Cassia Co. murder suspect arraigned

Court record: Suspect allegedly shot victim in head
By Damon Hunzeker
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Gerry Salgado, who was arrested Monday in Aberdeen on his 22nd birthday in connection to an apparent homicide in the Raft River area Saturday night, was arraigned Tuesday for charges of first-degree murder, enhancement for the use of a deadly weapon in the commission of a felony, aggravated battery and grand theft.

Salgado, of Aberdeen, was transported by Bingham County authorities to the Mini-Cassia Criminal Justice Center Tuesday and, through video from the jail, was arraigned on the four charges by 5th District Judge Roy Holloway.

Liopoldo Amescua, 25, of Rupert, was found dead following a 911 call from his girlfriend, Estella Castro, 46, of Rupert, at about 9:42 p.m., Saturday, in a vacant area approximately a quarter-mile northwest of the Raft River Store east of Malta.

The autopsy was conducted Tuesday morning.

Holloway, while reading the charges against Salgado, revealed the nature of the alleged murder: "shooting in the head with a firearm."

Magicvalley.com gets new look, improved features

New site launches Thursday
By James G. Wright
Times-News writer

Big changes are coming to our Web site — changes so big that you might not believe your eyes the next time you visit www.magicvalley.com.

Everything you like about the site will still be there — and more — but it will look and feel dramatically different.

It's going to be sleek.

All told, the new site to debut Thursday will be easier to navigate, with stories posted and updated throughout the day rather than just once in a 24-hour cycle.

The first thing you'll notice is that the boxes and lines that now segregate topics such as Sports and World News will be gone, along with the busy Perrine Bridge "flag" at the top of the page. The new site will be less cluttered and easier to read, with blue lettering floating on a clean silver-white background.

Individual topic sections now stacked like bricks in horizontal rows will instead

CANYON RIDGE LIGHTS UP ITS FIRST HOMECOMING

Times-News writer

A tradition began Tuesday at Canyon Ridge High School.

For the first time ever, Canyon Ridge began its homecoming week with a bonfire attended by about 200 students on Tuesday night. For students, who took an active role in planning, homecoming is part of the path for Canyon Ridge to gain its identity in the new Twin Falls school's first year.

"Everybody's shown a ton of school spirit," said Alyssa Long, a senior and the student body president.

The school's student leadership wanted a community tailgate party instead of a parade, which is part of Twin Falls High School's homecoming

HOMECOMING EVENTS

- Canyon Ridge will have a tailgate at 5 p.m. on Friday before the game.
- Twin Falls High School will have a bonfire at 8:30 tonight at Harmon Park, and a tailgate event when school lets out Friday afternoon.
- TFHS also will have a parade at 4 p.m., Thursday that starts in the 500 block of Main Avenue North.

Family: Teens, infant recovering from Paul wreck

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

After surviving a fatal crash earlier this year, Braun Catmull of Paul felt an eerie sensation watching another traumatic wreck unfold Sunday morning.

Catmull was a key witness to Sunday's violent collision into a downtown residence.

In January, Catmull allegedly ran a stop sign near Paul and collided with Steven Damron, 26, of Burley, who died at the scene. Then on Sunday, Catmull saw a car careen into a house, hospitalizing two teenage parents and their 5-day-old infant. Catmull is scheduled to go to trial on Oct. 21 on a charge of vehicular manslaughter for Damron's death.

"It gave me flashbacks, back to my wreck," said Catmull Tuesday about the weekend crash. "It kind of gave me an eerie feeling."

Big money for a small airport

Buhl Municipal Airport scores $1 million in stimulus funds
By Blair Koch

BUHL — Although Monday's autumn weather created near-ideal flying conditions, it was pretty quiet at the Buhl Municipal Airport, aside from the pounding sounds coming from one of the airport's hangars.

Inside the large hangar he shares with another ultralite pilot, Jesse Kindred sat under the wing of his mini-

The Kimberly resident has been using the Buhl airport for three months and is just one lesson shy of obtaining a license to fly his ultralite solo. He's impressed with

MORNING BRIEFING

Pat's Picks

Pat Marcantonio

This is a day for children.

- There will be kite making and flying, fish printing, top spinning, origami, chopstick relays and a three-legged race at the Fall Children's Festival from 4 to 6 p.m. at the College of Southern Idaho Student Union Building. It's all free.

- Parents, it's time for a date night. But what about the kiddos? Well, the CSI Early Childhood Education is offering a date night fundraiser from 6 to 10 p.m. Friday, when instructors and students will watch your children up to age 12 at the CSI Preschool Lab, 246 Falls Ave., Twin Falls. The cost is $10 per child. For reservations: Jennifer Patterson, 732-6884, or jpatterson@csi.edu.

- The Burley Public Library offers Science for Kids from 4 to 5 p.m. Kids will make paper airplanes, watch a video of the Blue Angels and read a book. It's all free and all children are welcome, but those under 8 should come with an adult.

Have your own pick you want to share? Something that is unique to the area and that may take people by surprise? E-mail me at patm@magicvalley.com.

Castro's injuries. After she was the subject of "hitting or striking," allegedly by Salgado, she sustained severe lacerations, severe bruises on her head and other areas, and several of her teeth were knocked out, Holloway said.

Castro is being treated at Portneuf Medical Center in Pocatello for the non-life-threatening injuries.

Holloway asked Salgado if he's currently employed.

"Well, not no more," Salgado said while looking down in jail shackles.

Throughout the arraignment, Salgado mumbled under his breath and never looked up.

When Holloway asked if he had any money to retain the services of an attorney, Salgado quietly said, "I had a hundred dollars or something in my wallet, but I don't know where my wallet is."

He requested a court-appointed public defender and is scheduled for an Oct. 2 preliminary hearing.

Holloway, at the request of Cassia County Prosecutor Al Barrus, decided to hold Salgado without bail because of the murder charge.

Barrus, speaking before the arraignment, said he expects his office to determine whether to recommend the death penalty before the allotted 60-day period after filing charges, possibly by the end of the week.

"We still have a lot of blanks," he said. "We have a lot of gaps that have yet to be answered ... We'll examine all factors of the case to see if it meets the criteria for a death-penalty case."

The top-left corner of the new site will feature a reader-activated carousel. By clicking a button, the reader can quickly flip through the top five stories of the day.

The middle column will be dominated by local news, while the right-hand column will show the weather, lists of the most-read and most-commented articles and links to blogs and advertising sections such as Classifieds.

The video player will shift down to the middle of the page, followed by topic sections. Opinion, features and other sections that now can be accessed by clicking a button to open another page will join the lineup on the home page.

Former Oakley football coach charged with battery

By Damon Hunzeker
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Nicholas Greenwell, 39, of Burley, has been charged with aggravated battery and an enhancement charge for the use of a deadly weapon.

Greenwell, called a "legend" by players and coaches in past interviews, coached the Oakley High School football team from 2004-09, and led the Hornets to a Class 1A Division I state championship in 2007.

He resigned in March, and according to a Cassia County sheriff's report, the charges may be related to an alleged extramarital affair between Greenwell's former assistant coach, Bret Jones, 34, and Greenwell's wife. Jones is reportedly also married.

A preliminary hearing is scheduled for Friday in Cassia County 5th Judicial District Court.

According to the police report of Sept. 10, officers responded to a fire scene after Greenwell allegedly hit Jones, now a volunteer fireman, from behind with a hydrant wrench. The two, according to the report, then "went to the ground."

They were separated by witnesses, the report notes.

Two of the witnesses, according to the police report, said they saw Greenwell strike Jones with the wrench three times before they "grappled on the ground."

The report notes that, according to Greenwell, Jones "gave Nick a little 'grimish smile!'"

At that point Greenwell allegedly "struck Bret in the shoulder with the hydrant wrench," whereupon they began to punch and wrestle each other.

At the jail, according to the report, Greenwell said he and Jones have been friends for several years and coached football together but that Jones had an affair with Greenwell's wife.

"As Nick walked by Bret this evening, Bret gave Nick a smug smile. Nick then struck Bret with the wrench," Robert Nay's report reads. "Nick stated that he thought that he hit Bret once in the ribs and once in the shoulder. Nick stated that he thought that he could ignore Bret, but the smug smile caused Nick to lose it."

No further information is available about Jones' injuries.

Greenwell was contacted Tuesday night but declined to comment on the case and said he hasn't had much time to discuss it with his attorney.

Terra Rushing, a senior and student council member, said that planning the homecoming took much work, considering that they had to start from scratch.

But, she said, it's worthwhile.

"I can't wait to get everything going," Rushing said.

Principal Brady Dickinson said planning for homecoming week is a good way for students to take pride in their school.

"There's a lot of excitement," he said. "One of the things we've been working on is activities for students to take ownership of the school and for them to rally around their football team and develop pride in being a Riverhawk."

The Sunday crash sent the Twin Falls parents and their newborn baby to Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise. Seventeen-year-old David R. Torres, Gisela Arceo, also 17, and 5-day-old David V. Torres, were all incapacitated in the single-vehicle crash, according to information from Idaho State Police.

Driving a Chevrolet Cobalt, Torres crashed the car into Donna Holder's house along 123 E. Ellis St. The baby was found on the trunk, his mother was trapped inside the car and Torres, the driver, was lying on the ground. The crash caused more than $20,000 in estimated damages, and also destroyed a fire hydrant and a power pole, according to a collision report.

The infant and his young mother are doing better but remain hospitalized, said Arceo's sister, Lorena Yarangá.

"She's doing a lot better, but she has a lot of broken bones," said Yarangá about her sister, who is talking but not yet walking. "I told my sister God gave her a second chance."

The infant, Yarangá says, is doing surprisingly well after flying from his mother's arms onto the trunk during the wreck, in which no one wore seat belts and the baby was not fastened to a safety seat.

"The baby is the best one out of them all," Yarangá said, adding that he is slated soon to be discharged from the hospital. "It's just a miracle how he turned out."

Authorities have said alcohol may have been a contributing factor in Sunday's crash.

Yarangá said her sister and Torres were coming from Torres' cousin's house in Rupert where they watched an Ultimate Fighting Championship match, and were headed to Twin Falls. The couple was arguing and the newborn was crying before the wreck, she said.

Officials with Saint Alphonsus refused to provide condition updates Tuesday because the injured are juveniles. Yarangá said that she hasn't visited Torres because she is angry he crashed the car into a house.

"I feel pretty upset and so I haven't seen him, because he's talking," she said.

State police are still investigating the Sunday crash, for which citations are pending.

Torres was a student at Canyon Ridge High School, said Yarangá, whose sister was planning on completing high school after having the baby.

Catmull survived his own set of injuries in January's fatal wreck, and said he hopes the teens and baby that were hurt on Sunday soon pull through theirs.

"I just knew that I was lucky they didn't run into me," said Catmull. "I hope they make it."

The man who would paint Redheadistan

I'm not handy. It's the great shame of my testosterone-addled life. I can screw up a home-improvement project with any of my 10 thumbs, prefer plumber's putty to pipe fittings and consider a flush screw to be one that accidentally goes down the toilet.

DON'T ASK ME
Steve Crump

I've hung screen doors backward, window frames upside down and sprinkler heads that were subsequently launched as far as Canyon County.

But I can paint — any idiot can — so I'm determined to save a bunch of money next spring by doing the house myself.

That, however, is not a popular view in Redheadistan.

Redheadistan is a mysterious land populated by redheaded women and the men who love them. Only the surpassingly silly venture there.

The current ruler of the part of Redheadistan where I reside has unilaterally declared — there is no legislature, after all — that I have painted my last. Something about a house painter costing less than a divorce.

Her evidence is strictly anecdotal, but I do seem to recall a lot of yelling when I painted the bedroom some years ago and the deck some time after that.

Something about drippage. But if I painted the house, we could save serious money, and besides — it's all about eaves.

Get the eaves right, and you're home free. Get them wrong, and you're the boy with Woodlawn Salsa hair.

Besides, it's a gray-and-white house. How hard can it be?

Yes, I know it's against the law in Redheadistan to ask that question, but what's the downside?

OK, that question is against the law too. Yet I'm supposed to pay $500 for a baggy-pants, 19-year-old dweeb to make the same mess than I can make with a lot more flair?

Frankly, I think my wife is making way too big a deal out of the Redwood Dog.

Annie, our soft-coated Wheaten terrier, was a big help when I was painting the deck. And, frankly, it didn't take more than a month or two before you could see her blonde coat again.

But you know how long grudges can last. All I have to do is mention the word "Valspar," and I have to listen to the Redwood Dog story all over again.

For her part, Annie has completely gotten over it. She's even offered to help me out with the house-painting job.

I wonder how much coverage she could get with that tail of hers?

Besides, I doubt she'll try to lick the wet paint off the railing a second time.

College of Southern Idaho implements new policy for missing students

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

The College of Southern Idaho now has a policy for students living in on-campus housing who go missing.

CSI's board of trustees on Monday approved a missing student policy that gives students in CSI dorms the opportunity to fill out a form with emergency contact information that will be used if they are reported missing. The new policy is aimed at about 250 students living in on-campus housing.

Under the policy, a student generally is not considered missing unless he or she hasn't been heard or seen in 24 hours or more by a roommate, classmate, faculty, friends or family members. But the 24-hour period is not ironclad and determinations are made based on the circumstances, CSI officials said.

"If there's any indication of foul play, we are not going to wait for 24 hours," said Edit Szanto, vice president of student services, planning and grants development.

The forms are optional for students.

Graydon Stanley, dean of students, said that students already list emergency contact information in their application forms. But until now, there was nothing specific for missing students who live on campus.

The information will provide a tool that campus security can easily access 24 hours a day if there is ever a case of a missing student, Stanley said.

"When they need to access information at 3 a.m., they're going to have access to that," Stanley said.

The policy was made in response to a requirement of the federal Higher Education Opportunity Act of 2008. The act, which reauthorizes 1965 legislation, regulates areas such as grants and financial aid in higher education.

Small marijuana grow site found north of Ketchum

Times-News

A small marijuana growing operation was found in a rental residence north of Ketchum on Friday.

The Blaine County Narcotics Enforcement Team, Sun Valley Police Department and Ketchum Police Department executed a search warrant at 400 Mesquite Lane, where they found three living marijuana plants and numerous others that were being dried, as well as lighting equipment and fertilizer.

When they contacted the renter, 64-year-old Daniel Collins, he began to complain of chest pains, and was transported to St. Luke's Wood River Medical Center, where he was treated and released.

He is expected to be charged through the county prosecutor's office with several felonies. Court records show several charges that have been filed but are currently sealed.

Collins has a history of driving under the influence, battery, disturbing the peace and possession of controlled substances in Blaine County since 1993, court records show.

Pole Line closure begins Monday for Twin Falls Alternate Route

Times-News

Work on the Twin Falls Alternate Route, Stage 2 project is expected to begin Monday with the closure of Pole Line Road at Rock Creek west of Twin Falls, the Idaho Transportation Department announced.

Contractor W.W. Clyde, Inc., of Springville, Utah, will begin asphalt removal, followed by excavation of fill in the canyon.

According to ITD, the filled section will be replaced by a new steel-girder bridge as part of the U.S. Highway 93 Alternate Route to connect north Twin Falls with the U.S. 93/U.S. 30 junction. Crews will begin work throughout a 5.5-mile construction zone, and road closures and detours will be clearly signed.

The $26.6 million, 18-month project uses stimulus funds, and is expected to create or sustain 500 jobs, according to ITD. When completed by mid-2011, the commercial bypass option will feature turn lanes and a new intersection at the corner of 4100 North (Pole Line Road) and 2400 East. The road will be built to accommodate future expansion to four lanes.

Study: Amtrak route would need federal subsidy

POCATELLO (AP) — A feasibility study looking at restoring passenger rail service through southern Idaho and eastern Oregon concludes that the Amtrak route would lose money each year and be dependent on federal subsidies to make ends meet.

The study also estimates that costs to get Amtrak's Pioneer Route up and running — including refurbishing passenger cars, restoring depots, training workers and making infrastructure improvements — could exceed $400 million.

The route, which once stretched from Denver to Portland with stops in Salt Lake City, Pocatello and Boise, was discontinued in 1997 due to financial losses. Congressional leaders have been working to restore it, claiming the region needs more transportation options.

In the report released late last week, Amtrak vowed to work aggressively with state and federal partners to restore the route if Congress agrees to kick in the startup and annual operating costs.

Sen. Mike Crapo, R-Idaho, who along with Sen. Ron Wyden, D-Ore. pushed for the study, said the costs of restoring the Pioneer are higher than expected. But he said southern Idaho residents "remain underserved by commercial air carriers and mass transit."

The consultants hired to do the study agreed, concluding that reintroducing the Pioneer Route would strengthen the nation's passenger rail network and help bring direct service between the Intermountain West and the Pacific Northwest.

Rail service also brings environmental benefits. The study reports that passenger rail service is 17 percent more energy efficient than air travel and 21 percent more energy efficient than auto travel.

The study considered four route options:

- Salt Lake City to Seattle: Annual ridership estimated at 102,000 passengers, producing $11.6 million in revenue and projected operating loss of $25 million.

- Denver to Seattle: Ridership estimated at 111,000 passengers, with revenue of $13.1 million and annual operating loss of $33.1 million.

- Salt Lake City to Portland: Ridership estimated at 82,000 passengers, with revenue projected at $7.6 million and operating loss of $28.3 million.

- Denver to Portland: Ridership pegged at 95,000 passengers, with revenue estimated at $9.2 million and losses at $35.3 million.

Amtrak's dependence on federal subsidies is nothing new. Each of Amtrak's routes around the nation is subsidized.

The report also notes that all figures are estimates and subject to review and change.

Despite the costs, Crapo spokesman Lindsay Nothern says Idaho's senior senator does not intend to soften his support for bringing passenger rail service back to the region.

Recovery and Reinvestment Act.

"I think the new taxiway is great," Kindred said. "It looks real good."

The project provided a month of steady work for a crew of seven workers and five subcontractors, and gave a boost to bid winner Gordon Paving of Twin Falls, but did it represent wise governmental spending? Kindred and Buhl Airport Board Commissioner Niel Ring both agree it was.

"It is appropriate spending because we pilots spend a lot of money and a lot of that money is spent locally," Ring said. "It all goes back into the community for services, fuel and plane maintenance."

Project Manager John Manee, with Armstrong Consulting of Grand Junction, Colo., said stimulus money was directed to airports with "shovel-ready" projects and to airports that weren't already in line for additional discretionary Federal Aviation Administration funding for those projects.

Buhl, one of 2,834 general aviation airports nationwide — airports that don't handle scheduled flights — is one of six Idaho airports to receive $11.25 million in stimulus funding. Buhl was awarded $1 million in March but the project cost substantially less.

"We knew that (the taxiway) would be the next project so we went ahead and engineered and designed it," Manee said. "The idea was to have it ready and proceed when any discretionary money came available or when the airport had accumulated enough entitlement money."

The Buhl airport receives $150,000 in "entitlement" funds each year through the FAA's Airport Improvement Program and has received $2.98 million from nine different grants over the past 28 years.

USA Today recently

Kimberly ultralite pilot Jesse Kindred works on his aircraft inside his hangar at the Buhl Municipal Airport, where the taxiway and taxi lanes were rebuilt with $684,000 provided by the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act.

BLAIR KOCH/For the Times-News reported that the 28-year-old Airport Improvement Program had directed $15 billion to general-aviation airports.

While critics maintain the money would be better spent on the 139 commercial airports that handle almost all the nation's passenger flights, Ring said the program — and this year's stimulus money — is badly needed.

Ring said the funds have improved the airport immensely and attracted more usage. The FAA estimates that the airport handles about 16,000 takeoffs and landings annually. In comparison, McCall Municipal Airport, which received $400,000 in stimulus funds for its taxiway, sees an estimated 64,134 takeoffs and landings each year.

"We've increased the number of aircraft housed permanently onsite from 37 to 45 over the past two years and it looks like we'll have about four new hangars built in the next year," Ring said.

Manee said the Airport Improvement Program was created to maintain pilot safety across the country.

"Maintaining these little airports across the country is essential for providing more opportunities for emergency landings," Manee said.

In the meantime, now that the airport is about five years ahead of its capital improvement plan, the board is planning what to tackle next.

If it accumulates its next two years' worth of entitlement funds, the airport should have enough to replace its runway and taxiway lighting. The board would also like to build a new taxiway for continued service expansion and also obtain and implement an automated weather service system, Ring said.

Under the federal economics stimulus program, the FAA plans on injecting $1.1 billion into the nation's airports.

Open house today for Kimberly bond election

Times-News

An open house takes place from 4 to 7 p.m. today to provide the public with information about a bond election that Kimberly will have in November for water system improvements.

The meeting will take place at the multipurpose room of Kimberly Middle School, 141 Center St. The public can come anytime during the open house.

The Idaho Department of Environmental Quality is providing Kimberly with the chance to get $1 million with no repayment, plus another $5.6 million at a 1 percent interest rate.

To qualify for the $6.6 million in federal stimulus money, Kimberly voters will need to pass a bond in November that would raise water rates by an average of 60 percent more per month.

The improvements would include new water meters, a new community well, upgraded water storage tanks and backup generators for power out-

House votes to extend jobless benefits for 13 weeks

By Jim Abrams
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Jobless workers in imminent danger of losing their unemployment benefits would get a 13-week reprieve under legislation approved by the House on Tuesday.

The House bill, which applies to 27 states plus the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico with unemployment rates of 8.5 percent or higher, would add to the already-record levels of benefits that have been available to the jobless as the country struggles to recover from its prolonged economic malaise.

It would not, however, give any extra benefits to the longtime unemployed in states that have lower levels of joblessness, including Nebraska, North Dakota and Utah.

The bill passed easily, 331-83, although the two parties cast the measure in different lights. Democrats said the relief was still needed despite positive signs that their policies were reviving the economy. Republicans said the high jobless rate proved that the Obama administration's economic strategies weren't working.

The bill, if enacted, would offer a reprieve to more than 300,000 jobless workers who are slated to run out of unemployment compensation at the end of September and the more than 1 million expected to exhaust their benefits by the end of the year.

"Across America there are people who are hanging on by a thin economic lifeline called unemployment insurance," said the bill's sponsor, Rep. Jim McDermott, D-Wash. "Without passage of this bill, that thread will break for over 1 million workers before the end of this year, plunging them and their families into an economic abyss and threatening to reverse the positive signs we are beginning to see in the economy."

Republican Rep. Geoff Davis of Kentucky, a state that would qualify for more benefits under the bill, said the further extension of benefits was "yet another sign of the failure of this administration's stimulus plan to create jobs."

The House action reflects the continuing depressed state of the job market despite some signs that the economy is recovering. The unemployment rate now is 9.7 percent and economists see it topping 10 percent in 2010.

Some 5 million people, about one-third of those unemployed, have been without a job for six months, the highest number since data was first collected in 1948. There are nearly six unemployed for every available job.

"The job-finding situation is still dire," said Andrew Stettner, deputy director of the research and advocacy group National Employment Law Project. "Until we figure out how to create jobs there is so much collateral damage" from neglecting to help the jobless, including people losing their homes and facing food insecurity and mental depression, he said.

States that are closing in on the threshold of 8.5 percent could be eligible later for more weeks of benefits this year, McDermott said.

The rationale is that it is more difficult and time consuming for people in those states to find new jobs. Similar legislation is pending in the Senate.

McDermott said the 13-week extension would apply to about three-quarters of the 400,000 people expected to exhaust their unemployment benefits this month.

Rainy day fund created to protect Idaho's public schools is out $42 million

By Jessie L. Bonner
Associated Press writer

BOISE — A rainy day fund created to protect Idaho public schools during tough economic conditions has about $42 million less now than it did earlier this year, leaving education with less of a cushion as holdbacks loom.

The education stabilization fund was among the state's reserve accounts that Idaho lawmakers targeted late in the 2009 Legislature to help balance the books that closed June 30.

State officials dipped into the public education stabilization fund, also called PESF, pulling out about $37 million to help offset multi-million-dollar deficits in Idaho's general operating budget for fiscal year 2009.

The reserve was tapped for another $5 million after education costs — things like transportation and student enrollment growth — came in higher than expected, said state education budget analyst Paul Headlee.

"You hope you come out to the dollar, but that's really tough, so you make your best estimates," Headlee said. "PESF is a great way to fill the gap."

The fund now holds about $71.8 million.

Along with the reserves, however, state lawmakers will also have access to about $33 million in federal stimulus money that can be spent on K-12 public schools in the current fiscal year or the next, Headlee said.

"That's a nice little chunk of money that can help, if legislators don't want to drain PESF," he said.

Earlier this month, Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter told state agency directors to draft plans to cut millions in spending as state tax revenues continue to fall below expectations. Those plans were due Friday.

The governor's office is now reviewing recommendations from 59 state agencies and constitutional officers on how to absorb potential holdbacks, said Otter spokesman Jon Hanihan. A timeline on how Otter will proceed has not been released.

The public education stabilization fund is one of Idaho state government's four budget reserve accounts that altogether, hold about $275 million and could be tapped to make up some or all of the difference if there are holdbacks.

The public schools budget would be able to handle up to a 6 percent holdback in the current fiscal year if the education stabilization fund were emptied, a move the state Department of Education has discouraged in the past.

Some lawmakers wanted to deplete the fund last year and use the money to avoid midyear cuts to public schools amid holdbacks in state spending, said Luci Willits, chief of staff for Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna.

State law overrides counties on speed issues

MOSCOW (AP) — Officials say a highway district's attempt to slow drivers on some Latah County roads is unenforceable in court.

The North Latah County Highway District has posted 35 mile per hour signs on most of its county roads. But district secretary Dan Carscallen says the legal limit is actually much faster — 55 mph.

Carscallen says state law prohibits highway districts from setting hard speed limits unless expensive traffic surveys are conducted on each road. That means many of the signs in Latah County are advisory and hardly "worth the tin they're printed on," Carscallen told the Lewiston Tribune.

Latah County Sheriff's Chief Deputy Brian Strampher says 35 miles per hour is probably the prudent speed for the roads.

"They post them 35, and they probably should be 35," Strampher said. "We've written tickets on them. But when we go to court, we lose."

Carscallen doesn't anticipate lawmakers making any changes to the statewide 55 mph speed limit any time soon. It's a matter of politics, he said, and geography. Southern Idaho is largely flat, with clear sightlines compared with the rolling hills of the Palouse in north-central Idaho.

"It's something that we have to deal with with our legislators. But it falls on deaf ears because it is written for south Idaho, where everything is on a section line as straight as a string," he said.

Now the district is making another attempt to slow drivers on county roads by painting yellow traffic control center lines.

"We've come a long, long way to satisfying the affordability concerns."
 — Sen Max Baucus, D-Mont., after revising his sweeping health care bill to address concerns about insurance costs

EDITORIAL

Cell phones make roads dangerous for all of us

It's now beyond dispute: Motorists on Idaho roads who are talking on a cellular telephone handset are doing a lousy job of driving. And those who are texting behind the wheel? Well, that's just criminal. Or it ought to be. State Sen. Les Bock, a Boise Democrat, has announced he'll introduce a bill in the upcoming Legislature that would make texting while driving a crime. The Republican chairwoman of the House Transportation Committee, JoAn Wood of Rigby, is a co-sponsor.

Our view: The state of Idaho will throw the book at you if you're caught driving drunk. It ought to do the same with distracted cell-phoning motorists.

Bock also wants to prohibit motorists cell-phoning on anything except a hands-free set, as California did earlier this year. We support that too. In July, Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University released a study that showed texting commercial truck drivers are 23 times more likely to be involved in an accident than non-texters. Three years ago, a University of Utah study showed that distracted cell-phoning drivers are every bit as impaired as drunk drivers.

And if the law doesn't force you to pull over before you chat on the mobile phone, your boss just might. According to the Insurance Information Institute, employers are increasingly concerned about employees who talk and drive while on the job. Under the legal doctrine of vicarious liability, employers may be held accountable in a court of law for the negligent acts of workers when they're on the job.

We hope Bock's bill passes the Legislature without a dissenting vote. Until then, either hang up or pull over.

Incivility is nothing new in U.S.

May I say a word on behalf of incivility? After all, if it weren't for incivility, no end of kings would have been left to parade starkers down the Main Streets of their lands, none the wiser. If Peeping Tom hadn't peeped and told we'd never have known Godiva rode naked through the streets of Coventry to protest oppressive taxes on the peasantry.

Tom Teepen

A recent trifecta of crude events has unbound an apparently pent up burden of indignation. First, and most signally, U.S. Rep. Joe Wilson, R-S.C., shocked by shouting "You lie!" at the president of the United States as he was addressing Congress. Then tennis star Serena Williams erupted in profane anger — really, really profane — at a line judge whose iffy foot-fault call may have cost her a tournament win. And rapper Kanye West snatched the microphone away from singer Taylor Swift, who had just won a Video Music Award, and ranted on behalf of a Swift rival whose video he thought rather better of. The result of these cumulative lapses in decorum has been yards and yards of copy and, lo, long hours of airtime empurpled with denunciation and filled with yearning for the return of a finer time when etiquette, mutual consideration and an abiding, well, just plain niceness flowered everywhere in the nation's social fields. That was the era in which, for instance, Mark Twain was moved to address the Hartford gas company as follows: "Sirs, 'Some day you will move me almost to the verge of irritation by your chuckle-headed G-damned fashion of shutting your G-damned gas off without giving any notice to your G-damned parishioners ...'" Twain, being a serious writer, filled in the hyphens, as newspapers hesitate to do. Until a couple of decades into the 20th century we were a frontier nation with all the rough and tumble and the makeshift manners that status implies. Even foreign visitors of no great pretension were routinely shocked when they ventured beyond the Potemkin villages of our eastern cities' high society. The recent HBO series "Deadwood" was loaded with obscenities elaborated to near-Shakespearean richness. Who knew that four-letter words and the multisyllabic rowdies they roister with could aspire to iambic pentameter? But history testifies to the show's accuracy. Our politics has produced great writing and oratory but, equally, acidic rhetoric that would scald an armored rhinoceros. Thomas Jefferson, when he ran for president, was called names only whispered in saloons. Joe Wilson's trouble wasn't that he called the president a liar. What politician hasn't been? It's nearly an honorific. You could substitute for "mister." The problem was that Wilson did so in a venue and at an occasion where, really, that sort of thing just isn't done. (And he compounded the affront by preening in an afterglow of conservative adulation, making farce of his apology.) Still, why this outbreak of such bad behavior? Is our public life coarsening still further? Are standards crumbling? Are we, you know, doomed? Commentators have pondered these philosophic puzzlers deeply without convincing answers. Actually, there is technical term for clusters of such phenomena. It's "coincidence." Relax. Tom Teepen writes in Atlanta for Cox Newspapers. Write to him at teepencol-umn@earthnet.net.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

A sad tale of poor neighborliness

The photograph that accompanied the Sept. 13 Times-News story about a dispute in Filer between Mr. Billy Blass Jr. and Mr. Richard Edwards did not accurately, nor fairly, portray the problem. Mr. Blass was shown standing proudly, his 79-acre property in the background, as if defending his right to farm amidst the intrusion of urban sprawl. Come on now. Urban sprawl is not the issue. What the picture failed to show was the one acre on which Mr. Edwards' home is built, closely surrounded (and that is no exaggeration) by Blass' rows of manure to the west, trash moved in from a demolished house to the south, a tall pile of rusted cattle-crossing gates (topped with a commercial-sized fertilizer spreader) and an upside-down potato truck bed to the east. Do fences make good neighbors? In this case, no. Fences have been used as a guideline to determine exactly how closely the offensive dumpings can be placed next to the Edwards' property line. Apparently no other location on the 79 acres is suitable to Mr. Blass. I applaud the legislative efforts to rectify this matter. Legal solutions are hopefully coming in the near future, but what a sad tale of poor neighborliness. That is the issue. CHERYL A. KAATZ Buhl

For women, blue is the new black

Women are getting unhappier, I told my friend Carl. "How can you tell?" he deadpanned. "It's always been whine-whine-whine." Why are we sadder? I persisted. "Because you care," he replied with a mock sneer. "You have feelings." Oh, that. In the early '70s, breaking out of the domestic cocoon, leaving their mothers' circumscribed lives behind, young women felt exhilarated and bold. But the more women have achieved, the more they seem aggrieved. Did the feminist revolution end up benefiting men more than women? According to the General Social Survey, which has tracked Americans' mood since 1972, and five other major studies around the world, women are getting gloomier and men are getting happier.

Maureen Dowd

Before the '70s, there was a gender gap in America in which women felt greater well-being. Now there's a gender gap in which men feel better about their lives. As Arianna Huffington points out: "It doesn't matter what their marital status is, how much money they make, whether or not they have children, their ethnic background, or the country they live in. Women around the world are in a funk." Marcus Buckingham, a former Gallup researcher who has a new book out called "Find Your Strongest Life: What the Happiest and Most Successful Women Do Differently," says that men and women passed each other midpoint on the graph of life. "Though women begin their lives more fulfilled than men, as they age, they gradually become less happy," Buckingham writes in his new blog on The Huffington Post, pointing out that this darker view covers feelings about marriage, money and material goods. "Men, in contrast, get happier as they get older." Buckingham and other experts dispute the idea that the variance in happiness is caused by women carrying a bigger burden of work at home, the "second shift." They say that while women still do more cooking, cleaning and child-caring, the trend lines are moving toward more parity, which should make them less stressed. When women stepped into male-dominated realms, they put more demands on themselves. If they once judged themselves on looks, kids, hobbies, gardens and dinner parties, now they judge themselves on looks, kids, hobbies, gardens, dinner parties — and grad school, work, office deadlines and meshing a two-career marriage. "Choice is inherently stressful," Buckingham said in an interview. "And women are being driven to distraction." One area of extreme distraction is kids. "Across the happiness data, the one thing in life that will make you less happy is having children," said Betsey Stevenson, an assistant professor at Wharton who co-wrote a paper called "The Paradox of Declining Female Happiness." "It's true whether you're wealthy or poor, if you have kids late or kids early. Yet I know very few people who would tell me they wish they hadn't had kids or who would tell me they feel their kids were the destroyer of their happiness." The more important things that are crowded into their lives, the less attention women are able to give to each thing. Add this to the fact that women are hormonally more complicated and biologically more vulnerable. Women are much harder on themselves than men. They tend to attach to other people more strongly, beat themselves up more when they lose attachments, take things more personally at work and pop far more antidepressants. "Women have lives that become increasingly empty," Buckingham said. "They're doing more and feeling less." Another daunting thing: America is more youth- and looks-obsessed than ever, with an array of expensive cosmetic procedures that allow women to be their own Frankenstein Barbies. Men can age in an attractive way while women are expected to replicate their 20s into their 60s. Buckingham says that greater prosperity has made men happier. And they are also relieved of bearing sole responsibility for their family finances, and no longer have the pressure of having women totally dependent on them. Men also tend to fare better romantically as time wears on. There are more widows than widowers, and men have an easier time getting younger mates. Stevenson looks on the bright side of the dark trend, suggesting that happiness is beside the point. We're happy to have our newfound abundance of choices, she said, even if those choices end up making us unhappier. A paradox, indeed. Maureen Dowd is a columnist for The New York Times. Magic Valley's water supply is in jeopardy Underground. Unseen. Unappreciated. Three key descriptions of the Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer, a vast reservoir containing millions and millions of acre-feet of water stretching hundreds of miles across southern and eastern Idaho. It is the lifeblood of Idaho's economy; the source of drinking and irrigation water, and low-energy costs for hundreds of thousands of Idahoans.

But there is a serious and growing problem. This seemingly inexhaustible water source has been declining for several decades. This vital aquifer continues to decline as more and more water is pumped and diverted at a faster rate than Mother Nature's annual recharge and good water practices can replace.

How much is left of this aquifer thought to be about the size of Lake Erie? The annual rate of depletion is considered to be at least a half million acre-feet of the estimated 2.1 million acre-feet drawn out by ground water pumping each year.

The accelerated depletion is alarming. This year Clear Springs Foods' Box Canyon spring had the lowest flow on record, barely above 300 cubic feet per second compared to its historic flow at 460 cfs. At Crystal Springs' location, the 2009 low flow was 225 cfs, well below the established water right of 335 cfs. Since 1992, there has been a decrease of 23,000 acre-feet annually in spring discharges, with the rate of decline increasing. Spring flows throughout much of the Thousand Springs area have declined 20 percent to 100 percent. That's right, some springs that were flowing in the 1800s are now dry. So in 30 years, the annual spring discharge from Milner Dam to King Hill will decline substantially from 3.58 million acre-feet to 3.0 million acre-feet.

Adding to the problems from a declining aquifer is the higher and higher costs to pump water. As the "lift" from the aquifer to the surface increases, some irrigation uses become impractical and cost prohibitive.

What should be done? A renewed process to recharge the aquifer can help, but experts agree recharge cannot begin to make up for an annual water loss of a half a million acre-feet. A long-range aquifer management plan offers more promise, as was begun this year by Idaho's governor, Legislature and the water community.

The management plan offers hope because Idaho's Constitution and history of water law include the prior appropriation doctrine of "first in time, first in right." Time and again, senior water rights have been upheld by the courts. Aquifer stabilization and recovery must follow the law: junior water right holders who are pumping water rightly held by others must be compelled to cease and desist or to properly mitigate. No solution to the aquifer's decline will work which doesn't address this principle.

The aquifer's recovery will also depend on a market-based solution to water use. Idaho has many acres of marginal farm ground with senior water rights; likewise, there are stretches of higher-quality ground being irrigated with junior water rights. Purchase of senior water rights by junior users in an open market of willing buyers and sellers is an obvious way forward. Faced with shutdown of their pumps, junior users are likely to make the needed investment, by purchasing senior water rights associated with other, less productive land. This would be fair, protective of property rights, orderly, in compliance with the constitutional priority doctrine and a significant tool to remedy the aquifer's continued decline and depletion.

The Eastern Snake River Plain Aquifer is indeed a precious resource. Though it is underground, unseen and underappreciated, we all know it is not unlimited. All of us have a stake in the needed steps to recover and restore it.

No country for old soap operas

"Guiding Light," the longest-running daytime drama in history, breathed its last on Friday. This may be the beginning of the end for soap operas. And since it's being replaced by "The Price Is Right," there's really no way you can spin this as a step forward.

"Guiding Light" certainly did its best to provide a happy ending. In the final episode, several couples got married in rapid succession and two young women announced that they had gotten into Berkeley. The whole cast had to race from one of the weddings to wave goodbye to them, because they both had to leave the very minute they were accepted. (The University of California has become way too spontaneous.)

A long line of former residents walked in to announce they were moving back to town forever. Then everybody went on a picnic. Many Champagne toasts. "This isn't supposed to happen ... I'm getting everything I wanted," a woman told her partner. A man holding a baby got a dream job as a coach. Another man with a baby got a job in construction. Then Josh and Reva, major characters of many decades' standing, met at a lighthouse and drove off together in a truck.

The whole thing had an air of unreality, and this was only in part because 72 years of tears and trauma ended in the greatest explosion of bliss since the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin Mary. Previous cost-cutting efforts had caused the series to stop spending money on studio space, and the cast and crew had been wandering around Peapack, N.J., ever since, without much help in the way of costumes or makeup. If "Guiding Light" had lasted another year, the actors would probably have been replaced by bloggers.

Now we're Guiding Lightless for the first time since 1936. (The program debuted on the radio as "The Guiding Light," but in our fast-paced era, we have no time to waste on meaningless modifiers.) The original story involved a minister who left a light in the window so people could see that he was home and ready to listen to their problems. While it is conceivable that you could sell an idea for a series like that today, the minister in question would probably have to be a vampire.

There was a time when soap operas were hot. In 1976, Time did a cover story on "their huge popularity and money-making capacity," which the magazine attributed to "housebound women, students, hippies and the unemployed."

Now there are only seven left, some clearly listing toward the fate of "Guiding Light." Their decline is blamed on the fact that women have all gone off to work — although there seem to be plenty of unemployed people around to close the gap. The real problem may be that for younger viewers, the desire to watch an ongoing drama involving very average people who talk endlessly about their feelings is filled by "Big Brother" and "The Bachelorette."

That'd be a shame for those who believe that written stories almost always trump real life on screen. But it's hard to get too sentimental about a form that seldom posed a question more profound than: "Can a girl from a little mining town in the West find happiness as the wife of a wealthy and titled Englishman?"

At the beginning, though, soaps were a revelation. For women who had spent millennia at home, working in silence, the company of the first radio dramas was heaven.

I once read a diary that a Kansas farmwife named Mary Dyck kept during the Depression. The doings of her real family were all mixed up with the things like, "Bob is making plans to get his Marriage License tomorrow," which occurred on "Betty and Bob," a soap opera about a secretary who marries her boss. She wasn't confused about what was real and what was fiction. But there were probably days in the Dustbowl when Betty and Bob's wedding plans kept her sane.

Now, the remaining soaps are much-maligned for over-the-top story lines — Reva of the truck-finale had a history that included nine or 10 husbands and being cloned. But it's hard to create exciting stories about the personal lives of average people who stay in the same town/hospital for decades without throwing in a mad scientist or split personality here and there. It's also difficult for the writers to keep all the relationships straight. Every once in a while they'll forget that somebody had a hysterectomy in 1997 and make her pregnant with triplets.

My favorite factoid along that line involved "Days of Our Lives," whose writers once sent Uncle Tommy upstairs for a nap and left him there for two years. Imagine how great it would be if we could manage stuff like that in the real world. Glenn Beck has been looking a little weary lately. A rest would do him good, and when he came back downstairs in 2011, he'd probably feel like a new man.

ACORN names former Mass AG as investigator

WASHINGTON (AP) — The community activist group ACORN said Tuesday it has selected a former Massachusetts attorney general to investigate its housing program and other public service projects after employees were caught on video giving advice to a couple posing as a prostitute and pimp and Congress moved to cut off its federal funding.

Democrat Scott Harshbarger, a lawyer whose specialties include corporate governance, will handle the internal investigation. He said he will "conduct a full and complete independent investigation" and give the group a report on his findings and recommendations.

Victim runs into woman who stole her identity at store

By Kim Murphy
Los Angeles Times

TUKWILA, Wash. — Was it fate that brought the thief to her that day? Hubris? Malice perhaps?

It was impossible to know. Yet there was Michelle McCambridge, a 23-year-old J.C. Penney sales clerk, looking at the woman who not long before had stolen thousands of dollars worth of jewelry, video-game consoles and other merchandise by claiming to be Michelle McCambridge.

McCambridge

As their eyes locked, McCambridge felt herself go numb, a mix of adrenaline and anger. The woman in front of her stood impassively.

"Oh my God, I can't believe it's her, I can't believe she's there," McCambridge recalled thinking. "I remember wanting to go and knock her out myself."

The odds of an identity thief trying to pull a scam that involves one of her own victims must be 1 million to 1, federal authorities said. But in this case, McCambridge not only clued into the doppelganger, but her quick response helped topple an identity thief ring that had targeted more than 40 victims around Washington.

"These are some of the most difficult cases to work because they're so ... time-consuming. But when Michelle recognized her and pulled the (store surveillance) video, it gave us a fighting chance," said Joseph Velling, the special agent for the Social Security Administration who led the investigation.

Identity theft is one of the fastest-growing frauds. In 2008, the Federal Trade Commission received 313,982 complaints. But law enforcement authorities said that an estimated 65 percent of identity theft victims, probably mindful of the dismal odds of catching the culprit, never even call police.

McCambridge's difficulty started in January when the sociology student received a call from her mother asking about several credit card bills. McCambridge didn't know what her mother was talking about.

The charges came from stores at which McCambridge had never opened an account.

"She said, 'You have a bill from Sears here!' She opened it and it was for several thousand dollars worth of jewelry.

"Then she called me back a few minutes later. 'What about Kohl's?' And then there was J.C. Penney, Toys-R-Us, Babies-R-Us. Those were all on the same day. I didn't get a statement from them. It was like, 'Congratulations, here's your new card.'"

Someone who produced a driver's license with McCambridge's name on it and who knew her Social Security number had taken out lines of credit at all the stores within just a day or two in December.

There were four $500 gift cards purchased at Penney's and others from Home Depot — about $13,000 worth of gift cards and merchandise in all.

McCambridge immediately called the retailers to report the fraud. She asked the Penney's security department to pull the surveillance recordings for the date that the identity thief had come in to apply for credit. She made similar requests to the other stores the next day.

When Velling, a friend of her father's, looked at the videos, he noticed they had one thing in common: a young black woman with distinctive, heavy-framed rectangular eyeglasses, a high forehead, a small waist and large hips.

McCambridge studied the still photographs that Velling had compiled.

Before the advent of digital video, stores routinely taped over their surveillance footage every 30 days. Even now, however, victims rarely call retailers to request the images; neither do police, who often must try to trace a single case of credit fraud that is rooted in a ring operating in several cities.

That task has become even more difficult as identity thieves become more sophisticated.

"The credit card companies have eliminated a lot of the ways that (security) can be compromised," Velling said. "But there's a huge problem now, and that's instant credit. You get in-store credit and you've defeated all the ... security. But it means you've got to move fast, because the credit card's going to get mailed to the victim, and they're going to know about it in three or four days."

The woman standing at McCambridge's cash register a few weeks after the surveillance photos had been obtained was applying for instant credit to purchase several garments under a different name. "She said, 'I want to apply for one of your J.C. Penney cards. How does that work, and what do you need?'" McCambridge recalled.

And that struck her as strange. Most of the time it's the clerk pushing instant credit on the customer, not the other way around.

"I said, 'We just need your ID and for you to fill out the application.' I went to grab it and, at that point, I really looked at her. I was thinking, 'You have exactly the kind of black-frame glasses as the woman in the picture ... the exact same high forehead.'"

The weight of the recession

New census estimates show recession's impact on Idaho

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

Escalating unemployment is showing up in how Idahoans live, according to new estimates from the U.S. Census Bureau.

The 2006, 2007 and 2008 estimates released Tuesday showed significant increases in the number of families where both parents are working or looking for work, the number of family households that include other relatives and the number of grandparents

Financial and poverty estimates from the annual American Community Survey will be released Sept. 29, but the figures issued Tuesday confirmed past reports of economic deterioration since the recession began in December 2007.

The median value of owner-occupied homes in Idaho dropped from $185,000 in 2007 to $183,700 in 2008.

Over 3,000 people traded home ownership for renting between 2007 and 2008.

The share of homes for sale that are vacant jumped from 1.7 percent in 2006 to 2.9 percent in 2008.

Enrollment in Idaho colleges and community colleges rose more than 15,000 between 2007 and 2008.

U.S. home prices rise 0.3% in July

By Alan Zibel
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — U.S. home prices rose slightly in July from a month earlier, according to a government index, further evidence the housing market is stabilizing.

The Federal Housing Finance Agency said Tuesday prices rose 0.3 percent in July from the prior month, but June's price increase was revised down to 0.1 percent from 0.5 percent.

The index is still 4.2 percent below last year's levels and 10.5 percent off its peak from April 2007. It is based on loans owned or guaranteed by mortgage finance companies Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac.

The index has declined less than other housing market measurements because it excludes the most expensive homes and some of the subprime loans that have fallen into foreclosure.

Dell eyes tech services with $3.9B deal for Perot

By Andrew Vanacore
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Dell Inc. will spend $3.9 billion for the technology services company Perot Systems Corp. in an attempt to expand beyond the PC business and compete more aggressively with Hewlett-Packard Co. — which recently bought another tech-services company founded by H. Ross Perot.

Former presidential candidate H. Ross Perot Sr., 79, serves as chairman emeritus of Perot Systems, which he founded in 1988. According to an April regulatory filing, Perot and related trusts controlled at least 25 percent of the company's stock, though the beneficiary of those shares was not clear. The company did not respond to a request for comment on Perot's stake.

Perot had already made a fortune from founding Electronic Data Systems Corp. in 1962 and selling it to General Motors Corp. in a 1984 deal worth $2.5 billion. Hewlett-Packard bought EDS last year for $13.9 billion as it, too, tried to augment its services offerings and diversify beyond hardware.

In a conference call with analysts, Dell's founder and CEO, Michael Dell, said Perot Systems will serve as an "anchor" acquisition for a global information-technology services business.

Plano, Texas-based Perot Systems would bring Dell more than 1,000 customers, including the U.S. military and the Department of earned $117 million on sales of $2.8 billion.

Dell's services business is more basic than those of its larger competitors, and its revenue comes mainly from the hard-hit PC business. As a result Dell's profits have been slumping, down 23 percent in the second quarter.

Perot Systems would add consulting and other kinds of computing services, such as "systems integration," to Dell's lineup.

House votes to extend jobless benefits

By Jim Abrams
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Jobless workers in imminent danger of losing their unemployment benefits would get a 13-week reprieve under legislation approved by the House on Tuesday.

States like Idaho that surpassed 8 percent unemployment could be eligible for more weeks of benefits this year.

The House bill, which applies to 27 states plus the District of Columbia and Puerto Rico with unemployment rates of 8.5 percent or higher, would add to the already-record levels of benefits that have been available to the jobless as the country struggles to recover from its prolonged economic malaise.

It would not, however, give any extra benefits to the long-time unemployed in states that have lower levels of joblessness, including Nebraska, North Dakota and Utah.

The bill passed easily, 331-83, although the two parties cast the measure in different lights. Democrats said the relief was still needed despite positive signs that their policies were reviving the economy. Republicans said the high jobless rate proved that the Obama administration's economic strategies weren't working.

The bill, if enacted, would offer a reprieve to more than

An IPO boomlet

Eight companies are set to begin selling stock to investors this week. That makes this the biggest week for initial public offerings since 2007.

Since then, the IPO market has suffered a long drought. Just 43 companies went public in 2008, compared with more than 200 in a more typical year.

Is this another sign of an economy returning to normal? "We still have a ways to go before we are anywhere near normal," says Kathy Smith, principal with money manager and research firm Renaissance Capital.

Shares of these newly public companies could be good buys. Upstart companies that are strong enough to raise capital in a bad economy are also more likely to thrive when better times come along.

Above all, though, IPO investors should know what they're buying. Before buying shares of real estate investment trusts that invest in mortgages, make sure you understand what they do and how they do it.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 51.01, or 0.5 percent, to 9,829.87, its highest close since Oct. 6, when it finished at 9,956. The broader Standard & Poor's 500 index gained 7.00, or 0.7 percent, to 1,071.66, while the Nasdaq composite index rose 8.26, or 0.4 percent, to 2,146.30. Both indexes are at 11-month highs. More than two stocks rose every one that fell on the New York Stock Exchange, where consolidated volume came to 5.3 billion shares compared with 4.7 billion Monday. Bond prices rose, pushing yields down. The yield on the benchmark 10-year Treasury note fell to 3.45 percent from 3.49 percent late Monday. In other trading, the Russell 2000 index of smaller companies rose 4.72, or 0.8 percent, to 620.69. Overseas, Britain's FTSE 100 rose 0.2 percent, Germany's DAX index jumped 0.7 percent, and France's CAC-40 rose 0.3 percent. Japan's markets were closed for a public holiday.

Yahoo to spend $100M in bid for more brand buzz

The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Yahoo Inc. believes a lot of its good work has been overlooked by investors and the media so it's spending more than $100 million to get the word out to consumers directly. The money is going toward the Internet company's most expensive marketing campaign since Stanford University graduate students Jerry Yang and David Filo started Yahoo's Web site 15 years ago. Yahoo provided a peek at the 15-month blitz Tuesday in New York. The ads will run on television, online and other media in the United States and nine other countries where Yahoo hopes to expand on a worldwide audience that is already approaching 600 million. Despite its extensive reach, Yahoo's brand has been bruised in recent years as its profits sagged and many people turned to Internet search leader Google Inc. and related newcomers like Facebook Inc. and Twitter Inc. — none of which have spend much money on self-promotion. Yahoo's financial struggles were magnified last year when Yang and the rest of the Sunnyvale-based company's board spurned a $47.5 billion takeover offer from Microsoft Corp.

The rebuff alienated many Yahoo shareholders, and the missed Microsoft opportunity has remained a recurring theme in the business press because the company's market value now is about 50 percent below Microsoft's last takeover offer in May 2008, before the rivals ultimately agreed on a search partnership nearly two months ago. Yahoo Chief Executive Carol Bartz, hired eight months ago to steer a turnaround, believes the company has been getting a bum rap — something she hopes to reverse with the new advertising push.

256,000, or 65 percent of all parents with children under 18. Over the same two years, the number of relatives — aunts, uncles, brothers, sisters, grandparents, grandchildren nieces, nephews — being put up by families rose 11,000 to more than 64,000. That was an increase of over 20 percent at a time when household population in Idaho rose less than 4 percent. The number of grandparents responsible for raising grandchildren under age 18 was up over 60 percent between 2007 and 2008 to nearly 13,600. The estimates also showed that 17.8 percent of Idahoans, over 266,000, had no health insurance in 2008 — the 12th highest uninsured total in the nation. The census figures also showed that 24 percent of the population over 24 had a college degree, lower than all but 12 other states, and just 7.4 percent had master's degrees or doctorates, 41st among the states.

Baucus revises health care bill in bid for support

By David Espo
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — In a bid for support from Democrats as well as a single Republican, the chairman of the Senate Finance Committee gaveled open a long-awaited debate over health care Tuesday with fresh plans to reduce costs on working-class families and impose new obligations on the insurance industry.

"This is our opportunity to make history," said Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., who announced he was adding $50 billion to draft legislation to help those who would be required to purchase insurance.

The Republican whom Baucus has courted most assiduously, Sen. Olympia Snowe of Maine, said non-committally the legislation was "a solid starting point — but we are far from the finish line."

Democrats hope to push the bill through committee by the end of the week, although it was clear many Democrats want to see changes first. In one statement that could cause political heartburn for Democrats and President Barack Obama, the director of the Congressional Budget Office, Douglas Elmendorf, said the proposal could wind up reducing benefits for seniors enrolled in private Medicare plans.

Obama has said, "Nobody is talking about cutting Medicare benefits."

Elmendorf also estimated in a letter to Baucus that some families with annual incomes in the range of $66,000 could wind up spending as much as 20 percent of that — $13,300 — in out-of-pocket health expenses such as premiums and copays.

The panel is the fifth and last of the congressional committees to review Obama's call for far-reaching legislation to reduce the ranks of the uninsured, expand protections for those already covered and generally reduce the ruinous growth in medical costs nationwide.

Baucus has said he hopes the committee can complete work by week's end, although more than 500 amendments were pending to the 10-year, nearly $900 billion bill.

Most Republicans were far harsher in their appraisal than Snowe, although they paused first in their criticism long enough to praise Baucus for spending months in an attempt to seek a bipartisan compromise.

Sen. Jon Kyl, R-Ariz., called the measure a "stunning assault on our liberty" and cited a requirement for individuals and families to buy insurance. Sen. Charles Grassley of Iowa, R-Iowa, who had been involved in private negotiations on the Baucus plan, said the Senate Democratic leadership had imposed a mid-September deadline, "causing the end to our bipartisan work before it was done." He called it an absurd move, "utterly and completely appalling."

It was unclear whether the committee would debate Baucus' decision not to permit the government to sell insurance in competition with private industry. Many liberal Democrats favor the idea, saying it is essential to hold down costs, but some moderates in the party are opposed, as are all Republicans. Baucus' bill calls instead for nonprofit co-ops to compete with private industry.

The committee recessed late Tuesday, having approved just one amendment, a non-controversial measure by Sen. Kent Conrad, D-N.D., to find ways that hospitalized Medicare patients could be monitored electronically from afar by specialists elsewhere. It passed on voice vote.

Terror probe: Stadiums, hotels on alert

By Tom Hays and Devlin Barrett
Associated Press writers

NEW YORK — The government expanded a terrorism warning from transit systems to U.S. stadiums, hotels and entertainment complexes as investigators searched for more suspects Tuesday in a possible al-Qaida plot to set off hydrogen-peroxide bombs hidden in backpacks.

Police bolstered their presence at high-profile locations. Extra officers with bulletproof vests, rifles and dogs were assigned to spots such as Grand Central Terminal in New York. Plainclothes officers handed out fliers at a nearby hotel with a warning in large block letters: "If you suspect terrorism, call the NYPD."

The warnings come amid an investigation centering on Najibullah Zazi, a 24-year-old Denver airport shuttle driver who authorities say received al-Qaida explosives training in Pakistan and was found entering New York City two weeks ago with bomb-making instructions on his computer.

Zazi's arrest in Colorado last week touched off the most intense flurry of government terror warnings and advisories to come to light since President Barack Obama took office.

Though Zazi is charged

Terror suspect held in jail

Najibullah Zazi, born in Afghanistan in 1985, moved to Pakistan at age 7 and emigrated to the U.S. in 1999, according to his attorney.

Feb. 3, 2009 Zazi applies for a license to drive an airport shuttle in Denver.	March 26 Files for bankruptcy in New York, lists a Flushing, N.Y., address.	Sept. 10 Arrives in New York from Denver in a rented car, stays at a home in Queens.	Sept. 11 Rental car towed for parking violation. FBI searches car, finds notes on bomb making.	Sept. 12 Flies back to Denver.
Sept. 17-18 Admits to FBI attending al-Qaida training in 2008 while in Pakistan.	Sept. 19 Authorities arrest Zazi, his father and police source, Ahmad Wais Afzali, for lying in a matter involving terrorism.	Sept. 21 Zazi and his father make initial court appearances in Denver, while Afzali is in court in New York.	Sept. 14 FBI searches three apartments in Queens; finds Zazi's fingerprints.

only with lying to the government, law enforcement officials said he may have been plotting with others to detonate backpack bombs on New York trains in a scheme similar to the attacks on the London subway and Madrid's rail system. Backpacks and cell phones were seized in raids on apartments Zazi visited in New York.

"It's not totally clear to us at this point what it is they had in mind, though I think it is clear that something very serious and something very organized was under way," Attorney General Eric Holder told CBS.

Two law enforcement officials speaking on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to discuss details of the investigation told The Associated Press that more than a half-dozen people were being scrutinized in the alleged plot. The FBI said "several individuals in the United States, Pakistan and elsewhere" are being investigated.

"There's a lot more work to be done," said Police Commissioner Raymond Kelly, cautioning that the probe was still in its early stages.

In two bulletins sent to police departments Monday and obtained by the AP, federal counterterrorism officials urged law enforcement and private companies to be vigilant at stadiums, entertainment complexes and hotels.

The bulletin on stadiums noted that an al-Qaida training manual specifically lists "blasting and destroying the places of amusement, immorality and sin ... and attacking vital economic centers." Counterterrorism officials are also advising police officers to be on the lookout for any possible bomb-making at self-storage facilities, noting that terrorists have used such places to build bombs.

The bulletins came just days after similar warnings about the vulnerability of the nation's mass transit systems and the danger of hydrogen peroxide-based explosives.

In a statement, the FBI and Homeland Security said that while the agencies "have no information regarding the timing, location or target of any planned attack, we believe it is prudent to raise the security awareness of our local law enforcement partners regarding the targets and tactics of previous terrorist activity."

Med students crossing the line, getting in trouble on Internet

By Caria K. Johnson
Associated Press writer

CHICAGO — From Facebook to YouTube to personal blogs, future doctors are crossing the line — and getting in trouble.

A new study finds most medical school deans surveyed said they were aware of students posting unprofessional content online, including photos of drug paraphernalia and violations of patient privacy. Some infractions resulted in warnings, others in being expelled.

The survey cited a handful of examples. In one, a student posted identifying patient details on Facebook. Another requested an inappropriate friendship with a patient on the site. Others used profanity, according to the deans.

"The number we found was higher than we expected," said Dr. Katherine Chretien of the Washington, D.C., VA Medical Center, the study's lead author. "And these are the incidents that made it to the attention of the deans. This is the tip of the iceberg."

Yet most deans said their schools didn't yet have policies to help students

A quick search of YouTube finds numerous videos posted by medical students, from harmless musical numbers to a prank with what appears to be a dead body. There's no way to tell whether the cadaver prank is real and it wasn't part of the study, but real or staged, it doesn't reflect well on the medical profession, Chretien said.

"I watched it and I definitely cringed," she said. "Disrespect for cadavers is one thing, but filming it and putting it on YouTube is another. It undermines the credibility of our profession."

The study, appearing in Wednesday's Journal of the American Medical Association, found 47 of 78 medical school deans who responded to a survey knew of incidents of online unprofessional conduct. But policies covering the behavior were reported by only 38 percent who answered that question.

The incidents were reported most often by other students or doctors in residency programs, indicating trainees are policing themselves. Most offenders received informal warnings. The deans also reported three dismissals.

Medical students are no different from other young adults, said Anastasia Goodstein, a San Francisco-based marketing expert who tracks youth trends on her Ypulse Web site. The generation that first embraced social networking still considers Facebook merely a way to connect with friends.

"Now they're waking up to the reality of older people and people with authority over them, like deans, seeing their Facebook pages," Goodstein said.

And many young adults don't appreciate that an Internet prank can bounce back years later, said Susan Barnes of the Lab for Social Computing at the Rochester Institute of Technology in Rochester, N.Y.

"Are they going to be able to live it down when they're 50 and a well-known surgeon? Or is it going to come back to haunt them?" Barnes said.

Medical schools should address professionalism online in classes and develop policies for the digital age, Chretien said.

Big squid washing up on Oregon beaches

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Numerous large squid are reportedly washing up dead on the central Oregon coast near Heceta Head.

Oregon State Parks and Recreation spokesman Chris Havel tells the Oregonian his office is hearing reports of dozens of what are probably Humboldt squid. He says they're typically much more common in warmer waters around Santa Cruz, Calif.

Havel says the carnivorous invertebrates could be dying of old age, or could be dying because of disease or lack of food. Humboldt, or jumbo squid, can grow up to 6 feet long and weigh as much as 100 pounds.

They've also showed up recently in waters off the Washington coast and in the Strait of Juan de Fuca between Washington state and British Columbia's Vancouver Island. Commercial fishermen in the strait complained the giant squid were grabbing the salmon right off their hooks. The Washington Department of Fish and Wildlife has allowed the fishermen to sell the squid they accidentally catch.

Iranian leader says he'll seek leniency for hikers

NEW YORK (AP) — Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad told The Associated Press on Tuesday he will request leniency for three American hikers who apparently strayed across Iran's border.

The Iranian leader said the Americans broke the law, and "we're not happy that this happened."

"What I can ask is that the judiciary expedites the process and gives it its full attention, and to basically look at the case with maximum leniency," Ahmadinejad said.

"The judiciary has its own procedures to follow, but I'm hopeful."

He did not elaborate. He spoke in New York on the sidelines of the United Nations General Assembly. Families of the imprisoned hikers have said they hope Ahmadinejad's visit to New York might yield a breakthrough in the case.

Shane Bauer, Joshua Fattal and Sarah Shourd have been held for 52 days since they apparently strayed into Iran while hiking in northern Iraq's Kurdistan region in July.

"I DON'T WANT TO DROWN HERE, PLEASE!" - Seydi Burciaga, 39, screaming to a 911 dispatcher as water rose to her neck. Authorities released the 911 call of the storm victim's last moments. 9 deaths blamed on SE storm; flood lingers

By Kate Brumback Associated Press writer

AUSTELL, Ga. — Neighborhoods, schools and even roller coasters at Six Flags over Georgia remained awash in several feet of murky, brown water Tuesday, even as an emerging sun shed light on the widespread flood damage.

So far, at least nine deaths in Georgia and Alabama were blamed on the torrential downpours in the Southeast. The storms finally relented and relief was in sight with just a slight chance of rain overnight, but the onslaught left many parts of the region in stagnant water.

In Tennessee, a man was still missing after jumping into the fast-moving water as part of a bet. Boats and trucks evacuated 120 residents from a retirement center as nearby creeks rose, and several hundred others were ferried from low-lying neighborhoods and motels to dry land.

Several hundred people in Georgia took refuge at shelters and officials worked to clean up and repair washed out roads and bridges. Georgia officials estimated $250 million in damages.

The storm left nine people dead in its wake, including a toddler swept from his father's arms. On Tuesday, rescuers found the body of 14-year-old Nicholas Osley who was swimming in the Chattooga River, along with another woman who was swept from her car in Douglas County just west of Atlanta.

Authorities also released a 15-minute 911 call of another storm victim's last moments. Seydi Burciaga, 39, screamed to a dispatcher as water rose to her neck. The dispatcher advised her to try to break a window, but she can't.

"I don't want to drown here, please!" Burciaga said.

After several days of steady rain, the ground was saturated from Alabama through Georgia into eastern Tennessee and western North Carolina. The floods came just months after an epic two-year drought in the region ended with winter rains.

Georgia emergency officials warned residents not to return to their homes too soon because the lingering water was still dangerous. Some ignored officials and had to be rescued.

"We had people who were out safely but decided they wanted to get back in danger," said Charley English, head of Georgia Emergency Management Agency.

The devastation surrounding Atlanta was widespread. In Austell, about 17 miles west of downtown Atlanta, Sweetwater Creek overflowed its banks, sending muddy water rushing into a nearby mobile home park where several trailers were almost completely submerged.

"We don't know what to do," said Jenny Roque, 30, who lived there with her husband and four children. "The only thing we have left is our truck."

Just down the road, in the Mulberry Creek subdivision, large houses built just five years ago were partially underwater. Some residents tried to salvage anything.

"There's things that you can't replace, but it's just stuff," said Deborah Golden, whose split-level home was mostly underwater. "But there are four people in our family and we're all safe so we're glad for that."

As Peachtree Creek in Atlanta began to recede, residents were packing moving vans with furniture and commiserating about water-logged apartments.

"I'm toast," said Penny Freeman, who moved into a first-floor unit five days ago. "I don't have a place to stay. I'm losing my mind right now."

Washed-out roads and flooded freeways around metro Atlanta caused commuters headaches. Gov. Sonny Perdue asked President Barack Obama to declare a state of emergency in Georgia.

At one of the largest shelters at the Cobb County Civic Center, Shirley Jones sat with others on green cots, chatting about the fate of their homes. Around them, children played games, oblivious to the destruction.

"When I saw the water rising, it brought back bad memories," said Jones, who lived in New Orleans during Hurricane Katrina. The 72-year-old had moved to the area two months ago.

Jones said rescue efforts this time went much more smoothly. A boat retrieved her from a family member's house.

Before being evacuated, Cordell Albert and her husband Christopher moved their valuables to the second floor of their Powder Springs home. The couple waded through knee-deep water before a raft picked them up.

"I feel lost," she said. "I feel homeless!"

Eel sauce, made with a soy sauce base, tops a CK Special sushi roll at Sushi Ya in Twin Falls.

Sauce from a bean

By Hosanna Kabakoro
Times-News correspondent

Soy sauce is at home on almost every continent. From remote villages to sprawling, metropolitan cities, this salty, brown sauce can be found on dinner tables, in restaurants, even factories.

But where does it come from, and how is it made?

Soy sauce — kangjang in Korea, shoyu in Japan and jian qing in China — is made from water, fermented soybeans, salt, aspergillus fungus and wheat. Soy sauce originated in China nearly 3,000 years ago as a way to preserve beans and grain by adding large amounts of salt, wrote “The Asian Cookbook” author Charmaine Solomon. The preserved product was known by the general term jiang and was later introduced to other parts of Asia by Buddhist monks and other travelers.

In Korea and Japan, many housewives still make their own soy sauce, using charcoal, salt, dried soy beans and water. These ingredients are mixed together in large urns and set in the sun for months to ferment. Sonia Danel of Twin Falls, who grew up in Incheon, South Korea, remembers her mother inviting friends and family over to make soy sauce.

“It was a huge job,” Danel said. “I recall my mother making soy sauce in quantities and then placing gigantic jars of it in the sun to age. It was a community effort.”

Japanese soy sauce uses roasted whole wheat and is naturally fermented. It is light in color, with a delicate aroma and flavor.

Chinese soy sauce usually contains caramel and relies on unroasted wheat or barley flour for flavor. It is usually made in large factories and is sometimes called “chemical soy sauce” because chemicals are added as preservatives. It is much darker and thicker than Japanese soy sauce, and some experts claim it has a slightly sour taste.

Korean soy sauce is not as salty as Japanese versions and is sweeter than Chinese soy sauce. All three types have distinct aromas. Asian Soy sauce, chicken broth, sesame oil, sugar and fresh ginger root make the sauce for this Easy Teriyaki Chicken (recipe below).

A family's love affair with soy sauce

Freelance writer Hosanna Kabakoro's grandfather, restaurateur Fritz Hirisch, formulated these three recipes in some of his restaurants in Hawaii in the 1960s through '80s. Kabakoro's family — including her parents and siblings — consumes two gallons of soy sauce every month, using it in Asian recipes and even punching up brownies and the bases of American stews with soy sauce.

EASY TERIYAKI CHICKEN

Teriyaki chicken is a favorite with kids and goes well with macaroni salad, rice or mashed potatoes.

- 3-5 pounds chicken thighs, wings, breasts or legs
- 2 tablespoons cornstarch
- 1/2 cup cold water
- Sauce:
- 2 teaspoons fresh ginger root, peeled and finely chopped
- 1 cup soy sauce
- 2 cups chicken broth
- 2 teaspoons sesame oil
- 1/2 cup sugar

Combine sauce ingredients in a pot. Bring sauce to a boil. Add chicken. Bring to a second boil, then simmer 45-60 minutes. When chicken is cooked, remove to a platter and bring the sauce to a third boil. Reduce by half. Stir cornstarch into water and add to pot, stirring constantly until thickened. Pour over chicken, garnish with toasted pine nuts and green onions, and serve over noodles or rice with coleslaw and fresh pineapple slices.

Options: After boiling the chicken, pop it under a broiler to give it a golden glaze.
For barbecue, marinate the meat as directed above. But instead of boiling for 45-60 minutes, grill it over charcoal. Let your coals burn down so as not to burn the chicken. (Teriyaki sauce contains sugar, so watch carefully to keep it from burning.)

Speaker muses on writing that lifts a cookbook above the rest

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — The perfect cookbook?

Surely it must be one of Julia Child's. Or something by James Beard. Or, perhaps, Betty Crocker or Martha Stewart.

Try M.K.F. Fisher's "How to Cook a Wolf."

This little-known book written during World War II describes cooking during the age of rationing with prose that keeps readers on the edge of their chairs. Consequently it contains one of the key ingredients for the perfect cookbook: Personality.

"I've never cooked anything from it. But I love to look at it a lot. And that's one of the things that makes it a cookbook worth having," said Amanda Hesser.

A former New York Times writer and Sunday Magazine food editor, Hesser plow cookbooks like some people plow through their daily newspapers. She edited "Eat, Memory," a collection of food-inspired essays with recipes to accompany them. And she's written two award-winning books of her own: "Cooking for Mr. Latte: A Food Lover's Courtship with Recipes" and "The Cook and the Gardener."

She recently made her first trip to Sun Valley, appearing at the Sun Valley Writers Conference where she spoke about what makes a great cookbook.

One ingredient, she said, is offering something unexpected or taking familiar recipes and making them better, as one writer did by capping a butternut cake recipe with brown butter, giving it a nutty flavor.

The French Laundry Cookbook" author Thomas Keller endeared himself to Hesser with a butternut crock soup with a wonderfully heady aroma. "That one recipe made his cookbook valuable to me."

Hesser also prizes cookbooks that open up a new world for readers, as did Carol Field's "The Italian Baker."

"She did her homework, dug in and learned about all these obscure breads. And she's the reason we now eat ciabatta and focaccia. In fact, I went to Italy to work in a bakery because I was so inspired by what she wrote about."

Cookbooks with conviction — in which the author tells how he eats and why everyone should eat that way — make good cookbooks, as well, Hesser said. Mark Bittman's "How to Cook Everything" falls into that category.

Similarly, "Martha Stewart created a whole industry and got thousands of people wanting to be Martha Stewart, wanting to live like Martha Stewart," Hesser said.

"Of course there's nothing wrong with a cookbook that makes you say, 'I want to try that,'" she added.

Ketchum resident Geri Herbert, who attended Hesser's talk during the writers conference, said she enjoyed Hesser's perspective.

"I love cooking and I love cookbooks, but I've never analyzed what makes certain cookbooks good cookbooks," she said. "Thanks to her I have a list of cookbooks to try."

Herbert will have one more to add to her list next year when Hesser publishes a book containing the thousand most noteworthy recipes printed in The New York Times since its founding in 1851.

Hesser said she sifted through perhaps 70,000 recipes for the book. And, yes, she took her work home with her, trying out more than 500 recipes with names like Strawberry Charlotte (1947), Huguonot Torte (1965), Epigram of Lamb (1879) and Maida Heater's Popovers (1966).

Some recipes were duds, such as cakes so heavy they could have substituted for concrete. Recipes for desserts and hors d'oeuvres constituted the majority. And there were a lot of beans and frankfurter recipes, as well.

Over the years, Hesser said, the recipes got more sophisticated as they evolved from instructions like "throw everything in the pot" to recipes calling for various cooking techniques. Interest in restaurant recipes like that for Delmonico steak began taking off in the 1940s. And it was clear that some recipes engendered an emotional connection — one reader who responded to a request for favorite New York Times recipes shared how a certain veal recipe had kept her marriage together.

Hesser recently launched a new online project called Food 52.

Every week she asks readers to go to www.food52.com and submit recipes for their best frozen dessert, brunch eggs, tomato recipe or way to cook greens. She posts two of the best — say, a plum tart versus a blueberry tart or an Asian-inspired beef salad versus a beef chopped salad — and asks readers to vote.

HarperStudio will publish winning recipes in a cookbook at the end of the 52 weeks, and winning contributors will receive prizes.

food chefs can tell the difference between Japanese, Korean and Chinese soy sauces with their eyes closed.

Che-Son Bolar of Twin Falls uses soy sauce as the main ingredient in mouth-watering Korean dishes like Bulgogi, a beef dish similar to Japanese teriyaki but with garlic added, and Kalbi, a fragrant dish of short ribs and potatoes.

"Soy sauce is used universally in Korean cooking," Bolar said. "We use it in almost all of our meat dishes, and also as a dipping sauce for vegetables and other side dishes. Sometimes we add red pepper flakes and sesame oil to make it spicy."

Soy sauce is also ubiquitous in Chinese and Japanese cooking.

Johnny Bai, head chef at Sushi Ya in Twin Falls, says Japanese food is often served raw or lightly steamed.

"Most Japanese food is served in its natural state so the true flavors come through. The shoyu, or soy sauce, preferred for use in Japanese food is light, and usually used to complement the taste of fish, meat or vegetable dishes rather than overpower them."

Sometimes, soy sauce is a base for other sauces, such as sesame soy vinaigrette or Sushi Ya's popular eel sauce, known for its light, salty flavor.

"At Sushi Ya, every table has a bowl of our house sauce. It's very popular. I can't give you the recipe because it is a secret," Bai said. "However, I can tell you that the main ingredient is soy sauce."

You'll find it on a surprising number of food labels in the grocery store, too. Soy sauce is used in a number of processed foods as a coloring and flavoring agent and can be found in many commercial vegetarian products, meal replacement bars and salad dressings, wrote "Keo's Thai Cuisine Cookbook" author Keo Sananikone.

When buying soy sauce, consider how it will be used, advised "Pacific Islands Cookbook" authors Susan Parkinson and Peggy Stacy. As the main flavoring in a Chinese dish like beef and broccoli, Chinese soy sauce is often the best option. For tempura dipping sauce, or for noodle dishes, the aromatic Japanese version would be ideal. Sample different brands of soy sauce and experiment with them.

Some brands available locally are Kikkoman, a beautifully fermented, lightly salted Japanese soy sauce; Pearl River, a dark, Chinese brand; and Aloha Shoyu, a Hawaiian-made soy sauce preferred by many foodies because it contains less salt than other brands.

When shopping for soy sauce, look for the words "traditionally brewed"; a good soy sauce is aged up to two years in cedar casks. Soy sauce should be stored in a cool, dark cupboard. There is no need to refrigerate it even when opened.

Hosanna Kabakoro may be reached at HNLKnews@q.com.

HIBACHI STYLE TERIYAKI STEAK

Preparing a steak teriyaki style is one of the best ways to make it delicious. This recipe uses flank steak, though any kind of steak works well. The marinade makes this dish more tender and flavorful.

- 1 1/2 pounds flank steak
- 1/4 cup crushed pineapple with juice
- 2 tablespoons chopped green onion
- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 2 tablespoons cider vinegar
- 1 tablespoon honey
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 1 teaspoon fresh, chopped ginger

Trim excess fat from steaks. If necessary, cut into serving-size pieces. Place in a large self-closing bag.

Combine remaining ingredients in a bowl and mix well. Pour over steaks and let sit in the refrigerator for 2 or more hours.

Preheat grill. Remove steaks from marinade, and retain marinade. Place steaks on heated grill and cook about 5 minutes per side. Brush with remaining marinade periodically until almost finished cooking.

Remove steaks from grill when they reach desired doneness, and cut into strips across grain. Serve over rice, in flour tortillas or in sourdough rolls.

Option: Skip the marinade, and simply cook steaks as usual on a grill. While letting them rest, add 1 tablespoon cornstarch to all of the sauce

KOREAN KALBI (SWEET SHORT RIBS)

Che-Son Bolar's friends look forward to barbecues with the Bolar family because they can count on her to bring something exotic to eat such as Korean Kalbi. Although recipes are guarded as family secrets, here is a standard Kalbi recipe used by Korean women for generations.

- 5 pounds tender short rib of beef, cross cut, about 1/2 inch thick (can substitute chuck steak)
- 2 cups Korean or Japanese soy sauce
- 1 cup white sugar
- 8 cloves garlic, pressed or chopped fine
- 2 teaspoons grated fresh ginger
- 1 teaspoon sesame oil
- 4 large potatoes, peeled and quartered (optional)
- Sliced green onions (optional)
- Sesame seeds, toasted until they pop and turn light brown (optional)
- 1 tablespoon red pepper paste, or red pepper flakes to taste (optional)

Place ribs in glass dish or plastic bag. Mix soy sauce, sugar, garlic, ginger and sesame oil in a pan, and warm until the sugar melts, then cool. Pour marinade over ribs, add optional ingredients if you like, and place in the refrigerator 4 hours or overnight, mixing occasionally to make sure all ribs are covered with sauce. Grill or broil until sizzling, being careful not to burn because of the sugar. Or, instead, place all ingredients including marinade in a large pot, add enough beef or chicken broth to cover, bring to a boil, cover and cook until meat is tender. Serve with steamed rice.

ingredients and bring to a boil. Stir and boil until the sauce thickens, then pour over grilled steaks. Garnish with sesame seeds and green onions.

SESAME SOY VINAIGRETTE

This can be a dressing for salads or vegetables; a marinade for beef, pork ribs or chicken; or a dipping sauce for spring rolls. It also makes a lively sauce for grilled seafood such as shrimp, lobster or delicate fish such as orange ruffly.

- 1 cup Japanese soy

- sauce
- 1 cup cider vinegar
- 1 cup sugar
- 1/2 cup salad oil
- 2 tablespoons sesame seed oil
- 2 tablespoons ketchup
- 2 tablespoons fresh ginger, minced
- 2 tablespoons fresh garlic, minced
- 2 tablespoons green onion, minced
- 2 tablespoons sesame seeds

Combine ingredients in a bowl and whisk together. Vinaigrette can be stored in the refrigerator for up to 2 weeks.

Wrinkles, Dark-Circled Eyes- Do Any Creams Really Work?

DEAR DONNA: I'm a baby boomer and am noticing wrinkles around my mouth, lips and cheeks, which are making me look older than I am. I also have very dark circles under my eyes. I see so many ads with models and actresses for miracle creams. Do any really work?

Confused Boomer, Dallas, TX

DEAR BOOMER: There are two products for your aging skin that really work. Extensive clinical tests have proven that eb5® Facial Cream, when used twice daily, smoothes the appearance of facial wrinkles, especially crow's feet and feather lips. eb5® Facial Cream, developed by an Oregon pharmacist, contains many of the same ingredients that more expensive creams, hydrators and antioxidants have. It's effective, but economical and inexpensive. In fact, eb5® Facial Cream is like having five products in one

IN THE RED ZONE New ideas score for tomato lovers

By Russ Parsons
Los Angeles Times

I am swimming in tomatoes.

I've got more ripe Brandywines, Pink Cherokees and Black Krimms than I can count. And every day seems a challenge to find yet one more way to use them up. So here is a month's worth of ideas for using tomatoes.

1. Pa' amb tomaquet: Split a baguette in half and cut it into 4- to 5-inch lengths. Toast the bread and while it is still hot, rub the cut side with a cut clove of garlic. Rub half of a seeded tomato against the bread, cut side to cut side, as if you were polishing the bread with the tomato. The bread will absorb a lot of tomato juice and soften slightly but stay crisp around the crust. Drizzle lightly with olive oil and season to taste with salt.

2. Pasta with fresh tomatoes: Cut cherry tomatoes in half and season with salt, pepper, olive oil, a little red wine vinegar and minced garlic and a pinch of dried red chile flakes. Cook "bucatini," penne or another chewy dried pasta until tender. While the pasta is still steaming hot, dump it over the tomatoes. Stir quickly so the hot pasta will lightly cook the tomatoes. Stir in a bit more olive oil or, if you prefer, some fresh goat cheese, which will melt into the pasta.

3. Pasta with quickly cooked tomatoes (true marinara): Heat olive oil in a skillet over medium heat and saute a whole peeled garlic clove until lightly browned. Add peeled, seeded, diced tomatoes and cook until they begin to melt into a sauce. Cook spaghetti or another long dried pasta and when it is almost tender, add it to the tomatoes along with a ladle of the cooking water. Increase the heat to high and cook until the sauce thickens and coats the pasta. Remove the garlic clove, sprinkle with shredded basil, and serve.

4. Pasta with tomato sauce: Heat olive oil in a skillet over medium heat with minced garlic and diced carrots, celery and onion (half as much carrots and celery as onion). When the vegetables start to soften and turn color, add peeled, seeded, diced tomatoes (preferably plum tomatoes) and cook until they've thoroughly melted into a sauce. Pass the mixture through a food mill (or puree in a food processor) and return to the skillet. Serve with fettuccine or another fresh pasta topped with grated Parmigiano-Reggiano.

5. Tomato butter: Heat a stick of butter in a skillet with minced shallots and torn fresh tarragon. Cut cherry tomatoes in quarters and put them in a mixing bowl with salt to taste. If the tomatoes lack acidity, stir in a bit of red wine vinegar. When the shallots have softened, pour the butter into the tomatoes, stirring briskly to break up the tomatoes. Serve this over grilled or sauteed fish or gnocchi.

6. Tomato and white bean salad: Halve cherry tomatoes and put them in a mixing bowl with minced garlic and capers. Season with olive oil, red wine vinegar and salt. Set aside for a half-hour to macerate. In another mixing bowl, combine a can of rinsed, drained white beans and some slivered red onion. Add the tomatoes and stir to combine. Top with slivered basil. To make this a light main course, stir in a drained can of good-quality tuna.

7. True gazpacho: Soak bread in water to soften. Puree the bread and a clove of garlic in a blender until smooth. Add seeded, chopped tomatoes, a little peeled, chopped cucumber and a little seeded bell pepper and puree. Season with salt, white wine vinegar, a little cumin and either a little black pepper or smoked paprika. With the blender running, add olive oil in a stream until the mixture turns from bright red to orange. Pour the mixture into a bowl and whisk in just enough ice water to make a lightly creamy texture. Chill until ready to serve.

8. Crostini with goat cheese and tomatoes: Cut a baguette in 1/2-inch slices and place them on a cookie sheet. Toast at 400 degrees, turning once, until they are well-browned on both sides, about 20 minutes. Remove from the oven and immediately rub each slice lightly with cut garlic and drizzle with olive oil. Sprinkle seeded, diced tomatoes with salt

Tips for tomato preparation

- To peel a tomato, cut a shallow X in the blossom end, then blanch the tomato in a pot of boiling water just until the skin begins to peel away from the cut — from five to 30 seconds; the timing will vary depending on the ripeness of the tomato. Rinse under cool running water. The peel should pull away easily. If it doesn't, return it to the boiling water for a few more seconds and try again.
- To seed a tomato, cut the tomato in half horizontally and squeeze; the seeds should pop right out. Do this into a strainer set over a work bowl and you can collect the gel that surrounds the seeds. This is the "tomato water" that was such a trendy ingredient a few years ago. It doesn't really have enough flavor to use as a sauce by itself, but it is a nice extra when added back into a tomato dish.

and pepper and just enough olive oil to barely moisten. Spread the crostini with fresh goat cheese and top with a generous spoonful of the diced tomatoes. Garnish with a sprig of basil.

9. Tomato salad with pickled shallots and goat cheese croutons: Slice a couple of shallots thin and cover them in a bowl with red wine vinegar to pickle for a half-hour or so. Cut tomatoes (a mix of colors and shapes is best) in thick slices and season them with salt, pepper, olive oil and the strained vinegar from the shallots. Spread crostini (No. 8) with fresh goat cheese. Arrange the salad in a low mound on a platter with the goat cheese crostini around the outside. Scatter the pickled shallots over top.

10. Tomato summer pudding: This is adapted from Judy Rodgers' "The Zuni Cafe Cookbook." Make a highly seasoned tomato salad (see No. 9). Oil a souffle dish and arrange a solid layer of crostini (No. 8) in the bottom. Spoon some tomato salad over that. Arrange another layer of crostini and spoon in more tomatoes. Repeat until all of the tomatoes are used, finishing with a layer of tomatoes. Lay a sheet of parchment or waxed paper on top and place a plate just big enough to fit inside the souffle dish. Weight the plate to compress the ingredients (a can of tomatoes works well), and set aside until the crostini are well soaked with tomato juice, one to two hours.

11. Tomato confit I: Cut plum or cherry tomatoes in half lengthwise and squeeze out the seeds. Arrange them in a single layer in a baking dish (as many as you can, as they will shrink during cooking). Scatter peeled garlic cloves among the tomatoes and add enough olive oil to come halfway up the side. Bake at 400 degrees for a couple of hours until the tomatoes shrivel and are well-caramelized. These will store in the refrigerator for weeks — terrific for adding to pasta sauces, garnishing grilled or roasted meat or fish or topping crostini.

12. Tomato confit II: This version isn't quite as unctuous but has a more intense tomato flavor. Cut sauce or cherry tomatoes in half lengthwise and squeeze out the seeds. Arrange in a single layer on a jellyroll pan and season generously with salt, pepper and minced garlic. Drizzle over olive oil and roast at 300 degrees for a couple of hours until the tomatoes begin to caramelize.

13. Sauteed cherry tomatoes: In a large skillet, heat olive oil and a peeled clove of garlic over medium-high heat. When the garlic begins to color, add cherry tomatoes and sprinkle with thyme. Cook, shaking the pan, until the tomatoes split and blister. Season to taste with salt and a little red wine vinegar.

14. Spaghetti with tuna and spicy tomatoes: Saute chopped garlic, fennel seeds and dried red chile flakes in olive oil until fragrant. Add chopped tomatoes and chopped anchovy fillets and cook for a minute before adding best-quality canned tuna, along with the olive oil it's packed in. Cook until the tomatoes and tuna break down into a chunky sauce. Season with red wine vinegar and serve over spaghetti.

15. Individual lasagna with slow-roasted tomatoes and pesto: Prepare tomato confit II (No. 12). Smear squares of cooked fresh pasta with a bit of pesto and place them on serving plates. Top with a generous spoonful of ricotta and spoon over some tomato confit. Top with another square of cooked pasta and more tomatoes. Return to the oven to heat through; serve immediately.

16. Stuffed tomatoes with garlicky bread crumbs: Slice the top one-third off large tomatoes and squeeze out the seeds. Place them in a baking dish so they fit tightly and season with salt. Grind cubes of stale bread with minced garlic and minced parsley and spoon the seasoned bread crumbs over top. Drizzle with olive oil and roast at 400 degrees until the bread crumbs are nicely browned.

GINA FERAZZI/Los Angeles Times

Spaghetti with tuna and cherry tomatoes.

17. Bacon and cherry tomato skewers: Cut bacon strips in thirds lengthwise. Wrap each bacon piece around a cherry tomato and thread them onto skewers. Grill over a medium fire until browned and crisp, about 10 minutes.

18. Braised whole fish with tomatoes, thyme and olives: Warm some olive oil, onion and garlic in a saucepan until fragrant. Add water, white wine, several sprigs of thyme, dried red chile flakes and salt and simmer. Arrange sliced tomatoes in a baking dish just large enough to hold a whole fish (such as Tai snapper). Scatter chopped pitted olives and minced parsley. Lay the fish on top. Bring the liquid to a rolling boil and pour it over the fish. Seal tightly with foil and bake at 350 degrees until the fish lifts easily from the bone. Remove from the oven and let stand briefly before serving.

19. Bread salad with tomatoes, cucumbers and arugula: Cut about one-half loaf of stale country-style bread into large chunks and soak in water to cover. Seed and chop tomatoes and put them in a bowl with sliced cucumbers, salt, pepper, olive oil and red wine vinegar. Set aside to draw the juice from the tomatoes. Squeeze the bread cubes dry and add them to the tomato mixture with some diced red onion. Scatter several good handfuls of arugula over top and stir to combine.

20. Tomato risotto with "burrata": Make a plain risotto and when it's done stir in peeled, seeded, chopped tomatoes off the heat. Chop one-quarter of a "burrata" ball and stir it in briskly until the cheese melts and gets stringy. Stir in slivered basil and serve while hot.

21. Tomato and grilled corn salad: Grill a couple ears of corn. Shuck them and cut away the kernels into a mixing bowl. Add halved cherry tomatoes or diced tomatoes and season with diced red onion, a little minced garlic, lemon juice and olive oil. Add a couple handfuls of arugula and toss well to combine. Arrange on a platter; use a vegetable peeler to shave Parmigiano-Reggiano over top.

22. Stuffed tomatoes II: Make the marinara sauce from No. 3, adding capers and a splash of white wine. Make the breadcrumbs from No. 16 and add four chopped anchovies and about one-third cup toasted pine nuts. Slice the top one-third off large tomatoes and squeeze out the seeds. Spoon the sauce into a roasting pan and arrange the tomatoes on top, so they fit tightly. Stuff the tomatoes lightly with the bread crumbs; don't pack it tightly or the stuffing will get pasty. Drizzle with olive oil and bake at 400 degrees until the tops are browned and crusty and the tomatoes are melting in texture. Serve hot or at room temperature.

23. Grilled sardines with confit tomatoes: Prepare tomato confit I (No. 11). Flavor olive oil with salt, minced garlic, dried oregano and red chile flakes. Season sliced cucumbers with salt and lemon juice. Arrange the cucumbers in a low mound on a platter. Dip cleaned sardines in the oil mixture and grill on the skin side until done, three minutes. Place them on top of the cucumbers and spoon over some of the confit tomatoes.

Times-News

Carolyn Weister of Twin Falls was the blue-ribbon winner of the Saco Foods Soup It Up contest at the Twin Falls County Fair. A white gazpacho won her the grand prize and $150 from Saco Foods, a Madison, Wis.-based producer of baking products. Weister's recipe:

WHITE GAZPACHO

- 1 English cucumber, half diced and half rough chopped
- 1/2 cup toasted, unsalted sunflower seeds
- 1 1/2 cups Greek yogurt
- 1 1/2 cups Saco's Cultured Buttermilk

- Blend (6 tablespoons CBB and 1 1/2 cup water)
- 2 tablespoons fresh dill, chopped finely
- 2 tablespoons fresh chives, chopped finely
- 1 clove garlic, chopped finely
- 1/2 bell pepper, diced
- 1 Roma tomato, seeded and diced
- 1/2 cup crushed croutons, (garnish)
- Salt and white pepper to taste

In a blender, combine the rough-chopped cucumber and sunflower seeds, yogurt, buttermilk, dill, chives and garlic. Blend until smooth. Refrigerate 2 to 24 hours. In 6 bowls, divide the finely chopped cucumber, bell pepper and tomato. Stir the gazpacho and pour over the chopped vegetables. Garnish with crushed croutons.

Ideas

including a little of the flavored oil.

24. Tomato salad with "burrata": Make a tart tomato salad by seasoning chopped tomatoes with a little garlic, salt, black pepper, olive oil and a good splash of red wine vinegar. Cut a ball of "burrata" in quarters and place it in the middle of a plate, opened out like a flower. Spoon the salad around it and serve with crostini. This is also good made with halved cherry tomatoes that have been seasoned this way and then roasted in a hot oven just until they blister.

25. Peperonata: Saute peeled, seeded, chopped tomatoes with onion and olive oil. Add roasted, peeled bell peppers cut into strips. Stir in a splash of red wine and simmer until the mixture cooks into a marmalade. At the very end, stir in a sauce made by grinding a jalapeno, garlic, basil, parsley and olive oil to a thin paste. Serve hot or at room temperature.

26. Ratatouille: Saute onions in olive oil until they're tender and transfer them to a big pot. Saute zucchini until tender and add that to the pot. Saute eggplant until tender and add that to the pot. Add peeled, seeded, diced tomatoes and red wine vinegar and cook until they thicken. Add them to the pot; heat everything through to combine flavors. Garnish with torn basil leaves and serve hot or at room temperature.

27. Scrambled eggs with tomatoes and basil: Adapted from Richard Olney's "Simple French Food." Cook peeled, seeded and chopped tomatoes with a little olive oil and several peeled whole garlic cloves over low heat until the tomatoes are dry. Discard the garlic and add raw eggs beaten with butter and scramble until set but still moist. When the eggs begin to thicken, add a good handful of basil leaves.

28. Tomatoes stuffed with tuna: Make a tuna salad with best-quality canned tuna, blanched green beans, mayonnaise, capers and a generous squeeze of lemon juice. Slice the tops off the tomaatoes, scoop out the pulp and fill with the salad. This is particularly good when made with smoked tuna.

29. Roasted cherry tomatoes stuffed with mozzarella and anchovies: Cut cherry tomatoes in half and scoop out the pulp. Place a small piece of anchovy in the cavity and top it with enough finely diced mozzarella to fill. Broil until the mozzarella melts and bubbles, about five minutes. Top with a small piece of fresh basil and serve immediately.

30. Tomato and bread soup: Adapted from Alice Waters' "Chez Panisse Vegetables." Cook minced onions and garlic in a lot of olive oil until soft. Spoon out about one-third of the onion mixture and add peeled, seeded, chopped tomatoes. Cook until the tomatoes are very tender and pass through a food mill. Return the tomatoes to the pan with the reserved onions and over very low heat, stir in enough fresh bread crumbs to thicken the soup. Stir in some basil and more olive oil. Serve hot or at room temperature.

Don't believe everything you see in the coupon book

One of the most common misconceptions about coupons is that the item that you buy must match the picture that appears on the face of the coupon. It's true that you can use the coupon to purchase the item that's pictured. However, you want to pay close attention to the text on a coupon, too. After all, the text contains the precise information that the coupon's bar code is programmed to deliver at the checkout counter. Which brings us to this week's tip:

Super-couponing Secret: Forget the photos, read the fine print.

It's a common marketing technique for a manufacturer to show a new or more expensive variety of a product on the face of a coupon in the hope that you will buy it. If you read the coupon, though, you'll discover that the offer is good for "$1 off any (brand) product." Consider a coupon for a new variety of cold medicine put out by a leading manufacturer. The coupon may show the new, multi-symptom medicine in the picture, hoping that you will want to try it, but the text states clearly that you can use the coupon on any medicine from this manufacturer.

Learning to distinguish between what the photo suggests and the full terms of the deal is a skill that can really help shoppers, giving us more freedom to buy the item we may prefer. I recently had a coupon for a new variety of skin-care product. It showed a photo of the lotion, and the text read "$1 off (brand) lotion, body wash, or any (brand) product." That wording is key! When I didn't see a good sale for the company's lotions or body wash, I did see a bar of the same brand of soap — for 99 cents. With my coupon, it was free.

COUPON QUEEN

Brand-name sandwich meat is an area where it can pay to read coupon wording closely. People often ask me how to save at the deli counter. It's not always easy to get discounts on fresh-cut cold cuts. But many meat manufacturers sell pre-packaged deli meats, too, and there are often coupons for those. Look closely at the wording on these coupons. While the coupon may show a boxed or bagged meat, the wording often spells out a wider deal, such as "$1 off 1 package of (brand) sliced meat, or 1 lb. of (brand) sliced meats at the deli."

Ready for another tip? This one involves brand loyalty. While we all have favorite brands of things, our brand loyalty can cost us in the long run if we aren't shopping smart for those favorite-brand items when they're on sale. Major brands often engage in what the industry calls "price wars" with one another. We see this frequently with items such as pasta sauce, where numerous brands compete to sell what is essentially the same product. Brand A may be cheap one week, but next week Brand B barrels in with an even lower price. This works out well for shoppers who aren't particularly partial to any specific brand. But if we think, "I really like Brand A, and I will always buy it no matter what," it's great when Brand A is on sale for $1.29 a jar and we've got a 75-cent coupon for it. But when the sale ends and Brand A goes back up to $3.29 a jar, we'll be paying the price.

If we can let some of our brand preferences slide a little bit and fluctuate along with the sales, we can save more money in the long run. Next week, I'll share one of the biggest and most surprising tips with you. It involves which days of the week are the least expensive days to shop at the grocery store. You might be surprised!

Coupon clippers can buy the previous Sunday's Times-News (minimum 10 copies) for 50 cents each at the Times-News office for extra coupon savings.

Tess Mern (Tad) Williams

Three days before his 60th wedding anniversary, Tess Mern (Tad) Williams passed away on Sunday, Sept. 20, 2009, in Orem, Utah.

The son of Elmer Williams and Laurin Olsen Williams, he was born March 23, 1924, in Declo. He attended school in Inkom and Declo, Idaho, and Lakeview, Ore., where he graduated in 1942. In 1951, Tess earned a bachelor of science degree in agricultural engineering from Oregon State University, where he was affiliated with Theta Chi fraternity. He earned a master of science degree in technical journalism from Iowa State University, the first university to have a program in television, in 1956. He earned his Ph.D. in communications from Michigan State University in 1971. He also completed a six-week course from the 1948 Radio Institute in Los Angeles, sponsored by the University of California and the National Broadcasting Company. He served in the Army Air Corps from 1942 to 1945 as a pilot trainee.

Tess married Maxine Hoggan of Burley on Sept. 23, 1949, in the Salt Lake Temple. They had two children, Dorice and Alan Mern. Tess was a devoted husband and father who adored his family. He was known by family, friends and associates as an exceptionally kind, compassionate and caring man. He was a peacemaker and mediator and also had a delightful sense of humor.

Tess began his broadcasting career as an announcer for KBAR in Burley. He was a film editor and program director at KMO-TV in Tacoma, Wash., and at KOIN-TV in Portland, Ore. He then became affiliated with the Oregon State System of Higher Education and assisted with the development of educational television in the state. He joined the faculty of Brigham Young University in 1960 as an assistant professor and director of Broadcast Services and was primarily responsible for the launch of KBYU-FM radio and KBYU television. In 1970, he joined the staff of the Utah State Board of Higher Education, serving as coordinator of Statewide Television, including Telecommunications and Instructional Television, where he served for 17 years with "distinction, impartial-ty, wisdom and foresight," according to an official proclamation presented to him by the board. He also received a Distinguished Service Award from KBYU-FM on Nov.

20, 1985, in recognition of his important contributions there.

During his years at the Board of Regents, Tess also taught classes for the BYU-Salt Lake Center and became interested in career counseling, leading him to establish the Utah Education/Career telephone hotline which he coordinated with the Board of Regents. Following his retirement from the Board of Regents in 1987, Tess served as a consultant for the LDS Church in the Public Affairs, Communication and Audio-Visual departments until 2004. Throughout his life, he served faithfully in LDS Church callings, including bishoprics, as high counselor, High Priest group leader and many others. He was called with his wife on missions to Temple Square and the Church Office Building, where he coordinated efforts for the church to join the national interdenominational VISION cable TV network, as well as other major projects. He also worked diligently on a self-help computer project called the Triumphant Living Program.

He is survived by his wife, Maxine of Orem, Utah; children, Dorice Williams Elliott (Robert) of Lawrence, Kan., and Alan Mern Williams (Racquel) of Lincoln, Neb.; five grandchildren; one great-grandchild; and three brothers. Tess was preceded in death by his father; mother; stepmother, Grace Roylance Bush Williams; and four brothers.

In lieu of flowers, contributions may be made to the LDS Church Perpetual Education Fund.

The funeral service will be held at 1 p.m. Friday, Sept. 25, at the Suncrest LDS 9th Ward Chapel, 130 N. 400 W. in Orem, Utah. Family and friends may call from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 24, at the Walker-Sanderson Funeral Home, 646 E. 800 N. in Orem, Utah, and from 11:45 a.m. to 12:45 p.m. Friday prior to the service at the church. Interment will be held at Orem City Cemetery.

Condolences may be sent to the family at: www.walkerfamilymortality.com.

President Obama watches as Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and Palestinian President Mahmoud Abbas shake hands, Tuesday in New York.

Stern Obama confronts Israeli, Palestinian leaders

By Michael D. Shear and Glenn Kessler
The Washington Post

UNITED NATIONS — President Obama's meetings Tuesday with the leaders of Israel and the Palestinian Authority signaled his impatience with months of stalemate in the quest for Middle East peace, as well as his desire to move beyond talks about settlement construction and straight to negotiations on the final shape of the region.

In private, one-on-one discussions, Obama chided Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and Palestinian Authority President Mahmoud Abbas for their failure to make progress in negotiations that could end decades of violence between their people, officials familiar with the talks said.

"Permanent status negotiations must begin and begin soon," Obama said before the meetings with both men. "It is past time to talk about starting negotiations. It is time to move forward."

The blunt message from the U.S. president suggests that his administration has grown weary of failed efforts to resolve disputes about settlement construction and other issues before moving to broader peace talks. And it represents a return to a peace-making approach — pushing for a comprehensive solution — that bedeviled former president George W. Bush and his predecessors.

Since taking office, Obama had sought to "set the context" for overall peace talks by first negotiating a freeze on Israeli settlements and security improvements by Palestinians.

To that end, former Sen. George Mitchell, Obama's Middle East envoy, in June laid out a series of what he called "meaningful steps" that Israelis and Palestinians must take before resuming peace talks. He said at the time that "our focus right now is to create the context for the resumption and early conclusion of meaningful negotiations."

Obama and Secretary of State Hillary Clinton also have criticized the settlement expansion in unusually tough terms, leading to tension in the generally close U.S.-Israel relationship.

But U.S. officials familiar with Tuesday's meetings on the sidelines of the U.N. General Assembly said Obama has now made it clear he does not want to wait for resolution of those issues before resuming negotiations about creating two independent states.

"This phase really needs to come to an end," said one senior White House official who is deeply involved in the Middle East discussions. "It's important that we get on to the permanent status talks. You can't spend all your time trying to create that context."

Mitchell insisted Tuesday that U.S. goals have not changed. He said the president has always sought a resumption of peace talks that could resolve the dispute permanently.

But Mitchell avoided repeating the language he used earlier this summer about the need for Israel to halt settlement activity and for Palestinians to take responsibility for security concerns. Instead, he said the president made clear that no single issue should be seen as a prerequisite for talks.

"We are not identifying any issue as being a precondition nor an impediment to negotiation," Mitchell told reporters, adding later that "we do not believe in preconditions. We do not impose them and we urge others not to impose preconditions."

Deposed Honduran leader holed up in embassy

By Marcos Aleman
Associated Press writer

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras — Baton-wielding soldiers used tear gas and water cannons to chase away thousands who demonstrated outside the Brazilian Embassy on Tuesday, leaving deposed President Manuel Zelaya and 70 friends and relatives trapped inside without water, electricity or phones.

"We know we are in danger," Zelaya said during interviews with various media outlets. "We are ready to risk everything, to sacrifice."

Heavily armed soldiers stood guard on neighboring rooftops and helicopters buzzed overhead.

Zelaya, forced out of his country at gunpoint on June 28, triumphantly popped up in the capital Monday, telling captivated supporters that after three months of international exile and a secretive 15-hour cross-country journey, he was ready to lead again.

Interim President Roberto Micheletti's response was terse: Initially he said Zelaya was lying about being back. Then after Zelaya appeared on national television, Micheletti pressed Brazil to hand him over under a warrant issued by the Supreme Court charging treason and abuse of authority.

Some officials suggested even Brazil's embassy would be no haven for the ousted leader.

"The inviolability of a diplomatic mission does not imply the protection of delinquents or fugitives from justice," said Micheletti's foreign ministry adviser, Mario Fortinthe.

Police and soldiers set up a ring of security in a three-mile (five-kilometer) perimeter around the embassy and could be seen searching in some areas. The government said in a broadcast statement that security forces "have orders to detain those people getting together in neighborhoods with the purpose of causing uneasiness to the rest of the population."

Security Ministry spokesman Orlin Cerrato told The Associated Press that two policemen were beaten and 174 people were being held on charges of disorderly conduct and vandalism. A doctor interviewed by Radio Globo said 18 people had been treated at the public hospital for injuries.

A 26-hour curfew imposed Monday afternoon closed businesses and schools, leaving the capital's streets nearly deserted. All the nation's international airports and border posts were closed and roadblocks set up to keep Zelaya supporters from massing for protests.

Tuesday evening the government announced the curfew was being extended 12 more hours, until 6 a.m. Wednesday.

Micheletti, who has promised to step down after a November presidential election that was scheduled before Zelaya's ouster, repeated his insistence that there had never been a coup — just a "constitutional succession" ordered by the courts and approved by Congress.

"Coups do not allow freedom of assembly," he wrote in a column published Tuesday in the Washington Post. "They do not guarantee freedom of the press, much less a respect for human rights. In Honduras, these freedoms remain intact and vibrant."

Al-Qaida predicts Obama's fall by Muslim nation

CAIRO (AP) — Al-Qaida on Tuesday released a new 106-minute long video predicting President Obama's downfall at the hands of the Muslim world.

The Arabic-language video, entitled "The West and the Dark Tunnel," is part of series of messages by the organization marking the eighth anniversary of the Sept. 11 attacks. Bin Laden released a short message of his own on Sept. 14.

Like similar long messages on previous anniversaries, it featured testimony from several leading al-Qaida figures intercut with news footage from the past year.

As in the past, al-Qaida attempted to conflate Obama with his predecessor, George W. Bush, who was widely disliked by Muslims for his invasions of Afghanistan and Iraq.

Many analysts believe that al-Qaida has been alarmed by Obama's comparative popularity in the Middle East, especially following his landmark speech to the Muslim world in Cairo in June.

"America has come in a new, hypocritical face. Smiling at us, but stabbing us with the same dagger that Bush used," said Al-Qaida No. 2 Ayman al-Zawahiri in the message.

"God willing, your end will be at the hands of the Muslim nation, so that the world and history will be free of your crimes and lies," he said addressing Obama at the end of the two-part video.

The message also featured several appearances of Adam Gadahn, also known as Azzam al-Amriki, an American who grew up in southern California, converted to Islam and joined al-Qaida. He was charged with treason in 2006 and there is a $1 million reward for information leading to his arrest or conviction.

Gadahn's remarks celebrating the defeat of Bush and ridiculing Obama suggest the video was made in late August or early September.

Olga Theresa Dalpiaz

RUPERT — Olga Theresa Dalpiaz, 85, of Rupert, passed away Sunday, Sept. 20, 2009, at Countryside Care and Rehab in Rupert. Olga was born July 5, 1924, to Angelo and Olivia Anselmi Moncher in Superior, Wyo. She attended Lincoln School, a small school house north of Paul, and graduated from Paul High School. She received her teaching degree from Albion Normal College. She taught for two years in Hazelton and then the next 33 years for the Minidoka County School District. On Nov. 18, 1950, she married Chet Dalpiaz. While she had no children of her own, Olga helped guide and influence many through her love for her students and lifetime friendships. She is survived by one brother, Art Moncher of Paul; and one nephew, Larry (Kandy) Moncher of Paul. She was preceded in death by her husband, Chet. A funeral mass will be celebrated at 11 a.m. Thursday, Sept. 24, at the St. Nicholas Catholic Church, 802 F St. in Rupert, with Father Justin Brady as celebrant. Burial will follow at the Rupert Cemetery. The rosary will be recited at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 23, at Hansen Mortuary, 710 Sixth St. in Rupert, with viewing for family and friends from 6 to 7 p.m. and one hour prior to the service Thursday at the church (www.hansen-mortuary.com). The family would like to give a special thank you to the nurses who cared for Olga.

Genevieve Humphries

BOISE — Genevieve Humphries, 88, of Boise, went to her heavenly home Sunday, Sept. 20, 2009. She was born in Rupert on Oct. 26, 1920, a daughter of James Elbert and Genevieve Little Humphries, the eldest in a family of five children, three girls and two boys. When she was 12, her family moved to Emmett, where she graduated from high school. Genevieve was an active member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, serving in Sunday school, Relief Society, in the Extraction Program and as an Ordinance Worker in the Boise, Idaho Temple, a service she dearly loved. She was a member of "Daughters of Utah Pioneers" and was very proud of her pioneer heritage. She made her home in Boise many years ago and never had a desire to live anywhere other than in beautiful Idaho. She is preceded in death by her mother and father, two sisters and one brother.

She is survived by one brother, Elbert and sister-in-law, Cathy Humphries of Horseshoe Bend; three nieces; five nephews; and several great-nieces and nephews. The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, Sept. 26, at the LDS Chapel, 11918 W. Ustick Road in Boise. Viewings will be held at the church from 6 to 8 p.m. Friday, Sept. 25, and from 10 to 10:45 a.m. Saturday prior to the service. Interment will be held at 11 a.m. Monday, Sept. 28, at the Rupert Cemetery. Genevieve's family thanks her many friends who have stood by her with visits and encouragement over the years and the doctors and nurses at St. Luke's who cared for her over the past months. A special thank you to Spring Creek Manor in Eagle and Bette Newborn and staff, and St. Luke's Hospice for looking over her with compassion and love (www.relyeafuneral-chapel.com).

Phyllis J. Stewart

Phyllis J. Stewart, born April 12, 1938, in Seymour, Mo., lost her six-month battle with cancer and heart failure on Thursday, Sept. 17, 2009. She was 71. The daughter of Calvin and Marjorie Dudley moved to Twin Falls with her family at the age of 6. She graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1956, then moved on to California, then Washington state. A retired bookkeeper, Phyllis loved camping, reading, crocheting, and she was extremely involved in the family's auto racing. Phyllis is survived by her husband, Gordon; daughters, Jo Rhodes, Barbara and Karel Schloe; and son, Gaylon of Washington; her sisters, Louise Johns and Mary Messner; and a brother, Ron Dudley of Twin Falls. She had five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Visitation will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 29, at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home, 2551 Kimberly Road in Twin Falls. A graveside service will be at 11 a.m. Wednesday, Sept. 30, at the Twin Falls Cemetery. Arrangements are under the direction of Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home of Twin Falls.

L. Virginia HeavyRunner Valle

JEROME — L. Virginia Heavy-Runner Valle, 77, of Jerome, passed away peacefully at her daughter's home in Jerome on Saturday, Sept. 19, 2009, surrounded by family. Virginia was born Sept. 5, 1932, on the Blackfoot Reservation in Browning, Mont., to Jack and Irene HeavyRunner. She married Celestino Valle at age 15, and they lived in several places throughout the Northwest. They later ended their relationship and Virginia settled in the Caldwell area, where she raised six children. In 1982, she moved to Twin Falls, where she worked at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center for 13 years until retiring. To fill her free time, she worked at the College of Southern Idaho for six years until her health began failing. She then moved to Jerome to be closer to family. Virginia enjoyed sewing, shopping and spending time with her family. She was a member of St. Jerome's Catholic Church. Virginia is survived by her children, Pauline Anderson, Melvin Valle, Tina Valle, Rolando (Joy) Valle, Janet (Mario) Ocaranza and Jennifer Myers. She is also survived by 19 grandchildren, 22 great-grandchildren, numerous nieces and nephews and many friends. She was preceded in death by her parents, two sisters, eight brothers, one daughter, one son and one granddaughter. A vigil and rosary will be held at 7 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 24, at St. Jerome's Catholic Church, 216 Second Ave. E. in Jerome. A memorial funeral Mass will be conducted at 10 a.m. Friday, Sept. 25, also at St. Jerome's Catholic Church, with Father Ron Wekerle presiding. Interment will follow in the Jerome Cemetery. Arrangements are under the care of Farnsworth Mortuary of Jerome.

Mary Mae Debban

Mary Mae Debban, of Twin Falls, passed away Friday, Sept. 18, 2009, at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls. Mary was born in Mayetta, Kan., on April 23, 1919, to Clarence and Carrie (Gibson) Sharrai. She moved out to Idaho as a teenager and worked in a cannery in Payette. They moved to the Fairfield area, residing on Furgrove Ranch until Glenn was old enough for school. They moved to Sand Springs Ranch in Wendell, where they lived until 1954. The family then moved to Buhl for a short time, the Filer area for about four years and then to Twin Falls.

Mary was married to Burdette R. Debban on May 23, 1937, in Payette. The couple had three children, Glenn, Carrie and William Debban. She worked beside her husband for many years farming and ranching and raising their children. She was employed many years at the Rogerson Hotel. After Pete passed away, she went to work at Bald Mountain Resort. Mary enjoyed hunting and was known to be a "good shot" with a rifle. In her younger years, she practiced by shooting rattlesnakes that had come around while she was hanging clothes on a line at her home in Furgrove Ranch. She loved to grow a garden and can foods and also enjoyed embroidering and fishing. One of Mary's favorite pastimes at Valley Vista was to play the game "nickels" with her friends. Mary was a devoted Christian with a close personal relationship with God. She was a special lady who was never heard to say a bad word about anyone. She saw the good in everyone and everything. She is survived by one daughter, Carrie Debban Campeau of Twin Falls; her son, William C. Debban, also of Twin Falls; and her brother, Larry Sharrai of Orfino. She was also survived by seven grandchildren, 12 great-grandchildren, and three great-great-grandchildren. She was preceded in death by her parents; her spouse, Burdette (Pete) Debban; two brothers, Oscar Sharrai and Albert Sharrai; two sisters, Elsie Thomas and Eula Egbert; one son, Glenn Debban; and one grandson, Russell Campeau. A memorial service will be held in Mary's honor at 11 a.m. Saturday, Sept. 26, at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home, 2551 Kimberly Road in Twin Falls.

Elton D. 'Pete' Ford

Elton D. "Pete" Ford went to his heavenly home on Saturday, Sept. 19, 2009. Pete was born in Canute, Okla., on June 18, 1919. The Ford family moved to California during the dust bowl days of the Great Depression. There he met and married his pretty blue-eyed blonde sweetheart, Marie. During World War II, Pete served as a Navy Machinist Mate stationed in the Solomon Islands. They have two children, one son, Daryl Ford of Sagle, and a daughter, Karen Barnes of Eagle. Pete and his brother Orville "Buck" Ford drew a farm on the Hunt Project north of Eden. He was a true Idaho pioneer. Along with the help of his family, they cleared the land of sagebrush and rock to farm the land until 1962. They sold the farm and moved to Twin Falls, where Pete managed the Filer Elevator. After the elevator closed down in 1966, Pete and Marie moved to Rupert where Pete managed the Chester B. Brown Bean Company and later the Kelly Bean Company. After retiring in 1984, Pete got his Realtors license and sold real estate. Pete served as a deacon of the First Baptist Church in Burley. He was active in the Lion's Club and served as the president of the Chamber of Commerce in Rupert one year. Pete was an avid rock hounder and loved to show off his collection of stones that he had polished and bols that he made. Mr. Ford is preceded in death by his mother, Tennie Angeline Ford; and his father, Jesse Lee Ford; four brothers; three sisters; and one grandson. They will all have a glorious reunion in heaven. The funeral will be held 11 a.m. Friday, Sept. 25, at Hansen Mortuary Rupert Chapel, 710 Sixth St., with Dennis Stoneman officiating. Burial will follow at the Rupert Cemetery. A viewing for family and friends will be from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 24, and one hour prior to the funeral Friday at the mortuary (www.hansen-mortuary.com).

Darcus Lucille Miller

JEROME — Darcus Lucille Miller, 88, of Jerome, died Saturday, Sept. 19, 2009, at River Ridge Care Center in Twin Falls. She was born Sept. 3, 1921, at Berryville, Ark., the daughter of George and Martha Hill Bean. Darcus was reared and educated in Berryville and moved to Jerome in 1938. It was here she met Fredrick Miller, whom she married on Sept. 29, 1940. Following their marriage, they resided in Hansen for two years before moving to Bremerton, Wash., where Fred worked in the shipyards during the war. After the war, Fred and Darcus returned to Jerome. As a housewife and homemaker, Darcus loved her garden, canning, baking and taking care of her family and home. She was also very active in the PTA program while her children were in school. Survivors include her children, Barbara (Bill) Ogden of Jerome, Donna (Raymond) Braun of Twin Falls, Linda (James) Abbott of Umatilla, Ore., and Evelyn (Larry) Mull of Boise. Also surviving are two sisters, Mary Carmen of Tacoma, Wash., and Georgia Blunt of Jerome; as well as six grandchildren and 18 great-grandchildren. She was preceded in death by her husband in 1998, four brothers, three sisters, two grandchildren and one great-great-grandchild. A graveside service for Darcus Miller will be conducted at 10:30 a.m. Thursday, Sept. 24, at the Jerome Cemetery. Friends may call between 6 and 8 p.m. Wednesday, Sept. 23, at the Hove-Robertson Funeral Chapel in Jerome.

Herbert H. Netz

DRAPER, Utah — Herbert H. Netz passed away Friday, Sept. 18, 2009, in Draper, Utah. He was born May 28, 1922, in Aberdeen, to Edward A. and Mary Netz. He grew up in Jerome, where he met his wife of 66 years, Velma Janice Wahl. He managed and operated the family farm until 1950, then moved to Hawthorne, Nev., to work at the Hawthorne Army Naval Ammunition Depot. He retired from there in 1979. He moved to Riverton, Utah, with his wife in 2003. He is survived by his wife, Janice; daughter, Carol Constantino; son-in-law, Ben; grandchildren, Diane, David, Don, Melissa and Ricky; 12 great-grandchildren; one great-great-grandson, Cash, and one due in December; sister, Esther; and brothers, Arthur, Lawrence and Earl. He was preceded in death by a daughter, Velta (Snookie) Haworth; sisters, Edith, Alice and Ruth; and brother, Raymond. Herbert was a farmer at heart, and we are sure he will be farming again in paradise. We'll miss you very much.

Simons vs. Simons: A first for longtime coach today

Ed Simons Jr. and Brett Favre have something in common. That's right, both are 71 years old. OK, so Favre is only 39. But he and Simons do share a penchant for unretiring, although Simons' latest about-face came under unique circumstances.

As Simons put it, "I didn't mean to unretire."

Mike Christensen

Of course, if he hadn't, he wouldn't be experiencing a career first this afternoon.

Today, Simons will lead the first-year Magic Valley Christian football team against North Valley Academy of Gooding in a 3 p.m. junior varsity contest at Jerome Middle School. The game represents the first time Simons has ever coached against his son, Ed Simons III, who is an assistant for North Valley.

"I don't know how it happened, but somehow we ended up on opposite sides of the field," said the elder Simons.

Last November, Simons Jr., ended a high school coaching career that began in Washington in 1970 and concluded with two multi-season runs at Dietrich High School. This fall, he agreed to spend three weeks helping the new coaches at MVC get their program off the ground. But when the other coaches bailed just after the season began, Simons got a phone call.

With that, his plans for retirement, including several out-of-state trips, were put on hold.

"If there's a group of young men that want to play football, it'd be selfish of me not to help them," said Simons Jr., who added it would've been "almost sacrilegious" to turn down MVC.

Simons III was a three-year starter for his father at Washington's Sedro-Woolley High. He went on to play collegiately in North Dakota and spent his own coaching career there before leading the JV squad at Idaho's Priest River High last year.

Simons III said it will be "a little nerve-racking" to coach against his father.

"But I think it's going to be fun," he added.

For the Simons family, football and fun are synonymous.

"We've been involved in football forever," said Audrey Simons, who will be in the stands today when her husband and son go head-to-head.

CSI tops poll for second straight week

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

After an inexplicable collapse in a five-set loss against North Idaho College on Saturday, it looked like the College of Southern Idaho volleyball team had lost its grip on the nation's No. 1 ranking.

The rest of the weekend showed pollsters enough to give the Golden Eagles a mulligan.

Tuesday began CSI's second week atop the NJCAA Division I Volleyball Poll, as the Golden Eagles stayed put despite the defeat.

CSI head coach Heidi Cartisser said the team's season-long body of work made it virtually impossible for poll voters to punish the Golden Eagles for just their second loss of "The more and more I thought about it, how could (North Idaho) jump ahead of us? It gave me a little more faith that (pollsters) were really evaluating it and that they saw the value in that."

— CSI head coach Heidi Cartisser, on the fact that North Idaho beat CSI in five sets, but then lost to No. 6 Salt Lake City Community College which CSI beat over the weekend at the Starr Corporation Invitational the season against 16 wins.

"Even though (North Idaho) beat us, it took five (sets) to beat us and they also lost to No. 6 (Salt Lake)," Cartisser said. "It just made sense to me. The more and more I thought about it, how could they jump ahead of us? It gave me a little more faith that (pollsters) were really evaluating it and that they saw the value in that."

BRUIN RALLY

Twin Falls defenders Allie Johnson (9) and Rebecca Hoff (6) go up for a block against Jerome's Stephanie Bingham (3) on Tuesday night during their match.

Twin Falls takes win over Jerome in 4 sets

By Diane Philbin
Times-News writer

JEROME — The Jerome Tigers came out smoking in the first set of their Great Basin Conference home opener against the Twin Falls Bruins, winning 27-25. But Twin Falls answered back by winning the next three sets 25-21, 25-14, 25-17 behind 20 kills and nine blocks from junior Cheltzie Williams.

"We just lost the intensity after the first game," said first-year Jerome coach Hannah Clark. "We needed to keep fired up."

Neither team dominated the first or second sets. The third set was the key to the match as the Bruins started to put some runs together and took that momentum into the fourth set.

"I'm happy with our play, but I know we can get better," said Williams. "We have a lot of potential."

Twin Falls sophomore setter Allie Johnson recorded a double-double with 34 assists and 11 digs. Senior Ariel Medina was also close to a double-double with nine kills and 12 digs and Josie Jordan added seven kills and 12 digs. Junior libero Mallory Jund finished with 27 digs and seven service aces.

"We are pushing the kids and even though we have some ups and downs, they are buying into it," said Twin Falls coach B.J. Price.

"We are closer to home and are competing with different teams"

— Twin Falls coach B.J. Price

"Each of the kids does something good and we're just trying to find us. When we finally do it will be fun and we should be pretty good."

"Josie Jordan really picked it up tonight. She is learning a new position with new blocking and defenses. But she is listening and getting more consistent."

Setter Melissa Marsing

led Jerome's defense with 27 digs and also dished out 20 assists. Senior Stephanie Bingham had a team-high eight kills followed by Carrie Thibault with seven kills and 17 digs. Chayna Jones registered 16 digs.

"We just need to clean it up and hustle. The girls are working hard and are sticking with it," said Clark.

Both coaches feel the strength of the new conference will pay dividends.

"We are closer to home and are competing with different teams," said Price. Jerome (2-6, 1-2) hosts Wood River and Twin Falls hosts Kimberly on Thursday.

Olympics: Obama at the center of another election

By Nancy Armour
Associated Press writer

CHICAGO — The crowd at President Obama's victory rally stretched from one end of Grant Park to the other, spilling onto nearby sidewalks and streets. From Oprah Winfrey to blue-collar workers, downtown pulsed with elation and electricity.

Almost a year after he won the presidential election, Obama is at the center of another potentially transformative vote — one that could change his old neighborhood forever.

Chicago's bid for the 2016 Olympics doesn't have a gleaming architectural masterpiece like the Bird's Nest in Beijing. Its maps showing how very close athletes will be to their venues are impressive, but not exactly sexy.

What Chicago does have is Obama, a charismatic and well-regarded figure internationally whose house (his permanent one, not the one where he currently lives) is a short walk from the planned Olympic stadium.

Obama is still deciding whether to travel to Denmark ahead of the International Olympic Committee's Oct. 2 vote to award the 2016 Games. In the meantime, he's working the phones and sending letters to IOC members in support of his adopted hometown. He's also sending his wife, Michelle, one of the few people to rival her husband's popularity, to Copenhagen along with top adviser and fellow Chicagoan Valerie Jarrett.

But it's the possibility of Obama's presence that looms largest over the all-important vote.

"He's a fabulous ambassador for the United States and his own city," said Dick Pound, a longtime IOC

Ex-N.Y. Giant Burress gets two years in gun case

By Karen Matthews
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Former Super Bowl hero Plaxico Burress apologized to his family and tearfully kissed his pregnant wife and young son goodbye Tuesday before he was led away to prison to begin serving a two-year sentence on a weapons charge.

Burress, at the time a star receiver with the New York Giants, was at the Latin Quarter nightclub in Manhattan last November when a gun tucked into his waistband slipped down his leg and fired, wounding him in the thigh.

Burress told Judge Michael Melkonian before sentencing: "I want to apologize to my family." They did not speak to reporters as they left the courthouse.

With time off for good behavior, Burress likely will serve 20 months. He could be released from prison as early as the spring of 2011 and will be monitored an additional two years after he is freed.

Michael Strahan, a former Giants teammate who is now an NFL television analyst, used his Twitter account to support Burress: "My Thoughts and Prayers are

Lopez homer lifts M's

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Jose Lopez hit a tiebreaking home run in the eighth inning and Seattle beat Tampa Bay 4-3 on Tuesday night, eliminating the defending AL champions from the postseason.

Ichiro Suzuki had a two-run homer for the Mariners, who ended Tampa Bay's four-game winning streak.

Lopez gave Seattle a 4-3 lead with his 25th homer off Dan Wheeler (4-5) with one out in the eighth. Miguel Batista (7-4) struck out three over two perfect innings before Mark Lowe pitched the ninth for his third save.

TIGERS 3, INDIANS 1

CLEVELAND — Edwin Jackson pitched seven shutout innings and remained unbeaten against Cleveland this season as first-place Detroit remained 2½ games in front of Minnesota in the AL Central.

TWINS 8, WHITE SOX 6

CHICAGO — Michael Cuddyer hit a go-ahead home run in the sixth and Matt Tolbert homered in the same inning for Minnesota.

The Twins won for the eighth time in nine games despite blowing two leads and getting a dismal start from Jeff Manship.

ROYALS 5, RED SOX 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Zack Greinke held Boston to two hits in six scoreless innings.

Greinke (15-8) is 3-0 with an 0.26 ERA in his past five starts, allowing 18 hits and one earned run in 35 innings. With the stretch, Greinke has lowered his major league-leading ERA to 2.08. He became the first Royal to win at least 15 games in a season since Paul Byrd won 17 in 2002.

BLUE JAYS 6, ORIOLES 5, 11 INNINGS

TORONTO — Aaron Hill doubled home the winning run in the bottom of the 11th inning and Toronto handed Baltimore its sixth straight loss.

NATIONAL LEAGUE CARDINALS 11, ASTROS 2

HOUSTON — Joel Pineiro allowed five hits in seven innings, Yadier Molina hit a two-run homer and St. Louis inched closer to the NL Central title with an 11-2 win over Houston on Tuesday night.

Colby Rasmus added a solo shot as the Cardinals reduced their magic number for clinching the division to two. Pineiro (15-11) struck out four to win for the first time in four starts.

DODGERS 14, NATIONALS 2

WASHINGTON — Rafael

Furcal drove in four runs and Hiroki Kuroda allowed four hits over six innings for Los Angeles.

The Dodgers' sixth win in seven games lowered their magic number for clinching a postseason berth to three. Los Angeles would win its second straight NL West title for the first time since 1977-78 with any combination of Dodger wins and Colorado losses totaling seven.

PHILLIES 9, MARLINS 3, GAME 1 MARLINS 3, PHILLIES 0, GAME 2

MIAMI — Anibal Sanchez allowed two hits in eight innings to beat Philadelphia for the first time in five career decisions and give Florida a doubleheader split.

Joe Blanton gave up two hits in seven shutout innings to outpitch Marlins ace Josh Johnson in the first game win that reduced to five the Phillies' magic number for clinching the NL East.

Sanchez (3-7) struck out seven and walked two in his longest outing since Sept. 16, 2006. The right-hander, spent two stints on the disabled list this year with shoulder sprains.

BRAVES 3, METS 1

NEW YORK — Jair Jurrjens dominated New York again and Yunel Escobar hit a two-run single for Atlanta.

The surging Braves kept up their late playoff charge, though their chances for a postseason spot are slim. Atlanta began the day five games behind Colorado for the NL wild card and eight behind first-place Philadelphia in the NL East.

CUBS 7, BREWERS 2

MILWAUKEE — Derrek Lee hit his 35th homer and drove in two runs for a career-high 109 total in leading Chicago.

The Cubs won their third straight since suspending Milton Bradley for the season and Lee has continued his sizzling September. He's hitting .408 for the month and is 6 of 8 in this series with two home runs and six RBIs.

REDS 10, PIRATES 4

PITTSBURGH — Scott Rolen had three hits and three RBIs, Joey Votto had three doubles and Cincinnati's win meant Pittsburgh clinched its third straight last-place finish in the NL Central.

Pittsburgh (56-93) lost for the 21st time in 24 games, the Pirates' worst stretch since they lost 24 of 28 from July 13-Aug. 15, 1985.

ROCKIES 11, PADRES 10

DENVER — Brad Hawpe homered the Colorado Rockies beat San Diego 11-10 on Tuesday despite a rare rough outing from lefty Jorge De La Rosa and a ninth-inning rally by the Padres.

Hagerman sweeps VB tri-match in Declo

Times-News

DECLO — Led by Kaitlyn Nebeker's 13 combined kills, the Hagerman Pirates volleyball team beat Declo and Oakley at a tri-match Tuesday at Declo High School.

Kyla Coats had seven assists as the Pirates beat Declo 25-8, 25-16.

Whitney Kress earned 12 digs in Hagerman's win over Oakley, 25-16, 25-9.

The victories came at a key time for Hagerman (7-5), which lost senior middle blocker Amanda Regnier to a knee injury last week. It doesn't appear to be a season-ending injury, but she could miss a few weeks.

"Those two wins definitely boosted our spirits," said Hagerman coach Carrie Chizum. "We wanted to see how we looked without (Regnier), and we kind of came through. I thought we handled it well and had a little fun when we played. That is what we needed."

Hagerman hosts Lighthouse Christian and Shoshone on Thursday.

Declo (6-9) earned a split on the night by defeating Oakley 25-11, 25-23. The Hornets will play at Filer on Thursday.

Oakley (2-9), was led by Sabrina Wybenga (12 kills, five blocks) and Jordan Lierman (seven kills). The Hornets travel to Raft River for a tri-match including Valley Thursday.

MINICO 3, WOOD RIVER 0

After battling through a tight first game, the Minico volleyball team swept Wood River Thursday night to remain unbeaten in Great Basin Conference play.

Minico setter Hayli Worthington evenly distributed the offense as the Spartans won 27-25, 25-14, 25-21.

Chelsea Hepworth recorded 10 kills and five blocks, while Breonna Phillips added seven kills and four blocks. Brecka Fetzer and Kendra Bailey each had six kills. Bailey also totaled 11 digs and Michael Shea O'Donnell had eight digs.

Minico (8-1, 6-0) travels to league foe Twin Falls on Tuesday.

BUHL 3, GLENNS FERRY 0

The Buhl volleyball team cruised to a 25-10, 25-14, 25-18 home win over Glens Ferry on Tuesday. Katherine Hunter had nine kills and seven digs for the Indians, while Liz Comer added eight kills and one block. Kelli Gabardi totaled 17 assists, while Courtney Azevedo chipped in seven digs and Cassidee Kippes added seven assists.

Buhl (8-2, 3-1 Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference) joins Declo in a tri-match at Filer on Thursday.

FILER 3, WENDELL 0

The Filer volleyball team raced to a 25-6, 25-8, 25-17 road win at Wendell on Tuesday.

Krista Lewis had nine kills, while McKenzie Jasper added eight. Danielle Schaal had six kills and used her jump serve to earn eight aces and 20 service points. Charmaine Weatherly had 17 assists, and Leah Schaal added 10 for the Wildcats, who are 8-2 overall and 2-2 in SCIC play.

Wendell hosts Valley today, while Filer is home against Declo and Buhl on Thursday.

KIMBERLY 3, GOODING 0

The Kimberly volleyball team defeated Gooding 25-9, 26-24, 25-17 Tuesday in Gooding.

The Bulldogs trailed by nearly 10 points during the second game but mounted a comeback for the narrow victory.

Kimberly will play the Twin Falls Bruins on the road Thursday. Gooding will play in a tri-match against Burley and Canyon Ridge today in Twin Falls.

CAMAS COUNTY 3, RICHFIELD 0

Katelyn Peterson's 25 kills and fives aces paced the Camas County volleyball team to a 25-17, 25-10, 25-7 win at Richfield on Tuesday. Sunnie Vouch added eight kills and five aces, while Erica Phantharasan had 36 assists.

The Musers travel to Carey on Thursday.

MAGIC VALLEY CHRISTIAN 3, MURTAUGH 0

Magic Valley Christian won its fourth consecutive volleyball match, sweeping Murtaugh 25-13, 25-13, 25-17. Kristina Reitsma had nine kills and two blocks, while Cassie Bishoff tallied 20 digs, 11 service points and five assists.

MVC visits Richfield on Thursday. Murtaugh travels to the Community School next Tuesday.

RAFT RIVER SWEEPS SHOSHONE TRI-MATCH

The Raft River Trojans asserted area Class 1A Division I dominance with a 25-21, 25-21 win at Shoshone on Tuesday. They followed that up with a 28-26, 25-22 win over Mackay.

Whitney Holtman had 23 kills and eight blocks in the tri to pace Raft River (10-2). Shoshone beat Mackay 22-25, 25-11, 25-10 in the third match. Indians coach Larry Messick credited the play of Taylor Astle, Jennica Kerner and Jessica Chitwood as integral to the team's success.

Shoshone (13-1) is at Challis for a tri-match with Salmon on Thursday. Raft River hosts Oakley and Valley on Thursday.

DIETRICH 3, CAREY 0

Dietrich cruised to a 25-22, 25-16, 25-23 home win over Northside Conference rival Carey on Tuesday.

Moriah Dill had 13 kills for the Blue Devils (10-3, 6-1 Northside), while Yoshira McDaniel had 10. Nakia Norman added seven to go with five aces, and Jessica Perron had six kills and 29 assists.

Dietrich hosts Camas County on Tuesday.

DECLO 4, BLISS 2

Lizzie Southwick hit for a hat trick as Declo scored its first win since 2007 with a 4-2 victory over visiting Bliss on Tuesday.

Monica Gillette added the fourth goal for the Hornets (1-7-3, 1-6-1 HDSC, 4 pts.), who led 4-1 before Bliss scored a late consolation goal.

"The girls played awesome," said Declo coach Alyssa Terry. "They didn't win any last year either so the girls are really stoked."

Declo is at Wendell on Tuesday. Bliss (2-5-1, 2-5-0, 6 pts.) hosts Filer on Thursday.

MINICO 3, CANYON RIDGE 1

Minico struck twice in the first three minutes en route to a 3-1 win over Canyon Ridge in Rupert on Tuesday.

Makenzie Haynes found the net less than a minute into the match, and Kaylee Legault tallied two minutes later for the Spartans (3-6-2, 2-3-1 Great Basin, 7 pts.). Michelle Keyes scored six minutes from the end to draw the Riverhawks (1-11-1, 1-5-0, 3 pts.) within one, but Madison Roemer scored from the penalty spot with two minutes left to restore Minico's two-goal cushion.

The Spartans are at Jerome on Monday. Canyon Ridge hosts Wood River on Thursday.

FILER 5, WENDELL 0

The Filer girls soccer team stayed unbeaten in High Desert Soccer Conference action with a 5-0 home win over Wendell on Tuesday. Candra Coelho scored two first-half goals, both on assists by Alyssa Lekkerkerk. Lekkerkerk added a goal and an assist in the second half, aiding on a score by Brooke Wissenbach. Amber Humphrey also scored for the Wildcats (9-2-2, 7-0-1 High Desert Soccer Conference, 22 pts.).

"The girls took care of business," said Filer coach Shane Hild.

Filer travels to Bliss on Thursday. Wendell hosts Declo on Monday.

Boys soccer

CANYON RIDGE 9, MINICO 0

Canyon Ridge blitzed Minico 9-0 in Twin Falls on Tuesday.

Dunia Emmanuel, Inicce Alejo and Suren Thapa all scored twice for the Riverhawks (2-6-3, 1-3-2 Great Basin, 5 pts.), while Lane Barker, Artem Petiosyan and Ricardo Lopez all found the net once.

"They came out ready to play, everyone was looking to attack — even the defense," said Canyon Ridge coach Brian Gillenwater. "We played really well through the midfield, and the forwards came and combined with the midfield well. The team was just firing on all cylinders."

"With a new program it takes some time for everyone to get used to each other, but they're starting to figure it out."

Canyon Ridge, which recorded its first clean sheet in the victory, is at Wood River on Thursday. Minico (1-7-2, 1-4-1, 4 pts.) hosts Jerome on Monday.

BLISS 6, DECLO 2

Louis Cortez scored five times, giving him 28 goals on the year, as Bliss beat Declo 6-2 in Declo on Tuesday.

Alex Cortez scored the sixth Bliss goal and assisted twice for the Bears (7-1-0, 6-1-0 HDSC, 18 pts.). Erik Henrickson and David Cuevas scored for Declo (1-8-1, 1-5-1, 4 pts.).

Declo is at Wendell on Monday. Bliss hosts Filer on Thursday.

WENDELL 6, FILER 1

Johnny Macias scored twice to lead Wendell to a 6-1 win at Filer on Tuesday.

Carlos Sarabia, Martin Diaz, Sascha Winkler and Lupe Alvarado also scored for the Trojans (4-3-2, 4-2-2 HDSC, 14 pts.).

Neal Paterson scored for Filer (0-10-2, 0-6-2, 2 pts.). Filer is at Bliss on Thursday. Wendell hosts Declo on Monday.

the loss to North Idaho at least weekend's Starr Corporation Invitational.

Blinn traded its No. 2 slot for North Idaho's No. 3 in the new poll, while Salt Lake remained at No. 6 and Frank Phillips slumped three spots to No. 20.

Father and son won't likely discuss the game much before or after the fact, but that doesn't mean the topic won't be broached.

"Whenever we talk, football doesn't seem to come up much," said Simons III. "We'll probably keep it that way. If football comes up, it's usually my mom that starts it."

Today it's Mom who will be cheering for both sides, in the first and possibly only matchup between two men she loves. As for a rematch in

Nos. 1 and 2 last week.

The winner will also get an early edge toward winning the SWAC and hosting rights for the region tournament.

"There's a lot more at stake now," Cartisser said. "We want to host (the Region 18 Tournament), and they want to host. We want to keep No. 1, and they want it for themselves. We'd like to show them what it feels like to be beaten on their home floor."

"It definitely is making for an intense game on Saturday, and I think it's great for the state of Idaho to have No. 1 and No. 2 going at it."

2010, Simons Jr. won't tip his hand either way. No need to close a door he's already reopened on three occasions.

"He has a hard time walking away from it," said Simons III. "He still enjoys doing it."

Monday's Late AL Boxes

Miami's schedule has been more 'make' than 'break'

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — The four-game stretch against ranked opponents to start Miami's season seemed like the only thing the Hurricanes heard about all summer long.

It was supposed to be too daunting.

Turns out, it's been a boon.

Lost amid all that how-will-Miami-fare buzz was this: The Hurricanes had 10 days to prepare for Georgia Tech after beating Florida State in the season-opener, and handled the Yellow Jackets with ease — so much ease that they vaulted to No. 9 in the AP Top 25 poll.

Now the 'Canes (2-0, 2-0 Atlantic Coast Conference) get extra prep time again between games, this time nine days to get ready for Saturday's visit to No. 11 Virginia Tech (2-1, 0-0).

And Miami is acknowledging the longer-than-usual gaps in the schedule have been a significant plus.

"It really has helped us," Miami quarterback Jacory Harris said. "It's given us more time to watch film. Sometimes when you watch film for the first time, you tend not to see a lot of things. You just scan through it and just look at basically the matchups and stuff like that. But when you go back through it again, you start seeing different things that show up and occur a lot."

Before Miami faced Georgia Tech last Thursday night, Yellow Jackets coach Paul Johnson — whose team had the conventional week between games — said the Hurricanes' added prep time "would be more of an advantage."

It looked as if he was right: Miami rolled past Georgia Tech 33-17, outgaining the Yellow Jackets 454-228.

Virginia Tech coach Frank Beamer seems to be of the same thinking as Johnson was.

"I don't think there's any question, it helps you," Beamer said. "When you've got a couple days extra for an opponent, it gives you extra time to look at your game plan and check it on the field, revise it a little bit if you need to. I don't think there's any question it's an advantage."

Only two other teams in the last 15 years — Notre Dame in 1999 and Central Florida in 2000 — started with four games against AP Top 25 teams. Notre Dame went 2-2, Central Florida 0-4. Miami is assured of at least matching the Irish, after topping then-No. 18 Florida State and then-No. 14 Georgia Tech to take the early lead in the ACC race.

That's not going to be enough to satisfy the 'Canes, whose next game after Virginia Tech is at home, on a regular week's rest, against No. 10 Oklahoma on Oct. 3.

It's all about the money at East Lake

ATLANTA (AP) — On an East Lake course that might require a canoe, Padraig Harrington is looking for a wheelbarrow.

The Irishman is not the first player to suggest putting the $10 million cash for winning the FedEx Cup on the 18th green to remind everyone what's at stake this week at the Tour Championship. He simply painted the most compelling picture.

"I do believe they should give out the cash on the 18th green," Harrington said. "Just sit it there, have a good look at it. We could take it in a wheelbarrow up to the clubhouse. Anything that falls out, it's the caddie's."

For the moment, that's what the FedEx Cup is all about — money.

The value of the trophy remains a work in progress. Does it reward the best year?

It did the inaugural season in 2007. Tiger Woods won five times before the playoffs began, skipped the opening playoff event and then turned the FedEx Cup into a coronation with a runner-up at the next tournament and victories in the last two.

That wasn't the case a year ago, when Harrington had a magical summer by winning consecutive majors and was voted player of the year by every golf organization. Yet because of a volatile points system, he didn't even make it to the Tour Championship. Vijay Singh got hot at the right time — August — won the first two playoff events and captured the FedEx Cup.

This year has it just about right — maybe.

member from Canada. "He's a transformational figure in the world today. The fact that he would be there and you could meet him and then he'd get up and say, 'I'm here to say the United States of America is behind these games,' it's a big difference."

Maybe all the difference. Rio de Janeiro is considered a slight favorite over Chicago, Madrid and Tokyo, with some IOC members enticed by the idea of taking the Olympics to South America for the first time. But the race is so tight the winner likely will be decided by only a couple of votes, and heads of state have been instrumental in recent decisions.

"I always believed that it's to our advantage to have the president there because he's so highly esteemed,"

Chicago 2016 chairman Patrick Ryan said. "But I also believe that most IOC members, before they go into the room to vote, know who they're going to vote for."

News on Tuesday that federal officials have issued security bulletins to police around the nation about terrorists' desire to attack stadiums, entertainment complexes and hotels is expected to have little, if any, impact. Security issues are hardly unique to the United States, and the Salt Lake City Games were staged less than six months after the Sept. 11 attacks.

Despite being the nation's third-largest city, Chicago was considered a longshot simply to win approval from the U.S. Olympic Committee to bid for the 2016 Games. It's not an international destination like Los Angeles, the other finalist in the U.S. race, and many overseas know little about it. Or if they do, it's straight out of "The Untouchables" or Upton Sinclair's "The Jungle."

But Chicago's organizers put together a team of Olympic veterans, using their knowledge and experience to create a plan that has few obvious flaws. And, at $4.8 billion, it carries the lowest price tag of any of the four cities.

Chicago's strength lies in its simplicity, a compact plan that keeps athletes close to their venues and won't saddle residents with pricey arenas that are of little use once the games are finished.

"I think this is potentially the best bid we've ever put together," said Stephanie Streeter, acting CEO of the USOC.

Burress

with my man Plaxico and his family today!!!"

Giants linebacker Antonio Pierce, who was with Burress the night of the incident, and former Giants linebacker Kawika Mitchell, now with the Buffalo Bills, re-tweeted the Strahan comment.

The Giants, through spokesman Pat Hanlon, said, "This has been a tragic, sad, disappointing situation from the beginning. Our concern has always been for Plax's welfare, and for his family, and that continues to be our overriding feeling."

Burress' big moment with the Giants came when he caught the winning touchdown over the previously undefeated New England Patriots in the final minute of the 2008 Super Bowl.

The Giants released Burress in April, but the 32-year-old told ESPN he hopes to resume his NFL career when he completes his sentence.

"When I get out, I'll be 33, not 43," Burress said in an interview broadcast in August. "I'll still be able to run and catch. I'll still have the God-given ability to snag footballs; that's what I love to do. Of course, I want to play again."

Gil Brandt, an analyst on

NFL Sirius Radio and the former head of player personnel for the Dallas Cowboys, said Burress won't be too old for a comeback after he's released.

Burress will be eligible if a team wants him, as the NFL already has announced his suspension will be lifted upon completion of his sentence.

Rex Ryan changing culture around Jets franchise

FLORHAM PARK, N.J. — The walls were way too bare for Rex Ryan's liking.

Shortly after being named coach of the New York Jets, Ryan strolled down the hallway leading to the team's locker room and decided it needed some sprucing up.

So, he hung up some history.

From No. 1 to No. 99, Ryan had the names of every player who has ever worn a Jets jersey placed on the wall along with their respective number. Joe Namath, Joe Klecko, Don Maynard and Curtis Martin are all there.

"It was just a pride thing," Ryan said. "It's a thing like, 'Hey this is your football team. This will always be your football team. Once you're a Jet, you're always a Jet. That should be a pride-ful thing.'"

Ryan grew up a Jets fan, rooting for the team during its only Super Bowl appearance in 1969 while his father, Buddy, was a defensive assistant. Now, here he is, coaching the squad he refers to as "Dad's team," and trying to establish an identity for a franchise that has been searching for one since Broadway Joe made good on his bold guarantee.

"I heard this a bunch when I took this job: 'Same old Jets,'" Ryan said. "It just gave you a little burr in the saddle. Our belief is going to be that we're going to win and we expect to win."

Talk about an attitude adjustment. Linebacker Bart Scott called it being "swaggerlicious."

Not since Bill Parcells took over in 1997 has there been so much hope — and hype — surrounding the arrival of a Jets coach.

The bland Al Groh certainly didn't excite anyone when he replaced Parcells in 2000, after Bill Belichick abruptly quit, of course. Herm Edwards was likable and occasionally created a headline — "You play to win the game!" — but he was undone by flaws in his coaching abilities. Eric Mangini was inexperienced, but was regarded as one of the league's top young defensive minds after learning under Belichick in New England. Ultimately, his stubborn approach and stoic sideline persona cost him his job after three seasons.

Owner Woody Johnson wanted a fiery personality, and he certainly got one in Ryan, a defensive mastermind with the gift of gab. So far, Ryan's big talk has matched the aggressive personality of his team on the field.

New York Jets head coach Rex Ryan has been changing the culture for a Jets franchise that was sorely in need of an identity.

PHOTOGRAPHERS SUE PATRIOTS' QB TOM BRADY

NEW YORK — Two photographers sued New England Patriots quarterback Tom Brady and supermodel Gisele Bündchen for $1 million Tuesday, saying they were shot at during a post-wedding party in Costa Rica.

The lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court in Manhattan alleged that the photographers and the Agence France-Presse news agency were damaged by the early April attack during a celebration at Bündchen's holiday home.

It said Brady and Bündchen negligently hired security for the April party, two months after their wedding, even though they had to know their activities were a press magnet.

AFP photographer Yuri Cortez and photographer Rolando Aviles of Costa Rican national daily newspaper AlDia say Bündchen's bodyguards narrowly missed their heads when the guards shot at their car after they refused to give up their cameras and memory cards.

CASSEL WILL CONTINUE TO START AT QB FOR CHIEFS

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Brodie Croyle has a much higher quarterback rating and a better completion percentage, but Matt Cassel has a bigger guaranteed contract. Guess who'll start for Kansas City on Sunday?

It will be Cassel facing the Eagles in Philadelphia, coach Todd Haley said Tuesday. But the rookie head coach also said he would not hesitate to make a switch if he decided Croyle gives the winless Chiefs a better chance.

He would really have the courage to bench someone his boss showered with millions of dollars and staked a big chunk of his reputation on?

NFL REMINDS PLAYERS ABOUT DRUG-TESTING PROGRAM

NFL players have been warned the league's drug-testing program is still in effect despite commissioner Roger Goodell's ruling to delay suspending several players who tested positive for a banned substance.

In a joint memo issued in the past two weeks by Goodell and NFL Players Association executive director DeMaurice Smith, players were reminded they will continue to be tested as in the past and "a positive test will generally result in a suspension."

The memo was obtained by The Associated Press on Tuesday. It was issued after a federal appeals court blocked the league from suspending two Vikings players for four games after they tested positive for a banned substance contained in the weight-loss supplement StarCaps.

COWBOYS, ARLINGTON TALK LIMITS ON SRO TICKETS

ARLINGTON, Texas — The Dallas Cowboys are discussing a limit on standing-room ticket sales after some tense moments with the biggest regular-season crowd in NFL history.

Team spokesman Brett Daniels said Tuesday that some people who bought the $29 Party Pass tickets were held back while authorities tried to manage crowd dispersal Sunday night at the new Cowboys Stadium.

The record crowd of 105,121 included about 30,000 people with no assigned seats. The Cowboys lost to the New York Giants 33-31 in the first regular-season game at the $1.15 billion stadium.

REDSKINS 'DIM WITS' TWEETER DISAPPEARS OFF TWITTER

ASHBURN, Va. — Now that he's apologized for calling fans "dim wits," Washington Redskins rookie Robert Henson is apparently done with Twitter.

Anyone clicking on Henson's Twitter account Tuesday got a message saying "Sorry, that page doesn't exist!"

On Sunday night, Henson fired off many tweets at fans who booed the Redskins during their 9-7 win over the St. Louis Rams. Henson called the fans "dim wits" and asked how people who "work 9 to 5 at McDonald's" could know what's best for the team.

Henson apologized Monday during a brief session with reporters.

Today's Feature - Write a Resume That Stays In Play

How to Write a Resume That Gets Interviews

By Wayne Rainey

Ask yourself, what do "The Lord of the Rings," "Catcher in the Rye" and your resume have in common?

If you consider them great works of fiction, then it's time to rethink your resume.

A resume isn't a list of exaggerations. It's not a hodgepodge of cut and pasted job descriptions printed out on nice paper. Nor is it a forum to advertise that you're 6 feet 2 inches tall, single, a non-smoker and willing to relocate.

Simply put, a resume is an advertisement that makes the reader act. And if your resume is well-written, the reader should want to interview you.

Get advice on how to create resumes that get interviews -- right from a recruiter himself.

Keep It Simple

Recruiters want resumes that are simple to understand, especially when it comes to the skills needed to perform the job and employment history.

Be sure your resume clearly communicates that you possess the knowledge and experience needed to perform the job in question. Use the job description to tailor your resume to the position. Try to avoid industry jargon and Dilbert-esque words such as "facilitated" or "value-added" when describing your skills and experiences.

Your resume should also include your dates of employment. The absence of dates makes recruiters scrutinize your employment history even more closely.

Features Versus Benefits

Your resume should show how you can benefit an employer -- not just list your features and skills.

Past performance is often an indicator of future performance. Explain how you made a past employer money, saved them money or improved a process or product. Think about instances where you went above and beyond the call of duty. Look at past performance reviews to refresh your memory. Employers want the best employees, and your resume should reflect your value.

Truth in Advertising

People say that it's the sizzle that sells the steak. That may be true but, when it comes to job searching, you have to have done what you claim on your resume. Many employers today take steps to ensure that you have the background you claim. They have a wide variety of background checking tools at their disposal. Background checks can include:

- reference checks.
- credit checks,

- criminal background checks,
- past employment verification,
- education verification and social security number traces to verify identity.

If you're dishonest in the hiring process, odds are that you'll be caught. Rather than waste the recruiter's time -- and your time -- be truthful on your resume. It's not only the right thing to do, but the smart thing.

It Takes Two

You can't create a strong resume alone. Everyone needs help.

Don't rely on automatic spelling and grammar checking programs. You need to find an editor you trust. If no one in your immediate circle of family or friends can help, try other resources. Yahoo! HotJobs offers valuable resume tips and advice.

Staff at your state's employment development office may be available to review your resume. Staffing agency recruiters may also volunteer to help you. And finally, you can even take advantage of a professional resume writing service.

Writing an effective resume requires practice and feedback. But once you get the basics down, interviews are sure to follow.

TIMES-NEWS Marketing and Innovation Director

Marketing Director sounded too "stodgy" - Innovation Director too "edgy". We need both - in a single person. If you're someone with the skill and discipline to slice & dice market segments and target audiences yet possess the imagination and intuition to envision current and future information needs of Magic Valley readers and advertisers, we'd like to talk with you.

Before we get to the "what", here's who we're looking for:
Someone with an innate sense of what local information people want to see in print and online today - and yet realizes that it will change - rapidly and frequently.
Someone who is a zealous reader and information junkie and knows what other local readers want - and are willing to pay to receive.
Someone who is a rabid consumer and who wants to help our area retailers, service providers and auto dealers to grow their business - preferably through advertising in the Times-News, www.magicvalley.com or a current or yet-to-be-created niche publication.

If it sounds as though past newspaper experience is not required you're right - but it's not necessarily a liability unless you're still firmly entrenched in preserving the status quo.

So what exactly is this position?
a Salesperson? NO! Although you'll share responsibility for expanding our audience, selling more newspapers and more advertising.
The local Social Networking Camp Counselor? Sort of, at least partially. We'll ask you in your initial interview to tell us (and show us) how you use new media and social networks and how you think we could use it.
a Researcher? Not explicitly; but you'll want to meet one-on-one and in groups with readers (and non-readers); advertisers (and non-advertisers) to determine their media needs, wants and desires.
a Storyteller? Quite a little bit, actually. We've been telling the stories of area residents for over 105 years; we need someone who'll help us tell our story in a vibrant, refreshing way.
our Audience Developer? Yes. Our product mix has evolved, but needs to do so more rapidly to better connect with today's readers.
a Connector? That's it! You'll connect advertisers with the information they need to make better marketing decisions; connect demographic groups with current (and future) products; In Short - connect the Times-News with the community.

If this sounds like more than a job - if it sounds like the perfect opportunity at the perfect time in your career - then we want to hear from you. It's possible that the successful candidate will not have a long track record of achievement so we'll settle for an impressive one.

The Times-News is a great place to work; we offer a solid compensation and benefit plan including medical, dental, vision and life insurance plus an employee stock purchase plan.

Application Deadline is Friday, October 1, 2009.

Woman's shocking discovery puts man in unmarked grave

Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: For 15 years I was a happily married homemaker with a wonderful husband. "Duncan" and I attended church together, frolicked through the fields, even exterminated rodents together. He was my best friend. It was bliss.

Last year I found out my father had had an affair with Duncan's mother the year I was born, which makes him my half-brother! The news was too much for my husband. He had a fatal heart attack not long after.

What should I put on his gravestone — "Loving Brother" or "Loving Husband"?

— GRIEVING IN MASSACHUSETTS
DEAR GRIEVING: Neither. How about "He was 'Everything' to me"? That should about cover it.

DEAR ABBY: I'm in a relationship with a man I met online who lives out of state. He has been to see me a dozen times over the last three years. We say we love each other and want to spend the rest of our lives together. But over the last 18 months I have realized we have NOTHING in common — and our views on life, policy and politics are completely opposite.

For three years we have talked every single day, mostly about how much we love each other. It's when we try to have a real conversation we start to disagree. He says we're entitled to our own opinions, and I agree, but I can't help but wonder what kind of future we could have together when we cannot discuss anything but how we feel about each other.

— SECOND THOUGHTS IN ANAHEIM

DEAR SECOND THOUGHTS: It's a shame you two can't spend some extended time together because the answer to your question would become evident. From where I sit, I think there would be conflict on a daily basis regardless of how much you "love" each other. I put the word love in quotes because love is something that grows from mutual respect, and I'm not sure how long you would remain mutually respectful in light of the fact your worldviews are completely different.

DEAR ABBY: My father died two years ago and asked that I administer my mother's finances. She has now burned through two-thirds of the savings he left her, and she refuses to accept any advice I have tried to give her about her spending.

I have told my mother repeatedly that I do not have the resources to take care of her when she runs out of money. I know she assumes that I will because she is my mother.

How do I deal with a parent who is narcissistic and out of touch with reality? I have told her I'll gladly hand over her finances to my brother, but she doesn't want him to get involved. I have asked him for advice, but he won't respond.

Do I just let her go through everything and struggle in the end, or stick to my guns? After all, it's her money and I can't refuse to make it available to her. Please advise.

— MOTHER'S KEEPER IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR MOTHER'S KEEPER: I suspect your brother is acting the way he is because he's miffed at not being asked to handle the finances to begin with, or he simply wants to stay out of it. But you cannot allow your mother to continue spending her inheritance at the rate she is. Consult the attorney who drafted your father's will and ask if there's a way to not only put the brakes on her, but also take some of the responsibility off your shoulders.

IF SEPTEMBER 23 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY:

Between now and November you may be obsessed by your ambitions, but you are smart enough to know that you will need to work very hard to make it to the top. Wait until January or February, when you have better judgment, to make life-altering decisions or to take on any additional responsibilities. Next May your social life may flourish and you could be more attractive than usual, but it is wise to be discriminating because some members of your fan club won't make suitable companions.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Pump yourself up. It's time to get yourself into the proper frame of mind to go out and tackle the tasks that come your way.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"For the imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth."
— Genesis 8:31

.....

We have all played with partners who, as defenders, think it clever to win a trick with the higher of touching honors, or who play high-low when they have an odd number, etc. They generally succeed only in confusing their poor, long-suffering partners. But at the Dyspeptics Club, East has stated that he has no worries about disconcerting his partner in this way, asking rhetorically how it would be possible to improve on the perfect job nature had done when it came to confusing West.

Look at today's hand to try to find a way for the defenders to persuade declarer to go down in his six-spade contract. West led the club queen and declarer won with dummy's ace, planning to cash the ace and king of diamonds and ruff a diamond with dummy's trump eight. With the queen falling in three rounds, there would have been no further problems. Declarer would be able to draw trumps and concede a heart to make his slam.

However, when declarer started on his plan, East brightly contributed the diamond queen on the second round of the suit. Declarer now logically ruffed a diamond with the spade ace. When East followed with the diamond 10, declarer was very suspicious, but he still did not see any reason to take an inspired first-round finesse of his spade nine. He therefore lost a trump trick as well as the heart ace and went one down.

pass!) The courtesy raise to three clubs suggests a minimum and decent trumps. If you bid two spades, it is a cue-bid (since you can't have length there), promising a maximum and values in spades. Your two aces and fifth trump should convince you to take the more aggressive position, but either action is acceptable.
