Twin Falls police wired a lawyer's office with video and audio recording devices to nab a man and woman who allegedly offered to commit perjury for pay in a violent robberv case.

The lawyer, Lynn Dunlap, initiated the police probe by telling the Idaho Attorney General's Office that Robert Barton offered to change his testimony in return for $15,000, court records show.

Over time, the alleged price ballooned to $20,000 and a second witness, Kimberly Pena-Souza, also allegedly offered to lie under oath in the case against Dunlap's client, Christopher Mark Taylor.

Taylor, 28, is not identified by name in the charges of conspiracy to commit perjury filed against Pena-Souza, 35, and Barton, 39. Barton is also accused of criminal solicitation to commit a felony. Both were arraigned Tuesday in Twin to switch law enforcement and E-911 dispatch services from Cassia County to Minidoka County even though it will cost the city nearly $8,000 more.

Hevburn City Councilman Rocky Baker cast the single dissenting vote.

"I really think we should be crunching our budget, it's $8,000," Baker said.

The city asked for a bid for the communication services in May from Minidoka County Sheriff Kevin Halverson after learning that Cassia County intended to increase the city's bill from $10,766 to $19,020 due to an increase in costs from a routing charge for the Idaho Law Enforcement Telecommunications System.

After Minidoka County was asked to provide a bid, the Cassia County Sheriff's office provided another bid without the increase.

"It's really ironic that all of a sudden the bid comes in way under," said Cleo Gallegos, Heyburn city councilwoman.

Gallegos asked Halverson if his bid would also drop accordingly and Halverson said it would not.

"I wish a representative from Cassia was here," Gallegos said at the Aug. 12 meeting.

Cassia County provided Heyburn's communication services for the past 17 years without a cost increase.

The ILETS fee is usually funded through a $1.25 monthly surcharge that residents pay on their phone bill. Heyburn residents pay the charge, but it is applied to the Minidoka County fund, not Cassia's, which has provided Heyburn's services.

Gallegos said she visited both dispatch centers to compare them and spoke "The Cassia sheriff is not councilwoman.

state and some local spending

By Jared S. Hopkins Times-News writer

An online database of spending in Idaho government has been created by the Idaho Freedom Foundation, a non-partisan think tank dedicated to free markets and limited government.

The Web site, www.ouridaho.com, includes complete expenditures at agencies and employee salaries from across the state. More than a dozen agencies are listed so far, and the goal is to increase transparency in how governments spend taxpayers' money.

"The purpose is to bring new levels of accountability to the agencies that are supported with out tax dollars," said Director Wayne Hoffman, a former newspaper reporter and aide to former Idaho Congressman Bill Sali.

kills proposal to double its pay

By John Plestina Times-News writer

JEROME – A proposal to double Jerome City Council salaries failed to pass muster Tuesday with all but one council member voting against it.

Two members said giving themselves a 100 percent raise was a bad idea.

The item was on the agenda but Councilman Chris Barber quickly made a motion to strike it Tuesday and forever. Robert Culver seconded the motion. The killing motion passed 3-1.

Marj Schmidt cast the sole no vote, effectively voting to force a council vote on the proposed pay hike.

Schmidt made no comments about her position.

Barber, however, said the council would send the wrong message to the public if they had voted themselves a raise. "I've got to challenge

In other business, the council discussed the proposed city purchase of 620 acres of land from the Bureau of Land Management that borders the southern boundary of the city for future development of an industrial park.

The city first approached the BLM about a purchase in 1996.

A cost analysis from the BLM indicates the land is valued between $124 and $500 per acre.

Mayor J.R. Churchman said a midpoint could put a purchase price at about $180,000.

No appraisal has been done.

BLM stipulatons might require recreational use of at least a portion of the land.

The council discussed the possibility of ball fields and other recreational uses in the part that does not have nearby road access and commercial development along the roadway.

In another matter, the council voted to send a letter to the owner of the property where a flea market is frequently held on North Greenwood Street advising that individual to clean up the lot. Several citizens complained to the city.

Barber also said he feels that serving on the council should not be about money.

Culver said he agreed with Barber's statements.

Barber, Culver and John Shine voted to kill the proposal.

The proposal called for increasing the mayor's compensation from $1,000 to $1,500 monthly and council salaries from $500 to $1,000.

How did the system fail Robert Manwill, and why?

aniel Ehrlick Jr. of Boise and his live-in girlfriend, Melissa Jenkins, haven't been convicted of causing the death of Jenkins' son, Robert Manwill. But an Ada County grand jury handed up indictments against Ehrlick and Jenkins on Tuesday for first-degree murder, so it's not too soon to ask how the two misfits at the center of this celebrated missing-child case fell through the cracks in Idaho's criminal justice system and its social welfare safety net.

Ehrlick is charged with repeatedly inflicting of blunt-force trauma beatings that caused bruises, abdominal bleeding and head injuries that killed the eight-year-old.

The indictment alleges that Ehrlick intentionally tortured the child "with the intent to cause suffering, to execute vengeance or to satisfy some sadistic inclination ..."

Jenkins allegedly knew what was going on and hid her son from anyone who might have tried to help him. She also failed to seek medical attention for Robert's injuries, according to the indictment.

It should never have come to that.

Ehrlick, after all, was a violent, red-flagged loser with seven years in Idaho prisons and at least a decade on probation. Convicted of burglary, battery, possession of drug paraphernalia and more, he was banned by the courts from being alone with Robert's half-sister, RayLynn.

Jenkins, who has at least three kids by three different fathers, is on probation for fracturing the skull of her youngest child, Aidan. The 1-year-old boy was declared to be in imminent danger and placed in the custody of the Idaho Department of

Idaho Panhandle's health care companion

S EATTLE – Finding Democrats in the north of Idaho can be like panning for gold in the East River of New York. The area is white, rural and extremely conservative.

But if you get sick in that land of deep lakes and ponderosa pines, a consumergoverned, nonprofit health care provider – Group Health Cooperative of Puget Sound – offers extensive coverage at some of the lowest premiums in the nation. And if you need advice on bailing twine or baby chicks, the Co-op Country Store, now in its 75th year, can provide service that the nearby Home Depot cannot.

I mention these successful member-owned businesses in a deeply red state because as the public health care option gets hammered by a campaign of disinformation, the co-op model deserves a fair hearing.

Co-ops may not work as the best way to extend care to the more than 45 million Americans without coverage. But they do tend to keep private insurers honest, are fairly good at controlling costs, and will be harder to demonize. When Sarah Palin starts making things up about co-ops, as she did with the famous nonexistent death panels, she'll be lying about a familiar model for many Alaskans.

Plus, co-ops are built around something that's been missing thus far in a debate dominated by illinformed shouters: the consumer.

The West is the native ground of co-ops. It's in our collective DNA. People buy their tents, sleeping bags and bikes from the nation's largest consumer co-op, REI, founded in Seattle in 1938, now with 3.5 million active members. It's consistently rated one of the best places to work in the United tribute.

Yes, people wince at paying $20 for a water bottle, but they can bring it back any time - and usually count on part of the purchase price returning to them in the form an annual dividend. Last year, REI paid the highest dividend in its history: $73 million.

States.

By way of disclosure, I should say I belong to REI, not out of any political conviction, but because I can get stuff there that I can't find anywhere else, the sales people are not commissionmotivated, and I like that dividend check.

Group Health, founded here in 1947, serves nearly 600,000 people in Washington and northern Idaho, with doctor-choice and an emphasis on preventive care. It's consumer-gov erned and nonprofit.

But perhaps because those consumers who run Group Health are less cold-hearted than insurance company bureaucrats, Group Health is sometimes seen as too generous, and thus unable to control costs as much as it would like. Still, the business model has much to con-

All over the West, people get their electricity, their hardware, their water from co-ops, and sell their apples, their wheat, their medical services in the same way. I can see why Sen. Kent Conrad, the Democrat from North Dakota, has been pushing co-ops. They come out of the prairie progressive tradition.

For now, Republicans have decided to wage a scorchedearth policy on health reform, a strategy that may restore them to power but won't do a thing for the majority of Americans concerned about the future. Palin, auditioning for the role of most willfully ignorant politician in America, and Sen. Chuck Grassley of Iowa, the grumpy old man who is supposed to be a serious voice for bipartisan legislation, have told whoppers about killing grandma, and have become heroes to their base because of it.

They will lie about the coop model as well. "You can call it a co-op," said Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah, "which is another way of saying a government plan."

But it's not, as hikers and farmers in Utah can tell him, or as Mormon-run welfare and retail outlets in Salt Lake City could attest.

Here in Seattle, a city known for a certain kind of caffeinated capitalism, Group Health is a major market player, and a big reason why our health care premiums are cheaper than those in most cities. We also have public power, giving us some of the lowest electrical rates anywhere, and a chain of co-op grocery stores, which I find a bit too granola-crunchy for my tastes, but which others swear by. In order for the co-ops to get beyond the vague outlines that Conrad has put forth, they will need some government seed money, $4 billion to $6 billion by most estimates – a mere week in the life of bank bailouts. They will also need to be large enough to compete, as Group Health does here.

But if there's any doubt a health care co-op can work, ask the people who own one, including more than 11,000 consumers in the sparsely populated, deeply Republican north of Idaho.

Health and Welfare last October.

Jenkins was placed on two years of supervised probation, and she agreed to cooperate with the Idaho Health and Welfare in working toward a reunification with Aidan, which included supervised visits.

So why was Jenkins permitted unsupervised contact with Robert, whose father and stepmother in New Plymouth had custody of the boy?

And if the courts deemed Ehrlick too great a danger to RayLynn, why wasn't he considered an equal risk to Robert?

Idaho family law, like that in many states, is predicated on keeping families together, when possible. What isn't clear is why Ehrlick's and Jenkins' probation officers didn't try to keep Robert from having anything to do with his mother and her boyfriend.

Reading the court files, there's little doubt that the judges who sentenced Ehrlick and Jenkins considered them to be a menace to children.

Jenkins had extensive involvement with Health and Welfare caseworkers. Were they simply too overworked to connect the dots and see potential risks to Robert and to Jenkins' other children, or was there something that prevented them from acting on their concerns?

However the system failed Robert, it failed him completely. That must be changed - by the Legislature, if necessary.

This little boy should still be alive.

Saving Fabio: 4-H sheepish at the vet's office

edicated to the hard-working, tender-hearted veterinarians in Magic Valley;

thank you for your services. My name is Christina Peters. This is my sixth year in 4-H. I took pigs the first few years of 4-H but switched to sheep last year and loved it.

I have enjoyed my lamb this year and enjoy the hands-on you have with sheep. My lamb is named Fabio, and he is a jumper. He likes to get his front legs high into the air. One morning I went out to feed my sheep and looked down on the ground and saw all this blood. I had to look a few minutes to see where it was coming from. It was my sheep's front leg. It was coming out pretty good. I took him to the house and Mom told me to wrap it and put some pressure on it to help stop the bleeding. That didn't work; the blood was coming out in a steady stream. Mom called Dad and they agreed he needed to get to the vet. Mom called around and found a veterinarian that said they would take a 4-H sheep that needed some stitching up. I was scared I might lose my sheep because every time I released my hands, the blood was coming through the wrap.

We loaded Fabio in the back of my dad's pickup. My sisters, Lillian and Megan, went with us. I was holding my sheep's leg and Megan was holding the halter to keep the sheep in the back of the pickup. The embarrassing part was I hadn't gotten dressed; I was still in my pajamas going through downtown Jerome holding on to a sheep's leg.

Megan, said "I can just see it now, the front page of the Times-News, a picture with two girls and a sheep in the back of a pickup. The caption reading, 'Girls save 4-H sheep just in time?" That started me laughing. When we arrived at the vet's, Dr. Green came out and gave Fabio a shot to put him to sleep. We rolled him on a gurney and into the office.

When the vet felt the leg, it was cold. He was afraid he might have to take it off. My question was, "Can you show a three-legged lamb at the fair?" He wasn't sure but proceeded with this mission before him. He discovered there was blood flow down the leg and he could save it. He started cutting here and there, putting a drain tube in the top of the wound. I started getting sick and expressed my wooziness. Dr. Green told me not to be brave and lie down on the floor and put my legs up on the trash can. He told me I was sharing the same spot with many a macho guy that had been in his office.

During the process, Dad asks, "Jim, I didn't think you did sheep." Dr. Green

(Jim) replied, "I don't, just Peters' 4-H sheep."

My sheep recovered, Dr. Green is my hero, we did everything right and I didn't have to find out if you could show a three-legged sheep at the fair. I am a happy 4-H'er!

Here's what Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

... when politicians listen

Spokesman-Review, Spokane, Wash.

Those raucous town hall meetings that resemble hockey brawls without referees may leave you feeling that elected political figures can't have a constructive discussion with disgruntled constituents.

Not so.

Consider the welcome change of heart displayed by several Idaho lawmakers over a tax raid they engineered a few months ago to wrap up their marathon 2009 session. They've heard clearly from a disapproving public, and some members of a joint legislative task force now admit they might have been hasty.

Hasty and desperate. The bill they crafted in May was an attempt to deal with Idaho's undisputedly severe highway maintenance needs, but only if they could avoid the onus of raising taxes. As a way out, lawmakers reneged on a deal that goes back to 1972, when recreational vehicle users in the state voluntarily gave up a refund they'd been collecting on gasoline taxes paid for fuel that wasn't used on state highways.

Their boats. off-road vehicles and snowmobiles weren't grinding up the asphalt, so they could have just kept pocketing the rebate. But they willingly let the state keep the money and send a sliver of it to the Parks and Recreation Department for trails, boat launches and similar public recreational purposes.

It was a responsible approach, in keeping with the user-fee theory that earmarks gas-tax revenue for transportation programs. The arrangement has worked well for almost four decades, but under the 2009 legislation, it will go away next July when the revenue will be kept by the Transportation Department. Parks and Recreation will be out some $4.5 million.

The nonmonetary damage, however, is to the honor and credibility of the state in the eyes of fair-minded citizens who accepted the responsibility of paying for their own impact on the outdoors.

... Idaho's highways desperately need attention, but there are better methods than the roundabout approach adopted in haste.

... doubts about Bible in school

Idaho Press-Tribune, Nampa

To members of the Idaho Public Charter School Commission:

... you will consider whether to allow Nampa Classical Academy to use the Bible in the classroom. It's an issue that has generated much publicity and discussion in our community – both for and against.

Hundreds of schools across the country use the Bible, and sometimes other religious texts, for historical and literary education. Although Idaho law seems to be more restrictive in this area, it has withstood legal challenges at the national level, and Nampa Classical Academy officials say they, too, would only use the text for historical and literary purposes ...

However, it is ... apparent that a sizeable percentage of parents who gravitate toward the concept of charter schools are religious people who believe public schools have become too secular. We suggest some parents see charter schools as a backdoor way to get their children a quasi-religious education for which they don't have to pay tuition.

There have been developments with Nampa Classical Academy that give reason for concern in this regard. Although school officials say the religious component has been removed, the school is based on the classical education philosophy, which is chock full of religious references.

School officials have also solicited help from the Alliance Defense Fund, a "Christ-centered" organization that "aggressively defends religious liberty" to explain the school's use of the Bible for nonreligious purposes.

And the school's headmaster floated the idea of exploring creationism as part of the study on the the ories of the origin of life.

... there is ample reason to be concerned that religious doctrine will soon find its way into the school's curriculum. That would clearly be inappropriate for a public, taxpayer-funded school ...

... what part of no?

Lewiston Tribune

Nearly four months have passed since Idaho's Legislature directed Fish and Game to ask their counterparts to accept some of the Gem State's wolves. And what have we learned? Well, nobody said "Hell

... Idaho discovered there are plenty of inventive ways to sav "no thanks":

• "It is without hesitation that I decline your offer," wrote South Dakota Department of Game, Fish and Parks Secretary Jeffrey R. Vonk.

• "Nice letter, but I'm not sure we're ready for wolves," said Arkansas' David C. Goad.

• "The department is grateful for Idaho's kind offer, but the department is not currently contemplating wolf reintroduction to Vermont," said Fish and Wildlife Commissioner Wayne A. LaRoche.

If it didn't know already, Idaho found out how many states feel they have enough wolves. Wyoming and Montana, for instance, were included with Idaho in the federal wolf reintroduction program. "Given the surplus of wolves currently found in our state, I must advise you that we respectfully decline your offer," says Wyoming Game and Fish Director Steve K. Ferrell ...

The man behind this ploy, Sen. Gary Schroeder, R-Moscow, said he was trying to make a point to wolf activists. If Idaho can't move wolves out of state, it will need to kill some. But does it really take a law? Idaho spent $30,000 a day keeping the Legislature in session ... With so many idle hands, you wound up with measures declaring Idaho's sovereignty, demanding U.S. flags be manufactured in this country and tying up wildlife agencies across the United States on a rhetorical quest.

If a 117-day session generated such goofiness, what would 130 days deliver?

Chamber Alliance to ease efforts to increase road funding

By Joshua Palmer Times-news writer

The Idaho Chamber Alliance will hold a regional meeting next week to discuss state public policy issues that impact local businesses.

The alliance is expected to scale back efforts to push for more transportation funding this year, but will likely take an active role in defending urban renewal agencies and encouraging funding for professional technical programs in state community colleges.

Kent Just, executive director of the Idaho Chamber Alliance, said the alliance is not likely to push for "costly" legislation in 2010 because it recognizes the decline in state revenues.

The alliance proposed a three-pronged approach to transportation fuding shortages during the 2009 Legislative session, which included:

• Increasing registration fees, gasoline tax or sales tax at the distributor level.

 Authorizing local communities to vote to pass a local option sales tax to support transportation needs.

Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter is expected to push for new revenue during the 2010 Legislative session despite major revenue shortfalls. Until then, a task force has been appointed by Otter to study the issue.

"I think that you will see us backing way off this year from transportation funding," Just said. "We will be careful to push anything that has a lot of money attached to it."

However, Just said the alliance will likely show its support for urban renewal agencies by opposing legislation that would hinder their operations. He said the alliance will support only legislation that enhances an urban renewal agencies' ability to act as an economic development tool, and that it will oppose changes that would dismantle or "constrain URA's effectiveness." Just added that the chamber alliance agenda will not be formalized until after the organization has met with all regions of Idaho.

Unemployment spike compounds foreclosure crisis

By Renae Merle The Washington Post

WASHINGTON - The country's growing unemployment is overtaking subprime mortgages as the main driver of foreclosures, according to bankers and economists, threatening to send even higher the number of borrowers who will lose their homes and making the foreclosure crisis far more complicated to unwind. Economists estimate that 1.8 million borrowers will lose their homes this year, up from 1.4 million last year, according to Moody's Economy.com. And the government, which has already committed billions of dollars to foreclosure-prevention efforts, has found it far more difficult to help people who have lost their ulation studies at the Cato paychecks than those who found their mortgage payments unaffordable because of an interestrate increase.

Ameristar earnings drop 16% Times-News staff

Ameristar Casinos saw a 16 percent drop in profit during the second quarter of 2009, the Las Vegas-based casino operator reported today.

Ameristar – whose Cactus Petes Resort Casino and The Horseshu Hotel & Casino in Jackpot, Nev., are major Magic Valley employers – reported that net income fell to $14.3 million, or 25 cents per share, compared to $17 million, or 29 cents per share, in the second quarter of 2008.

The company reported a 5.9 percent drop in net revenue from $328.1 million in the prior year period to $308.9 million in the second quarter of 2009. The company said net revenue fell at all of its properties except its Black Hawk, Colo., property.

Company officials announced earlier this month that they are restructuring some operations to adapt to economic conditions.

Company spokeswoman Bess Averett said an estimated 50 to 60 workers may be laid off at an Ameristar casino in Vicksburg, Miss.

Casinos in Jackpot are not expected to be effected by the restructuring.

Earnings before interest, taxes, depreciation and amortization improved 6.5 percent to $83.1 million compared to $78 million in the second quarter of 2008.

Ameristar owns eight casinos in Jackpot, Nev., Indiana, Colorado, Missouri, Iowa and Mississippi.

So, you have one hour to do all your disaster planning here's a brush fire bearing down on your small business. You've been told you have one hour to evacuate which means you have one hour to come up with and execute a disaster preparation plan.

This is a scenario similar to what thousands of small business owners face each year. Luckily, that's enough time to take care of a company's most valuable assets, its employees and its data.

Disaster prep is one of those tasks that many small business owners keep planning to get to, but keep putting off. And it certainly may not seem like a priority at a company that's contending with slumping sales and cash flow during a recession.

While it's understandable that some owners don't get around to disaster planning, they're courting danger.

"This is wrath of God stuff," said JohnToigo, a disaster recovery consultant based in Dunedin, Fla.

Without disaster planning, "there's no way I'd be able to recover my retirement," he said, referring to the fact that so many owners expect to some day sell their companies and live off the proceeds.

Minimal preparation - the kind you'd have to resort to if a disaster were in fact on the way - can be accomplished in an hour. And you can do much more if you have the one has a copy. Staffers should provide several different ways that they can be reached during an emergency.

Luis Yepez, vice president of Mainstream Global, a Lawrence, Mass.-based computer reseller, said owners should also let employees know they're concerned about their staffers' welfare.

"Stress the important, that you care about their safety, their well being," he said.

Just as crucial is to let employees know that you're prepared for the contingencies, that you've thought about how you're going to get the company up and running. In other words, you've thought about how you're going to protect their jobs.

Yepez noted that it's also important to know how you're going to stay in touch with your clients, customers and vendors. They need to know your situation because what happens to you affects them.

The fact is, though, if you're doing eleventh-hour disaster prep, you may not have thought it all out. But you can talk to staff and e-mail your business associates and let everyone know so they won't be left wondering about what's going on.

Disaster on the Web

The Institute for Business & Home Safety's site, www.disastersafety.org, and the federal government's guide at www.ready.gov/business go into some detail, that even at the last minute might prove helpful. now a relatively simple task that can be done quickly and cheaply. Toigo noted that it's easy to pop a flash drive into the USB ports of your computers and back up all your information including customer and vendor lists, your firm's books and inventory lists and the projects you're working on (this is something you should be doing on an ongoing basis anyhow). You can also e-mail data to a non-work address for safekeeping.

If you can't back up your data, grab your server and take it with you. If you have laptops, of course they're very easy to transport.

Besides getting your data backed up, you should also be grabbing important documents that will help you if you have to submit an insurance claim. That includes policies and, if they're easy to find, invoices to prove how much you paid for computers, furniture and other equipment. Though you may need to reference

When a subprime borrower becomes delinquent because of a hefty payment increase, the fix often involves lowering the interest rate to its original level. Unemployment poses a more difficult challenge, industry officials and consumer advocates said. During extended periods of unemployment, the borrower racks up expensive late fees that drive up monthly payments. And a new job often comes with lower effective. pay, making it more difficult to catch up.

Intermountain Gas files for rate decrease to cost adjustment

The Intermountain Gas Company filed for a 21.6 percent decrease to its annual Purchased Gas Cost Adjustment Application with the Idaho Public Utilities Commission. The request is for a decrease of approximately $72.4 million and if approved, would be effective Oct. 1.

Residential customers using natural gas for space heating and water heating will save an average 22.2 percent or $16.23 a month, while customers using natural gas only for space heat ing will save an average of $11.27 a month or 20.2 percent, based on average weather and usage. Commercial customers, on average, would see a savings of $69.21or 21.6 percent per month.

Feds gather collection from artifacts dealer

In June, Crites and his wife were among 25 people arrested in Utah, Colorado and New Mexico.

New Tech gunman records fail to predict bloodshed

By Sue Lindsey Associated Press writer

ROANOKE, Va. - Recently discovered mental health records released on Wednesday contain no obvious indications that the Virginia Tech gunman was a year and a half away from committing the worst mass shootings in modern U.S. history.

The records contain previously unseen handwritten notes from the counselors who talked to Seung-Hui Cho in 2005, and in one report Cho denied having any suicidal or homicidal thoughts. On April 16, 2007, Cho killed 32 students and faculty members on the Blacksburg, Va., campus and took his own life.

The counselors' notes indicate they were concerned for the troubled student, but the records don't contain any evidence that they saw serious warning signs to believe Cho would commit violence.

The missing files were released almost five weeks after they were disdirector of the university's counseling center.

University officials have said Cho talked to two different therapists during 45-minute telephone triage sessions in the fall, then made one courtordered 45-minute in-person visit that December.

Cho denied the homicidal thoughts in the telephone sessions and in the inperson meeting with counselor Sherry Lynch Conrad on Dec. 14, 2005. Cho met with Conrad at Cook Counseling Center after being detained in a mental hospital overnight because he had expressed thoughts of suicide.

"He denies suicidal and/or homicidal thoughts. Said the comment he made was a joke. Says he has no reason to harm self and would never do it," Conrad wrote.

That was Cho's last contact with the counseling center. The counselor wrote the next semester in January, but he laws.

covered at the home of the former didn't make an appointment.

Edward J. McNelis, an attorney for Conrad and the counselors who spoke with Cho by phone, said he had advised them not to comment because they are named in civil lawsuits filed by two of the victims' families.

A telephone message left for Conrad was not immediately returned.

The files first turned up July 16, when former Cook Counseling Center director Robert C. Miller found them in his home while preparing for those civil suits, which name him as a defendant.

Miller said in a court filing that the Cho records were in a manila folder along with several others, and he packed it up with his personal documents in late February or early March 2006 when he transferred from the center to another position at the university.

The files were released by Virginia Tech following the approval of Cho's that she gave him emergency contact family. It was their decision whether numbers and encouraged him to return to release them because of privacy

n my last column, I discussed a number of simple procedures that you could use to prepare your firearms for their initial trip to the gun range prior to the hunting seasons. Today, I'd like to follow up on that discussion by showing how a well equipped and maintained gun range is the perfect place to fine tune our firearms and hone our skills for the inevitable shooting challenges we'll face this fall and winter.

One of the great advantages afforded by a gun range is the availability of stable shooting platforms. In the old days, it seemed perfectly acceptable to slide a heavy coat on the hood of the pickup, nestle the gun in, and flail away at a pop can 25 yards off the muzzle. If I punctured its hide a couple times and came real close a few more, I was good to go.

The inevitable misses and (gasp) woundings were quickly excused away, as either a touch of buck fever or the animal moving off just as the trigger broke. In either case, these excuses only served to soothe my sagging ego and justify my unsportsmanlike lack of preparation.

But take heart, brothers and sisters, I have repented of my past transgressions!

Now each summer while the days are long and warm, I make time to head to the local gun range and put in some quality time with my rifles, pistols, and shotguns.

Most modern ranges (like Jerome and Pocatello's) are equipped with wide, rock-solid shooting benches. These stable platforms - combined with quality shooting rests and proper firing technique — help you quickly define the accuracy potential of a particular gun and loading by eliminating most human error.

Since it is difficult to hit what you can't clearly see, I always take along some high-visibility targets. My favorites are the "Shoot-N-C" targets by Birchwood Casey. These adhesive backed bulls eyes easily attach to the target boards and mark bullet and pellet strikes with a brilliant "halo" of contrasting color. Bonus "pasters" are included to cover over impact areas, thereby increasing the useful life of the targets.

These little gems are also great energy and time savers. No more need to jog down to the target every few shots to spot shortrange hits. Distant impacts can be easily viewed with good optics. Additionally, large printed sheet targets complete with turkey/waterfowl silhouettes are available for patterning your shotguns. Inexpensive and readily available at all local sporting goods stores, no sportsmen's kit is truly complete without a pack or two of these targets. With the proven advantages of a solid shooting bench and quality targets, you can now settle in to and your mind racing, this is where the true marksman shines through and executes the killing shot. And friends, there's no way to reach that level of proficiency without consistent, repeated practice.

So head out to your local range soon and hone your skills. The sport we represent and the game we pursue demand nothing less. Good shooting!

The book, broken into 10 quick-reading chapters, is full of similar straight advice. From insights into specific companies that sponsor expeditions, to funding options and do's and do-not's for naming your expedition, Blumenfeld divulges what took him years to learn the hard way.

He even discusses where to affix corporate logo patches on a parka. A small but key detail, Blumenfeld writes, to appease sponsors when the photography comes home.

A former journalist, Blumenfeld can write. His stories are personal, detailed, informative, funny, and sometimes tragic. He writes about deaths on corporate sponsored trips. He writes about great successes, like Colonel Norman Vaughan, who traveled, at age 88, on an expedition to a mountain in Antarctica long ago named after him by polar explorer Richard Evelyn Byrd.

There is a communist defection in the midst of media spree on another polar trip. In one episode, rom Idaho, about 60 of the 88 constellations in the sky can be seen over the course of the year. Among them are the northern and southern crowns.

The Northern Crown, Corona Borealis, is a circlet of seven stars. The brightest, Alphecca (a contraction/distortion of "Al Na'ir al Fekkah," Arabic for "bright star of the dish"), is about as bright as the stars of the Big Dipper. To find it, look about 20 degrees (one hand span at arm's length) above Arcturus, the bright orange hidden sword and star currently mid-way up from the western horizon at 10 p.m.

Corona Borealis represents the crown of princess Ariadne, daughter of the tyrant king Minos of Crete. Ariadne risked her father's wrath by helping the Athenian prince Theseus in his quest to defeat Minos's labyrinth. Theseus, armed with a Ariadne's thread, defeated

Its name dates back at least two millennia, to the time of ancient Greece, or earlier. Because Greece lies about five degrees farther south than southern Idaho, Corona Australis appears five degrees higher in the Greek sky than in ours.

Seeing Corona Australis requires a clear sky, a moonless night, and a flat southern horizon. It looks like a faint C-shaped arc, currently due south, very low, around 10 p.m. It sits below the left edge of the teapot-shaped asterism (star pattern) in Sagittarius.

Mythologically, Corona Australis is the laurel-leaf crown of Sagittarius, the Centaur.

Sun Valley offers plenty to keep you busy in the outdoors

By Karen Bossick Times-News correspondent

Sun Valley offers the glamorous side of rough and tumble Idaho.

But that has given America's first destination ski resort a bad rap, especially among Idahoans who think that the resort is too expensive for their pocketbooks, according to Karen Ballard, Idaho's director of tourism.

Sun Valley is actually quite reasonable when it comes to lodging prices, especially compared with other resorts, she says.

"And they have an amazing amount of free things to do once you're there," she said.

Indeed, Sun Valley has enough hiking trails and other tourist attractions to keep anyone who's short on cash busy for months on end. Then, come evening, when you can't take another step or pedal your bike another revolution, there's almost always sure to be a free concert or free lecture to appeal to the cerebral side.

Sometimes, freebies pop up where you least expect them. Did you know, for instance, that you can ride Sun Valley's chairlifts down for free after hiking or snowshoeing to the top?

Or that if you rent a mountain bike from Pete Lane's you get a free lift ticket to ride the chair to the top? That, and free use of a bike helmet.

Unlike the Grand Hotel on Mackinac Island, Sun Valley doesn't charge $10 for visitors to peruse the Hall of Fame in the Sun Valley Lodge, which features pictures of the Shah of Iran and other celebrities who have visited Sun Valley over the past 73 years.

You don't have to meet a certain dress code to walk the driveway leading up to the lodge, as you do the Grand Hotel. And you can get there via a free ride on Mountain Rides bus.

Here are some more ideas for recreating on a budget:

• Sawtooth National Recreation Area seven miles north of Ketchum offers free programs on animal furs and tracks and predator and prey at 9:30 and 10:30 a.m. Fridays. There's a free nature walk at Galena Lodge at 9:30 Thursday mornings. There are also junior ranger programs and evening campground programs at the Wood River Campground across from SNRA (call 727-5000 for details.)

• The Sun Valley area offers some of the best mountain biking in the world, according to local biking enthusiast Bob Rosso. And it ranges from relatively easy trails like the Harriman, a wide trail that stretches about 20 miles from SNRA to Galena Lodge, to more difficult trails like the Oregon Gulch trail with rock

We are a debt relief agency. We help people file for bankruptcy relief under the bankruptcy code.

I had no choice but to use the money I had set aside to pay my taxes for the down payment. Now, the I.R.S. is garnishing my wages and I have fallen behind on my home mortgage payments as a result. I'm afraid the mortgage company will foreclose soon. Because of these problems and recent catastrophic medical bills, I have to file another bankruptcy. I need my overpriced car to get to work. Can I keep it if I file again?

was forced to go to a "Buy Here Pay Here" lot. They charged me twice what the car was worth and I'm paying 30% interest.

Answer: Because less than 8 years have passed since your last bankruptcy, the only bankruptcy option open to you is a Chapter 13 bankruptcy, a program where you repay part of your debts by making a monthly payment to the Bankruptcy Trustee for a period between 3 and 5 years. In your case, you not only get to keep the car, but if you repay the car loan through the Chapter 13 Plan, you can reduce the balance owed to the actual value of the car, and you can reduce the interest rate to about 9%. You car also stop the I.R.S. garnishment and pay the delinquent taxes over time. If you want to keep your house, you can stop any foreclosure action and pay the mortgage arrearage over the term of your Chapter 13 Plan. Chapter 13 has become hyper technical since the 2005 amendments to the Bankruptcy Code, so you will want to consult with an experienced bankruptcy attorney. Chapter 13 can be expensive, but many attorneys wil agree to take part of their fee over the term of the Chapter 13 Plan.

By David Crary Associated Press writer

NEW YORK - The images are striking: One congressman's office defaced by a swastika, other congressmen heckled at public meetings, videos and placards likening Barack Obama to Hitler, private citizens with guns joining anti-Obama protests.

Outside one meeting hosted by Sen. Ben Cardin, a Marvland Democrat, authorities detained a man with a sign reading, "Death To Obama, Death To Michelle And Her Two Stupid Kids."

In this season of searing political heat generated by the health care debate, these incidents have raised divisive questions of their own. Are they simply the latest twists in a long tradition of vigorous, public engagement or evidence of some new, alarming brand of political virulence?

With the help of instructor Brandon Armstrong, participants will become expert at file naming and folder management, using flash drives, locating misplaced files, downloading e-mail attachments and many more topics that will lead them toward effective and functional computer file organization.

The knowledge you will receive has been developed and put into practice by Armstrong, vice president for economic and business development at Idaho TechConnect South. He helped establish the entrepreneurial business support group Kickstand Southern Idaho.

He has also been active in areas of marketing research and analysis, Web site development, program implementation and data collection. Students entering the class should have basic computer knowledge from which to

Is PSA blood test for prostate cancer becoming obsolete?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm a 72-year-old male. I've been going to a urologist for almost six years to have my prostate checked. He's never found anything wrong. I had a biopsy two years ago that was negative. Now he wants to do another. Six months ago, my PSA was 6.3. A month later, for the first time, I gave a urine specimen. That PSA came back 153. Do I need a second opinion?

DEAR READER: Lab values vary from hospital to hospital. When it comes to a PSA blood test, the normal range is between 0 and 4 at my local facility. The normal level may rise as men age. You are slightly high at 6.3; however, the PSA serum level has a number of drawbacks. Elevations can occur in some men because of benign conditions. Perhaps that was the case two years ago

A urine biomarker test appears more accurate for early detection of prostate cancer and may reduce the number of biopsies currently being performed. At this stage, it appears a urine biomarker combination may be used to supplement the PSA. It is anticipated this test or one similar will replace the PSA completely in the near future, but more research is needed first. In fact, the Feb. 1, 2008 issue of Cancer Research indicated the urine test has out-performed the PSA and prostate cancer antigen 3 (PCA3), a marker for early prostate-cancer diagnosis. Studies are ongoing, and the research results appear promising. Early detection of any disease - especially cancer – allows for faster treatment and possible eradication. I'll keep readers posted on developments.

To give you related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "The Prostate Gland." Other readers who would like a copy should send a self-addressed, stamped No. 10 envelope and a check or money order for $2 to Newsletter, PO Box 167, Wickliffe, OH 44092. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have problems with mild dizzy spells that make me rather unsteady at times. I thought I would consult you for a possible solution. I have great respect for your answers and will look forward to a response.

DEAR READER: Thank you for the compliment. I wish your letter were slightly longer and included such things as your age, medical conditions and what medications you are taking. Without such knowledge, I am shooting in the dark.

I will provide a general answer, but am going on a hunch you are a senior citizen.

Knowing whether you are describing lightheadedness or vertigo will help answer a number of questions. Lightheadedness can best be described as the feeling that you are about to faint. You might feel nauseated and vomit during an episode. Lightheadedness often disappears or improves when a person lies down. This may be caused by a harmless drop in blood pressure that often occurs when a person stands up from a sitting or lying position too quickly. It can also be brought on by stress, anxiety, heart arrhythmias, allergies, and more.

Vertigo feels as if you and your surroundings are moving when they aren't. This can be accompanied by a loss of balance and difficulty standing or walking. It can be brought on by such things as an inner-ear disorder, insufficient blood flow to the base of the brain and migraine headaches.

Changes in medication, drug excesses or interactions and alcohol are common causes of both conditions. Bring your concerns to the attention of your primary care physician.

Luna to oppose fee for getting cheaper bonds

BOISE (AP) - Public could run $15,000 - about schools chief Tom Luna has vowed to fight a move by an Idaho state investment fund to start charging fees to districts that apply for state bond guarantees that help reduce their interest rates.

The Idaho Endowment Fund Investment Board has 2010 Legislature to interdecided to charge districts up to $1,000 for an application to get a state guarantee, plus another 0.05 percent of total loan, the the Spokesman-Review reported Wednesday.

Space shuttle launch set for next week

CAPE CANAVERAL. Fla. – NASA will try to launch Discovery to the international space station next week, less than a month after the last shuttle mission.

Senior officials set Tuesday as the launch date following a two-day flight that review ended Wednesday. Hours later, the seven astronauts flew in from Houston.

Discovery and its crew will haul equipment and supplies to the space station, including a new treadmill named after Comedy Central's Stephen Colbert. Earlier this year, the TV comedian tried to get a future space station chamber named after him. NASA chose Tranquility instead – after the Apollo 11 moon base – and Colbert had to settle for the treadmill.

Much of the discussion during the review focused on of foam insulation that came off the fuel tank during last month's launch of Endeavour.

On Wednesday, eight or so engineers proposed further testing and even repairs, which would have bumped Discovery's flight into October. But in the end, managers found Discovery's tank acceptable and decided unanimously to proceed with a Tuesday launch, and no one appealed, said Bill Gerstenmaier, head of space operations.

"That's how close we're looking. That's how sensitive we are" to foam loss, shuttle program manager John Shannon said. "I feel extremely good about the results of the meeting. I think we have done absolute due diligence on the foam piece of it."

'60 Minutes' inventor Hewitt dies at 86

NEW YORK (AP) - Don Hewitt, a TV news pioneer who created "60 Minutes" and produced the popular CBS newsmagazine for 36 years, died Wednesday. He was 86.

He died of pancreatic cancer at his Bridgehampton home, CBS said. His death came a month after that of fellow CBS legend Walter Cronkite.

Hewitt joined CBS News in television's infancy in 1948, and produced the first televised presidential debate in 1960.

His lasting legacy took shape in the late 1960s when CBS agreed to try his idea of a one-hour broadcast that mixed hard news and feature stories. The television newsmagazine was born on Sept. 24, 1968, when the "60 Minutes" stopwatch began ticking.

He dreamed of a television version of Life, the reduced to four words dominant magazine of the mid-20th century, where interviews with entertainers could co-exist with investigations that exposed corporate malfeasance.

"The formula is simple," he wrote in a memoir in 2001, "and it's reduced to four words every kid in the world knows: Tell me a story. It's that easy."

Hard-driven reporter Mike Wallace, Hewitt's first hire, became the journalist those in power did not want on their doorsteps. Harry Reasoner, Morley Safer, Ed Bradley, Steve Kroft, Diane Sawyer and Dan Rather were among others who also reported for the show.

"60 Minutes" won 73 Emmys, 13 DuPont/ Columbia University Awards and nine Peabody Awards during Hewitt's stewardship, which ended in 2004.

It was television journalism's best show ever, said CBS Corp. chief executive Leslie Moonves. "To me, the creation of '60 Minutes' was truly genius." he said.

As a television executive, Moonves could take comfort in scheduling a Sunday evening fixture that finished among Nielsen's top 10 for 23 straight years. It was television's top-rated show four

- Don Hewitt on why '60 Minutes' was successful how "60 Minute" tip-toes to the edge between news and show business, "and I know right were that edge is?

"You hear a lot of stories about him being flamboyant and being a showman, but he really was a great news editor, first and foremost," said Jeff Fager, current "60 Minutes" executive producer. "He always had the ability to make a story better."

"I learned everything from him," Fager said.

Fager keeps in his office a framed memo that Hewitt sent out to the staff in 1990 that, at the time, scared Fager to death: "Nowhere in all of journalism are their newspeople as well paid and loudly applauded as you are," the memo said. "Come on ... start turning out stories!"

Upon the start of "60 Minutes," Hewitt recalled that news executive Bill Leonard told him to "make us proud."

"Which may well be the times, most recently in last time anyone ever said 1992-93. while no longer a 'make us proud' to anyone regular in the top 10 in else in television," he wrote Hewitt's later years, it was in his memoir. "Because still TV's most popular Leonard said 'make us proud' and not 'make us money,' we were able to do both, which I think makes us unique in the annals of television." As executive producer, Hewitt was responsible for deciding each week which stories would make it on the air. Correspondents and producers alike would wait nervously in screening rooms for his verdict on their work. Hewitt and Wallace would have lega fancy dinner party to endary screaming matches, yet stayed together like a long-married couple. During his tenure, "60 Minutes" was often a place where people came to make news. Presidential candidate Bill Clinton addressed questions of infidelity in 1992, and Al Gore used the show to announce he wouldn't run for president in 2004. Hewitt often said he was proud of his show's ability to exonerate innocent people through investigations, such as when a Texas man sent to jail for life for robbery was freed after Safer discredited the evidence against him.

Baghdad bomb attacks kill nearly 100

By Ernesto Londono and Greg Jaffe The Washington Post

BAGHDAD, Iraq – The massive car bombs that killed nearly 100 people and wounded more than 500 in Baghdad on Wednesday morning offered powerful new evidence of the enduring strength of Sunni extremists nearly two months after U.S. troops all but disappeared from Iraqi cities.

The early morning blasts, by far the deadliest since the June 30 withdrawal of U.S. troops from cities, raise questions about fresh whether American troops disengaged from Baghdad control over security, at the

Afghans vote for president amid fears of terror attacks

KABUL (AP) – Threats of Taliban violence and rumors of fraud cast a shadow over Afghanistan's election, in which millions of voters will choose a new president today to lead a nation plagued by armed insurgency, drugs, corruption and a feeble government.

International officials predict an imperfect outcome for a vote that they hope Afghans will accept as credible – a key component of President Obama's war strategy.

On the eve of the balloting, the U.S. military announced the deaths of six more Americans – putting August on track to become the deadliest month for American forces since the war began in 2001. Rising death tolls underscore the urgency of establishing a strong, effective government to stem the growing Taliban insurgency.

President Hamid Karzai, who has held power since the Taliban was ousted eight years ago, is favored to finish first among 36 official candidates, although a late surge by former Foreign Minister Abdullah Abdullah could force a runoff if no one wins more than 50 percent.

Preliminary results are expected to be announced Saturday.

An Afghan soldier gestures to drivers at a check post in the city of Kandahar province south of Kabul, Afghanistan, on Wednesday.

Faced with growing public discontent, Karzai has sought to ensure his re-election by striking alliances with regional power brokers, naming as a running-mate a Tajik strongman whom he once fired as defense minister and welcoming home notorious Uzbek warlord Abdul Rashid Dostum, allegedly responsible in the deaths of up to 2,000 Taliban prisoners early in the Afghan war.

Those figures are believed capable of delivering millions of votes among their followers, but their presence in the Karzai inner circle has raised fears in Western capitals that the president will be overwhelming majority of the Taliban.

Abdullah, son of a Pashtun father and a Tajik mother, is expected to win much of his votes in the Tajik north, where security is better and turnout likely to be bigger. Abdullah, an ophthalmologist who has railed against government corruption, was a member of the U.S.-backed alliance that overthrew the Taliban in 2001 and would be expected to maintain close ties with the West.

One fear is that Abdullah's followers may charge fraud and take to the streets if Karzai claims a first-round victory without a strong southern turnout.

Safety Larkins leaves Vandals

Idaho holds second fall scrimmage

By Josh Wright Times-News correspondent

MOSCOW - Before fall camp began, Idaho football coach Robb Akey expressed delight in the sheer amount of talent the Vandals had at a cross-section of positions. The secondary wasn't at the top of list, but it at least had a stash of veterans.

After Wednesday's news, a layer of that experience is gone.

Safety Virdell Larkins, last year's leading tackler and a vocal presence on defense, has left the program, Akey announced after Idaho's second scrimmage. The third-year coach declined to give a reason for the departure, but did say it was "an unfortunate situation."

"I'm going to leave it between he and I, not to be rude," Akey told reporters. "It's a personal situation, and I wish him the best. I hope it works out for him. The thing is, he did graduate and get his degree."

Larkins, an Oakland, Calif., product, started every game as a junior for the 2-10 Vandals in 2008. But after being demoted in the offseason, an undisclosed issue arose.

Larkins did not participate in the team's first scrimmage last week and apparently left

Peterson signs with NAIA baseball squad Wendell grad expects to play early at Concordia By Mike Christensen

Times-News writer

Being quite a catcher made Jasper Peterson quite a catch. The 2009 Wendell graduate signed a letter of intent this week to play collegiate baseball for Concordia University, a NAIA program in Portland, Ore.

A three-Peterson year starter for the Trojans, Peterson departs today for his college home, with practice for fall ball beginning Aug. 31.

"I really like the school and coaches," said Peterson. "They were really straight forward."

Wendell coach Jesse Koopman has seen Concordia play on a few occasions and said it's a quality brand of baseball.

"It will be a fairly big step," Koopman said. "(Jasper) needs to work hard and listen to his coaches, which he's always been good at doing. ... He can surprise some people."

Ever an overachiever, Peterson was Wendell's leading batter in 2008, hitting .544 with three home runs as a junior. He improved as a catcher in 2009, while hitting .357 and leading the Trojans in runs scored. He didn't strike out once during Moscow shortly thereafter.

Fellow safety Shiloh Keo said Larkins' exit is a huge blow for the team, particularly on the leadership front. Keo and a group of Idaho veterans went to Larkins' house last week to persuade him to stay, but it was to no avail.

"We said what we could, but in the end it was his decision," Keo said. "We can't tell him he's gotta stay."

The Vandals will continue to use Keo and Jeromy Jones as starters. Brandon Artz. Quin Ashley and perhaps freshman Aaron true Grymes will also see time at safety. Isaac Butts played cornerback last year but is listed as a safety and could switch between positions.

"It's affected our depth." Akey said. "It has not affected our starting lineup as this point in time. I (would) like to have him stay and compete and get a job out there."

Keo said he was unsure what happened to prompt Larkins to leave, labeling it a shocker for the whole team.

"I don't know if it was maybe the fact that he got put behind somebody or he got in a fight with somebody," he said. "I am not sure what it was. It was just a big loss for us."

Larkins' departure isn't the only setback the Vandals are coping with nearly two weeks into camp. Running back Princeton McCarty has missed the last week with a tweaked knee, while defenlineman Michael sive Cosgrove and starting linebacker Tre'Shawn Robinson left Wednesday's scrimmage with knee injuries.

Akey said McCarty is expected back to practice today, while he's been told "to think positive" regarding Cosgrove's injury and

Because of the running back situation at Idaho State and Morgan's reputation after a record-setting career at Minico High School, he may actually get

"When I read that or hear that it just makes me want to go out and practice harder," Morgan said after practice on Wednesday. "I want to prove to everybody that if they think I can play now, that I'm able to."

Morgan isn't alone. Two other Magic Valley area players decided to make ISU their college football destination: Jerome graduate Jake Lammers and Wendell's Justin Brandsma.

Favre effect: Vikings tickets snatched up by fans

The Associated Press

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. -The Vikings have sold more than 3,200 season tickets since news broke that Brett Favre was coming to Minnesota. That's in approximately a 24-hour span.

Chief marketing officer Steve LaCroix said the team has sold about 11,000 single-game tickets during that time as fans clamor over the arrival of the veteran quarterback.

Seats for the game against Green Bay on Oct. 5 are only available through a season ticket. There are roughly 6,000 season tickets remaining. The Vikings had to race to beat the blackout deadline for several games last season, including needing two extensions from the NFL for the first-round playoff game against Philadelphia.

Now, there are only a limited amount of seats for the preseason game Friday night against Kansas City, in which Favre is expected to make his Vikings debut.

"Blackouts, obviously we don't want to have to face that issue like we have the past few years, but there is still a lot of work to do on our front," LaCroix said.

Merchandise is also moving. LaCroix said several hundred pre-orders for Favre jerseys were placed online Tuesday. The purple No. 4s were to show up in stores on Wednesday.

"It's fun to be part of this and have the fans react the way that they did. To see them outside lining the streets was something

Curtis: Injury, low offer derailed signing talks

By David Bashore Times-News writer

College Former of Southern Idaho pitcher Tyler Curtis said an injury to his pitching elbow derailed his plans to sign a contract with the Florida Marlins. Curtis and the Marlins were unable to reach a deal before Monday's 10 p.m., MDT signing deadline for 2009 Major League Baseball draftees with remaining college eligibility. The Marlins selected Curtis in the 13th round of the June draft.

Curtis said the Marlins discovered a torn ligament in his elbow during a physical in Miami. The team was still willing to sign him to a contract, Curtis said, but the offer was below what he thought he was worth. He did not provide details of the Marlins' offer.

"My arm was hurting, and I went to a doctor up here and he said it was nothing. During the physical they took an MRI and told me my UCL (ulnar collateral ligament) was torn and I had to

Mariners get Hall in trade with Brewers

DETROIT - The Milwaukee Brewers traded slumping third baseman Bill Hall to the Seattle Mariners on Wednesday for minor league pitcher Ruben Flores.

Hall hit 35 home runs in 2006 and was rewarded with a $24 million, four-year contract. But he was hitting only .201 with six homers and 24 RBIs in 76 games when the Brewers designated him for assignment last week.

Hall is expected to join the Mariners today in Detroit. Seattle is on the fringe of the AL wild-card race, and starting third baseman Adrian Beltre is on the disabled list.

The Brewers are expected to pay a large portion of the money that remains on Hall's deal - more than $2 million this year, $8.4 million next year and a $9.25 million club option for 2011 with a $500,000 buyout.

White House honors NASCAR champs, drivers

WASHINGTON (AP) -NASCAR Three-time Sprint Cup champion Jimmie Johnson had the gas to get to the White House on Wednesday, where President Barack Obama honored the 2008 winner as well as auto racing.

"NASCAR is a uniquely American sport," Obama said beneath the South Portico, flanked by nine of the 12 drivers who competed last year for NASCAR's top prize. Three drivers had scheduling conflicts and could not attend.

Obama said NASCAR drivers work to support U.S. troops, local schools and environmental innovation. Obama said the sport certainly has grown since "moonshiners" raced in Daytona Beach, Fla., to become a service-oriented organization known around the world.

the NASCAR community is the belief that service isn't just something you do once in a while when it's convenient. It's a way of life," the president said. "That's the face of America that you show to the world."

In a race on Sunday, Johnson took the lead with two laps to go but he gambled on his fuel and ran out of gas. Instead of winning, he finished 33rd. It was the third time this season that Johnson has run out of gas, but that wasn't a problem track and they can see these on Wednesday.

Joining Johnson at the White House were other Sprint Cup drivers and past champions. Special guests included wounded soldiers Center Medical Washington and campers from the Victory Junction Gang Camp in Randleman, N.C., which NASCAR supports.

"Families can go to the great racers and enjoy a good family event that lasts for a while, and it's affordable," he said. Venus, Serena Williams to own part of NFL's Miami Dolphins found a new sport: pro football.

The tennis-playing sisters will become the latest celebrities to own a stake in the Miami Dolphins, a person familiar with the deal said Wednesday. The person didn't want to be identified because the team plans an announcement Tuesday.

Another person close to the negotiations said an agreement was near but not yet final. That person also didn't want to be identified because the announcement has not been made.

"There have been preliminary talks, and hopefully it'll work out," Serena Williams said Wednesday night after a 6-3, 6-2 win over Yaroslava Shvedova in Toronto. "That would be a great opportunity for both of us. You never know. We'll see what happens."

The Williamses live in Palm Beach Gardens, Fla., about an hour's drive from the Dolphins' stadium. Their new role will be significant in part because the NFL has no African-American majority team owner.

Lawyer: Roethlisberger accuser e-mails absolve QB

PITTSBURGH – A former Nevada casino worker who accused Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback Ben Roethlisberger of rape in a civil lawsuit should drop the case because her own e-mails and text messages prove she wasn't assaulted, his attorney said.

The woman "should abandon her lawsuit immediately and admit that Ben Roethlisberger did not rape her," Roethlisberger's attorney W. David Cornwell said in a statement e-mailed to The Associated Press. "We believe that (the woman's) own words directly refute the scurrilous allegations made in her complaint."

The woman contends in the lawsuit filed last month in Washoe County District Court

Cornwell provided the AP and other news outlets with 18 pages of e-mails and texts purportedly between the 31-year-old woman and a male friend.

ones ready to unveil $1.15 billion stadium to N

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) Jerry Jones could have just renovated Texas Stadium. Or he could've built the Dallas Cowboys a nice, new place for about $650 million.

Then Jones really thought about it.

With only one chance to do something like this, he didn't want just another stadium.

He wanted one of the biggest and the absolute best, something that would establish a new category of sports venues, like the Astrodome did decades ago and, in his wildest dreams, the way Rome's Colosseum did centuries before.

Nearly $1.2 billion later, Jones believes he might have done it.

"This," he says, "is the real deal."

Cowboys Stadium is a masterpiece of architecture and engineering, a facility that manages to be trickedout without feeling like an amusement park, overwhelmingly big without making visitors feel swallowed.

The list of features is a roll call of first-this and biggestthat. The most stunning are ticket. the video boards, a pair of high-definition screens that run from 20-yard line to 20yard line and are 25 yards tall, each the equivalent of more than 2,000 52-inch TVs.

Since the doors opened two months ago, visitors have walked in expecting the grandest thing they've ever seen. For many, it still exceeds expectations.

Futbol is a big part of the stadium's plans, too. A special layer of turf was put in for a soccer pitch and an international tournament had the honor of being the stadium's first sports event. Don't be surprised if this place becomes the centerpiece of a U.S. bid to host the World Cup.

But the stadium isn't any concert, it was an unprecedented double-bill for the king and queen of country music, George Strait and Reba McEntire. The Jonas Brothers kicked off Wednesday night, and U2 is coming next month.

Tony Romo, DeMarcus Ware and the Cowboys will get their turn Friday night in a preseason game against the Tennessee Titans. Fox is broadcasting it nationally, certain to make the building the star of the show.

Cutting her apron strings is painful for mother and son

DEAR ABBY: I am a recent high school graduate who is starting college soon. I am blessed to be part of a great family. The problem is, my mother is TOO good. She has always been kind and loving, but she insists on doing everything for me.

I consider myself to be independent, but she is constantly finding some way to "help." When I tell her I need some space to grow, she cries. I love my mother dearly, but how can I convey to her that I'm a big boy now without hurting her feelings?

- GROWN UP ON THE EAST COAST DEAR GROWN UP: Your mother appears to be suffering from a common condition known as "Impending Empty Nest Syndrome." It's form of anxiety and depression that often hits parents when a child is about to leave home and no longer needs the constant parenting that has been the norm for the prior 18 years. reacting to is called hovering. Your mother may be doing it because she's savoring every last bit of mothering she can get in before you fly off to ever-increasing independence. Please be patient with her because in another month you'll be out of there and she will be starting to adapt.

IF AUGUST 20 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your year ahead might seem like a roller coaster of highs and lows, but you will be able to navigate the valleys and troughs like a pro if you hang on tight. December and January are critical months when you may ping-pong from negativity to optimism, so keep your nose to the grindstone and avoid taking on fresh obligations. Next March, key relationships could come into focus. Good relationships may experience some trying times, but will survive the testing period but relationships that just aren't strong enough or worthwhile could break apart. Next May and June are perfect for a fresh commitment, new job or enhanced popularity. ARIES (March 21-April interests or take a fresh look 19): Reduce discord by con- at your appearance. centrating on the unity of VIRGO (Aug. 23purpose masked by differences. You and an adversary may have a common cause.

DEAR ABBY: God bless you! You've done it again. In American 2001. Ex-Prisoners of War got 600plus responses to your printing our POW VA benefit alert in your column. You helped many former POWs and their widows get the VA benefits due them.

As of today, your July 18, 2009, column about benefits available to widows of veterans who died of ALS has generated more than 2,000 emails and many letters and phone calls! I will be plowing through all these e-mails for weeks to come, but I'm afraid people will be waiting too long for my responses.

That's why I'm asking you to please help me again by letting your readers know The behavior you're that if their veteran husband died of ALS, they should call the Department of Veterans Affairs at (800) 827-1000. This will get them to their nearest VA regional office. They should ask to speak with a service officer about their ALS claim for COM-PENSATION, not pension. This will expedite the claim process.

Abby, thank you for reaching out to veterans with their service-connected health issues. God is blessing many through your unique column.

- FRED CAMPBELL AMERICAN EX-PRISONERS OF WAR

DEAR FRED: I'm delighted that my July 18 column will help so many - and I hope today's column will, too. Readers, please pay attention to this "heads up' because Fred is swamped!

DEAR ABBY: Is it considered adultery if a husband encourages his wife to sleep with other men? My husband enjoys the idea of me sleeping with other men and then telling him about it. THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"Had it been his sister.

No one would have missed her." - Anon.

KIND A THIRD AND A REPORT OF A DECK AND A DECK AND

North nor South did anything outrageous to reach four spades. But the unfortunate duplication in the heart suit meant that the defenders appeared to have the upper nothing better to do than try to set up a club winner for his side after

East had followed with a small diamond at trick one. So he switched to a low club, and declarer won in dummy and played a trump. Since West had no way to reach his partner's club winner, declarer could draw trumps and set up North's diamond winners quired whether West was expecting to use a secret passage to reach their club winner. Neither defender noticed that there was a way to set the game. Can you see hope for more than the club queen from East. After cashing his second high diamond (there was also a chance that East had a singleton diamond), West must try to prevent declarer from getting two discards on dummy's high diamonds. He should lead a third diamond at trick three, win the first round of spades, and lead a fourth diamond so East could trump. The only hope is that South started with four clubs and that one discard would do him no good. As the cards lie, this would set the game.

The bidding should have made it clear to West that he could not ANSWER: This hand looks too good for a simple call of two spades, (but if you were 3-3 in the minors, you might make that call). You have just enough to jump to three spades. This suggests a shapely hand, since with more in high cards and less shape you might start by doubling one no-trump or cue-bidding two diamonds.
