A group of newly released sockeye salmon explore their surroundings in Redfish Lake Wednesday after the Idaho Department of Fish and Game released 245 of the endangered fish into their natural spawning habitat in the Sawtooth National Forest. More than 1,300 of the fish are expected to return to the lake this year, a number Idaho Department of Fish and Game officials say they haven't seen at the lake since 1956.

About 1,300 sockeye salmon to spawn in Redfish Lake this fall

STANLEY — One by one, men with nets lifted the bright red fish out of the tanker truck.

Lowered to the water's surface, the fish were ceremonially displayed to the gathered crowd. Then each sockeye salmon flipped and twisted its way into the cool and welcoming Redfish Lake.

The lake earned its name from the sockeye that used to fill it with color. Those fish have become scarce in recent decades. But on Wednesday, 245 of them — all of whom braved the Pacific Ocean and then a series of rivers and dams to return to Idaho — splashed into Redfish, ready to spawn their next generation.

More than 700 sockeye have returned to Idaho from the Pacific this year. About 1,300 sockeye, both returnees and fish bred in hatcheries by the Idaho Department of Fish and Game and the U.S. National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, are expected to be placed in Redfish Lake this fall.

That's a sum that hasn't been seen since 1956, said

Deputies probe possible immigration fraud in Jerome

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

Twenty-three people in Jerome have complained to the sheriff's office in recent weeks that they were duped by an immigration consultant who took large sums of money from them but never followed through on promises to help with their citizenship paperwork.

Sheriff's officials consider this a case of possible fraud that unfolded on Aug. 13 and remained Wednesday under investigation, without any charges or arrests.

Jerome deputies searched a home and office on Aug. 27, situated at 325 West, 100 North, where they seized enough documents to fill a truck and the back of a police car, said Jerome County Sheriff's Det. Rick Cowen.

Complaints began rolling in on Aug. 13, Cowen said

T.F. looks to create finance committee

By Jared S. Hopkins
Times-News writer

The Twin Falls City Council on Tuesday created a three-member task force to recommend how to form an oversight committee of residents to advise the council on city budget matters.

The 4-2 Tuesday decision to create the task force came shortly after the council adopted its $48.2 million budget for next year and included a $100,000 tax levy reduction to return money to property owners. This year's budgeting process was one of the fiercest and most tense the city has seen in recent years.

U of I brings extension discussion to Twin Falls

By Jared S. Hopkins
Times-News writer

Officials with the University of Idaho College of Agricultural and Life Sciences Research and Extension told members of south-central Idaho's agriculture industry Wednesday day they are running out of options to preserve research during the economic downturn.

Earlier this year the Legislature dealt the college and its research and extension center an 11.5 percent, or $3.2 million, budget cut. The college has already eliminated vacant faculty and staff positions to meet this year's cuts but college Dean John Hammell said he's anticipating more cuts, both through midyear hold-backs from Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter and the 2010 Idaho Legislature.

"We're cutting bone and muscle and throwing a joint in here and there. It's tight," said Hammell.

"That's where the conundrum is — we can't cut and stay the same," Hammell told about two dozen people in the second of four sessions the college is holding across the state. After public outray earlier this summer over a task force recommendation of the closure of three facilities, new University of Idaho President Duane Nellis and Otter agreed to allow more time for review.

Obama states his case for health-care reform

By David Espo
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Shaking off a summer of setbacks, President Obama summoned Congress to enact sweeping health care legislation Wednesday night, declaring the "time for bickering is over" and the moment has arrived to protect millions who have unreliable insurance or no coverage at all.

Obama said the changes he wants would cost about $900 billion over a decade, "less than we have spent on the Iraq and Afghanistan wars, and less than the tax cuts for the wealthiest few Americans" passed during the Bush administration.

In a televised speech to a joint session of Congress, Obama spoke in favor of a provision for the federal government to sell insurance in competition with private industry. But in a remark certain to displease liberals, he did not insist on it, and said he was open to other alternatives that create choices for consumers.

Obama said he remains ready to listen to all ideas but added in a clear reference to Republicans, "I will not waste time with those who have made the calculation that it's better politics to kill this plan than to improve it."

In an unusual outburst from the Republican side of the House chamber, Rep. Joe Wilson, R-S.C., shouted out

Pat's Picks

Pat Marcantonio

• If you're interested in helping with projects at the Jerome Public Library, attend the Friends of the Jerome Public Library meeting at 10 a.m. at the library. Information: Mary, 324-1403.

• Relax with art. Oil paintings by Ginny Blakeslee Breen and lamp-work glass beads by Sandy Wapinski are on display through Sept. 30 at the Full Moon Gallery of Fine Art and Contemporary Craft, along with oil paintings by John Pitts in the Galeria Pequena, 132 Main Ave. S., Twin Falls. Gallery hours start at noon weekdays and it's free to the public.

• You're faced with a houseful of produce from your garden. What do you do with it? Learn to preserve produce in the "Canning Garden Fruits & Veggies" class and end up with dilly beans, salsa, spaghetti sauce, jams and more. The College of Southern Idaho class starts Saturday and costs $65. Information, or to register: <http://communityed.csi.edu>, or 732-6442.

Have your own pick you want to share? Something that is unique to the area and that may take people by surprise? E-mail me at patm@gmagicvalley.com.

Fraud

Wednesday. "The complaint revolved around the subject ... taking large sums of money from Hispanic subjects and then promising to help them with their documentation but not following through with those promises."

Some of the victims are in the country legally — others aren't — but all paid to get help with citizenship paperwork for themselves or family members.

"Some are illegals and were doing documentation to try and become legal," said Cowen. Some of the victims were legal aliens and others were U.S. citizens who wanted to update their status or needed help with documentation for others.

The victims who are living illegally in the country are not facing charges absent any other wrongdoing, authorities said.

According to the United States Immigration Support Web site, formal regulations don't apply to immigration consultants in America, where "many jobs within the immigration field require formal education, but not immigration consultants."

Cowen said he doesn't have a timeline for how long it may take to sift through all the paperwork in the case. He also says he doesn't yet know if anyone will be charged with a crime, or if the whole case will go to federal authorities.

"Large sums of money" are involved but Cowen declined to specify an amount.

He also declined to name the suspect but confirmed there is only one.

A phone number at the house deputies searched two weeks ago is listed to a woman named Celia Perez. Attempts to reach her Wednesday on that line were unsuccessful.

The victims weren't trying to buy forged citizenship documents, Cowen said Wednesday.

"They were trying to take the legal route."

Finance

support for that committee," said Councilman David E. Johnson, who pitched the idea of a citizen's committee. "The finances of the city are an everyday thing — not just a once-a-year thing."

In an interview, Johnson, in his second term on council, said there are similar committees in other cities, but couldn't recall any specific ones.

"What we're going to create is a little unique to Twin Falls but it's just a way to open the finance to the public and talk about those hard issues," he said.

So far, council members have said the committee would merely advise the council or offer recommendations, not authorize spending. Council members Lee Heider and Trip Craig opposed the move, arguing that the committee would be an unnecessary layer of bureaucracy, particularly because there's already a council finance committee.

Mayor Lance Clow said the task force — Johnson, Will Kezele and Heider — will report to the City Council its findings and recommendations before proceeding any further.

The idea was pushed for more than a year by Johnson, whose professional job is a consultant. He said the details still have to be worked out by the task force. It's unclear whether the committee will be written into city code or become official like the city's golf or pool advisory commissions. But Johnson said it'd be different in that it might look at specific ideas like health care for city employees.

At Tuesday's meeting, council members cited using qualified businesspeople, such as chief financial officers or other specialists.

Johnson said he didn't look at the commission as a way for influential community members to have special access to council members.

"I just want some folks who have some financial background," he said. "I don't know where they're all going to come from. I didn't think of it (like) giving people an advantage as much as giving more transparency in government."

Councilman Greg Lanting said he originally opposed the idea but a new panel could be helpful and this year's budget process showed there may be a need for changes.

"Government financing is a whole different ball game and sometimes you need a little tutoring, but they might have some good ideas," he said.

Obama

"You lie" when the president said illegal immigrants would not benefit from his proposals. The president paused briefly and smiled, but from her seat in the visitor's gallery, first lady Michelle Obama shook her head from side to side in disapproval of the interruption.

In general, the president shied away from providing lawmakers with a list of particulars he wants to see included in the legislation, and there was nothing in the speech to invite comparisons with Bill Clinton's pen-waving veto threat more than a decade ago on health care.

Obama's speech came as the president and his allies in Congress readied an autumn campaign to enact his top domestic priority. Republican opposition, contentious town hall meetings and drooping polls have contributed to their woes. An AP-GfK survey released hours before the speech showed public disapproval of Obama's handling of health care has jumped to 52 percent, an increase of 9 percentage points since July.

While Democrats command strong majorities in both the House and Senate, neither chamber has acted on Obama's top domestic priority, missing numerous deadlines leaders had set for themselves.

In a fresh sign of urgency, Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., announced that his Senate Finance Committee would meet in two weeks to begin drafting legislation, whether or not a handful of Democrats and Republicans have come to an agreement. The panel is the last of five to act in Congress, and while the outcome is uncertain, it is the only one where bipartisanship has been given a chance to flourish.

Obama said there is widespread agreement on about 80 percent of what must be included in legislation. Any yet, criticizing Republicans without saying so, he added: "Instead of honest debate, we have seen scare tactics" and ideological warfare that offers no hope for compromise.

"Well, the time for bickering is over," he said. "The time for games has passed. Now is the season for action."

"I am not the first president to take up this cause, but I am determined to be the last," he added.

In one gesture to Republicans, Obama said his administration would authorize a series of test programs in some states to check the impact of medical malpractice changes on health insurance costs.

Among the audience suggestions Wednesday night: have a third party with no emotional ties decide how to make cuts; implement pay reductions to employees; get help through industry participation; find ways to increase revenue.

The session also included information breakdowns by Matt Freeman, the chief fiscal officer for the state board of education. Freeman, who recently worked in the nonpartisan legislative budget office, said he expects Otter to issue midyear budget cuts by early next week.

"There's no easy way out," he said of the "austere" budget scenario facing the state.

Hammell and Idaho Government Relations Director Rich Garber acknowledged each center has its own reasons to stay — both financially and for research — but it's been difficult to find a clear solution. Closing the Parma center would save $500,000, they said Wednesday, but the programs and services would be gradually rather than immediately closed.

"That's part of the misinformation out there," he said. "We weren't just walking away from Parma."

Sockeye

Jeff Heindel, the agency's state conservation hatchery manager.

That certainly doesn't mean the fish are recovered, Heindel pointed out — that would take more like 2,500 fish returning and spawning consistently for several generations. But about 30 people, including members of the media, people relaxing at the lake and representatives of several state and federal agencies and the Shoshone-Bannock Tribes, gathered to celebrate this year's return of the fish.

Agency staff and other volunteers strapped on waders and helped release several of the fish using nets. Fish and Game employees then released the most of the sockeye using a tube from the tanker truck.

Vanessa King held her young nephew, Vaughn Loertscher, as the toddler touched the fish. Her own father, Robert King, an employee with the Utah Department of Natural Resources, said he works to save other fish species in that state and enjoyed celebrating Idaho's progress.

"It's still exciting," he said.

What was originally to be just a gene-bank program for Idaho when it began in 1991 is now becoming a recovery program for sockeye, Heindel said, and ramping it up has contributed along with many other factors to this year's returns.

It's not always clear what may be ahead for the fish, especially with a federal court case set to decide the fate of its Chinook and steelhead cousins. The solutions that will eventually be mandated in that case may affect the sockeye as well, and Heindel spoke of the need for everyone to work together to save the salmon "rather than take sides and point fingers."

"This is, for some of the folks who have been with the program a long, long time, an important day," he announced.

Ketchum raises water rates to pay for improved facilities

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — Ketchum and Sun Valley's shared water and sewer system is due for upgrades, and to pay for them, ratepayers' bills will have to go up.

That was the message from Ketchum's utilities department manager Steve Hansen to the Ketchum City Council on Monday. He tempered the news by noting that the raised rates will still be less than those in many other Idaho cities.

Wastewater rates in Ketchum are currently $16.51 per equivalent residential connection — which means more for most businesses — per month. Hansen proposed to raise rates by about 30 percent, to $21.51 a month. The rates have been raised frequently in the last several years, up from $13 a month in 2002.

He compared the proposed rate to monthly rates in other Idaho cities, including Bellevue at $45, Burley at $45.50, Boise at $22.57 and Pocatello at $19.90 per equivalent residential connection. Hansen noted that many of the cities with lower rates have older, less sophisticated facilities than Ketchum's.

By raising the rates charged to consumers, Hansen said current annual revenues of $954,000 will be increased by about $290,000 a year.

The increase will pay for approximately $7 million in upgrades in the next 10 years, and an additional $7.5 million in the following decade. Among the changes that are proposed is an increase in the percentage of waste in the sludge solution regularly shipped to the county dump, meaning fewer trips to the landfill and less space used there. There will be additional improvements to the plant, both specific to wastewater treatment and to the facilities including buildings and parking lots.

Because Sun Valley shares the facility, Hansen said it would be asked to pay for half the cost of these improvements.

The council approved the plan, and also signed off on two low-bid contracts for construction planned soon in the department, including the installation of a wastewater re-use pipeline, and for that pipeline to be bored beneath Idaho Highway 75 near Meadow Circle. The contracts went to S. Erwin Excavation for $62,010 and Hard Rock Inc. for $51,548.

Blaine Co. officials to nominate airport board members

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Elected officials throughout the Wood River Valley are in the process of coming up with nominations for a five-member advisory committee that will work alongside the Friedman Memorial Airport Authority to determine what the valley's new airport will look like.

Blaine County Commissioner Larry Schoen will work with officials in Bellevue and Carey to come up with a few names to represent District One.

Commissioner Tom Bowman will work with Hailey City representatives on nominations for District Two.

And Commissioner Angenie McCleary will work with representatives of Ketchum and Sun Valley to come up with two or three nominees for District Three.

The commissioners will then choose three representatives from the list of nominees. The aviation community will nominate a fourth representative and the Blaine County Commission will choose a fifth.

Officials hope to complete the process in November. Determining how to pay for the airport will be one of the advisory board's first tasks.

Bowman said the group will be advisory only at least initially.

"In theory, these are brand-new folks willing to put time and energy into the process to help shoulder some of the workload," said Hailey City Councilwoman Carol Brown.

Peter Kirsch, the Friedman Memorial Airport Authority's Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) counsel, suggested that members of the advisory committee could one day become the new airport board.

Meanwhile, the Friedman Memorial Airport Authority has submitted a $150,000 grant application to the U.S. Department of Transportation to enhance air service.

Grant money would be matched by $50,000 in cash and in-kind support to increase marketing of the Wood River Valley to enhance existing air service, said Carol Waller, director of the Sun Valley/Ketchum Chamber and Visitors Bureau.

Fly Sun Valley Alliance and the Sun Valley Resort are backing the airport authority's bid in an effort to shore up air service, which has been cut during the past year.

Shoshone trustees warned of state holdback

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — Shoshone School District Superintendent Mel Wiseman cautioned school trustees Tuesday that a holdback on state school funding might be looming.

He added that it remains a rumor but he urged caution with spending.

"It's definitely a year to be cautious," Wiseman said.

"We don't know. Nobody knows," he said. "The rumors have a potential anywhere from 5 to 7 percent with speculation as high as 10 percent."

In other business, trustees honored Shoshone's Co-Athletic Director Larry Messick for 32 years of total service.

Messick, who retired as a teacher, athletic director and coach in 2004, remains co-athletic director, sharing responsibilities with Tim Chapman. The Idaho High School Activities Association recently presented the Fourth District Service Award to Messick.

"When you get honored at the state level, that's commendable," Wiseman said.

In another matter, the board approved early graduation after seven semesters for a junior who is meeting graduation requirements.

Wiseman said with a power outage and the Internet down Tuesday, the school was unable to show President Obama's address to schools. He said the school has a tape of it and will make it available to teachers wishing to show it. Wiseman said the school will require parental approval.

2009 Patriotic Day Flag Memorial Community Event

Healing Field®

Crossroads Point Business Center is once again hosting a Patriot Day Flag Memorial with over 3,000 flags. These 3'x5' flags stand 8 foot tall in perfect rows and columns in honor of the lives lost in the terrorist attacks on September 11 2001. This celebration is also honoring the men and women who defend our freedoms. The living memorial will be a patriotic tribute to the strength and unity of Americans.

The public is invited to come help us honor the men & women who have defended our freedoms!

Jerome County takes jail voter education to public

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

JEROME — The consultant hired to educate voters on the ballot question to build the Jerome County Justice Facility and a new jail is planning a series of presentations before the Nov. 3 election.

The ballot measure will ask voters to give the county commission authority to enter into a 30-year lease-to-purchase agreement for a 165-bed jail that would also include administrative offices for the sheriff's department and possibly the Jerome Police Department. Whether or not the city police would share the facility remains unresolved.

Consultant April Lee, general manager of Rocky Mountain Corrections, said several presentations are planned over the next eight weeks to promote voter information.

The proposed jail would accommodate more than twice the current number of inmates from Jerome County. Lee said estimates based on projected growth indicate that in 30 years, the county would fill all 165 beds with its own inmates.

For now, the outdated 35-bed jail adjacent to the courthouse accommodates about half of Jerome County's prisoners. The remainder is housed in lockups in other counties.

Money Jerome County is currently paying other counties to house its inmates — estimated at a little more than $200,000 annually — and projected income from renting out jail beds at the new $13.5 million facility would cover the $985,000 expected yearly lease payment.

Lee said the total cost and annual lease payment could be lower than estimates.

Jerome County officials view Twin Falls County as a likely tenant for jail space.

A major part of the education campaign is that the financing would be a lease purchase where bonds would be issued through a finance company and the county would lease the facility.

"This is a totally different animal than people have seen in Idaho before," Lee said.

Key components she stresses are that it would be a lease and not bonded indebtedness and the ballot question would not call for a tax increase.

"The key message to get out to the public is it isn't going to cost you anymore money," Lee said.

Lee, county officials and other supporters of the project plan several presentations including the following: Back to School Safety Fair, Con Paulos Chevrolet Pontiac, GMC, Saturday; Jerome Lions Club, Sept. 21; Jerome Rotary, Sept. 29; Jerome Senior Center, Oct. 2; El Sombrero Restaurant diner, Oct. 15; Jerome City Council public meeting in early October; Jerome Chamber of Commerce Business After Hours, early October; booth at Walmart in October.

Jerome Cheese Factory and Progressive Logistics will distribute flyers to employees, according to Lee.

Idle ban progresses in Ketchum

City will warn idling drivers for one year, then fines

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — For the Ketchum City Council, signing off on an ordinance prohibiting the idling of cars for more than three minutes was an easy one.

"I think this is a giant no-brainer," said Councilman Charles Conn on Tuesday night. "Idling cars are all over this town. It's unsafe, it does contribute to climate change, and it stinks. It stinks around Atkinsons (Market) and it stinks at the post office."

For some members of the council's audience, the decision was also obvious.

"You're right. This is a no-brainer. You'd have to have no brains to vote for it," said Mickey Garcia, who is running for mayor this fall. He argued that there is no proof the ordinance will improve air quality, that it's unnecessary because an ordinance exists prohibiting leaving running vehicles unattended, and that other vehicles such as construction equipment are much worse offenders.

Conn, who is not running for re-election, said that although he ordinarily approaches new laws with a libertarian attitude, idling cars affect people other than the vehicle's driver. "I don't like making laws we don't need, but this affects everyone in this town.

This affects other peoples' enjoyment?"

The council did establish a one-year education period, during which law enforcement will give idling drivers a warning rather than the fines of $100 for first offense and $300 for second offense that the ordinance establishes. Repeat offenders could be fined during that year.

The fines themselves were also a point of concern for some, including how they will be collected if drivers don't pay immediately — an initial letter and subsequent attempts to collect, and after about 90 days, a collection agency will get the account, said city staff.

Annie Corrock, a former Planning and Zoning Commissioner, asked that law enforcement be especially considerate of visitors to the valley.

"Sometimes people don't react well to being told what to do," she said. She suggested that the council consider repealing the ordinance after a year if the warnings are effective. "Is it working with just warnings, being an ambassador to green living rather than an enforcer of green living?"

Upon unanimously passing the ordinance, the council asked law enforcement to report back after six months and a year to let them know how many warnings had been issued and whether the instances of idling cars were dramatically reduced.

Obama speech not shown in Dietrich

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

DIETRICH — While just two Dietrich parents told school officials they did not want their children viewing President Obama's address to U.S. school children Tuesday, the school opted to not present the speech during classes.

Giving high marks to the president's address, Dietrich Principal Mike Hancey said there was a lot of overreacting.

"Personally, I was able to read it and I would have had no problem with letting my children hear it. It is not too far to the left. It is not too far to the right," he said. "I fear we have lost a good teaching moment."

Board Chairman Perry Van Tassell said there was not enough time for school administrators and boards to make decisions about whether or not to show the speech to school children.

"There was not enough information for us to know if it was a good thing or a bad thing," he said.

Van Tassell said the school should have recorded the speech for possible future use. Superintendent Neal Hollingshead said the White House should have given at least two weeks advance notice.

In another matter, the trustees authorized an emergency levy that Hollingshead explained is a continuation of last year's emergency levy and therefore Dietrich property owners will not experience a tax increase.

Law & Disorder...

... in Cassia County

Battery, vandalism:
A 35-year-old Oakley woman told police that Alessandro Soto, 34, had been calling and text-messaging her all day. She said she sent him a text message and told him she didn't want to talk to him. "He answered her telling her she had 'really (expletive) up this time.' A little after this time he showed up at her house," Deputy Norma Talamantes' report reads. "She ran and hid in her mother's Durango and locked the doors." According to the report, when the woman refused to open the doors, Soto grabbed a hammer from his car, came back to the Durango, and started pounding on the driver-side window until it broke. "He grabbed her by the front of her blouse and was trying to drag her out through the window," the report reads. At that point, the woman's son allegedly attacked Soto. The woman said she told him to let go of her son and held onto the hammer to prevent Soto from swinging it at anybody. When he let go of her son, the woman let go of the hammer and drove away, according to the report. Soto, who was later questioned at the sheriff's office, reportedly denied trying to pull the woman out of the window but admitted breaking the window after grabbing the hammer when the woman refused to get out of the vehicle. According to the report, "he threatened to break the window if she didn't come out and when she didn't listen to him, he went and got the hammer and broke the driver side window" — which is when, he said, the woman's son "came over and struck him on the side of the face with his car keys, causing a small cut by his right eye." However, Soto said he didn't intend to break the window initially but that it "just happened in all the confusion." According to the report, Soto said "he didn't know why her son had attacked him." Soto was cited for battery and malicious injury to property.

The whole nine yards

Times-News

You could say Spencer Marshall's birthday was one of those celebrations that went the whole nine yards. Marshall, a third-grader from Twin Falls, turned 9 years old Wednesday, Sept. 9, 2009, making his birthday festivities all about the number nine. But for his parents, Jessica and Riley Marshall, the birth of their son nine years ago was one of those serendipitous events that defies convention.

Born in a Provo, Utah, hospital, the Marshall's son arrived at 9:19 a.m., weighing 9 pounds and 9 ounces, with a body temperature of 99 degrees.

Both parents were fully aware of how the date is Spencer Marshall celebrated his ninth birthday on Wednesday. He was born Sept. 9, 2000, weighing 9 pounds, 9 ounces, and with a temperature of 99 degrees.

ASHLEY SMITH/Times-News

considered good luck among expecting families and engaged couples. But once Jessica went into labor — two days before the due date — even they were surprised by the abundance of nines.

"They tried to get him out at 9:09 but he didn't want to come out for 10 more minutes," said Riley Marshall.

"The nurse really got into it," recalled Jessica Marshall of her son's birth. "Even then we were thinking of it ... it was going to be quadruple nines (on his ninth birthday)."

The mother also said both her son's Apgar tests, which measure a newborn's health after delivery, were scored as a "9."

So how does a 9-year-old boy celebrate a ninth birthday with his lucky number? Like any other kid, really — with presents, treats in his Lincoln Elementary School classroom, and an evening city rec soccer game.

"Our original plan was to go to Disneyland to celebrate, but we're expecting our third child so it didn't work out like we had expected," said Jessica Marshall.

As for future celebrations, Spencer's Sept. 9 birthday won't have any other special similarities unless he lives for another 90 years.

That date will be 9/9/99, and he'll be 99 years old.

Blaine schools to pursue $59.8M levy

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The Blaine County School District will put a $59.8 million plant facilities levy before Wood River Valley voters Oct. 29.

The school board unanimously approved the move Tuesday night.

The levy supports the infrastructure for the school district's vision of "a world-class, student-focused community of teaching and learning," said engineer Lynn Askew of Power Engineers, who served on the 22-member levy committee.

Askew called technology the key to success in the 21st century.

The proposed levy includes $9.9 million to support the school district's vision of being the leading technological district in the nation. It would allow the district to replace computers every five years, explore and tap into new technologies and create an infrastructure that promotes learning beyond the school district, according to school officials.

It also includes $2.2 million for safety and security measures, including door hardware and internal and external security cameras.

And it includes $47.4 million for facilities, including money for a new elementary school, either a new middle school or the expansion of the existing one, improvements to Carey School and the Bellevue Elementary School cafeteria, fire sprinkler systems and energy conservation measures throughout the district.

School officials stress the levy will not increase tax rates for Blaine County residents.

Prior to Tuesday's vote on whether to place the levy on the ballot, School Superintendent Lonnie Barber presented statewide data that showed Blaine County School students rank among the top five of all school districts statewide in language use, science and math. They're seventh in reading.

That's been accomplished with the third largest number of students who can't speak English, Barber said.

District Caucasian students in grades 3 through 10 rank No. 1 in math and language usage and No. 2 in science.

"Part of the reason for our success is that we have the technology," noted Dan Park, vice chairman of the school board.

Wood River High School Principal John Blackburn concurred. Available technology helped teachers teach with a more refined approach rather than a shotgun approach, helping students make "huge" gains in their proficiency, he said.

In other news, School District Treasurer Mike Chatterton said district attendance was down 67 students from last year. Teachers counted 3,150 students on the first day of school this year, compared to 3,217 last year.

"I don't think any of us expected a dramatic increase in students with the way the economy is," Chatterton said. "This may make it possible to push off a new elementary school for a year."

Silver Creek High School, formerly Silver Creek Alternative School, showed the largest gain of the district's eight schools with 28 students this year versus 18 last year.

State should beware pricing part-timers off the payroll

We don't know where and how the Legislature and the governor will cut state government in response to the lingering recession, but it's a safe bet that there will be fewer full-time state employees a year from now.

The demand for services, however, is growing. So part-time state employees will be at a premium. Employers public or private save money when they hire part-timers who get fewer benefits.

So maybe it's time for the Department of Administration to rethink its plan to jack up the health insurance premiums of part-time state workers.

Starting in November, a state employee working 30 hours a week will pay $166.25 a month, while a 25-hour-a-week employee will pay $302.50. Some state workers will see premiums rise from $100 to $400 a month.

That's already pricing some current and potential employees off the state payroll. If you're, say, a part-time retail clerk a state liquor store, a $300-a-month insurance premium may be more than the job is worth.

There are now about 1,700 part-time state employees working in jobs ranging from governor's aide to state park custodian. Many are in positions politicians call "mission-critical."

As of Sept. 1, 69 state employees had been laid off because of the budget crunch, 186 saw their pay cut and 3,710 had taken furloughs without pay. If the 20,000-plus remaining full-time state workers are reduced in numbers by 5 percent or 10 percent, who will pick up the slack?

If the higher premiums go into effect as scheduled, the net effect for a 25-hour-a-week worker who now pays a $30-a-month premium would be to reduce his or her pay by $1.69 an hour. If you're trying to hang on to $12-an-hour employees — or hire new ones — that's not the way to go about it.

Part-time state employees' health insurance premium will increase, whether it's in November or later. We think it should be later.

Our view: In a budget crisis, Idaho is going to need part-time state employees. A 400 percent health insurance premium increase isn't the way to keep them.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Our one-party democracy

Watching both the health care and climate/energy debates in Congress, it is hard not to draw the following conclusion: There is only one thing worse than one-party autocracy, and that is one-party democracy, which is what we have in America today.

Thomas Friedman

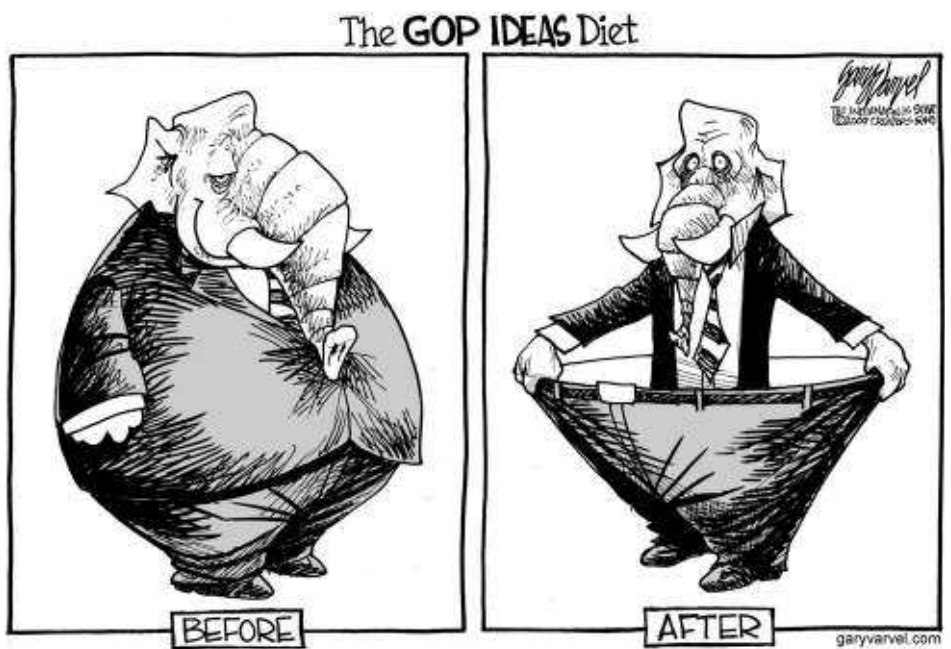

One-party autocracy certainly has its drawbacks. But when it is led by a reasonably enlightened group of people, as China is today, it can also have great advantages. That one party can just impose the politically difficult but critically important policies needed to move a society forward in the 21st century.

It is not an accident that China is committed to overtaking us in electric cars, solar power, energy efficiency, batteries, nuclear power and wind power. Beijing wants to make sure it owns that industry and is ordering the policies to do that, including boosting gasoline prices, from the top down.

Our one-party democracy is worse. The fact is, on both the energy/climate legislation and health care legislation, only the Democrats are really playing. With a few notable exceptions, the Republican Party is standing, arms folded and saying "no." Many of them just want President Obama to fail. Such a waste. Obama is not a socialist; he's a centrist. But if he's forced to depend entirely on his own party to pass legislation, he will be whipsawed by its different factions.

Look at the climate/energy bill that came out of the House. Its sponsors had to work twice as hard to produce this breakthrough cap-and-trade legislation.

Why? Because with basically no GOP representatives willing to vote for any price on carbon that would stimulate investments in clean "With a few notable exceptions, the Republican Party is standing, arms folded and saying 'no.' Many of them just want President Obama to fail. Such a waste. Obama is not a socialist; he's a centrist. energy and energy efficiency, the sponsors had to rely entirely on Democrats — and that meant paying off coal-state and agriculture Democrats with pork. Thank goodness, it is still a bill worth passing. But it could have been much better — and can be in the Senate. Just give me 8 to 10 Republicans ready to impose some price on carbon, and they can be leveraged against Democrats who want to water down the bill.

The only way for us to match them is by legislating a rising carbon price along with efficiency and renewable standards that will stimulate massive private investment in clean-tech. Hard to do with a one-party democracy.

The same is true on health care. "The central mechanism through which Obama seeks to extend coverage and restrain costs is via new 'exchanges,' insurance clear-houses, modeled on the plan Mitt Romney enacted when he was governor of Massachusetts," noted Matt Miller, a former Clinton budget official and author of

"The Tyranny of Dead Ideas." "The idea is to let individuals access group coverage from private insurers, with subsidies for low earners."

And it is possible the president will seek to fund those subsidies, at least in part, with the idea John McCain ran on — by reducing the tax exemption for employer-provided health care. Can the Republicans even say yes to their own ideas, if they are absorbed by Obama? Without Obama being able to leverage some Republican votes, it is going to be very hard to get a good plan to cover all Americans with health care.

The GOP used to be the party of business. Well, to compete and win in a globalized world, no one needs the burden of health insurance shifted from business to government more than American business. No one needs immigration reform — so the world's best brainpower can come here without restrictions — more than American business. No one needs a push for clean-tech — the world's next great global manufacturing industry — more than American business. Yet the GOP today resists national health care, immigration reform and wants to just drill, baby, drill.

"Globalization has neutered the Republican Party, leaving it to represent not the have-nots of the recession but the have-nots of globalized America, the people who have been left behind either in reality or in their fears," said Edward Goldberg, a global trade consultant who teaches at Baruch College.

"The need to compete in a globalized world has forced the meritocracy, the multinational corporate manager, the eastern financier and the technology entrepreneur to reconsider what the Republican Party has to offer. In principle, they have left the party, leaving behind not a pragmatic coalition but a group of ideological naysayers."

Obamacare and the K Street tax cheat

Tom Daschle is the human toe fungus of Washington — a persistent infection that may disappear from time to time, but always comes back with a vengeance.

Despite abandoning his secretary of health and human services nomination in disgrace in February 2009, the K Street tax cheat who evaded IRS rules for years remains a top White House confidante and policy strategist. In fact, he's leading the drive to save Obamacare. He climbed up from under the bus back into the Oval Office and onto the sets of "Meet the Press" and "This Week With George Stephanopoulos" to offer his rescue plan.

It's Daschle's idea to morph the unpopular "public option" into nonprofit "health care co-ops" that will almost certainly receive government funding, support and tax advantages over private insurers. Old colleagues on both sides of the Senate aisle are now promoting his alternative. Last week, he penned a Do It for Teddy Kennedy pep rally op-ed in The Wall Street Journal urging Democrats to go it alone and depend on the backroom Senate reconciliation process if necessary to get a deal done.

The White House told The Washington Post that Daschle is simply a trusted "sounding board" and "friend" offering assistance as an experienced individual with a passion for health care reform. But Daschle is a self-interested Washington lobbyist and Beltway swamp creature.

Daschle, the former U.S. senator from South Dakota has earned more than $5 million as a professional backscratcher since leaving life as an entrenched incumbent. In the parlance of self-exempting Team Obama members, Daschle is merely a beneficent "resource," as he described himself to The New York Times, serving the Public Interest.

The truth: Daschle is cashing in on his role as "the architect of President Obama's health care plan" in the private sector — and evading lobbyist disclosure by reinventing himself as a highly paid "senior adviser" to D.C.-based law firm/influence-peddling shop Alston & Bird.

Senate ethic rules forbade Daschle from officially lobbying for one year after he was defeated by GOP Sen. John Thune in 2004. Now, it's 2009. Daschle has raked in millions in speeches and consulting gigs for health care industry clients. He has unfettered access to the White House, which is stuffed to the gills with his former employees.

Daschle quacks, talks and walks like any other federal registered lobbyist. But somehow, the rules don't apply. And Barack Obama, ultimate agent of Hope and Change, has no problem embracing his interest-conflicted, ethics-challenged dear "friend."

Let's not forget: Daschle lost his Senate seat after asserting a bogus property-tax homestead exemption claim on his $1.9 million D.C. mansion — which he listed as his primary residence despite voting in South Dakota.

Daschle was aware as early as June 2008 that he might have to pay back taxes for the use of a car and driver provided by a private equity firm, but he failed to inform the Obama transition team until weeks after Obama designated him the HHS nominee in mid-December 2008.

And now, Obama is trusting this man's judgment to salvage his government health care takeover. This is the president delivers his joint address to Congress. Obama and Daschle are serving each other's interests. Not yours.

OTHER VIEWS

Here's what other newspapers are saying about ...

Post Register, Idaho Falls

Does Idaho need a Parks and Recreation Department? What about state parks such as Harriman or Henrys Lake? Couldn't Idahoans recreate on private or federal ground?

Do we need a Department of Agriculture? Couldn't we handle food safety and pesticide issues with a little help from the feds? Can't Idaho's farmers plug their own products? Should government even be involved in the selling of potatoes, sugar beets and wheat?

What about the Department of Environmental Quality? We got by just fine without one for years. Worried about environmental degradation? Don't sweat it. The federal Environmental Protection Agency would be happy to step in.

Do we need three state universities? Montana has two and Wyoming one. Besides, the numbers show that many Idaho students never make it past their first year of college. Forty-three percent of Idaho State University's freshmen never become sophomores ... would be best if they didn't bother with that year of school?

What about extracurricular activities in the public schools? The Idaho Constitution requires a uniform system of public schools: reading, writing and arithmetic. It says nothing about football ...

... the time for choosing is upon us.

Idaho trimmed its budget by $440 million last year. Cuts would have been deeper if not for an influx of federal stimulus dollars.

Tax revenues for this budget year are projected to fall as much as $151 million below expectations. Much of the $274 million Idaho has in state savings accounts will be needed to get through this fiscal year. Economists say Idaho can expect to begin recovering by the end of 2012. The next two budget cycles will be brutal. Worst-case scenarios are becoming reality in other states ...

Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter will meet with legislative leaders from both parties in the next week to determine a path forward. Talk is that entire state agencies may be dissolved. Services hacked. State jobs lost ...

These decisions are too important to leave to the politicians.

You hired them ... It's time to give them some direction. Ideas are needed, not partisan yapping, groupthink or election-year pandering to those with the deepest pockets.

.... students and Obamacare

Idaho Press-Tribune, Nampa

President Obama's address to the nation's schoolchildren on Tuesday could best be described as a plea to students to work hard, take responsibility for their education and be the best they could be for their country. there were plenty of parents who took issue with the idea of the president using his position to speak directly to their children. In short, they were concerned he would use the opportunity to promote a policy agenda with which they disagreed.

Of particular concern was Obama's original plan to have students write to him about how they could help him meet education goals. Obama was wise to remove that from his speech.

Idaho's Superintendent of Public Instruction, Tom Luna ... hit the nail on the head in how he responded to the controversy.

"As with all matters of education, whether your child watches the broadcast is ultimately up to you," Luna wrote. "As a parent, you play a critical role in your child's education, and you have the opportunity to ask questions and receive information about what your child is learning in school!" ...

Parents who didn't want their children to hear the address ... should not be condemned for pulling them from their classes during the speech. They had the right to do so, and that right should be respected ...

At the same time, parents who don't object to their children hearing educational encouragement and motivation from the president of the United States shouldn't have to fear being branded as socialists ...

... can Luna fix NCLB?

Lewiston Tribune

Is there anyone in a better place to see what's ailing the No Child Left Behind Act than Idaho Schools Superintendent Tom Luna? His resume includes advising George W. Bush's education secretary, Rod Paige, on rural education. For years, he's witnessed Idaho schools struggling with the federal mandate. And while Idaho's recent scores are better — 66 percent made "adequate yearly progress" — they're not much above the national average.

Now Luna is one of 18 serving on a national Council of Chief State School Officers assigned to help revise NCLB. Two years ago, Congress deadlocked over rewriting the measure. It may try again this fall, but opposition is mounting ... Like so many good intentions coming from Washington, however, this one relies on an arbitrary standard — that every student can read and perform math at grade level by the year 2014. Then it uses a series of escalating penalties that can end with the state taking over a failing school ...

There are too many ways for a school to trip. Districts and larger schools must demonstrate adequate yearly progress across a matrix of 41 different sub-groups ...

It's why some teachers will tell you candidly they believe the federal law sets them up to fail. Whether it's true matters less than the fact that they believe it ...

Why not grade student progress? If a child starts fourth grade reading at a second-grade level and finishes the year reading at a third-grade level, that's a significant advancement, however short of "proficiency" it falls.

Find some way of testing that is equally fair to large and small schools. If a school lacks at least 34 students in a given category ... it's not held to account ...

Drop the punitive approach ... Luna has a genuine opportunity here to fix a broken law — if he's listening to the people laboring beneath it.

The reason for our discontent

Who wrote the following: "We must learn to welcome and not to fear the voices of dissent. We must dare to think about 'unthinkable things' because when things become unthinkable, thinking stops and action becomes mindless."

A "right-wing extremist" didn't write these words, nor did a cable TV or radio talk show host. Sen. J. William Fulbright, the late Arkansas liberal Democratic senator and Bill Clinton mentor, wrote them in his 1966 book, "Arrogance of Power."

The arrogance of power and disdain for average Americans is what fueled much of the dissent expressed in town hall meetings. Growing numbers of people see a small cadre of government, academic and media elites caring nothing about them, except when it comes to their tax dollars. Many, especially those who are conservative and even worse, religious, are viewed by these elites as enemies of progress and sophistication. They are mocked as NASCAR-loving, flag-waving, God-worshipping trailer trash. The people are getting the message and properly expressing themselves by peacefully (and loudly) assembling and petitioning government for a redress of their grievances.

The latest of many examples of government arrogance has come in New Hampshire where the state motto is "Live Free or Die." A state judge has ordered a girl who was being educated at home by her mother to begin attending a public school because of the "rigidity" of her mother's religious views. The judge, Lucinda V. Sadler, said that the 10-year-old girl "needed to consider other worldviews as she matures."

The case developed as part of what appears to be a fight between the girl's mother, Brenda Voydatch and her father, Martin Kurowski. Kurowski filed a lawsuit asking the court to place his daughter, Amanda Kurowski, in public school. The father doesn't share the mother's religious views.

There are a number of issues in this case, not the least of which is the court's attempt to define what represents an "extreme" religious view and what is more "mainstream." My personal experience is that these kids get a better education, are better adjusted and easily gain entry into college because of their superior grades and seriousness of purpose, not to mention their character.

Another issue is the apparent one-way street constructed by Judge Sadler. If a Christian girl ought to go to public school to learn about other views why shouldn't the judge order a public school student to get a Christian-Jewish-Islamic-based education so that such a student might become acquainted with the Bible-Talmud-Koran?

In a letter to Henry Lee on Aug. 10, 1824, Thomas Jefferson wrote something that could be applied to the arrogant elites who have caused the rising anger in modern America: "Men by their constitutions are naturally divided into two parties: 1. Those who fear and distrust the people, and wish to draw all powers from them into the hands of the higher classes. 2. Those who identify themselves with the people, have confidence in them, cherish and consider them as the most honest and safe, although not the most wise depository of the public interests..."

I'm on the side of the people. The New Hampshire judge and the Obama administration are on the side of the elites. And that's why so many are angry.

Judge faults removal of wolf from endangered list

By Matthew Brown
Associated Press writer

BILLINGS, Mont. — Hunters can keep stalking gray wolves for now in the Northern Rockies, but the killing may be short-lived after a federal judge found problems with the recent removal of the animal from the endangered species list.

In a ruling late Tuesday, U.S. District Judge Donald Molloy denied a request by environmentalists and animal welfare groups to stop the hunts in Idaho and Montana — the first organized wolf hunts in the lower 48 states in decades.

Plans to kill more than 20 percent of the estimated 1,350 wolves in the two states would not cause long-term harm to the species, Molloy said.

The ruling, however, left unresolved the broader question of whether wolves should be returned to the federal endangered list.

Molloy said the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service appeared to have violated the Endangered Species Act when it carved Wyoming out of its decision to lift protections in May for wolves elsewhere in the region.

About 300 wolves in Wyoming remain on the endangered list.

"The service has distinguished a natural population of wolves based on a political line, not the best available science. That, by definition, seems arbitrary and capricious," Molloy wrote in his 14-page ruling.

The judge said groups that have sued to restore the endangered status of gray wolves "have demonstrated a likelihood of success" in the case. If that reasoning holds, future hunts could be blocked.

Molloy sided with environmentalists last year when they argued that a Wyoming state law allowing wolves to be shot on sight across most of the state would put the population in peril.

As a result, the U.S. government kept Wyoming's wolves on the endangered list when it ended protections in Montana and Idaho. Wyoming has filed a separate lawsuit challenging the Fish and Wildlife decision not to delist wolves in that state.

Hunting supporters, including wildlife officials in Idaho and Montana, said they hoped to change Molloy's mind as the lawsuit to restore the endangered status of gray wolves proceeds. A trial date has not been set.

Idaho and Montana have set quotas allowing hunters to take a combined 295 wolves in the two states. That's about 22 percent of the total population of the animals in those areas. An estimated 10 percent of the region's wolves are killed illegally every year.

"It will be a setback to recovery that wolf hunts can proceed, but hopefully just a temporary one," said Noah Greenwald of the Center for Biological Diversity, one of 14 groups that sued the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

"The judge seems to agree with us," he said.

Greenwald said a favorable ruling by Molloy in the lawsuit could have spinoff ramifications for other species. He pointed to the recent removal of federal protections for a rodent in Wyoming — the Preble's meadow jumping mouse. The mouse kept its protected status in Colorado.

"It's got some implications beyond the wolf, and we'd like to see them reconsider the policy as a whole," Greenwald said.

Fish and Wildlife spokesman Joshua Winchell said Molloy's ruling on the hunt confirmed the gray wolf has recovered in the Northern Rockies, at least in terms of sheer numbers.

But he acknowledged that it also raised separate and potentially far-reaching legal issues.

"Obviously, we want to make sure we're doing right by the law, too," Winchell said.

"The judge's decision almost mirrors our own attorney's brief," Jack Oyler, Idaho vice chairman for Sportsmen for Fish and Wildlife, a regional conservation group, said. He said his organization has spent about $10,000 this year alone to prepare a court brief to support the wolf hunts.

"We were the only organization from Idaho, besides (the Idaho Department of) Fish and Game, that's been involved with this," Oyler said. "I've been scratching my head about that for sometime."

Sportsmen for Fish and Wildlife members are pleased with the judge's decision, but Oyler said members will have to put their heads together if the decision is appealed.

"It's an issue that I'm sure won't go away," he said.

Idaho unemployment rate one of fastest growing in nation

Economist: Job creation is Idaho's biggest challenge

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

Two years after the national recession struck Idaho, economists are looking back and asking why the state's unemployment rate outpaced almost every other state in the nation. The unemployment rate in Idaho rose from 2.8 percent in September 2007 to 8.8 percent this month — faster than every state except Michigan, Alabama and Nevada. Some economists attribute the growth rate to the state's economic dependence on foreign trade. According to the U.S. Census Bureau's Foreign Trade Division, Idaho exports plunged more than 38 percent compared to the previous year, with sales to foreign markets falling from $1.1 billion during the first three months of 2008 to less than $791 million during the same time period in 2009 — the lowest quarterly total since 2005. However, other economists say it's too soon to say what caused unemployment in Idaho to rise so quickly. "The rapid rise of Idaho's unemployment rate stands out the most, even considering the extent of the recession," said Kendall Oliphant, senior vice-president of Thredgold Economic Associates, an economic consulting firm for Zions Bank. "But I don't think we have an answer yet as to why it reacted that way it did." He said Idaho's unemployment rate grew by 6 percentage points from 2007 to 2009, while the national unemployment rate grew by 4.5 percentage points during the same time period. According to a report by

Taxpayers face heavy losses on auto bailout

By Christopher S. Rugaber
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Taxpayers face losses on a significant portion of the $81 billion in government aid provided to the auto industry, an oversight panel said in a report to be released Wednesday.

The Congressional Oversight Panel did not provide an estimate of the projected loss in its latest monthly report on the $700 billion Troubled Asset Relief Program. But it said most of the $23 billion initially provided to General Motors Corp. and Chrysler LLC late last year is unlikely to be repaid.

"I think they drove a very hard bargain," said Elizabeth Warren, the panel's chairwoman and a law professor at Harvard University, referring to the Obama administration's Treasury Department. "But it may not be enough."

The prospect of recovering the government's assistance to GM and Chrysler is heavily dependent on shares of the two companies rising to unprecedented levels, the report said. The government owns 10 percent of Chrysler and 61 percent of GM. The two companies are currently private but are expected to issue stock, in GM's case by next year.

The shares "will have to appreciate sharply" for taxpayers to get their money back, the report said.

For example, GM's market value would have to reach $67.6 billion, the report said, a "highly optimistic" estimate and more than the $57.2 billion GM was worth at the height of its share value in April 2008. And in the case of Chrysler, about $5.4 billion of the $14.3 billion provided to the company is "highly unlikely" to ever be repaid, the panel said.

Treasury Department officials have acknowledged that most of the $23 billion provided by the Bush administration is likely to be lost. But Meg Reilly, a department spokeswoman, said there is a "reasonably high probability of the return of most or all of the government funding" that was provided to assist GM and Chrysler with their restructurings.

Administration officials have previously said they

Retail Reinvention

Recession forcing retailers to think small

EDITOR'S NOTE: One in a series of stories assessing how the Great Recession has changed our lives.

By Anne D'Innocenzio
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — The Great Recession and Americans' retreat into thriftiness are teaching retailers a new lesson: How to survive when consumers are focused on "needs" rather than "wants."

For years, shoppers plunged on everything from $5 lattes to $200 jeans, and retailers responded by opening more stores and offering more choices. Now, beset by high unemployment and limited access to credit, shoppers are limiting most of their purchases only to essentials or the best deals.

Retailers' first response to the sudden and sharp pullback in spending last fall was to offer deep discounts and more coupons to keep merchandise moving. But to survive over the long haul, the watchword for stores and product makers is "small."

They're stocking shelves with slimmed-down milk jugs and half-sized pies. They're charging less for stripped-down products such as blouses with less-frilly designs and detergents with less powerful cleaning action. Brands are disappearing, too, including Kraft's Handi-Snacks pudding. Some stores are being reduced in size, if they're not shut down entirely.

The changes are likely to last for years. Even when the economy improves, it will take years before the debts that piled up during the decade-long shopping spree are paid off. Americans are also getting used to their newly adopted frugal habits of saving more and spending less.

"I don't think we are going to go back to business as usual," said Steve Sadove, chairman and CEO of Saks Inc., operator of Saks Fifth Avenue.

For retailers, the changes need not be devastating. In fact, those that survive will be leaner and more efficient.

To stay in business, stores find they can't take big chances with what they put on the shelves, and how much they stock of each item.

Obama's mortgage relief program growing

By Alan Zibel
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The Obama administration's $50 billion mortgage relief program is finally picking up speed after a sluggish and disappointing start: Nearly one in five eligible homeowners have been offered help so far, the Treasury Department said Wednesday.

The "Making Home Affordable" plan, launched with great fanfare in March, had been slow to get going, but more than 571,000 loan modification offers, or 19 percent, have been sent to nearly 3 million eligible homeowners. That's up from 15 percent at the end of July.

Of those, more than 360,000 borrowers have signed up for three-month trial modifications, which are supposed to be extended for five years if the homeowners make their payments on time.

"There are signs the plan is working," Michael Barr, assistant Treasury secretary for financial institutions, said at a House hearing. "But we can do better."

Treasury says 48 mortgage companies are now involved in the program, up from 38 in July. The companies have requested financial information from almost two-thirds of eligible borrowers and say they are on track to have 500,000 loan modifications in place by Nov. 1.

Nevertheless, lawmakers are frustrated that help has not arrived quicker, especially as foreclosures continue to surge.

"I am disappointed at the pace of this program," said Rep. Barney Frank, D-Mass.,

Pandora's for sale? It's all a misunderstanding

Kurt Handley, owner of Pandora's restaurant, is worried that people think he is closing down his business.

He has good reason to be concerned.

On the day I wrote this column, I received phone calls from three readers and a fellow reporter who all believed that Pandora's was calling it quits. But it's all a misunderstanding.

Scott Featherstone, a retired dentist, who owns homes near Sun Valley and Park City, Utah, has put the former Muggers and Trail Creek Brewery building up for sale.

That same building, located at 516 Hansen St. S., houses Handley's restaurant.

However, Handley has a 9-year contract to continue serving food and playing jazz in his current location, regardless of the owner.

"I'm worried that its hurting business," he said. "I just want people to know that we aren't going anywhere."

Magic Valley Poultry International on the move: Sources say that the proposed chicken processing plant in Burley may be switching locations.

Doug Manning, the economic development director who also serves as the company's spokesman, said he can "neither confirm, nor deny it."

The company planned to build a 3.5 million square foot chicken processing plant near Burley High School during the summer, but the permitting process has delayed construction.

No building permits have been filed yet, so apparently nothing is set in stone yet.

The Dow rose 49.88, or 0.5 percent, to 9,547.22. The index has added 267 points, or 2.9 percent, in four days. It was the Dow's second-highest close of the year, just below its Aug. 27 finish of nearly 9,581.

The broader Standard & Poor's 500 index gained 7.98, or 0.8 percent, to 1,033.37, while the Nasdaq composite rose 22.62, or 1.1 percent, to 2,060.39. It was the highest close for the S&P 500 index and the Nasdaq since October.

The Russell 2000 index of smaller companies rose 10.02, or 1.7 percent, to 586.40. Advancing stocks outpaced those that fell by about 5-to-2 on the New York Stock Exchange, where consolidated volume came to 5.3 billion shares compared with 5.4 billion Tuesday.

Bond prices mostly rose. The yield on the 10-year Treasury note was flat at 3.48 percent.

Overseas, Japan's Nikkei stock average fell 0.8 percent. Britain's FTSE 100 rose 1.2 percent, Germany's DAX index rose 1.7 percent, and France's CAC-40 advanced 1.3 percent.

Jobs

Thredgold Economic Associates that was provided to Zions Bank, Idaho will likely see unemployment rise in coming months before there are signs of improvement.

“Job creation is the main problem in Idaho today,” Oliphant said. “That’s what it needs to reverse itself for the state economy to improve.”
Idaho lost 6,500 jobs during 2008, after adding an average of 22,300 jobs annually during 2005 to 2007, according to the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

The report also added that the Zions Bank Small Business Index for Idaho was 77.0 during August 2009, down from a revised 78.3 during July 2009. The Index measures business conditions from the viewpoint of the Idaho small business owner or manager.

A lower Index number is associated with less favorable business “conditions” for Idaho’s small businesses. The Index uses 100.0 for calendar year 1997 as its base year. The Index also includes revisions to various historical and new forecast components as they become available.

Walrus congregate on Alaska shore as sea ice melts

By Dan Joling
 Associated Press writer

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Thousands of walrus are congregating on Alaska's northwest coast, a sign that their Arctic sea ice environment has been altered by climate change.

Chad Jay, a U.S. Geological Survey walrus researcher, said Wednesday that about 3,500 walrus were near Icy Cape on the Chukchi Sea, some 140 miles southwest of Barrow.

Animals the agency tagged with satellite transmitters also were detected on shore at Cape Lisburne about 150 miles farther down the coast.

Walrus for years came ashore intermittently during their fall southward migration but not so early and not in such numbers.

"This is actually all new," Jay said. "They did this in 2007, and it's a result of the sea ice retreating off the continental shelf?"

Federal managers and researchers say walrus hauling out on shore could lead to deadly stampedes and too much pressure on prey within swimming range. Projections of continued sea ice loss means the phenomenon likely is not going away.

"It's more of the same," Jay said. "What we've been seeing over the past few years with reduced sea ice conditions, we might be seeing this more and more often, and it's probably not good for the walrus," he said.

Unlike many seals, walrus cannot swim indefinitely and must rest periodically between feeding forays.

They rely on sea ice as a platform for foraging for clams in the shallow waters of the outer continental shelf. They can dive up to 630 feet for clams and other sea floor creatures but mostly feed in waters of less than 330 feet, Jay said.

Beyond the continental shelf, water can reach depths of 10,000 feet or more.

An estimated 6,000 or more walrus congregated on Alaska's shore in the fall of 2007, taking scientists by surprise.

Herds were in the tens of thousands at some locations on the Russian side of the Chukchi Sea, with an estimated 40,000 animals at Point Shmidt. Russian biologists reported 3,000 to 4,000 walrus out of population of perhaps 200,000 died, mostly young animals crushed in stampedes.

Alaska herds did not experience that sort of mortality but scientists acknowledge a concern when the marine mammals are concentrated on a rocky shore rather than hundreds of miles of sea ice edge.

Fed's latest survey of businesses shows U.S. recession may be over

By Jeannine Aversa
 Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The recession is ending and the economy is finally growing again.

That's the message implicit in the Federal Reserve's latest survey of businesses around the country, which found economic activity stabilizing or improving in most regions.

Economists warn the expansion is fragile and will have staying power only if consumers start spending more money. Rising unemployment that keeps Americans cautious could make for a plodding recovery in the months ahead.

All but one of the Fed's 12 regions indicated economic activity either was "stable," showed "signs of stabilization" or had "firmed," according to the Fed's survey. The one exception was the St. Louis region, which reported the economic decline is "moderating."

Businesses in most Fed regions said they were "cautiously positive" about the economic road ahead. The survey, known as the Beige Book, does not include precise figures.

Analysts predict the economy is growing in the current quarter, which ends Sept. 30, at an annual rate of 3 percent to 4 percent.

That's mostly because businesses, which had slashed investments during the recession, are spending more.

Auto sales have been lifted by the government's recently ended Cash for Clunkers program. Manufacturing and the battered housing market, which led the country into recession when it collapsed, have also shown signs of improvement.

The problem for the economy is that the expected growth this quarter comes mainly from the auto companies and other manufacturers, which are refilling their depleted stockpiles.

Those inventories had dwindled as factories and retailers sought to bring what they had more in line with reduced sales. Any robust growth in the economy might be short-lived if shoppers don't step up their spending.

In the Fed survey, most regions of the country reported that the clunkers program had boosted sales. Other merchants struggled. And consumer spending remained soft in most places.

Still, the assessments of businesses on the front lines of the economy were brighter than those they provided for the last edition of the Fed survey in late July.

At that time, most regions of the country reflected only that the recession was easing its grip. "That's a pretty significant change in tone from the previous Fed report," said Brian Bethune, economist at IHS Global Insight.

In Wednesday's survey, the Dallas region indicated that economic activity had "firmed." The Fed regions of Boston, Cleveland, Philadelphia, Richmond and San Francisco mentioned "signs of improvement." The Atlanta, Chicago, Kansas City, Minneapolis and New York regions described activity as "stable or showing signs of stabilization."

The survey's findings will figure into discussions when Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke and his colleagues meet Sept. 22-23. The Fed is expected to keep interest rates at record lows, probably for some time, to help nurture the recovery.

A lost art

Wyoming man ties world-class Atlantic salmon flies

Story by Ben Neary & photos by Matt Young
The Associated Press

BARNUNN, Wyo. — Clearly you don't need a fully dressed Atlantic salmon fly to catch a fish with a brain the size of a peanut any more than you need a vintage Bentley Continental to buzz down to the corner store for milk and eggs.

They're both expensive and beautiful products of an exquisitely class-conscious culture. They make a certain statement.

Yet the undeniable beauty of traditional salmon flies — as well as the challenge of finding the exotic feathers they require — captivates a growing number of fly tiers dedicated to keeping these classic patterns alive.

Mature salmon move from the ocean back up their native rivers to spawn.

While they don't eat when they're in fresh water, they will snap at smaller fish apparently out of annoyance. The art of tying salmon flies involves shaping feathers and fur around a deadly hook — all to mimic a small fish.

By all accounts, Marvin Nolte is one of the best traditional salmon fly "dressers," as he puts it, in the world.

The bike that went around the world

The bicycle that carried Scott Stoll around the world doesn't look like anything special. There's tape on the frame and extra washers to hold racks in place. The leather saddle is faded and worn, a dented anatomical imprint testimony to the months and thousands of miles Stoll sat pedaling on a quest to travel around the planet on two wheels.

THE GEAR JUNKIE Stephen Regenold

The bicycle, a customized mountain bike made by Waterford Precision Cycles, served for four years as Stoll's vehicle for discovery. It is a star in his new book, "Falling Uphill: 25,742 miles, 1,461 days, 50 countries, 6 continents & 4 moments of enlightenment on a bicycle."

I met up with Scott in Minneapolis, where he was on a book tour. He was riding the same bike and wearing the same Shimano shoes he's had since Australia.

Indeed, Stoll's long ride has served as an ultimate gear test for bike-touring equipment. Over the months and years on the road, he has formed some strong opinions on what gear works — and what fails in the field.

The Waterford bike has now gone more than 31,000 miles, Stoll estimates. Along the way, Stoll said everything on the bike was replaced at least once except for the frame, the handlebars and a rear rack made by Jandd.

Calling all star watchers: Help solve the mystery of this star's peculiar eclipses

In most fields of scientific research, it's not often that a call goes out to amateurs enlisting their help in solving a mystery. Yet professional astronomers are doing just that.

The mystery revolves around the behavior of a naked-eye star called Almaaz. Every 27 years, Almaaz dims noticeably for a period of between 640 and 730 days. Usually, such dimming is the result of a fainter companion star passing in front of the primary, eclipsing it once each orbit.

What makes Almaaz puzzling is the fact that, at mid-eclipse, a small brightening is seen, which is hard to explain with a simple two-star model. The current hypothesis describes the companion as a dim star, or possibly a double star, at the center of an orbiting disk of dust with a hole in its center through which the primary's light shines at mid-eclipse.

If it seems odd that such details are unknown ("why can't we just take a picture and see what's there?"), it's because Almaaz lies some 2000 light years (12 thousand, trillion miles) away. At that distance, even the Hubble Space Telescope lacks the ability to separate the primary from the secondary, and the latter is so dim that even the largest telscopes have thus far failed to detect its light.

To further complicate matters, for the past century the duration of the eclipses have decreased while the duration of minimum light has increased, suggesting that the putative disk has been changing on timescales of decades. And the primary itself undergoes semi-regular brightness variations every two months or so.

Amateur observations of the eclipse, due to begin any day now, are being coordinated by the Citizen Sky program (www.citizen-sky.org). To see Almaaz, simply look immediately to the right of Capella, the bright star low in the northeast around 11:30 p.m.

Nolte

It takes the 61-year-old Nolte four hours to tie one of his fully dressed Atlantic salmon flies. His finished flies are works of art that will never see a river or feel the teeth of a fish.

"Nobody's going to take a chance on throwing it in the water and snagging it on a tree," Nolte said of the flies he sells for $175 each.

Wyoming attorney general Bruce Salzburg is a devoted fly fisherman who keeps two of Nolte's framed flies in his office.

"It's just a preservation of a lost art," Salzburg said.

Nolte works out of his basement in Bar Nunn, a suburb of Casper in arid central Wyoming — thousands of miles from the nearest saltwater. He ships his flies in shadowbox frames to collectors worldwide. He's also in demand on the fly-fishing lecture circuit around the world as both a master salmon fly tier and as an authority on the history of classic fly patterns.

"I suppose it's a combination of the aesthetic, and the challenge, let's put it that way," Nolte said of what motivates him to tie these particularly demanding flies. "They have history — a brief history, but a glorious history."

Indeed, to trace the origin of the many feathers on a traditional salmon fly is to read a faded map from the glory days of European colonialism.

Back when the British were pleased to say that the sun never set on their sprawling empire, it was a cinch for them to round up feathers from the far corners of the earth for the sole purpose of tying salmon flies.

The wings of a fully dressed Atlantic salmon fly might include plumes from a golden pheasant from the mountains of western China. The fly's "horns" might be a few delicate strands from the feathers of a South American scarlet macaw. And the tail might require feathers from an Indian crow.

Such rare and precious fibers don't get slapped down on just any hook. Proper Atlantic salmon flies use handmade, "blind eye" hooks. Rather than the modern system of bending a loop at the end of the hook's shaft to hold the line, these hooks require tying a delicate loop of braided silkworm gut to the shaft to take the line.

"There are people who sell the occasional fly, just like I did when I started just to subsidize the hobby. But folks who don't have any other productive form of employment and tie these things? I don't know of any others."

— Marvin Nolte

"(Nolte is) probably the only person in the entire world who's ever done that, raised silk worm gut to tie salmon flies. He's very good at what he does."

— Chris Helm, owner of a fly-tying supply company in Toledo, Ohio

And that's easier said than done: Nolte was forced to raise his own silkworms for the job.

He relied on a fellow fly tier in Texas to send him mulberry leaves to feed his caterpillars. Just before they began spinning cocoons, he killed them and harvested their silk-producing glands.

Nolte stretched out the silk himself, getting about 10 inches from each gland. Wrapping three thicknesses together gave him strands of silk thick enough for the loop on the end of a fly. To Nolte, getting his flies right is worth the effort.

"I think most fishermen would tell you that there's not a prettier style of fly than a classic Atlantic salmon fly," Nolte said.

Nolte's resume includes past careers as a bomb disposal officer in the U.S. Army and a stint at a defunct Wyoming uranium mine. He's been a full-time, professional fly tier since 1993.

Nolte said he struck a deal with his wife, Victoria, that allows him to devote his time to tying flies and fishing as long as he also handles his duties as "house husband" — cooking and cleaning while she's at work. He said he's the only professional tier he knows who produces only salmon flies.

"There are people who sell the occasional fly, just like I did when I started just to subsidize the hobby," Nolte said. "But folks who don't have any other productive form of employment and tie these things? I don't know of any others."

Even with his dedication to detail, Nolte said some feathers specified for famous fly patterns are simply unavailable these days because the birds have become endangered. He said it's accepted practice to dye some feathers or substitute others to replicate traditional patterns.

Many of the exotic feathers that the British sent back from the colonies in the Victorian era went to sprawling estates. There, "ghillies," or full-time fishing guides, worked with a few renowned fly designers to devise increasingly ornate, exotic and colorful flies. If they caught a few fish, that was apparently fine, too.

These fishing pioneers devised hundreds of patterns, many designed for the particular preferences of salmon in individual rivers. Some of their flies took their names from their designers and some from the rivers where they worked best. Others, with names like "butcher" drew their fame from their proven ability to stack up the salmon steaks.

Together, the work of these fly tiers and designers defined the golden age of the Atlantic salmon fly: from the second half of the 19th century until the beginning of World War I.

After World War I, which essentially cost Europe a generation of young men, salmon fly design again returned to simple, smaller, drab flies that simply caught fish. Nolte said that's about where practical salmon fly design remains today.

Nolte's work has been featured in several books on Atlantic salmon flies.

He's published articles in magazines and made instructional tapes. In 1995, he received the Federation of Fly Fisher's Buz Buszek Memorial Fly Tying Award, a top national award.

Chris Helm, owner of a fly-tying supply company in Toledo, Ohio, is also a winner of the Buszek award and a longtime colleague of Nolte's. Nolte is "probably the only person in the entire world who's ever done that, raised silk worm gut to tie salmon flies," Helm said. "He's very good at what he does."

Paul Morgan, owner of Coch-y-Bonddu Books in Machynlleth, Wales, is publishing a new book of the selected works of George Mortimer Kelson, a renowned British fly designer and author from the golden age. Morgan has retained Nolte to tie one fly for each of the first 75 copies.

Morgan reached halfway around the world to tap Nolte for the job because he's known him for years.

"He just has an excellent reputation," Morgan said. "He's one of the few people in the world who's capable of doing it."

The $84.95 Jandd rack was designed for "carting firewood or portaging large containers of water," according to its description on www.jandd.com.

Another brand-name rack, which is less expensive, did not fare so well: "Blackburn racks are no good — I ruined two of them," Stoll quipped.

He toted food, water and dozens of items on the road, including camping gear. Ortlieb's Back Roller Classic panniers served as saddle bags for all manner of miscellany. He said the $165 waterproof bags survived four years of wear.

The aforementioned leather bike saddle is something he calls "The best thing I've ever bought." It is made by Brooks, and the model name is the Flyer. Beyond the good fit, Stoll said that the $122 saddle's large springs absorbed bumps and improved his comfort and endurance on long days.

He went through several sets of tires. The Schwalbe Marathon Plus tire, which has a 5-mm thick layer of rubber for puncture protection, is by Stoll's account "the best touring tire in the world."

The Marathon Plus tires, which cost $55 apiece, are cited as impenetrable even by shards of glass and thumb tacks. Stoll went 15,000 miles on one set.

Stoll said he also used Continental's Top Touring

Tires, which failed his test. "The beading and sidewall kept getting destroyed when I had to take them off to change a flat," he said.

For components, Stoll used Shimano's Deore LX line, which he describes as "heavy duty, long lasting, mid-range priced stuff."

He used shoes and pedals from Shimano, too. He doesn't know the model names of either. "The markings and model numbers have been long worn off," he said.

He said most of the Shimano products held up all the way around the world. The rear hub actually cracked after 30,000 miles, but it still didn't fail.

Now that's a serious gear test.

Reseeding planned for Zion National Park after 2006 fire

ZION NATIONAL PARK, Utah — Helicopters next week will begin dropping herbicides and seeds across about 4,600 acres in Zion National Park.

The project is an effort to rehabilitate an area that burned in 2006. Park officials say the work will require temporary closure of some trails in the area of Kolob Terrace Road, Coal Pits Wash and Dalton Wash. There could also be delays along Kolob Terrace Road.

In 2006, the Kolob fire burned more than 10,000 acres in the park. Afterward, investigators said the area was threatened by non-native cheatgrass, which creates a fire hazard. The herbicide is aimed at reducing cheatgrass in the area. The seeds are supposed to help re-establish native vegetation in the area.

The work could last for two weeks or longer, depending on the weather.

Officers net Clark County gator after 3-day hunt

VANCOUVER, Wash. — A Clark County animal control officer says "The people of Salmon Creek can rest assured": A 2-foot-long alligator is in custody after a three-day hunt.

Officer Trisha Kruff says sightings of the abandoned pet were first reported about a week before, but the wily beast turned up its snout at traps baited with raw chicken and hamburger. Animal control officers finally captured it last Thursday using a salmon net and a catch pole.

Kruff says, "It was just pure patience and will that caught him."

The reptile might actually be a caiman. It was being turned over to the Southwest Washington Humane Society.

Kruff says it thrived during its time in Salmon Creek, hiding in the bushes, dining on frogs and burrowing into the banks at night.

But she adds that it's a good thing they caught it, because the coming colder weather would have been bad news for the cold-blooded creature.

State regulators close herring fishing in S.F. Bay

SAN FRANCISCO — State wildlife regulators have voted to cancel the herring fishing season in San Francisco Bay for the first time because of plummeting populations of the fish.

The California Fish and Game Commission voted last week to close the winter season to help the struggling fish rebound. While the herring catch is small, it is among the last fish caught by commercial fishermen in the bay.

The state says herring populations in the bay are at an all time low, with the causes ranging from drought to pollution from the Cosco Busan oil spill in 2007.

Environmentalists and a majority of herring fishermen backed the decision.

A spokesman for the environmental group Oceana says herring need time to rebound, and are important food sources for salmon, seabirds and mammals.

Therapy through fishing

Returning GIs calm anxiety with fly-fishing

By Chester Allen
The Olympian

FORT LEWIS, Wash. — Spc. Bret DiFrancesco's big fingers froze in place and he looked toward his veteran instructor. DiFrancesco wasn't firing a rifle or working on infantry skills. He was trying to figure out how to wrap a pheasant feather around a hook and smooth the cantankerous fibers back at the same time.

"Switch hands, and wrap the feather with your right hand and pull back the fibers with your left hand," said Dick Stearns, a local fly angler and fly tier.

DiFrancesco — whose uniform is adorned with the Combat Infantryman Badge, awarded to infantry soldiers who have been under fire in combat — thought for a couple of seconds. Then he carefully pinched the delicate feather with two beefy fingers of his right hand and wound the feather on the hook.

"It's a Carey Special fly," DiFrancesco said.

"Now, you've got to learn how to do a whip finish so the thread won't unwind," Stearns said.

"Oh, boy," DiFrancesco said. "Here we go."

Learning how to tie flies, cast a fly rod and hook a few fish isn't standard military training, but it has become so for the Warrior Transition Battalion. Every Tuesday afternoon volunteers from Project Healing Waters arrive in the barracks meeting room, set up fly-tying vises, rig fly rods, and help soldiers heal.

The soldiers who are placed in the Warrior Transition Battalion need six months or more of complex medical care. They come from different Army units, and some will remain in the Army after their time in the battalion, while others will eventually return to civilian life.

But every soldier in the battalion has a chance to learn fly fishing from volunteers for Trout Unlimited and Federation of Fly Fishers chapters as part of Project Healing Waters, said Chuck Tye of Olympia.

"Project Healing Waters has been at Fort Lewis for about a year now," said Tye, a retired U.S. Marine who is the Northwest regional coordinator for the program. "The program offers both mental and physical healing for veterans, whether they have post-traumatic stress disorder or injuries."

Some combat veterans with severe wounds return to the United States and wonder what the rest of their life has to offer, Tye said.

Teaching veterans how to tie flies, cast a fly rod — and then taking them on fishing outings to the Yakima River or American Lake — introduces soldiers to the tranquility and fascination that fly fishing offers.

The intricate work of tying a fly or the precise timing of casting a fly rod combine physical therapy and mental therapy, Tye said.

Soldiers who have lost a limb or suffered other terrible wounds soon learn they still can do all it takes to catch fish.

"We look at this as part of the medical kit bag that helps soldiers regain what they have lost," Tye said.

It's Tye's job to connect members of the military with civilian fly anglers in the Northwest. Project Healing Waters was started in 2005 in the Washington, D.C., area, and there are now programs in 38 states, he said.

Spc. Asha Bibby, 23, sat at a vise with volunteer Dwight Caron and gingerly wrapped thread around a hook. Bibby was nervous and didn't have much to say. Then she tied on a long tail of marabou feathers, and Caron helped her tie in a black chenille thread and a chicken feather.

Bibby — now smiling — wrapped the chenille and feathers on the hook and tied them off.

"It's a Woolly Bugger," Bibby said. "It's my first fly."

Bibby, who is dealing with PTSD after a 14-month deployment to Iraq, showed her fly to everyone in the room. Then she tied another fly, a Stimulator dry fly.

Caron told Bibby that she had a talent for tying.

"These flies will catch fish," Bibby said. "They are so intricate — there's a lot that goes into tying flies."

Bibby planned to tie more flies the following Tuesday — and to learn how to cast a fly rod. "I've never been fly fishing before, but I'm going to learn," she said.

It's focusing on the process that helps soldiers heal, said Sgt. 1st Class Richard Elmore, who works with Warrior Transition Battalion soldiers.

"Your focus is on tying that fly — and you're not worrying," said Elmore, who has served two stints in Iraq. "You're just enjoying yourself while tying flies. It's very calming, especially if you have anxiety."

Tye said Project Healing Waters continues to grow, and it will remain a way for veterans to reconnect with quiet pleasures.

Many soldiers get hooked on tying flies and fly fishing, and the time creating flies or casting for fish becomes a lifelong passion and stress reliever, Tye said.

"We had two young guys recovering from wounds start tying here a while back, and now they help teach others," Tye said.

Spc. DiFrancesco kept up a constant chatter as he cranked out fly after fly.

"When you get shot at, you get mad," he said. "When you get blown up, it's a surprise."

This was DiFrancesco's third fly-tying session, and rows of his creations filled a fly box.

"This is so cool," he said. "I like doing it."

Then DiFrancesco looked at Stearns and smiled. They had been tying together nonstop for more than two hours.

"OK," DiFrancesco said. "What fly are we doing now?"

W. Idaho man cited for wolf poaching

BOISE (AP) — An Idaho man was cited for wolf poaching after killing a female pup from a public road while standing behind his pickup truck in an area where wolf hunting wasn't legal.

The Eagle resident, whose name wasn't released, was cited Tuesday after shooting the young wolf Sunday evening in the McCall-Wieser wolf zone. It doesn't open to hunting until Oct. 1. In addition, it's illegal to hunt from a public road.

The man called the Idaho Department of Fish and Game's 24-hour hotline to report the kill, maintaining it was shot in the Sawtooth zone where hunting began Sept. 1. He said he later realized it was in the McCall-Weiser zone after seeing a map.

The kill will be subtracted from the McCall-Weiser zone's hunt quota, reducing the total that can be shot legally here to 14.

His rifle, camera and wolf tag were seized, along with the pup's hide and skull. An investigation continues and no charges have been filed with the state courts.

Injured N. Idaho teen moving on with life

By Kathy Hedberg
The Lewiston Tribune

GRANGEVILLE — A little less than two years ago, Tom McAdow was lying in a Spokane hospital bed, paralyzed from the chest down, not sure if he would ever walk again.

On Nov. 13, 2007, McAdow went hunting with his grandfather, uncle and others east of Grangeville. It was a cold morning; it had rained the night before and the hunting party pulled into a gravel pit to unload their four-wheelers.

There was a hill, not too steep, nearby, "and so like a normal teenager I decided to go up it," McAdow, now 17, said.

All went well at first but he had underestimated how loose the gravel was. About 30 feet up the hill the front tire began to spin.

"So I downshifted, trying to get it into reverse as fast as I could. But it was halfway in reverse when the four-wheeler started tipping on me. So I pushed myself off and straightened out my legs up above me, so when I hit I could have stopped the four-wheeler and pushed it aside."

Instead, McAdow's foot got stuck and the machine slammed into him.

"I remember looking up and seeing the four-wheeler come down," he said. "I remember it hitting, blacking out, and as it came off I remember waking back up and looking and then as it started dragging me I blacked out again."

McAdow said he didn't feel any pain until his companions moved the machine away. Then the agony began.

He was taken to Syringa General Hospital at Grangeville and later moved to Lewiston where he underwent back surgery. Besides breaking his backbone, McAdow had also injured his spinal cord and from the chest down he had no feeling, nor could he move.

He spent a week at St. Joseph Regional Medical Center and from there was taken to St. Luke's Rehabilitation Institute in Spokane, where he stayed a month.

At St. Luke's he started physical therapy, but it dealt mostly with "learning how to take care of my body in a wheelchair. Knowing signs of pressure sores. Learning how to do everything I have to for my life from a wheelchair."

McAdow returned home to Grangeville on Dec. 23 where he lives with his mother, Kristi Harvey, and two brothers, Sammy, 5, and Jeremiah, 3.

It took about three weeks before he was able to return to Grangeville High School where he was a freshman.

"The doctors didn't recommend that," said his mother, "but I wanted him to give it a try. I wanted him to be normal and start doing things and it worked out."

One of the hurdles McAdow has had to face, besides being in a wheelchair, are the mixed reactions from his peers.

"Some of them aren't real sure about it," he said. "They just don't know how to act. They're a little more shy around me so they stay back."

On the other hand, "I have a few really good friends who are there when I need them."

Among those friends are Idaho Fish and Game conservation officer George Fischer and Brent Ewing, the pastor of McAdow's church.

Fischer has carried McAdow on his back to go hunting and helped him get a once-a-year job at Flying B Ranch in Kamiah teaching youngsters how to shoot clay pigeons.

Ewing taught McAdow how to use a kayak and has taken him fishing and swimming.

Those two, along with other friends, see that McAdow is included in all the outdoor activities he loves best, including riding four-wheelers again. He's taken driver's training and acquired his license, as well as a van specially equipped with hand controls and a wheelchair lift.

McAdow admits he likes "daredevil stuff — the adrenalin rush."

And gradually he is regaining feeling and more movement in his hips and upper legs. He demonstrates being able to flex his thigh muscles — an achievement that his mother describes as "awesome."

Recently he underwent surgery to remove the hardware that supported his spinal column. He displays the bolts, pins and screws in the palm of his hand — they look like something that could hold a couple of two-by-fours together.

The family had insurance that paid for part of the medical costs, but Harvey said she is continuing to pay bills. Still, she admitted, it's a small price to pay for the well-being of her son.

Although the doctors first said they didn't expect McAdow ever to walk again, he and his mother believe it will happen. He is still termed as an "incomplete" recovery and they have been told that most rehabilitation will happen within the first two years.

Alice and Wayne Schenk hiked to Lake Cleveland on May 28, before the road reopened for the season. The couple parked about 1/4-mile from the Pomerelle Mountain Ski Resort turn off and then hiked over several snow drifts to reach the lake. 'It was a beautiful day, sunny and warm. Everything smelled so fresh and intense,' Alice wrote of the experience. 'The road down around the lake was snow-covered and Lake Cleveland was at least a third covered with snow.'

'Getting into the lake and going under (twice) was one of those moments that, literally ... took my breath away!' Alice wrote.

Jerome seniors say 'not fair' to city plan to collect senior center rentals

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

JEROME — The Jerome Senior Center's governing board and the city are embroiled in a dispute over which entity should have the right to rent out the center and collect proceeds for meetings and special events held there.

With a new senior center building expected to open this fall and the lease for the existing senior center expired, the center's board of directors has balked at a city draft lease for the new facility.

Senior Center Board Chair Geneva Ellis called lease changes unfair.

"When the people of Jerome voted for a new senior center, it passed with 80 percent of the vote and the city now wants to change it to the Jerome Community Center," she said.

City Administrator Ben Marchant said the sign on the building will read "Jerome Community Center" and a plaque will state that it is also the senior center.

He explained that the city is calling the new building a community center because a majority of city voters approved general obligation bonds to fund the project and the building will be available for all residents of Jerome, regardless of age.

Hours of availability at a senior center and future revenues are at the heart of the dispute.

"For 30 years, we have had access to the old center 24 hours a day, seven days a week. Now the city wants to limit us to manage the center from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.," Ellis said, explaining that the change would take away the center's ability to raise funds.

The center in the historic railroad depot on First Avenue East now hosts the Kiwanis Club, other organizations, and is available for rental for weddings, reunions and other events.

"I think they're short of money. That's my own personal opinion," Ellis said of the city.

"The city is looking at managing the center under different terms," Marchant said. "The hours really aren't that restrictive."

He confirmed that the city wants to take over renting the facility and collections of rental fees to offset the costs of operations and maintenance of the new building.

"It's not their facility. They do not own it," Marchant said of the senior center board.

He said the senior center would have the right to reserve the facility at no cost during times it is not in use because it would be the primary tenant of the facility.

Ellis said the center's board is urging the public to attend its next board meeting, held 10 a.m. Thursday at the old senior center, to air opinions on the dispute.

Jerome commission ponders new retirement plan

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

JEROME — Jerome County commissioners considered on Tuesday an alternative to 401K retirement plans for county employees.

Jason Daum, of the Idaho Deferred Compensation Plan, told the commission that the "457 plan" is similar to a 401K, but is only available to public employees.

He explained that the program was developed for professional firefighters and law enforcement personnel that routinely retire before they turn 59.5 years old. It could become available to all of the county's workers.

Daum said a substantial difference from a 401K is there is no financial consequence for early withdrawal. With 401K plans, participants younger than 59.5 who remove funds face an IRS penalty for early withdrawal.

Another major difference is participants older than 60 are permitted to put an unlimited portion of their earnings into the tax-deferred program.

The College of Southern Idaho and Ada County recently adopted the program and several other counties and municipalities in Idaho are considering it, Daum said.

For Jerome County to adopt the program, the county commission would have to pass a resolution to authorize the change.

In other business, the commission considered defining ways county departments, including law enforcement, should disseminate information to the media.

Discussions included prepared press releases and who the county should authorize to talk to the media.

Planning and Zoning Administrator Art Brown told the commission some people are uncomfortable talking to the press. He also said he would not want to see incorrect information released.

"You're the top dogs in the county. You're the Board of County commissioners," he said, suggesting that the commission determine a policy for who talks to the media and who writes press releases.

Using Code Enforcement Officer Bob Wright as an example, Commissioner Joe Davidson said he would not want to see a county employee placed in a bad spot.

He also said he wants to be fair to the press.

"Who's the greatest carrier of what we want to do? The paper. How do we educate the public? The paper," Davidson said.

Commissioner Cathy Roemer called for improved communication with sensitive issues. She used an example of not putting county commissioners in competition with department heads with statements to the media.

Psoriasis improving with fish oil and vitamin D treatment

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have had psoriasis for many years. When it first started, my husband (a pathologist and a university professor of pathology) diagnosed it and told me to see a dermatologist for treatment. I have seen several dermatologists and was prescribed many medications. None of them really helped to relieve my symptoms, so I finally stopped seeing the specialists and stopped using the medications.

I often receive notices in the mail regarding psoriasis drugs, especially Humira. I am enclosing a copy of the list of warnings associated with the medication. I can't help but wonder why the Food and Drug Administration would approve a drug that can cause so many life-threatening problems. After all, psoriasis is not pretty and can be uncomfortable, but it is not life-threatening. I'd rather keep my psoriasis than take any medicine that could possibly cause cancer, heart problems or more.

Now, to some good news. Recently, my husband decided to do some research on psoriasis and see what he could come up with to help me. About a month ago, he told me to start taking 1,000 milligrams of fish oil and 2,000 IU of vitamin D three times daily. My skin looks so much better already. It's amazing! It's not completely cleared, but I no longer have the huge red splotches and ugly scales. My arms are almost clear, and my legs are very much improved. I no longer feel I have to be completely covered up. I'm much more comfortable in my skin.

DEAR READER: I am glad to hear that your husband appears to have found a simple, nonprescription remedy to your psoriasis. I have chosen to print it in my column for the benefit of other sufferers. I urge anyone interested in trying this to first discuss it with his or her physician because the dosages are fairly large and may not be suitable for everyone. Fish oil, for example, can interact with certain medications and worsen or cause bleeding tendencies and spontaneous bruising. It should not be used without permission of a physician by people with clotting disorders or by people who are on anticoagulant therapy.

If my readers find success, I will print a follow-up article with the results. Perhaps your husband has come across something amazing.

Now, to your concerns about Humira. It is my understanding that the FDA approves medications based on rates of success. No drug is perfect, and most carry potentially serious consequences. What comes into play is the percentage of people who experience adverse effects. Most serious complications appear in a small subgroup of users, affecting less than 1 percent of all people taking any particular medication.

It is for this reason that patients should always be informed about the possible side effects of a drug so they can determine whether the benefits outweigh the risks. In most cases, they do, and the user is unlikely to experience a problem.

Alternative herbal or holistic remedies can adversely affect some people, so the problem is not limited to prescription drugs. Lifestyle, diet and behavioral modifications should all be implemented first in order to prevent or reduce the need for medication.

Gary Rex Bowers

BLCAKFOOT — Gary Rex Bowers, 67, of Blackfoot, passed away Sunday, Sept. 6, 2009, at the Bingham Memorial Hospital in Blackfoot.

Gary was born on Dec. 20, 1941, in Burley, to Myrtle Smith Bowers and Rex Merrill Bowers. He graduated from Valley High School in Eden/Hazelton in 1960. He was an Eagle Scout. After high school, Gary attended Idaho State University for two years in auto mechanics. He worked in the auto repair business for several years and later went to work for a few electric sign companies located in Colorado and Arizona. He also lived in Delaware for a few years and worked as a foreman in design and sign construction. He retired in 2001 and moved to Blackfoot to be near his children and grandchildren.

While attending school at Idaho State University, Gary met and married Lynett Taysom. They had three children, two boys and one girl, Craig, Doug and Traci. They were later divorced. Later on, Gary married Toni Stone of Idaho Falls. Toni had one son, Bret, whom Gary adopted. They were later divorced. Gary enjoyed traveling, fishing, and being retired. He especially loved the game of golf and enjoyed time spent on the course. His family was early home-steaders in the Burley project.

Gary was preceded in death by his father, who was killed in action during World War II when Gary was only 3; his stepfather, Mark R. Anderson; his paternal grandparents, Elias and Hannah Bowers of Starrh's Ferry; and maternal grandparents, Charles and Lillie Smith of Burley. He is survived by his mother, Myrtle Smith Bowers Anderson of Preston; his four children, Craig (Barbara) Doan of Weiser, Doug (Kaye) Bowers of Blackfoot, Traci (Bart) Hebdon of Blackfoot and Bret Bowers of Salt Lake City, Utah; six brothers and sisters, Marilyn (David) Jensen of Denver, Colo., Diana (Richard) Schlund of Castleford, Sharon (Claire) Hatch of Oxford, Milo Anderson, Mike (Valyn) Andersen and Vicki (Melvin) Thomsen; and nine grandchildren.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Monday, Sept. 14, at Hawker Funeral Home, 132 S. Shilling Ave. in Blackfoot. Family and friends are invited to come and visit one hour prior to the service at 10 a.m. Monday at the mortuary. Interment will be at 3 p.m. Monday in the Gem Cemetery, 2435 Overland Ave. in Burley.

Darlene Palmer Hawkins

KIMBERLY — Darlene Palmer Hawkins, 64, of Kimberly, passed away Sunday, Sept. 6, 2009, at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls.

Darlene was born Sept. 1, 1945, in Oakley, to Ralph W. and Rose Mary (Cramer) Palmer. She attended schools in Oakley, then went to work for Ore-Ida Foods where she met the love of her life, Duane Edwin Hawkins. They were married Dec. 4, 1966, and to this union came five children, Deanna Berks of Kimberly, Dean Hawkins of Twin Falls, Debbie Hawkins of Twin Falls, Della Hawkins of Boise and little girl Dianna Hawkins, who passed away in 1969.

Darlene is preceded in death by her husband, Duane of 34 years; her father, Ralph Palmer; one brother, Larry Palmer; and one sister-in-law, Betsy Palmer. She is survived by her four children; one granddaughter, Jessica Berks of Kimberly; and her mother, Rose Mary Palmer of Oakley.

She was an active member of the LDS Church.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, Sept. 11, at White Mortuary "Chapel by the Park," with interment to follow at the Oakley Cemetery. A visitation for family and friends will be held from 4 to 8 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 10, at White Mortuary "Chapel by the Park."

Columnist Army Archerd dies at 87

By Derrick J. Lang
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — Army Archerd, whose breezy column for the entertainment trade publication Daily Variety kept tabs on various Hollywood doings for more than a half-century, has died. He was 87.

Archerd's wife, Selma, said he died Tuesday at UCLA Medical Center of mesothelioma, a cancer of the lungs strongly tied to asbestos exposure. She said the cancer was the result of his time spent in shipyards while serving in the Navy during World War II. She said he had become very ill over the last two years, especially in the last two weeks.

"He was the love of my life," said Selma. Over the years, Archerd won praise from the Hollywood establishment for always checking the accuracy of his news tips before printing them. He had an extensive phone directory of much-guarded private numbers that he would use to call movie stars and studio bosses directly to ferret out which rumors were true and which were not.

His biggest scoop came in 1985 when he was first to report that veteran leading man Rock Hudson had AIDS. It was the first time a major Hollywood star was disclosed to be an AIDS victim, and it helped break down some of the secrecy surrounding the disease.

Archerd — born Armand Archerd in New York in 1922 — also broke the story that Julia Roberts had jilted fiance Keifer Sutherland in 1991 and that longtime bachelor Warren Beatty had married Annette Bening in 1992. His source for the Beatty-Bening story was Beatty himself.

"I know it sounds like a cliché," said Selma, "but the time we spent together, it was just an outstanding life of knowing the most gorgeous people in the world, being very well accepted by them, traveling all over the world like millionaires, even though we were poor."

For more than 50 years, Archerd also served as the greater-interviewer at the Academy Awards. Acting nominees and other celebrities were conducted to a platform alongside the red carpet for a brief chat with Archerd that was heard by the thousands of fans gathered outside the theater.

"I try to give the nominee a little moment in the sun, maybe their last," he explained in 2002.

Apple CEO Jobs on stage, discusses transplant

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Apple Inc. CEO Steve Jobs returned Wednesday to the showman role that has helped define his company leadership, taking the stage for the first time since his medical leave to announce such new products as an iPod Nano that records video.

Jobs, who had a liver transplant this spring from a young adult who died in a car accident, got a vigorous standing ovation from many in the audience.

Looking thin and speaking quietly and with a scratchy voice, the 54-year-old CEO urged everyone to become organ donors.

"I wouldn't be here without such generosity," Jobs said.

Jobs had not appeared at such a product launch event since last October. He bowed out of his usual keynote at the year's largest Mac trade show in January and went on leave shortly thereafter for nearly six months.

At an event for journalists, bloggers and software partners, Jobs announced updates to Apple's iTunes and iPhone software and unveiled a new iPod Nano with a built-in video camera.

Phil Schiller, Apple's top marketing executive, also took the stage to announce price cuts and storage boosts to existing iPod Touch models.

Few chief executives are considered as critical to their companies' success as Jobs has been to Apple's since 1997, when he returned to the company after a 12-year hiatus, and Apple's stock has soared and plunged on news and rumors of his health.

Shares in Apple reached a 52-week high of $174.47 in Wednesday trading, then fell to close at $171.14, or $1.79 below Tuesday's closing.

Jobs, whose medical problems began more than five years ago and included treatment for a rare form of pancreatic cancer, seemed happy to be back in the spotlight, saying, "I'm vertical, I'm back at Apple and loving every day of it."

As was expected, Apple's announcements were mainly tied to music players and the iTunes software, though Jobs spoke briefly about the iPhone and said 30 million of the devices had been sold so far.

Police raid ends Mexico hijacking; 1 arrested

By Mark Stevenson
Associated Press writer

MEXICO CITY — A Bolivian religious fanatic briefly hijacked a jetliner from the beach resort of Cancun as it landed in Mexico City on Wednesday, police said. All passengers and the crew were released unharmed.

The Bible-carrying hijacker used a juice can he said was a bomb to hold the 103 passengers and crew on the tarmac for more than an hour.

Masked police stormed the aircraft with guns drawn and escorted several handcuffed men away without firing a shot. Police later said there was only one hijacker, and the other men aboard were detained because the suspect had told a flight attendant he had three accomplices. The others were quickly released. Jose Flores, 44, later told police his three companions were "the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost?" Flores hijacked Aeromexico Flight 576 after a divine revelation, according to Public Safety Secretary Genaro Garcia Luna. Flores said Wednesday's date — 9-9-09 — is the satanic number 666 turned upside down.

Flores, speaking to reporters after he was detained, said he took control of the aircraft with "a juice can ... with some little lights I attached."

"Christ is coming soon," he added, smiling.

As the plane was landing, Flores stood up and showed his contraption to a flight attendant, Garcia Luna said.

He ordered the pilot to circle over Mexico City seven times and asked to speak with Mexican President Felipe Calderon, saying he wanted to warn him of an impending earthquake, Garcia Luna said.

His wife, Elizabeth Melgar, told W Radio that Flores "always told me that he was looking for a way to attract the attention of the media ... he always told me that he was waiting for a signal from God to do something."

"Don't worry if they put me in jail," Melgar quoted him as saying. "(It will be) glory to God."

Garcia Luna said Flores is a drug addict who was convicted of armed robbery in Bolivia, and has lived in Mexico for 17 years. Flores described himself as a pastor in southern Oaxaca state who had gone to Cancun to preach.

COSMIC COMEBACK

NASA/AP photos

A Hubble Space Telescope image shows the Bug Nebula, also known as the Butterfly Nebula. The new pictures were the first obtained with the telescope since a crew spent 13 days in orbit last May repairing it.

This image taken by the Hubble Space Telescope shows a clash among members of a famous galaxy quintet, revealing a range of stars from young, blue stars to aging, red stars.

Refurbished Hubble sends stunning galactic images

By Joel Achenbach
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — NASA's Hubble Space Telescope, rebuilt by astronauts, has demonstrated its new powers with a stunning set of images of exploding stars, a stellar nursery, colliding galaxies and the lensing effect of a galactic cluster nearly halfway across the universe.

The Hubble was repaired and refurbished earlier this year in a series of tense spacewalks by astronauts on the space shuttle Atlantis, all of whom attended a packed briefing Wednesday morning at NASA headquarters. They fixed two broken instruments and installed a new camera, a spectrograph, new batteries and gyroscopes. Months later, everything appears to be working without a hitch.

NASA made sure that the newest Hubble images packed some visual punch. The most dramatic come from the Wide Field Camera 3, installed by the astronauts after a protracted struggle with a stuck bolt that threatened to keep the camera from ever being used.

One image shows Planetary Nebula NGC 6302, more commonly known as the Butterfly Nebula. It's a dying star ejecting two "wings" of gas. For the past two millennia the gas has been spreading outward, and the "butterfly" is now trillions of miles in diameter.

"It portends what our solar system is going to look like in about 4 billion years," NASA's head of science, Ed Weiler, said in an interview. "We're seeing the sun's death in 4 billion years."

Another image shows a cluster of galaxies known as Stephan's Quintet. Two of the galaxies are melding like fried eggs plopped together in a pan. Two more will eventually join them to form a single, colossal galaxy.

The Hubble also made complementary observations, one in optical light and one in infrared light, of a billowing star-forming region in the Carina Nebula, which is about 7,500 light-years from Earth. The optical image shows a glowing pillar of dust. The infrared shot penetrates the dust — peeling back the curtain, in a sense — to show what's inside. There are four primary stars baking inside. One, in the center, emits two jets of gas, like a plane with dual vapor trails.

"You see how this gives you new eyes," astrophysicist Mario Livio of the Space Telescope Science Institute said after the briefing. "We see this incredible resolution in the visible and then we see the same thing with the same kind of resolution in the infrared. That blew me away."

S. Carolina Republicans call for governor's resignation

By Jim Davenport
Associated Press writer

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Sixty-one South Carolina House Republicans asked Gov. Mark Sanford to resign Wednesday, questioning his ability to lead the state since his unannounced summertime trip to see a mistress in Argentina and investigations of his state and private travel that followed.

Sanford

"Your decision to abandon our state for five days, with no defined order of succession and with no known way to contact you, is inexcusable," said a letter from the lawmakers signed by House Majority Leader Kenny Bingham.

The letter, which listed the names of 59 other lawmakers, came a day after the House speaker issued a similar call. Any move to impeach the GOP governor would begin in the House, which has 72 Republicans, 51 Democrats and one empty seat. Bingham's office said another member joined the effort after the letter went to Sanford.

The chamber's Democratic leader, Rep. Harry Ott, D-St. Matthews, has said his caucus will discuss the governor next month. Columbia Democratic Rep. James Smith, who is working with Democrats and Republicans on an impeachment resolution, said there is enough support for the measure to get the 83 votes it would need to pass the House.

Commandos rescue Times reporter in Afghanistan; colleague killed

By Jason Straziuso and Rahim Faiez
Associated Press writers

KABUL — During the first two days of captivity, The New York Times reporter and his Afghan translator were optimistic about being released. Then more Taliban came to the hide-out and taunted the captives about an Italian journalist who was freed while his Afghan interpreter was beheaded.

The menace grew — until British commandos launched a rescue raid. The reporter survived; his Afghan colleague died in a volley of gunfire as he shouted "Journalist! Journalist!" Four others, including a British soldier, also were killed.

Stephen Farrell, who was not injured in the rescue Wednesday, is one of a half-dozen foreign journalists to be kidnapped in Afghanistan over the last several years.

The kidnappings illustrate some of the obstacles for reporters in covering an increasingly lethal war. August saw a record number of U.S. troops die in combat, and bombings wounded three journalists embedded with them: two from The Associated Press and one from CBS Radio News.

Farrell, 46, exposed himself to a different danger. He and his 34-year-old translator, Sultan Munadi, ventured without military escort to the site of a NATO airstrike on two hijacked fuel tankers in a Taliban-controlled area of northern Afghanistan to interview villagers about civilian casualties from the attack.

It was an important story. The top NATO commander, U.S. Gen. Stanley McChrystal, had made protecting Afghan civilians a top priority, and there were conflicting claims of how many civilians had died in the bombing Friday. Police had warned reporters of the dangers of traveling to the village in Kunduz province, and other Western journalists, including some from the AP, went there in the company of NATO forces.

New York Times Executive Editor Bill Keller said reporters in the field are allowed a great deal of leeway, and that they are the best ones to judge the level of risk. He added that the newspaper would carry out a security review after the latest abduction.

The Times reported that while Farrell and Munadi were interviewing Afghans on Saturday near the site of the airstrike, an old man approached and warned them to leave. Soon after, gunshots rang out and people shouted that Taliban fighters were approaching. Across the Kunduz river, a group of about 10 militants with Kalashnikovs and machine guns were running toward them.

Munadi

The Taliban captured the journalists. Their driver fled and notified Farrell's colleagues in Kabul.

The Times kept the kidnappings quiet out of concern for the men's safety, and other media organizations, including the AP, did not report the abductions.

According to Farrell's account in the Times, the captors moved the two men several times and eventually put them in a tiny room. On the third day, some new fighters, apparently more senior Taliban figures from elsewhere in Afghanistan, arrived and discussed moving their hostages out of the Kunduz area.

Afghan officials believed the two Times journalists were originally held by a Mullah Qadir, but were handed off to a commander Mullah Salaam and held in the village of Ghor Tepa, said Lt. Gen. Mirza Mohammad Yarmand, an Afghan army investigator sent to Kunduz by President Hamid Karzai to look into the case.

Before dawn on Wednesday, they could hear helicopters approaching.

The militants scattered, though one returned and tipped his gun toward them and then left again without firing. After a while, Farrell and Munadi went out into a courtyard. With Munadi in front, they ran in the dark along the compound's high mud-brick wall. They heard British and Afghan voices — and a flurry of bullets.

After moving along the wall for about 60 feet, Munadi raised his hands, walked into the open and shouted, "Journalist! Journalist!"

"He was three seconds away from safety," Farrell was quoted as saying. "I thought we were safe. He just walked into a hail of bullets."

Farrell, a dual Irish-British citizen, said he then dived into a ditch. For the next couple of minutes, he focused on the British voices. Then he shouted: "British hostage! British hostage!"

The British voices told him to come near, and that's when he said he saw Munadi.

Farrell told the Times: "He was so close; he was just two feet in front of me when he dropped."

Lockerbie bomber looks weak, pale in rare public appearance

By Khaled El-Deeb
Associated Press writer

TRIPOLI, Libya — The ailing Lockerbie bomber looked weak and pale, sitting in a wheelchair, as he was visited by a group of African parliamentarians Wednesday in a rare appearance in the hospital where he is being treated for prostate cancer.

Abdel Baset al-Megrahi appeared for only five minutes and did not speak during the visit in the Tripoli Medical Center. Dressed in a hospital gown, he wore a surgical mask over his mouth and nose and a traditional embroidered cap. A line from an IV bottle was hooked into his hand.

Al-Megrahi was freed from a Scottish prison last month on compassionate grounds because doctors said he was dying of his cancer. The release outraged the United States and many relatives of the 270 people killed in the 1988 bombing of Pan Am Flight 103 over Lockerbie, Scotland — and their anger was further fanned by the warm welcome al-Megrahi received when he arrived home in Libya.

Libyan officials have said little about his condition since his Aug. 20 homecoming. Al-Megrahi was rushed to the hospital 11 days later, and TV images at the time showed him breathing through an oxygen mask. Later, there were reports he was taken into intensive care, but Libyan officials denied the reports.

Al-Megrahi was the only person convicted of the Lockerbie bombing, which killed all 259 people on board — mostly Americans — and 11 people on the ground.

In Washington, U.S. State Department spokesman Ian Kelly said he had not seen al-Megrahi's latest appearance, but told reporters, "we have urged Libya to not give Mr. Megrahi a kind of public profile that would be distressing to these families."

Al-Megrahi was brought out Wednesday for a visit by 150 members of the South Africa-based Pan African Parliament, the largely symbolic body of the African Union. Some delivered speeches congratulating al-Megrahi on his release. Libyan leader Moammar Gadhafi later held a separate meeting with the parliamentarians.

"I can't prove that he (al-Megrahi) is guilty or innocent, but I sympathize with his health condition," said Idriss Ndele Moussa, chairperson of the Pan African Parliament.

Libyan lawmaker Mohammed Jibril told reporters that the Africans' visit with al-Megrahi was intended to mirror Europe's treatment of a group of Bulgarian nurses that Libya freed in 2007 after jailing them for eight years on charges they intentionally infected Libyan children with the HIV virus. The five Bulgarian nurses and a Palestinian doctor jailed with them denied the charges.

Jibril said the nurses visited the European parliament after their release and were given a warm welcome by the Bulgarian president, who pardoned them. Libya said then that the medics should have gone to a Bulgarian prison.

Abdel Baset al-Megrahi, who was found guilty of the 1988 Lockerbie bombing, is seen as he meets with African parliamentary delegations, not pictured, in Tripoli, Libya, Wednesday.

Beatlemania returns to Britain with rollout of CD and video game

By Gregory Katz
Associated Press writer

LONDON — Beatlemania is back with the rollout Wednesday of the Fab Four's remastered CDs and first-ever video game, reaching out to a whole new generation decades after their parents — and even grandparents — first succumbed.

It's been nearly 40 years since John, Paul, George and Ringo announced their breakup, but the new game and discs caused a worldwide buzz as the Beatles returned to the top of the charts in Britain, the land where it all began.

Fans flocked to get their hands on the long-awaited sonic masterpieces, with lines snaking outside record stores in London and Liverpool. Some die-hards jammed the streets outside Abbey Road, the landmark studio where the Beatles recorded many of their groundbreaking albums.

About 50 people gathered outside the HMV music store on London's Oxford Street early Wednesday — some, like university student Daniela Gutierrez, waiting in line since 3 a.m.

"My parents were huge Beatles fans and I grew up listening to their music," said Gutierrez, 25. "I can't wait to have the game and start playing the songs." It's not exactly 1964 — there were no fainting teens or other visible signs of feverish Beatlemania — but the long-awaited release brought the long-gone band to the top of the charts maintained by online retailer Amazon.co.uk.

Or, as John Lennon liked to say, "to the toppermost of the poppermost."

Uma Nolan, an Irish nurse visiting London, came to the Abbey Road studio to be photographed at the pedestrian crossing made famous on the "Abbey Road" album cover. She plans to buy the entire set of 17 CDs — even though she already has all the songs in the collection. "I will absolutely go out and buy them," she said. "I'm a huge Beatles fan and have every single LP in original first edition copies. They were the first real pop group. The entire generation was waiting for that to happen. They sent worldwide pop culture off into orbit."

Nolan, 50, said remastering the Beatles albums will introduce them to a new generation.

"It brings them up do date and modernizes their music," she said. "You're enhancing what was really to begin with, so that can't be a bad thing."

High prices are apparently no deterrent —

Amazon.com sold out its allotment of pre-orders for the Beatles box set, priced at $260 (170 pounds) and has a waiting list of buyers.

The robust sales are expected to add to the already considerable wealth of Paul McCartney and Ringo Starr, the "thank my lucky stars" drummer who joined the band just before it had its first hit, as well as Yoko Ono and Olivia Harrison, the widows of the late John Lennon and George Harrison. Court records publicized last year put McCartney's net worth at about $800 million.

"The Beatles: Rock Band" video game also is expected to sell well.

For CSI VB, ranking a point of motivation

College of Southern Idaho volleyball coach Heidi Cartisser borrowed my copy of this week's NJCAA Division I Volleyball Poll after practice on Wednesday and read it aloud to her players. The reactions ranged from rolling eyes to disbelieving inquiry.

Afterward the Golden Eagles were saying all the right things, but it doesn't take much reading between the lines to grasp the sheer annoyance toward the latest rankings.

David Bashore

CSI landed at No. 8 in this week's poll, up six spots from the preseason edition. What sticks in the Golden Eagles' craw more than their own slotting is the fact their two chief rivals for the Region 18 championship and a berth to the national tournament, North Idaho College and Salt Lake Community College, are Nos. 2 and 3, respectively.

Latest NJCAA D-1 volleyball poll released.

This despite CSI hammering NIC at the Outback Invitational before coming up just short against the Bruins in a five-setter.

North Idaho (10-2) and Salt Lake (9-3) split a pair last weekend in Salt Lake, where they also faced No. 7 Missouri State University-West Plains, which is above CSI despite a modest 6-5 record to the Golden Eagles' 8-1 mark.

Perhaps it was a reward for the two Region 18 rivals beating up on each other for the second successive weekend - NIC also beat SLCC in Twin Falls - while CSI headed south to play some different but perhaps not as well regarded opposition - something the Golden Eagles did without leading middle hitter Torrey Hulsey, who sat out to nurse the ankle she injured in warmups against Salt Lake two weekends ago.

On the other hand, maybe it's just one of those things. Polls aren't exactly empirical when it comes to determining the best team. That's why things are settled on the court. And settling the issue there is something CSI has a priceless opportunity to do.

Bruins look to rebound against Skyline

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

Skyline is eating Class 4A teams for breakfast. Twin Falls hopes to avoid becoming the next meal.

The Bruin football squad travels to Idaho Falls today (7 p.m., 102.9 FM) to face its former conference rival, the Grizzlies, who are looking for their third win of the season after piling on Rigby (46-18) and Bonneville (35-7).

Both the Skyline (2-0) offense and defense have chewed up opponents. According to the Post Register, Skyline's defense held Bonneville to a scoreless first half and forced five turnovers. On offense, Michael Berger and Steven Frei are threats in the backfield at quarterback and tailback, respectively, while Michael Buford is a reliable target at receiver. Berger carried for nearly 250 yards and five touchdowns against Rigby. Senior tailback Max Asay was injured in the opener and will not play against the Bruins.

Reynolds said that the "No. 1 concern" is protecting quarterback T.J. Ellis as the Grizzlies rely on heavy defensive pressure and a bevy of blitzes.

"They have a lot of team speed," Reynolds said. "The Berger kid is pretty quick. They get to the football, they rally, and they do a good job of flying around."

The Bruins (0-1), again in the position of trying to rebound from a loss, retain confidence that they can get the job done. Despite the loss to Nampa, Ellis praised the efforts of his teammates on both sides of the ball.

"Our lines looked pretty good," he said. "Up in Nampa, they gave me lots of time. Protection from the linemen will be big. Our defense was looking good, and I think we can hold Skyline."

GOALLLLLFEST

Jerome boys brush past T.F.

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

The second half between the Twin Falls and Jerome boys soccer teams featured end-to-end action and plenty of goals for each side.

Unfortunately, the result was pretty much settled by halftime.

Fermin Martinez scored two of his four goals in the first half. Then three Jerome goals in two minutes right after halftime staked the Tigers to an 8-0 lead as they coasted to a 9-4 win in Great Basin Conference action on Wednesday.

The Tigers (7-0-0, 3-0-0 GBC, 9 pts.) got a Sergio Martinez goal and a Twin Falls own-goal to go with Fermin Martinez's two and Salvador Mercado's strike in the first half. Fermin Martinez, who now has 15 goals through seven matches, and Saul Diaz each scored two more in the second half.

But the story of the last 40 minutes was the way the Bruins (2-4-0, 1-1-0, 3 pts.) were able to dictate pace and tempo, even before Jerome defender Eduardo Ruiz was sent off 10 minutes from time for fouling to deny a clear goal-scoring opportunity.

"In the second half we were trying to pass the ball more to the wings, trying to go into the corners," said Sergio Martinez, noting the hot conditions that compelled the referee to call for a water break in each half. "We didn't want to run too much, but we wanted the opponent to have to run and get more tired."

Jerome stepping off the gas had some to do with the authority Twin Falls showed in the second half, but the Bruins created plenty of chances in the

"I saw the goalkeeper standing off his line, and I figured I'd take a chance and see what happens," de la Cruz said. "In the second half we were able to better connect our passes, and create goals out of them. We just need our heads in the game from the start."

Colton Stott scored a rebounded goal for Twin

Oudin's magical U.S. Open ends in quarters

Federer on to semis

By Howard Fendrich
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK - Maybe it all was a little too much, a little too soon for Melanie Oudin.

The 17-year-old from Marietta, Ga., kept erasing big deficits and upsetting older, taller, higher-ranked players at the U.S. Open, generating more and more interest in her magical ride.

Her gutsy play, aw-shucks approach and those pink-and-yellow sneakers with "BELIEVE" on the heels carried Oudin all the way to the quarterfinals at the American Grand Slam tournament. That's where her surprising story ended Wednesday night with a 6-2, 6-2 loss to No. 9-seeded Caroline Wozniacki of Denmark.

"It was a lot," Oudin conceded. "These past two weeks have been really different for me. I've gone from being just a normal, like, tennis player to almost everyone in the United States knowing who I am now."

Then, keeping a brave face, Oudin added: "I don't think that affected my tennis game tonight at all."

Perhaps. Still, facing Wozniacki in the sport's largest arena, playing under the bright lights in the big city, Oudin showed signs of shakiness at the start, dropping 14 of the first 18 points. Even the comeback kid couldn't recover from that.

"This has been a great experience for me. I had a great run here," the 70th-ranked Oudin told the crowd during an on-court interview right after the match, an honor usually reserved for

CSI jets into Houston for tough tourney

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

The College of Southern Idaho volleyball team got a much needed trip away from Scenic West Athletic Conference opposition last week.

This week will see the same detour, but with much higher stakes.

CSI heads to Houston today for a rigorous tournament that features four ranked teams. No. 8 CSI is one of those and will play two others, No. 1 Blinn College (Texas) and the host college, No. 5 San Jacinto College-Central.

"We're just happy for the opportunity to play some other teams while (conference rivals) North Idaho and Salt Lake are kind of beating up on each other," said CSI head coach Heidi Cartisser, referring to the two matchups with each school CSI has in its home tournaments. "We'll have plenty of times to play them, and this allows us to just worry about what we're able to do."

Jeter ties Gehrig atop Yankees hit list

NEW YORK — Derek Jeter tied Lou Gehrig atop the Yankees hit list and New York rallied for a 4-2 victory over Tampa Bay on Wednesday night thanks to a three-run homer by pinch-hitter Jorge Posada in the eighth inning.

Jeter got three hits to match Gehrig with 2,721 in a Yankees uniform, a mark the Hall of Famer had held by himself for more than 70 years. Jeter had a chance to break the record, but he walked against reliever Grant Balfour after New York's comeback in the eighth.

Shut down by rookie Jeff Niemann most of the night, the Yankees completed a four-game sweep and sent the AL champion Rays to their eighth consecutive loss. It's their longest skid since dropping eight straight in July 2007.

Posada connected off Balfour with one out to give New York a 4-2 lead.

RED SOX 7, ORIOLES 5

BOSTON — Pinch-hitter Victor Martinez hit a three-run double to break a seventh-inning tie, and Boston improved to 13-2 against Baltimore this season.

Billy Wagner (1-0) pitched a perfect seventh inning, striking out two, for the victory — the first AL decision of his career. After Daniel Bard put two men on in the eighth, Jonathan Papelbon got four outs for his 35th save, giving up one run.

Jason Bay had three hits for Boston, which maintained its two-game lead in the AL wild-card race over Texas.

TWINS 4, BLUE JAYS 1

TORONTO — Justin Morneau and Orlando Cabrera homered and Minnesota finally got the best of Roy Halladay.

Cabrera tied it with a lead-off shot in the sixth and Morneau hit a two-out tiebreaking drive in the eighth for his 30th homer. Pinch-hitter Michael Cuddyer added a two-run double in the ninth.

Halladay (14-9) allowed nine hits, struck out nine and walked one in his major league-leading seventh complete game. The right-hander dropped to 8-1 with a 2.90 ERA in 13 games, 11 starts, against Minnesota, which was the only AL team that hadn't beat him.

RANGERS 10, INDIANS 0

CLEVELAND — Scott Feldman pitched seven innings, Estaban German went 5 for 5 and Marlon Byrd hit a three-run homer as Texas completed a three-game sweep within 24 hours.

Feldman (16-4) allowed five hits and struck out five to win his eighth consecutive road start, a club record. His 12 road victories are a new team mark and tops in the AL.

He was staked to a 5-0 lead before throwing a pitch after Byrd and Ivan Rodriguez hit home runs in the first inning off Fausto Carmona (3-10), who allowed five runs in 2-3 of an inning, the shortest start of his career. Texas added five runs in the ninth.

Justin Verlander, Billy Butler hit three doubles and Kansas City beat Detroit for its first three-game winning streak since July.

Butler picked up his club-record fourth three-double game of the season and fifth consecutive multihit game. The first baseman's emergence has been one of the few bright spots in Kansas City's otherwise dismal season.

Tejeda (2-1) matched his career high with eight strikeouts and allowed just three hits. The right-hander, who was in the bullpen all year until making an emergency start last week, has struck out 25 during a 19-inning scoreless streak.

WHITE SOX 4, ATHLETICS 3, 13 INNINGS

CHICAGO — A.J. Pierzynski hit a game-ending RBI double in the 13th inning, Scott Podsednik had four hits and the Chicago White Sox beat Oakland.

Alexei Ramirez singled with one out in the 13th against Edgar Gonzalez (0-2) and Pierzynski followed with a double off the wall in left-center.

Ramirez drove in two runs for the White Sox, who have won six of eight. Octavio Dotel (3-3) pitched three scoreless innings.

NATIONAL LEAGUE

CARDINALS 5, BREWERS 1

MILWAUKEE — Albert Pujols hit two home runs for a majors-leading 47 and Adam Wainwright picked up his 18th win with seven scoreless innings in St. Louis' 5-1 victory over Milwaukee on Wednesday.

Wainwright (18-7) struck out six and scattered five hits to become the first pitcher to 18 wins. Pujols homered in the fifth and seventh innings as the Cardinals completed a three-game sweep.

St. Louis got a scare when Matt Holliday tumbled running out a grounder in the third and left with a bruised left knee.

ROCKIES 4, REDS 3

DENVER — Seth Smith hit a two-out, two-run single in the ninth inning to give surging Colorado a win over Cincinnati.

Colorado won its sixth consecutive game and extended its NL wild-card lead to four over San Francisco, which lost 4-2 to San Diego.

Clint Barmes started the winning rally with a one-out double off All-Star closer Francisco Cordero (2-5). Pinch-hitters Jason Giambi and Ryan Spilborghs then walked before Cordero struck out Carlos Gonzalez to bring Smith to the plate.

PADRES 4, GIANTS 2

SAN FRANCISCO — Adrian Gonzalez hit his career-high 37th homer and drove in three runs for San Diego.

Wade LeBlanc (2-1) pitched a career-best seven innings to win his second straight start.

Gonzalez connected for a two-run shot in the third. Oscar Salazar homered for the Padres, who have won 10 of their last 13 series.

PHILLIES 6, NATIONALS 5

WASHINGTON — Jayson Werth and Pedro Feliz hit back-to-back homers in the eighth inning to lead Philadelphia.

Ryan Madson pitched the ninth in place of struggling closer Brad Lidge, earning his sixth save in as many chances as the Phillies beat Washington for the ninth straight time.

Cliff Lee (6-2) pitched seven-plus innings to get the win, allowing five runs and 10 hits.

ASTROS 2, BRAVES 1

HOUSTON — Miguel Tejada's two-run single with the bases loaded won it for Houston in the bottom of the ninth.

Kaz Matsui led off the inning with a single and Lance Berkman doubled to left. Carlos Lee was intentionally walked and Tejada's single up the middle handed Rafael Soriano (1-5) his fourth blown save.

MARLINS 6, METS 3

NEW YORK — Ricky Nolasco shut down the Mets into the seventh inning and Cody Ross hit an early three-run homer.

Dan Uggla homered and Nick Johnson had a long RBI double as Florida took its second straight from New York.

Nolasco (11-8) gave up a leadoff hit to Angel Pagan then didn't give up another hit until Pagan doubled with two outs in the sixth. He faltered in the seventh, walking David Wright to start the inning. Carlos Beltran singled, then David Murphy hit an RBI double. Nolasco was removed after Jeff Francoeur's sacrifice fly. Another run scored on a groundout.

CUBS 8, PIRATES 5

PITTSBURGH — Carlos Zambrano won for the first time since July 22 by limiting Pittsburgh to two runs over six innings, and Chicago finished off a three-game sweep.

The Cubs won their sixth straight against the Pirates, who completed a 1-5 homestand.

Micah Hoffpauir homered leading off the fifth against former Cub Kevin Hart (4-6), drove in two runs and was among five Cubs with two hits during Chicago's 26th win in its last 32 games against the Pirates.

Bruin girls roll past Jerome

Times-News

McKenzie Johnson and Ryann Simpson each scored two goals as the Twin Falls girls soccer team took a 5-0 road win over Great Basin Conference foe Jerome on Wednesday.

The Bruins (4-1-2, 2-0 GBC, 6 pts.) led 3-0 at half-time. Erin Grubbs also scored for Twin Falls, while Allie Webb, Madi Worst and Lexi Clark each had an assist.

Twin Falls coach Katie Kauffman also praised her defense, while Jerome coach Carlos Hernandez said injuries and a loss of focus hindered his team after half-time.

WOOD RIVER 7, MINICO 2

The Wood River girls soccer team jumped to a four-goal halftime lead in topping Minico 7-2 on Wednesday.

The Spartans (2-4-1, 1-1 Great Basin Conference, 3 pts.) got a first-half goal from Kaylee Legault and a second-half score from Sara Somsen-Fowler but couldn't keep pace with the Wolverines.

Minico hosts Jerome on Saturday.

CANYON RIDGE 2, BURLEY 0

First-half goals from Ellen Bartlett and Taylor Brown helped Canyon Ridge secure its first-ever win, 2-0 over visiting Burley on Wednesday.

"We played really well," said Canyon Ridge assistant coach Kristi Mishler. "We hope this starts a good week for us, as we play Twin Falls on Friday."

The Riverhawks (1-6-1, 1-1-0 Great Basin, 3 pts.) and Bruins will tangle at Sunway Soccer Complex. Burley (0-6-0, 0-2-0, 0 pts.) hosts Wood River on Saturday.

DECLO 0, ABERDEEN 0

COMMUNITY SCHOOL 7, GOODING 0

Nellie Brown scored twice, and Taylor Figge and Freya Dickey each scored once. The Cutthroats (5-3-0, 5-1-0, 15 pts. HDSC) will travel to Twin Falls on Saturday to face Canyon Ridge.

Boys soccer

BURLEY 3, CANYON RIDGE 0

Gustavo Castaneda scored in the first while Cesar Mendoza and Saul Esquivel added second-half goals in the Burley boys soccer team's 3-0 win over Canyon Ridge.

Burley (4-1-1, 1-1 Great Basin Conference, 3 pts.) struggled to put away the Riverhawks.

"Canyon Ridge really played us tough and gave us all we could handle," said Burley coach Wes Nyblade. "They threw some different looks at us."

WOOD RIVER 3, MINICO 1

The Wood River boys soccer team scored the final three goals of the game to take a 3-1 road win over Minico on Wednesday. The Spartans led 1-0 after Jorge Carrillo scored on a penalty kick, but the Wolverines scored twice in the first half and once more after intermission.

The Spartans (1-5-2) host rival Burley on Monday.

GOODING 4, CS 0

The Gooding boys soccer team shut out the Community School 4-0 at home Wednesday.

After a scoreless first half, the Senators offense was able to find the net. Tom Anantanaderwon scored a pair of goals, while Pepe Rodriguez and Danny Lopez each contributed one. Head coach Roger Johnson said he put an extra man on defense, which helped preserve a shutout.

"Community School always gives us a good game," he said of their High Desert Soccer Conference opponents.

ABERDEEN 5, DECLO 2

The Declo boys lost 5-2 Wednesday at Aberdeen. David Cuevas scored both goals for the Hornets, and Erik Henrickson assisted both times.

The Hornets (1-5-0, 1-3-0, 3 pts. HDSC) will travel to Gooding today for their third day of competition, having faced Filer on Tuesday.

"It's the gauntlet this week," head coach Tim Henrickson said, adding

CAMAS COUNTY SWEEPS TRI-MATCH

Tough serving, solid defense and a plethora of kills from Katelyn Peterson lifted the Camas County volleyball team to three-game wins over Owyhee and Rimrock on Wednesday. The Musers beat Owyhee 25-13, 25-12, 25-22 before dispatching Rimrock 25-13, 25-13, 25-18.

Camas County (6-1, 3-0 Northside Conference) travels to Ketchum to face the Community School tonight.

SHOSHONE SWEEPS TRI-MATCH

Shoshone took a pair of nonconference wins at home, beating Oakley 25-7, 25-15 and Rockland 25-13, 25-14 on Wednesday.

Taylor Astle had 15 assists in the Oakley match for the Indians (6-0), while Kelsey Hutchins and Jenny Perron each had six kills in the Rockland match.

Shoshone is at Hagerman tonight in a Snake River Conference North match.

DECLO SWEEPS TRI-MEET

The Declo volleyball team took down both American Falls and Aberdeen Wednesday.

The Hornets defeated Aberdeen 25-18, 25-20 and American Falls 25-9, 25-23. Brittani Duncan recorded five kills and nine blocks across both matches, while Danyel Gunnell had five kills and six blocks and Melissa Carson added four kills. The Hornets junior varsity and freshman squads also swept their matches, giving the program six victories for the night.

Declo (2-6) will host Glens Ferry tonight for its Canyon Conference opener.

the winner. "I hope to come back next year and do even better."

It'll be hard to top her 2009 U.S. Open.

With impressive court coverage and solid groundstrokes, the 5-foot-6 Oudin knocked off four more established players — including three-time major champion Maria Sharapova and Beijing Olympic gold medalist Elena Dementieva — to become the youngest quarterfinalist at Flushing Meadows since Serena Williams in 1999.

Making the tale even better: Oudin's last three victories each came after she dropped the first set. Plus, there was her wide-eyed, age-appropriate attitude: Everything was "cool" and "awesome," including meeting Roger Federer for the first time and finally getting to shake hands with Sharapova — only after beating her, of course.

Federer beat Robin Soderling to reach a 22nd consecutive Grand Slam semifinal.

Federer improved to 12-0 against the 12th-seeded Soderling by winning 6-0, 6-3, 6-7 (6), 7-6 (6) Wednesday night.

Federer has won 39 consecutive matches at the American Grand Slam tournament, where he is trying to become the first man since Bill Tilden in the 1920s to win six titles in a row.

In Saturday's semifinals, Federer will play No. 4 Novak Djokovic. Federer beat Djokovic in the 2007 final and 2008 semifinals at Flushing Meadows.

Federer last failed to reach the semifinals at a major tournament when he lost in the third round of the 2004 French Open. No other man ever had a Grand Slam semifinal streak longer than 10.

Earlier Wednesday, Djokovic reached the U.S. Open semifinals for the third consecutive year, beating No. 10 Fernando Verdasco of Spain 7-6 (2), 1-6, 7-5, 6-2.

Steelers remember Terrible Town stomp as Titans come to town

By Barry Wilner
Associated Press writer

With a record sixth Lombardi Trophy in their possession, the Steelers carry the biggest of targets on their black-and-gold jerseys this season. Yet it's Mike Tomlin's champions — and all of Pittsburgh, for that matter — looking to settle a score in the NFL season's opener tonight (6 p.m., NBC).

Into Heinz Field come the Terrible Towel stomps themselves, the Tennessee Titans. After the Titans whipped the Steelers 31-14 in Nashville in the penultimate game last season, linebacker Keith Bulluck dropped a towel, then swiped his foot across it. Running back LenDale White stomped on a towel, and defensive end Jevon Kearse used one as he pretended to blow his nose.

The Steelers, who are 5 1/2 point favorites in the now traditional opener hosted by the Super Bowl winners, didn't lose again after that game. And they haven't forgotten the Titans' terrible behavior toward their towels.

"What the '08 Steelers did is history and it's no different than the '74-'75 Steelers

Titans at Steelers

6 p.m., NBC

as far as I'm concerned," Tomlin said. "I'm not going to concern myself with something LenDale White did a year ago."

The Steelers' top-ranked defense will concern itself with what White, Chris Johnson and rookie Javon Ringer try to do on the ground. Tennessee is no slouch on D, either, even with All-Pro tackle Albert Haynesworth now in Washington. With both sides likely to be stingy, this could come down to one key play by an offensive stand-out. We'll bet that's Hines Ward.

STEELERS, 16-10

Buffalo (plus 10) at New England (Monday night)

BEST BET: Hello T.O. from Buffalo. No matter how much you do in your Bills debut, Tom Brady, Randy Moss, Wes Welker and Patriots will do more.

PATRIOTS, 35-13

San Francisco (plus 6 1/2) at Arizona

UPSET SPECIAL: Niners nearly beat Cardinals in Mike Singletary's debut as interim coach last November. They win his debut as full-time coach. 49ERS 21-20

Minnesota (minus 2 1/2) at Cleveland

Everybody loves Brett Favre-led Vikings. Doesn't seem like anyone likes Eric Mangini-led Browns.

VIKINGS, 24-10

Miami (plus 4) at Atlanta

A year ago, this was considered an early-season dud. Now, it's a matchup worthy of prime-time. AFC is superior to NFC, so ...

DOLPHINS, 24-21

Detroit (plus 12) at New Orleans

SAINTS, 31-7

Chicago (plus 3) at Green Bay

Longest running rivalry in pro football, and both franchises have strong teams. Pack looks bit stronger right now.

PACKERS, 28-17

Washington (plus 6) at N.Y. Giants

Redskins might be best fourth-place team in NFL. Giants are likely first-place team.

GIANTS, 24-14

Kansas City (plus 8 1/2) at Baltimore

RAVENS, 20-3

Philadelphia (plus 1) at Carolina

Two franchises that had very busy offseasons. Brian Westbrook and DeAngelo Williams are worth admission price.

EAGLES, 24-20

St. Louis (plus 7) at Seattle

PGA plods toward $10 million prize

LEMONT, Ill. (AP) — Only one day separated the final round of one PGA Tour playoff event and the pro-am round of the next one, and even players who are in the best position to capture the FedEx Cup and its $10 million prize are fighting some fatigue.

Tiger Woods might have summed it up best.

Walking off the fifth tee Wednesday morning at Cog Hill, he turned to a member of his staff and said with a mock moan, "I don't want to go to school today."

A few minutes later, Woods added, "It will be a little different on Thursday."

The BMW Championship is the third straight week of playoffs, one step closer to the biggest prize in golf, and the possibilities keep growing. No one paid much attention to Heath Slocum until he won The Barclays. Woods was at his customary top of the list until Steve Stricker birdied the last two holes to win the Deutsche Bank Championship on Monday and move to No. 1 in the standings.

That means he will be playing the first two rounds with Woods for the third straight week.

"It would really be nice to have the lead going into the Tour Championship," Stricker said. "That means going out this week and playing well to maintain that lead. I have every belief that Tiger is going to play great, so that means that I'm going to have to play good."

"The pressure is getting bigger every week we play."

And they are playing a lot of golf.

For every player in the top 20, this will be at least their fifth tournament in the last six weeks. Making it even more difficult is the short turnaround from the Labor Day finish outside Boston to the typical Thursday start at Cog Hill.

Scott Verplank arrived in this south Chicago suburb Tuesday and only walked the golf course, except for the par-5 15th.

"Too big of a hill to climb," he said.

Stricker played only nine holes on Tuesday before his pro-am round Wednesday. Most players on the course or the practice range had missed the cut the previous week at the TPC Boston.

"I was talking to one of my football coach buddies yesterday driving out here, and I said, 'It's kind of like playing a Sunday night game and then you've got a Thursday night game,'" Verplank said. "You've got no turnaround, so you have don't have any time to waste. You've got to get prepared for your next opponent, which sits out there at about 9,000 yards long."

The opponent is the Dubsread course at Cog Hill, recently renovated by Rees Jones with hopes of attracting a U.S. Open. It now measures 7,616 yards at a par 71, and it should be all they can handle.

"It's a big, tough golf course," Padraig Harrington said. "It looks like it's going to put plenty of pressure on all the players out there this week. I hope it suits my game. I hope I play well on it."

Southern Cal clique in southern Ohio

CINCINNATI — Yeah, sure, Bengals quarterback Carson Palmer expects to start the season opener Sunday against the Denver Broncos. Ho-hum.

What about that other game this weekend, the one the whole state of Ohio is talking about?

"It's a tough call, but I still think my boys are going to take care of business," Palmer said Wednesday.

He means USC, of course.

Palmer and three other Bengals — linebacker Keith Rivers, defensive end Frostee Rucker and rookie linebacker Rey Mauluga — have a rooting interest behind enemy lines this weekend. They form their own little chapter of Southern California boosters in Southern Ohio.

With their alma mater coming to Columbus the play the Buckeyes on Saturday (6 p.m., ABC), the USC alumni aren't hiding their allegiances. They do have to be careful with their comments, though. It's not good to alienate fans who like the team wearing scarlet and gray as well as the one in tiger stripes.

Better to be diplomatic.

"You have to be careful what you say," said Mauluga, who returned an interception for a touchdown in the Trojans' 35-3 win in California last September. "You've got a lot of Bengal fans that at the same time are Ohio State fans, so you don't want to lose your Ohio fans."

Palmer wasn't quite so circumspect last year, and he heard about it after predicting the Buckeyes could "get an old fashioned Pac-10 butt-whipping."

KNEE IMPROVED, TOM BRADY EXCITED ABOUT OPENER

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. — Tom Brady's knee seems fine. So does his shoulder.

His excitement level? Just about the same as it was heading into last year's opener before a left knee injury midway through the first quarter ended his season.

"Personally, I'm excited like all the guys are excited," the New England Patriots quarterback said Wednesday. "I've played a lot of games, so it's not like it's the first game of my rookie season, that type of excitement. I think there's just an excitement for a new season and to see what kind of team we have."

He's also played in three exhibition games, time enough to get rid of "those first-game jitters" and become comfortable wearing a knee brace, he said.

On Monday night, he'll lead his team in his first meaningful game in more than a year against the Buffalo Bills.

"It's always exciting to start on a Monday night against a division rival and a team we have a lot of respect for," he said.

QUINN APPEARS TO BE WINNER IN QB COMPETITION

BEREA, Ohio — The mystery surrounding Cleveland Browns coach Eric Mangini's choice as his starting quarterback became somewhat clearer on Wednesday when Brady Quinn and Derek Anderson were forced to answer questions about their recently completed competition — a battle that carried through training camp and the exhibition season.

Anderson was asked if it would be difficult to keep the starting QB a secret until Sunday's kickoff of the season opener against the Minnesota Vikings.

"No," Anderson said, "because after this next two minutes are over I'm not going to be talking to you guys. It's pretty easy. Obviously, the rest of us have to go about our regular preparations and continue to do what we always do and just not talk to our families."

By "the rest of us" Anderson seemed to mean the Browns backups, a group it looks as if he belongs to once again.

Mangini met with his quarterbacks on Tuesday night, told them who would start and explained the reasons for his decision. He said both handled the situation with class.

"They both took it exactly the way I expected them to take it — as pros, as good teammates," Mangini said. "It was really not surprising."

STEELERS QB'S ATTORNEY REJECTS SETTLEMENT OFFER

CARSON CITY, Nev. — The attorney for Pittsburgh Steelers quarterback Ben Roethlisberger on Wednesday rejected a settlement offer by a Nevada woman who claims the Super Bowl champion sexually assaulted her at a Lake Tahoe hotel-casino.

The rejection was in response to a letter, filed last week as part of a motion from Cal Dunlap, the woman's Reno attorney, that said she would be willing to settle the civil matter against Roethlisberger if he admits to raping her, apologizes and gives $100,000 to the Committee to Aid Abused Women, a non-profit agency in Reno that helps victims of domestic violence.

In a written statement, Roethlisberger attorney David Cornwell called the woman's offer "bizarre" and an "insult to women who have legitimately suffered from sexual misconduct."

had yielded in its first six matches of the season combined. Jerome has outscored its opposition 43-8 on the season.

"We weren't planning to give up that many goals, but it gives us something to work on," said Sergio Martinez.

Twin Falls hosts Century today. Jerome hosts Canyon Ridge on Monday.

Bruins

Lancaster, Brady McNew, Jared Jordan, Ricky Akridge and tight end Jon Pulsifer are viable targets for Ellis, while tailback Jayson Welker and fullback Josh Settlemoir should get their share of carries.

"(Settlemoir) ran hard up in Nampa when he got his name called," Ellis said, "and I think he earned his starting spot."

Strong-side linebacker Todd Anderson said with Asay out, it all comes down to the defense stopping No. 6: Berger.

"Hit him, and hit him again," he said. The defense is also mindful that Berger can throw as well.

"We have some good defensive backs that don't give up big plays," Anderson added. "We had three interceptions last week, so ..."

But the offense will need to sustain drives throughout the game to give the defense rest and avoid a repeat of the second-half fade at Nampa.

The Skyline game isn't a league contest anymore, but the Bruins need to start building momentum for Great Basin Conference play. They start with Jerome next week, face Century during Week 4, and then run the GBC gauntlet of Canyon Ridge, Burley, Wood River and Minico in October.

Wives find many ways to cool off hot husbands

DEAR ABBY: At the age of 72, having had two spouses over the years, I need to put in my two cents regarding the letter from "Still Hot and Bothered in Georgia" (July 8). I have learned that some women won't say "no!" to a husband's amorous advances, especially in the morning. But they will try to distract him by scrubbing the tub, spotting a spider on the wall, feeding the cat or saying she forgot to fold the laundry and has to do it before it wrinkles. Whether it's conscious or unconscious, they do it to cool their husbands off on a "hot" morning.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

"Still Hot and Bothered" may need to give some thought to what turns his wife on or off — especially the timing. After all, we are from Mars and they are from Venus.

— ALEX IN BLUE BELL, PA.
DEAR ALEX: I agree that timing is important. My office was showered with responses from readers who were steamed over my response to that letter.

Read on:
DEAR ABBY: The guys and I enjoy reading your column out loud to see if we agree or not with your advice. We were unanimous in our disagreement with your advice to "Still Hot and Bothered."

We would have been torqued if our wife had stayed in the shower to clean it instead of coming to bed for a good romp. We also would have showered with our wife to start the festivities early and then moved to the bedroom.

Several of the guys said they'd have gotten into the shower and made the cleaning come to a halt. There's a time for cleaning, and it's not when your husband is waiting with his motor running.

— THE GUYS IN THE ELECTRIC LAB HARRISONBURG, VA.

DEAR ABBY: I'm not against spontaneous cleaning (I do it myself), but the fact that the wife would rather clean than spend time with her husband tells me she's either unable to read his signals or she just doesn't care to be close and intimate with him. It also shows a lack of judgment, compassion and understanding on her part.

If the situation were reversed and he had decided he'd rather watch sports than be with his wife, I'm sure she would have been equally upset. I don't think the rules should be different for men and women in this regard. And yes, I am a woman.

— HEATHER IN KANKAKEE, ILL.

DEAR ABBY: It appears that these days couples never have time for each other. Instead, they have their "individual" priorities before their "married" priorities.

When you compare the life expectancy of women vs. men, that woman will probably have years to clean the shower by herself without worrying about her mate.

— KEN IN SULPHUR, LA.

DEAR ABBY: Men just don't get it! Women don't have on/off switches like men do. Atmosphere is very important for us. My husband enjoys "getting close" in the mornings, too — but I usually wake up with my to-do list running in my head. It is very difficult for me to get in the mood when there's work to be done.

Obviously, the wife in that letter wasn't ready to play. Instead of getting upset, her husband should have gotten creative and helped to set her mood.

— BRENDA IN FORT WORTH

IF SEPTEMBER 10 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You can make major strides in both business and your love life between now and mid-December. During November, your judgment is better than usual, so that is a great time to make decisions or plans for the future. People who are good for you may grow closer, while those who are not good for you retreat into the background. You might receive an offer or opportunity that could alter your life for the better. Your business savvy gives you the advantage when dealing with career or the job market. Next April is another golden time when you can safely begin any matter of significance successfully.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Remain confident and remember that experience is the best teacher. Guilt due to forgetting to fulfill a promise can mar the day.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Love and affection may be in the air but a nagging feeling that something has been overlooked may spoil the peace and tranquility.

HOROSCOPE

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You have golden tones in your voice and can convince anyone of anything. However, it is a poor day to offer promises or strike deals.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Concentrate on creating an atmosphere of peace and tranquility. This is not a good time to act as far as money or love are concerned.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Fly like a straight arrow to hit the mark. Your strength lies in being reliable and accurate, not in taking advantage of unearned trust.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Optimism is helpful, but you still must work diligently to attain success. To keep that success, remain on guard for the unexpected.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22):

You have a dream of achieving inner peace and serenity, but you also are not afraid to face reality. You must remain on your toes.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Never chase a mirage. It is quite easy to become passionately obsessed about obtaining something that has little value once won.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Even though the day can be challenging, you may be at your best in social situations. You have the ability to soothe others.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE[®]

Bobby Wolff

"We are bare. We are stripped to the bone and we swim in tandem and go up and up the river."
— Anne Sexton

Today's deal shows a helpful but underused concept of modern bidding: any time that you pass initially or fail to bid a suit at a cheap level as an overcaller, then when partner acts, a subsequent re-entry by you into the auction will normally be based on fit for partner and be lead-directing. So North's three-club bid showed good clubs and a spade fit, enabling North-South to find what they hoped would be a cheap sacrifice over four hearts.

Did I say cheap? South ruffed the heart lead, cashed the spade ace, then visited dummy with the club ace to ruff a second heart. A club to the king saw a third heart ruff, a spade came next.

In with the king, West was endplayed, forced either to lead a diamond or to give declarer a ruff and discard. All South lost was a trick each in spades, clubs and diamonds.

Notice that if declarer takes a club finesse at any point in the hand or fails to strip off the hearts before throwing West in with his trump trick, then the defense can prevail. Even given declarer's accurate play, could the defense have done any better against four spades? Yes, though it is hard to blame West for his lead. But an initial black-suit lead would have left declarer one dummy entry short for his endplay, since he could not arrange to strip off the hearts before putting an opponent on play.

CITY OF TWIN FALLS
NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING
MONDAY, SEPTEMBER 21, 2009, 6:00 P.M.
CITY HALL COUNCIL CHAMBERS
305 THIRD AVENUE EAST, TWIN FALLS, IDAHO

For the purpose of Hearing Public Comments Regarding the Increase in ARFF, LANDING FEES, FUEL FLOWAGE FEES AND RESTAURANT FEE

Beyond the limits prescribed by Idaho Code Section 63-1311A

The Proposed Fees Exceed 105% of the Fees Last Collected or are New Fees

Notice is hereby given that the City Council of the Twin Falls, Idaho, will hold a public hearing for consideration of proposed fee increases, said hearing to be held at the City Council Chambers, located at 305 Third Avenue East, Twin Falls, Idaho at 6:00 p.m., on September 21, 2009. The City of Twin Falls has proposed to increase ARFF, landing fees, fuel flowage fees, and restaurant fees by an amount that exceeds one hundred five percent of the current fee. The proposed increases would have the following impact on current fees:

FEE	CURRENT RATE	PROPOSED RATE	% INCREASE
Aircraft Rescue & Fire Fighting Services (ARFF)	$55 per hour/ $55 minimum (Airlines 10 seats and greater)	$60 per hour/ $60 minimum (Airlines 10 seats and greater)	9.09%
Landing Fee	$.90 per 1000lbs of Max Landing Weight	$1.05 per 1000lbs of Max Landing Weight	16.67%
Fuel Flowage Fee	$.06 per gallon	$.07 per gallon	16.67%
Restaurant	$500 per month, plus 2% of monthly gross > $20,000	$600 per month *With 0% of gross due	20% various

The increased revenue is necessary to help fund airport maintenance and operation expenses. At this hearing all interested persons may appear and show cause, if any they have, why said proposed increases should not be adopted. Dated this 8th day of September 2009

PUBLISH: September 10th & September 17th, 2009

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that on Tuesday, September 15, 2009, at the hour of 5:30 p.m., a public hearing will be held before the Jerome City Council at the City Council Chambers, 100 East Ave. A, Jerome, Idaho. The purpose of the hearing is to seek public comment regarding the following proposed fee increase beyond the limitation prescribed in Idaho Code 63-1311(a):

Usage Rate Proposed Increases (Charge per 100 cfs)

Usage Rate per 100 cfs	Current	Proposed

Base Rate Proposed Increases

	Debt Service		Capital Reserve		Operating Reserve
	Current	Proposed	Current	Proposed	Current	Proposed
¾" Meter	$4.10	$ 7.32	$ 4.00	$ 4.00	$0.45	$ 3.60
1" Meter	$7.29	$13.01	$ 7.11	$ 7.11	$0.80	$ 6.40
1½" Meter	$16.40	$29.28	$16.00	$16.00	$1.80	$14.40
2" Meter	$29.16	$52.06	$26.45	$26.45	$3.20	$25.60

Monthly Base Rate = 1.778 x BR x D
Where: BR = The standard base rate for a ¾-inch diameter water connection
D = Diameter of water connection in inches

The proposed increase is a result of increased operating and maintenance costs and is in accordance with the national Municipal Cost Index. The Municipal Cost Index (MCI), a tool used to calculate the cost of offering government goods and services similar to the Consumer Price Index.

ALL INTERESTED PERSONS ARE INVITED TO ATTEND and shall have an opportunity to be heard. DATED this 26th day of August, 2009.

NOTICESNOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

On Friday, the 15th day of January, 2010, at the hour of 10:00 o'clock a.m., of said day, in the lobby of the Gooding County Courthouse, 624 Main Street, Gooding, Idaho, GOODING TITLE & ESCROW COMPANY, as Trustee, will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, for cash, in lawful money of the United States of America, all payable at the time of sale, the real property situated in the County of Gooding, State of Idaho, more particularly described as follows to-wit:

Lot 20, Block 37 of Gooding Townsite, Gooding County, Idaho, according to the plat thereof, recorded in the office of the County Recorder of said County.

For purposes of complying with Idaho Code §60-113, the Trustee has been informed that the address of 233 Main Street, Gooding, Idaho 83330, may sometimes be associated with said property.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possession or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the Deed of Trust executed by DARGREEN POWER SYSTEM, LLC and/or DEAN A. RICHARDON, a single man, to GOODING TITLE & ESCROW COMPANY, as trustee, for the benefit and security of TRIPLE 7 REALTY, INC. as beneficiary, which Deed of Trust was dated February 13, 2008 and recorded February 13, 2008, as Instrument No. 225273 of the Official Records of Gooding County, Idaho.

The above Grantor is named to comply with §45-1506(4)(a) Idaho Code. No representation is made that they are, or are not, presently responsible for this obligation.

The default for which this sale is made is a failure to pay monthly installments as set forth on the obligation secured by the Deed of Trust in the amount of $528.32 per month for the months of July and August 2009 for a Promissory Note dated February 13, 2008 and a separate Promissory Note dated February 13, 2008 in the amount of $5,000.00, together with interest and subsequent money is advanced until the date of such sale or payment.

The accrued interest is at the rate of ten percent (10%) per annum from February 22, 2008. The balance due, as of September 1, 2009, excluding interest, attorney fees, trustee's fees and costs associated with the foreclosure is Fifty-Seven Thousand Eight Hundred Seventeen and 10/100 Dollars ($57,817.10) and interest is accruing at the rate of $ 15.84 per day from June 22, 2009 until the date of sale.

NOTICE OF APPLICATIONS

Notice is hereby given that three applications have been filed with the Idaho Department of Water Resources as follows: The CITY OF RICHFIELD, PO BOX 97; RICHFIELD ID 83349 has filed two applications concerning water rights within Lincoln County. Application for Transfer No. 75360 proposes to tie together three existing wells and one new well to be drilled, and add points of diversion to three water rights currently diverting a total of 1.92 cfs for municipal use. Protests may be submitted based on the criteria of Idaho Code § 42-222. The City of Richfield also filed Application for Permit No. 37-22431 on 1/13/2009 proposing to drill a new well, identified as the 4th well, to the municipal system and adding an additional 1.19 cfs for year round usage within the city service area covering parts of Sections 23 through 27 (inclusive), T04S, R19E. The proposed new well is to be drilled in the NWSWSW of Section 24, T04S, R19E within a parcel bordered by 3rd. Street, N Main Street, and W Blaine Avenue in the north east of the city limits. Permit will be subject to all prior water rights. Protests may be submitted based on the criteria of Sec 42-203A, Idaho Code, LYLE D. & CAROL J. WOODBURY, 152 N YALE RD; DECLO, ID 83323 have filed Application for Transfer No. 75605 concerning water rights within Cassia County. This application proposes to tie all the existing wells on this farm together for maximum flexibility of water use, and also adds a new well due to declining pumping rates in the existing irrigation system. The same land will continue to be irrigated. The new well will be located about 2 7/8 miles south of the Raft River interchange on Hwy I-86, and on the east side of the county road that parallels the Raft River. Protests may be submitted based on the criteria of Idaho Code § 42-222. Any protest against the approval of an application must be filed with the Director, Dept. of Water Resources, Southern Region, 1341 Fillmore St, Suite 200, Twin Falls ID 83301 together with a protest fee of $25.00 for each application on or before September 21, 2009. The protestant must also send a copy of the protest to the applicant. NOTICE OF APPLICATION FOR APPROVAL OF A&B IRRIGATION DISTRICT; CS MITIGATION PLAN TO COMPENSATE BLUE LAKES TROUT FARM, INC.

Notice is hereby given that on August 18, 2009, A&B Irrigation District (A&B), PO Box 675, Rupert, ID, 83350-0675, through its counsel, Barker Rosholt & Simpson LLP, PO Box 485, Twin Falls, ID, 83303-0485, submitted a Mitigation Plan (plan) to the Idaho Department of Water Resources (Department) pursuant to Rule 43 of the Department's Conjunctive Management Rules.

*The plan is intended to satisfy the mitigation obligations of A&B for the Blue Lakes Delivery call regulated by the watermaster of State Water Districts 130 and 140.*A&B holds numerous ground water rights for irrigation uses located within Jerome and Minidoka Counties. Certain of these ground water rights have priority dates junior to the priority dates of certain water rights from surface water sources dependent on springs that discharge to the Devil's Washbowl to Buhl Gage reach of the Snake River. The ground water and the springs are interconnected sources of water. A&B has proposed the plan to compensate for injury to senior priority surface water rights that may result from depletions caused by junior priority ground water rights. The surface water rights that the plan proposes to benefit are: 36-2356A, 36-7210 and 36-7427 held by Blue Lakes Trout Co. LLC for use at its hatchery facility near Alpheus Creek. The plan proposes that A&B will maintain a project within the A&B service area that converts irrigation of 1,378 acres from a ground water source to a surface water supply. A&B will use stored water from the Upper Snake River under its own storage water rights as the surface water supply for the on-going conversion project. The plan includes incidental recharge resulting from conversion and delivery of the surface water using conveyance facilities owned and operated by A&B. The plan also includes the ongoing enrollment of 121 acres of ground water irrigated lands in the Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program (CREP).

The Department will process this plan pursuant to the Department's Conjunctive Management Rules (IDAPA 37, Title 03, Chapter 11).*The Department has not determined the adequacy of the proposed plan. A complete copy of the proposed plan is available for review at either the Department's State Office in Boise, the Department's Regional Office in Twin Falls, or may be viewed online at the following website along with other related documents:

http://www.idwr.idaho.gov/News/WaterCalls/1000Spring%20Users%20Calls/blue_lakes.htm Any protest against approval of the plan must be filed with the Department, together with a protest fee of $25, on or before September 28, 2009. The protest must include a certificate of service showing that a copy of the protest has been mailed to or served on A&B and its counsel.

LONDON — Beatlemania is back with the rollout Wednesday of the Fab Four's remastered CDs and first-ever video game, reaching out to a whole new generation decades after their parents — and even grandparents — first succumbed.

It's been nearly 40 years since John, Paul, George and Ringo announced their breakup, but the new game and discs caused a worldwide buzz as the Beatles returned to the top of the charts in Britain, the land where it all began.

Fans flocked to get their hands on the long-awaited sonic masterpieces, with lines snaking outside record stores in London and Liverpool. Some die-hards jammed the streets outside Abbey Road, the landmark studio where the Beatles recorded many of their groundbreaking albums.

About 50 people gathered outside the HMV music store on London's Oxford Street early Wednesday — some, like university student Daniela Gutierrez, waiting in line since 3 a.m.

"My parents were huge Beatles fans and I grew up listening to their music," said Gutierrez, 25. "I can't wait to have the game and start playing the songs."

It's not exactly 1964 — there were no fainting teens or other visible signs of feverish Beatlemania — but the long-awaited release brought the long-gone band to the top of the charts maintained by online retailer Amazon.co.uk.

Or, as John Lennon liked to say, "to the topmost of the poppermost."

Uma Nolan, an Irish nurse visiting London, came to the Abbey Road studio to be photographed at the pedestrian crossing made famous on the "Abbey Road" album cover. She plans to buy the entire set of 17 CDs — even though she already has all the songs in the collection.

"I will absolutely go out and buy them," she said. "I'm a huge Beatles fan and have every single LP in original first edition copies. They were the first real pop group. The entire generation was waiting for that to happen. They sent worldwide pop culture off into orbit."

Nolan, 50, said remastering the Beatles albums will introduce them to a new generation.

"It brings them up do date and modernizes their music," she said. "You're enhancing what was really to begin with, so that can't be a bad thing."

High prices are apparently no deterrent — Amazon.com sold out its allotment of pre-orders for the Beatles box set, priced at $260 (170 pounds) and has a waiting list of buyers.

The robust sales are expected to add to the already considerable wealth of Paul McCartney and Ringo Starr, the "thank my lucky stars" drummer who joined the band just before it had its first hit, as well as Yoko Ono and Olivia Harrison, the widows of the late John Lennon and George Harrison. Court records publicized last year put McCartney's net worth at about $800 million.

It's also expected to boost the value of the estate of the late Michael Jackson, who owned a substantial share in the publishing rights to the Beatles' fabled back catalog. "The Beatles: Rock Band" video game also is expected to sell well, opening a new revenue stream for the band.

Adam Liversage, spokesman for the British Phonographic Industry, said video games offer well-known bands a way to reach a wider audience and increase their earnings in the process. "It's great for music — it is a new revenue scheme and a way for people to explore music that they otherwise might not have had access to," he said.

"These games have been around for a while, the Beatles' one isn't the first one, it is the latest in a series," he said of the new release, which follows the success of "Guitar Hero" and other music-oriented video offerings.

And, Liversage said, the Beatles' fan base extends far beyond the teenage boys who are traditionally heavy video game users and may end up introducing older people to gaming.
