Liyah Babayan and her father, Martin Babayan, pose with a proclamation signed by Twin Falls Mayor Lance Clow making April 24 'Twin Falls Armenian Memorial Day' in memory of those who suffered under the final years of the Ottoman Empire in 1915 and the Azerbaijan persecutions of the late 20th century. The Babayans and other Armenian Americans in Twin Falls are now trying to get approval from the Twin Falls City Council to create a memorial in Twin Falls City Park.

Unknown what agencies would be up for elimination

By Jared S. Hopkins Times-News writer

On Saturday, Rep. Jim Patrick, R-Twin Falls, said at a political rally to expect some changes in state government.

"We not only will cut state government but we'll probably eliminate some services and some agencies because after you cut so far, there's nothing left," he told more than 100 people in Twin Falls. "And it's better to eliminate the agency than it is to drag on with just a few people who don't accomplish anything."

The idea to do away with certain state agencies is gaining momentum among lawmakers as the economy continues to struggle and they prepare for a 2010 Legislature expected to revolve around tight budgets. Patrick's message was repeated Tuesday at a GOP party event, and echoed by fellow legislators like Sen. Bert Brackett, R-Rogerson.

"We're not talking probably about just cutting back some programs we may have to prioritize and eliminate," Brackett said. "It's going to be painful and it's going to be a real challenge." The state's new fiscal

Rammell howls at Otter for not buying wolf tag

This time, the howling isn't coming from the wolves.

Rex Rammell, a longshot gubernatorial candidate seeking the Republican nomination, criticized Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter on Wednesday for not making good on a promise to buy the first wolf tag. Tags for both a governor and a canhunting the gray wolf went on sale Monday.

On Monday, Otter attended in Lewiston and spoke at the funeral of Bruce Sweeney, a 10-term state legislator who served while Otter was lieutenant governor. When told this, Rammell said. "That's a lame excuse."

Sometimes it's about celebrating a change that's already blossomed.

The Armenian American community in Twin Falls wants to donate a tree and plaque to City Park to commemorate why its members live here and to recognize their role it the city's makeup. Their effort is to memorialize the Armenian Genocide of 1915 and to recognize that event - and those in the late '80s - as a major reason why its community moved to Idaho. Genocide is defined as the systematic killing of a national or ethnic group.

"Because of those atrocities, because of those conflicts that happened miles away, we are here, and we are part of this community," said Armenian community spokeswoman Liyah Babayan. "We nurture this community, and this community nurtures us, and part of us being here is we'd like to play a role in designing this community."

WATCH a video interview with Liyah Babayan.

Recreation Commission voted 9-0 on Aug. 11 not to approve the request, and the Twin Falls City Council discussed the issue for about 30 minutes Monday. Councilmen were supportive of the Armenian community's efforts, and there was a motion for approval. Ultimately the council voted 6-1 to table the issue and return it to the parks commission for reconsideration, and for Babayan to meet with commission members.

Babayan, who estimated there are hundreds of Armenians or their descendants in Twin Falls, said the community simply wants to recognize what brought them to Idaho. There are similar memorials across the country, including in Boise.

"If the vote occurred out of ignorance or anything like that, that's unacceptable for us in our community,"

The Twin Falls Parks and Babayan said. "So we're willing to do whatever it takes to go forward."

MEAGAN THOMPSON/Times-News

Parks and Recreation Director Dennis Bowyer told the council the commission felt the request tied to Armenian history, but not Twin Falls?

Brent Jussel, who sits on the commission and was at Monday's council meeting for an unrelated matter, said he couldn't recall anyone at the commission who didn't like the idea of the memorial. Rather, he said the application didn't meet the requirement of city code so it recommended staff take the opportunity to advise the applicant to resubmit the application.

It was also the commission's first attempt to consider a donation after the city tweaked its donation policy in July. For example,

WASHINGTON (AP) - Sen. Edward M. Kennedy will lie in repose Thursday and Friday at the John F. Kennedy Presidential Library and Museum in Boston before his funeral at a city church, the senator's office said. Kennedy is to be buried at Arlington National Cemetery near his slain brothers, said Kennedy spokesman Keith Maley. The cavernous basilica on Tremont Street, built in the 1870s, was where Kennedy prayed daily while

"Right now, Massachusetts needs two voices in the U.S. Senate," Patrick said.

Senate President Therese Murray and House Speaker Robert DeLeo, both Democrats, haven't said whether they back the change. DeLeo said there would likely be a public hearing on the issue within the next month.

Without the change, Senate Democrats could fall one vote short on any health care overhaul legislation this fall. Health care had been Kennedy's core issue for decades.

Before Kennedy's death. Democrats held a potentiallv filibuster-proof margin in the Senate, but some moderate Democrats have been wavering. Another Democrat. Sen. Robert Byrd of West Virginia, has been seriously ill and often absent.

The succession law was changed in 2004, when Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., became his party's presidential nominee and Republican Mitt Romney was the state's governor. Democratic lawmakers changed the law to block Romney from installing a Republican to serve until the next general election.

Lincoln Co. establishes penalties for community center noise By John Plestina Times-News writer

SHOSHONE _ The Lincoln County Commission on Monday put some teeth into restrictions on noise and alcohol use at the community center at the Lincoln County Fairgrounds.

The commission acted in response to ongoing complaints from several Shoshone residents living near the fairgrounds. All have said music has been excessively loud when the center has been rented for parties and other events.

Commission Chairman Ierry Nance said a new contract for rental of the center will include possible penalties for abuse of the alcohol policy and noise if it is louder than levels the building administrator establishes as acceptable.

Nance didn't specify what possible penalties might be.

"We're doing some changes in the building, trying to abate the noise," he said of problems with air conditioning not working and doors left open.

On July 27 Lincoln County placed a temporary moratorium on events that include music and alcohol at the center. From that date until Aug. 24, only events that were previously booked were allowed.

Fairgrounds neighbors met for the third time Monday with Lincoln County and Shoshone officials about loud music and alcohol-related problems.

Another meeting is planned for Oct. 12, in the community center at the fairgrounds.

Wash. town's troublesome turkeys spared from death

LA CONNER, Wash. (AP) Troublesome wild turkeys in the small northwest Washington tourist town of La Conner have been spared the chopping block.

The Skagit Valley Herald reports the City Council has decided that adoption is the best way to thin the flock of about 20 birds down to a more manageable number of seven. The newspaper reports that adoption offers flooded the council after reports circulated that the birds might face a grim end.

Residents have been complaining that the birds ruin yards, peck at houses and leave behind feathers and droppings.

Two council members had suggested killing the whole flock. But on Tuesday, the turkeys were spared.

Mayor Ramon Hayes says he lost sleep thinking about the ramifications of removing the turkeys entirely. The birds have become a bit of a tourist draw for the town.

AZUSA, Calif. (AP) - A 750-acre wildfire northeast of Los Angeles fouled the air breathed by millions of Southern Californians on Wednesday, but the flames were burning away from suburbs on the foothills of the San Gabriel Mountains and no homes had been lost.

Blick should speak up about Lowe's discrimination allegations

e don't know if Idaho Transportation Board member Gary Blick of Castleford made discriminatory remarks about Pam Lowe before the board hired her to direct the Idaho Transportation Department in 2006.

According to a tort claim filed by Lowe last week, when the all-male board considered hiring her Blick said, "No little girl would be able to run this department," or words to that effect, and "What are we going to do when she decides to start a family?"

If Blick didn't say that, he needs to publicly deny it. If he did, he should apologize.

The board fired Lowe in July after a tumultuous three-year tenure. She'd worked for ITD for more than a decade.

Tort claims are often precursors to full-fledged lawsuits, which means there's a good chance Lowe, Blick and the other board members will meet in court. Without doubt, the department's attorneys have advised ITB members to avoid public comment.

But in Blick's case, he should speak up.

If he were on the board of directors of a $671 million company, Blick would have been asked to account for his remarks by now. The private sector takes allegations of gender discrimination very seriously.

Companies that don't tend to get sued - and risk major financial losses.

They also risk human capital – the very employees they need to succeed.

According to the agency, ITD's female employees include its manager of government affairs, its contract compliance officer, its GARVEE engineer, its project accountant, its human services director, its risk-management director, its internal auditor, its information technologies manager, its highway environmental compliance officer, its local roads engineer, its construction engineer, its highway safety manager, its vehicle services manager, its grants management supervisor, its roadway data manager, two of its six assistant district engineers and two of its seven senior port of entry inspectors. ITD couldn't do the job it does without them. When Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter starts vetting possible successors to ITD board member Bruce Sweeney, who died last week, maybe he should consider appointing a woman.

Our view: The Idaho Transportation Department's hundreds of female employees deserve an explanation from Idaho Transportation Board member Gary Blick.

Last week, The Washington Post reported on a new Justice Department inquiry into photographs of undercover CIA officials and other intelligence personnel taken by ACLU-sponsored researchers assisting the defense team of Guantanamo Bay detainees. According to the report, the pictures of covert American CIA officers – "in some cases surreptitiously taken outside their homes" were shown to jihadi suspects tied to the 9/11 attacks in order to identify the interrogators.

The ACLU undertook the so-called "John Adams Project" with the National Association of Criminal Defense Lawyers - last seen crusading for convicted jihadi assistant Lynne Stewart. She's the far-left lawyer who helped sheikh Omar Abdel-Rahman, convicted 1993 World Trade Center bombing and N.Y. landmark bombing plot mastermind, smuggle coded messages of Islamic violence to outside followers in violation of an explicit pledge to abide by her client's court-ordered isolation.

TOR TURE CIA

Working from a witch-hunt list of 45 CIA employees, the ACLU team tailed and photographed agency employees or obtained other photos from public records.

And then they showed the images to suspected al-Oaida operatives implicated in murdering 3,000 innocent men, women and children on American soil.

Where is the concern for the safety of these American officers and their families? Where's the outrage from all the indignant supporters of former CIA agent Valerie Plame, whose name was leaked by Bush State Department official Richard Armitage to the late Robert Novak? Lefties swung their nooses for years over the disclosure, citing federal laws prohibiting the sharing of classified information and proscribing anyone from unauthorized exposure of undercover intelligence agents.

ACLU Executive Director Anthony Romero refused to comment on Project CIA Paparazzi and instead whined some more about the evil Bush/CIA interrogators. Left-wing commentators and distraction artists are dutifully up in arms about such "inhumane" tactics as blowing cigar smoke in the faces of Gitmo detainees. But it's Romero blowing unconscionable smoke:

"We are confident that no laws or regulations have been broken as we investigated the circumstances of the torture of our clients and as we have vigorously defended our clients' interests," he told the Post. "Rather than investigate the CIA officials who undertook the torture, they are now investigating the military lawyers who have courageously stepped up to defend these clients in these sham proceedings."

Courage? What tools and fools these jihadi-enablers be. Civil liberties opportunism is literally a part of the al-Qaida handbook. A terrorist manual seized in a Manchester, England, raid in 2005 advised operatives: "At the beginning of the trial ... the brothers must insist on proving that torture was inflicted on them by state security before the judge. Complain of mistreatment while in prison." Iihadi commanders rehearsed the lines with their foot soldiers "to ensure that they have assimilated it."

Since 9/11, the selective champions of privacy have recklessly blabbed about counter-terrorism operations, endangered the lives of military and intelligence officials at Gitmo, and undermined national security through endless litigation. They accused Bush immigration officials of xenophobia for pursuing visa over-stayers from jihadi-friendly countries. They accused local law enforcement, FBI and other homeland security officials of "racial profiling" for placing heightened scrutiny on mosques and jihadi-linked charities.

Now, caught red-handed blowing the cover of CIA operatives, they shrug their shoulders and dismiss it as "normal" research on behalf of "our clients."

But don't you dare question their love of country. Spying to stop the next 9/11 is treason, you see. Spying to stop enhanced interrogation of Gitmo detainees is patriotic. And endangering America on behalf of international human rights is the ultimate form of leftist dissent.

Bush/Cheney left Obama/Biden a mess

I want to congratulate all loyal Republicans for always being right. They continuously say that big government can't do anything right and then when they are elected, they proved it.

Isn't it brilliant that when you predict something and then you become in charge you can make it come true? Wasn't it clever of Cheney when he held secret meetings with oil executives and then developed our energy policy that made the oil companies verv much richer, resulted in $4.50 a gallon gasoline and increased our imports of foreign oil now at about 60 percent?

What did Bush/Cheney accomplish with their large tax cuts primarily to the ultra-rich? They were so appreciative that 52,000 are being investigated for illegal overseas bank accounts. The national debt doubled from $5 trillion to more than $10.6 trillion, and chief executive officers now make 262 times as much as the average worker or more than $11 million per vear. In Japan this multiple is about 10.

Also, Bush/Cheney ended their administration with the complete collapse of our economic system, and handed Obama/Biden a $1.3 trillion deficit on Day 1. Remember Bush started his administration with a $128 billion surplus.

After ignoring all warning signs and advice about 9/11, Bush/Cheney lied us into a war with Iraq that has so far cost $1 trillion (all on ours kids' credit cards), 300,000 deaths and major loss of prestige in all the world. Aren't Republicans patriotic? They'll spend $10 for a plastic/magnetic ribbon saving "we support our troops," but they won't support the taxes to pay for them.

Now when the Obama/ Biden administration tries to solve some of the leftover problems including health care that costs us 16.7 percent of our GDP while the rest of the advanced countries in the world spend 9.8 percent of their GDP, and we don't cover about 47 million citizens and they cover 100 percent of theirs, what do the Republicans do? They just say no and talk about Obama's alleged lack of citizenship, and phony death lists.

I wonder why Republicans try so hard to get elected when they know government can't do anything beneficial.

Who wins if health care reform fails?

If the Republican right succeeds in halting health care reform, who will have won? Here's a hint: On Aug. 14, Bloomberg News reported that 3,300 Washington lobbyists are working on health care: "That's six lobbyists for each of the 535 members of the House and Senate, according to Senate records, and three times the number of people registered to lobby on defense. More than 1,500 organizations have health care lobbyists and about three more are signing up each day. Every one of the 10 biggest lobbying firms by revenue is involved."

Corporate lobbies will have won. National Republican figures – especially the loud-mouthed ones – will conclude that they too won TV ratings anyway. And the town hall bullies will think they have won a coup perhaps aimed at "breaking" our first black president.

What all Americans especially those wading up to our ears in health care costs or mired in worry over having been denied insurance or being unable to afford insurance - will have won is the status quo. The same health care and health insurance system we have now. The big prize: keeping our massive health care crisis

THE LIGHTER SIDE OF POLITICS

OTHER VIEWS

Here's what Idaho's newspapers are saying about ...

... Pam Lowe's unquiet goodbye

Lewiston Tribune

It's not uncommon for a state administrator to dispute her firing. But former Idaho Transportation Director Pamela Lowe has gone far beyond doing just that. In a preliminary legal filing, Lowe has made allegations that challenge the integrity of the top echelon of state government.

Among her charges: • Sexism – Lowe accuses Transportation Board member Gary Blick of Castleford of making inappropriate comments when she was hired. "Mr. Blick stated that 'no little girl would be able to run this department' or words to that effect."

• Cronyism – Lowe "forced out" Republican activist Julie Pipal from the state transportation department, which the former director links to subsequent legislative attempts to strip her of political independence. A friend of Pipal's, Senate Transportation Committee Chairman John McGee, R-Caldwell, sought transforming Lowe's job into a mere gubernatorial appointee.

• Inside deals – Lowe says she was steering tax dollars away from Washington Group Division and CH2M Hill and toward her shop. The two firms have a $50 million contract to manage the $1 billion

"Connecting Idaho" project, funded by bonds against future federal highway dollars. Past attempts to trim that contract generated heat from Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's office – such as former Otter Chief of Staff Jeff Malmen and Otter's voice on the transportation board, Chairman Darrell Manning, Lowe said. The companies spread $17,000 in contributions to various candidates including Otter and McGee.

Though only allegations, they can not be dismissed. Lowe is the first women to hold her job and the taint of sexism at the agency could undermine future recruitment. The Connecting Idaho management contract already has a troubling history. Initially, transportation staff recommended the New Yorkbased Parksons Brinkerhoff for the work, only to be overruled by the board. Later, it turned out then-Gov. Dirk Kempthorne's aide Lance Giles had contacted five of the seven transportation board members on behalf of the local firms. Giles later took a job with Washington Group.

... As long as Lowe's charges remain unresolved, you can't be sure whether Idaho's leadership is actively resisting gender equity ...

At minimum, restoring public confidence demands an independent probe. Until that happens, Otter can forget soliciting Idahoans' support for higher fuel taxes and registration fees.

... not conservative enough

Idaho Mountain Express, Ketchum

Even though the rate of property foreclosures in Blaine County is about half that in the rest of the state and nation, it hasn't dodged the foreclosure disease that spread faster than a flu pandemic.

As in other resorts all over the world, people bought and sold properties here in the belief that prices would continue to go up each year at rates unobtainable in almost any other kind of investment.

That belief left buyers who purchased property at the top of the market holding the bag. That's particularly hard on working people and their families for whom a foreclosure is a story of dashed dreams.

It didn't have to be this way. In Idaho, legislators pride themselves on being ultra-conservative. Gov. Butch Otter proudly calls Idaho the reddest of the red states. Yet, it turns out Idaho wasn't conservative enough when it came to regulating mortgage

That honor, according to a recent story in the Wall Street Iournal. goes to Vermont.

Back in the 1990s when the creative juices of Wall Street's financial geniuses were flowing unchecked, Vermont regulators paid attention when a sub-prime mortgage lender began charging exorbitantly high fees and when lenders began to look for clients who were desperate to borrow money.

The Vermont Legislature wasted no time in passing laws that required lenders to tell consumers when rates offered to them were substantially higher than others in the market ...

The lawmakers also astonishingly made mortgage brokers responsible to borrowers - not lenders. That made brokers responsible for loans that went bad and made them very cautious about the financial health of the people to whom they made loans.

The result? In July, just one in 28,300 housing units in Vermont was in some stage of foreclosure and the state ranked near rock bottom in foreclosures.

Compare that to Idaho's one in 253 housing units in foreclosure in the same month ...

If Idaho's self-described "conservative" lawmakers had done the same, its citizens' financial health would be far better today.

... cheaping out on wolf tags

Moscow-Pullman Daily News

Nothing short of a federal court order will stop hunters from legally stalking wolves in Idaho ...

It's too bad the state isn't cashing in on the rush to buy tags.

More than 4,000 were sold by mid-afternoon Monday, and Idaho Fish and Game officials expect as many as 70,000 tags to be purchased at $11.50 a pop for residents and $186 for nonresidents.

Those are paltry sums considering how much manpower likely will be needed to ensure no more wolves are taken than the 220 approved for removal ...

Wolves are no less a prize for hunters, particularly those who proudly proclaim their ill will on the backs of their trucks and sport utility vehicles. There isn't a bumper sticker "biologist" in the state who wouldn't pay top dollar to stare down a wolf through their sights ...

The online tormentor put up noxious commentary on Google's blogger.com, calling Cohen a "skank," a "ho" and an "old hag" who "may have been hot 10 years ago."

Cohen says she's "a lover, not a fighter." But the model had stood up for herself before. In 2007, at a New

"The words 'skank,' 'skanky' and 'ho' carry a negative implication of sexual promiscuity," wrote Justice Joan Madden of State Supreme Court in Manhattan, rejecting the Anonymous Blogger's assertion that blogs are a modern soapbox designed for opinions, rants and invective.

The judge cited a Virginia court decision that the Internet's "virtually unlimited, inexpensive and almost immediate means of communication" with the masses means "the dangers of its misuse cannot be ignored. The protection of the right to communicate anonymously must be balanced against the need to assure that those persons who choose to abuse the opportunities presented by this medium can be made to answer for such transgressions."

ethanol back? S

Shares of ethanol producers have been rising recently along with oil prices. The underlying Industry assumption is that Spotlight the U.S. economy is recovering and gasoline demand is set to increase as well.

Com-based ethanol has been held up as a key to America's energy supply future because it is homegrown and renewable. But producers were battered over the last year as prices collapsed because of overproduction and a drop in demand for fuel.

Agribusiness giant Archer Daniels Midland is one of the young ethanol industry's biggest players. It operates new ethanol refineries throughout the Midwest. ADM Chairman and CEO Patricia Woertz told investors earlier this month that ethanol profit margins are improving after months of over production.

ADM stock increased .58 percent to $27.90 per share on Wednesday. Pacific Ethanol, which owns facilities in Burley, fell 7.4 percent to .50 cents per share.

tariff to shift a greater portion of the cost of new construction for services from our existing retail customers to those developers and new customers requesting the construction," said Ric Gale, Idaho Power's vice president of regulatory affairs.

The commission in July ruled that developers of subdivisions will receive from Idaho Power a $1,780 allowance for each singlephase transformer installed within a new development and a $3,803 allowance for each three-phase transformer.

Developers will be responsible for any costs above the allowance.

The increased allowance was adopted in place of an $800 per lot refund developers now get as customers move on to the lots and begin receiving electric service.

Developers say the allowance adopted by the commission "approves an inherently discriminatory rate structure" by imposing unequal charges for new customers receiving the same level of service as existing customers.

Idaho off-road Web site gets upgrade

By Andrew Weeks Times-News writer

Off-road enthusiasts have a new resource when looking for places to trail ride.

The Stay on Trails Idaho Off-Highway Vehicle Recreation Guide, redesigned and launched on the Web earlier this month, lists a number of suggested trail venues throughout the Gem State. The site provides safety tips, registration info, links to the partnering agencies, a hunting link, and other

"We thought it'd be a good idea to create a one-stop-shop type of thing to help people find places to ride and (provide other information)," said Steve Steubner, a spokesman for Drake Cooper, the company that designed the Web site. The company worked on the site throughout the spring and summer, he said.

Stay on Trails launched in 2004 as an outreach campaign to educate off-road users about ethical and responsible trail usage and off-road safety. Partnering agencies include the Idaho Department of

SITES TO VISIT BEFORE THE WEATHER TURNS

By Andrew Weeks Times-News writer

By the time next month's off-road edi- favorite times to ride, too. tion comes out, the seasons will have changed. That's OK for some folks, whose favorite time to trail ride is in the fall.

I can't say that I blame them. Tree leaves are splashed with autumn's colors and the weather is cooler. It's one of my

Only thing is, winter follows fall.

Sometimes Jack Frost sneaks in early. For now, while we have time, I thought I'd invite you with me on a tour of the Magic Valley to see some of the area's off-road sites. Don't worry, it won't cost you anything. I'll drive:

As we begin our loop around the Magic Valley, let's first stop in Kimberly.

That buzzing noise, do you hear it? Don't worry, I've been here before. It's not bumble bees. It's dirt bikes jumping over the man-made hills of Rock Creek Race Track (shown above).

In my opinion, the race track is one of Magic Valley's gems. Oddly, there are still plenty of people I've talked with who've never heard about the track, they've said. If you're one of those folks, now there's no excuse: You've been informed.

Be sure to visit the race track, 3816 E. 3100 N., this weekend to watch motocross riders compete in the EIMA/Idaho State races. Then come back Sept. 6 for kart races, and Oct. 24 for the Intermountain Motocross-Enduro Race. If you want to try out the track yourself one day, that's OK too. Rock Creek has it all.

We have to move on, but be sure to get more information from track owners Denis and Bobbie Sandrock at 423-4869 or 731-3841.

Or visit http://www.rockcreekracetrack.com.

We're going to make a quick stop farther south at the South Hills.

We won't stay long, because chances are you already know about this place, especially if you've ever visited the area on a weekend. With its wide, easy trails the area is a favorite place for families to gather for a day or two of simple riding.

Simple doesn't mean boring. There's plenty to see in the Hills, especially as fall approaches and the leaves turn.

One of my favorite trails is Wahlstrom Hollow. But that's only one of many. There are miles of trails to explore, including the 11-mile Rock Creek ATV loop that begins near the Diamondfield Jack campground.

According to the redesigned Stay on Trails Web site, pick up Trail No. 239 from the campground and ride north several miles to Trail No. 241. Turn right and ride to Trail No. 163, then go left and ride to Trail No. 004, the third fork of Rock Creek. Go south several miles until you hit Forest Road No. 500. Turn right to return to the campground.

applicable to off-road users.

A lesson from Buzz Lightyear

few years back my son got a Buzz Lightyear for Christmas. You know the one, about a foot tall with voice commands.

If you left Buzz' face mask up while the voice commands were turned on, he'd remind you to close the visor by saying something like: "Ah, the wind in my face. Yuck, bugs in my teeth."

I know now what ol' Buzz was referring to, poor guy. Recently, after not riding my motorcycle for Andrew a while, I decided to take it for a spin around my neighborhood.

I most always wear a helmet - mine has a full-face visor – but this time I didn't because, I figured, I was just riding around the block.

Bad decision.

I hit a swarm of gnats and was literally bombarded with the bugs, which flew down my shirt, up my pants and into my hair and face.

If I didn't keep my mouth closed I'd likely still be picking bugs out of my teeth. I thought of Buzz Lightyear.

When I returned home I shook my clothes out and showered. Then I saw my helmet sitting alone, unsmeared by splattered bugs, and again thought of Buzz. He reminded me there's more than one reason to wear protective gear, and I told myself I wouldn't make the same mistake again.

A hopped on my bike a couple days later, but this time didn't keep my mouth closed. Instead, I laughed at the bugs as they hit my face shield.

Revenge of the Sith? No, that's a different movie.

But somehow I can't help but think Buzz Lightyear would be proud.

ingle-speed and fixed-gear bikes are painfully en vogue at the present moment. Skinny jeans. Mustaches. U-locks in back pockets. Take a glance in the urban core of almost any American city and within minutes you're bound to see a hipster mimicking a bike messenger.

Now, I am no innocent here. I have been on a fixie for four years. I enjoy the control and subtle machismo it takes to ride a bike in traffic when your legs are locked to the motion of a chain and spinning wheels.

Plus, a trend that promotes something healthy like riding a bike is fine by me. For Richard Snook, a former racer and fixed-gear cyclist since the 1970s, the current climate proved an apt time to launch a company.

Wabi Cycles (www.wabicvcles.com) is Snook's small outfit in Los Angeles. He started selling single-speed bikes this past spring. He sells frames and two complete models – a steel bike for $650 and an $800 Scandium model.

Both Wabi models come standard as fixed-gear bikes, meaning you cannot coast. But there is a singlespeed freewheel upgrade option.

Hipsters may pick up a Wabi for its clean, logo-less look. It is comfortable for commuters. The bikes are a good value for an everyday rider, too.

Snook said the bikes – which are available boxed and shipped anywhere in the lower 48 states for $20 were designed for climbing and descending, cornering, accelerating, and comfort.

I tested the Wabi Lightning, which has a scandium-enhanced aluminum frame and weighs only 17 pounds complete. The bike is marketed as light, fast and agile. I will not disagree.

Wabi calls the Lightning a "do-everything fixie." It can swing urban riding in heavy traffic or training on the open road in a peloton. I have ridden it more than 200 miles in a two-month test period, and the bike has proven to be solid, fast, reliable and comfortable.

The Lightning's components are hand-picked and solid. The frame and carbon fork make for an amazingly light and responsive system. The frame geometry balances a speedy position with comfort - I can go 30 miles on the Lightning without feeling cramped, which is something not possible with other fixedgear bikes I have tested.

At www.wabicycles.com you pick frame size, color, bar width, crank-arm length, gearing and other attributes to design a custom Lightning or Classic model, the latter being the company's $650 steel bike. Add a freewheel and the bike has a flip-flop rear hub for $15 extra.

My bike came in a box via ground shipping. It took less than 20 minutes to assemble, adjust the seat, and add pedals. Then it was ready to ride – on the road or in the city, skinny jeans and a mustache not necessarily required.

Test your optics against Jupiter's disappearing moons

s Galileo discovered four centuries ago, Jupiter's four largest moons can be seen with modest optics. Most binoculars can show all four, but sometimes one or two are "missing."

Moons can disappear in one of three ways. Jupiter's equator is tilted just three degrees from its orbital plane, and the Galilean moons' orbits are all within one degree of the planet's equator. So the moons pass behind the planet once each orbit.

For the same reason, they also pass in front of Jupiter. Since planet and moons are similar in color and brightness, the moons are hard to see when crossing Jupiter's face (transiting). Easier to see are their shadows, which appear as black specks that slowly traverse Jupiter's disk.

Finally, a moon can pass into Jupiter's shadow. Depending on where earth is in its orbit relative to Jupiter, the shadow may be hidden behind the planet as well, or can extend off to the right or left side.

Next week brings a rare coincidence. For about twoand-a-half hours next Wednesday night Jupiter's moons will "disappear."

Jupiter will rise around 5:15 p.m., invisible in daylight. Not long after the Sun sets at 8:11 p.m., Jupiter will become visible, just to the right of the rising, nearlyfull moon.

By the time the sky is dark enough for the moons to be visible in your optics both Io (innermost of the Galilean moons) and Callisto (outermost) will be hiding behind the planet's disk. The other two moons, Europa and Ganymede, will appear just off the planet's eastern (left) limb.

At 9:58 p.m., Europa will move in front of Jupiter's face, followed by Ganymede at 10:43 p.m. Until 12:29 a.m., when Io emerges from Jupiter's shadow, unless your telescope and the atmosphere are good enough to show Europa and Ganymede superimposed on the planet's face, Jupiter will appear moonless, which won't happen again until 2019.

OFF-ROAD SITES TO VISIT BEFORE THE WEATHER TURNS

We're almost halfway done with our tour and look we're we've landed - the Cottrell Mountains near Burley.

Let me tell you about this place. It's one of the trails where I had most fun when I visited with Times-News photographer Justin Jackson and his Dad, Mike Jackson, who supplied the machines.

We went up early one rainy morning, unloaded our machines, and drove into the fog. By noon the fog had lifted, but a cold wind had picked up. That didn't stop us from going into the back hills and seeing what nature provided. The area offers a number of trailheads, which will take riders into places like Nibbs Canyon or atop the hills where a bird's-eye view of the valley floor is spread out.

Watch for wildlife, there's plenty around.

Want to come back? From Interstate 84, take exit 216 for State Highway 25 toward Albion/Declo. Then turn right onto State Highway 77 until you pass the turnoff for Pomerelle Mountain Ski Resort. Keep going several miles and watch for trail heads off to your left, which will take you to the mountains.

As we head north, we're bound to hit the Fairfield Ranger District.

Here, in the Sawtooth National Forest north of Fairfield, trails offer more diversity for the experienced dirt bike rider.

The area's got something for everyone, from easy, wide trails for ATV riders to gnarly single-track trails for the dirt biker. It also offers a variety of trails of different lengths, anywhere from 5- to 100-mile trails. How quickly and efficiently they are traveled depends on the difficulty of the track and the proficiency of the rider, according to Theron Thomas, president of Magic Valley Trail Machine Association.

"There are all sorts of obstacles – roots, creek crossings, uphill, downhill," he said in a former Times-News article.

A popular spot for four-wheel riders is the Wilson Flat ATV trail system, which includes about 11 miles of loop trails specifically designed for ATV use. According to one Web site, these trails offer great views of Anderson Ranch Reservoir, the South Fork of the Boise River and surrounding area.

We didn't bring any trail maps this time, but you can get them from the Fairfield Ranger District office the next time you visit. For directions and more information: 208-764-3202.

The Bureau of Land Management area west of Hagerman isn't short on areas to ride, according to Max Yingst, recreation planner for the Jarbidge Field Office. # Replacing electrolytes may help relieve leg cramps

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have been reading your column for years and have been helped numerous times by your advice and the advice of your readers. I have some input into the nightly leg cramps experienced by lots of people. I have been suffering from these for at least 56 years. It may have started during my pregnancy, but I distinctly remember having them while on the delivery table when my daughter was born 56 years ago.

I used quinine for many years, but it was taken off the market. I tried drinking tonic water because of the quinine content, but couldn't stand the taste of it. A few years ago, I had colon surgery, and while in the hospital, my legs were in an apparatus that came on every few minutes. It felt like a giant blood-pressure cuff, and I was told it would aid my circulation and prevent clots, since I wasn't able to get up and move around. It also had the added benefit of keeping away the cramps.

When I came home, the cramps returned, so one of my other daughters bought me some Pedialyte. It worked immediately. I buy the individual-serving-size bottles (it comes in a fourpack) so that it doesn't get wasted since I don't get cramps every night. They usually occur in the middle of the night, so I keep it in my bedroom closet so it is handy.

I have noticed that I get cramps only when I have lost a lot of fluid, such as from sweating or using diuretics because of occasional edema.

DEAR READER: Pedialyte is an electrolyte solution used to replace minerals and fluids in children who have lost them due to vomiting or diarrhea. There are also store brands available that are cheaper and achieve the same results.

CALDWELL – Attorneys for a 14-year-old Caldwell boy accused of shooting his father to death have withdrawn their motion seeking a bond reduction in the case

Bradley Ford met with attorneys before a court hearing in the case Wednesday.

Zachary Neagle's defense attorney had asked the court to release the teenager on his own recognizance or to reduce his $300,000 bond.

Neagle is charged with first-degree murder after his father, Jason Neagle, was shot with a high-powered rifle as he slept on his couch on May 16.

Ford has issued a gag order in the case, barring the attorneys from talking publicly about it.

Neagle's trial is scheduled for Nov. 3.

Other solutions to nightly leg cramps include pickle juice and sports drinks, such as Gatorade or Powerade. My soap-underthe-bed-sheets trick may be beneficial as a preventive measure. For those who have more frequent leg cramps at night or when resting, I recommend examination by a physician to check for the possibility of Restless Legs Syndrome. This condition may not respond to typical legcramp treatments and may require the use of prescription medication.

husband had an echo done to finalize a nuclear stress test. Somehow, during the test, the scar from his triple bypass got burned. A day later, it blistered, peeled and hurt terribly. Two days later, he saw his physician who made no mention of it. His whole chest hurt for three weeks. What should we do?

DEAR READER: To the best of my knowledge, an echocardiogram (ultrasound of the heart) does not produce heat and, therefore, cannot cause a burn. Return to your physician for a frank discussion of the situation. It may have simply been a reaction to the gel used during the test or some other substance he came into contact with rather than a burn from heat.

Two-thirds get medical tests with radiation dose

By Alicia Chang Associated Press writer

many as two-thirds of 83 million CT scans were adults underwent a medical test in the last few years that exposed them to radiation and in some cases, a potentially higher risk of cancer, a study in five areas of the U.S. suggests.

It is the latest big attempt to measure how much radiation Americans are getting from sometimes unnecessary medical imaging.

Though the annual average radiation exposure from X-rays, CT scans and other tests was low, researchers found about 20 percent were exposed to moderate radiation doses and 2 percent were exposed to high levels. "Super Xrays" to check for heart problems accounted for nearly a quarter of the radiation people received.

"Given the growing use of medical imaging procedures, our findings have the health of the general population." the researchers reported in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

The study did not directly address whether medical imaging is being overused, but some doctors are concerned that advanced tests like CT scans are being over-prescribed, and that evidence of their value in certain situations is lacking. In some cases, tests like MRI scans, which do not involve radiation, could be used instead.

In the last three decades, CT scans have emerged as a popular way to get a 3-D LOS ANGELES – As peek inside the body. Some performed in 2007. Doctors use them to get detailed views of the brain. chest, abdomen and pelvis. The radiation risk from a single CT, or computed tomography, to an individual is small, but some doctors are worried about the buildup over time.

"CT scans produce beautiful pictures, but they generate a huge amount of radiation compared with a standard X-ray," said Dr. Michael Lauer of the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute, who was not part of the research.

Some insurers, citing spiraling costs and safety concerns, are requiring pre-authorizations and setting other limits before patients can receive these scans.

For their study, researchers led by Emory University analyzed insurance claims from 952,420 important implications for people between ages 18 and 64 to determine how many had an imaging test and the estimated radiation dose. All were covered by UnitedHealthcare in five regions: Arizona, Dallas, Wisconsin and two areas of Florida.

Nearly 70 percent had at least one medical test between 2005 and 2007 that exposed them to radiation doses double than what would be expected from natural sources in the environment such as radon in soil and cosmic energy from the sun, the researchers said.

Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON - NASA will test the powerful first stage of its new Ares moon rocket today, a milestone in a program that has already spent $7 billion for a rocket that astronauts may never use.

When that first stage is tested, it will be mounted horizontally. The engine will fire, shake and make lots of noise. But by design, it will not leave the ground. The same could be said for NASA's plans to go to the moon, Mars or beyond Earth orbit. It's not so much a physical challenge for engineers as it is a financial challenge for budgeteers. The $108 billion program to return to the moon by 2020 was started five years ago by then-President George W. Bush. But a special independent panel commissioned by President Obama concluded that the plan cannot work on the existing budget schedule because it's likely to cost at least an extra $30 billion through 2020. Even NASA's soon-to-be-retired space shuttle fleet has proved that getting off the ground isn't a given, with two launch scrubs this week of a mission to the international space station. The space station is finally finished. Yet NASA's long-standing plans call for junking the outpost in about seven years. If the agency keeps that schedule, it would mean that in the next decade NASA's astronauts could be going nowhere if there's no moon mission. Obama's special panel looked at other options available for the space program – such as skipping the moon and going directly to Mars or an asteroid, or just cruising in the solar system. But they kept using words like "least worst scenario" during their final public deliberations earlier this month. In their report due Monday, they will also give advice about the end of the shuttle and space station programs.

about swine flu's toll

of estimates

By Lauran Neergaard Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON – Government health officials are urging people not to panic over estimates of 90,000 people dying from swine flu this fall.

"Everything we've seen in the U.S. and everything we've seen around the world suggests we won't see that kind of number if the virus doesn't change," Dr. Thomas Frieden, head of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, said in a C-SPAN interview taped Wednesday. While the swine flu seems quite easy to catch, it so far hasn't been more deadly than the flu strains seen every fall and winter – many people have only mild illness. And close genetic tracking of the new virus as it circled the globe over the last five months so far has shown no sign that it's mutating to become more virulent. Still, the CDC has been preparing for a worst-case flu season as a precaution in July working from an estimate slightly more grim than one that made headlines this week - to make sure that if the virus suddenly worsened or vaccination plans fell through, health authorities would know how to react. On Monday the White House released a report from a group of presidential advisers that included a scenario where anywhere from 30 percent to half of the population could catch what doctors call the "2009 H1N1" flu, and death possibilities ranged from 30,000 to 90,000. In a regular flu season, up to 20 percent of the population is infected and 36,000 die.

The White House told the panel to aim to stay within current budget estimates.

"If you want to do something, you have to have the money to do it," said panel

In this Aug. 14 photo a new space vehicle stands ready in NASA Kennedy Space Center's Vehicle Assembly Building in Florida. The final segments of the Ares I-X rocket, including the simulated crew module and launch abort system, were stacked on Aug. 13 on a mobile launcher platform, completing the 327-foot launch vehicle and providing the first entire look of Ares I-X's distinctive shape. The Ares I-X flight test is targeted for Oct. 31.

member and former astronaut Sally Ride. "This budget is very, very, very hard to fit and still have an exploration program."

The options that face the White House come down to variations and combinations of these themes: Pay more, do less or radically change American space policy. The most radical idea would be to hand much of NASA's duties to private companies.

"The problem is the size 14 foot in the size 10 shoe," said American University public policy professor Howard McCurdy, author of several books about the American space program. "It's just really hard to fit it all in. A lot of the assumptions made in 2004 (for the Bush plan) have just not materialized."

The panel will not tell the president which choice to make. That will be up to Obama. Until NASA is told to change course, it will continue with the Bush plan.

Thus, the first big test of moon program hardware is the rocket stage firing today in Promontory, Utah. That test is of the main get-off-the-ground engine in the Ares I rocket. The full test rocket, complete with a dummy crew capsule and escape system, Ares I-X, is supposed to get a launch test at Kennedy Space Center on Oct. 31.

"We don't think that's the most likely scenario," CDC flu specialist Dr. Anne Schuchat said of the presidential advisers' high-end tally.

What's really expected this year? CDC won't speculate, finding a numbers game pointless as it tries to balance getting a largely complacent public to listen to its flu instructions without hyping the threat.

Along with how the virus itself continues to act, the ultimate toll depends on such things as vaccinations beginning as planned - currently set for mid-October - and whether the people who need them most get them. CDC also is working to help hospitals keep the notso-sick from crowding emergency rooms and to properly target anti-flu drugs to the most vulnerable.

What is likely: A busy flu season that starts earlier than usual, Schuchat told The Associated Press. This new H1N1 strain never went away over the summer, infecting children at summer camps in particular. Already clusters of illnesses are being reported at some schools and colleges around the country, KABUL - It's been a summer of setbacks in Afghanistan - with rising casualties, a divisive election and growing public doubts about the war in the United States and among key allies.

Analysis

The year began with President Obama promising a new beginning for an old war - long ignored and under-resourced by the Bush administration as the spotlight fell on the conflict in Iraq.

As part of a new emphasis, Obama ordered 21,000 troops to Afghanistan and replaced the top U.S. commander with Gen. Stanley McChrystal, who unveiled a strategy shifting the focus from killing insurgents to protecting Afghan civilians, a mindset that helped turn the tide of the Iraq conflict.

At the same time, the administration promised to build up the capabilities of the Afghan government, accelerate the training of Afghan soldiers and police and help the Afghan leadership combat corruption and the flourishing drug trade, which helps finance the insurgency.

Months later, the American effort appears to be faltering.

Hopes that the Afghan presidential election would produce a leader with a strong national mandate have been cast into doubt by allegations of widespread fraud in the Aug. 20 balloting.

Even if he does, however, fraud allegations have so poisoned the political atmosphere that it will be difficult to bring together social and political groups opposed to the Taliban. At the worst, the controversy may trigger street riots and splinter the country along ethnic lines.

Taliban intimidation kept many Afghans from the polls in the south last week - despite major U.S. and British military operations aimed at making the vote secure.

U.S. officials have made little effort to gloss over the problems, perhaps mindful of the backlash that stung the Bush administration after years of false optimism in Iraq.

Last weekend, Adm. Mike Mullen, chairman of the Joint uation in Afghanistan as "serious and deteriorating" and told CNN that "I don't think that threat's going to go away."

All this comes as public support for the war both in the United States and Britain is wavering.

A recent Washington Post-Nearly 300 international ABC News poll found that just the war in Afghanistan was not worth fighting. A survey last month in Britain found that 58 percent of the respondents and 52 percent wanted British troops withdrawn immediately.

All these negatives are coming preparing to submit a report to the president next week that may include a recommendation for thousands more troops. But sending more troops to an unpopular war could be a hard sell among many of Obama's fel-

Police: Iraqi forces recover stolen Picasso

BAGHDAD (AP) - Special forces have recovered a stolen Picasso and arrested a man planning to sell the painting during a raid of his house in southern Iraq, Iraqi police said Wednesday.

The painting, "The Naked Woman," apparently had been among the artwork looted from Kuwait during Saddam Hussein's 1990 invasion, said police spokesman Maj. Muthana Khalid.

It was seized Tuesday during a raid on the house belonging to the suspect near the mainly Shiite city of Hillah. about 60 miles south of Baghdad.

Khalid said the man was trying to sell the painting for $450,000, but some Iraqi experts who saw the painting said it was worth $10 million.

The painting, which was signed by Pablo Picasso and bore inscriptions from "The Museum of Kuwait" was being held as evidence while the suspected was interrogated, Khalid said. It appeared to have been folded several times in a picture of the painting that was released.

Goods and artwork from the neighboring country's wealthy homes and its national museum were hauled back to Iraq after the invasion, which led to the 1991 Gulf War.

ruled Wednesday that agents had no right to seize baseball's anonymous drug-testing results from 2003, an infamous list that tarnished America's pastime and some of its biggest stars.

The decision by the 9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals is a victory for the players' union, which has argued for years to have the results of the 104 players who allegedly tested positive for performanceenhancing drugs in 2003 returned.

"This was an obvious case of deliberate overreaching by the government in an effort to seize data as to which it lacked probable cause," Chief Judge Alex Kozinski wrote in the 9-2 decision.

Union lawyers said the government returned the evidence shortly after earlier trial court rulings. The panel said federal agents trampled on players' protections against unreasonable searches and seizures, though the ruling came too late to spare players linked to the list, including Yankees star Alex Rodriguez and Red Sox slugger David Ortiz, who admitted they were on it.

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) - union had good reason to A federal appeals court want to keep the list under wraps.

"The risk to the players associated with disclosure, and with that the ability of the Players Association to obtain voluntary compliance with drug testing from its members in the future, is very high," the judge wrote. "Indeed, some players appear to have already suffered this very harm as a result of the government's seizure."

The government seized the samples and records in April 2004 from baseball's drug-testing companies as part of the BALCO investigation into Barry Bonds and others. The list of 104 players said to have tested positive, attached to a grand jury subpoena, has been part of a five-year legal fight, with the players' union trying to Barring a last-ditch force the government to Kozinski said the case was a significant test of the government's search and seizure powers in the digital age, and issued guidelines for investigators to follow in future raids that included submitting computers to independent computer experts for sorting of data.

Pitino: Sex scandal has been 'pure hell' for family

Rick Pitino said Wednesday a sex scandal involving a woman accused of trying to extort him has been "pure hell" for his family, and that the airing of her claims made him angry enough to speak out against his lawyer's advice.

Pitino spoke at a hastily called news conference hours after Louisville police released audio and video recordings of phone calls and an interview with Karen Cunagin Sypher, the woman at the heart of the scandal. Pitino has told police that he had sex with her six years ago.

Sypher claims in the interview that Pitino sexually assaulted her. Prosecutors did not pursue charges against Pitino, and Sypher is now accused of trying to extort millions from the coach. She has pleaded not guilty to federal charges of extortion New Plymouth on Friday will be played at and lying to the FBI.

The coach lashed out at the media for again reporting on her accusations by airing clips of the interviews Wednesday.

"Everything that's been printed, everything that's been reported, everything

LOUISVILLE, Ky. – Louisville coach that's been breaking in the news on the day Ted Kennedy died is 100 percent a lie, a lie, Pitino said. "All of this has been a lie, a total fabrication of the truth."

"It has been pure hell for her and my family," he said.

"I admitted to you I made a mistake, and believe me I will suffer for that mistake," he added.

Sanchez was selected as the team's starting quarterback by coach Rex Ryan on Wednesday, making him the first rookie slated to open a season under center for the Jets.

"This comes with a lot of responsibility," a beaming Sanchez said. "As happy as I am, I know that this is just the beginning and I'm just excited, really excited, to get to play with such great players."

The fifth overall draft pick out of Southern California beat out Kellen Clemens for the job and will make his regular-season debut at Houston on Sept. 13.

"This is something I've always wanted to do and dreams are coming true now," Sanchez said. "It's a special opportunity."

Ryan, who made the announcement after practice, said early in training camp he'd like to make a decision on a starter by the Jets' third preseason game.

The Jets' next preseason game is Saturday night against the Giants.

DOCUMENTS: QB'S ACCUSER DRAFTED SPOOF RESIGNATION

CARSON CITY, Nev. -Court documents say a woman who's accusing Ben Roethlisberger of raping her at a Lake Tahoe hotel last year drafted her own resignation letter in an e-mail as a spoof after having sex with the Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback.

The e-mail and others between the woman and Guy Hyder, chief of security at Harrah's Lake Tahoe, were filed in Washoe District Court in Reno as part of a motion filed by lawyers for casino employees seeking to dismiss the woman's case.

The woman, a VIP casino hostess, filed the civil suit in July, claiming the Super Bowl-winning quarterback raped her in 2008 in a hotel penthouse across the street from a golf course where he was playing in a celebrity tournament.

Mom was right to insist son earn a spot in college dorm Paul Struchen • Trimming We can handle all your trimming

DEAR ABBY: I disagree with your advice to "Perplexed Mom in New York" (June 20), who is requiring her son to live at home his first semester of college because of "less than stellar" behavior during his senior year of high school. I am a college administrator in charge of dismissals. It is not that difficult to get a dorm room mid-year because there are dismissals, transfers and students who change their minds about their living arrangements.

If "Mom" warned her son that his high school conduct would have an impact on her decision to allow him to live on campus, she should stick to it. She should not let him bully her into giving him something he doesn't deserve. He needs to understand that his behavior cost him his dorm space. She made the right call.

I recommend spelling out in writing exactly what he will need to do to move on campus. He should be allowed to move only if he complies 100 percent.

College is a gift to be earned. There is no legal obligation for parents to pay for their child to attend. And when there is trouble, parents must act quickly and not attempt to block consequences their kids need to experience. It's all part of the learning process.

- ANN IN NEWARK, DEL.

DEAR ANN: Thank you for lending your professional perspective. Responses to that letter poured in from making new friends. Living

IF AUGUST 27 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your ambitions seem to know no bounds during the year ahead. An important aspiration may become almost an obsession. This could take the form of an intense desire to become physically fit, to own your own business or to build a huge portfolio. Although your desire to wield power and create wealth peaks next February, you will have numerous opportunities to develop strategies and plans during business December. You may be put in touch with a mentor or make key decisions then, educators, students and parents who "kindly" reminded me that times have changed since my college days. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: The cost of housing and food service at college can often equal or exceed the cost of tuition. Students who have the advantage of living close to campus can save a significant amount of money by living at home. To fully experience university life and meet new friends, they can become involved with the many campus organizations that are sponsored.

Higher education is very expensive, and students need to understand the costs. Any method to cut down on the expense, including living at home, should be discussed by parents and children. In today's work force, a college education is extremely valuable and one can be obtained without breaking the bank.

– UNIVERSITY ADMINISTRATOR IN COLORADO

DEAR ABBY: My advice to that mother and her son is to call the school and ask if there is any space left in the dorms - fast! The freshman year of college is a critical time in a person's life, one in which students are open to and romantic discussions on the back burner.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Time may be on your hands, so spend it well. Rather than shoving more irons into the fire, spend time with loved ones.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Watch your p's and q's unless you wish to sleep at the "Heartbreak Hotel." Hold off on making imporadviser who will help you tant commitments, as well. phone calls and visitors. It on campus in a dorm makes it much easier and allows them to better integrate into campus life.

Times News, Twin Falls, Idaho

While there are many commuter students across the nation, they can suffer from loneliness and depression because of their detachment from the rest of the students on campus. I, too, went to a school within reasonable driving distance from home, and I know from experience how difficult it can be.

– TRACY IN WASHINGTON, D.C.

DEAR ABBY: How long has it been since you've lived in a college dorm? You advised that dorms provide supervision and structure. Abby, countless unstructured, unsupervised and uncondoned activities go on there. "Perplexed" should stick to her guns. If her son's senior year was "less than stellar," his freshman year at college could be a disaster. Moving into the dorms midway through the school year won't end the world. I saw kids do it all the time. Things have changed, Abby. Wake up and smell the brewskis!

- SEEN IT ALL IN KENTUCKY

DEAR ABBY: That young man should pony up some of his own money if he wants to live on campus, because then he will be more likely to appreciate the investment. I had a job all through high school and college. Paying my own way made it that much more satisfying.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. You could be asked to step up to the plate. Do your best and you'll be able to hit a home run. This is the time to show your stuff.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Financial gain will seem elusive unless you examine the details more carefully. Study all the angles before making a decision.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You might be pulled in different directions due to LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): may be difficult to focus on You must look far and wide one particular task. AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You are incredibly attractive, but there might be a tendency to bring up delicate subjects at a bad time. Avoid confrontations. In the world championships last autumn, USA's elimination by Poland was something of a surprise. This was a deal that could have changed the match result.

Against the aggressively bid diamond slam, West led a heart. East took the ace and thoughtfully switched to the diamond five. Declarer's prospects had improved considerably. Maybe that caused him to take his eye off the ball for just a moment. South let the diamond run to West's 10 and dummy's jack — and the contract could no longer be made.

Declarer cashed the club ace, ruffed a club, took the heart king (while pitching a spade), and ruffed a heart. Then he trumped a club high, played the spade king and a spade to the ace, ruffed a club, and cashed the diamond queen.

So far so good, but in the threecard ending, dummy was left with the diamond 9-6, East with the 8-7 and South had only one high trump in hand. Declarer could not ruff a spade low in dummy without being overruffed, and if he ruffed the spade high, East's diamonds would be good enough to win trick 13.

The winning line for South was to go up with a top trump at trick two. Then declarer can play the hand in identical fashion but be left with the diamond J-9 in dummy. Now the crossruff cannot be prevented.

Only an initial trump lead defeats six diamonds, as East can play a second round of trump when he gets in with the heart ace.
