high in 2007.

July's numbers build on this June's record for that month of about 644,000 visitors. July is typically the peak visitation month, followed by August, June, September and May.

Park officials attribute the high numbers to relatively low gas prices and the park's affordability.

Dairy industry acts against oversupply

CWT announces second largest herd retirement on record

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

Dairymen across the nation will begin the second largest herd retirement on record as the industry struggles to bring milk production in line with demand.

Dairy update

On Wednesday, the largest dairy cooperative in the U.S. announced that it will pay dairymen to remove nearly 87,000 cows, or about 1.8 billion pounds of milk, from herds before Sept. 15.

However, the Idaho dairy industry, which at its peak was the third largest producer in the U.S. with 1.1 billion pounds of milk annually, will not take part in the buyout.

"I haven't heard of any names of dairymen in our area who are participating in the retirement this time," said Rick Naerebout, an industry representative with Independent Milk Producers. "I think many of them are holding out at this point."

Seeking second-hand success

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

A mother of two children under five, Pam Hill knows how expensive keeping young kids clothed can be.

On a recent afternoon out of the house the stay-at-home Twin Falls mom made an unplanned stop at the new Once Upon a Child store, at 1520 Fillmore St. N., just to browse the new inventory arrivals.

"I'm supposed to be grocery shopping," Hill chuckled. "But I like this store."

Hill, who moved to Twin Falls from California, said she is familiar with the franchise brand and "had been waiting for something like this, or for this store, to open here."

About two months ago Hill's waiting was over and she's been shopping at the store ever since. She doesn't mind that it sells slightly used clothing and other kids' equipment.

"It's organized and the quality of the stuff is great. Most of the clothing I get is brand name and looks practically brand new," Hill said.

Hill said she doesn't necessarily save any money but that her dollar goes farther.

"I'd probably spend the same amount somewhere else but here I can get more," she said.

Archer Daniels Midland 4Q falls on weak demand

The Associated Press

DECATUR, Ill. — Archer Daniels Midland Co. said Tuesday its fiscal fourth-quarter profit tumbled 83 percent as its results were pressured by higher corn costs, lower average selling prices and softer demand.

The Decatur, Ill.-based agribusiness company earned $64 million, or 10 cents per share. That's down from $372 million, or 58 cents per share, in the same period a year ago when the company benefited from crop prices that hit all-time highs.

Analysts polled by Thomson Reuters, whose estimates generally exclude one-time items, forecast profit of 45 cents per share for the period ended June 30.

"In the fourth quarter, we felt the impact of the global economic downturn, as we concluded a year of good performance overall," Chairman and CEO Patricia Woertz said in a statement.

Revenue fell 24 percent to $16.53 billion from $21.78 billion but beat Wall Street's estimate of $15.24 billion.

ADM said lower average selling prices reduced sales by about $5.8 billion, partly offset by increased sales volumes.

Corn processing operating profit fell partly on higher corn costs, while weakening demand hurt oilseeds processing and agricultural services results.

Full-year net income slipped 5 percent to $1.71 billion, or $2.65 per share, from $1.8 billion, or $2.79 per share, in the previous year. Annual sales dipped 1 percent to $69.21 billion from $69.82 billion.

No down time this summer at some small businesses

The down time that summer usually brings has become a casualty of the recession at many small businesses.

Owners who might have taken it easy in past years are taking less vacation. Instead, they're spending time on lining up new business, staying in closer touch with current clients and putting their budgets together. At some companies, employees are also working at a stepped-up pace.

The summer is usually slow in the public relations business, but at CRT/Tanaka, a Richmond, Va.-based firm, "we've got an all hands on deck mentality," Executive Vice President Michael Whitlow said.

In the past, the company, which has 75 employees in five cities, spent August preparing for a September retreat attended by the entire staff. There'll likely be no retreat this year because of the economy.

August has also been a big vacation time at CRT/Tanaka. Not this month, though. Staffers are taking less time off as the company aggressively seeks new clients as other businesses do their own strategic planning for 2010.

"Team members are going over lists of prospects and going after them," Whitlow said. "Everyone feels a certain intensiveness about the effort."

"The feeling is been a little more scary than in the past when you knew big clients had four programs to launch in the new year," Whitlow said. "Now, all those programs are potentially in question and you have to be more intense about your current business interactions and your new business development."

The slow days of July and August have always given small business owners an opportunity to tackle some of the chores that may get a lower priority the rest of the year, such as installing new software, painting the office or writing employee manuals. And even in the best of times, many are also doing strategic planning, working on their budgets and prospecting for new customers and clients.

This year, especially with signs of improvement creeping into the economy, down time has turned into something too precious to waste.

At gotoBilling, which provides billing, marketing and other services online, "historically, August is a slow month," said CEO Steve Roderick. "This is a little different from normal."

So his Bozeman, Mont.-based company is "using August for planning, setting goals over the next five years," Roderick said. He's also working on gotoBilling's budget, determining where the company can spend money and where it's able to cut expenses.

Clunker cash won't drive true recovery

Short-term car sales may hurt over long-term

Analysis

By Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The popular "cash-for-clunkers" program may be a well-timed shot of adrenaline for the economy, but it's not a prescription for a lasting recovery.

The federal rebates of up to $4,500 to drivers who trade in a gas guzzler for a more fuel-efficient vehicle are steering cash to car dealers, giving a boost to troubled automakers and generating much-needed sales taxes for cities.

All this will help the economy grow faster in the second half of the year than previously forecast. Yet the rebates will also steal economic growth from the future: They make car sales happen now that would have been made later anyway.

"Cash for clunkers," soon to be a $3 billion program after an expected extension from Congress, comes at a critical time for the economy. Recent data suggest the country is finally emerging from the worst recession since World War II.

TODAY ON WALL STREET

The Dow fell 39.22, or 0.4 percent, to 9,280.97. The broader Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 2.93, or 0.3 percent, to 1,002.72, while the Nasdaq composite index fell 18.26, or 0.9 percent, to 1,993.05.

Analysts said the drop in stocks was welcome because building on gains in a step-like fashion is more sustainable than a surge without breaks. In other trading, the dollar was mixed against other major currencies and gold fell.

The Russell 2000 index of smaller companies fell 4.75, or 0.8 percent, to 565.99. Falling stocks outnumbered those that rose 8-to-7 on the New York Mercantile Exchange, where consolidated volume came to 7.7 billion shares, compared with 5.8 billion Tuesday.

Overseas markets slid. Britain's FTSE 100 fell 0.5 percent, Germany's DAX index lost 1.2 percent, and France's CAC-40 shed 0.5 percent. Japan's Nikkei stock average ended down 1.2 percent.

Signs show slow start on back-to-school sales

The Associated Press

NEW YORK - It's still early, but analysts' grades already are coming in: the back-to-school shopping season is off to a lousy start.

"Back-to-school selling hasn't really started yet," said John Morris, BMO Capital Markets analyst, based on recent conversations he's had with store executives. "Retailers have a very foggy picture."

The sluggish start is expected to show up in retailers' July sales reports, to be released Thursday, as job worries heighten.

By the end of July, sales of items like jeans and other back-to-school merchandise usually have started kicking in. But this year, it won't be until the third or fourth week of August before stores have a sense of the best sellers because shoppers appear to be delaying their purchases, Morris said, even though back-to-school marketing began in mid-July. That will make it difficult for retailers to reorder popular items.

Craig R. Johnson, president of Customer Growth Partners, a retail consultancy, described the season so far as "late and lousy." He added, "Shoppers are still holding back."

Senate reaches deal on $2B 'clunkers' refill

By Ken Thomas and Laurie Kellman

WASHINGTON — The Senate reached a deal on saving the dwindling "cash for clunkers" program late Wednesday, agreeing to vote on a plan that would add $2 billion to the popular rebate program and give car shoppers until Labor Day to trade in their gas-guzzlers for a new ride.

Following lengthy negotiations, Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid said Democrats and Republicans had agreed to vote on the plan Thursday, along with a series of potential changes to the bill, which was passed by the House last week. Reid has said Democrats have enough votes to approve the measure and reject any changes that would cause an interruption in the rebates of up to $4,500.

Reid said the agreement "accomplishes what we need to accomplish."

Late Wednesday, it was not clear that any of the proposed amendments stood a chance of passing. Some of them included placing an income limit on those benefiting from the vouchers and requiring the government to sell off its stakes in General Motors Co. and Chrysler Group LLC.

Any Senate changes to the bill would require another vote in the House, something that couldn't take place until the House returns in September from a monthlong recess.

The government said Wednesday that more than $775 million of the $1 billion fund had been spent, accounting for nearly 185,000 new vehicles sold. President Barack Obama has said the program would go broke by Friday if not replenished by Congress.

Administration officials have estimated the additional $2 billion could fund another 500,000 vehicle sales and last into Labor Day.

That's the same day the Senate was to follow the House into the August recess, a looming break that Senate leaders often use to prod their colleagues past standoffs.

"We all acknowledge there's a significant majority that want to move forward with this legislation," Reid, D-Nev., said earlier in the day, adding that he has the votes to approve the House-passed version as is.

His Republican counterpart, Sen. Mitch McConnell of Kentucky, concurred that the matter would be settled soon. And objectors conceded they do not have the votes to force all of the changes they want, or to block the House version of the bill.

"My guess is, at the end of the day, it will pass," said Sen. John Thune, R-S.D., who called it an example of "Congress choosing winners and losers among industries."

The program offers car buyers rebates of between $3,500 and $4,500 for trading in their gas-guzzlers for new, higher-mileage models.

The new funding would triple the cost of $1 billion rebate program and give as many as a half-million more Americans the chance to grab the new car incentives through September.

Car companies have credited the clunkers program with driving up sales in late July. Most consumers are buying smaller, more fuel-efficient vehicles under the program, according to a list of the top-10 selling cars released Wednesday by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

Among manufacturers, General Motors Co. had the largest share, accounting for 18.7 percent of new sales, followed by Toyota Motor Corp. with 17.9 percent. Ford Motor Co. was third with 16 percent of the sales. Detroit automakers represented 45.3 percent of the total sales while Japan's Toyota, Honda Motor Co. and Nissan Motor Co. accounted for 36.5 percent.

The Toyota Corolla is the top-selling vehicle on the list, followed by the Ford Focus, Honda Civic, Toyota Prius and the Toyota Camry. There is one SUV on the list, the Ford Escape, which also comes in a hybrid model that can get up to 32 miles per gallon. Six of the top-10 selling vehicles are built by foreign manufacturers, but most are built in North America.

If the Senate approves the additional money, it's likely to lead automakers to increase production and bring back laid-off workers. Many automakers reported low inventories due to increased sales from the program at the end of July. Already Hyundai Motor Co. has added a day of production to its Montgomery, Ala., plant, and Ford is considering increases.

Ford's chief financial officer, Lewis Booth, said Wednesday night the company would decide this month and make an announcement in early September.

Among states, Michigan has taken most advantage of the program, requesting more than $44 million in vehicle vouchers. California dealers had requested nearly $40 million in vouchers, and Ohio had sought nearly $38 million.

Senate passage would send the legislation to the White House for Obama's signature and assure consumers there will be no interruption in the program that has led to packed car dealerships nationwide.

The deals are aimed at boosting auto sales, which have been at their lowest levels in two decades.

Former La. congressman convicted in freezer cash case

By Matthew Barakat

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — A former Louisiana congressman accused of accepting hundreds of thousands of dollars in bribes was convicted in federal court Wednesday in a case in which agents famously found $90,000 stashed in his freezer.

William Jefferson, a Democrat who had represented parts of New Orleans for almost 20 years, was stoic as the verdict was read and had little to say afterward. Asked how he was doing, he said, "I'm holding up."

Prosecutors contended Jefferson accepted more than $400,000 in bribes and sought millions more in exchange for brokering business deals in Africa. After a two-month trial, jurors took five days to convict him on 11 of 16 counts that also included racketeering and money laundering. He was acquitted on the other five.

Assistant U.S. Attorney

Mark Lytle said Jefferson could face more than 20 years in prison under federal sentencing guidelines.

Jefferson had been under investigation since March 2005. In August that year, FBI agents searched his Washington home and found the cash in his freezer, wrapped in foil and hidden in boxes of frozen pie crust. Prosecutors said he had planned to use the money to pay a bribe to the then-vice president of Nigeria to secure a multi-million dollar telecommunications deal there, an accusation Jefferson denied.

U.S. Attorney Dana Boente said after the verdict that "no person, not even a congressman, is above the law. Ninety thousand dollars in a freezer is not a gray area. It's a violation."

The defense argued that Jefferson was acting as a private business consultant in brokering the deals and that his actions did not constitute bribery under federal law.

Obama tells nation, 'We don't give up'

By Ben Feller
Associated Press writer

WAKARUSA, Ind. — Promising new jobs and money, President Barack Obama on Wednesday told a hurting Midwestern region that its recovery will be like America's: tough but certain.

Obama's second visit as president to a northern Indiana area mired in unemployment reflected political reality. People appreciate hope and the presence of the president, but they want jobs. So Obama came bearing all of those in what amounted to a national economic pep talk.

"Even in the hardest times, against the toughest odds, we have never surrendered," Obama told a crowd on the steamy factory floor of Monaco RV, whose previous owner went bankrupt. "We don't give up. We don't surrender our fates to chance. We have always endured."

The loudest applause though, came when Obama announced that recreational vehicle company's new owner, Navistar International Corp., had won a $39 million grant to build 400 battery-electric trucks. That means work in an RV-heavy region crushed by the recession, where unemployment has jumped so high so fast that Obama called it "astounding."

Obama's broader audience was the American public, which has grown more skeptical of the $787 billion stimulus plan that he pushed through Congress just weeks into his term.

At stake for him is the kind of leverage that could influence his success on related matters, mainly health care legislation, as the battle for public opinion heats up during the August congressional recess.

Obama tried to remind people, including Republican critics, that some of the stimulus money was always designed for longer-range infrastructure and energy projects to rebuild the economy.

That tied into his news nugget of the day: the awarding of $2.4 billion in grants toward the production of electric and hybrid cars, part of the stimulus plan. Obama delivered the news in the border region of Indiana and Michigan — the two states benefiting the most.

He dispatched Vice President Joe Biden to Michigan and other Cabinet emissaries to North Carolina, Pennsylvania, Missouri and Florida to help spread the news and the wealth. All of those states, and Indiana, are pivotal electoral states.

Obama relied heavily on a made-in-America message that played well to his audience.

"You know, just a few months ago, folks thought that these factories might be closed for good," he said. "But now they're coming back to life."

Indiana's Elkhart-Goshen area had an unemployment rate of 16.8 percent in June. That's up 10 percentage points from last year. Obama was in Elkhart, just north of Wakarusa, in February when he made a similar get-outside-the-Beltway stop to lobby for the stimulus.

In an interview on Wednesday, Obama said it was fair for his presidency's economic performance to be judged on Elkhart's.

"Our whole goal is to, first of all, rescue the economy from the brink," he told MSNBC. "But the most important thing we're going to have to do is help Elkhart reinvent itself."

When someone in the audience at his speech shouted a thank-you to Obama for coming back with taxpayer-dollar grants, he responded: "You're welcome. Thank the American people."

Ga. man charged with trying to stalk Miley Cyrus

SAVANNAH, Ga. (AP) — A 53-year-old man who told police he is secretly engaged to marry Miley Cyrus has been charged with attempting to stalk the teenage "Hannah Montana" star, who is filming a movie in the Savannah area.

Tybee Island Police Chief Jim Price said Wednesday that Mark McLeod, 53, of Appling was arrested after Walt Disney Pictures security officers reported he had returned to the beachside movie set Sunday after police warned him to stay away in June.

"He was asking for Miley and going up and knocking on some doors" of beach homes near the set, Price said. "The security guards recognized him. In fact, he went up to the security guards and asked them, 'Is Miley around?'"

Wearing a yellow tank top and denim shorts so droopy that a deputy had to hold them up in back, McLeod appeared briefly before a Municipal Court judge at the Chatham County jail Wednesday afternoon.

Arkansas crowd mocks lawmakers over proposed Obama healthplan

By Jill Zeman Bleed
 Associated Press writer

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — An unruly Little Rock crowd heckled and shouted at two Arkansas Democratic congressmen Wednesday, accusing them of supporting a government-backed health plan that would take away Americans' personal choice and freedom.

At one point, U.S. Rep. Mike Ross sat with his head in his hands while the crowd shouted. He and fellow Democratic Rep. Vic Snyder told audience members at a forum at Arkansas Children's Hospital that they wouldn't support a completely government-run, single-payer health insurance plan.

"But that's what Obama wants!" an audience member shouted, leading to more heckling.

Ross, who represents south Arkansas, sits on the Energy and Commerce Committee and has led his fellow Blue Dog Democrats in delaying a vote on the health care overhaul until at least September. Ross is chairman of the Blue Dogs' health care task force.

The Blue Dogs — a group of mostly Southern, fiscally conservative Democrats — have not committed to supporting or opposing the bill yet. A deal reached last week calls for exempting more small businesses from a requirement to offer coverage, cutting subsidies to help people buy health insurance and making any government-sponsored insurance plan negotiate payment rates with medical providers.

Lawmakers across the country are encountering growing public doubts about President Barack Obama's push to remake the system for providing medical care, evident in polls that find confidence in Obama's handling of the issue has fallen since January. Concerns are growing about government-run health plans, a growing federal deficit, and the impact on small businesses and end-of-life provisions.

"I've said this several times but let me see if I can make it a little more clear," Ross said. "I don't represent Speaker (Nancy) Pelosi or President Obama or (House Finance Committee Chairman) Barney Frank. I represent the people of Arkansas and I'm not voting for any bill that forces any one plan on anyone, period."

Many audience members cheered loudly when Ross said he wouldn't back anything that would provide federal funding for abortions or pay for health insurance for illegal immigrants.

But some were skeptical about the intentions of President Obama and Democrats in Congress.

Colleen Shoemaker of Bauxite apologized to the congressmen for being "out of line" and heckling them during the forum. She said the government was taking away Americans' rights.

"At this point in my life I have never seen my America turn into what it has turned into," she said. "And I don't think that representatives and senators are going to be able to (pass a plan that preserves personal freedom). I'm scared."

Though much of the crowd opposed Obama's plan, there were a few supporters.

"I'm a huge Obama fan," college student Jacob Kauffman told the crowd, which responded with a smattering of applause and a few chants of "Get a job!"

BURBANK, Calif. — Two American journalists held captive in North Korea since March endured meals of rice with rocks, more than four months of isolation and the constant fear they would be sent to a gulag.

Facing sentences of 12 years hard labor, they were allowed only sporadic contact with each other, let alone the outside world. Then, suddenly this week, they were brought into a meeting with none other than Bill Clinton, who helped win their release and flew home with them for a tearful reunion with their families.

"We could feel your love all the way in North Korea," an emotional Laura Ling said. "It is what kept us going in the darkest of hours and it is what sustained our faith that we would come home."

Ling and Euna Lee sobbed and embraced their husbands and Lee's 4-year-old daughter, Hana, in the sleek hangar of a Burbank airport after a 9 1/2-hour flight from Japan. It was the last stop following their release from North Korea after an unusual diplomatic rescue mission headed by the former president.

In a voice shaking with sobs, Ling recalled how their time in captivity came to an abrupt end after she and Lee were summoned to a meeting and found the former president standing there.

"We were shocked but we knew instantly in our hearts that the nightmare of our lives was finally coming to an end, and now we stand here, home and free," she said.

While questions swirled about the delicate negotiating dance that led to their release, Ling only talked about their gratitude to be free and their desire to quietly get reacquainted with their families.

Neither woman offered details of their treatment in North Korea, which has a reputation for a brutal government and has struggled through famine. But Ling's sister later told reporters that her sister was "a little bit weak" and it would take some time for her to gather her wits and speak about her captivity.

U.S. journalists describe relief at release from North Korea

Former Vice President Al Gore, center, hugs Laura Ling as former President Bill Clinton looks on, Wednesday at Bob Hope Airport in Burbank, Calif. Ling and fellow journalist Euna Lee jubilantly reunited with family and friends early Wednesday upon returning to the United States with Clinton, whose diplomatic trip to North Korea secured their release nearly five months after their arrests.

Family members found it challenging to hear the few details they have received, she added.

She said the captives saw each other for only a couple days after their detention.

"They actually were kept apart most of the time. ... On the day of their trial, they hugged each other and that was it," Lisa Ling said outside her sister's home in the San Fernando Valley of Los Angeles.

She said the family had four telephone conversations with her sister during her captivity. During one of them, Laura Ling asked them to write to Lee "and tell her that I'm thinking about her and I love her."

Lisa Ling said her sister was craving fresh food and a sushi dinner will be on the agenda soon.

"She's really, really anxious to have fresh fruit and fresh food. ... There were rocks in her rice," Lisa Ling said. "Obviously, it's a country that has a lot of economic problems."

They were held in a guest house and had not yet been sent to the labor camp because of medical concerns, the sister said. Laura Ling suffers from an ulcer, while Lee has lost 15 pounds since being detained. Ling had been seen regularly by a doctor, her sister said.

Ling, 32, and Lee, 36, are reporters for former Vice President Al Gore's San Francisco-based Current TV. They had been working on a story about the trafficking of women when they were arrested in March, and sentenced to 12 years of hard labor for illegally entering North Korea. The pair were granted a pardon Tuesday, following talks between Clinton and North Korea leader Kim Jong Il.

They arrived at Bob Hope Airport at dawn aboard a Boeing jet owned by Steve Bing, a multimillion-dollar film producer, friend of Clinton's and contributor to Democratic causes.

Lee, who emerged first, wept and hugged her daughter, held her hands as she talked to her and then scooped her up. Both were crushed in an embrace from her husband, Michael Saldate.

Ling threw up her arms in joy before descending the plane's stairs and embracing her husband.

North Korea," she said in prepared remarks on behalf of both women. "We feared that any moment we could be sent to a hard labor camp."

Clinton was hugged by Gore as he stepped off the plane. He didn't speak, but his office later issued a statement saying he was happy the long ordeal was over.

"Hana's been a great girl while you were gone," Gore told Lee. "And Laura, your mom's been making your special soup for two days now."

He also thanked the State Department for its help in the release.

"It speaks well of our country that when two American citizens are in harm's way, that so many people will just put things aside and just go to work to make sure that this has had a happy ending," he said.

The North Face Skareb 50 backpack

The Skareb 50 backpack from The North Face is touted as the “ultimate pack for fast-packing.” As it sounds, “fast-packing” is a term for backpacking fast with lighter loads and often covering distances of 15 or more miles in a day.

I tested the unique and lightweight Skareb 50 on a recent three-day “fast-packing” backpacking trip in the Catskill Mountains of New York.

We trekked more than 17 miles one day, including the ascent of four major peaks.

THE GEAR JUNKIE

carried well and proved to be almost perfect for the weekend.

Made of a light and durable white “parachute fabric,” the Skareb weighs about three pounds when empty. It has 50 liters of interior capacity — enough for multi-day trips if you go light.

An injection-molded EVA foam back panel has channels to let air flow between your back and the pack’s load, increasing comfort. A tubular aluminum interior frame supports loads up to 45 pounds.

The hip belt and lumbar panel are molded to be ergonomic. Mesh fabric over a soft corrugated foam makes these parts comfortable and not overly warm while on the go.

It rained throughout my weekend in New York. But with its water-resistant fabric and a “weather-resistant” hood-compartment zipper, my supplies stayed dry inside the Skareb. (I keep essentials at all times in lightweight water-proof bags inside any pack, just in case.)

The Skareb has the requisite hydration-bladder pocket and a pouch on the hip belt for quick access to energy snacks and small items like lip balm or a compass. A large front pocket on the main compartment is made of a stretchy fabric, letting you drop items in without having to deal with a zipper or clips. I stuffed a water bottle and rain gear in that area for easy access on the hike.

The company includes trekking pole loops on back as well as a trekking pole attachment point on the hip belt. Instead of the attachment point, I would have preferred another hip-belt pocket for an added easy-to-access area on the pack.

One potential point of concern: After just one trip, the Skareb’s bright white fabric was dirty and stained. Some of the markings came off with the scrub of a wet towel, though the pack is marred in a few places with light smudges where dirt or sap still clings.

The North Face (www.thenorthface.com) sells the Skareb 50 for $219, which is an average price for this type of pack. Overall, the Skareb proved a worthy companion for me on the trail. It was comfortable with a load and simple to organize for my “fast-packing” adventure in the Catskill Mountains.

Times-News correspondent

At precisely 6:30 a tow-headed youngster races across the porch of the Idaho Rocky Mountain Ranch.

He climbs up on the railing and hammers an iron rod back and forth in the triangular dinner bell.

“Surf and turf’s ready,” noted one of the guests, who had been relaxing in a rocking chair, a glass of wine in hand.

It’s easy to settle into a rhythm at the Idaho Rocky Mountain Ranch, nestled in the Sawtooth Valley between Galena Summit and Stanley.

Day starts as the sun emerges from the hills behind the ranch, its rays burning through the ground fog that hangs over the valley and highlighting the tops of the mountain peaks that ring Redfish Lake.

By 7:30 the ranch hands have set out a buffet of cinnamon rolls, bagels and fruit for early risers.

And by 8:30 even the late risers are straggling in for breakfasts of French toasted encrusted with pecans, eggs benedict and a tofu scramble with peanut ginger sauce and cilantro and scallions.

Breakfast gives way to horseback rides, hikes to nearby Hell Roaring Lake, fly-fishing and maybe even a trip to the nearby ghost towns of Bonanza and Custer.

And by the time guests have worked up an appetite, the dinner bell rings again.

The ranch is not a dude ranch in the strict sense of the word where guests feed the horses, rake manure and help bring in the calves.

Rather, it’s a guest ranch where folks from New Hampshire and Idaho — and Germany, Italy and Sweden, too — can play in the outdoors while snuggling up in handmade quilts designed to fend off the chill of a Sawtooth Mountain morning, enjoy meals of lobster tail accented with mango chutney and relax the night away with a game of chess in front of a crackling fire.

All without the crowds one has come to expect in a national park.

“The Rocky Mountain Ranch is an extension of the Western ranch tradition where towns were few and far between and ranchers extended gracious hospitality to those traveling through,” said Ranch Manager Sandra Beckwith. “We do have horseback riding, Dutch oven

Fish and Game awards bighorn tag to new group

Agency to explore formal application process, more tags

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

For more than 20 years, the Idaho Fish and Game Commission has released annual bighorn-sheep tags to raise money for research and habitat work.

One tag is auctioned off, while the other is awarded through lottery. The Wild Sheep Foundation has always received both — until this year, when another group submitted a proposal for the tags for the first time.

At their July 23 meeting, commissioners decided to split the tags for the first time. The auction tag went to Sportsmen for Fish and Wildlife-Idaho, while the foundation received the lottery tag.

The decision proved somewhat controversial, Commission Chairman Wayne Wright told the Times-News. But the commissioners said in a press release that they selected the tag proposals they felt would bring the most money to benefit the sheep. Wright also characterized the decision as an issue of fairness, “just because the foundation had it for so long.”

Revenues from the tags have varied widely over the years. Just since 2005, the auction tag has brought in between $55,000 and $180,000 each year, while the lottery tag has ranged between $45,000 and $86,000.

The groups only keep enough money to cover their expenses. That’s defined as no more than 5 percent of proceeds for the auction tag and no more than 25 percent for the lottery tag.

With more than one group seeking tags, Wright said commissioners plan to establish more of a formal application process to request them. Fish and Game Director Cal Groen also said during the meeting that he plans to look at other options for wildlife tag auctions and lotteries. Future events could target elk and deer, Wright said, and would put Idaho in line with what other states run.

“A lot of other states have more opportunities than Idaho does,” Wright said.

Look high overhead for the stars of this Chinese folk tale

Two of the brightest summer stars figure prominently in a Chinese legend about the herd-boy and the weaver-girl.

The stars are Vega (currently directly overhead at 11 p.m.) and Altair (high in the southeast at 11 p.m.). Vega represents the weaver-girl, whose job it was to weave the clouds. Altair is the herd-boy, who tends a herd of oxen.

The two young lovers were so smitten with one another that they neglected their duties. Without clouds, the sun scorched the earth. And the oxen wandered far and wide, trampling the withering crops.

Soon the Queen of Heaven saw that something must be done. She put the weaver-girl on one side of the silver river (the Milky Way) and the herd-boy on the other side. They returned to their work, and all seemed well at first. But soon, the weaver girl grew sad. Her cloud-weavings grew heavy and dark. She missed the herd-boy so much that she began to cry day and night, and her tears flooded the earth.

So, the Queen of Heaven devised a compromise. Once a year, on the seventh day of the seventh month, the weaver-girl and the herd-boy could meet. Pure white magpies would fly to the silver river and form a bridge with their bodies so the herd-boy could cross to the weaver-girl's side.

However, the herd-boy crossed with his oxen in tow. Their muddy feet soiled the magpies' feathers, which is why they are part white and part black today.

Kansas man crafts hunting bows

By Michael Pearce
The Wichita Eagle

WICHITA, Kan. — For a guy who loves the outdoors, Dave Beeler doesn't get there very often.

His weekdays are spent at Coleman and most of his evenings and weekends in his home workshop.

The demand for his custom-made bows is that high.

"Every time I did a little asking around about who made good bows his name came up," said Jason Robinson, a customer from North Carolina. "People know who he is and what he can do."

Beeler uses the side business as a way to earn extra income and sometimes as a way to pay his respects to others.

It all began with an attempt to simplify his life.

About 13 years ago, Beeler was just another happy Kansas bowhunter. He carried a compound bow with wheels, cams, cables and fancy sights.

"I was very proficient but just got tired of messing with the cables and the sights and all of that other stuff," he said. "I just wasn't excited about shooting it anymore."

So he ordered a commercially-made Robin Hood-style longbow.

"As soon as I drew it back and watched that first arrow sail through the air I knew I'd found what I was wanting," he said. "It was so simple and it would take some time to get good. It got me excited."

He got the bug to become a bowmaker after helping a friend who made bows in 1999. Beeler went home and made himself a bow. He was soon making others.

"Some of my friends saw mine and asked if I'd build them one and I did," he said. "Then I made a few others and sold them on eBay."

From there it has been word-of-mouth advertising and a simple Web site, www.beelertraditional-

Dave Beeler makes traditional bows in the basement of his home in Haysville, Kan. The custom bow maker has made bows for archers in several states.

bows.com, driving the demand.

He has about 15 orders awaiting to be built. The custom bows sell for $400 to $500 and take about 40 hours to build.

Beeler makes both longbows and recurves. The latter are a step up the archery ladder, with the tips of the bow arching forward to provide added power and arrow speed.

Both styles of bow must be built to accommodate a shooter's size and strength.

The limbs of Beeler's bows are made of four thin wood laminations encased in fiberglass for added strength.

The thicker handles give Beeler a chance to get artistic and build a bow to meet each customer's fancy.

Clients choose from any combination of about a dozen domestic and exotic woods. Beeler can do just about any color combination imaginable. That's a big deal to clients.

"An off-the-rack bow would never hold much value to me because I know anybody can get one," said Robinson, the North Carolinian. "But the bow Dave's making me is mine and it's the only one like it. The first time I saw a picture of it, it really felt so right."

With Robinson's help, Beeler designed a bow befitting the customer's occupation.

Robinson is an Air Force staff sergeant awaiting his fourth tour of Iraq or Afghanistan. Beeler saw the project as a chance to show his appreciation to Robinson and others.

Named "American

Thunder," the bow has a red, white and blue handle. One of Robinson's military dogtags is embedded on one side. A medallion with an eagle sits on the other.

Photos of the bow have circulated widely on Web sites and forums dealing with traditional bows. Robinson and Beeler said the response has been good.

"I made the bow for Jason but I also made it in honor of all of the people in the military," Beeler said. "It's just kind of tribute from me to them."

It's not the only bow he's built while thinking sentimental thoughts.

Beeler made his personal bow about 18 months ago, though last fall he was too busy making other bows to take it hunting.

The handle is a striking combination of orange and black. Beeler said those were his dad's favored colors because he loved anything Harley-Davidson.

His father, Bill, died from leukemia in 1985. Beeler regrets not having the chance to have crafted him a bow.

He feels like he's sharing the bow with his father.

"It's a personal-type thing," Beeler said. "Hopefully this year I'll get to take it out and do some hunting with it."

Beeler shows a traditional bow he made in honor of his father, in Haysville, Kan.

FWP to intervene in federal wolf lawsuit

HELENA, Mont. — The Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks has intervened in a federal lawsuit that seeks to restore federal endangered species protection to gray wolves in the northern Rocky Mountains.

FWP officials say the agency will also oppose any preliminary injunction requests that seek to reinstate federal protections while the case continues in court.

Joe Maurier, FWP director, says the state's wolf population is growing, well protected by Montana law and well-managed.

In May, the federal government removed more than 1,300 wolves in Montana and Idaho from the endangered species list. Environmentalists have sued to restore federal oversight.

A pre-season primer: Part I

With daytime temperatures pushing into the 90s, most of us can't wait to back the bass boat into the cool waters of the reservoir or knock a few balls down the fairway.

But have you looked at your calendar lately? Our hunting seasons are literally just around the corner, and now's a good time to begin preparing for them.

What I'd like to offer you today are some preseason suggestions to help you 'get your ducks in a row,' before you're actually knee deep in Snake River mud getting your ducks in a row. Our primary focus will be on gun preparation.

The first step is to arrange your guns and cleaning materials in a well-lit and ventilated work space. Since we're generally dealing with rather potent cleaning chemicals, you'll want to consider protecting yourself with safety glasses, some sturdy latex gloves and an old work shirt or shop apron. I would also strongly suggest that you get yourself a quality set of gunsmith screwdrivers or a torque wrench (fat wrench) with appropriate bits. These little gems are invaluable for preventing damage to the gun/scope screws. Look at your buddy's gun and see what I mean.

Let's begin with the stock. If I'm working with a wooden stocked gun, I carefully examine the

SHOOTING THE BULL
Rich Simpson

I've found that a good spray down with inexpensive brake cleaner and some scrubbing with an old toothbrush will clear out most of the debris and crud from the action before evaporating away. But be aware, some synthetic materials and stock finishes can be adversely affected by certain solvents. For these instances, Birchwood Casey makes a wonderfully effective synthetic-safe aerosol. Lightly oil and lubricate the action afterwards to prevent rust and wear.

Since any firearm is only as good as the barrel, it deserves special attention. Gunsmiths will tell you that more gun barrels are ruined by infrequent or improper cleaning than by actual wear. I would suggest investing in a sturdy one-piece coated cleaning rod and chamber/bore guide.

Nowadays, there are literally dozens of fine bore cleaners available. I particularly like Hoppes, Shooters Choice, Outers, Tetra and Montana X-Treme products. Give several a try to learn which best suits your needs.

After reassembling and adding a protective oil/lubricant, your firearm will be ready for some range work. That's our topic for next time.

Good Shooting!

Step back in time at Bonanza, Custer

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

In Custer's heyday, Bidy Dunn hung blankets on the bridge behind the hotel, letting the river run over them and wash them.

The 50 or so Chinamen who lived there inadvertently served as the town's garbage men, collecting slop for their chickens.

And Mr. Jeffries ordered burnt toast for breakfast every day at the Nevada Hotel to keep his complexion clear.

The ghosts of Bonanza and Custer come to life every summer as park rangers and costumed interpreters recount the days when emigrants from Cornwall, England, Italy, Sweden, Ireland and China streamed into the Land of the Yankee Fork searching for small particles of placer gold that had washed down the surrounding hillsides.

Today the historic sites have been preserved as part of the Land of the Yankee Fork Idaho State Centennial Park.

You can walk the dusty streets that the miners once walked, stopping in at Frank Tully's Cabin and the Custer Schoolhouse.

You can learn the story of how many of the residents here met their end at the Bonanza Cemetery.

You can peruse old wooden backpack, the buffalo hide coat worn by a stage coach driver and see the teakwood opium pipes in the museum.

And you can tour the Yankee Fork Dredge, which operated between 1940 and 1952, chewing its way through the gravel of the Yankee Fork of the Salmon River as it recovered millions of dollars of gold.

Everything's free, save a small admission price to the dredge. And you can even get an ice cream cone or candy stick at the general merchandise store.

To get there, drive downstream from Stanley 12 miles on Highway 75 to the old Sunbeam Dam. Turn left onto the Yankee Fork Road and drive a few miles up the road to Bonanza and the dredge. Custer is a little farther up the road.

F&G Commission to meet

The Idaho Fish and Game Commission will meet Aug. 17, to set harvest quotas for Idaho's first wolf hunts this fall.

The meeting will start at about 1:30 p.m. at the Idaho Fish and Game Upper Snake Region office, 4279 Commerce Circle, Idaho Falls.

In March, the commission adopted wolf hunting seasons statewide, pending removal of wolves in Idaho from the endangered species list, which happened in May. Legal challenges to the delisting, however, still are pending.

The seasons would be the same as proposed last year, except in the Lolo and Sawtooth zones where they run from Sept. 1-March 31. In the Selway and Middle Fork zones the seasons run Sept. 15-Dec. 31.

Elsewhere the wolf season is from Oct. 1-Dec. 31. Hunting may end sooner if the wolf management area quota or statewide quota is reached.

Tags would go on sale after the quotas are set. A resident tag would cost $11.75, a non-resident tag would be $186.

Other items on the agenda include setting seasons for waterfowl and sage grouse; a discussion of fall chinook fishing opportunities; the fiscal year 2011 budget request, and updates on plans for a headquarters building and the pelican management plan.

Super hunt tickets still available

Weren't lucky in the first Super Hunt and Super Hunt Combo drawing? No worries. It's not too late to apply for a second chance.

Entries for the 10 a.m. Aug. 17 drawing must be received at the Fish and Game headquarters by Aug. 10.

A combo ticket and tickets for two elk, two deer, two pronghorn hunts and one moose hunt will be drawn.

Hunters can take an animal or animals with either a super hunt of combo tag in addition to any general season or controlled hunt tags. All other rules of individual hunts apply.

First ticket is $6, additional tickets for the same species is $4 when purchased at the same time. Super Hunt Combo tickets is $20 for one, additional tickets are $16 when purchased at the same time.

Tickets are available at license vendors, all Fish and Game offices, 800-824-3729 or 800-554-8685, or at <http://fishandgame.idaho.gov/cms/hunt/superhunt/>. Fill out the ticket orders and mail to: Fish and cookouts, even a pond for fishing. But we also serve as a good base for guests to go out and explore on their own."

The property the ranch sits on was originally the homestead of Stanley Basin pioneer and mail carrier Dave Williams, one of the first climbing guides in the Sawtooths.

Captivated by the beauty of jagged peaks resembling a saw blade, New York Frigidaire distributor Winston Paul bought the property in 1929.

Over the next few months, 60 workers camped out in the open meadow, snaking logs up the creeks to build the 8,000-square foot lodge said to be inspired by Yellowstone's Old Faithful Lodge.

The ranch opened the following year as an invitation-only hunting club where guests could "hunt" the plentiful deer, elk and other game from the expansive front porch made of knotty pine.

As the ranch changed hands, guest operations were curtailed for a time.

But that's scarcely the case today.

The current owners — financier Steve and architect Courtney Kapp, and financier David Singer and his wife Diane Kapp — recently refurbished the lodge and the 17 cabins that surround it. They endowed them with modern amenities like Oakley stone in the showers while maintaining the rustic charm provided by log burl chandeliers, wooden skis hanging on the walls and cowboy boots, lariat and branding irons that helped earn the lodge a place on the National Register of Historic Places.

"I remember when they used to put you up on Army cots. And the bathrooms were so tight you could hardly turn around," said Sue Beede, of Eagle. "Now the place has a luxurious feeling — but still with all the rustic flavor you want in an Idaho ranch."

In addition to refurbishing the accommodations, the new owners built a new deck in the concrete hot pool, which maintains a comfortable temperature between 98 and 103 degrees. And they added heated changing rooms below the pool.

But they stopped short of putting TVs in every room.

The absence of TVs frees guests up to sit on the porch, just as the first guests did 80 years ago. But, instead of hunting game, they're hunting for the most dramatic sunsets to train their cameras on.

Beckwith organized a variety of workshops this summer, ranging from photography and fly fishing to wine tasting seminars and outdoor concerts.

Guests can also relive their childhood days with a game of Risk found on the shelves in the Great Hall or take advantage of the suggestions that the staff posts on the board each day.

With more than 300 lakes in the area and miles upon miles of hiking and biking trails that start right outside the lodge's door, there's no shortage of things to do.

"It's wonderful for three generations because there's something for everyone — usually, some of us go fishing or hiking while others may prefer to sit on the porch and relax," said Carolyn Leggett, a Richland,

Wash., woman who was spending a week at the ranch with her husband, two teenage sons and her parents, Hugh and Karen Eddy of Caldwell. "We leave such hectic lives back home it's nice to have some down time to just sit."

Chef Andrew Machanic cooks up an elaborate array of dishes he calls "ranch fusion cuisine" every night.

Non-lodgers are welcome to join in the dinners, which pair American and Mexican flavors with European flavors — provided they make a reservation ahead of time.

One couple who spent their honeymoon at the lodge returned recently for their 50th anniversary, marveling at how much easier it was to get to the ranch since they no longer had to go by train to Shoshone.

Paul and Chris Mensinger, of Hagerman, celebrated their anniversary at the ranch this summer, riding horseback during the day and watching a cornucopia of stars appear in the sky as they soaked in the hot pool.

"It's pretty amazing how you don't have to go far to feel like you're really gotten away from it all," said Paul Mensinger.

Bill Leavell, who manages the ranch, says it's not uncommon to see cougar, otter, fox and elk and wolves, especially on the lower half of the ranch near the hot springs.

"It's amazing," he said. "You'll be lying in bed and all of a sudden you'll hear a long deep wolf howl. It's a beautiful sound. And it's one you can't hear in the city!"

Chapter 7 & 13
Stop Collections, Foreclosures & Garnishments
Fast • Experienced

Question: Last month I filed a Chapter 7 bankruptcy. 2 weeks ago, I had to have a surgery and I expect the bills to be over $30,000. I have no insurance. Will my bankruptcy take care of these medical bills?

Answer: As a general rule the only debts that will be discharged in a Chapter 7 bankruptcy are those debts that you had already incurred on the filing date of your bankruptcy case. Since the medical debts were incurred after the filing of your bankruptcy case, they will not be discharged. One potential solution is to convert your Chapter 7 bankruptcy to a Chapter 13 bankruptcy. In doing so, you would be required to repay a portion of your debts by making at least 36 monthly payments to the bankruptcy trustee, based on your ability to repay. When you convert a case in this fashion, you can add the debts incurred after the initial filing, and those creditors will be able to share in the distribution of the money you pay to the bankruptcy trustee. Another possibility is to ask the court to allow you to voluntarily dismiss your existing Chapter 7 case and refile your case as a new Chapter 7 case that would include the new debts. You need to speak to an experienced bankruptcy attorney to advise you on what course of action to take.

A DIFFERENT DIRECTOR

Tipton brings unique business background to Jerome Chamber

By Mary Hanson
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — Dawn Tipton knows business. The new Jerome Chamber of Commerce director also knows snakes.

While there's a used-car-salesman joke in there somewhere, it's Tipton's unique background as a business owner who parlayed her lifelong interest in reptiles and amphibians that she hopes will make her a fit with the area's diverse business sector.

Tipton is a University of Wyoming graduate who came to Jerome from Casper, Wyo., where she and her late husband operated Rocky Mountain Vivarium, a business that assists in the care, safety, transportation and research of reptiles and amphibians.

While Tipton said her sons are looking after that business, a chance encounter with the Jerome Chamber's advertisement for the director opening brought her west.

"I was visiting friends in Idaho when I saw the advertisement about the position in Jerome," Tipton said. "I felt I fit the description for the job because of my business background and chamber of commerce involvement."

Tipton's background also includes growing up on a Wyoming ranch where her family bred and showed quarter horses and where she competed in barrel racing and participated in 4-H.

Tipton said she's interested in the subject of workforce development, a primary goal of the Jerome Chamber.

"But right now I'm just trying to get my feet wet," Tipton said. "This culture is a bit different than mine in Wyoming ... Casper, Wyoming is growing so fast and people don't know each other any more. People are so friendly here. I'm looking forward to getting acquainted."

As for the snakes and reptiles she cared for in Wyoming, Tipton said bringing any to Jerome "takes some thought."

But as far as the challenge of taking over the Jerome Chamber director position in one of the worst economic downturns in U.S. history goes, it doesn't seem daunting. Not for a woman who smiles sweetly as she describes her favorite venomous snake, a "little miniature Namibian puff adder" — one of the most venomous snakes in the world.

A bar of soap works for more than just leg cramps

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have bursitis in my upper right arm that I used to describe as a toothache in my muscle. It got to the point of being so painful that I had to quit using my arm to do anything and kept it tucked tightly to my side.

Then I read your column about putting a bar of soap under the sheet at the bottom of the bed for leg-muscle cramps. I decided to try it, but instead put it near my arm rather than my legs, and within two days the pain subsided. As of today, my doctor is amazed that I have almost a full range of motion back and that I am pain-free.

Thank you for printing suggestions for such simple and cheap pain-relief methods.

DEAR READER: Bursitis is a fairly common and painful arthritis-like condition. I am glad that you adapted one of my recommendations to suit your needs and found it so successful. I have printed your letter in the hopes that it will also help others.

So, folks, it seems that my soap-under-the-sheet remedy works for more than just leg cramps. Try experimenting and let me know the results.

To provide related information, I am sending you copies of my Health Reports "Dr. Gott's Compelling Home Remedies" and "More Compelling Home Remedies." Other readers would like copies should send a self-addressed stamped No. 10 envelope and a check or money order for $2 per report to Newsletter, P.O. Box 167, Wickliffe, OH 44092. Be sure to mention the title(s).

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am seeking your interpretation of a report I received about the extent of an injury to my right eye socket. I want to know whether it is broken or otherwise damaged. Could you please explain the report results in layman's terms?

Idaho tribe restoring sturgeon habitat

By Becky Kramer
The Spokesman-Review

BONNERS FERRY — Four-inch long sturgeon frolicked in a hatchery tank comically flipping onto their backs to feed, then wriggling right side up.

Barely a year old, they looked ancient. Long snouts, sharklike tails and the sturgeon's bony armor hinted at the species' prehistoric origins, which date back 150 million years.

"They're mysterious, beautiful creatures," said Sue Ireland, fish and wildlife director for the Kootenai Tribe of Idaho, the hatchery's operator. "It's important that we do everything in our power to help them survive."

As part of aggressive plans to keep the Kootenai River's white sturgeon population from sliding into extinction, the tribe has crafted a habitat restoration plan for 55 miles of the river. The habitat work will help young hatchery sturgeon survive after they're released into their native waters, and also benefit the remaining wild sturgeon population.

In the 1970s, an estimated 7,000 white sturgeon lurked in the river's cool, green depths. Only 800 to 1,000 adults remain — and that figure's shrinking by about 9 percent each year, according to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

Scientists believe the next few years will be critical for the Kootenai sturgeon. More than three decades have passed since the fish reproduced successfully in the river. If the trend isn't reversed soon, only a handful of wild female sturgeon will be left to spawn.

Kootenai sturgeon are a distinct stock, evolving after the last ice age isolated them from Columbia River sturgeon. The freshwater giants can reach 8 feet in length, but they're slow to mature. The fish don't spawn until they're 30. Although females can live into their 70s, they lay eggs only every four to six years.

Dwindling numbers of Kootenai sturgeon were first documented in the mid-1960s. Then came Libby Dam. Sixty-five million years ago, sturgeon survived the mass extinction that killed off the dinosaurs, but they were no match for modern engineering.

Built in 1974 for flood control and power generation, Libby Dam tamed the spring torrents that once triggered the upstream journey of the sturgeon from British Columbia's Kootenay Lake to spawning grounds near Bonners Ferry. In recent years, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers has released water from the dam to mimic the spring freshets. Although the sturgeon are spawning again, the fry don't survive. In an effort to reverse the trend, the tribe's habitat plan calls for creating deeper pools in the main river and restoring side sloughs for rearing areas.

"We're trying to unlock the mystery of what's keeping them from thriving in the wild," Ireland said.

The restored habitat will also help five other native fish species, including kokanee, which are part of the sturgeon's diet.

Ireland said the habitat plan is a practical document. It recognizes that the river won't return to a pristine state. But by working closely with local landowners, she said, the tribe hopes to mitigate some of the damage caused by a century of diking, farming and other development.

"Society has put constraints on the river," said Greg Hoffman, a fish biologist who works at Libby Dam. Bonners Ferry would flood if the Army Corps of Engineers released the same volume of spring flow that historically swept down the valley, he said.

"We want to see the system restored, but we'll do it in a way that's sensitive to the local community and the culture of the area," said Patty Perry, the tribe's administrative director.

The tribe has gathered a policy team that includes representatives from Idaho, Washington, Montana and British Columbia's Ministry of the Environment. Tribal members will work cooperatively with other governments to secure funding for the habitat work, Perry said.

Sturgeon are culturally significant to the 141-member Kootenai Tribe.

"The tribe is connected to sturgeon just like the Columbia River tribes are connected to salmon," Ireland said. "They're a spiritual messenger, revered for their longevity."

Ireland, who isn't Native, began working for the tribe in 1996. She, too, fell under the sturgeon's spell.

"They get to you," she said, cradling a hatchery sturgeon in her palm.

DEAR READER: First, I would like to say that your physician should be your first source for information with regard to any testing. Also, I would have expected that if you were being evaluated for a fracture, the X-ray technician would have had you wait for the results to determine whether further care was needed. That said, I will now answer your question.

According to the final impression of the radiologist at the time of the test, you probably had a cold and there was a small injury to the eye socket, but it couldn't be determined when that damage occurred because of the cold and tissue swelling. It was determined that there were no broken facial bones.

Based on the findings and in my opinion, the damage appears to be so slight that it likely won't be of any consequence. Since the age of the injury couldn't be determined, there is a possibility that you have had the abnormality for quite some time without knowing it.

Return to your physician, and get his or her explanation of the results. As I have said before, I cannot be used as a second opinion but rather as a source for further, general information. There is a lag time of several weeks during which the letters get to me, are opened, and are then reviewed. Then I must make my responses, have them put into column format, undergo editing and then, after all that, they can be submitted for final printing and distribution to newspapers around the country (and in some cases, other countries!). Everything takes time, but for fast responses, specifically geared to personal cases, a personal physician is always the best and surest step.

Juanita Mae Hill Munk

BUHL — Juanita Mae Hill Munk passed away peacefully in her home in Buhl with her husband at her side on Tuesday, Aug. 4, 2009, at the age of 76.

The daughter of Dalice and Virginia (Christopher) Hill, Juanita was born during the Great Depression, Sept. 10, 1932 in San Francisco, Calif., where she spent the first five years of her life, after which she moved with her family to Twin Falls. She graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1950. She then earned her nursing degree in Idaho Falls, then her degree in education from the University of Utah. After her education, Juanita was an RN and Nursing OB/GYN instructor. After raising her family, she worked with her husband as his assistant in his dental practice.

Juanita married Albert Juan Munk on July 12, 1956, in the Idaho Falls Temple. Her focus in life then became raising her five children. Juanita had a love for music. A gifted violinist and vocalist, she earned a degree in music in the years she was raising her children. She was a member of the Magic Valley Symphony and Chorale for more than 20 years. She also had a love of the outdoors and enjoyed camping with her family. Later in life, she traveled with her husband to Europe, Japan, Australia, New Zealand, Mexico, Hawaii and her favorite — the Holy Land.

A deeply spiritual and religious person, Juanita was a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and was very active in serving others in various callings, including Primary president, Relief Society president, choir director, Cub Scout leader, teacher, stake music chairman and in a stake Relief Society presidency. She served an LDS Mission in Portugal with her husband. She also served as a temple worker for many years in the Boise Temple. Juanita was a remarkable person who freely shared her time and talents with others. She was highly esteemed by those who knew her. She will be greatly missed.

Juanita is survived by her loving husband of 53 years, Albert Juan Munk of Buhl; and children, Julie Van Sickle of Buhl, Alan (Tammy) Munk of Winnemucca, Nev., Ron (Anne) Munk of Cotati, Calif., Steve (KayLyn) of Redmond, Wash., and Dave (Joan) of Winnemucca, Nev.; and siblings, Barbara Bingham of Twin Falls, Delcie Hymas of West Valley City, Utah, Roger Hill of Albion and Beverly Kellersberger of South Jordan, Utah. Also surviving are her 17 grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Her parents, Dalice and Virginia Hill; and her grandson, Jeremy Van Sickle, preceded her in death.

The funeral for Juanita will be held at 10 a.m. Friday, Aug. 7, at the Buhl LDS Church on Fair Avenue in Buhl. Visitation will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 6, at 9 a.m. Friday at the church. Burial will be at the Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls immediately following the funeral.

All services and arrangements are under the direction of the Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home of Twin Falls.

Psychologists repudiate gay therapy

Group suggests other ways to help clients struggling with religious faith

By David Crary
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — The American Psychological Association declared Wednesday that mental health professionals should not tell gay clients they can become straight through therapy or other treatments.

In a resolution adopted by the APA's governing council, and in an accompanying report, the association issued its most comprehensive repudiation of "reparative therapy" — a concept espoused by a small but persistent group of therapists, often allied with religious conservatives, who maintain gays can change.

No solid evidence exists that such change is likely, says the resolution, adopted by a 125-4 vote. The APA said some research suggests that efforts to produce change could be harmful, inducing depression and suicidal tendencies.

Instead of seeking such change, the APA urged therapists to consider multiple options — that could range from celibacy to switching churches — for helping clients live spiritually rewarding lives in instances where their sexual orientation and religious faith conflict.

The APA had criticized reparative therapy in the past, but a six-member task force added weight to this position by examining 83 studies on sexual orientation change conducted since 1960. Its report was endorsed by the APA's governing council in Toronto, where the 150,000-member association's annual meeting is being held this weekend.

The report breaks new ground in its detailed and nuanced assessment of how therapists should deal with gay clients struggling to remain loyal to a religious faith that disapproves of homosexuality.

Judith Glassgold, a Highland Park, N.J., psychologist who chaired the task force, said she hoped the document could help calm the polarized debate between religious conservatives who believe in the possibility of changing sexual orientation and the many mental health professionals who reject that option.

"Both sides have to educate themselves better," Glassgold said in an interview. "The religious psychotherapists have to open up their eyes to the potential positive aspects of being gay or lesbian. Secular therapists have to recognize that some people will choose their faith over their sexuality."

In dealing with gay clients from conservative faiths, says the report, therapists should be "very cautious" about suggesting treatments aimed at altering their same-sex attractions.

"Practitioners can assist clients through therapies that do not attempt to change sexual orientation, but rather involve acceptance, support and identity exploration and development without imposing a specific identity outcome," the report says.

Spinal treatment for elderly no better than sham

By Stephanie Nano
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — A common treatment that uses medical cement to fix cracks in the spinal bones of elderly people worked no better than a sham treatment, the first rigorous studies of the popular procedure reveal.

Pain and disability were virtually the same up to six months later, whether patients had a real treatment or a fake one.

Tens of thousands of Americans each year are treated with bone cement, especially older women with osteoporosis, some of them stooped and unable to stand up straight. The treatment is so widely believed to work that the researchers had a hard time getting patients to take part when it was explained that half of them would not get the real thing.

"All of us who do the procedure have seen apparently miraculous cures," said Dr. David F. Kallmes, a radiologist at the Mayo Clinic who led one of the studies. But he said there were also "miraculous cures" among those who got the fake treatments.

The researchers said it is yet another example of a medical procedure coming into wide use before good studies are done to show that it is safe and effective. Medicare pays $1,500 to $2,100 for the outpatient procedure.

Bone cement has long been approved for many medical uses, but this particular use had not been tested against a placebo procedure until now.

The findings, published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine, mean patients and doctors need to review the options together, wrote Dr. James N. Weinstein of Dartmouth Medical School in an accompanying editorial. "When best evidence suggests a tossup between treatment options and no benefit, informed patient choice is essential," he said.

About 750,000 Americans suffer painful compression fractures in the bones of the spine each year. Bone-thinning osteoporosis is the most common cause. The weakened bone collapses or cracks, sometimes causing debilitating pain, limiting mobility and resulting in a loss of height or a stooped posture.

Doctors usually try bed rest, painkillers and back braces before turning to vertebroplasty. During the procedure, hot bone cement is injected into the collapsed or cracked vertebra. The cement is thought to shore up or stabilize the compressed bone. There can be complications, including infection and leakage of the cement.

'On the Waterfront' writer Budd Schulberg dies at 95

By Hillel Italie
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Budd Schulberg, the son of a studio boss who wrote a novel that defined the Hollywood hustle and later proved himself a player with the Oscar-winning screenplay for the Marlon Brando classic "On the Waterfront," died Wednesday at age 95.

Schulberg died of natural causes at his home in Westhampton Beach, on Long Island, said his wife, Betsy Schulberg. He was taken to a nearby medical center, where doctors unsuccessfully tried to revive him, she said.

"He was very loved," she said, "and cherished."

"On the Waterfront," directed by Elia Kazan and filmed in Hoboken, N.J., was released in 1954 to popular acclaim and won eight Academy Awards. It included one of cinema's most famous lines, uttered by Brando as the failed boxer Terry Malloy: "I coulda been a contender?"

Schulberg never again approached the success of "On the Waterfront," but he continued to write books, teleplays and screenplays — including the Kazan-directed "A Face in the Crowd" — and scores of articles. Spike Lee was an admirer, dedicating the entertainment satire "Bamboozled" to Schulberg and working with him on a film about boxer Joe Louis.

Schulberg was first known for the novel "What Makes Sammy Run?" Published in 1941, it follows the shameless adventures of Sammy Glick (born Shmelka Glickstein) as he steals, schmoozes and backstabs his way from office boy at a New York newspaper to production chief at a major Hollywood studio.

Unlike Nathaniel West's "The Day of the Locust," which immortalized the desperation of show business outsiders, Schulberg's book was an insider's account, and Hollywood responded as it would to one of its own: fascinated and betrayed. Everybody from movie executives to columnist Walter Winchell was convinced he or she knew the real-life model for Glick. Schulberg later said he based the character on numerous hustlers he had encountered.

Health club horror

Pennsylvania gunman bitter over women

By Michael Rubinkam
Associated Press writer

BRIDGEVILLE, Pa. — George Sodini seethed with anger and frustration toward women. He couldn't understand why they ignored him, despite his best efforts to look nice. He hadn't had a girlfriend since 1984, hadn't slept with a woman in 19 years.

"Women just don't like me. There are 30 million desirable women in the US (my estimate) and I cannot find one. Not one of them finds me attractive," the 48-year-old computer programmer lamented in a chilling diary he posted on the Internet.

For months, he also wrote vaguely about using guns to carry out his "exit plan" at his health club, where lots of young women worked out.

On Tuesday, Sodini put his plan into action.

He went to the sprawling L.A. Fitness Club in this Pittsburgh suburb, turned out the lights on a dance-aerobics class filled with women, and opened fire with three guns, letting loose with a fusillade of at least 36 bullets.

He killed three women and wounded nine others before committing suicide.

"He just had a lot of hatred in him and (was) hell-bent on committing this act, and no one was going to stop him," Allegheny County Police Superintendent Charles Moffatt said Wednesday.

The 4,610-word Web diary appeared to be a nine-month chronology of his plans to end his misery with a shocking act of carnage at the health club. He portrayed himself as painfully and inexplicably lonely.

"Every evening I am alone, and then go to bed alone," he wrote. "I see twenty something couples everywhere. I see a twenty something guy with a nice twentyish young women. I think those years slipped right by for me. Why should I continue another 20+ years alone?"

It was unclear when the Web diary was posted and whether it had been updated online repeatedly since November or posted in its entirety recently. Moffatt said investigators are trying to determine whether anyone saw it online before the rampage.

"If anyone knew of it, they would have a moral and ethical obligation and legal obligation to bring it forward," the police superintendent said.

Killed were Heidi Overmier, 46, of Carnegie, a sales manager at an amusement park; Jody Billingsley, 37, of Mount Lebanon, who worked for a medical-supply company; and Elizabeth Gannon, 49, of Pittsburgh, an X-ray technician at Allegheny General Hospital.

"She can't be gone," said Gannon's next-door neighbor and close friend, Carl Rady, who knew her for 35 years and said she loved to work out and pamper her dog. "It can't happen that way?"

Sodini was a member of the health club and had been there two times Tuesday before he came back at night, police said. He did not have a relationship with any of his victims, according to police.

In his Web diary, Sodini wrote of planning the attack since at least November and said he tried to carry it out when the same Tuesday-night aerobics class met on Jan. 6. "I cannot wait for tomorrow!" he exulted the night before. But he backed out at the last moment.

"It is 8:45PM: I chickened out!" he wrote. "I brought the loaded guns, everything. Hell!"

In his diary, he complained that women "don't even give me a second look ANYWHERE" even though he was tan and fit and claimed to dress well and smell nice. He listed his status as "Never married." In a chilling addition, he recorded the date of his death as Aug. 4, 2009.

On that evening, he walked into the health club wearing black workout gear and a headband, and entered the "Latin impact" class with four guns.

Jordan Solomon, 14, said she thought it was weird when a man walked into the all-female class and put a black duffel bag on the ground and reached into it.

"All of a sudden all the lights went out and I turned around, he started firing. I turned around and I saw him holding a gun," she said.

Solomon said the man was expressionless, and she didn't hear him say anything as he sprayed bullets. The teenager ran out of the room and into the parking lot, bolting into a restaurant where she told the workers to call 911.

Lauren Dooley, 27, who was exercising on a treadmill on the second floor, ran down the fire escape and out the rear of the building, where bystanders were applying pressure to victims' gunshot wounds.

"You just feel like you're in a movie ... a horrible movie where someone comes in and unleashes fire on everyone. You just don't know what to do," Dooley said.

She returned to the gym Wednesday morning to retrieve her purse and cell phone, but the doors were locked. A sign read: "Each of us in the LA Fitness family are shocked and saddened by the senseless acts of violence that took place at our Bridgeville club Tuesday evening?"

Sodini did not have a criminal record, and he legally bought the guns he used, police said. Sodini used his cell phone a few minutes before the shooting, but Moffatt would not say whom he called.

Sodini's family issued a brief statement: "Our hearts and prayers are with the victims and their families and we pray for the full recovery of the survivors."

Six patients remained hospitalized, including the aerobics instructor, Mary Primis, 26, who was listed in fair condition. Primis is pregnant but said doctors told her the baby is fine.

Authorities initially had difficulty identifying the victims because they had workout clothes on and weren't carrying wallets.

Sodini graduated in 1992 from the University of Pittsburgh with a degree in computer science and had worked as a systems analyst at a Pittsburgh law firm since 1999.

BSU coaches, players amped as camp begins

By Dustin Lapray
Times-News correspondent

BOISE — Boise State football players received instruction from their coaches for the first time since spring ball on Wednesday morning at East Junior High School.

In all, there were 105 players and 13 walk-ons. On Day 1 of camp there were also no logos on helmets, no pads, no shells. The team is split up into two groups at this point of camp: veterans and newcomers.

"The only way you really get in football shape is to go practice football," BSU head coach Chris Petersen said. "Certainly, how we divide practice up, how we thin the troops out in two different practices, those guys take a lot of reps. There's a lot of tired soldiers out there?"

Petersen never wavers.

"Our goals every year are to win the WAC, win a bowl game, to do it with integrity, class and academic excellence. Those goals don't change."

The Broncos carry 2008's 12-1 season in their pocket and appear to have the push to get better. That was evidenced by the high participation in summer workouts.

"Coach (Tim) Socha thinks it's as good of a summer as they've had since he's been here," Petersen said. "We know they worked their tails off. There's football shape, then there's running decks and liners, gasser shape. We got this next month to get our football legs going?"

As for the players, just ask linebacker Derrell Acrey how the first day of camp went.

"First of all we got coaches out there," Acrey said. "It's a whole different type of training than running decks or sprints. It's a lot different than football shape. You see that when you get out there. It's a snap of reality. It's like OK, now it's back to football. It's these reads that you weren't reading before. They're back and there's a lot of pressure the first couple of days. You got to iron out those wrinkles, so come shells, come full pads, we'll be ready to go."

Top of the food chain

By Dustin Lapray
Times-News correspondent

It's not too hard to find the best team in the Western Athletic Conference this past decade. The Boise State Broncos have won the WAC every season but two since joining the league.

But aiming to keep the Broncos from a seventh conference crown in eight seasons are the rest of the WAC's elite: Nevada and Fresno State. Both would love to end BSU's dominance this fall.

Broncos ready to repeat

BSU finished 2008 with the best scoring offense (37.6 ppg), scoring defense (12.6 ppg) and total defense (308.2 ypg) in the WAC.

The Broncos return Kellen Moore for his sophomore season at quarterback, with plenty of weapons around him, including receivers Austin Pettis (49 receptions, nine TDs) and Titus Young (16.8 ypc).

This is Part 3 of a three-day series looking at Western Athletic Conference's nine football teams. Log on to Magicvalley.com to read Parts 1 and 2.

Everybody wants to talk about Oregon, but I want to talk about us."

On defense, the Broncos return six starters, but also have several others who rotated into the lineup last year. Cornerback Kyle Wilson led the league with five interceptions last season, while Derrell Acrey should assume a leadership role at middle linebacker. Jeron Johnson led the team with 98 tackles at strong safety and returns for his junior season.

Wilson is the only senior on defense. Fullback Richie Brockel is the only senior on offense.

"The whole key to our success is consistency," Petersen said. "We take nothing for granted. We start over every year."

Wolf Pack hunts WAC title

Chris Ault's squad boasts the best rushing attack in the WAC, led by quarterback Colin Kaepernick (1,130 yards) and his read-option back Vai Taua (1,521 yards). The Nevada duo are two of only three 1,000-yard rushers in the WAC last season. The Wolf Pack is also the only team to put a genuine scare into Boise State last season.

The team also returns sixth-year senior Luke Lippincott. He ran for 1,420 yards in 2007, but only played two games last season due to injury.

Despite the incredible success on the ground, Ault looks to improve the passing game in 2009. Kaepernick struggled with accuracy at times and missed spring camp due to an ankle injury.

"We want to expand our passing game, because with Kaepernick's running ability, our play-action game will be more respected," Ault said. "He's got one of the strongest arms in the country. That ball is hard to catch."

Who will catch it in 2009? Even Kaepernick isn't sure.

"We do have one returning receiver who has played, but the rest of them are new," Kaepernick said. "We do have a lot of speed that has come in at receiver. Missing spring ball, I didn't get to throw with them live in game situations."

Giants make QB Manning NFL's richest

Manning inks $97 million extension

By Tom Canavan
Associated Press writer

ALBANY, N.Y. — The Giants don't think being the highest paid player in the NFL will change Eli Manning.

Nothing seems to.

"He is a franchise quarterback," Giants general manager Jerry Reese said Wednesday. "He has done everything we asked him to do. He has come in, taken a lot of flack from you guys (the media) and he just keeps going. He does what we ask him on the field and he does what we ask him to do off the field. He is a good football player."

The easygoing New Orleans native, who took over as the Giants starter midway through his rookie season in 2004, has proven a worthy No. 1 overall draft pick. In his first four NFL seasons, Manning has won a Super Bowl and was MVP of the game, helped his team to the playoffs all four years and is coming off

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Ichiro Suzuki had his major league-leading 52nd multihit game and Russell Branyan and Jose Lopez drove in three runs apiece to lead the Seattle Mariners to an 11-6 win over the Kansas City Royals on Wednesday.

Everyone in the Seattle lineup had a hit and only two failed to score as the Royals' home record since the All-Star break dropped to 1-10.

Luke French (2-2) worked five innings in his first start since being acquired from Detroit by the Mariners and gave up four runs on nine hits.

RAYS 6, RED SOX 4

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Carlos Pena, Carl Crawford and Pat Burrell homered in support of rookie left-hander David Price, and the Tampa Bay Rays beat the Boston Red Sox 6-4 on Wednesday night to finish a two-game series sweep.

Facing the Red Sox for the first time since getting the last four outs of last season's AL championship series, Price (5-4) allowed two runs and six hits in six innings to improve to 5-1 at home compared to 0-3 with an 8.20 ERA on the road.

Pedro strikes out 11 in rehab start

READING, Pa. (AP) — Pedro Martinez recorded nine of his first 12 outs by strikeout and worked six innings for the Double-A Reading on Wednesday night, in what could have been his final rehab start before joining the Philadelphia Phillies.

In his best start since signing a one-year deal on July 15, the 37-year-old Martinez allowed three runs and five hits without walking a batter against the New York Yankees' Trenton affiliate. He finished with 11 strikeouts.

In that first four-inning span in which he struck out nine, Martinez gave up two hits, including a home run to shortstop Eduardo Nunez.

Overall he looked free and easy, recording first-pitch strikes to 18 of the 23 batters he faced. He threw 82 pitches — 60 strikes.

In three starts for Class A Clearwater, Triple-A Lehigh Valley and Reading, Martinez has given up seven earned runs and nine hits in 12 1-3 innings.

WAC

Look for Lippincott and Tava to share the backfield as the Pistol offense evolves to run the triple option.

"For me, it's great," Kaepernick said. "I love the Pistol offense. It's always something new for us. It always keeps defenses guessing."

The defense was the best in the WAC last season against the run, but last against the pass.

To make the needed changes there, Ault changed his philosophy about defense.

"Instead of matching the players to the scheme, we are going to match the scheme to the players," Ault said. "Don't create the rainbow without the rain."

Defensive playmakers Kevin Basped and Dontay Moch return with their combined 21.5 sacks and the team's tackle leader, Jonathan Amaya, is back at free safety.

Bulldogs beg for respect

The Fresno State Bulldogs typically enter a season surrounded by hype, but this season there's not much attention focused on a team that has been to nine bowl game in 10 seasons.

Hype dissipated after a 7-6 season a year ago. The Bulldogs seem to play better against teams on their nonconference schedule, but manage to lose games to inferior WAC opponents.

"We've been trying to win the WAC, trying this and that," safety Moses Harris said. "We're tired of that. This year we want to just go out and do it. We're not on the national stage like we usually are. It's more of a grind."

Once again the Bulldogs only play five home games this season. They must travel about 15,000 miles in their first five games. Head coach Pat Hill said there are some downfalls to playing that type of schedule, but it's become the norm at FSU.

"What would Fresno State be without a tough schedule?" receiver Marlon Moore said. "Anytime, anyone, any place, it doesn't matter."

BSU camp

on the Sept. 3 home opener with Oregon, but acknowledged it's importance.

"(Oregon is) going to be as good of a team as we see all year," Petersen said. "The talent they have coming back and how they're coached, that will set the tone for the whole year. We better come out of the gate right from the start. There's no warm-up, that's for sure."

The biggest worries for the Broncos headed into camp are on the offensive line, but there are plenty of players who can step up to lead. They need to find a replacement for departed safety Ellis Powers, who was key in defending spread offense's last year in BSU's five defensive back look. Winston Venable (6-0, 206, San Rafael, Calif.) looks to be the man. He ran with the starters today. His teammates spoke about his summer workouts. He looks game.

"That nickel position has become an obviously really critical position, Ellis making a name for it last year," Petersen said. "It was nice to have

Mickelson in a better place, ready for golf

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — The practice sessions have been a little sharper, his optimism much greater. Phil Mickelson isn't sure how that will translate on the golf course, and he's not sure that even matters at the moment.

Mickelson is simply thrilled to be back on the PGA Tour, for no other reason than he wasn't expecting to play so soon.

It was only six weeks ago when his wife had surgery for breast cancer, about the time Mickelson's mother discovered she also had breast cancer. While he chose not to go into details on their recoveries, that he is back to work said plenty.

"We're in a much better place now than we were," Mickelson said Wednesday. "I'm excited about that. I'm excited about the chance to play a little golf, too."

He returns to competition at the Bridgestone Invitational, where he finished two shots behind a year ago at Firestone. Then it's off to Hazeltine for the PGA Championship, the final major of the year.

His turbulent summer has taken a toll.

Mickelson has played only twice since The Players Championship in May. A week later, he disclosed that his wife, Amy, had breast cancer. Doctors caught it early enough that surgery was pushed back to July, allowing Mickelson to play the St. Jude Championship and the U.S. Open, where he had a share of the lead until a record-setting fifth runner-up finish.

Phil Mickelson signs autographs for fans after his practice round for the Bridgestone Invitational golf tournament Wednesday at Firestone Country Club in Akron, Ohio.

He once was consumed by fear of not knowing what Amy faced. That has been replaced by hope that she will make a full recovery.

"I feel we've been fortunate because of a couple reasons," he said. "Both my mom and Amy have caught it early, and we've been able to have some wonderful care. And not only have the doctors been incredible in their science, but they've also been very compassionate toward us. We've had a great medical experience.

"We feel lucky to be — for a bad situation — in as good a situation as it can be."

He declined to elaborate on the surgery or the recovery his wife and mother face because it's not about golf. Mickelson doesn't mind talking birdies and bogeys, the family vacations they love to take, even his hopes of being able to buy a chain of breakfast restaurants.

And while he was willing to go public with Amy's cancer and his own emotions — breaking down in tears while driving — this part of the process is one that stays at home.

"It's hard for me to really talk openly because it's not involving me," he said. "It's involving Amy, it's involving my mom, and it's a personal issue with them. I want to respect their wishes and not go into too much detail. But I feel like we've been fortunate."

His last shot in competition was tapping in for par at the Bethpage Black to close with a 70 — he was the only player to shoot par or better all four days at the U.S. Open — to finish two shots behind Lucas Glover.

It was his fifth runner-up finish in 11 years at the major that means so much to him. This one was far easier to take, realizing that he had bigger issues in life than posing with a silver trophy.

Mickelson didn't return to practice until recently, which included a scouting trip to Hazeltine last week.

Scare over Bush's knee short-lived

The Associated Press

METAIRIE, La. — Reggie Bush reached down to grab his left knee, gasped as if in pain, then looked over at the sideline, grinning.

Bush realized he'd caused a stir Wednesday morning when he suddenly walked off the practice field and returned with his surgically repaired left knee wrapped in ice.

So during the club's second practice of the day in the evening, the star running back took a moment to joke about it, then returned to full participation in team drills.

"I iced it just as a precaution, so when I ice it, that means I'm just maintaining," Bush said between practices. "I've got to stay on top of it and treat it as if it was the first day I injured it."

Bush had surgery on his left knee in December to repair cartilage. Drafted second overall in 2006, the Heisman Trophy winner out of Southern California has missed 10 games in his past two seasons, including four games in 2007 because of a posterior cruciate ligament tear, also in his left knee.

Coach Sean Payton already has held Bush out of a couple practices on days when the Saints practiced twice, limiting him to one practice a day.

When Bush has practiced, he has done so vigorously. On Tuesday afternoon, he turned an end run into a 15-yard touchdown during 11-on-11 drills. He ran hard on Wednesday afternoon and did not shy away from contact.

REPORTS: BROWNS' STALLWORTH MEETS WITH GOODSELL

BEREA, Ohio — Cleveland Browns wide receiver Donte Stallworth, suspended indefinitely for killing a pedestrian while driving drunk, met in New York with NFL commissioner Roger Goodell about a possible reinstatement, according to media reports.

Stallworth was recently released from jail after serving 24 days for a DUI conviction.

Miami's WPLG-TV first reported Stallworth's meeting with Goodell. ESPN.com and The Plain Dealer, both citing unnamed sources, also said the meeting took place.

NFL spokesman Greg Aiello would not confirm the meeting or give any timetable on a possible decision by Goodell.

"We do not comment on the details of the review process," Aiello said in an e-mail response. "So we decline to comment on the report of a meeting today. When a decision is made, we will announce it."

Browns coach Eric Mangini declined to comment Wednesday on Stallworth's status, saying it was a "league matter" and that the team would address it at the proper time.

Stallworth pleaded guilty to DUI manslaughter in the death of 59-year-old Mario Reyes of Miami. Stallworth admitted drinking at a Miami Beach hotel before the accident. He reached an undisclosed financial settlement with Reyes' family, which factored into his relatively light sentence.

SOME NFL TEAMS CLAMP DOWN ON TWEETS

DAVIE, Fla. — The only tweets during the Miami Dolphins scrimmage Saturday will come from the officials' whistles.

The Dolphins are at the forefront of an NFL clamp-down on Twitter and other social media, with new restrictions imposed on players, reporters and even spectators.

Miami's secretive Bill Parcells regime prohibits fans and media at training-camp practices from tweeting, blogging or texting. At least six other teams have also imposed such restrictions on reporters, even though the workouts are open to the public.

Twitter intolerance is no surprise in a league where paranoia is part of the playbook. Like many Americans, coaches are anxious and a little confused about the rapid pace of change in communication.

"I don't really have a Twitter policy," Denver coach Josh McDaniels said. "I don't know what it means; I don't know what it is. I don't know MyFace, Spacebook, Facebook stuff. I don't know what that is either."

McDaniels mangled the Web-site names in jest, and the Broncos actually do prohibit tweeting. Such restrictions run contrary to a recommendation from league headquarters that teams allow tweeting and blogging during training camp practices.

Along with the Broncos and Dolphins, the New England Patriots, Buffalo Bills, Indianapolis Colts, New Orleans Saints and Detroit Lions disagree. They don't allow reporting from the practice field.

NFL REFS LAMENT LOSS OF ARENA LEAGUE OPPORTUNITIES

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. — It's not just players such as Kurt Warner who used the Arena Football League as a steppingstone to the NFL. The indoor circuit also was a training ground for many referees on their way up, and a place for them to keep their skills sharp in the offseason after they got there.

The Arena League shut down this week, giving up after a year on the sidelines when it couldn't figure out a way to make money.

Players and executives throughout football lamented the demise of the 8-on-8 NFL offshoot that propelled Warner to the Super Bowl MVP and turned John Elway and Jon Bon Jovi into owners.

But the AFL also will be missed by referees, who used their time indoors to hone their skills and get discovered by NFL scouts.

"It's a shame," said Ed Camp, a linesman in his 10th year in the NFL. "They always say the more snaps you see, the better you're going to be. That was another opportunity."

NO CLEMENCY REQUEST BY FORMER OHIO FOOTBALL STAR

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Former Ohio State football star Maurice Clarett has withdrawn a request for early release from prison so he could pursue an NFL career.

Clarett had argued that the sooner he was released, the sooner he could make a comeback, possibly in the NFL. But he sent a letter Monday to the Ohio Parole Board explaining his decision to withdraw the request, Ohio Department of Rehabilitation and Correction spokeswoman JoEllen Culp said Wednesday.

Franklin County Prosecutor Ron O'Brien had opposed the move, saying the former Buckeyes standout hasn't made a strong case to be released so early in his prison term.

"It probably was a reality check by both Mr. Clarett and his lawyer that they had no chance of obtaining clemency under the circumstances," O'Brien said Wednesday.

Clarett, 25, was sentenced in September 2006 to serve at least 3½ years for a holdup outside a Columbus bar and a separate highway chase earlier that year that ended with police finding loaded guns in his SUV.

Stop eating slop, win a Super Bowl

A lot of people in San Diego thought it might have been the inconsistent defense or the tendency to use LaDainian Tomlinson too much. Others blamed Norv Turner for the Chargers' inability to win a Super Bowl.

Wrong. It was the slop being served at lunch time.

Charger fans found that out when Antonio Cromartie sent a tweet the other day saying "nasty food" might have played a part in stifling the team's chance at greatness in recent years. Apparently he hurt the caterer's feelings, because Turner pulled the star cornerback out of a meeting to tell him he was being fined $2,500 for, shall we say, spilling the beans.

If the Chargers weren't so dead-faced serious, the decision to levy a fine over food would be hilarious. Actually, it still is.

But maybe there's a bigger point than last week's lasagna to ponder.

If Cromartie is complaining publicly about the grub, what's next? What other secrets will he reveal, and at what cost?

Think of what might happen if other teams knew the Chargers' showers weren't hot enough, or that the offensive line had to lather up with soap bought at the dollar store?

Let that go, and soon they'll be tweeting the playbook, 140 characters at a time.

There's something so Nixonian about it all, the silly dance of NFL coaches and team officials in the never-ending effort to keep their team's secrets.

Paranoia strikes deep among the football elite, who seem to be spending an awful lot of time this preseason figuring out ways to thwart enemy spies and the enemy within.

Just how any of it will help Eli Manning get the New York Giants back to another Super Bowl or get Mike Singletary's 49ers back to .500 is debatable. Everyone in the incestuous world of pro football already knows what everyone else is doing anyway, and the only real secrets are open secrets.

Control freaks that they are, though, nothing will stop these guys from trying.

So far this preseason, Twitter has emerged as public enemy No. 1 for most teams. Some have told their players not to tweet, and at least seven teams have banned fans and media at training camp practices from sending out any messages.

Not that any fans — or many in the media, for that matter — have any clue what is going on in those practices. Doesn't matter. All it takes is one person realizing that a third-string offensive tackle is practicing with the starters to ruin an opening day surprise.

The paranoia doesn't stop there. There are so many new restrictions around the league that fans must wonder if coaches are spending more time trying to plug leaks than fixing leaky defenses.

The Texans this week instituted a ban on filming or taking pictures of injured players during rehab, depriving all Houston fans of the chance to watch center Chris Myers get treatment for his high ankle sprain. It wasn't quite clear why, but you might think a team that has never had a winning season might be more worried about other things.

In Indianapolis, the Colts demanded reporters leave their notebooks behind when they watch practice, lest they scribble something about who Peyton Manning is throwing the ball to. In Philadelphia, coach Andy Reid stopped talking about injuries because reporters violated an unwritten "pact" by daring to ask others on the team about an injury to linebacker Stewart Bradley.

Asked when he would resume talking, Reid said, "When I decide that people can abide by the rules, I'll do that."

The problem for coaches is not everybody follows their rules. Even if they did, coaches would make new ones anyway. That's the nature of the beast in a business where you're only as good as your last game and you're convinced everyone around you is just waiting for the right time to stab you in the back.

It's at its worst right now: Every team is unbeaten, and every coach believes his team has a shot at the Super Bowl. That's especially true in San Diego, where Turner might have to win a ring to keep his job.

He's not about to let some bad meatloaf get in the way.

Manning

his first Pro Bowl season.

Eli Manning agreed to a six-year, $97 million contract extension, an average salary of roughly $15.3 million, according to a person close to the talks. The person, who spoke on condition of anonymity because the deal was not signed and had not been announced, said Manning is guaranteed $35 million under the deal that will keep him with the Giants through the 2015 season.

The extension will pay Manning $200,000 per year more than All-Pro cornerback Nnamdi Asomugha, who agreed to a three-year, $45.3 million contract this year.

Peyton Manning earns an average of $14.17 million annually with the Indianapolis Colts.

Carolina defensive end Julius Peppers has Eli Manning beat this season, when he'll make $16.7 million — but it's only a one-year deal.

Manning declined to talk to the media during lunch at Giants training camp on Wednesday.

Tom Condon, Manning's agent, was not immediately available for comment. Reese was hopeful that Manning's contract would be completed quickly, adding it's always important to get the quarterback signed.

Reese said that a lucrative new contract would not put more pressure on Manning.

"He is used to that," Reese said. "He won't get more pressure than he already has in this market. He knows how to handle pressure and he has done it before. I don't expect to see any difference in his attitude and his work ethic. He works hard. He expects a lot from himself. He knows what his role here is with us and we expect him to continue it for a long time."

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING
PROPOSED BUDGET FOR FISCAL YEAR 2010
URBAN RENEWAL AGENCY OF THE COUNTY OF JEROME, IDAHO

A public hearing for consideration of the proposed budget for the Jerome County Urban Renewal Agency for the fiscal year that begins October 1, 2009, and ends September 30, 2010, will be held at the Jerome County Commissioner Chambers, 300 N. Lincoln, Room 300, Jerome, Idaho, on Thursday, August 13, 2009, at 12:00 noon, pursuant to Idaho Code 50-1002. Written or oral comments about the proposed budget are welcome. Written comment may be submitted prior to the meeting to: Jerome County Urban Renewal Agency, c/o Mr. Joseph Davidson, Chairman, c/o Board of County Commissioners, County of Jerome, 300 North Lincoln, Room 300, Jerome, ID 83338.

The Agency budget funds the programs, services and capital projects that the Agency Board has determined to be important to meet the Agency's strategic goals as outlined in the Jerome County Crossroads Urban Renewal Project Urban Renewal Plan.

During 2008 the Agency worked on the preparation of the urban renewal plan. The Agency expenses have been limited to legal expenses, consultant expenses, and other planning expenses. Those activities have been funded through an advance from the County of Jerome of approximately $30,000. Expenses through June 30, 2009, total approximately $17,000 leaving approximately $13,000 remaining from the original advance. Under Idaho Code §50-1002, the two prior fiscal years' information is required for publication of the tentative budget. As the Agency was not established until October 21, 2008, by Resolution No. 2008-38, no budget for FY 2009 was processed as the mandated dates had elapsed. The budget below shows the breakdown of anticipated expenses for FY 2010. Again, for FY 2010, the Agency's revenues will be limited to the County's initial advance plus a pending request for an additional $10,000.

This public hearing on the proposed budget is required for formal adoption of the FY 2010 budget. The proposed expenditures and revenues for FY 2010 have been tentatively approved by the Jerome County Urban Renewal Agency Board of Directors on July 2, 2009.

ORDINANCE NO. 2009-3

Amending The Text of Chapter 13 LIVESTOCK CONFINEMENT OPERATIONS of the Jerome County Zoning Ordinance

LIVESTOCK CONFINEMENT OPERATIONS (Amended 8-28-03)

13-1. GENERAL.

13-1.01 The specific provisions of this Chapter control when other portions of the JCZO are inconsistent with provisions of this Chapter.

13-1.02 Any action by Jerome County pursuant to this Chapter does not insure that the applicant is in compliance with any other provisions of applicable local, State, and/or Federal laws, rules, and/or regulations.

13-1.03 The provisions of this Chapter are minimum standards, and any more restrictive standards required by other applicable local, State, and/or Federal laws, rules, and/or regulations must be complied with.

13-2. APPLICABILITY.

13-2.01 REQUIREMENTS.

Any and all livestock operations are subject to the following requirements:

(a). A Waste Distribution Plan for all waste from a livestock operation. Discharge of waste from a property owned or controlled by any livestock operator is prohibited. This applies to any livestock operation, regardless of size or type. Animal waste products, including sprinkled waste, shall not leave the property of the operator, unless the operator has agreed with another party to disperse animal waste products on that person's property. Liquid waste treatment lagoon, separators and holding ponds and such dispersal shall meet all local, State and Federal guidelines.

(b). A Nutrient Management Plan and Waste System Design for solid and liquid waste approved by the appropriate State agency regulating solid and liquid waste.

(d). All new operations or the expanding portion of an existing operation shall be required to use shielded or directional lighting.

(e). Waste storage on property not a part of the LCO, i.e. leased or rented property, is required to follow setbacks stated in 13-4.04.

13-2.02 PASTURED ANIMALS.

Pastured animals are not considered to be a confined livestock operation and, therefore, they do not need a permit, nor are they regulated as to the number of animals that an owner can have on his property. Pasture is defined as land where crops, vegetation, or forage growth are sustained in the normal growing season.

13-2.03 OPERATIONS REQUIRING A PERMIT.

Livestock operations requiring a permit include all operations in Jerome County, which meet the definition of a Livestock Confinement Operation (LCO). A LCO is defined as a use of real property which may produce crops, vegetation or forage grown outside of the LCO animal confinement site and includes the animal confinement site (other than fish production facilities) where the following conditions exist: (Amended 3-25-04)

(a). Animals have been, are, or will be stabled or confined and fed or maintained for a total of 45 days or more in any 12 month period, and,

(b). Crops, vegetation, or forage growth are not sustained in the normal growing season on the animal confinement site in the normal growing season. (Amended 3-25-04)

13-2.04 ANIMAL UNITS.

One animal unit is the unit of measure for any LCO and is defined as 1,000 pounds of livestock. The weight of any type of livestock is determined by tables of weights typical for that type of livestock. The Administrator shall grandfather all existing Livestock Confinement Operation Permits that were approved by Jerome County before August 28, 2003 when Jerome County changed its designation of an animal unit from 1.4 to 1000 pounds of confined animals. (Amended 4-27-06)

13-2.05 ZONES.

In A-1 zones, for all new and existing operations:

(a). More than 2.0 animal units per acre requires a permit.

(b). More than 75 animal units total requires a permit. In all other zones new LCO operations are not allowed.

13-2.06 EXISTING LCO'S WITHOUT A LCO PERMIT.

(a). All existing LCO's of greater than 75 animal units or more than 2.0 animal units per acre in existence without a LCO Permit shall be required to have a Livestock Siting Permit.

(b). Such LCO's shall be granted a Livestock Siting Permit without a fee upon filing a completed Livestock Siting Permit Application with the Planning and Zoning Administrator.

(c). Such LCO's shall file a completed application no later than 60 days after notification by the Planning & Zoning Administrator of the requirements of 13-2.03.

13-2.07 EXPANSION OR MODIFICATION OF AN EXISTING LCO, STRUCTURES AND PROPERTY. (Amended 1-13-05)

(a). Expansion of an existing LCO holding a LCO or a Livestock Siting Permit will require the LCO owner to apply for a new LCO Permit as outlined in Section 13-5. Expansion is defined, for the purposes of this Chapter, as an increase in animal units.

(b). A modification or expansion of structures as to location or otherwise with no increase in animal units of a LCO with an existing permit requires a Livestock Structure Expansion Siting Permit for corrals, lagoons and wells. (Amended 3-25-04; 1-13-05)

(c). An expansion of property area only, with no increase in animal units or change of structures, will only require the submission of the property legal description and approval by the Administrator. (Amended 1-13-05)

(d). Changes of structure(s) in an existing LCO, mandated by new Federal or State regulations, shall be permitted provided there is no erosion of existing setbacks. (Amended 1-13-05)

(e). A proposed site subject to a public hearing according to I.C. 67-6529 (2) is defined by the Board of Jerome County Commissioners to not include modifications or substantially alter the existing LCO Animal Confinement Site Plan on file with the Administrator. (Added 1-13-05)

(f). 13-5. WINDBREAKS AND BERMS. (Added 8-3-09)

13-5.01 TERMS USED IN THIS SECTION. (13-5) (Added 8-3-09).

In regard to section 13-5, the following terms shall have the following meanings:

(a). Identified uses: 1) LCO's, 2) subdivisions, and/or 3) all other residential uses that are not subdivisions.

(b). Seeking use: shall refer to proposed LCO's (new or expanding), subdivisions or residential uses that are currently being applied for, and seeking permission to be constructed.

(c). Existing use: shall refer to an LCO, a subdivision or a residential use that has been approved, in existence and/or in operation. The approval date of an existing use would precede, or be older than, that of a seeking use.

13-5.02 OPPOSING USES. (Added 8-3-09)

It shall be recognized in Jerome County that opposing uses exist between LCO's, subdivisions and other residential uses.

13-5.03 PURPOSE. (Added 8-3-09)

(a). In order to reduce or eliminate the adverse impacts typically associated with LCO's (smell, sight, sound, airborne material etc.), and that typically are the source of opposition between the above identified uses, all identified uses that fall within the parameters of this section shall construct an aesthetic looking windbreak or berm that is consistent with the requirements set forth herein. This requirement is to include all new or expanding LCO's all new subdivisions, and all new residential uses.

(b). The windbreak or berm shall be constructed for the purpose of, as much as possible, diverting wind and odor; shielding from sight such things as, but not limited to, LCO structures, animals, vehicles, bales of hay/straw, feed, waste products, and other materials; and/or to shield from sound the daily activities of the LCO itself.

13-5.04 BURDEN. (Added 8-3-09)

(a). It shall be the Applicant of the seeking use that shall have the burden and responsibility of constructing and maintaining the windbreak(s) or berm(s) prescribed herein.

(b). A detailed landscaping plan is to be submitted at the time of the application with proof of consultation with the NCS or a landscaper.

13-5.05 LOCATIONS AND DISTANCES. (Added 8-3-09)

(a). A windbreak or berm shall be constructed in between an LCO and a subdivision, on the property of that which is the seeking use, when approval of such seeking use would put the LCO and subdivision within 1320 feet of one another.

(b). When an LCO is the seeking use, it shall construct a windbreak or berm on the eastside of the LCO when any other type of residential use has been approved or is in existence on the LCO's east side. When any type of residential use other than a subdivision is the seeking use, it shall construct a windbreak or berm on the west side of the residential use when an LCO has been approved or is in existence on the residential use's west side. The windbreaks and berms referred to in this subsection shall be constructed in-between the LCO and the other type of residential use, on the property of that which is the seeking use, and when approval of such seeking use would put the LCO and other type of residential use within 1320 feet of one another.

(c). A windbreak and/or berm required pursuant to this section shall be included in the site plan or plat, which ever is applicable and typically associated with the seeking use.

(d). The windbreak or berm shall run parallel to the relevant, bordering property line and shall run the entire length of the subdivision or eastern residential structure, or until reaching the opposing or perpendicular border, which ever is the shortest amount of distance. The windbreak or berm shall continue to run, on both ends, fifty (50) feet past the last residential structure of a subdivision, or fifty (50) feet past the eastern residential structure, or until reaching the opposing or perpendicular border, which ever is the shortest amount of distance.

13-5.06 MATERIALS AND MAINTENANCE. (Added 8-3-09)

(a). The windbreak or berm shall be constructed from landscaped earthen mounds, rock, trees, shrubs, bushes or other plants, or any other materials, manmade or not, whose original purpose was for the construction of structures such as that contemplated here, or a combination of some or all of the above.

(b). All windbreaks and berms shall receive regular applicable maintenance, to include but not be limited to: pruning, raking and removal of leaves, felled trees, limbs or other branches; removal and replacement of dead trees, shrubs and bushes; removal of litter, graffiti, and other foreign items; painting, repairing or replacing broken, cracked, weathered or failed planks in fencing; and or replacing worn, defective or broken sprinkler hoses or heads.

13-5.07 LIVING WINDBREAKS. (Added 8-3-09)

(a). A windbreak constructed of living materials (trees, shrubs, bushes, etc.) should consist of several, parallel rows, with each row having a differing planting date, so that each row of living materials will be at varying stages of growth. The first row planted shall be known as the initial row, which shall be thick enough on its own, with or without year-around leaves, to accomplish the intended goals of this section.

(b). Any windbreak constructed of living materials shall be constructed and maintained utilizing best management practices with an appropriate watering system so as to establish maximum growth efficiency and potential in reaching effective level. Such watering system shall be contemplated, designed, and included in the site plan or plat.

(c). A windbreak constructed of living materials need not fulfill its intended purpose directly after planting, but shall accomplish such intended task upon reaching adolescence or maturity level, which shall occur between three (3) and seven (7) years from the date of approval of the seeking use that necessitated the windbreak.

13-5.08 LOCATIONS NEAR BOUNDARIES BETWEEN A-1 AND A-2 ZONES. (Amended 8-3-09)

Animal confinement areas, liquid waste treatment lagoons, separators, liquid and/or solid waste storage facilities, and feed storage areas (excluding dry hay and straw storage which shall meet a 300 foot setback requirement) shall be a minimum of 1,000 feet from the boundary between zones A-1 and A-2.

13-5.09 SETBACKS APPLY EQUALLY. (Amended 8-03-09)

All distance requirements noted in 13-4.01 through 13-4.05 shall apply equally to new LCO construction or new residence construction. For example 13-4.03 requires animal confinement areas to be a minimum of 300 feet from existing residences. This requirement also means that new residences (construction begun after permit application for an LCO) must be located a minimum of 300 feet from the animal confinement areas shown on the LCO site plan as approved by Jerome County.

13-8 SUPPLEMENTARY CONDITIONS AND SAFEGUARDS. (Added 8-3-09)13-8.01 PURPOSE. (Added 8-3-09)

In granting any permit provided for in this chapter, the Planning and Zoning Commission may recommend and the Board may prescribe, require and/or attach appropriate conditions, bonds, or safeguards to the permit. The purpose for such may include, but are not limited to, the need to:

- (a). Minimize adverse impacts, such as sight, smell and noise that the LCO will have on neighboring, residential or commercial development.
- (b). Control the sequence and timing of development of the LCO.
- (c). Control the duration of construction.
- (d). Assure that the LCO is maintained properly.
- (e). Designate the exact location and nature of equipment or other structures associated with the LCO.
- (f). Require more restrictive standards than those set forth by state agencies in the Nutrient Management Plan, the Waste Distribution Plan or other documents.
- (g). Require more restrictive standards than those generally required under this chapter (for example by lowering the number of animal units per acre or increasing setback distances).

13-8.02 PROCEDURE FOR DEVIATING FROM ORDINANCE PER 13-8.01(g). (Added 8-3-09)

(a). Before the Planning and Zoning Commission or Board deviates from the established standards set forth in this chapter pursuant to 13-8.01(g), it shall first find credible evidence that was presented at the hearing on the matter, showing that such deviation is necessary to satisfy the criteria, standards, purposes and goals set forth in the Comprehensive Plan or this Ordinance, and that the goal attempting to be achieved by such deviation cannot be obtained by some other manner currently provided for in this chapter.

(b). If the Planning and Zoning Commission, after making the necessary findings set forth in 13-8.02(a), recommends to the Board a deviation pursuant to 13-8.01(g), the Applicant shall be specifically notified of the recommended deviation and shall have at least thirty (30) days before the matter goes before the Board to prepare a response or rebuttal to such recommended deviation, and to then argue or present it to the Board at its Hearing.

(c). If the Board, following its hearing, contemplates a deviation pursuant to 13-8.01(g) that was not recommended by the Planning and Zoning Commission, the Board shall, before deciding on such deviation, notify and allow the Applicant at least thirty (30) days to prepare a response or rebuttal. The Board shall then reopen its hearing on the matter pursuant to Section 23-5.06 of this Ordinance, for the sole purpose of allowing the Applicant to submit evidence in response or rebuttal to the proposed deviation. The Board may ask questions of staff and any witness providing such rebuttal. After conclusion of such response or rebuttal, the reopened hearing shall be closed and the Board shall then deliberate on all remaining, undecided issues, and particularly on the issue concerning the need for the proposed deviation. Before implementing such deviation, the Board shall, in its written decision as required by 13-6.02(c), identify the evidence that supports the findings identified in 13-8.02(a), and shall explain why the evidence supporting the need for the deviation has more weight than that provided in the response or rebuttal evidence presented by the Applicant.

(d). The Applicant may waive or shorten the thirty (30) day time periods prescribed 13-8.02(b) and 13-8.02(c), and may also waive the process for reopening the Hearing and submitting rebuttal evidence, if the Applicant is stipulating, or has no contention, to the proposed deviation, or for any other purpose the Applicant may have.

13-8.03 WAIVER. (Added 8-3-09)

(a). If the Applicant of the seeking use demonstrates at the hearing before the Planning and Zoning Commission or the Board that a windbreak or berm is impractical or infeasible, the Planning and Zoning Commission may recommend, and the Board may order, such requirement be exempted if other conditions as outlined in this chapter are imposed that will effectuate the same goals associated with the windbreaks and berms. An Applicant claiming impracticality or infeasibility shall not be required to comply with subsection 13-5.05(c), but shall attach and submit a written statement with the application for the seeking use that explains why or how the windbreaks or berms are impractical or infeasible.

(b). The requirement of windbreaks and berms may also be exempted by the relevant governing board upon a finding that such requirement is not needed because the purpose behind the windbreaks and berms has already been achieved in some other fashion or by some other means.

13-9. PUBLIC HEARING AND APPEAL. (Amended 9-22-08, 8-3-09)

(a). One Public Hearing shall be heard before the Planning and Zoning Commission on applications brought pursuant to this chapter. At such hearing, all members of the public desiring to present oral or written comment, or documentary evidence, shall be allowed to do so, subject to the hearing procedures (including limits of time) as set forth in Chapter 23 of this Ordinance. The Planning and Zoning Commission will forward their recommendation to the Board.

(b). One Public Hearing shall be heard before the Board on applications brought pursuant to this chapter. At such hearing, all members of the public desiring to present oral or written comment, or documentary evidence, shall be allowed to do so, subject to the hearing procedures (including limits of time) as set forth in Chapter 23 of this Ordinance.

(c). The decision granting or denying an application brought pursuant to this chapter shall be in writing and shall conform to the standards and criteria set forth in Idaho Code Section 67-6535, as it may be amended from time to time.

13-9.01 AMENDMENTS DURING CONSTRUCTION. (Amended 9-22-08, 8-3-09)

New LCO's shall be constructed according to the site plans submitted to the Planning & Zoning Administrator. The Administrator may approve amendments submitted by the applicant during the construction process to the site plan as long as the amended changes and/or material changes do not change the set back requirements in Chapter 13 of the Jerome County Zoning Ordinance.

13-9.02 OCCUPANCY PERMIT AND CERTIFICATE OF OCCUPANCY. (Amended 9-22-08, 8-3-09)

The Occupancy Permit shall be issued and operation of the LCO may commence upon receipt by the Planning & Zoning Administrator of all the following:

- (a). Certification by the applicant that the LCO has been constructed according to the site plans submitted to the Planning & Zoning Administrator, including any changes to those plans that were approved by the Administrator.
- (b). A final approval letter from the appropriate State agency certifying that the waste system as constructed is approved.
- (c). A letter or other certification from the Department of Water Resources that the applicant has water rights sufficient to operate the facility with the number of animal units permitted under the LCO Permit.
- (d). A letter of approval for Nutrient Management Plan from appropriate agency, if required.
- (e). No occupational permit or certificate of occupancy, as the case might be, shall be issued to an Applicant of a seeking use, until after completion of all windbreaks or berms described in this section. In regard to living windbreaks, and with the provisions of 13-5.07(c) in mind, the term "completion" as used above shall mean after all trees, shrubs, bushes, or other plants making up the initial row of the windbreak have been planted and the watering system prescribed in 13-5.07(b) is completed and operational.

13-9.05 OPERATION. (Amended 9-22-08, 8-3-09)

LCO's shall be operated in accordance with the LCO Permit submitted in the application.

13-10 VIOLATION. (Amended 9-22-08, 8-3-09)

13-10.01 Any LCO owner, who has not filed a LCO Permit or Livestock Siting Permit with the Planning & Zoning Administrator within 60 days of written notification from the Administrator that this is required, shall be in violation of the Jerome County Zoning Ordinance. The owner may not continue operation and must apply for a LCO Permit. (Amended 9-22-08, 8-3-09)

13-10.02 Failure of the owner of an existing LCO to make application for a Livestock Siting Permit or LCO permit as required by this Chapter shall constitute a violation of the JCZO and the owner may not continue operation of the LCO without a LCO or Siting Permit obtained in accordance with this Chapter. NOTICE OF APPLICATION FOR APPROVAL OF GROUND WATER USERS' 2009 JOINT MITIGATION PLAN TO COMPENSATE BLUE LAKES TROUT FARM, INC.

Notice is hereby given that on July 6, 2009, North Snake Ground Water District and Magic Valley Ground Water District, c/o Randall C. Budge, Racine Olson Nye Budge & Bailey, PO Box 1391, Pocatello ID 83204-1391, submitted a Joint Mitigation Plan for 2009 (plan) to the Idaho Department of Water Resources (Department).

The plan is intended to satisfy the mitigation or replacement obligations of the North Snake Ground Water District and Magic Valley Ground Water District as well as the obligations of the Southwest Irrigation District, the Goose Creek Irrigation District and the Carey Ground Water District (collectively referred to as "the districts"). The districts are regulated by the watermaster of State Water Districts 130 and 140.

The members of the districts hold numerous ground water rights for domestic, municipal, commercial, industrial and irrigation uses located within Gooding, Jerome, Lincoln, Minidoka, Blaine, Twin Falls and Cassia Counties. Certain of these ground water rights have priority dates junior to the priority dates of certain water rights from surface water sources dependent on springs that discharge to the Devil's Washbowl to Buhl Gage reach of the Snake River. The ground water and the springs are interconnected sources of water. The districts have proposed the plan to compensate for injury to earlier priority surface water rights that may result from depletions under later priority ground water rights. The surface water rights which the plan proposes to benefit are: 36-2356A, 36-7210 and 36-7427 held by Blue Lakes Trout Co. LLC for use at its hatchery facility. The plan provides for direct delivery of replacement water to the Blue Lakes Trout Co. LLC hatchery of 10 cfs of spring flow from Alpheus Creek under water right 36-2603C. The plan also provides for continued or maintained conversions of irrigation of land from ground water to surface water via the North Side Canal Co. delivery system and ongoing enrollment of ground water irrigated lands in the Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program.

The Department will process this plan pursuant to the Department's Conjunctive Management Rules (IDAPA 37, Title 03, Chapter 11).

The Department has not determined the adequacy of the proposed plan. A complete copy of the proposed plan is available for review at either the Department's State Office in Boise, the Department's Regional Office in Twin Falls, or may be viewed online at the following website along with other related documents:

Any protest against approval of the plan must be filed with the Department, together with a protest fee of $25, on or before August 17, 2009. The protest must include a certificate of service showing that a copy of the protest has been mailed to or served on the districts.

For today's defensive problem, sit West and look only at your hand and dummy's. You are playing against competent opponents.

Against South's three no-trump you lead the heart two. Declarer plays the king from dummy and your partner wins with the ace. He then returns the heart 10, covered by declarer's jack and your queen. What now?

The key to this problem lies in declarer's play. What card would you usually play from dummy when you had king-third in dummy and a doubleton or triplet heart jack in hand (with or without the heart nine)? Surely it would be normal to guarantee a trick in the suit by playing low from the dummy, wouldn't it? So when declarer goes in with dummy's king, it looks like a desperate attempt to gain the lead. He must have a pronounced weakness in another suit, and that can only be in spades. You should switch to the spade ace and, after an encouraging card from partner, continue with the queen.

One final thought: Was declarer right to play dummy's king at trick one? It could have been right if you had underled the heart ace. But if he had played low, your partner might have put in the 10, or (on a different day) have won his queen and simply continued the suit. There would have been no reason for him to suspect the urgency of a spade switch. As it was, declarer's strange play alerted you to the winning defense.

ANSWER: Double. Horrible as it is to make a negative double without four hearts, your hand is simply too good to pass, and raising clubs on three does not feel right. By contrast, it would be clear-cut to raise clubs if the diamond two were in clubs. Just because partner MIGHT have three clubs does not mean he does!

Parents should answer girl's threat with some tough love

DEAR ABBY: I feel like my heart has been ripped out and stomped on. My 18-year-old daughter, "Emily," hooked up with a 27-year-old ex-convict ("Jerry") and had his baby three months ago. Although we disapproved of the relationship, we let him move into our home. A month later, I caught him with another girl and my daughter ended their relationship.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Last week, Emily announced that Jerry wants her back and has admitted all his wrongs. Abby, she wants us to let him move back in! My husband refuses to support them any longer. Emily has now chosen Jerry and says she is taking the baby, even though she has no place to go because he's still living with the other girl. Neither of them can afford an apartment.

I feel if I don't go along with it I am throwing my innocent grandchild out into the street, and it breaks my heart. Is tough love the right answer?

— CRYING IN VIRGINIA
DEAR CRYING: Yes, so call her bluff. Tough love would be better than allowing your daughter to blackmail you, which is what she's attempting to do. It's unlikely that Emily will wind up on the street.

I seriously doubt that Jerry will give up a sure thing and a roof over his head to build a life with your daughter. When she wakes up to that fact, I predict she'll be back on your doorstep — so be prepared.

DEAR ABBY: My husband's grandson just graduated from the eighth grade. Because he lives in another part of the state we were unable to attend the graduation, but we sent him a graduation card with $5 enclosed.

My husband's daughter called to acknowledge the card "for" her son. Then she asked if my husband was having financial difficulties because he sent only $5 while some of her friends gave her son $50. She said we should have sent more. My husband was so shocked by her insensitivity that he hung up on her.

His daughter did not call or send a card on Father's Day. However, today we received a card from his grandson thanking us for the $5 and saying if we had dug deeper and added $1, he could have bought a slice of pizza.

Abby, how do we respond to these two?

— HURT GRANDPARENTS ANAHEIM, CALIF.
DEAR HURT GRANDPARENTS: Unbelievable.

IF AUGUST 6 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: During September and October you might feel that life is just a bowl of cherries and you may have the chance to enjoy all the good things you want. Because of your optimism and opportunities offered by others, this is a good time to take the lead or gain recognition. Your luck isn't quite as good in November when you should avoid making investments or crucial business decisions. A combination of inspiration and business savvy makes any project you begin in January likely to succeed. March is a good month for planning ahead and laying down groundwork for a fabulous future because you will be able to keep the promises and commitments you make.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You'll get nowhere by expecting what you want when you want it. You'll go farther as a team player, giving up individual stardom.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Jot down innovative ideas that bubble to the surface; they may come in handy later. Beware of misunderstandings with a loved one.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Follow your heart and enjoy the trip to wherever it takes you. A relationship too weak to endure change is probably doomed to fail.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your right thinking may come across as harsh and unyielding. Be prepared for minor disruptions that interrupt happy harmony.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Release pent-up energy by engaging in vigorous physical activity. Be sure to adhere to established and sensible financial strategies.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Make dinner for a special someone, offer help to a co-worker or make things easier for someone. The good you do today is paid forward.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22):

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

Being overly amiable could come across as weakness. Don't add your two cents unless asked for it. Don't force issues, either.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Having pure motives is both a creed to follow and a watermark of success. Appearing overly sentimental could disrupt a relationship.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Know the difference between lasting values and passing fancies. You have a tendency to ignore the delicate feelings of others.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A flawed diamond seen through a microscope may still be beautiful and valuable. Don't dwell on only the imperfections.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Charms ricochet like a stray bullet. Don't rock the boat with a romantic relationship. Key relationships are treading on thin ice.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Go out of your way to impress the world with your vivid imagination. Your ideas are sure to impress a prospective partner.

Your husband was kind to send the boy anything in addition to the card. His daughter's response shows where her priorities are. I'll give her son this: He did acknowledge the gift — but he should have stopped at thank you and omitted the snide remark.

How should the two of you respond? By keeping the lines of communication open and your wallet closed.

DEAR ABBY: I was raised to respect people's personal space, especially when standing in line. However, often when I stand in line patiently waiting my turn, I find the person behind me practically breathing down my neck. I keep telling myself to politely ask for space, but I can't master the courage because I'm afraid they will think I'm rude. How can I ask for space without sounding rude?

— NEEDS MY SPACE IN CONNECTICUT
DEAR NEEDS YOUR SPACE: For heaven's sake, muster the courage. The last thing you need is a stranger standing behind you watching you enter a pin number on a debit card.

There is nothing nasty about turning around and saying that when someone stands too close it makes you uncomfortable and to please step back. Speaking up for yourself isn't rude. It's being assertive — which is healthy when compared to feeling like a doormat.
