n June 20, 1944, Lt. B.M. Harrington swore a group of draftees into the Army at a ceremony in Jerome County. He didn't choose his words wisely.

"We in the American armed forces are happy to welcome you Japanese among our ranks, even though your country, Japan, is at war with the United States," said Harrington, a member of the Army's Traveling and Examining Board. "The fact that you young Japanese are willing to fight against your country should prove to all that there are a few Japanese who are good Americans."

Trouble was, the 65 young men standing in front of him at the Minidoka Relocation Center were as American as Harrington - born and raised in the Seattle area to parents of Japanese ancestry and interned at the Hunt Camp because of that.

After Harrington sat down, one of the Japanese-American inductees renounced his oath. There would be others.

The story of the Hunt Camp draft resisters is little known in Idaho, although it was the subject of a 2001 book by Eric Muller, a professor of law at the University of North Carolina. The Minidoka center sent hundreds of young men off to war.

But when the government started to draft Nisei as Japanese-ancestry American citizens were called - in 1944, the irony couldn't be more acute. The Army would give the Nisei draftees a rifle and send them off the kill Germans in Europe, while their wives, children, parents and relatives would be detained behind barbed wire by other soldiers with rifles.

Thirty-three Hunt Camp Nisei were eventually charged, tried and convicted of draft evasion and sentenced by U.S. District Judge Chase Clark — who ironically was governor of Idaho at the time of Pearl Harbor — to stretches ranging from 18 months to 39 months in prison. Most of them did their time at McNeil Island, a highsecurity, fortress-like federal lockup in the Puget Sound. They weren't released until 1946.

On Christmas Day 1947, President Truman pardoned all wartime draft resisters. And in 1988,

Hagerman Public Library holds fundraising drive

By Kimberly Williams-Brackett three placers of the timed Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN - The Hagerman Public Library board of trustees has launched a fundraising campaign to benefit the library's building fund.

The theme is "Bursting at the Seams," which is appropriate for a 750 square-foot library nearly packed to the rafters with books.

Director Barbara Stobart established donation cans at the Hagerman City Hall and the library to collect spare change and checks. She said library officials are a little short of the asking price of five city lots they're in the process of trying to acquire.

"We've been getting awesome donations," said Stobart.

In addition, the library is hosting another book sale in conjunction with a Hot Wheels race during the Hagerman Valley Chamber of Commerce's 10th annual Hagerman Swap Meet and Car Show on Saturday at the city park. Hot Wheels cars will be sold for $3 and races will take place from 3 to 4 p.m. Races are open for all ages and the top HAILEY - It's only been a few months since 12-yearold Nash Hartdegen's older brother, Zac Gilstrap, was diagnosed with a rare form of multiple sclerosis that has required a summer of hospitalization in Idaho and Utah.

As he followed his family to multiple medical facilities, Nash came up with an idea: a fundraising bicycle ride through the Wood River Valley.

"To want to do something special, especially after he's been kind of robbed of this summer, it's so sweet, it just amazes me," said Kimberly Coonis, mother of both direction where they're Nash and 26-year-old Gilstrap.

Bob had an early love for flying and had a plane and his license while still in high school. When the Second World War broke out he enlisted in the Army Air Corps, where he flew B17's, once flying the Glenn Miller Band for the USO. He flew for the Military Transport systems and was one of three pilots selected to be General Eisenhower's personal pilot.

He married the love of his life, Wanda Higgins, before leaving for the war, and returned to be welcomed home by Wanda and a year old daughter. Patricia "Pat." Four years later Bob Jr. was

After the war, Bob did a short stint as a Deputy Sheriff in Gooding County. He then went to work for Jack Simplot as his personal pilot. This was an amazing job where he spent summers and winter breaks in McCall where Jack had many interests. He enjoyed that schedule for many years. During his lifetime of flying for the military and as a pilot for the Simplot organization, he piloted 167 different types of aircraft. He was a lifelong member of the Quiet Birds Demaray Funeral Service -

Simplot Corporation real estate division.

He retired in 1986 and moved from Boise to Hagerman where he spent many years of fishing and enjoying the great views of the Snake River from his living room. He was an avid her brother and took care of sportsman: enjoying fishing, snow skiing, water skiing, hunting, snowmobiles, motorcycles and some other creations of his own making. Case in point, on Aug. 31 of this year he and his friend, Scott Simplot rode the jet skis all around Payette Lake.

What do

The 1987 closure of the Tupperware plant in Jerome and the 2002 demise of J.R. Simplot's potato-processing facility in Heyburn — which employed 700 and 168 workers, respectively — made the Magic Valley's economy more robust in the long run.

Why? Because it made regional economic development efforts not just possible but necessary.

"(The Tupperware closure) was probably one of the better things that ever happened to us," businessman John Maxwell, one of the catalysts of the Jerome redevelopment campaign, said in 1993. "It got us off our duffs and got us recruiting businesses."

In the scheme of things, the loss of Tupperware was more severe than the potential economic consequences of the Dell announcement. In 1987, south-central Idaho was barely emerging from the longest economic downtown since the Great Depression. As a consequence of the farm crisis that began in 1981, construction had been moribund for years by 1987, county and city budgets were flat and job growth

The 700 jobs lost at Tupperware represented 2.5 percent of all the jobs in the Twin Falls/Jerome/ Gooding labor market; the 500 jobs at Dell account for just 1 percent of the total today.

And although Tupperware didn't pay $15 to $18 an hour, as Dell does, the average compensation at Tupperware was significantly higher than the typical hourly wage in the area then.

In the five years that followed, Bridon Cordage, Spears Manufacturing, Keebler Co. and Jerome Cheese all set up shop in Jerome, and the community has consistently attracted new companies ever since.

The turnaround was even quicker in the Mini-Cassia area after Simplot upped-stakes seven years ago. The timing dovetailed with the expansion of the dairy industry, which quickly took up much of the slack in the local labor market. Attracted by a stable, efficient workforce, food-processing companies followed - and they haven't stopped relocating in Burley and Heyburn.

Despite the current recession, the Mini-Cassia and Jerome economies are healthier today than they were before the Simplot and Tupperware closures because they're more diverse, with a more nimble workforce and economic development infrastructures that know how to attract business.

There will be some hard times for Twin Falls and the wider regional labor market after Dell leaves, but they won't last. The city and the broader Magic Valley community have too much to offer.

Thanks to the deficit, the buck stops right here eware of deficit fetishism. Last week we learned that the national debt is likely to grow by more than $9 billion. That's not great news no one likes a big deficit but President Obama inherited an economic mess from the Bush administration, and the cleanup comes with an inevitably high price tag. We're paying it now.

Joseph E. Stiglitz

There are no easy options. When financial crises strike, economic growth declines and living standards drop, resulting in lower tax revenues and greater need for government assistance – all of which leads to higher fiscal imbalances.

What really matters is not the size of the deficit but how we're spending our money. If we expand our debt in order to make high-return, productive investments, the economy can become stronger than if we slash expenditures.

There are other consequences, however, that we're missing in the debate over all this red ink. Our budget deficit will accelerate a process already well underway - a changing role for the U.S. dollar in the global econo-

The domino effect is straightforward: Higher deficits spark market concerns over future inflation; concerns of inflation contribute to a weaker dollar: and both come together to undermine the greenback's role as a reliable store of value around the world. Right now, with so much unused capacity in the American economy and so much unemployment — likely to persist for at least another year or two — the more pressing worry is deflation, not inflation. But as the economy eventually recovers, the possibility of inflation will loom, and with forward-looking markets, worries about the future often play out in the present. Anxieties about future inflation can lead to a weaker dollar today.

So, are these anxieties justifiable? And what do they portend for the global financial system?

The worries are justified, even though Fed Chairman Ben Bernanke, recently nominated for another four-year term, assures us that he will deftly manage monetary policy to keep the economy on an even kilter.

This is a tough balancing act - move too quickly or too vigorously, and you plunge the economy into another downturn; too slowly or too weakly, and inflation can be unleashed. Anyone looking at the Fed's record in recent years will be skeptical of its forecasting skills and its ability to get the balance right.

In addition, international markets understand that the United States may face strong incentives to reduce the real value of its debts through inflation, which makes each dollar owed worth less. If market players are worried about inflation that is bad news for the dollar. Holding dollars today represents risk without reward: The returns to U.S. Treasury bills are near zero, and even those most confident in the Federal Reserve must acknowledge the chance that things will not go smoothly.

For decades, other nations have held dollars in their central bank reserves, seeking to give confidence to their country and currency. But in a globalized economy, why should the entire financial system depend on the vagaries of what happens in America?

The current system is not only bad for the world, it is bad for the United States, too. In effect, as other countries hold more dollar reserves, we are exporting T-bills rather than automobiles, and exporting T-bills doesn't create jobs. We used to offset this drag on the economy by running a fiscal deficit. But going forward, we won't find it as easy to do this. And the Fed may not be able to do the trick - as we have learned, expansionary monetary policy poses its own risks.

It's better for the United States to participate in the construction of a new system than have it happen without us.

America has seen great advantages with the dollar as the world's reserve currency of choice, particularly the ability to borrow at low interest rates seemingly without limit. But we haven't seen the costs as clearly: the inevitable trade deficits, the instability, the weaker global economy.

The benefits to us are likely to shrink as countries shift their holdings away from the dollar.

It is happening already, and the process is likely to accelerate. Chinese authorities have openly expressed concerns about the value of the country's vast dollar reserves. Not surprisingly, China and other nations holding lots of U.S. debt support efforts to build a new system.

America should show leadership in helping shape this new structure and managing the transition, rather than burying its head in the sand. We may have preferred to keep the old system, in which the dollar reigned supreme, but that's no longer an option.

Joseph Stiglitz, the 2001 Nobel Prize winner in economics, is a professor of economics at Columbia University and former chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers during the Clinton administration. He wrote this commentary for The Washington Post.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Magic Valley should salute the 'innocent' bicyclists

John Ellis' Sept. 1 letter took issue with a Times-News editorial claim that "there is no such thing as a minor encounter between a motorist and a bicyclist." Ellis insisted that a "check of police reports will show that there are many such encounters that result in minor or no injury." When he is not checking police reports for surviving cyclists, I wonder if Mr. Ellis is not gathering carrion for his dinner. This, too, might be survivable if it is cooked up well enough.

The main point of the Ellis letter, which cites the recent downtown bicycle death and the bicycle awareness parade of last July, seems to be that cyclists are careless and often to blame for collisions.

Even if the statistic is false that 90 percent of bicycle-car crashes are the fault of motorists (many of whom are simply blind to the presence of bicycles), a bicyclist is, almost by definition, innocent.

A person conducting his business on a bicycle is not contributing to the fouling of our air, he is not clogging arteries, he is not glutting oilrich oligarchs, and he his not adding to our landfills. A bicyclist is as innocent as a raindrop falling on a sludge pond.

Instead of looking to blame cyclists for their carelessness, Ellis and the rest of us ought to salute them for pedaling and make our town safer for them.

BRENDA LARSEN Twin Falls

Good job to Twin Falls City Council for balancing budget

I just wanted to say good job to the Twin Falls City Council as well as all the supporting staff for the completion of the new budget. Even in this economic environment, you were able to balance the budget again and decrease overall spending.

Additionally, I am pretty sure that you did not have to lay off any employees of the city. Councilman Kezele was within his duties to question the budget. However let's not "cut spending" just to "cut spending." If you lay off or eliminate jobs, you can increase costs to government and citizens. When people lose their employment, health insurance is gone and obtaining new health insurance is a real struggle.

My wife and I have both experienced it during our marriage. Even though we are reasonably healthy, "pre-existing conditions," gender rating, age, etc., caused our choices to be about the same as a new house payment. We were lucky as we had some resources to draw back upon; most people do not. If we eliminate jobs, we increase the unemployment claims, Medicaid, food stamps, indigent claims, etc., so on the surface, we may have cut some expense but we build it right back up on the other side.

Bin Laden calls for Americans to end Afghan war

CAIRO - Osama bin Laden said in a new audiotape that President Obama's strategy in Afghanistan is "hopeless" and called on Americans to resolve the conflict with al-Qaida by ending the war there and breaking the U.S. alliance with Israel.

In the message marking the anniversary of the 9/11 attacks, the al-Qaida leader avoided his usual rhetoric of jihad and instead took a more analytical tone, claiming its differences with the U.S. stemmed from the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

But analysts said Monday that the message's tone and its unusually short length only 11 minutes, far shorter than others released by al-Qaida to mark the anniversary - was an indication that al-Qaida was struggling to maintain interest eight years after its most shattering terror attacks.

Showerheads may harbor potentially dangerous bacteria

By Randolph E. Schmid Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON - In what may be the scariest shower news since Alfred Hitchcock's "Psycho," a study says showerheads can harbor tiny bacteria that come spraying into your face when you wash.

People with normal immune systems have little to fear, but these microbes could be a concern for folks with cystic fibrosis or AIDS, people who are undergoing cancer treatment or those who have had a recent organ transplant.

Researchers at the University of Colorado tested 45 showers in five states as part of a larger study of the microbiology of air and water in homes, schools and public buildings. They report their shower findings in Tuesday's edition of Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences.

In general, is it dangerous to take showers? "Probably not, if your immune system is not compromised in some way," lead author Norman R. Pace says. "But it's like anything else there is a risk associated with it?"

The researchers offer suggestions for the wary, such as getting all-metal showerheads. which microbes have a harder time clinging to. Still, showerheads are full of nooks and crannies, making them hard to clean, the researchers note, and the microbes come back even after treatment with bleach. People who have filtered showerheads could replace the filter weekly, added co-author Laura K. Baumgartner. And, she said, baths don't splash microbes into the air as much as showers, which blast them into easily inhaled aerosol form.

It doesn't seem as frightening as the famous murder-in-theshower scene in Hitchcock's classic 1960 movie. But it's something to be reckoned with all the same.

The bugs in question are Mycobacterium avium, which have been linked to lung disease in some people.

Indeed, studies by the National Jewish Hospital in Denver suggest increases in pulmonary infections in the United States in recent decades from species like M. avium may be linked to people taking more showers and fewer baths, according to Pace.

Symptoms of infection can include tiredness, a persistent, dry cough, shortness of breath. weakness and "generally feeling bad," he said.

Showerheads were sampled at houses, apartment buildings and public places in New York, Illinois, Colorado, Tennessee and North Dakota.

GETTING AWAY FROM GRASS Argentina's cattle are increasingly spending time in feedlots

By Juan Forero The Washington Post

MAGDALENA, Argentina — Cattle once ruled the seemingly endless grasslands here, delivering decades of prosperity for Argentina and producing a brand familiar to the world — natural, grass-fed beef.

But a quiet revolution has arrived on the famously fertile pampa, a swath of plains bigger than Texas.

Instead of roaming freely and eating to their hearts' content, a growing number of Argentine cattle are spending a third of their lives in U.S.-style feedlots. There, crammed in muddy corrals, they are pumped with antibiotics and fed mounds of protein-rich grain, which fattens them up fast but hardly conjures up the romantic image of the Argentine cowboy, the iconic gaucho, herding cattle on the high plains.

It is an image ranch hand Tomas Leclercq cherishes. The strapping, ruddy-faced 58-year-old has been working with cattle since boyhood. Like any Argentine, Leclercq knows his beef - he likes it grilled on a spit, a tad red, tender as butter. The reason Argentina's meat is so lean and juicy, he contends, is that cattle here have traditionally grazed across miles of plains.

"There's a big difference between grass-fed beef and feedlot beef," said Leclercq, who manages about 250 head of cattle for a Buenos Aires businessman and eats meat daily. "Beef raised on the plains is better. but there is less and less of it because the land is going for agriculture, so the feedlots are multiplying."

All over the pampa, ranchland that was home to Angus and Hereford cows has in recent years been replaced by fields of soybeans, corn and wheat as commodity prices skyrocketed by more than 300 percent. This year, a third of the 15 mil-

Agricultural interests key to financial reform

By Jim Puzzanghera Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The road to reforming financial regulations winds through the cornfields, hog farms and cattle ranches of America's heartland, and that complicates the Obama administration's already arduous effort to revamp oversight of Wall Street.

Lawmakers from farm-belt states who sit on the congressional agriculture committees have a surprisingly influential role in the administration's proposed overhaul.

Those committees oversee a key regulatory agency, the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, and committee members don't want to give up that role for a big reason - they raise more money from the financial sector than they do from agri-busi-

Many experts have long believed that it makes no sense to have both the CFTC and the Securities and Exchange Commission regulating markets that have become increasingly indistinguishable. They have advocated merging the agencies.

"If you were to merge the CFTC and the SEC, it would be hard to make the argument that the primary (oversight) committees would be the agriculture committees," said Douglas Elliott, an economic studies fellow at the Brookings Institution. "That would mean the agriculture committees would lose a significant amount of power that they have, and they also would lose a lot of campaign contributions.

The agriculture committees' oversight of the CFTC stems from its origins regulating markets once dominated by corn, soybeans, pork bellies and other farm products. But the world of futures and options contracts became increasingly complex and led to holes in oversight between the CFTC and

Those contracts spun into sophisticated unregulated products, such as derivatives and credit default swaps, were at the heart of the nation's financial crisis and helped prompt the Obama administration to propose the biggest revamp of financial regulation since the Depression.

But even though President Barack Obama had wanted to combine the agencies to close

"This is a factory to produce meat," explained Sebastian Saparrat, the administrator, noting that 20,000 head of cattle are produced annually at Santa Maria.

Walking on a dirt road lined with pens, Saparrat recalled how he "felt bad" when he started working at Santa Maria nine years ago and saw cattle in corrals.

But he said he has come to appreciate the efficiency of it all - how 7,000animals take up scarcely 12 acres. To grass-feed that many animals, he said, would require 13,000 acres.

Starting in the 2009 the government satellite images, which are also used for Google Earth, are free to the public. METRIC developers have published their algorithms for anyone to use, though agencies must write their own computer codes.

The data have already been used to help settle a century-long fight between Colorado and Kansas over water in the Arkansas River and a dispute between Idaho irrigation districts. Previously, officials had to look at well-pumping records and electricity use to estimate each irrigation district's usage. Water managers say the data help to settle and avoid litigation. Obama warns Wall Street not to block tighter regulations

By Ben Feller

Associated Press writer

NEW YORK - Lecturing Wall Street on its own turf, President Obama warned financial leaders not to use the recovering economy to race back into "reckless behavior" that could cause a new meltdown. He declared that a bailout-weary public will not break their fall again.

Obama insisted Monday that there is an urgent need for tighter financial regulation, and he cautioned his audience not to try to block it. He spoke on the first anniversary of the collapse of the Lehman Brothers investment bank, the largest bankruptcy in U.S. history and a stark reminder of the financial crisis that spread into a deep recession despite huge federal bailouts of major companies.

"It is neither right nor responsible after you've recovered with the help of your government to shirk your obligation to the goal of system, and a more broadly said in a stern bid to boost his regulation proposals.

Yet Obama's reach goes only so far; his bid for huge regulatory change is up to Congress.

The president's plan has yet to gain serious traction on Capitol Hill, as Democratic leaders have been consumed by the health care debate and staff members are still wrestling with the complexities. The plan is being fought by a determined financial services lobby with a major assist from big business groups, and infighting among regulators who oversee the various portions of the sprawling financial architecture has further slowed the

Judge sets $30M bail for man accused of kidnapping Dugard

PLACERVILLE, Calif. (AP) - A judge on Monday set bail at $30 million for a California man accused of kidnapping a girl and holding her captive for 18 years. In setting the high amount, El Dorado County Superior Court Judge Douglas Phimister cited the serious nature of the charges, injuries to the girl and the fact that Phillip Garrido was alleged abduction.

Garrido, 58, and his wife, Nancy Garrido, 54, have pleaded not guilty to 29 charges of kidnapping, rape and false imprisonment charges and have been held without bail in an El Dorado County jail.

Swine flu spreads week or more after symptoms say coughing may be a better sign than fever for telling who is contagious.

Health officials have been telling people to avoid contact with others for a day after their fever goes away. The new research suggests they may need to be careful for longer, especially at home where the risk of spreading the germ is highest.

"This study shows you're not contagious for a day or two. You're probably contagious for about a week," said Dr. Gaston De Serres, a scientist at the Institute of Public Health in Quebec, Canada.

He presented one of the studies Monday at a microbiology conference.

KIMBERLY – Craving fresh veg, but think you can't afford it?

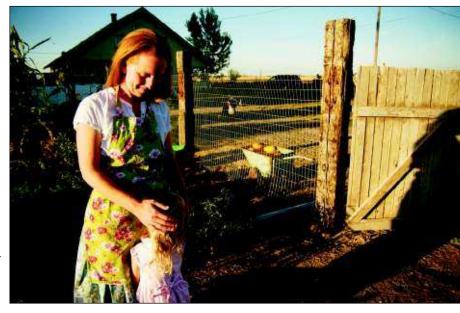

Then you haven't met Tara Guisto.

The Kimberly mother planted a large garden with plans to give away part of her harvest after seeing a neighbor hand out free bags of peaches last year.

"I thought, 'Oh, that's a great idea. That's what I'm going to do," Guisto said. She even planted onions – which her family hates specifically to give them good about," Groce said.

Linda Busbee of Buhl found takers for her plums online. She and her husband moved into their house about 12 years ago and inherited mature apricot and plum trees. She gave away both kinds of fruit until cutting down the apricot tree, and continues to find takers for her plums. The gleaners even help her out — if no one takes them, the overripe plums make a mess on her yard. "We'd just as soon give it away if somebody wants it," Busbee said.

Guisto hasn't had as vegetables. She has tried giving extras to neighbors and other parents at her children's school, even providing recipes with the food. She also uses as much as she can.

"I tried going a month where I'd eat a different squash every day," Guisto said. "My family went a little nuts."

Now, most of her squash ends up in the compost pile. She has no plans to downsize her garden, though - instead of relying on folks looking for freebies, she is thinking about selling at a farmers market.

"I'm going to have a bigger garden, actually," she said.

Energy efficiency:

Telling fact from fiction

Deborah Jian Lee Associated Press writer

NEW YORK - You're a savvy consumer and you know how to cut corners when it comes to energy. You've given your dishwasher a rest and picked up a soapy sponge again. You even make sure never to fill your gas tank more than half way because you get more miles to the gallon.

Or wait, is it the other way around? Is it better to leave the computer on all day or shut it off when not in use? Does my refrigerator use less energy when it's empty or full?

We spoke with people in know at the Department of Energy, Edison Electric Institute, AAA and General Electric Co. to find out once and for all what is fact and what is fiction when it comes to powering down.

COMPUTERS AND ELECTRONICS

Screen savers save ener-

FICTION — Those hypnotizing screen savers give the illusion that your computer is on some energysaving standby mode, but in reality, electricity is still pumping to keep your computer and monitor running. In fact, screen savers may even prevent the operation of your computer's power-down feature – which actually will cut down on energy use. Screen savers may even use more energy than a basic blank screen.

Your computer stops using energy when it's in sleep mode

FICTION

Computers still use energy when in sleep mode. However, the electricity drawn in sleep mode is about 70 percent less that what is used when a computer is awake.

You waste more energy restarting a computer repeatedly than letting it run all day

FICTION – Even though a small surge of energy is required to start up a computer, this amount is less than the energy consumed when a computer runs for long periods of time. If you plan to leave your computer for 20 minutes, trim some costs by switching off the monitor. For an absence longer than two hours, shut it down!

No energy is used after you turn appliances and electronics off

FICTION – A plasma TV or stereo system when turned off still slowly drains electricity, a phenomenon called "phantom load." Solve this unnecessary waste by unplugging appliances or using a power strip that, when switched off, will cut off power to the device. There are even power strips now that you don't have to switch off. They do it for you and turn back on with the click of a TV remote.

The lateral arms have strong springs built into the elbows which try to force them straight. This spring force holds the awning fabric taut as it opens and the arms begin to straighten. With this design, the awning can be opened any distance from the wall, depending upon how much shade or shelter you desire, and the fabric remains taut. Hand-washing dishes is more energy efficient than a dishwasher FICTION - Dish washing by hand seems like less wasteful option, but it actually consumes more water and energy. People typically leave the hot water running, using up to 14 gallons of water on average. Heating that many gallons of water is far more costly than energy-efficient dishwashers, many of which have a booster heater, a localized heater that raises water temperature for just 5 to 10 minutes. New dishwashers typically use up to 7 gallons of water per cycle. GE Appliances' Paul Riley says to get the most out of an energy-efficient dishwasher, make sure it is fully loaded with food scraped off the plates. No need to waste more water with a pre-rinse. Scraping is sufficient as dish detergent actually needs something to clean, otherwise it will work at the finish on your plates.

Wash clothing with hot water for a truly effective

FICTION – Heating the water for laundry makes up about 90 percent of the energy used for washing clothes in a conventional top-load wash-Older washing machines heat up to 40 gallons of water, a major drain on energy. Cut out the hot water and you've got yourself some major savings. Using warm and cold water can be just as effective and can slash your energy use in half or more. Other ways to save: Wash only full loads and switch to an energy-efficient front-loading washer.

CARS AND FUEL

It's better to fill your gas tank halfway than full because the full tank weighs down the car and is less fuel efficient

FACT — The lighter your car, the better the fuel economy; which is why a half-full tank of gasoline makes your car run more efficiently. But degree of savings is negligible. If you are a pack rat, you might actually see more savings if you ditched all the junk in the trunk, like your golf clubs, camping equipment and other random pile-ups.

If you live in a warm climate, buy a light-colored

FACT – "It's one of those esoteric gas-saving tips," said Robert Sinclair Jr. of AAA. It has the same cooling effect as wearing light-colored clothing in hot weather. The lighter colors reflect the heat, whereas dark vehicles absorb heat and require more air conditioning to cool down.

AROUND THE HOUSE

If you live in a warm climate, paint your house a light color

FICTION – While the light-color theory applies to cars, it does not entirely work for houses. A lightcolored roof helps dial back the temperature in a home's attic by reflecting sunlight, but insulation is the key factor when it comes to energy savings. The paint color chosen for the sides of the house don't make much of a difference. To really cool works if you are doing that down your digs, focus on on a consistent basis.

according to AAA, the proper insulation and planting thicker foliage to block the sun's rays.

Shut the door and vents in unused rooms

FACT – This works only if you close the doors and vents in multiple rooms. If you only apply this strategy to one room, you won't reap a whole lot of savings.

Leave the heating or cooling system on all day. If you shut it down when you're away, the system needs a surge of energy to reach the desired temperature

FICTION – Switching the thermostat off when you go to sleep or leave for the day will boost energy savings. Sure, it will suck up a little more energy as it works to bring the temperature back to your desired level, but less energy is used during the down times.

The longer you sweat out those hot summer days or bundle up in the winter while your thermostat is switched off, the more you can shave away at your energy bill. When the system in action, the Edison Institute recommends holding back a degree or two, as you will realize a 2 percent savings on your bill for every degree you cut back. Of course, this only

Khrushchev became the first Soviet head of state to visit the United States as he arrived at Andrews Air Force Base outside Washington, where he was greeted by President Dwight D. Eisenhower. The two leaders then met at the White House; a joint communique afterward described the talks as "friendly and frank." On this date:

R.B. IN ORANGE COUNTY, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: Illiteracy is a far larger problem in this country than most people realize. It keeps folks from enjoying life fully. Can you imagine not being able to read your child a bedtime story? What if you can't read street signs or write a check?

There are literacy councils in most communities that provide free, effective tutoring for adults who want to improve their reading and writing skills. Your local literacy council may be a solution if you want to raise the quality of life for someone you love.

 CHANGING THE DEAR WORLD ONE WORD AT A TIME DEAR ABBY: The ability to read proficiently is not a sign of superior intelligence. I am impressed by the things my husband, daughter and many of my students CAN do. Reading may not be their strength, but they are gifted in many other ways. Reading can be beneficial, but knowing that someone loves them just the way they are is equally important.

> - AN EDUCATOR IN MERIDEN, KAN.

DEAR ABBY: My mother met a man at a Parents Without Partners dance and fell in love. She has a Ph.D. in special education; he was an electrician. He was dyslexic, and no one knew how to teach him to read when he was young. He apprenticed under a master electrician to learn his trade.

Mom always thought she had to marry an intellectual equal, but after meeting my stepfather, she decided she'd rather be with someone sweet and kind who adored her. After they married, she found someone who specialized in teaching adults with dyslexia. One of my stepdad's proudest moments was the first time he didn't have to pretend he had left his reading glasses at home to order from a menu.

He and Mom were married for 15 years until his death. He had a kind heart, was devoted to Mom and they were very happy together.

"To generalize is to be an idiot.

To particularize is the lone distinction of merit — general knowledges are those knowl-

This week's deals all come from the Mind Sports Games, held in Beijing last year. In today's deal declarer had to decide whether to play the percentages or to trust his opponents to be honest. In the quarterfinals of a world championship, which way and Norway, both tables reached four hearts by South after that player had opened one no-trump.

No excitement there? Well, when the Norwegians were defending,

10 tricks did not prove a problem

after a spade lead to East's king and a low diamond shift. (This was an unsuccessful, but a very intelligent, shot by East. Imagine West with, for example, nothing but the diamond jack and club king.) However, as the cards lay, spade lead, a club shift to the ace, and a club return, declarer cashed the heart ace-king and observed East following on the second round with the jack. Declarer now had a real problem: should he now rely on the diamond 10 to behave, or should he cash the club king to pitch his possible

when East ruffed in, he was considerably sadder if not necessarily any wiser. In fact, had he ruffed a spade to dummy to draw the last trump and then advanced the diamond king, followed by a diamond lead to the jack, that would have brought home the contract five times in six.

Down year? Not in the Canyon

s it a down year for high school football in the Magic Valley? Do the "haves" have a little less in 2009? Is there a touch more "not" in the havenots?

Depends on where you look.

The answer to the initial inquiry appears affirmative when it comes to the Class 4A Great Basin Conference. The same goes for Class 3A and both 1A divisions.

The Hornets, last year's 2A runner-up, have outscored their first two foes 113-15. The Pilots are 3-0, including a lopsided road win over third-ranked New Plymouth last week.

Declo has size in the trenches and superb senior QB Jeremy Jenkins. Glenns Ferry has ridiculous speed and athleticism at the skill positions.

Should be a dandy when they hook up Oct. 16 in Declo, with both likely ranked among the top three 2A teams in the state.

. . . Fans and national pundits are already gushing with talk of Boise State and BYU busting the BCS, and possibly the BCS National Championship game. But one quick reminder: Both teams are 2-0. Not 12-0. Not 10-0. Not even 6-0. A lot can happen between now and December. Interestingly, BSU and BYU have followed similar paths thus far, topping ranked foes on ESPN in their openers and pasty patsies in Week 2. This week, both play tough games against FSUs -Boise State traveling to Fresno State on Friday and BYU hosting Florida State on Saturday. Win those, plus the next five or six, and then let's talk about BCS busting.

Anything prior to that is far too premature.

Close games, anyone? This past Friday, we sent three full-time reporters to high school football games. The combined scores in those contests: Winners 181, Losers 17.

Here's hoping this week delivers up some real competition. The juices get flowing under the Friday Night Lights, but nothing halts them quicker than a 42-0 score after one quar-

Joslin emerges as senior leader for Riverhawks

By Bradley Guire Times-News writer

Chase Joslin has earned a place in school history. Following a practice last week as the Canyon Ridge football team prepared to face Jerome, he and teammates talked and laughed through an interview as they sat in the locker room. Though they were dismayed by the opening loss to the Burley Bobcats, they appeared in good spirits as they talked about Joslin, who transferred from Twin Falls High School for his senior year. He was a wide receiver and kicker for the Bruins varsity squad prior to joining the first-year Riverhawks program.

"I've played varsity my whole life," Joslin said.

A teammate shouted from beyond the corner wall, out of view, "Even in first grade?"

"Even in first grade," Joslin said, amid the laughter.

The senior wide receiver and kicker helped the Canyon Ridge football team score its first points in the opener against Burley on Sept. 4. Joslin hauled in a 74-yard pass from Tyler Myers and kicked two PATs for eight of the Riverhawks' points in a 28-14 loss.

"It's pretty special to score some of the first points in the first game," he

His teammate, tight end Derek Bastion, had the honor of scoring the program's first points as he took in a 25yard toss from Myers.

Joslin also had the team's only points against the Jerome Tigers Friday when he connected on a 27-yard field goal in Canyon Ridge's 70-3 loss.

Head coach Bill Hicks called Joslin a big, strong, athletic kid who's "easy to talk to and intelligent." His teammates have praised his dedication to the new program, and Myers complemented Joslin's abilities and hustle on the grid-

"He knows his plays, and he runs good routes," Myers said. "He's working hard even when the ball's not coming to him. That's what makes him a good receiver and a good player."

After Friday's game, now that Joslin has scored 11 of the Riverhawks' 17 points, Hicks added, "It's also nice to know that we can line up and kick a field goal when we need it."

SEAHAWKS LOSE LB HILL FOR 2 WEEKS. SIGN LEWIS

RENTON, Wash. - The will be without Leroy Hill for at least a couple of weeks.

Hill will miss at least the next tow games — Sunday at San Francisco, then Chicago with a lower stomach or groin injury. He was injured in the first quarter of a 28-0 win against St. Louis on Sunday.

Middle linebacker Lofa Tatupu also got hurt Sunday, injuring a hamstring, but coach Jim Mora said the three-time Pro Bowler should be fine to play against the 49ers.

The only fully healthy starting linebacker is Aaron Curry.

Will Herring, a third-year special-teams player, will start for Hill.

shutout innings and Derrek Lee homered for the seventh time in 10 games seventh time in his career. Monday night, carrying the Chicago Cubs to a 2-0 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers.

Center fielder Sam Fuld and third baseman Aramis Ramirez made outstanding plays to keep Milwaukee off the board and help the Cubs win for the sixth time in seven games.

Dempster (10-8) allowed struck out four to join John Smoltz as the only pitchers to follow three 20-save seasons with two 10-win seasons as a starter.

REDS 3, ASTROS 1

CINCINNATI – Jay Bruce hit a go-ahead single in his return from the disabled list and Brandon Phillips homered to help the Cincinnati Reds beat the Houston Astros 3-1 on Monday night.

Playing his first game in more than two months, Bruce bounced a two-run single through the right side to give Cincinnati a 2-1 lead in the seventh inning. The bases-loaded grounder barely eluded first baseman Lance Berkman and second baseman Kaz Matsui, making a winner of Bronson Arroyo.

Arroyo (13-12) allowed six hits and one run with no walks and six strikeouts in seven innings. He also hit a batter with a pitch. Arroyo is 5-4 with a 2.11 ERA over his last 13 starts.

CARDINALS 11, MARLINS 6

ST. LOUIS - Matt Holliday drove in three runs to top 100 RBIs for the third time in his career and the St. Louis Cardinals' bullpen rescued struggling Todd Wellemeyer in an 11-6 victory over the Florida Marlins on Monday night.

Albert Pujols had two hits plus the go-ahead sacrifice fly in a three-run fourth inning and Skip Schumaker had three hits, a walk and scored three times. The Cardinals bounced back from a three-game sweep by the Braves and reduced their magic number for clinching the NL Central to 10.

AMERICAN LEAGUE YANKEES 5, ANGELS 3

NEW YORK - Mark Teixeira hit a two-run triple on a play that caused Angels to lose a shoe, then doubled to start the go-ahead rally in the eighth inning that led the New York Yankees over Los Angeles 5-3 Monday night in a possible playoff preview.

New York broke a 3-all tie when pinch-runner Brett Gardner took third as part of a double steal and came home as catcher Mike Napoli bounced the throw past third baseman Chone Figgins for an error. Robinson Cano added a

TIGERS 6, BLUE JAYS 5

DETROIT - Marco Scutaro's second error of the game allowed Brandon Inge to score from second base in the bottom of the 10th inning, and the Detroit Tigers rallied to beat the Toronto Blue Iavs 6-5 on Monday night.

Pinch-hitter Aubrev four hits, walked one and Huff belted a tying threerun homer in the ninth and Ryan Raburn also went deep for the American League Central-leading Tigers.

> Adam Lind and Edwin Encarnacion homered for Toronto.

> Brian Wolfe (1-2) walked Inge and Curtis Granderson with one out in the 10th. Alex Avila then hit a grounder to first baseman Lyle Overbay. Scutaro couldn't handle his throw to second and Inge was able to slide home with the winning run.

RAYS 8, ORIOLES 4

BALTIMORE -The Tampa Bay Rays ended their 11-game losing streak Monday night, using a 15hit attack and an effective pitching performance by David Price to beat the Baltimore Orioles 8-4.

The Rays avoided becoming the first World Series team in history to lose 12 in a row the following year. Rookie Reid Brignac had a career-high four hits - his first big league homer, two doubles and a single - and B.J. Upton also connected for Tampa Bay.

TWINS 6, INDIANS 3

MINNEAPOLIS Michael Cuddyer's tying three-run homer rescued the Minnesota Twins in the eighth inning, ruining a fine start for Cleveland by Jeremy Sowers in a 6-3 victory over the Indians on Monday night.

Sowers stymied the Twins with his jerky lefthanded delivery and left with a 3-0 lead after seven innings. Reliever Tony Sipp let the first two batters reach base in the eighth, though, the first coming on an error by shortstop Asdrubal Cabrera.

ATHLETICS 9. RANGERS 0

ARLINGTON, Texas center fielder Torii Hunter Brett Tomko pitched a fivehitter for his 100th major league win and the Oakland Athletics dealt a blow to Texas' playoff hopes, routing the Rangers 9-0 on Monday night.

Released by the New York Yankees on July 29, Tomko (5-3) struck out three and didn't walk a batter in his second career shutout and 13th complete game. He beat Scott Feldman, snapping the right-hander's seven-game winning streak.

n rests in case of Kentucky football coach

LOUISVILLE, Ky. – Prosecutors have rested their case against a Kentucky high school football coach charged with reckless homicide in the death of a player who collapsed at practice last year.

Shortly after prosecutors rested Monday afternoon, a judge denied a request by attorneys for former Pleasure Ridge Park coach Jason David Stinson to dismiss the reckless homicide and wanton endangerment charges.

Judge Susan Schultz Gibson said there is enough evidence to let the jury decide the case.

The charges against Stinson stem from the Aug. 2008 collapse of sophomore Max Gilpin at the end of a practice. Gilpin died three days later at a Louisville hospital.

Prosecutors said Stinson ran a brutal practice that day. His defense says the practice wasn't unusually hard.
