Nuke developer says he may move outside Elmore Co.

State disputes statements in CEO's announcement

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

The developer of a proposed nuclear power plant in Elmore County said Thursday he is considering moving his project elsewhere in the state.

But Idaho officials quickly disputed a press release from Alternate Energy Holdings Inc. claiming that the state "offered" land for its planned 1,600-megawatt commercial power plant.

In a press release and a conversation with the Times-News on Thursday morning, AEHI CEO Don Gillispie said delays in the permitting process in Elmore County prompted the state of Idaho and several counties to step forward and offer alternate sites. His company, he said, is now looking at two additional sites outside the county where the permitting process

Sotomayor OK'd for high court in historic vote

By Julie Hirschfeld Davis
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Sonia Sotomayor won confirmation Thursday as the nation's first Hispanic Supreme Court justice, a history-making Senate vote that capped a summer-long debate heavy with ethnic politics and hints of high court fights to come.

Sotomayor

The third woman in court history, she'll be sworn in Saturday as the 111th justice and the first nominated by a Democrat in 15 years.

The Senate vote was 68-31 to confirm Sotomayor, President Obama's first Supreme Court nominee, with Democrats unanimously behind her but most Republicans lining up in a show of opposition both for her and for the president's standards for a justice.

Idaho Senators Mike Crapo and Jim Risch both voted against Sotomayor.

The 55-year-old daughter of Puerto Rican parents was raised in a South Bronx housing project and educated in the Ivy League before rising to the highest legal echelons, spending the past 17 years as a federal judge. She watched the vote on TV

Aspen, a 6-year-old black Labrador, practices jumping Wednesday with Toby Heywood at the Splash Dogs pool at the Jerome County Fair. Events continue today at the exhibition with a super vertical event starting at 6 p.m.

New Jerome County Fair event is wet and wild

By Nichole Carnell
Times-News writer

JEROME — This is not your average dog show.

Splash Dogs, a new event at the Jerome County Fair, doesn't care how pretty your dog is — all it wants to know if how far it can splash.

Splash Dogs is a national touring company that features a long-distance dog jumping sport and is appearing for only the second time in Idaho, in Jerome this week.

Basically, Splash Dogs is the ultimate game of fetch. Enticed by a thrown toy, dogs run and jump off a dock approximately 6 feet above the ground and into a rectangular pool.

"People think they are out here to see a dog show," said David Drake, canine sports production specialist, "but it's a competition."

The Splash Dogs crew of professional dog trainers travels around the country promoting their sport and getting local dogs involved as well.

"Our whole entire sport is dependent on local people," said Drake.

Local and traveling dogs compete in both vertical and horizontal jumping. Each horizontal jump is measured by electronic measuring equipment that records the length when the base of the dog's tail hits the water, he said.

Owners of the 24 longest horizontal jumps this week will compete in the final competition Saturday night, Drake said. The vertical jump competition is held at 6 p.m. today.

Splash Dogs will continue throughout the fair, offering training time before and between competitions beginning at noon. Three competitions a day, at 1:30 p.m., 4 p.m. and 6 p.m., will give all types of dogs a chance to compete.

Trainers will be available every day,

Decision likely in Sept. on Leon's competency

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

JEROME — While it remained unknown Thursday whether Fortino Leon is legally competent to stand trial for first-degree murder and aggravated battery and assault, Jerome County 5th District Court Judge Jason Walker gave hint of a possible outcome.

Leon was declared not mentally fit to stand trial last August and the case has been stalled in the court system since.

"We recently received a report from State Hospital South that he may now be fit to stand trial," Walker said during a status conference on Leon's competency Thursday.

Defense attorney Stacey Gosnell-Taylor said her client is scheduled to return to the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare's State Hospital South in Nampa next week.

Walker ordered Jerome County in June to pay for the most recent psychological evaluation.

He set a review hearing on Leon's competency for Sept. 3.

Leon, who turns 74 next week, was charged with one count of first-degree murder and one count of aggravated battery and assault in July 2008, following the murder of Javier Zavala-Paniagua, 22, and the nonfatal shooting of his now

Administration announces overhaul of immigration detention system

By Suzanne Gamboa
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The Obama administration's plan to stop holding immigrant families at a former central Texas prison was cheered Thursday by the immigrants' supporters and some in Congress as a needed change in inhumane and sometimes deadly detentions.

immigration enforcement, however, questioned whether the administration was returning to policies that allow immigrants to disappear. And even those who liked the changes said the government needs to go further and write detention standards into law.

John Morton, Immigration and Customs Enforcement director, told reporters Thursday that detentions of families at the

T. Don Hutto Residential Center in Taylor, Texas, which has held 400 people, would end immediately.

Some families would go to a facility in Pennsylvania, but it has only 85 beds and Morton said other alternatives would be considered. These could include community homes, often run by nonprofit or religious groups, where the immigrants can come and go, but federal officials can still keep track of them.

The decision was among several first steps that Morton said eventually would "lead to ... creation of a system that is marked by and driven by the civil detention philosophy." He said these changes can be made while still detaining immigrants who are criminals or dangerous.

"We are going to continue might move more quickly, and has an application for state land filled out and standing by.

"We're just waiting to pick the land and submit it," Gillispie said, adding that all the new interests had assured him his company could receive a permit by the end of the year.

Gillispie declined to identify the interested counties other than saying they are outside of southwest Idaho, arguing that he didn't want them harassed by critics of his plant until a site is picked. But he said the Idaho Department of Lands also offered him "state lands anywhere in the state," following a directive from Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's office.

That was news to both the department and Otter's office. Lands Director George Bacon said Gillispie contacted his office some time ago wondering if state land might be available for a plant. Department staff wasn't sure what such a plant needed, but employees in its southwest office helped Gillispie look through some parcels and filled him in on how the application process would go, Bacon said.

Jon Hanian, Otter's spokesman, said the only thing the governor asked Lands to do was fill AEHI in on how the process works and that the company has "not been offered state sites."

The State Board of Land Commissioners would have final say over permitting a nuclear plant on state land, something Gillispie talked up as a plus for developing his plant there. He even looked briefly at state land in Elmore County, he said, before concluding the private farmland he submitted to the county for a rezone was the best choice.

"(It's) nothing that couldn't be done in a month" he said of the state's process.

But Bacon said his department follows a strict process for permits on state endowment lands. For an unusual request like a nuclear plant, the agency may need a few months just to complete the initial analysis — examining the applicants' finances, business plan and other factors such as environmental risks. More studies, county coordination and other steps would follow that, he said.

"It could take many months," Bacon said of the overall process.

Alan Christy, Elmore County's new Growth and Development director, said on his first day of work Thursday that he hadn't heard AEHI was looking elsewhere. The county is moving ahead with processing the company's application after county commissioners referred it back to the Planning and Zoning Commission, he said. The P&Z directed staff at a Wednesday evening meeting to work on an extensive comprehensive-plan analysis and staff report, a project with no set time frame at the moment.

AEHI has already moved its proposed site once, leaving Owyhee County in early 2008 for the Elmore site. Gillispie was ready to pack up and try proposing his plant in Colorado if the Elmore site fell through, he said.

Gillispie said he issued Thursday's announcement because word was starting to spread and his company wanted to report it to the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission, possible stock buyers and the rest of the public. AEHI stock closed at 10 cents a share on Thursday.

at a federal courthouse in New York City, among friends and colleagues.

Republicans argued she'd bring personal bias and a liberal agenda to the bench. But Democrats praised Sotomayor as an extraordinarily qualified mainstream moderate and touted her elevation to the court as a milestone in the nation's journey toward greater equality and a reaffirmation of the American dream.

Obama, the nation's first black president, praised the Senate's vote as "breaking another barrier and moving us yet another step closer to a more perfect union." He planned to welcome Sotomayor at the White House next week.

Minutes before the vote, Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., the Judiciary Committee chairman, called it one for the ages. "Years from now ... we will remember this time when we crossed paths with the quintessentially American journey of Sonia Sotomayor."

Senators took the rare step of assembling at their desks for the vote, rising from their seats to call out "aye" or "nay." The longest-serving senator, 91-year-old Robert Byrd of West Virginia who has been in frail health following a long hospitalization, was brought in in a wheelchair to vote in Sotomayor's favor. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., suffering from brain cancer, was the only senator absent.

Sotomayor replaces retiring Justice David Souter, a liberal named by a Republican president, and she is not expected to alter the court's ideological split.

Still, Republicans and Democrats were deeply at odds over confirming Sotomayor, and the battle over her nomination highlighted profound philosophical disagreements that will shape future fights over the court's makeup as Obama looks to another likely vacancy — perhaps more than one — while he's in the White House.

Judge Faviola A. Soto, foreground right, and others at LatinoJustice in New York watch as the U.S. Senate confirms Sonia Sotomayor as the first Hispanic justice on the Supreme Court, Thursday.

In the final tally, nine Republicans joined majority Democrats and the Senate's two independents to support Sotomayor's confirmation. They included the Senate's few GOP moderates and its lone Hispanic Republican, retiring Sen. Mel Martinez of Florida, as well as conservative Sens. Lindsey Graham of South Carolina and Lamar Alexander of Tennessee, the party's third-ranking leader.

GOP critics decried Obama's call for "empathy" in a justice, painting

Sotomayor as the embodiment of an inappropriate standard that would let a judge bring her personal whims and prejudices to the bench.

Her writings and speeches "reflect a belief not just that impartiality is not possible, but that it's not even worth the effort," said Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., the minority leader. "In Judge Sotomayor's court, groups that didn't make the cut of preferred groups often found that they ended up on the short end of the empathy standard."

Detention

to detain on a large scale," he said. "This is about how we detain."

Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano said more changes are coming in what she called a major overhaul that DHS officials acknowledge will take years.

"There are a number of issues that need to be corrected," Napolitano said. "If people are going to be held ... we have an obligation that they be held safely in a clean, healthy environment."

At the Texas facility, families were locked in cells equipped with bunk beds and a toilet. Immigration advocates considered the site a symbol of inhumanity in the country's immigration detention.

A lawsuit filed by the American Civil Liberties Union forced changes to the facility, such as allowing families to have more time to eat and removing concertina wire that surrounded the facility.

ACLU of Texas Legal Director Lisa Graybill said her group is "overjoyed" the administration recognized holding children in the facility is "inhumane and un-American." But she said the "victory does not eclipse" the fact the federal government spends hundreds of millions of dollars to detain immigrants when less expensive alternatives are available.

The annual cost of detaining immigrants has reached $1.7 billion, according to ICE.

Other advocates said Congress must write immigration detention standards into law to make them enforceable.

Separate bills have been filed by Sens. Bob Menendez, D-N.J., and Joe Lieberman, I-Conn., who chairs the Homeland Security and Government Affairs committee, to improve detention conditions.

The number of detained immigrants has risen sharply in recent years and the detention system has not kept pace in ensuring humane conditions, proper medical treatment, or basic legal protections, Lieberman said.

Marcos Marquez, a Salvadoran who took trains and hitchhiked his way through Central America, spent eight months in Hutto. Marquez said it was hard to hear children at the detention center asking to go to the store, although the conditions were the best he'd ever lived in.

"The mom would say, 'No, we're not allowed to leave' and the kids would say, 'We're in jail aren't we, Mom?'" Marquez said. "That was really heartbreaking, to hear the kids, because the kids would then cry, then the moms would cry."

He added his 10-year-old son, also Marcos, didn't understand why they were in jail but played video games, made friends, got classroom instruction and was never forcibly separated from his father at the center.

The detention system expanded after the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks as the Bush administration stepped up immigration enforcement and ended a policy of releasing illegal immigrants into the country to await deportation hearings — a practice known as "catch and release."

Texas Rep. Lamar Smith, the ranking Republican on the House Judiciary Committee, praised attempts treat immigration detainees more humanely. But he said he's concerned families may be broken up and the government will return to "catch and release."

"I hope that the Obama administration will not repeat past mistakes and return to a policy that puts more illegal immigrants on the streets of American communities," Smith said.

Judge asks Lincoln Co. to use collection agency

Wood says Twin Falls County model is one to follow

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — Fifth District Court Judge Barry Wood told the Lincoln County Commission last week that it should consider adopting a program using a collection agency for overdue fines and court fees that has reaped financial rewards for Twin Falls County.

After the Idaho

Legislature approved the use of collection agencies for overdue fines and court fees, Twin Falls County signed a contract with Advanced Collection Technology, of Twin Falls. Wood approved that contract in 2004.

"People tend to pay quickly when a collection agency becomes involved," Wood said. He attributed the success of third-party bill collectors to fears by many people of credit score damage.

"We don't have to ask any further than Twin Falls County," Wood said of the program that is a success in Twin Falls.

Twin Falls County Clerk Kristina Glascock touts the financial success the program has reaped for Twin Falls County.

She said that the contract with the collector allows the court to turn over fines, program keeps some out of jail.

"It's been very good for us because we don't issue warrants for people not paying. We're not clogging up the system," Glascock said.

"A lot of people will come in and pay when they know it will be turned over to a collection agency because they know it will go on their credit," she said.

Twin Falls County's collection rate was 50 percent before adopting the program in 2004, according to Glascock. The percentage of fines and fees collected has increased each year since.

"In 2008, our collection rate was up to 72 percent," she said, adding that not all of those people were turned over to the collector. Some paid on time.

Glascock went back to 1989 and turned delinquent fines and fees over to the agency. Some of those have since been paid, she said.

"I appreciate Judge Wood's support. He's a firm believer that it does work," Glascock said.

BLM: Storm prompted several new fire starts

Times-News

Thunderstorms passing through south-central Idaho started a number of wildfires on Wednesday evening, reported the U.S. Bureau of Land Management's Twin Falls District.

Out of 17 reported fires the BLM responded to, 10 proved to be actual starts, the agency announced in a press release. Most stayed very small, but three were notable:

- The Dove Springs Fire covered 436 acres about 10 miles south of Glens Ferry and was contained at 4 a.m. Thursday morning. Control was expected at 7 p.m. that day.

- The Sugarloaf Fire measured 30 acres in the area south of Hansen and was controlled at 11 p.m. Wednesday.

- The Monument Fire spread across 25 acres southeast of Fairfield. It was contained at noon Thursday, with control expected at 6 p.m. that day.

Rain helped firefighters with their work, and crews monitored throughout Thursday for any potential new starts that were holdovers from the storm.

After a delayed start to the fire season, the release stated the agency is on alert and ready to respond to future thunderstorms.

Commissioners consider new plan for Blaine Manor

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Blaine County Commissioners on Tuesday approved a tentative budget of $22.7 million for the 2010 fiscal year, which begins Oct. 1. But not before Commission Chair Larry Schoen laid some concerns on the table.

Schoen said he intends to put an override levy before county residents in May 2010 to defray the costs of supporting Blaine Manor, a 25-bed skilled nursing facility. Schoen said that the county can no longer afford to make up the difference between the facility's expenses and what it brings in through user fees and donations.

The county has been supporting Blaine Manor since 2000. Voters have approved that the facility be sold with the proceeds going to the Croy Canyon Ranch Foundation, which is trying to raise funds to build a new multi-level care facility.

Schoen also said that he is inclined to tap into a 3 percent property tax that's available to the county, reversing earlier statements that he wanted to do everything in his power this year not to ask taxpayers for additional property taxes.

Schoen said taking a 3 percent property tax increase is "nominal" in terms of what needs to be done in the long run.

"We're on an unsustainable course where we're spending more than we're taking in. And that's been the case for years," he said. Costs have mounted, he said, because the county added an administrator and added more programs demanding more staff, among other things.

"My view is we're in a very serious situation," he added.

Commissioner Tom Bowman said he was not ready to make a decision at this time.

Commissioner Angenie McCleary said that if the commissioners do ask for an override, she wants the community to understand that "it's not that we don't think Blaine Manor is important. Sometimes people equate reduction with something not having value," she said.

Schoen agreed and pointed out that the care facility had gotten highest ratings from the state.

The proposed budget for 2010 fiscal year is about the same as that of the $22.7 million budget approved last year for the 2009 fiscal year.

T.F. County sheriff's employees meet with commissioners, discuss PERSI

By Nichole Carnell
Times-News writer

Magicvalley.com

WATCH a video of the meeting.

The Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office Employee Association met with county commissioners Thursday morning to discuss a decision last month by commissioners to reject the adoption of the Public Employee Retirement System of Idaho.

Over the last two weeks, the employee association has taken steps to both learn about PERSI and the rejection, and to educate colleagues about the decision.

Commissioners welcomed members of the association to discuss the rejection and take steps to open communication between the commissioners' office and county employees.

Lori Stewart, speaking as a member of the association, said that although the association understands the decision for this year is final, it is ready to begin communicating for next year to ensure the employees are informed.

The decision was made with little employee input, said Stephanie Haas, criminal records supervisor; a decision the association believes should have been more openly communicated.

Commissioners admitted to a lack of communication, attributing the problem to bad timing and assumptions by commissioners that elected officials relayed the information, they said.

A reported $600,000 budget increase came with the introduction of PERSI this year, commissioners said; an increase the county would not be able to handle.

"I don't think we can afford that today," said Commissioner Tom Mikesell, "that might change."

Currently, county employees have retirement investments through stock-market dependent Nationwide insurance. Savings from the proposed switch allowed county employees to receive a 1 percent raise and the county to invest more into retirement plans, Commissioner George Urie said.

Overall, commissioners agreed that their rejection of PERSI was based on financial uncertainty.

"My primary reason was financial," Urie told the four association representatives at the meeting: Stewart, the public information officer for the sheriff's office, along with Lt. Daron Brown, Haas and Sgt. Scott Bishop.

Commissioners said they had concerns over PERSI's future rates, adding that PERSI is fixed, and if costs become too expensive, the county may be forced to dip into employees' wages, a risk they said all employees were not willing to take.

"It's a crystal ball," said Mikesell, "and it's pretty dang muddy."

Mikesell said his decision as a commissioner was based on what was best for Twin Falls County, which he admitted may not be the best for the county employees.

Stewart said the association will continue to forge ahead, realizing this year's decision is final.

The association plans to gain more information about PERSI and educate other employees for next year.

Open house set for new behavioral health clinic

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

TAKE PART

The open house is scheduled for 11 a.m. to noon Monday at Magic Valley Behavioral Health Clinic, 1102 Eastland Drive, Twin Falls.

A clinic that opened this year in Twin Falls to provide behavioral health services will have an open house for the public this Monday.

Magic Valley Behavioral Health Clinic, a joint effort by Family Health Services and St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center, has the goal of providing a variety of outpatient services in one location. The clinic opened in March.

"The reason the concept emerged was due to fragmentation in delivery of mental health services in the Magic Valley," said Dr. James Tyson, director of the clinic. "In many cases, it's not feasible for smaller mental health clinics to have the comprehensive mental health services we offer."

The clinic's staff has four psychiatrists, two psychologists, five licensed clinical social workers, and nursing and physician assistant employees.

The clinic is available to patients of all ages, including children. The services provided include considering the context of each patient's life and helping them in related areas. For example, with teens, areas of focus would include helping them with how they relate to adolescent peers and function in school.

The clinic has 18 rooms for patients and two additional testing rooms for psychological evaluations, said Shana Stevens, the office manager.

"What we've done and we've tried to build is a facility that anyone would feel comfortable utilizing," Tyson said.

At the open house, the public can have a tour of the building and ask questions about the clinic.

Law & Disorder...

...in Cassia County

From July 24 police reports: Graffiti:

A 57-year-old Burley man reported that someone vandalized his garage door.

"On the door, there was writing in black paint. It appeared to be painted on with a spray can. The writing read, 'Your dead old man,'" the report notes. Police asked the man if he had made any enemies lately.

He said no, according to the report, but "said that his locks were superglued in the key hole and someone had run over his wheel chair last winter." He further stated that he sometimes hears people yelling from the road.

According to the report, he also said "that tonight he was in the house and he heard a loud banging noise on his house. The banging caused a picture to fall off the wall. Someone was in the roadway and yelled, 'Hey, (expletive).'"

The man was told to call the police if anything similar happens again.

Information:

A 62-year-old Burley woman told police, according to the report, that "she heard a loud noise so she looked outside" and noticed a vehicle in her neighbor's driveway that "drove really slow northbound on Almo" and "made a lot of noise ... with an unknown amount of persons inside."

She asked her neighbor, a 76-year-old woman, if she heard a suspicious noise. The neighbor, according to the report, said she didn't hear any noise but said a female called her that morning and asked her for $300. The woman said she didn't have $300, and the caller hung up. It's unclear if the phone call relates to the loud car.

Bud Allen gave us back our heritage

He's one Idahoan in a million and a half. Eighty-year-old King Hill rancher Bud Allen invented the Three Island Crossing, retracing the perilous pioneer traverse of the Snake River at Glenns Ferry. The event will end Saturday after 24 years.

YOU DON'T SAY
Steve Crump

In 1986, Allen was the first man in more than a century to drive a wagon and oxen across the river. He repeated the feat every August, eventually attracting 2,000 spectators a year. The success of the crossing was partly responsible for the creation of the Oregon Trail History and Education Center in 2002.

In between crossings, Allen led a series of historically authentic wagon trains on trek across southern Idaho.

Born in American Falls, he was herding a neighbor's cows by age 5 — for 5 cents a day.

By 14, Allen was herding 17,000 cattle on the range scattered from Mountain Home to Fairfield.

After a short railroad career, he returned to King Hill to work for rancher Floyd Barnes. Allen also started a 13-year rodeo career.

After a three-year stretch in the Army, he landed a job at Mountain Home Air Force Base. By 1961, Allen had bought land near King Hill, built a house and started raising quarterhorses and cattle.

While riding fences all those years, he also became a cowboy poet. Here's one he shared with freelance writer Terrell Williams in 2000:

"The cold north wind was blowin' that late November day

When I hit upon the mountain to try and find that stray.

He's an ornery, pesky yearlin' that's always on the go.

'Bout the time I started ridin', it commenced to spittin' snow.

Now I'm way up on the mountain when I come across his track

I'll sell that ornery yearlin' if I ever get him back.

I'm cold and kind of hungry as I track him to this draw.

'Tis there I see a hunter's camp, a place where I can thaw.

Smoke's comin' from the stovepipe so I know there's someone here

I'll ask about my yearlin', tell him where to find a deer.

This guy comes out as I ride up and invited me inside.

He said, 'I'll make some coffee while you sit and warm your hide.'

Now he puts on this pot of coffee and while we wait for it to boil

He asks me would I care for a shot of Aimin' Oil.

Well I just look kind of puzzled and he started to explain:

If your drink enough of this stuff, it will really help your aim.

He said, 'I've been huntin' for a lot of years and never had no luck

Then I bought this jug of Aimin' Oil and I finally downed my buck.

Now his horns were kind of piny so I didn't save his head,

And while most deer are buckskin, his hide was solid red.'

Well I just set there sip-pin' Aimin' Oil, tryin' to figure out a way

I could tell this mighty hunter that his buck had been my stray ..."

Motorcycle rally planned for Bergdahl

Times-News

Idaho motorcyclists plan to rally for Bowe Bergdahl, the Hailey soldier captured by the Taliban in Afghanistan, with a bike ride on Saturday. POW*MIA Riders from Pocatello will lead the group from Pocatello, which will pick up riders at Loves Gas Station at the Interstate 84 Exit 211 in Heyburn at 9:45 a.m. It should arrive at the Flying J truck stop on U.S. Highway 93 at about 10:45 a.m. Organizers said the riders will leave the Flying J Truck Stop at 11:30 a.m. for Hailey, where it will arrive at about 1:30 p.m. The Wood River Fire and Rescue Firefighters' Association will then host a barbecue at Zaney's Coffee House, at 208 N. River St., where Bergdahl worked as a barista. Barbecue proceeds will go to a local firefighters association. Zaney's owner Sue Martin, who has acted as a liaison between Bergdahl's family and the media, said she thinks the event is a "wonderful show of support." "It's important to keep Bowe in everybody's hearts and minds right now," she said.

U.S. Postal Service might look for new revenue

By Randolf E. Schmid
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Postmaster General John Potter is trying to think outside the mailbox.

"We have a network of 37,000 retail outlets. America loves them and we want to keep as many open as possible, but we cannot just sell stamps in them," he told a Senate hearing Thursday.

The post office said Wednesday it has lost $4.7 billion so far this year and expects to be $7 billion in the red by the end of the fiscal year because of the recession and the movement of letters and bills to e-mail.

Several hundred offices are being studied for possible closing and the agency has proposed other cost-saving moves including cutting mail delivery to five days a week.

The Postal Service has sharply cut costs and staffing, Potter added, but also needs to look to additional sources of income.

He said in Australia people can renew driver's licenses in post offices, while Italians can do their banking and other countries' post offices handle insurance.

The U.S. post office is not exploring these particular ideas, he said, but "other countries faced with the same dilemma have explored these areas."

He suggested that Congress allow the post office to consider some activities that have not traditionally been part of the post office, adding he assumed that would come with limits or regulations.

"The real issue is about generating income from these facilities," Potter said. While Congress votes money for free mail delivery for the blind and to offer reduced rates to charities, the post office does not receive taxpayer funds for its operations.

The proposal to cut mail delivery to five days would save millions, Potter told the Senate federal services subcommittee of the Committee on Homeland Security and Governmental Affairs.

But, he added, post offices would be kept open on Saturdays, since that is the only day many people are free to go to these facilities. Mail would still be delivered to post-office boxes on Saturdays, he said, and large customers could pick up mail at post offices.

While the Internet has taken away a lot of first-class mail and the recession sharply reduced advertising mail, even worse has been a requirement imposed in 2006 that the post office contribute more than $5 billion annually to a fund to prepay medical benefits for retired workers. That is in addition to $2 billion paid annually for benefits for already retired employees.

Bills have been introduced to ease these payments at least temporarily.

But Postal Inspector General David C. Williams told the senators that the amount of the payments has no basis in need, but was set to make sure the post office did not make the federal deficit appear larger. The payments assume an unrealistic 7 percent annual inflation in medical costs, he said, while other businesses plan for 5 percent inflation. And they do not take into account the declining number of postal employees. Williams said the annual payments could be cut to $1.3 billion.

From about 803,000 workers in 1999, the post office has cut its staff to about 630,000 and Potter said the goal is about 550,000.

Jail: Polygamist leader's health improving

By Jennifer Dobner
Associated Press writer

SALT LAKE CITY — Officials from an Arizona jail say polygamous church leader Warren Jeffs remains on a feeding tube, but his health appears to be improving after eating a few meals.

Mohave County sheriff's spokeswoman Trish Carter said Jeffs ate a breakfast of eggs, potatoes and fruit Thursday morning. Jeffs has refused most food and liquids for more than a week as part of a self-imposed religious fast.

"As of today, the medical director did make a comment that it appears he is getting better," Carter said Thursday. "We are monitoring his intake, and he is cooperating on and off."

Medical staff at the Kingman, Ariz., jail began force-feeding the 53-year-old head of the Fundamentalist Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints last Friday after the jail doctor said she feared Jeffs' death could be "imminent" without medical intervention.

In a letter to a Mohave County Superior Court judge, Dr. Kirsten Mortenson said Jeffs' vital signs were poor and he was suffering from peripheral edema — a swelling of the extremities — caused by malnutrition.

In addition to breakfast Thursday, Jeffs ate a sandwich and an orange early Tuesday. A feeding tube remains in place and is providing liquid nutrition, Carter said. Staff is also forcing him to get up and walk for 20 minutes every two hours, sometimes outdoors in an exercise yard, she said.

Jeffs is in the jail awaiting trials on charges related to alleged underage marriages of polygamous sect girls.

Since coming to the jail in February 2008, Jeffs has typically fasted for "a couple of days" every two weeks, Carter said. During those periods, staff puts fruit and drinks in Jeffs' 7-by-12-foot cell. It's unclear how much he eats and drinks during those fasts, she said.

Deeply religious, the tall and slender Jeffs has often engaged in lengthy religious fasts throughout his incarceration, which began following an August 2006 arrest near Las Vegas. In Utah, where he was tried and convicted on two counts of rape as an accomplice in 2007, he lost some 30 pounds, suffered serious depression and attempted suicide by hanging. Long hours of prayer also once left Jeffs with ulcerated knees.

Utah physician and wilderness medicine expert Colin Grissom has never treated Jeffs, nor seen his medical charts, but said the church leader should recover from his current health problems.

Based on the available information, Grissom said he believed the jail's medical staff was justified in deciding to force-feed Jeffs. Death from starvation can occur after several weeks when a person is not eating, but dehydration can result in kidney failure and death in a shorter amount of time.

Husband denies wife's alcoholism in New York wrong-way crash

By Frank Eitman
Associated Press writer

GARDEN CITY, N.Y. — She couldn't have been drunk and stoned. Her husband had never seen her intoxicated before. And there were absolutely no marital problems that could have sent her over the edge.

In an anguished, sometimes angry news conference, Daniel Schuler refused to accept an autopsy report that showed his wife had the equivalent of 10 drinks and smoked marijuana within an hour of the wrong-way highway crash that killed her and seven other people.

"I never saw her drunk since the day I met her," Daniel Schuler told reporters at a press conference outside his attorney's office. "She was not a drinker. She was not an alcoholic."

He suggested anything from a stroke to gestational diabetes to even an abscessed tooth could have caused his wife to act irrationally in the hours before her death.

Diane Schuler, 36, drove the wrong way for nearly two miles on the Taconic State Parkway and struck a sport utility vehicle. The July 26 crash killed her 2-year-old daughter, three young nieces and three men in the SUV.

A broken 1.75-liter bottle of Absolut vodka was found in her wrecked minivan, police said.

Family of the men in the SUV had questioned how Schuler's family could have been oblivious to an alcohol abuse problem and suggested criminal charges were possible. An attorney for the victims' family didn't return calls Thursday.

A preliminary autopsy of Diane Schuler ruled out a stroke, heart attack, or aneurysm, Westchester County officials said. The medical examiner said Thursday that he stood by his report that found her blood-alcohol level was more than twice the state's legal limit, she still had undigested alcohol in her stomach, and she had high levels of the key ingredient in marijuana in her system.

Police said Thursday that Daniel Schuler wasn't cooperating with their investigation. Officers that came to Long Island "for a prearranged interview" were not allowed to question him.

Schuler's attorney, Dominic Barbara, didn't say when Schuler would be available for an interview.

Police interviewed him once last week.

Barbara said Diane Schuler was once diagnosed with gestational diabetes — which usually goes away after childbirth — had an undiagnosed lump on her leg and was suffering from an abscessed tooth for nearly two months. It was not clear how any of those maladies would prompt someone to become intoxicated.

Barbara — a divorce attorney who frequently appears on Howard Stern's radio show and who has represented

Joey Buttafuoco, actress Lindsey Lohan's father Michael and Victoria Gotti — suggested some sort of stroke may have led Diane Schuler to act irrationally. He noted witnesses who saw Schuler on the highway reported that she was driving erratically, moving in and out of lanes, honking her horn and flashing her headlights.

"This is not the actions of a person who is drunk. Something happened," Barbara said. "And I think something happened to her brain."

He said he couldn't explain the alcohol or marijuana in her system.

A substance abuse expert said Thursday that close family are sometimes the last to know about a loved one's problem.

"Families are often in denial and can't deal with the reality that a family member has a problem," said Marc Galanter, director of the Division of Alcoholism and Substance Abuse at New York University.

This undated photo shows Warren and Jackie Hance of Floral Park, N.Y., with their daughters, from left, Alyson, 7, Kate, 5, and Emma, 8. The Hance children were among the eight people killed in a fiery crash on July 26 when their aunt, Diane Schuler, plowed into an SUV while driving the wrong way on the Taconic Parkway in Westchester County, N.Y.

Jay Schuler, Daniel Schuler's sister-in-law, who said she and Diane were "best friends," said she never hesitated to leave her own child in Schuler's care. Schuler had been a nanny before becoming an executive with Cablevision, she said.

"She loved children, her nieces were her girls," Jay Schuler said. "There is no way she would ever jeopardize her children."

The Schulers' 5-year-old son survived. His father said the little boy is still hospitalized, but his condition is improving.

Daniel Schuler said the couple went through a normal routine on the Sunday before he last saw her at a campsite in upstate New York.

"She was fine," he said. "We had a cup of coffee in the morning, we packed the cars up like we always do and we headed out."

The family has not decided whether to seek another autopsy and is awaiting more information from the county's autopsy report, Barbara said.

The attorney declined to allow Daniel Schuler to answer any questions regarding the marijuana allegations, citing his client's job as a security officer for Nassau County.

Daniel Schuler, 37, began to break down emotionally as the press conference ended.

"I go to bed every night knowing my heart is clear," he said. "She did not drink. She is not an alcoholic. Something medically had to happen."

Daniel Schuler's eyes fill with tears during a press conference in Garden City, N.Y., Thursday. Schuler's wife, Diane, was drunk and high on marijuana when she drove the wrong way for almost two miles on a highway before smashing head-on into an SUV, killing herself and seven others, a prosecutor has said.

Experts: Women are drinking more, DUIs are up

By Lisa A. Flam
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — It seemed too horrendous even to imagine. But the case of the mother who caused a deadly wrong-way crash while drunk and stoned is part of a disturbing trend: Women in the U.S. are drinking more, and drunken-driving arrests among women are rising rapidly while falling among men.

And some of those women, as in the New York case, are getting behind the wheel with kids in the back.

Men still drink more than women and are responsible for more drunken-driving cases. But the gap is narrowing, and among the reasons cited are that women are feeling greater pressures at work and home, they are driving more, and they are behaving more recklessly.

"Younger women feel more empowered, more equal to men, and have been beginning to exhibit the same uninhibited behaviors as men," said Chris Cochran of the California Office of Traffic Safety.

Another possible reason cited for the rising arrests: Police are less likely to let women off the hook these days.

Nationwide, the number of women arrested for driving under the influence or alcohol or drugs was 28.8 percent higher in 2007 than it was in 1998, while the number of men arrested was 7.5 percent lower, according to FBI figures that cover about 56 percent of the country. (Despite the incomplete sample, Alfred Blumstein, a Carnegie Mellon University criminologist, said the trend probably holds true for the country as a whole.)

"Women are picking up some of the dangerously bad habits of men," said Chuck Hurley, CEO of Mothers Against Drunk Driving.

In New York's Westchester County, where Diane Schuler's crash killed her and seven other people last month, the number of women arrested for drunken driving is up 2 percent this year, and officers said they are noticing more women with children in the back seat.

"We realized for the last two to three years, the pattern of more female drivers, particularly mothers with kids in their cars, getting arrested for drunk driving," said Tom Meier, director of Drug Prevention and Stop DWI for the county.

In one case there, a woman out clubbing with her teenage daughter was sent to prison for causing a wrong-way crash that killed her daughter's friend.

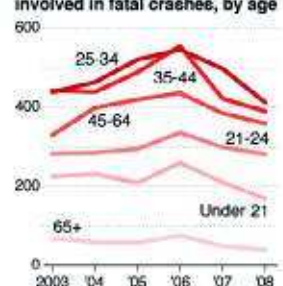

Another woman was charged with driving drunk after witnesses said she had been drinking all day before going to pick up her children at school. Authorities said the children were scared during

Driving drunk

The number of women arrested for driving under the influence increased significantly during the same period the numbers fell for men.

Driving under the influence arrests	1998	2007	CHANGE the ride, and once they got home, they jumped out of the car, ran to a neighbor's house and told an adult, who called police. The mother lay passed out in the car, and police said her blood alcohol level was 0.27 percent — more than three times the legal limit.

In California, based on the same FBI figures, women accounted for 18.8 percent of all DUI arrests in 2007, up from 13.5 percent in 1998, according to the California Office of Traffic Safety.

Nearly 250 youngsters were killed in alcohol-related crashes in the U.S. in 2007, and most of them were passengers in the car with the impaired driver, according to the National Highway Safety Administration.

"Drunk drivers often carry their kids with them," said MADD's Hurley. "It's the ultimate form of child abuse!"

After underwhelming first term, Otter will get a second chance

Will C.L. “Butch” Otter still be governor of Idaho in 2011? Can he want to.

None of the seven candidates so far declared for governor in 2010 can get elected. No mainstream Idaho Republican will challenge Otter, and the only Democrat who would be competitive — 1st District Congressman Walt Minnick — doesn’t want to be governor.

So does Otter want another round? Probably. He recently hired veteran GOP operative Brenda Maynard to be his campaign field director, and he raised more than $102,000 in campaign donations in the first six months of 2009.

Yet in the most Republican state in America, this is an elected official who gets just a 47 percent approval rating, according to a June survey by GOP pollster Greg Smith.

One of the mysteries of Idaho politics is how a public official of Otter’s charm, backed by an overwhelmingly Republican Legislature, has accomplished so little.

He’s floundered and been outmaneuvered on transportation and other issues, and has too often conceded the political initiative to the Legislature.

So why would Otter want a second term, especially when he would be 68 years old when he took his second oath of office?

That would make him the oldest second-term governor in Idaho history. By contrast, former Gov. Dirk Kempthorne was 51 when he was reelected. John Evans was 57, Cecil Andrus 43 and Robert Smylie 44.

Otter’s motivation, no doubt, is building his legacy. Andrus and Smylie achieved that in their second terms; Evans and Kempthorne not so much.

Kempthorne, easily rolled by the Legislature during his first term, stiffened his spine in his second. He vetoed frequently and launched initiatives with decidedly mixed results for Idaho.

His oversold Connecting Idaho enterprise — paying for ambitious road construction projects by borrowing money against future federal highway payments — is a shadow of its former self, and much of the money has been spent in the Treasure Valley. Legislative resentment of the Idaho Transportation Department rooted in Connecting Idaho made it impossible for Otter to secure enough highway repair money.

And with the help of his handpicked president of the Idaho State Board of Education, Kempthorne in 2003 launched a full-scale assault on the powers of the only Democratic statewide public official, Superintendent of Public Instruction Marilyn Howard. That backfired badly when the ed board couldn’t handle the added responsibilities and made a string of expensive mistakes.

By contrast, Democrat Andrus and Republican Smylie in their second terms reached out to members of the other party and achieved many of their goals.

The political landscape has shifted since then, but even GOP governors don’t accomplish much without building coalitions. In his second term, Otter could use his bully pulpit to promote causes such as early childhood education and better mental health services. Or he could hunker down and feud with the Legislature.

It’s been more than 80 years since the stars aligned so favorably for a Republican governor of Idaho. Between 1919 and 1930, Govs. D.W. Davis, Charles Moore and H.C. Baldrige enjoyed massive legislative majorities and overwhelming public support. But they didn’t accomplish much, leaving Idaho’s economy weaker at the beginning of the Great Depression than it was when they inherited it from Democrat Moses Alexander at the end of World War I.

There’s no reason Butch Otter can’t learn from mistakes — his own and those of others. But will he?

Our view:

Cecil Andrus and Robert Smylie were better second-term governors than they were in their first terms. How about Butch Otter?

Cash for clunkers could turn out to be a lemon

As a political ploy, the “Cash for Clunkers” program has been a rare and immediate success. As a stimulus, its more like a shiny sports car with four flat tires it looks great, but it may not get very far.

Officially known as the Car Allowance Rebate System, or CARS, the program offers motorists as much as $4,500 to exchange older vehicles for new, more fuel efficient ones. It began last month and was supposed to run through November but proved so popular that it apparently sopped up the $1 billion Congress had allocated for it in a matter of days.

On Monday, Ford attributed a 1.6 percent rise in July sales to the program, and local dealerships have been packed with prospective clunker swappers.

In other words, the program has done what most other federal initiatives such as those for mortgages, banking and small businesses have failed to do. It’s generated economic activity. It’s gotten people spending money, making purchases that benefit local employers.

It also purports to help the environment by improving the overall fuel efficiency of vehicles on the road because the gas guzzlers that are traded in must be destroyed.

So after months of bailouts and handouts, we finally have a stimulus that seemingly works.

The problem is the clunker program isn’t the sort of broad-based stimulus we need to get the sputtering economy running smoothly.

Stimulating auto sales certainly provides an economic boost, but it’s a limited one. It lacks the long-term benefit that, say, modifying mortgages would have. A car is a one-time purchase. A refinanced mortgage, however, frees cash for the household budget. Mortgage modifications are the stimulus that keeps on giving.

Yet Congress’ efforts on the that front have been far less successful. Last year’s Hope for Homeowners bill garnered just a few hundred applications for loan modifications in the first three months. The Obama administration allocated $75 billion for a revamped program after it took office, and its gotten mortgage companies to renegotiate several hundred thousand loans, but the number has done little to check the rising national foreclosure rate.

As a meaningful stimulus, the CARS program is itself something of a clunker.

The clunker program, by comparison, has lured tens of thousands of consumers to dealer lots. But once those consumers buy the new car, then what?

They leave with, in many cases, fresh debt that will — or at least should if the past nine months has taught them anything — make them all the more tight-fisted when it comes to other expenses.

Nor is the clunker exchange the economic boon it may seem for car companies. It brings a bitter icing to the bailout cake the government has been baking for General Motors and Chrysler since last year.

First came the capital infusions that began in December and were replenished in the spring. Then came the quickie bankruptcies fraught with government meddling. Now, we get the clunker program in what amounts to a backdoor bailout.

Given what taxpayers have invested in them, we need GM and Chrysler to innovate. That may not happen as quickly as it should if they see sales of their current models picking up. After all, it was the automakers’ reluctance to innovate their fixation on large, profitable gas-guzzling SUVs that left them vulnerable.

So while the clunker program may be getting people to buy cars, it’s not doing much to encourage Detroit to build better ones.

Congress is debating whether to allocate another $2 billion to the program. With so few stimulus efforts working, lawmakers hope to rally around the one that is.

But as a meaningful stimulus, the CARS program is itself something of a clunker. It’s providing the most stimulus where its needed least.

Have gun, will travel

Plaxico Burress, the former football star, appeared before a grand jury in New York this week to explain how he came to carry a concealed weapon into a nightclub.

Burress had cannily tucked his loaded pistol into the waistband of his sweatpants when he went out for a night on the town. The gun started to slip, as objects in waistbands are wont to do. When he grabbed it, he accidentally shot himself in the thigh.

This is what is known as a bad plan.

The reason I am bringing all this up is that Burress' spokespeople keep pointing out that he DID have a permit to carry a handgun in Florida. (It was expired, but as the waistband business demonstrates, this guy does not excel in attention to detail.)

So the story gives us an excellent entry into the question of whether states should be required to recognize other states' gun carry permits.

The Senate recently held a debate on just such a proposal, during which the sponsor, John Thune of South Dakota, said that if people from his state were able to go to New York and visit tourist attractions while carrying their concealed weapons, "Central Park would be a much safer place."

Turns out Central Park is way safer than South Dakota. There were no murders and three serious assaults in Central Park in 2008, compared with five murders and 341 assaults in Sioux Falls, S.D., alone.

The vote on the Thune amendment was 58-39 in favor, which, of course, in the Senate world means that it was defeated. But it will be back. These days, whenever Congress feels the yen for a good old-fashioned debate about a hot-button social issue, it goes for guns. This year, we have already been blessed with legislation giving people the right to carry concealed weapons in national parks. Maybe soon there will also be a Plaxico's Law, affirming that a gun permit, once granted, is good for a lifetime, just like Social Security numbers.

I like to think this gun obsession is progress of a sort, since it has almost completely replaced the offering of divisive gotcha amendments on abortion or gay rights.

Given the fact that lawmakers yelling about assault rifles and Glockes very seldom feel compelled to quote from the Bible, you'd think we could work toward a sensible national consensus on guns. Sen. Charles Schumer of New York offered to work on a compromise concealed-weapon bill that would only apply to truck drivers who haul valuable cargo around the country. Maybe, in turn, the other side would be a little more rational about regulating weapons sales at gun shows.

One barrier is the National Rifle Association, which is dedicated to the cause of making everybody as loony as possible on the subject. Another is the suspicion on the part of gun owners that people who favor gun control look down on them.

In that Senate debate, opponents of loosening the current laws did get a tad carried away, particularly when they kept equating carrying a concealed weapon with being a mass murderer. Sen. Robert Menendez of New Jersey claimed that the newly empowered gun owners coming into his state would be "like Richard Poplawski, the white supremacist, armed with an AK-47, who allegedly murdered three Pittsburgh police officers on his front porch."

Perhaps Menendez was having a bad day, what with a large chunk of the New Jersey Democratic Party teetering on the verge of indictment. But given the fact that nearly half the householders in America have guns, it doesn't make sense to suggest that they're all homicidal or that only good gun owners are the hunters. There are an estimated 250 million guns in America.

Jim Kessler of the Third Way, a nonpartisan think tank, noted that if the non-criminals only used them for hunting, "there wouldn't be a varmint left in the country."

Gun advocates tend to think of themselves as representatives of small-town or rural values. But their worldview is dark. Thune said he was worried that his daughter might have to drive home from college through states that would not allow her the protection of a pistol in the glove compartment. Sen. Jim Webb of Virginia fretted about his elderly father checking into a motel without a loaded gun to keep the criminals at bay.

In New York, I have never heard a single parent say they were afraid their kid couldn't make it home from school unarmed. However, we do worry a little bit about idiots wandering into nightclubs with Glockes tucked in their sweats.

California's reckoning — and ours

WASHINGTON — California's budget debacle holds a lesson for America, but one we will probably ignore. It's easy to attribute the state's protracted budget stalemate, now temporarily resolved with about $26 billion of spending cuts and accounting gimmicks, to the deep recession and California's peculiar politics. Up to a point, that's true. Representing an eighth of the U.S. economy, California has been harder hit than most states. Unemployment, now 11.6 percent (national average: 9.5 percent), could top 13 percent in 2010, says economist Eduardo Martinez of Moody's Economy.com. Meanwhile, the requirement that any tax increase muster a two-thirds vote in the Legislature promotes paralysis. Democrats prefer tax hikes to spending cuts, and Republicans can block higher taxes.

All this produced the recent drama: plunging tax revenues and the state's resulting huge budget deficits; endless negotiations between Gov. Schwarzenegger and legislative leaders; the deadlock that led the state to issue scrip (in effect, IOUs) to pay bills; and a final agreement on a 2009-10 budget. But there is also a bigger story with national implications. California has reached a tipping point. Its government made more promises than its economy can easily support. For years, state leaders papered over the contradiction with loans and modest changes. By overwhelming these expedients, the recession triggered an inevitable reckoning.

Here's the national lesson. There's a collision between high and rising demands for government services and the capacity of the economy to produce the income and tax revenues to pay for those demands. That's true of California, where poor immigrants and their children have increased pressures for more government services. It's also true of the nation, where an aging population raises Social Security and Medicare spending.

California is leading the transformation of politics into a form of collective torture: pay more (higher taxes), get less (lower services).

Make no mistake: The spending cuts and tax increases the state enacted to bridge its budget deficits are not cosmetic. In February, the Legislature agreed to a penny increase in the state sales tax, bringing the total — including local sales taxes — to about 9 cents or more. Top income tax rates, already among the highest in the country, were raised. So were motor vehicle registration fees. Spending cuts approved in February and July are deep. Together, the cuts equal almost 30 percent of the general revenue fund and will affect schools, prisons, colleges and welfare.

The state's liberal establishment is in mourning. California's student-teacher ratio, now about a third above the national average, will probably go even higher. The University of California system lost 20 percent of its state payments. It's raising tuition and student fees 9.3 percent, imposing salary reductions of 4 percent to 10 percent on more than 100,000 workers, and delaying faculty hires.

National parallels again seem apparent. Federal budget deficits predate the recession and, as baby boomers retire, will survive any recovery. Amazingly, the Obama administration would worsen the long-term outlook by expanding federal health insurance coverage.

California has pioneered this sort of delusion. The presumption was that a dynamic economy would pay for expansive government. But California's relative economic performance has actually deteriorated. In the 1980s, the state's economy grew much faster than the national economy; annual growth averaged 5.1 percent versus 3.1 percent. In the present decade, the gap is smaller — 2.9 percent versus 2.3 percent — and much of the state's advantage reflects the unsustainable housing boom, of which California was the epicenter.

On paper, the state could solve its budget problems by raising taxes further. But in practice, that might backfire by weakening the economy and tax base. California scores poorly in state ratings of business climate. In a CNBC survey, it ranked 32nd overall but last in "cost of business" and 49th in "business friendliness." IT and biotechnology remain strengths, but some traditional industries are struggling. High costs and tax breaks from other states have caused movie studios to shift production from California. In 1996, feature films involved 14,500 production days in the Los Angeles area, says FilmL.A.; the 2008 figure was half that.

So California is stretched between a precarious economy and a strong popular desire for government. The state's wrenching experience suggests we should begin to pare back government's future commitments to avoid a similar fate. But California's experience also suggests we'll remain in denial until the fateful reckoning arrives sometime in the unimagined future.

Sex, drugs and rocking chairs

More than 30 years ago, in Arkansas, a sociologist proposed to a group of nursing home operators that they set aside "privacy rooms" for their residents to do whatever it is that consenting adults do in private. Professor Eddie Hargrove maintained that hand-holding, kissing and petting "probably would go further than a little medication at 10 o'clock at night" according to The New York Times.

The nursing home operators all rejected this idea then, and it apparently has not gained ground since.

Flash forward a generation, and an advocate for medical marijuana asked me recently if — in my role as a psychologist in long-term care facilities — I had ever seen it used in nursing homes. I could only lamely reply, "That's about as likely as sex."

I'm not an expert on sex, and I'm not a lawyer, but where is the law that says you forfeit your rights and liberties at the nursing home door?

There is one that I know of. In fact, the law says you retain the right to a sex life wherever you reside.

The federal government — which pays for most long-term care — enacted the Nursing Home Reform Act of 1987, mandating that continued federal funding for a nursing home required the institution to maintain an environment in which each resident can "attain and maintain his or her highest practicable physical, mental and psychosocial well-being."

In addition to specifying that certified nursing homes provide basic services, the law also contains a Residents' Bill of Rights that includes the right to privacy and the accommodation of personal needs.

Many states have followed up with a further enumeration of individual rights in long-term care. In California, the Welfare and Institutions Code specifies residents have the right "to live in an environment that enhances personal dignity, maintains independence and encourages self-determination," and "to participate in activities that meet individual physical, intellectual, social and spiritual needs."

Then why is it so hard to remain sexually active in a nursing home?

First, it's hard to find privacy. Doors are always open; a closed one is viewed with the suspicious eyes of a teenager's mother wondering what's going on in there. I recently had a resident referred to me for masturbating in front of an aide who walked into the room. Why did she walk in without knocking? Well, you can't knock on an always open door. And in your room — typically shared with a total stranger — you have only a curtain for privacy.

When I'm having a session with a resident in a nursing home — even with the door closed — it's quite common for an aide to walk in and start making up the bed. The custodian might appear next with a mop, followed by the cable guy fiddling with the TV.

Unless you're into exhibitionism, it's hard to imagine consenting adult residents having sex under these conditions. One nursing home — the Hebrew Home at Riverdale in New York — established, in 1995, a policy recognizing the right to "sexual expression," and it's often trotted out as the progressive example. But in the dozens of nursing homes I've visited, I've heard lip service to privacy but little action. My colleagues in other states confirm my impressions.

In the typical nursing home, it's rare to hear the word "sex" without it being modified by "inappropriate" or "offense."

There may be an "ick" factor when we think about elders having sex. But a University of Chicago survey, "A Study of Sexuality and Health Among Older Adults in the United States," concluded old people — given the opportunity — are as likely to be sexually active as the young, and well into their 70s and 80s. But not in nursing homes.

It's easy to slip into the mind-set that because these people are in institutions, this gives us free rein to decide what's best for them. But people in nursing homes retain the same rights as the rest of us to mess up or enhance their lives with sex.

I sometimes think of aging — particularly in nursing homes — as childhood in reverse: going from independence to dependence and paternalistic control. As my baby boomer generation starts to fill up these institutions over the next couple of decades, I hope we continue to insist on our cherished rights of self-expression. In the meantime, does it make sense that it's easier to get a conjugal visit in a jail than in a nursing home?

Pakistan, U.S. check reports of Taliban chief's death

By Zazar Khan and Ishtiaq Mahsud
Associated Press writers

ISLAMABAD — U.S. and Pakistani authorities were investigating reports that Pakistani Taliban chief Baitullah Mehsud was killed in an American missile strike, officials from both countries said Thursday.

If confirmed, Mehsud's demise would be a major boost to Pakistani and U.S. efforts to eradicate the Taliban and al-Qaida.

Mehsud is believed responsible for dozens of suicide attacks, beheadings and target killings in Pakistan. He is allied with al-Qaida and has been suspected in the killing of former Pakistani Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto.

Pakistan views him as its top internal threat and has been preparing an offensive against him. The U.S. sees him as a danger to the war effort in Afghanistan, largely because of the threat he is believed to pose to nuclear-armed Pakistan.

The missile strike hit the home of Mehsud's father-in-law in Pakistan's South Waziristan tribal region early Wednesday. Intelligence officials say Mehsud's second wife was among at least two people killed, and Mehsud associates have claimed he was not among the dead.

Pakistan army spokesman Maj. Gen. Athar Abbas cautioned the reports of Mehsud's death were still unconfirmed. "We are receiving reports and probing," he said.

The U.S. government was also looking into the reports, according to a U.S. counterterrorism official who spoke on condition of anonymity because he was not authorized to discuss the investigation publicly.

The counterterrorism official indicated the United States did not yet have physical evidence — remains — that would prove who died. But he said there are other ways of determining who was killed in the strike. He declined to describe them.

For years, the U.S. has considered Mehsud a lesser threat to its interests than some of the other Pakistani Taliban, their Afghan counterparts and al-Qaida, because most of his attacks were focused inside Pakistan, not against U.S. and NATO troops in Afghanistan.

That view appeared to change in recent months as Mehsud's power grew and concerns mounted that increasing violence in Pakistan could destabilize the U.S. ally and threaten the entire region.

In March, the State Department authorized a reward of up to $5 million for the militant chief. And increasingly, American missile strikes focused on Mehsud-related targets.

While Mehsud's death would be a big blow to the Taliban in Pakistan, he has deputies who could take his place. Whether a new leader could wreak as much havoc in Pakistan as Mehsud could depends largely on how much pressure the Pakistani military continues to put on the Taliban network, especially in South Waziristan.

IDACORP earnings rise on base rate increases

Energy demand declines as hydroelectric generation increases

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

Favorable regulatory decisions and above average reservoir levels boosted the bottom line of Idaho's largest utility during the second quarter of 2008.

IDACORP, Inc., the holding company for the Idaho Power

Company, reported a second quarter net income in 2009 of $27.5 million, or 58 cents per share, compared to $17.5 million or 39 cents per share for the second quarter ending on June 30.

Idaho Power Company, IDACORP's principal subsidiary, reported second quarter net income of $26.3 million compared to $17.7 million in 2008.

According to the company's performance summary, an increase in the base rate paid by customers and improved reservoir levels for hydroelectric generation helped boost net income.

In a conference call Thursday, the company said hydroelectric generation was 22 percent higher than the previous year.

"We were able to deliver improved financial results over last year despite the current economic environment," said J. LaMont Keen, president and CEO of IDACORP, Inc. and the Idaho Power Company. "Our focus on the fundamentals such as enhanced cost management, timely recovery of infrastructure investment and positive regulatory outcomes resulted in improved earnings."

He said IDACORP is continuing to make infrastructure investments to strengthen reliability and ensure adequate future energy supplies.

"Additionally, we remain active on the regulatory front with strategic filings before both the Idaho and Oregon public utilities commissions," Keen said.

The full impact of increased revenues from recent regulatory decisions was partially offset by declining demand.

Darrel Anderson, IDACORP and Idaho Power Senior Vice President of Administrative Services and CFO, said total energy bills for residential customer declined 8 percent compared to 2008.

New home construction rises again in S-C Idaho

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

New home construction in south-central Idaho increased for the second consecutive month as builders rushed to fill the demand for lower priced homes.

The city of Twin Falls approved 20 construction permits for new homes in July — a nearly 40 percent increase compared to the same month last year.

The city of Jerome issued seven permits for new-home construction, compared to four permits in July 2008.

The city of Burley issued one permit for new home construction.

New-home construction permits are an indicator of the number of new homes that will enter the market in coming months.

Builders say it's too soon to say if residential construction in the region is rebounding from the worst slump on record, but they say there is an obvious increase in buyers seeking homes between $130,000 to $150,000.

Monte Jones, director of sales and marketing for TKO

Custom Homes, said the company's newest subdivision, South Estates, on Orchard Drive, has seen strong sales this summer because of lower prices.

"We priced the homes in that area around $150,000, and that seems to be what people are looking for," he said. "We sold all the homes that are built, and we still have 20 starts that are ready to go."

However, real estate agents say that the new home construction is leaving a glut of existing homes on the market — particularly higher priced homes.

Jeff Duggan, president and CEO of the Greater Twin Falls Association of Realtors, said that homes that are priced above $150,000 are sitting on the market for six months, or more.

The median price of a new home permit that was approved in Jerome was about $120,000, while the median price in Twin Falls was $162,000.

Sluggish July sales show tight-fisted consumers

By Anne D'Innocenzo
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Shoppers remained tight-fisted in July, resulting in sluggish sales for many merchants and raising concern about the back-to-school shopping season's health.

As merchants reported their sales figures Thursday, mall-based chains continue to be hit hardest as consumers focus on necessities. Among the disappointments were Macy's Inc. and teen retailers Abercrombie & Fitch Co. and Wet Seal Inc.

Among the few bright spots was discounter TJX Cos., operator of the T.J. Maxx and Marshalls chains, which reported a sales gain that exceeded Wall Street estimates.

"The consumer is stressed and depressed," said Ken

Senate votes to fill up 'cash for clunkers'

Analysts say vehicle prices are rising as inventories shrink

By David Espo
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Pedal to the metal, Congress sent President Obama legislation Thursday night with an additional $2 billion for "cash for clunkers," the economy-boosting rebate program that caught the fancy of car buyers and instantly increased sales for an auto industry long mired in recession.

The Senate approved the money on a 60-37 vote after administration officials said an initial $1 billion had run out in only 10 days. The House voted last week to keep alive the program, which gives consumers up to $4,500 in subsidies if they trade in cars for new, more energy-efficient models.

Without action, lawmakers risked a wave of voter discontent as they left the Capitol for a monthlong vacation.

The Senate's action capped an unusually swift response by lawmakers, who were informed scarcely a week ago that the program was quickly running short of money.

In advance of the final vote, the bill's supporters worked to defeat numerous proposed modifications to the program. "We all know that if we change the bill, it will die," Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., told reporters a few hours before debate began. "We are going to do everything we can to stop that."

Among the proposed changes was one to place the car-buying subsidies

New jobless claims drop more than expected

WASHINGTON — The number of newly-laid off workers seeking unemployment insurance fell last week, the government said Thursday, fresh evidence that layoffs are easing.

The Labor Department said that initial claims for jobless benefits dropped to a seasonally adjusted 550,000 for the week ending Aug. 1, down from an upwardly revised figure of 588,000 in the previous week.

That's much lower than analysts' estimates of 580,000, according to a survey by Thomson Reuters. The four-week average of claims, which smooths out fluctuations, dropped to 555,250, its lowest level since late January.

The tally of people continuing to claim benefits rose, however, by 69,000 to 6.3 million, the department said, after dropping for three straight weeks. The continuing claims data lags initial claims by a week.

Many economists expect initial claims to continue to decline this year.

"Claims should fall over the next few months, as the

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Fannie Mae seeks $10.7 billion in U.S. aid after 2Q loss

WASHINGTON - Fannie Mae says it needs an additional $10.7 billion in government aid after posting a loss of $15.2 billion in the second quarter as the taxpayer bill from the housing market bust keeps growing.

The mortgage finance company, seized by federal regulators last September, posted a quarterly loss of $2.67 per share. That compares with a loss of $2.6 billion, or $2.54 per share, in the year-ago period.

The results were driven by $18.8 billion in credit losses due to declining housing market conditions. The request for federal aid is Washington-based Fannie Mae's third since the takeover. It has received about $34 billion so far.

SEC: Ex-AIG CEO Greenberg settles fraud charges

NEW YORK - The Securities and Exchange Commission said Thursday that former American International Group Inc. CEO Maurice "Hank" Greenberg agreed to pay a $15 million fine to settle fraud charges.

The charges are tied to an accounting scandal earlier this decade at AIG that led to Greenberg's ouster in 2005. The following year, AIG paid more than $1.6 billion to settle charges of improper accounting.

The case is unrelated to the government bailout of AIG, which is in the process of trying to sell off assets to pay off the $182.5 billion in loans it has received since last September.

The SEC said AIG's former chief financial officer, Howard Smith, will pay a $1.5 million fine tied to the investigation.

Demand rises for government consumer credit program

WASHINGTON - Investors' appetite picked up this month for a government program aimed at spurring lending to consumers and small businesses at lower rates.

The Federal Reserve Bank of New York said Thursday that investors requested $6.9 billion worth of loans. That tally is up from $5.4 billion worth of loans requested last month.

Investors use the money to buy newly issued securities backed by, among other things, auto and student loans, credit cards, business equipment and loans guaranteed by the Small Business Administration.

The Term Asset-Backed Securities Loan Facility, or TALF, started in March and figures prominently in efforts by the Fed and the Obama administration to ease credit problems. It has the potential to generate up to a $1 trillion in lending.

AIG Director Golub will replace Liddy as company chairman

NEW YORK - AIG says Director Harvey Golub on Monday will become its non-executive chairman, replacing retiring Chairman Edward M. Liddy.

Golub, 70, was elected to the AIG board in May 2009. He was chairman and CEO of American Express Co. from 1993 to 2001.

New York-based American International Group Inc. announced in May that Liddy, who took over the insurer in September, would step down as soon as a search for a replacement was complete.

AIG's annual shareholder meeting is June 30. At that time, investors will vote on a slate of new independent directors.

accounts and slumping home prices have made them focus on necessities like food and other basics. But stores are also grappling with a newly adopted frugality as consumers - even those with secure jobs - learn how to save money and stick to a budget.

A number of special factors also depressed July's sales results. Lean inventories left fewer clearance options for bargain hunters, as stores wanted to protect themselves from getting stuck with piles of leftovers. The shift of the sales-tax holidays from July to August in most of the 14 states that have them because of a late Labor Day weekend also stole momentum from July.

Frank Badillo, senior economist at consulting group TNS Retail Forward, and other analysts have also noted that the uptick in car buying spurred by the government's "cash for clunkers" program might siphon sales from other categories like clothing and home furnishings. That could hurt back-to-school shopping as consumers shift available cash to car payments.

A monthly compilation of more than 50 retailers' results by The International Council of Shopping Centers and Goldman Sachs showed overall same-store sales fell 5.0 percent in July compared with the year-ago period. Same-store sales are sales at stores open at least a year and are considered a key indicator of a retailer's health.

July's pace was in line with the 5.1 percent drop in June and worse than the 4.5 percent decline averaged since February, the beginning of retailers' fiscal calendar.

July's decline marks the 11th consecutive monthly drop when excluding Wal-Mart results - which had buoyed the industry in the spring before it stopped reporting monthly numbers.

Merchants are seeing indications that sales decreases are easing. However, business remains weak even amid signs of economic stabilization.

A worrisome sign for merchants - and the broader economy of which consumer spending makes up 70 percent - is a 1.2 percent decline in consumer off-limits to the wealthy. As the program stands, Microsoft founder Bill Gates can get $4,500 to buy a new car, said Sen. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa. "You have to ask, is this a wise way to spend limited amounts of money?"

Republicans readied amendments to terminate the Troubled Assets Relief Program that has spent billions bailing out banks and other financial institutions, and to require the government to sell its stake in General Motors Co. and Chrysler Group LLC.

The program began 10 days ago with $1 billion, designed to help automobile makers and consumers while contributing to a cleaner environment. The government said Wednesday that more than $775 million of the original funds has been spent, accounting for the sale of nearly 185,000 new vehicles. Administration officials estimate the extra funding will last into Labor Day.

Under the program, passenger car owners are eligible for a voucher worth $3,500 if they trade in a vehicle getting 18 miles per gallon or less for a new car getting at least 22 mpg. Vouchers of $4,500 are available for owners who trade in a passenger car getting 18 mpg or less for a model that gets at least 28 mpg.

There are similar guidelines for SUVs and pickup trucks.

Dealers are barred from reselling the old models, and are charged with assuring their destruction.

Jeremy Anwyl, CEO of the auto Web site Edmunds.com, said the unintended result is that vehicle prices are climbing. "What we've created now is a shortage for key models," he said. "Prices are going up dramatically."

Dedication T.F. Co. Fair honors Masters, Brown honored

By John E. Swayze
Times-News correspondent

FILER — His civic-minded generosity and auctioneering skill have benefited countless events and organizations around the Magic Valley.

On Monday, the Twin Falls County Fair Board recognized Buhl resident Lyle Masters for five decades of service by naming the fairground's sale barn and arena in his honor.

"Not often does one man come around who donates his time so unselfishly to his community," said Twin Falls County Fair Board Chairman Ralph Denton. "The board saw it very fitting to dedicate the sale arena to Lyle Masters."

Masters was part of FFA in high school and achieved distinction as a state farmer, but admits he wasn't too involved with fair activities. Since then, he served eight years, 1996-2003, as a member of the fair board and has always been willing to help in other areas.

chutes were built for Shouse Arena and a canvas top was installed over one of the smaller animal show rings. Around 1997 the board began work on plans to build an event center on fairground property, but the bond to finance construction has yet to win voter approval.

"The center was one of the first things I was confronted with when I came on the board," he said. "I've always felt bad that we haven't been able to get it passed, because it would be a great asset to the community."

Masters has also continued as auctioneer for the Twin Falls County 4-H and FFA Junior Market Animal Sale Program's fat stock sale. He also keeps the action moving during the Magic Valley Dairy Heifer Program auction held every Saturday during the fair.

"I love the fair and have been a supporter all my adult life," he said. "I made a lot of friends on the board from all over the Magic Valley and miss working with such a great bunch of people who works so hard to make it a success every year."

Fair Board members also presented the family of Wallace Brown, who passed away in March, with a certificate of appreciation for his contributions to the fair and 4-H beef program. Brown was honored in 2007 by having his name placed on the sale barn and arena. This year the board and members of the Brown family agreed that it would be more appropriate to transfer his name to the fairground's 4-H and FFA Beef Barn. ## Mud races return to Castleford

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

CASTLEFORD — For the fifth annual Shakin' the Rock mud races at the Buhl Bunch Car Show in Castleford, coordinator Cliff Lockhart wanted to bring in something special for the wildly popular sport.

"This year we've got a special attraction — we've got Lil' Camino coming," Lockhart said. "This is a full-bore alcohol mud racer."

The car, owned and raced by Carl Erickson of Soda Springs, will likely tear through the 150-foot mud pit in under two seconds, said Lockhart.

"This will be special," Lockhart said.

The car is just one of 100 expected at this year's mud races, held Saturday and Sunday in the field just west of Jean's Park in Castleford.

Lockhart said the races, part of the Dirty Idaho Racing Toys (DIRT) circuit, are pulling drivers from across the state and beyond.

DIRT was developed by Lockhart this year; Castleford is just one stop along the circuit, which includes Richfield, Bliss, Payette and Mountain Home.

"We just keep bringing in bigger motors," Lockhart said.

The mud races, which cost $35 to enter, begin with a mandatory driver meeting at

These recurring nasal polyps were not so benign

DEAR DR. GOTT: In the late 1970s to early 1980s, I had symptoms of nasal polyps. I had to have them removed three times over a period of eight years. After the third removal, the doctor sent out a biopsy.

The growth was determined to be an inverting papilloma. My doctor then sent me to get an X-ray, and it was found that there was a tumor the size of a golf ball in my left maxillary sinus cavity. I was told that the "polyps" were its roots that were being sent out through my nasal cavity. They were growing back every time they were chopped off. I had to have facial surgery in 1986 to remove the tumor.

I have been fine ever since. I know of three other people at my workplace who had similar ailments. They all had surgery, but they died as results of their tumors, so please let other people with recurring polyps know about this condition.

DEAR READER: Most nasal polyps are benign growths that cause few, if any, symptoms. Larger polyps can block the sinuses, causing breathing difficulties, frequent sinus infections, allergy-like symptoms and a loss of smell. They are most common in allergy sufferers, asthmatics or other people who experience frequent or chronic nasal/sinus problems. They are not cancerous and are rarely the result of nasal tumors.

Inverting papillomas (IPs) are the most common form of a rare set of nasal tumors known as sinonasal papillomas (SPs). Of all primary nasal tumors, SPs comprise up to only 4 percent of all cases. Approximately 70 percent of SPs are classified as IPs, which means that approximately one out of every 100,000 people has the condition, making it very rare.

At this time, surgery is the primary treatment option for these types of

Buhl library reading program wraps up

The Summer Reading Program at the Buhl Public Library offered participants a variety of experiences.

Participants were also entertained by the Buhl Basque Dancers, who performed Basque dances in costumes. The library finished the program with a carnival, homemade root beer and hot dogs.

Guest readers included: library board member Ellen Asay, teachers Judy Juker and Dottie Henkelman, and Louise Nofziger.

After-school book club members were: Madison Somer, Carlee Finney, Keri and David Harker, Trey Barger, Drake Christensen, Garrett and Morgan Montgomery and Jackson and Alison Hauser. Volunteers included: Kari Kaster, Judy Pike, Ruth Ann Harker, Jennifer Okleberry and Melody Young.

Prosecutors say Michael Douglas' son sold meth

NEW YORK — Michael Douglas' son traveled coast to coast dealing large quantities of methamphetamine before his arrest last month, according to a criminal complaint made public Thursday. The complaint in federal court in Manhattan alleges that Cameron Douglas was paid tens of thousands of dollars trafficking the drug since 2006. Cash and drugs were routinely exchanged through shippers like FedEx, the court papers said. The 30-year-old son of the Oscar-winning actor was arrested July 28 at the trendy Hotel Gansevoort in Manhattan. Federal authorities have refused to discuss whether Cameron Douglas remains behind bars or any other aspect of the case. The complaint drawn up by a Drug Enforcement Administration agent details allegations based on information provided by three unnamed crystal meth users and dealers. The users — including someone who once worked for Cameron Douglas — have pleaded guilty and agreed to cooperate with the investigation.

Jackson double fooled secret police in 1988

BERLIN — A document obtained by the AP last week from the archives of the East German Stasi shows that the feared secret police agency monitored Michael Jackson as he visited

Checkpoint Charlie in the center of divided Berlin on June 18, 1988. It was the day before the pop star was to give a concert in West Berlin, and Stasi officials had security concerns. But it turns out the Communist secret police were actually taking pictures of a double who was part of an elaborate German television stunt to gauge Jackson hysteria in Berlin, according to information from Sat.1 television Thursday.

Aerosmith singer Tyler falls off stage

STURGIS — Aerosmith's Steven Tyler suffered head, neck and shoulder injuries in a tumble from the stage at a South Dakota show, a concert spokesman said Thursday, and the audience thought it was part of his hip-shaking act until he didn't get up. Tyler, 61, fell several feet while entertaining the crowd by dancing around as the sound crew replaced a fuse that blew during the song "Love in an Elevator," said Mike Sanborn, spokesman for the Buffalo Chip Campground, which hosted the Wednesday night concert. An amateur video showed him spinning around before falling off the stage. A concertgoer said Tyler's head was bleeding and he was holding his shoulder after the fall, but it wasn't immediately clear how seriously he was hurt. The frontman was airlifted to Rapid City Regional Hospital, Sanborn said, the only major hospital in western South Dakota. The band's next concert, which was scheduled for Friday in Winnipeg, Manitoba, was postponed.

Debbie Edgers Sturges will go anywhere in the world for a portrait sitting.

The Hailey artist has spent a week on the beach in Katmai National Park near Kodiak, Alaska, capturing the essence of Alaska's grizzlies with her camera and paintbrush. She's gone to the equator on the African continent for portraits of elephants, cheetahs and lions.

And last fall she rode a tundra buggy — a huge snow coach with wide wheels — to Hudson Bay so she could create portraits of polar bears.

came so close that she was warned not to hang over the edge for fear they might grab her.

"It was kind of magical. It was like going down Alice in Wonderland's hole and popping up and seeing all these magnificent animals who have adapted to snow and ice," she

A fine day for bluegrass

HEYBURN — Heyburn's Amphitheater Committee has pulled together a dandy afternoon for families: a concert of bluegrass and more that is totally free. This is an ambitious group with dreams for expansion.

On Saturday afternoon at Riverside Park and Amphitheater, three groups will perform beginning at 3:30, with Joshua Crosby and Lonesome Dove. There will be food vendors, a bounce house for the kiddies and a chance to visit

Tonight, a free bluegrass jam session is open to musicians of all skill levels and begins at 7 p.m. at the amphitheater. Both the Bluegrass Festival and jam session are at Riverside Park, which is adjacent to the Mini-Cassia Chamber of Commerce, near the Burley-Heyburn bridge. Joshua Crosby, scheduled for 3:30 p.m., has an edgy country tenor voice and many original songs. His song "Feeling It" says it all: "I'm doing things to open my own doors."

At 6:15 p.m., Soles Rest with Spike Erickson from Idaho's Soles Rest is back by popular demand. Toe-tapping bluegrass is the group's forte, and be prepared to laugh at their silly jokes.

said. "We saw arctic fox, ptarmigan, snowy owls, seals and, of course, the polar bears, which are so majestic and powerful."

Sturges will have many of her animal portraits at the 41st Sun Valley Center Arts and Crafts Festival this weekend. The festival, named one of the top 100 outdoor juried festivals in the nation by Art Fair Source Book, will be held Friday through Sunday at Atkinsons' Park in Ketchum.

The park is located near Hemingway Elementary School at Eighth Street and Third Avenue.

This year's show will feature everything from painted tools to funky hats to unique drums created by artists from across the nation.

The festival will also feature the work of several Wood River Valley artists: Sturges, Kary Kjesbo, Michele Black and Terrance Deemer, Jennifer Bellinger and Melissa Graves Brown.

They were chosen from hundreds of applicants, said Festival Director Britt Udesen.

"They've got roughly two hours," said Chris James, committee chairman.

"Then Marcus Meek at 5:30 for half an hour. There will be a trio also that will play some gypsy jazz for a few minutes."

J.D. Webb and the Downstate Wranglers, a Washington group, will wind it up, starting at 8:30 p.m. Be sure to listen for "Skookumchuck" for some fancy picking and "Kentucky Mandolin" to set your feet tapping.

Gossner's Magic Valley Chalet will sell ice cream, and Polo's will be there with the tacos and other foods served at Polo's Restaurant.

If the Fourth of July celebration put together by this committee is any example, this will be a lot of fun. Committee members John Berglund, James, Earl Andrew and Brian Duncan, and secretary Deb Hopkins, have put in some long brainstorming sessions coming up with ideas.

Berglund remembered Heyburn's Fourth of July fondly.

"I started photographing as (Soles Rest) started warming up, and as they played, more and more people came. They moved up close to see them," he recalled. "Pretty soon there were kids dancing. It was really cute."

The committee has dreams for the future.

Author shares her idea for 'patient capital' in Ketchum

Times-News

Part coming-of-age story, part blueprint for effecting real change, Jacqueline Novogratz's book "The Blue Sweater: Bridging the Gap between Rich and Poor in an Interconnected World" uses the unanticipated international journey of one article of clothing to explore what it means to live in a globally conscious way.

The author and philanthropist will talk about her efforts to solve global poverty at a book signing on Monday at 6 p.m. at the Community Library in Ketchum. The talk is presented by the Sun Valley Center for the Arts and admission is free. Space is limited.

Novogratz's global awakening came about when she spotted a young boy in Africa wearing a sweater she'd given to Goodwill eleven years earlier, with her name still on the tag inside. Seeing her sweater in Rwanda was ample evidence of how we are all connected and how our actions touch people across the globe even if we never know or meet them.

She will share anecdotes from her travels in Africa, India and Pakistan on her quest to understand and address global poverty. She now works as a venture capitalist, trying to make a difference in countries where the average citizen lives on less than $4 a day. She is founder of the Acumen Fund, a nonprofit global venture fund that exemplifies a new form of philanthropy called "patient capital," which aims to make people self-sufficient.

Senator Bill Bradley (D-N.J.) is among the public figures who have praised Novogratz's work and her book. "The stories she shares about the people she has met show the nobility of the human spirit and the breadth of the desire to stop suffering, to feed the hungry, to care for the sick, to empower the poor — in short, to make the world a better place," he said in a Sun Valley Center press release.

Sun Valley Center Director of Development Sally Boettger added that Novogratz is a good fit for The Center because "we try to give the community ways to explore topics of interest and relevance to our times through the varied lenses of visual arts, performing arts and humanities programs."

SV Symphony inspires poems from Ketchum woman

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

Sue McCollum is fond of saying that one art form begets another.

And in this Ketchum woman's case, the Sun Valley Summer Symphony concerts have spawned a book of poetry.

"I've been writing about the symphony for 15 years and I decided this is the year to put it together in book form as my gift to the community," said McCollum.

The poems reflect some of Sue's memories over the symphony's 25 years, including the night a horn player played a garden hose, the vigorous violin playing of Joshua Bell, the volunteers who usher patrons to their seats, the opening of the Sun Valley Pavilion and conductor Alasdair Neale.

"...His hands are like feathers as they glide through the air, caressing each note with great love and care..." she writes.

Pictures of renowned glass artist Dale Chihuly's sculptures illustrate the book. The photographs are representative of the stages the symphony has gone through from that first concert to the old symphony tent to the new pavilion.

"Sun Valley Summer Symphony" costs $16.95 at Iconoclast Books, Ketchum Kitchens, the Sun Valley Lodge Gift Shop, Chapter One Bookstore, Atkinsons' Markets, the Sun Valley Summer Symphony and online at www.suemccollum.com

Profits from the book will benefit McCollum's My Blue Dots cancer research project.

Gender-bending cowboys and spiritual showgirls headline Ketchum gallery walk

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

Deborah Oropallo takes history and distorts it.

She's dressed iconic figures like Napoleon Bonaparte in petticoats, aprons, corsets and other symbols of womanhood, then superimposed a women's face on them as she's elevated maids, nurses and the like to positions of nobility.

Now the California artist has focused her art on cowboys — the symbol of the American West.

She's erased the faces, creating an invisible man-like aura. And she's layered fishnet stockings, lacy shawls and even brassieres over the chaps and rodeo clown outfits.

Her "Wild Wild West Show," as she calls it, is one of the focal points of tonight's Gallery Walk in Ketchum. Oropallo will be present from 5 to 8 tonight as the exhibition opens at the Gail Severn Gallery, 400 1st Ave. N. She will take part in a free Artist's Chat at 10 a.m. Saturday at the Gallery.

Oropallo creates her art using the most contemporary "paintbrush" available — the computer. She downloads dozens of images of boots, cowboy hats and other cowboy paraphernalia from the web, then manipulates them digitally and layers them as she creates her "paintings" on aluminum.

The finished product images, such as an invisible cowgirl in a pink bikini top and pink Levis stepping through a lasso, would have been difficult — even impossible — using traditional darkroom techniques.

"It's perfect for this area because we're living in the West," said gallery owner Gail Severn. "Clients come to Idaho because they want a taste of the West. Deborah offers this while putting a very contemporary spin on it. There aren't many artists who are using contemporary techniques to depict the West."

While the Gail Severn Gallery is showing off its cowgirls, the Friesen Gallery one block down the street at 320 First Ave. N. is showing showgirls.

"Spiritual showgirls," to be exact.

The paintings are those of Laura Sharp Wilson, who considers the costuming of showgirls as a reflection of the divine, just as she believes blossoms on plants reflect the divine.

paper feature teeny dots amidst other detail. Like Oropallo, Wilson will be at the Gallery Walk Friday night. And she will also give an Artist's Chat about her work 4-5 p.m. Friday at the gallery.

"You have to get up really close to look at the detail," said Friesen Gallery representative Stacy Collins. "Her work is amazing — and fun."

Kneeland Gallery, meanwhile, plans on exhibiting works that haven't even been painted yet, according to gallery director Carey Molter.

The gallery's stable of artists, which includes the Magic Valley's John Horejs, have fanned out to paint on site where the public can watch them. The artists will display the results tonight.

To see them at work, call 726-5512 for locations.

There is plenty of other art to see during tonight's Gallery Walk:

- Also showing her work at Friesen is sculptor Ann Mallory, whose work honors the ceremonial needs of humans to have objects that elevate the rituals of living. She will participate with Sharp in the Artist's Talk from 4 to 5 tonight at Friesen.

- In addition to Oropallo, the Gail Severn Gallery is featuring "Summer Bird," a collection of birdlike sculptures by Jane Rosen, and Brad Rude's intriguing sculptures of bison, horses, coyotes and other animals mounted on wheels and other objects. Laura McPhee's exhibition of large-scale photographs of fire in the Sawtooth Mountains also will be on display.

- Sun Valley Center for the Arts is putting on a second container show across from the Ketchum Post Office at Second Avenue and Fourth Street.

Jan Cox will install venetianblind, a project shot over a 24-hour period in Venice, Italy. Amanda Hamilton will show a 17-minute film, "Beautiful Terrible," which reenacts the sudden disappearance of White Lake in Russia. She also will display printed and framed stills from the film.

Megan Murphy will install three large glass panels with text and images depicting the massacre of three dozen Chinese in Hells Canyon, Idaho, during the 1800s.

And Angela Tsai will fill her storage container with 3,300 bells—the approximate population of Ketchum. The bells will ring in unison when someone pulls the lever of a paper seagull that was inspired by the novel "Jonathan Livingston Seagull."

While there, check out The Center's exhibit, "The Rural Vernacular," in The Center at Fifth and Washington streets.

- Broschofsky Galleries, 360 East Ave., is featuring fine art with a focus on the West, including 19th century photographs of Native Americans taken by Edward S. Curtis.

- Gilman Contemporary, 661 Sun Valley Road, is featuring the work of painter Ashley Collins, whose many horse paintings have caught the eye of actor Robert Redford. Her works "convey a sense of peace and tranquility that many of us are able to achieve," he says.

- Esmerald Gordon, 391 First Ave. N., is featuring jewelry and paintings by John Alexander and Ole Olofson.

- Gallery DeNovo, 320 First Ave. N., is presenting 26 vibrant, impressionistic landscapes of 70-year-old Israeli artist Yehouda Chaki.

- The Will Caldwell Gallery, 400 E. Sun Valley Road, features the vivid paintings of local landscapes and street scenes that the Ketchum artist captured this winter in Mexico.

- Zantman Art Gallery, 360 East Ave. N., is showing the work of a variety of artists, including Robert Clark, an American master known for the weathered barns and other landscapes he paints with egg tempera-egg yolk and dry pigment

- The Toneri Hink Gallery, 400 Sun Valley Road, is featuring the whimsical barstools and other wood carvings of R.C. Hink, as well as the personable foxes and other critters Lynn Toneri painted after visits to Yellowstone National Park.

Miners, nuns and a California Raisin: Costuming in the Magic Valley

By Erica Littlefield
Times-News correspondent

Whether they're dressing a group of miners, a convent of nuns or even a California Raisin, the theater companies in Southern Idaho always manage to come up with just the right costumes.

Costuming not just an integral part of any theatrical production — it's also an opportunity for local seamstresses to use their talents and creativity. Kathy Barrus, a board member of the Oakley Valley Arts Council, said putting her sewing skills to use making costumes for the OVAC productions has been the perfect way for her to get involved with the shows.

"It's especially rewarding when the costuming really fits into the director's vision for the show and makes the whole production come together," Barrus said.

The costuming for a play or musical usually starts when a costumer designer or coordinator sits down with the director to talk about their ideas for the show. Carol Hill, a JuMP Company board member and volunteer seamstress for the company, said the director and costumer talk about everything from the time period of the show to any tricky costume changes.

"It involves a lot of research before you ever sit down to sew," said Hill, who designed the costumes for JuMP Company's last show, "The Totally Awesome 80s Revue."

Once the costumer has a clear picture of what they're looking for, the costumes themselves can come from a variety of different sources. Hill said she and other costumers scour thrift stores, order pieces off the Internet, and borrow from other theater companies. Sometimes cast members even bring in their own clothes. Barrus said that for OVAC's most recent show, the Western musical "Paint Your Wagon," some of the men playing miners wore their own jeans.

When costumes have to be made from scratch or altered significantly, theater companies enlist the help of volunteers like Hill, Barrus and others to get the sewing done. Barrus said sewing theater costumes is different than other types of sewing because there are several factors you have to keep in mind, like the fact that the actors on stage might have to make a quick change.

"You use a lot of Velcro," Barrus laughs. "You have to use fabric that's comfortable and not too hot under the lights on stage, and you have to make sure the costumes really fit."

When a show has a large cast, that means more costumes. Barrus said she sewed 18 nun's habits for OVAC's production of "The Sound of Music" a few years ago. Hill said that with 82 cast members and multiple costume changes in "The Totally Awesome 80s Revue," there were more than 400 costumes to coordinate. Hill sewed about 100 of those from scratch, including a California Raisin costume.

Storing old costumes can pose a challenge for theater companies. Jan Davis, historian for OVAC, said although keeping the costumes from all their shows gives them a great resource to draw from, finding a place to keep them all is an issue. OVAC raised

Jarbidge, Nev., celebrates centennial

By Kimberly Williams-Brackett
Times-News correspondent

JARBIDGE, NEV. — At this year's annual Jarbidge Days, Aug. 14 to 16, relive the past by visiting a tent city, a replica of how Jarbidge may have looked in 1909. Storytelling, poetry, music, demonstrations, Dutch oven cooking, and costumes are scheduled for the tent city. When gold was first discovered, the tent camp had crowded the banks of the Jarbidge River in the narrow canyon for over three miles. It was replaced by solid buildings of log and lumber within the first year.

The arts and crafts exhibits will showcase paintings, drawings, photography, needlework, afghans, and jewelry from Jarbidge artists. Pat Henning, resident and co-chair of the Jarbidge Community Association, which is throwing the celebration, said homemade ice cream will be served during the exhibits at the Red Dog Saloon.

To commemorate the centennial, historic photo calendars and medallions may be purchased. The fine silver coins were stamped at the former United States Branch Mint in Carson City, Nev. "This coin is the first in a series of three," said Henning.

The first coin features the discovery of gold when the rush began. It's an engraved image of Jarbidge as a tent city. The second coin, which will be released in 2010, features "permanence" with an image of the historic Jarbidge Community Hall. To be released in 2011, the third coin features "owning the land" with engraved wording. President William Howard Taft declared Jarbidge a town site in 1911. The reverse side of all medallions features the original seal of the state of Nevada. Medallions are $50 each.

Association President Howard Henning said the 30-foot-high statue of a shovel which bears thousands of supporters of the Jarbidge Shovel Brigade,

Just nine miles from the Idaho-Nevada border, Jarbidge, Nev. is celebrating its centennial, Aug. 14-16. The historic Jarbidge Community Hall is undergoing preservation.

currently at the county courthouse in Elko, Nev., 100 miles southwest of Jarbidge, will be relocated to a permanent home at Jarbidge's park. He said Elko County is delivering it prior to the centennial.

Henning said parking will be available outside city limits. Horse-drawn wagon rides will transport visitors from parking to the festivities.

A time capsule is being assembled for the next 100 years. Henning said it closes in October and will be built into the hall. Resident Mary Stadstad said next year they will celebrate the historic hall's 100th anniversary. "It's really been a labor of love and we just want people to enjoy the centennial," said Stadstad.

The official centennial grand opening takes stage at the Jarbidge Community Hall at 1 p.m. on Friday, followed by the centennial parade of Jarbidge's old timers on Main Street. The old timers will gather at the big top tent to share their pioneer legacy with stories of Jarbidge. An apron fashion show with stories reminiscient of days gone by will be held at Pioneer Park.

On Saturday, festivities kick off with a celebration of the history of American Indian and Basque cultures at 10:30 a.m. Idaho State University Associate Professor Phil Homan will present a slide show on the Queen of Diamonds, Kittie Wilkins, Horse Queen of Idaho and the Wilkins Horse Company. Save your appetite for sloppy joes and enjoy the progress parade. Jarbidge explorer and photographer Bud Webber will direct a slide show of the remote and "secret" places of the Jarbidge Mountains. Be sure to bid on the No. 1 Jarbidge centennial commemorative medallion at the auction. "A History of Jarbidge in Vaudeville Style" presented by Elko, Nev.-based Silver Stage Players is an old time melodrama play.

On Friday and Saturday beginning at 4 p.m., visitors can take a horse-drawn wagon tour of historic Jarbidge, followed by a barbecue at the Outdoor Inn. The Jarbidge Arts Council introduces Nevada's own country recording artist Richard Elloyan in concert. Wrap up the day with music and dancing with a live band.

The celebration closes on Sunday with a chuck wagon pancake breakfast sponsored by Morning Star Outfitters at 8:30 a.m., followed by cowboy church with services by Reverend Bo Lowe.

Raffle tickets for a new 2008 Polaris 500 ATV are $10 each or 11 for $100. The drawing happens at 11:30 a.m. on Sunday.

Most events are free, although there is a charge for all meals.

To get to Jarbidge from Twin Falls, take U.S. Highway 93 south to Rogerson. Drive west 64 miles on the Three Creek Highway to Jarbidge, Nev. The last 16 miles are unpaved.

So much good music, it all blended together into an aural and visual fog of rhythm and melody.

The headliners rocked the house, while the so-called "Tweeners," who played between main sets, should warrant more stage-time next year!

Only drawback? Mosquitos — I should have brought bug spray.

Restaurant introduces mystery dinner show

Times-News

Canyon Crest Dining and Event Center plans to present interactive theater that pairs entertainment with a dinner prepared by chef Dave Haley.

The original show "A Killer Musical," created by David Gravatt of Dick Foster Productions of Las Vegas (executive producers Dick and Lynne Foster are now residents of Twin Falls), will feature guest star Danny Marona with an ensemble of local performers who sing, dance and interact with guests in an attempt to clear their names from the murder-suspect list.

The characters are colorful, and the comedy is hysterical, promoters say. Choreography and a variety of recognizable music keep the audience engaged with solving the improbable crime.

"A portion of the profits derived from this event will be donated to the Danny Marona Performing Arts foundation," Canyon Crest owner Dan Willie said in a press release from the Twin Falls restaurant.

The Thursdays-only performances begin on Sept. 24, at 7 p.m. Canyon Crest did not announce how many weeks the show will continue.

Tickets are $49.95 per person and include a choice of entree. Make reservations at Canyon Crest or at any Magic Valley Oasis Stop 'N Go location. Information: 733-9392.

Gala Showroom tickets include two free drinks.

Akey sees progress as Vandals open fall camp

Vandal camp

By Josh Wright
Times-News correspondent

Below are key dates in Idaho's 2009 fall camp. All three scrimmages are open to the public.

Today: Players report

Saturday: First practice, 3:30 p.m.

Aug. 14: Scrimmage, 2:30 p.m.

Aug. 19: Scrimmage, 2:30 p.m.

Aug. 23: Scrimmage, 2:30 p.m.

Sept. 5: Season opener at New Mexico State, 5 p.m.

MOSCOW — There might not be a more die-hard follower of University of Idaho men's basketball than Robb Akey. At just about every home game last winter, the Vandals football coach and his two sons watched gleefully from the stands as Don Verlin reshaped the moribund program into a post-season participant.

Just don't bother drawing conclusions from what Verlin was able to achieve in his first year as coach and what Akey has yet to muster going into his third season on the gridiron.

Akey insists there are no parallels.

"You can't flip football overnight," he said. "It's much harder to do than basketball. Just the numbers that come into play, the physicality of the football game."

Patience has become a buzzword around Vandal football, and for good reason. Akey holds a 3-21 mark as Idaho coach and looks to have the bulk of a massive overhaul still in front of him as the Vandals begin preparations for the 2009 season.

Players report to campus today, and the first practice of fall camp is Saturday afternoon at 3:30. Idaho opens the season on Sept. 5 at New Mexico State.

If anything, Verlin's sudden transformation of Idaho basketball has made Vandal fans hungrier for similar success from the beleaguered football program. Akey said last week at the Western Athletic Conference football preview that the groundwork has been laid in his first two years — it's the results that have yet to follow.

"I feel great about the progress," the former Washington State defensive coordinator said. "Yeah, I want to see it happen quicker, and I know our fans do because it's been a decade since they've (seen) a bowl game, a winning season. And I know that grates on our fans."

One potential boost for the Vandals is that they enter fall camp with the most continuity in years. After becoming the third Idaho coach in three years when he was

BSU QB hypes his receivers

Moore confident in his third fall camp

By Dustin Lapray
Times-News correspondent

BOISE — Kellen Moore is getting better.

The Western Athletic Conference Freshman of the Year enters his third fall camp with none of the trappings of a quarterback controversy. The job is his.

"I'm feeling more comfortable, more used to it," said Moore who was one of 32 quarterbacks named to the 2009 Davey O'Brien National Quarterback Watch List this week. "I'm starting to get used to what to expect as far as the grind, the long days. (Wednesday) I was a little rusty, but I think (Thursday) went very well."

Moore lost his favorite target in Jeremy Childs (72 receptions, seven TDs), but out of the stable come Austin Pettis (49 receptions, nine TDs) and Titus Young, the fastest receiver on BSU's roster. Young only played in three games last season before a suspension ended his season. He's back, looking faster and stronger.

"(Young) re-tooled himself," Moore said. "He's doing really well out there. He's bringing that vertical game."

Tyler Shoemaker (6-1, 214 pounds) should be Moore's third receiver. He's got the speed to stretch the field and the knack to get open.

"He's that third guy for us," Moore said. "You need a few more than Austin and Titus. He's gotten a lot faster than when he got here. He's starting to come into the package."

Mitch Burroughs (5-9, 194) and Chris Potter (5-9, 165) are the wild cards. Both are smaller, faster receivers. Look for each to take part in the trick plays BSU is famous for.

"I know all five of them really well," Moore said. "All five were pretty comfortable getting out there. They'll all rotate in there, get their opportunities."

The BSU tight ends and tailbacks will also be viable targets for Moore, a sophomore from Prosser, Wash.

"I think we got a nice little diversity in our receiving corps, with the tight ends and receiving corps — tall, shorter, fast guys and big guys like Austin," Moore said. "We got a good mix."

Pettis (6-3, 200) is a solid No. 1 receiver. His height and reach let him get to balls many receivers can't reach.

"He's a guy you can count

Browns' Stallworth: 'I am truly sorry'

The Associated Press

CLEVELAND — Suspended Browns wide receiver Donte Stallworth feels he has done "irreparable harm" to the family of the man he killed while driving drunk and said he is ready to accept whatever ruling NFL commissioner Roger Goodell makes on his future.

Stallworth, suspended indefinitely by the league for killing Mario Reyes while driving drunk in Miami, met with Goodell in New York on Wednesday about a possible reinstatement.

Stallworth was recently released from jail after serving 24 days for the DUI conviction.

In a public statement released Thursday, Stallworth apologized for his actions and vowed to conduct himself "in a manner that more accurately reflects who I am and meets the high standard expected of all NFL players."

"I recognize that there is a difference between the legal standard in my criminal case and the standard to which NFL players are held," Stallworth said. "It is clear that I exercised poor judgment and caused irreparable harm to Mario Reyes, his family, the NFL, its owners, coaches, employees and to my fellow players."

Stallworth thanked Goodell for the opportunity to express his remorse and said he will accept whatever punishment Goodell hands down.

"Whatever he ultimately decides is the appropriate discipline, I will accept knowing that I have profoundly affected the NFL and its relationship with the fans of our game," Stallworth said. "I jeopardized the honor and privilege that I have been given to be an NFL player and to play for our fans. I am truly sorry."

The league has given no indication when Goodell will rule on Stallworth, who struck and killed Reyes on March 14, just a few hours after drinking at a Miami Beach club.

CHIEFS ADD FORMER ISU QB MATT GUTIERREZ

RIVER FALLS, Wis. — The Kansas City Chiefs have claimed quarterback Matt Gutierrez off waivers from New England.

Gutierrez appeared in five games during two seasons with the Patriots, completing his only pass attempt for 15 yards. He signed the deal Thursday and joined the team for practice.

An undrafted free agent out of Idaho State in 2007, Gutierrez will compete with Brodie Croyle and Tyler Thigpen as the backups to starter Matt Cassel. The Chiefs released Ingle Martin on Wednesday to

ISU seeks more wins after 1-11 campaign

By Mark Liptak
Times-News correspondent

POCATELLO — The 2009 Idaho State Bengals open fall camp today, and players, coaches and staff realize it's an important year for the program, to say nothing of the future of head coach John Zamberlin.

ISU seeks progress after last year's 1-11 disaster. If improvement translates into a few more wins, it's almost certain Zamberlin will return next year. Winning early will be a challenge against a brutal September slate that includes road games at Arizona State, Oklahoma and Weber State. For the Bengals to make strides, a new quarterback will have to come through and the defense simply must play better.

"This is still a process and it's only been going on for two years," said Zamberlin, "but we're making improvements in our facilities, our recruiting classes are better, the attitude of the program is better. I want to look back and say in Year 3 the foundation kept getting built."

Kyle Blum takes over at quarterback after playing in seven games last year, starting the final two. He helped lead ISU to its only win of the season, an overtime triumph over Sacramento State last November.

Blum is big, has a strong arm and can throw the ball downfield. He has a good cast of receivers, considered the strength of the offense. Isaiah Burel and Jaron Taylor combined for 71 catches, seven scores and over 1,300 yards last season. The offensive line is solid with Burley alum Braeden Clayson figuring to see a lot of action on it.

The running game is a concern as the only returning back with experience is Clint Knickrehm, who was limited to eight games in 2008 due to injury. Minico graduate Skylar "Poke" Morgan could work his way into a role as a freshman.

Defensively, ISU was not only the worst defense in the Big Sky Conference but among the worst in the nation in the FCS division. Zamberlin and his staff aimed to bring in more speed in the offseason, seeking a consistent pass rusher and good cover players in the

Cabrera, Posada lead Yanks

NEW YORK — Melky Cabrera and Jorge Posada hit three-run homers and New York beat Boston for the first time in nine games this season, 13-6 on Thursday night.

Johnny Damon and Mark Teixeira also connected for New York, which ended a nine-game skid against Boston dating to last season. It was the Yankees' longest drought in the rivalry since they lost 17 straight from Oct. 3, 1911, to July 1, 1912.

Damon's third-inning shot was his third in three days, Cabrera and Posada went deep in New York's eight-run fourth and Teixeira delivered the final blow with his 28th homer leading off the seventh.

Despite a career-high seven walks, Joba Chamberlain (8-2) lasted five innings to win his fourth consecutive start.

ROYALS 8, MARINERS 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Bruce Chen won in the major leagues for the first time since 2005 and Billy Butler hit a two-run homer in a five-run first inning for Kansas City.

Chen, who had lost his past 13 decisions, earned his first victory since Oct. 2, 2005, while with Baltimore. Chen (1-6) held the Mariners to two runs, despite giving up 10 hits and a walk in 6 2-3 innings, matching his longest outing this season.

INDIANS 2, TWINS 1

CLEVELAND — Trevor Crowe hit a tiebreaking double in the seventh inning for Cleveland.

base as Cleveland won for the ninth time in 13 games. The switch-hitting Crowe has batted .375 with four RBIs in six games since his recall from Triple-A Columbus.

TIGERS 7, ORIOLES 3

DETROIT — Brandon Inge hit a two-run homer in a four-run second inning, and Rick Porcello didn't give up a hit until the fifth for the Tigers.

Porcello (10-7) has allowed only three runs in his last two starts after allowing 19 runs in his previous four. He went 5 2-3 innings in this one, allowing only four hits.

ANGELS 9, WHITE SOX 5

CHICAGO — Vladimir Guerrero hit his first home run in more than a month and Bobby Abreu, Jeff Mathis and Erick Aybar also went deep to lead the Angels.

Jayson Nix had a three-run homer for Chicago, which fell two games behind Detroit in the AL Central.

RANGERS 6, ATHLETICS 4

OAKLAND, Calif. — Michael Young hit his 18th homer of the season, Tommy Hunter pitched seven solid innings and the Rangers avoided their first four-game sweep since April 2008.

Hank Blalock added his 21st homer, and David Murphy and Andrew Jones each drove in a run for the Rangers.

NATIONAL LEAGUE PHILLIES 3, ROCKIES 1

PHILADELPHIA — Cliff Lee pitched seven impressive innings in his home debut, Paul Bako hit a tiebreaking homer and the Philadelphia Phillies beat the Colorado Rockies 3-1 on Thursday.

Lee (2-0) allowed one run and six hits, striking out nine in his first start at Citizens Bank Park since the Phillies acquired him from Cleveland last week.

NATIONALS 12, MARLINS 8

WASHINGTON — Ryan Zimmerman finished a double short of the cycle, and Ronnie Belliard's tiebreaking single in the eighth inning helped Washington rally from a six-run deficit.

DIAMONDBACKS 11, PIRATES 6, 12 INNINGS

PITTSBURGH — Alex Romero's two-run double highlighted Arizona's five-run 12th inning and the Diamondbacks won their fifth straight.

Romero's fourth hit was a double to right-center off Steven Jackson (2-2) with the bases loaded and one out in the 12th.

GOLF ROUNDUP

Padraig Harrington hits from the sand on the No. 6 hole during the first round of the Bridgestone Invitational golf tournament Thursday at Firestone Country Club in Akron, Ohio. Harrington leads the tournament at 6-under par.

Harrington leads at Firestone

AKRON, Ohio — Padraig Harrington never allowed himself to get down during the worst of times, whether he was missing five straight cuts or finishing toward the bottom of the leaderboard.

He didn't act much differently Thursday after his best round of the year.

Harrington finally saw some results after eight months of tinkering with his swing, making a pivotal par save early that sent him on his way to a 6-under 64 and a two-shot lead in the Bridgestone Invitational.

A boost of confidence? Not really.

"Has no relevance in the overall scheme of things," Harrington said. "It's just one round of golf. That's all it is. It doesn't change the last six months. It won't change the next six months. I wouldn't put too much significance into it, because what if I went out there and shot 76? Would I let it affect tomorrow? I think I would not put much emphasis on the fact that I shot 64. I'm comfortable with it."

What pleased him were the two late birdies — a 25-foot putt on the seventh hole, and one from about the same range just short of the green at No. 8 — that made a good round even better.

It also put him atop the leaderboard for the first time all year, two shots clear of Scott Verplank, Tim Clark and Prayad Marksang of Thailand. The group at 67 included Steve Stricker and former Masters champion Zach Johnson.

Verplank played with Harrington, and he was well aware of the stories that documented Harrington's incessant swing changes.

"I know he's struggled a little bit, and he's probably gotten a little too much criticism for working on his game," Verplank said. "But you know what? He's the only one that knows what he needs to do. If today is any indication, then he's doing something right."

Tiger Woods did enough right to open with a 68, the 11th straight time he has broken par in the opening round at Firestone. The world's No. 1 player is going for his seventh victory on this tree-lined course, and he was only four shots behind.

A week ago in the Buick Open, he was tied for 95th after a 1-under 71 in the first round and wound up winning by three shots.

"We were 1-under par, and I think I was in 15th or 17th spot — a little different than last week at 1-under par," Woods said. "You don't have to go super low here, just kind of plod your way along, make a few birdies here and there. And if you get on a little stretch like I did — make two in a row — all of a sudden you're in eighth place. That's what this golf course allows you to do."

Phil Mickelson opened with an even-par 70, along with defending champion Vijay Singh.

Lefty played for the first time since the U.S. Open and had a double bogey on his second hole. He settled into his game on the back nine, however, picking up three birdies to salvage a decent start.

PAMPLING LEADS AT RENO-TAHOE OPEN

RENO, Nev. — Australia's Rod Pamplung shot a 5-under 67 in swirling mountain wind to take the lead in the Legends Reno-Tahoe Open, a stroke ahead of a group that included two-time winner Vaughn Taylor and former Nevada player Rich Barcelo.

Two-time Reno runner-up Jonathan Kaye, Steve Pate, Grant Waite, Spencer Levin and rookie Marc Leishman matched Taylor and Barcelo with 68s at Montreux Golf and Country Club on the edge of the Sierra Nevada.

Former PGA Championship winners Paul Azinger, Steve Elkington and Shaun Micheel were another shot back at 69 along with Jeff Quinney, James Nitties, Robert Garrigus, Ryan Palmer and Jonathan Byrd.

TEENS MOVE ON AT U.S. WOMEN'S AMATEUR

ST. LOUIS — Teen stars Alexis Thompson and Jessica Korda advanced to the U.S. Women's Amateur quarter-finals, winning second- and third-round matches at Old Warson.

The 14-year-old Thompson, the 2008 U.S. Girls' Junior champion from Coral Springs, Fla., had a pair of 2- and -1 victories, beating England's Jodi Ewart in the morning and returning to top the Philippines' Cyna Marie Rodriguez.

Korda — with her father, former tennis star Petr Korda, working as her caddy — beat Aimee Neff of Carmel, Ind., 6 and 5, and Erynne Lee of Silverdale, Wash., 2 and 1.

Kahne wary as The Glen nears

WATKINS GLEN, N.Y. (AP) — Kasey Kahne sits seventh in the Sprint Cup standings and his first road course win is still fresh on his mind.

That should make Kahne confident as the series shifts this week to the road course at Watkins Glen. But he's only 79 points inside the top

Kahne

12 and just 11 points ahead of Juan Pablo Montoya, so Kahne remains wary with five races remaining before the cutoff for the Chase for the championship.

"You know, I don't feel super confident, but I definitely feel good where we're sitting right now," Kahne said. "I feel like if we keep it up, we're going to be in good shape. But things can happen so easily by your own error or just by racing situations. It's just the way racing goes."

No matter what's at stake, racing over the fast 11-turn, 2.45-mile Watkins Glen road course — one of only two on the Cup schedule — can bring out the worst in anybody — and often has. Toss in a handful of non-regular drivers (road course specialists aiming for that breakthrough victory) and a few regular drivers who aren't having the season they had hoped for, and Sunday's Heluva Good! Sour Cream Dips At The Glen becomes something of a wild card.

"There's opportunities for guys to make mistakes in those road races," Greg Biffle said. "You don't wish bad luck on anybody, but the other guys we're chasing for spots are good there, too. Kasey won at Sonoma (in June), and Juan Pablo runs good. Let's face it, those are the two guys I'm racing for a spot, plus my teammate, Matt Kenseth, who's right behind us."

Only the top 12 drivers in the standings are eligible to compete for the Sprint Cup title over the final 10 races of the season, and Biffle is one who can't afford to make a big blunder. He finished 15th at Pocono on Monday, dropping a position in the standings to 12th — just one point behind Roush Fenway Racing teammate Kenseth and 101 points ahead of Joe Gibbs Racing star Kyle Busch.

Busch left Watkins Glen International a year ago brimming with confidence after notching his eighth win of the Cup season. He needs a repeat performance this week to rekindle hopes of making the 10-race Chase.

"This is a track where I feel like we can make up some ground," Busch said Thursday on a conference call with reporters. "If we can get a good car like we had last year and maybe qualify up somewhat near the front, we can take a little bit of pit strategy and get up there a little bit further. We've got to fight hard."

Despite a disappointing 16th at Pocono, his fourth straight finish outside the top 10, Busch remains upbeat for good reason. He has three top-10 finishes in four starts at The Glen.

"We had a great race last year, so there's no reason we can't have another one this year," Busch said. "The biggest thing that we fight is the points deal. We can't make a mistake going into a braking zone or getting a rear wheel hop into Turn 1 and spinning out, or something like that, late in the race and costing us a good finish."

Good finishes at Watkins Glen can be hard to come by, even for the best. Jeff Gordon is tied with Tony Stewart for most victories with four, but since his last victory at The Glen in 2001, Gordon has just one top 10 and four finishes of 20th or worse.

National champion Florida opens camp

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Florida quarterback Tim Tebow has a Heisman Trophy, four championship rings and more accolades than most college football players could ever imagine.

He wants more. Tebow and the defending national champions opened fall practice Thursday with hopes of winning a third title in four years, and they want this one to be special.

The Gators are embracing sky-high expectations that come with returning nearly every starter and are openly talking about wanting to become the first team in school history to go undefeated.

"It's something that we want," Tebow said, sporting a full beard for the first practice. "That's not our goal. We're not writing that anywhere. We're not posting that. But obviously when we step on the field, we're going to want to win. That would be special, being the first time in Florida history for that. Obviously that is a goal and it's something that I hope comes true."

Talk of an undefeated season by the Gators is something coach Urban Meyer would like to stop.

"The goal's always been to go to Atlanta. That's it. We've got to move on," he said after the team's late practice on Thursday. "I look forward to the day when (the players are) off limits (to the media), and that might be sooner than you think. We've just got to take care of our business and practice hard. That's what counts. Not what the people say?"

But the Gators can't help but realize they're an overwhelming favorite to repeat, maybe even more so than the 2005 Southern California team that featured Matt Leinart and Reggie Bush. The Trojans stormed through the regular season, extending their winning streak to 34 games, then lost in the title game to Vince Young and Texas.

Florida coach Urban Meyer wipes his head as he leaves the practice field in Gainesville, Fla., Thursday, where the freshman football team completed their first practice of the season.

Although Florida doesn't want to look too far ahead, especially with LSU, Georgia and Florida State on the schedule, players are bracing for each opponent's best shot every week.

"We know the target's on our back and we're ready," linebacker Brandon Spikes said. "Everybody's been looking forward to this day. ... It's just like Christmas."

The Gators opened practice at 5:45 a.m., with about 200 fans eagerly awaiting their arrival. The early start was no surprise after Meyer promised to make summer workouts and two-a-day practices the toughest in his five years.

His rationale? For the most part, Florida has the same team won the BCS title game in Miami, and Meyer wants his players to avoid complacency.

defensive backfield.

Sean Rutten may be the player to fill the pass-rush slot. Despite not starting a game, his 34 tackles were second among all defensive linemen. He also added 1.5 sacks, 2.5 tackles for loss, and a fumble recovery. Phillip Arias is the top returning tackler and anchors the linebacker corps. Michael Wright returns to help stabilize the secondary.

As for special teams, punter Jon Vanderwielen was good enough to be tabbed a preseason all-conference pick and return man J.D. Ponciano may be the most dangerous player out of that spot in the Big Sky as well.

ISU does play five of eight games at home after the brutal three-week stretch to open the season. And Zamberlin is respected by his team. The former NFL linebacker has instilled discipline, dedication and a never-quit attitude into his players. But talent wins out in the end, and while that has improved the last two years, it remains to be seen what that means in the win column.

"When this season is over I want to see continued progress," said Zamberlin. "I want to see our kids play hard, graduate, do the things they are supposed to be doing."

Winning a few more games along the way wouldn't hurt either.

49ERS MUM ABOUT CRABTREE SITTING OUT

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — The San Francisco 49ers won't comment on an online report Thursday that top draft choice Michael Crabtree is willing to hold out the entire season.

ESPN.com quoted Crabtree's cousin and adviser, David Wells, as saying that Crabtree is prepared to sit and re-enter the NFL draft next year.

The 49ers on Thursday released a statement saying that the team does not negotiate in the media. "In our view, there have been open and positive conversations on both sides," the statement says.

San Francisco took the wide receiver with the 10th overall pick this year.

FALCONS' DOUGLAS LOST FOR SEASON WITH KNEE INJURY

FLOWERY BRANCH, Ga. — The Atlanta Falcons' depth chart at wide receiver doesn't look much like coach Mike Smith planned.

Smith confirmed Thursday that Harry Douglas will miss the season with a knee injury. Pro Bowl receiver Roddy White is in a contract hold-out, and so suddenly the Falcons' three-receiver formation includes Eric Weems, who has one career catch, and Brian Finneran, who hasn't started a game since 2005.

Both Weems, who rooms with Douglas at the Falcons' training camp, and Finneran, who missed two seasons with knee injuries, said they felt pain for Douglas when he hurt his left knee in practice Wednesday.

"The way he went down was a bad feeling, a bad feeling," Finneran said. The teammates' fears were realized when Smith said Douglas tore his anterior cruciate ligament and is out for the year.

Smith said Michael Jenkins, Finneran and Weems would be the starters in a three-receiver formation "if we had to go right today."

Titans to wear No. 9 decal in honor of McNair

The Tennessee Titans will honor slain former quarterback Steve McNair by wearing a No. 9 decal on their helmets this season, starting with this weekend's Hall of Fame Game against the Buffalo Bills.

NFL spokesman Brian McCarthy said Thursday the league found it appropriate to approve the team's 1¼-inch decal in memory of McNair, who was killed July 4. McNair played 11 seasons with the Titans and led the team to its only Super Bowl appearance.

McCarthy said Titans coaches and sideline personnel also will have the option to wear a No. 9 lapel pin.

SANCHEZ OUTPLAYS CLEMENS IN JETS' SCRIMMAGE

CORTLAND, N.Y. — Mark Sanchez has outplayed Kellen Clemens in the New York Jets' green-white scrimmage, possibly giving him the slight edge in the team's closely contested quarterback competition.

Sanchez, the fifth overall draft pick from Southern California, was 9 of 15 — including four dropped passes — for 70 yards Thursday night in the team's annual full-contact session. Clemens, a fourth-year veteran, was 5 of 7 for 26 yards.

"It was like game day," Sanchez said. "It was game mode. I put in the iPod and just laid down for a little bit, relaxed my mind and came out here and did a little work."

The quarterbacks have been about even in their competition through training camp, but Sanchez's impressive performance against the first- and second-team defenses might have pushed him in front.

Wide receiver Paul Raymond took a reverse into the end zone from 15 yards out for the only score of the scrimmage.

Rielle Hunter leaves the Terry Sanford Federal Building and Courthouse in Raleigh, N.C., Thursday. Former Sen. John Edwards had an extramarital affair with Hunter that he says ended in 2006.

Edwards' ex-mistress in court amid campaign investigation

By Alysia Patterson
Associated Press writer

RALEIGH, N.C. — The ex-mistress of John Edwards spent much of Thursday in a federal courthouse in Raleigh where a grand jury was meeting, at a time when federal investigators are examining the two-time presidential candidate's finances.

Rielle Hunter walked into the building in the morning through a back entrance, holding a young child and left with the child about nine hours later.

Neither Hunter nor her attorney, Michael Critchley, answered reporters' questions.

Edwards adamantly denied during a confessional interview with ABC News last summer that he had fathered a child with Hunter, and he welcomed a paternity test. His wife, Elizabeth, has said while promoting her book that she doesn't know if her husband is the father.

Former Edwards aide Andrew Young, who made a similar courthouse visit while the grand jury was sitting last month, said in 2007 he was the child's father. Hunter said around the same time that Young was the father and the birth certificate does not list a father's name.

Hunter's daughter, Frances Quinn Hunter, was born Feb. 27, 2008, but it was unclear if that was the child with her at the courthouse.

Edwards has admitted to an affair with Hunter that he says ended in 2006. That year, Edwards' political action committee paid Hunter's video production firm $100,000 for work. Then the committee paid another $14,086 on April 1, 2007.

Dr. Joseph Ballinger gives Marjorie Hill, a nurse at Montefiore Hospital in New York, the first Asian flu vaccine shot in New York in August 1957.

Early flu shot season comes with three jabs

By Mike Stobbe
Associated Press writer

ATLANTA — Get ready to roll up your sleeve three times for flu shots this fall.

That's right, three times. This year's flu season is shaping up to be a very different one. Most people will need one shot for the regular seasonal flu and probably two others to protect against the new swine flu.

Experts suggest you get that first shot as early as this month — if you can find it.

"We'd like to get to Job 1 and get most of it done," said Dr. William Schaffner, a Vanderbilt University flu expert, referring to seasonal flu vaccinations.

"Get it done before we start to tackle Job 2," the more complex task of swine flu vaccinations, he added.

The five vaccine manufacturers that supply the United States are finishing up production of seasonal flu vaccine earlier than usual. Health officials say they expect about half of the more than 120 million doses of seasonal vaccine to be available by the end of this month. Most of the rest are due out by the end of September. Some manufacturers report that distributors are quickly buying up supplies.

Those five companies — including one that makes a nasal spray version of flu vaccine — are the same ones making the new swine flu vaccine. They are on track to start delivering the first batches of that in September, but the bulk of it isn't expected until late October or November, health officials say.

That's sparked questions about how all this is going to work.

Officials want to get as many people as possible vaccinated against both forms of flu, but a lot of that depends on consumers and how many trips they'll be willing to make to get shots.

Why can't you get one shot for all — or maybe just two?

More flu shots

This year, three flu shots may be necessary to protect yourself — one for the regular seasonal flu and two for swine flu.

The reasons have to do with logistics and caution.

Scientists believe the swine flu vaccine will be most effective if given in two doses, about three weeks apart, although testing is still under way to check that.

Combining swine flu and seasonal flu in one shot is theoretically possible, but it was too late to try it this year. Decisions were made last winter about what flu strains to use in this year's seasonal vaccine, and production was too far along by the time swine flu hit in April to alter the formula.

So seasonal flu and swine flu will have to be given as separate doses, even if it's during the same appointment.

But it's not a matter of just giving both to whoever comes in. Supplies are expected to be limited, so the federal Centers for Disease Control and Prevention has two different lists for who should be first to get the seasonal flu shot and who should be first to get the swine flu shot.

For the regular flu vaccine, elderly people, health care workers and pregnant women are among the priority groups. For the swine flu vaccine, health care workers and pregnant women are on the list but not older people, who seem to have some immunity to swine flu.

If all the flu shots were given at about the same time, it could mean a mash of people, some of whom should be among the first to get one shot and not the other.

"I think it's safe to say we expect some confusion," said Kristine Sheedy, a CDC communications specialist.

Then, there are safety questions.

Health officials are haunted by the swine flu vaccine campaign in 1976, which was stopped after unexpectedly high numbers of patients suffered a paralyzing condition called Guillain-Barre Syndrome. While it's not clear the vaccine was to blame, health officials want to carefully monitor people who get the new swine flu vaccine for any problems.

Scientists are just beginning to test the safety and effectiveness of the new swine flu vaccine, work that is expected to take months. If the seasonal flu and swine flu vaccines were given at the same sitting and some people developed health problems, it would be hard to single out which vaccine caused the problem, or whether it was the combination of them.

"How you're going to separate that out — that's a doozy," said Dr. Samuel Katz, a Duke University vaccines expert, who was a developer of the measles vaccine.

So the government is looking at three shots, preferably over three visits.

That's daunting. Over the years, the public hasn't been great about getting even one flu shot: Just one in three U.S. adults got flu shots last year, CDC data indicate.

"To come two or three times? That's expecting a lot, of public response," said Katz.

White House advises Dems on handling protests

Insurers, GOP activists accused of mob tactics

By Ricardo Alonso-Zaldivar and Erica Werner
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — Top White House officials counseled Democratic senators Thursday on coping with disruptions at public events on health care this summer, officials said, and promised the party and allies would respond with twice the force if any individual lawmaker is criticized in television advertising.

These officials also told skittish senators that fresh polling suggests an emphasis on issues such as barring insurers from denying coverage on the basis of pre-existing medical conditions is a political winner, able to increase support among independents, women, seniors and rural voters.

The officials spoke on condition of anonymity, saying they were not authorized to discuss details of the closed-door session that took place hours before lawmakers headed to their home states for a monthlong vacation.

In the week since the House began its own break, several town hall-style meetings have been disrupted by noisy demonstrators. These episodes have drawn widespread media attention, and Republicans have seized on them as well as polls showing a decline in support for President Barack Obama and his agenda as evidence that public support is lacking for his signature legislation.

Pushing back, Democrats have accused Republicans of sanctioning mob tactics, and Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., accused protesters of trying to sabotage the democratic process.

The Republican Party says it's not behind the protests, but Reid scoffed at the notion that the protesters reflect grass-roots sentiment. He held up a piece of artificial turf during a session with reporters.

"These are nothing more than destructive efforts to interrupt a debate that we should have, and are having," Reid said Thursday. "They are doing this because they don't have any better ideas. They have no interest in letting the negotiators, even though few in number, negotiate. It's really simple: they're taking their cues from talk show hosts, Internet rumor-mongers ... and insurance racketeers."

Republicans answered back.

"All the polls show there is serious concern, if not outright opposition, to the president's health care plan," said Antonia Ferrier, spokeswoman for House Republican Leader John Boehner of Ohio. "Democrats are ginning up this cynical shell game."

Also Thursday, the AFL-CIO announced plans to mobilize labor activists to attend town hall meetings in 50 congressional districts this month to counter the conservative protesters.

White House aides David Axelrod and Jim Messina traveled to the Capitol for their presentation to Democratic senators. Senators saw videos of disruptions at events held by House members, and were told to organize their events more carefully as well as work with labor unions and other friendly groups to generate enthusiasm.

They also were urged to use these events to stress insurance reforms such as a limit on out-of-pocket expenses for those covered by insurance, a ban on coverage cancellation for the seriously ill and protections for small businesses.

Messina, the deputy White House chief of staff, also said any advertising attack would be met with a bigger response, these officials said.

"It's a challenge, no question about it, and you've got to get out there and make the case," Sen. Chris Dodd, D-Conn., said afterward. "This is not the time for the faint-hearted!"

Researchers identify cells that say 'scratch me'

By Lauran Neergaard
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Got an itch to scratch? Scientists have pinpointed a key group of cells that sends itch-alerts to the brain.

When researchers at Washington University in St. Louis knocked out those cells in mice, it alleviated their itchiness without affecting their ability to sense pain — work that opens a possible new target for creating better itch relievers.

Don't underestimate that need. The kind of itch caused by bug bites or allergies typically goes away with a little scratching or some antihistamines. But some people can scratch themselves raw without relieving serious, daily itching triggered by a variety of conditions, such as certain cancers, chronic kidney failure, and even use of certain narcotic pain relievers.

Indeed, pain and itch have been difficult to separate. Previous research has found various nerve pathways that seem involved in both.

But Thursday's report in the journal Science is the first to identify itch-specific cells in the spinal cord, that highway that delivers sensation to the brain.

"It's exciting," said well-known itch specialist Dr. Gil Yosipovitch of North Carolina's Wake Forest University Baptist Medical Center, who wasn't involved in the new research. "This comprehensive study opens the field!"

Lead researcher Zhou-Feng Chen, a Washington University associate professor of anesthesiology, in 2007 discovered the first gene related to itchiness, named GRPR. They found that mice with an inactive version of the gene scratched less when exposed to itchy things than mice with an active gene.

But that didn't prove that the spinal cord neurons, or nerve cells, that harbored this gene were itch-specific. They could also be important to genes related to pain sensation.

So this time, Chen's team injected the spinal cords of mice with a neurotoxin that seeks out the GRPR receptor, sort of a docking site. Over about two weeks, the toxin killed about 80 percent of the cells that harbored that gene.

Before those injections, the mice scratched vigorously. But after the itch cells were killed off, their scratching plummeted — in some cases stopped completely — when Chen introduced one after another itchy substance.

They weren't simply numbed: Their motor function remained normal, and so did their response to pain from heat and pressure in a series of common experiments that show animals flick their tails or pull away their paws during various stresses.

Western Dems begin meeting in northern Idaho

The Democratic National Committee's Western Regional Conference started Thursday and runs through Sunday, with most of the meetings scheduled for the Coeur d'Alene Casino Resort and Hotel. It is the first time that Democratic delegates from the 13 western states have convened in Idaho.

Organizers say the conference will focus on some key policy issues, including alternative energy, health care reform, the economy and education.

1980s teen flick director John Hughes dies in New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Writer-director John Hughes, Hollywood's youth impresario of the 1980s and '90s who captured the teen and preteen market with such favorites as "The Breakfast Club," "Ferris Bueller's Day Off" and "Home Alone" died Thursday, a spokeswoman said. He was 59.

Hughes died of a heart attack during a morning walk in Manhattan, Michelle Bega said. He was in New York to visit family.

Jake Bloom, Hughes' longtime attorney, said he was "deeply saddened and in shock" to learn of the director's death.

A native of Lansing, Mich., who later moved to suburban Chicago and set much of his work there,

Hughes rose from ad writer to comedy writer to silver screen champ with his affectionate and idealized portraits of teens, whether the romantic and sexual insecurity of "Sixteen Candles," or the J.D. Salinger-esque rebellion against conformity in "The Breakfast Club."

Hughes' ensemble comedies helped make stars out of Molly Ringwald, Anthony Michael Hall, Ally Sheedy and many other young performers. He also scripted the phenomenally popular "Home Alone," which made little-known Macaulay Culkin a sensation as the 8-year-old accidentally abandoned by his vacationing family, and wrote or directed such hits as "National Lampoon's Vacation," "Pretty in Pink," "Planes, Trains & Automobiles" and "Uncle Buck."

"I was a fan of both his work and a fan of him as a person," Culkin said. "The world has lost not only a quintessential filmmaker whose influence will be felt for generations, but a great and decent man."

Devin Ratray, best known for playing Culkin's older brother Buzz McCallister in the "Home Alone" films, said he remained close to Hughes over the years.

"He changed my life forever," Ratray said. "Nineteen years later, people from all over the world contact me telling me how much 'Home Alone' meant to them, their families, and their children."

UK buries the infantryman of war to end all wars

COMBE DOWN, England, (AP) — He was a soldier, a survivor of the trenches — and, in later years, an advocate for peace.

Harry Patch, Britain's last known surviving World War I infantryman, was buried Thursday in this, his home village in western England, as was his wish. He died last month at the age of 111.

The burial followed a magnificent funeral in Wells

Cathedral, 20 miles to the southwest — a service thrust on him by his late-blooming fame as one of the last witnesses to a war that killed at least 8.5 million soldiers.

And then he was taken home, where his memories would haunt him no more.

"All he wanted was burial in Combe Down," said Mike Wool, a neighbor of Patch's stepson. "He wanted a simple service."

The funeral, true to Patch's insistence that victims on all sides be honored, included officials and soldiers from France, Belgium and Germany, the former foe. Some 1,100 people filled the cathedral; hundreds more stood outside, following the service on a huge TV screen.

Jim Ross, a friend who spoke at the funeral, described Patch as an ordinary man, the plumber from Combe Down.

But he was also an extraordinary man who produced a vivid memoir, "The Last Fighting Tommy," a reference to the nickname for the era's soldiers.

Ross said Patch described his war experiences only reluctantly, and only in his final years.

Hear better. You deserve it!

2009 CHEVROLET COBALT SS COUPE

HOMEGROWN PERFORMANCE!!

RoadWorthy!
By Ken Chester, Jr.
Motor News Media
Corporation

Developed by GM Performance Division (GMPD) with a team of engineers and designers dedicated to crafting high-performance vehicles, the performance-oriented Cobalt SS coupe is distinguished on the exterior with several unique features, including a distinctive, air dam-style front fascia with integrated projector-beam fog lamps.

The front upper and lower grilles sport a SS-specific diamond-mesh appearance. SS-specific rockers and badging adorn the body sides, while a standard deck lid spoiler adds the requisite sporty touch to the rear of the car. The standard spoiler can be replaced with an optional high-wing-style aero enhancement. Also at the rear is a prominent, bright-tip exhaust outlet.

Large, twin five-spoke 18-inch forged aluminum wheels and P225/40R18 Continental performance tires are standard, and are tailored with the specific body enhancements to give the Cobalt SS a lower, performance-oriented stance, while showing off the large Brembo front brake calipers.

Changes & enhancements for 2009: OnStar communications system; Bluetooth hands-free phone connectivity; and iPod-compatible USB port in the radio.

Power for the SS is generated by a 2.0L Ecotec turbo-charged four-cylinder engine with direct injection. As the most powerful engine in the Ecotec family, gasoline injection technology helps the engine produce more power while maintaining lower fuel consumption. A GM Powertrain Sweden F35 five-speed manual is the standard gearbox. An automatic transmission is not offered.

GM's Delta chassis architecture provides the fundamental structural integrity that gives GMPD engineers the ability to fine-tune road feel with excellent ride and handling characteristics. An all-new FE5 Sport suspension was developed for the SS. It includes specific stabilizer bars, spring rates and damper tuning -- all designed to complement the high-output turbocharged powertrain and mitigate torque steer.

Driver-selectable modes help maximize performance whether on the street or track. The unique "no-lift shift" feature enables the Cobalt SS to achieve the best acceleration time via an algorithm in the engine controller.

Like the exterior, the interior is unique to the Cobalt SS, including SS-embroidered sport seats with suede-like UltraLux inserts, a specific gauge cluster, an A-pillar-mounted turbo boost gauge and a new shifter arrangement. Three interior color combinations are available: ebony, light gray and victory red.

For 2009, the SS coupe is equipped with a reconfigurable performance display. It allows the driver to select from a variety of performance measurements to be recorded and displayed on an LCD screen, including 0-60 mph and quarter-mile acceleration, braking performance and cornering grip (g load).

One of the important early lessons we all learn is how to take a finesse. Then, in the advanced class, we are told that we should avoid taking a finesse if we possibly can! Today's six-spade contract seems to depend on a miracle in hearts, but declarer can do much better.

West leads the diamond two and East covers dummy's 10 with his queen.

It will do declarer no good to draw trumps and play on hearts, unless East has a singleton heart honor or the doubleton queen-jack, as the defenders will have a diamond to cash when they get in. Declarer needs to throw East in while both the North and South hands have trumps left, hoping to force the defense to open up hearts for him.

So declarer carefully draws two rounds of trump with the jack and 10, leaving dummy's queen in place, then cashes the three top clubs and exits with a diamond. East will have to win and either lead a heart or give a ruff and discard. Best is for East to exit with the heart queen, but if declarer plays for split honors in hearts, he will make his game no matter which heart East plays.

The name for declarer's strategy in this deal is partial elimination — i.e., declarer was unable to draw all the trumps, so eliminated only part of them. It was West who was left with a potential exit card when East was thrown in.

Two would be a crowd for two mothers-in-law

DEAR ABBY: My mother recently moved into a senior housing complex, which she loves. Now my mother-in-law, "Irene," has decided she wants to move there, too. The problem is, my mother does not want to live near Irene. Although Mom has always been nice to her, she has never liked her.

There are fewer than 50 apartments in the complex and only one dining area. Moving Mother elsewhere is out of the question because she signed a lease. Both Mom and Irene are in their 80s. I don't want to hurt my husband of 46 years or his mother. I feel like I'm...

IN A REAL PICKLE IN MICHIGAN

DEAR IN A PICKLE: Irene is eager to move into the complex because she has no doubt heard how much your mother loves living there and she probably doesn't know about any others. Your husband should encourage his mother to start looking around for an "even better" place. Surely after all these years, the fact that your mother isn't crazy about his won't devastate him. My advice is help Irene by scouting other locations right away.

P.S. She might be more open to the idea if your mother stopped bragging and started doing some complaining.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: Our nephew recently asked family members for money to help him go on a mission for his church. Apparently he is supposed to gather 50 sponsors to pay a "tax deductible" $50 to $100 per month for two years (via direct bill or credit card), according to the forms from his church.

We love our nephew and his parents, but we do not share their religious beliefs. And quite frankly, the request has upset more than a few members of the family because the amount requested is obviously not just to support the young man, but a way to support his church.

Help! How do we respond to such a "charitable" request?

- EMBARRASSED IN ARIZONA

DEAR EMBARRASSED: Respond by writing your nephew a sweet note wishing him well on his mission, and explaining that you do not feel comfortable donating. In no way are you obligated to fork over money - via credit card or any other way - and you should not feel embarrassed for declining to donate.

DEAR ABBY: My son, "Rick," is divorcing his wife of five years, "June." It is a painful process and sad not only for them, but also the extended family.

Over the last three years June has developed symptoms of paranoia to the extent that Rick can no longer go out with friends or office associates. She thinks he's having an affair - which he is not. She checks his cell phone, reads his e-mails and has turned to alcohol for comfort.

I am relieved that June is now on medication for her symptoms, but the damage is done.

How should I respond to innocent inquiries as to how my son and his wife are doing? We have many friends who know them well. I'm hoping you can give me an appropriate response that will protect both of them until they're able to get their lives back on track.

- MOURNING IN IOWA

DEAR MOURNING: Allow me to suggest a couple: "Rick and June have decided to go their separate ways," or, "They're divorced." You are not obligated to give any more details than that, nor should you.

IF AUGUST 7 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY:

Your good judgment and even better luck during September through November will give you a chance to improve your life on many levels. Because you easily become accustomed to fortunate experiences, you might take it for granted that business plans and investments will bear fruit in late November. The fact is that you could be overly confident and should wait until January to put plans that concern the outside world, such as a new job or business, into motion. Your vision of the future, however, will help you avoid potential pitfalls - and you can count on March bringing you another round of beneficial experiences.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Avoid falling for fads and trends. In business dealings, avoid defensiveness even if you feel you are backed into a corner.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be generous to friends and co-workers. A little good will go far to smoothing

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A warm and friendly manner will take you far in your interactions. Being outgoing helps you win the hearts and trust of others.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Let the world know your agenda and which goals you seek to attain. A solid system of core values will become a sound foundation.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Spend your money and time wisely. You can attain a truly valuable item without being overly extravagant. Be a smart shopper.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): There is wisdom to be found in humility. Being sure that yours is the "only way" will only lead to errors and a serious comeuppance.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Big things may be expected of you and your prospects for the future could grow by leaps and bounds. Be courteous and cooperative.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Play by the rules and don't bend them to your own advantage. Pleasantness and gallantry allow you to share the good things in life.
