ISP: Paul crash probe could take six weeks

Three people hurt Sunday when car driven into house

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

Idaho State Police said Friday their investigation into a car that smashed into a home in Paul last weekend could take a while.

The probe involves a 17-year-old driver, David R. Torres, who drove a car carrying his 5-day-old baby and the child's teenage mother into a house shortly after midnight on Sunday. He remains hospitalized and has not been charged with a crime, though police said alcohol is suspected in the crash.

Witnesses said high speeds may also have been involved.

Torres, along with the baby, named David V. Torres, and the infant's 17-year-old mother, Gisela Arceo, were in critical condition after being taken to Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise after the crash. Witnesses found the baby on the car's trunk. Arceo's family said this week their health is improving.

No one was wearing seat-belts when the Chevrolet Cobalt hit a utility pole, a fire hydrant and Donna Holder's house at 123 E. Ellis St., authorities have said.

The police probe remains pending until results of Torres' tests for blood-alcohol content come back from the state lab, said Idaho State Police Sgt. Kent Oliver on Friday.

"It depends on how backlogged the lab is," Oliver said, adding that tests could take six weeks.

According to online court records, a David R. Torres born in 1992 was convicted of driving under the influence on Aug. 25 in Twin Falls County and placed on a year of supervised probation.

Visitors enjoy nice weather Friday at Thousand Springs State Park at Ritter Island. The Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation was one of the agencies hit with 7.5 percent budget holdbacks, or $507,200. Gov. C.L. 'Butch' Otter announced holdbacks Friday in response to declining state revenues.

Governor varies budget cuts across agencies

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter on Friday announced holdbacks that trim 4 percent from this year's state budget, a move that will spread cuts around agencies in varying degrees.

The holdbacks, coming in response to a $151 million state revenue shortfall in a down economy, are not across-the-board cuts. Some agencies, such as the Idaho Department of Correction, are getting a 2.5 percent holdback, while others, such as the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation, face a 7.5 percent holdback.

The holdbacks — combined with transferring nearly $49.3 million from the rainy day fund for public education to the general fund — amount to $98.9 million, 4 percent of the general fund budget.

"This is not an across-the-board holdback. My executive order distinguishes between the critical, constitutionally required, essential and other services of state government," Otter said. "This goes way beyond the difference between 'necessary' and 'nice.' It goes to the fundamental requirements

No death penalty in Cassia County homicide

By Damon Hunzeker
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Gerry Salgado, 22, of Aberdeen, will not face the death penalty in first-degree murder case involving the death of Liopoldo Amescua, according to Cassia County Prosecutor Al Barrus.

Salgado

Barrus made the announcement in a statement released Friday.

"After a review of the criteria set out in the Idaho Code for implementation of the death penalty in the state of Idaho, and in consultation with the Cassia County Sheriff's Office and the Idaho State Police, this office has determined that the death penalty will not be sought in this case."

Cassia County Sheriff Randy Kidd, Prosecutor Al Barrus, and Idaho State Police officials had no further comment on Friday.

Barrus, however, confirmed that search warrants were issued by the ISP and the Cassia County Sheriff's Office Thursday on the car that was dumped in the Snake River — registered to one victim, Estella Castro, 46, of Rupert — late Saturday night and the pickup registered to Salgado.

Amescua, 25, of Rupert, was found dead of a gun shot to the head less than a mile from the Raft River Store in vacant area of land Saturday night.

Salgado has also been charged with enhancement for the use of a deadly weapon in the commission of a felony, aggravated battery and grand theft.

Obama welcomes help in confronting Iran and expectations that we have for state government."

The $98.9 million is expected to cover 65 percent of the state's current $151 million estimated shortfall for the fiscal year. At the same time, Otter expressed no interest in raising taxes to offset revenue declines.

"I — along with everybody I have talked to — have no appetite to raise either sales tax or income taxes," Otter said. "And those are the two main players in the general fund revenues."

The governor is asking the Legislature to transfer nearly $49.3 million from the public education stabilization fund to offset the 4 percent holdback. Without the transfer, funding for K-through-12 schools would have to be cut. Transferring the amount will leave more than $20 million in the educational rainy day fund.

Agencies could find ways to save more money, and, if lawmakers approve, he said the state has about $275 million in other rainy day accounts that could be tapped.

The picture's different for higher education, though. Community colleges and state institutions face holdbacks of 6 percent, which falls in line with what the Idaho State Board of Education had projected. The board had asked colleges and universities to submit plans for 4 percent or 6 percent holdbacks.

"It doesn't mean it's going to be easy," said Mark Browning, spokesman for the state board. "It doesn't mean that the cuts aren't going to hurt, but we have a constitutional mandate that says we have to have a balanced budget."

On Friday, the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation was uncertain what the final impact of its 7.5 percent holdback — $507,200 — will look like.

Original plans had included keeping vacant positions unfilled and holding off on major capital projects, said

Jennifer Wernex, the agency's spokesperson.

"We'll probably have to build on that slightly," she said.

For the Idaho Department of Correction, a holdback of 2.5 percent — nearly $2.4 million — was ordered.

Jeff Ray, a spokesman for the DOC, said there will be no staff reductions.

Bob McLaughlin, spokesman for the Idaho Department of Water Resources, was more vague in comparison when asked about personnel. But his agency is also looking at a 7.5 percent holdback, a cut of $928,000.

"As far as how this will affect personnel, I don't know at this time," he said.

In the past, the agency has shifted people to other sources of funding and left vacant positions open, he said.

"The latest round of holdbacks will be challenging and difficult to implement but we also understand that time is of the essence because we only have nine months to squeeze our budget by 7.5 percent," McLaughlin said.

The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare is facing a 3.3 percent holdback, which is $15.25 million. The agency plans to look at its Medicaid state rules, which can take nine months to change.

Tom Shanahan, spokesman for the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, said that one change in the works is a plan to bid out and hire a company that would dispatch transportation providers to Medicaid clients and cut transportation costs with a more coordinated and scheduled service.

Shanahan said he's uncertain of the timeline for when the statewide service would start, adding that it's expected to save about $600,000 in state funding.

Forrest Church dies of cancer

BOISE (AP) — The Rev. Forrest Church, an author and the son of the late U.S. Sen. Frank Church, has died of esophageal cancer.

Church died at his New York City home on Thursday at the age of 61.

He was the oldest son of one of Idaho's most prominent political families, and for three decades he served as a minister at the Unitarian All Souls Church in New York City. He was also a prolific author and wrote or edited 25 books, according to his Web site.

Longtime family friend Dan Williams said the family has no plans for services yet. A memorial has been scheduled by his New York City church, however, for Oct. 3.

Iran

As Obama wheels from one challenge to another, he strikes a less lonely, go-it-alone pose than some before him.

Bill Clinton presented lawmakers with a take-it-or-leave-it health care proposal. (They left it.) Obama let Congress write the details of his overhaul plan, and now lawmakers are nearing a showdown on whether any of the competing versions can become law.

Above all, Obama has rejected Bush's unilateral approach to international matters, which infuriated many European allies and shrouded the Iraq war in questions about its legitimacy.

This week alone, Obama engaged in a series of multinational activities that Bush might have disdained. He became the first U.S. president to chair a meeting of the United Nations Security Council. He met privately, again, with Russian President Dmitry Medvedev, who later showed more willingness to press Iran to drop any pursuit of nuclear weapons.

Then, on Friday in Pittsburgh, Obama told the world of Iran's secret nuclear fuel plant, evidence of which had helped sway Medvedev two days earlier in New York. Rather than stand alone, however, he joined British Prime Minister Gordon Brown and French President Nicolas Sarkozy, whose criticisms of Iran seemed more strident than Obama's.

Obama's tone was distinctly multilateral. "It is time for Iran to act immediately to restore the confidence of the international community by fulfilling its international obligations," he said.

Disclosure of the Iranian facility heightens the importance of an Oct. 1 meeting of officials from Iran, the United States, Britain, France, Russia, China and Germany.

"Through this dialogue," Obama said, "we are committed to demonstrating that international law is not an empty promise, that obligations must be kept and that treaties will be enforced."

For some of Obama's critics, of course, merely sitting down with Iranian officials is too much.

Until Tehran discloses more about its nuclear programs, "the United States should not participate in direct negotiations with Iran, negotiations that will further legitimize this brutal regime," said U.S. House Republican leader John Boehner of Ohio.

But Joseph Cirincione, a nuclear weapons expert and president of the Ploughshares Fund, likened Obama to a skillful chess player, "moving his pieces on the board, extending his hand, opening up to engagement, winning allies over to the U.S. position."

The clean-up focused on a parking lot and a bedroom belonging to Loomis' 9-year-old daughter and 12-year-old son. She said her daughter had kept a jar holding the substance that later spilled on the floor.

amination, said Askew. The Idaho DEQ did not order the items destroyed, instead a Boise-based contractor for the clean-up made the call, Askew said.

Mercury permeation may have been so great to the clothes and bedding that cleaning them would have been costlier than buying new, Askew said, adding that the parking lot was also seal-coated in the clean-up.

Askew said he did not have a cost estimate for the mercury clean-up.

Loomis said she is embarrassed by the whole situation. Her children have undergone health screenings, though, and are fine, she said.

"They're good," said Loomis, adding her daughter has been struggling emotionally with losing her possessions. "They threw away her favorite (stuffed animal) puppy ... She's had it nine years. She feels betrayed by everyone."

The kids didn't know that playing with mercury is dangerous, but now they do, Loomis said. "It's not like you can go to school and see mercury and know that's a bad thing."

Sun Valley Co. touts planned hotel site

Design consultant Becky Zimmerman points to an area that would be home to a proposed roundabout at the intersection of Idaho Highway 75 and Serenade Lane, near where a proposed 150- to 200-room luxury hotel would be constructed by Sun Valley Co. The roundabout would help move traffic south of Ketchum that becomes congested during peak traffic hours.

Ketchum to take public comment on resort proposal

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — A clump of cottonwoods towering 90 feet above the Big Wood River stood in for a 110-foot-tall hotel as Ketchum residents tried to imagine the shape of things to come Thursday afternoon.

More than 50 people, including Ketchum Planning and Zoning commissioners, took an hour-long hike around the River Run parking lot south of Ketchum, up Serenade Lane and along the Wood River Trails bike path as they tried to envision the hotel, condominiums and ecological park that Sun Valley Co. hopes to build at the base of its ski resort.

"I'm glad to see River Run being developed," said Ketchum property manager Beth Grinstead. "It'll help us compete with other ski resorts which already have developments like this at their base. And I know whatever Mr. (Earl) Holding does will be good."

Becky Zimmerman, president of Design Workshop, a Denver-based resort planning firm contracted by Sun Valley, led the group to the dirt-covered parking lot above River Run Lodge and pointed back to a stand of cottonwoods.

The 110-foot tall, 150- to 200-room luxury hotel will tower at the southern entrance to Ketchum, a city that has thus far limited itself to three- and four-story projects. Designers say it will be close enough to Bald Mountain that it won't block the view of the mountain from various points around town.

Wally Huffman, Sun Valley Co.'s director of resorts and resort planning, said he hopes that visitors will at least be able to see the hotel's clock tower as they enter town — something that says, "There's something special here."

"We're not saying we will end up with a five-star hotel but we don't want to preclude it," he said, adding that the number of stories in the hotel has yet to be determined.

Huffman said that special accommodations were also made concerning a gondola line from Sun Valley Village, should the resort build one in the future.

Residential structures will likely wrap around planned parking structures to obscure views from outside the property, and a residential area will be built on the northern end of the property where paragliders now land.

"That will extend the pattern of town this direction (southwest) so this becomes a neighborhood of Ketchum," Zimmerman said.

Residences will most likely be multifamily units between 35 and 44 feet tall, depending on the pitch of the roof. They would be no taller than the three-story condominiums that currently border the property, Zimmerman said.

Third Avenue, which bisects the parking lot, will be rerouted and the property cleared to a setback along Trail Creek.

Sun Valley Co. has proposed placing a roundabout to control traffic flow at the junction of Idaho Highway 75 and Serenade Drive, which takes skiers and snowboarders to the River Run Lodge.

Whether the Idaho Transportation Department will approve a roundabout, however, is anyone's guess Zimmerman said.

An alternative would be a dedicated right-turn lane from Serenade Lane onto Idaho 75.

An area along the bike path south of River Run would be lowered to make a more natural bridge into the ecosystem along the Big Wood River. A few cabins, likely with 1,700-square foot footprints, could be built on the river side of the bike path, said planner Andy Gunion.

The creation of a 15-acre Big Wood River Ecological Park, including an area that currently boasts a large beaver pond, would allow developers to clear some debris from the Big Wood River to clean up some of the stagnant water.

The bridge currently crossing the river to the River Run Lodge would be designated pedestrian-only, and another bridge would be built for trucks and other vehicle traffic.

A nature walk would encircle the entire property.

Stacy Gilden, a Ketchum paralegal, said she was initially taken aback by reports that the hotel could be eight stories tall. But by the end of the tour, she was singing the project's praises.

"We always knew this would happen eventually," she said. "And I think the whole thing is going to be gorgeous."

The city of Ketchum plans to take public comment on the proposed 140-acre annexation of the property at meetings scheduled for 5:30 p.m. Oct. 27 and 28 at River Run Lodge.

Man killed in Jerome motorcycle collision

Times-News

A Gooding man was killed Friday afternoon after his motorcycle collided with a car at the intersection of U.S. Highway 93 and Idaho Highway 25, approximately four miles east of Jerome, according to Idaho State Police.

Bradley Eberhard, 21, collided head on with a 1993 Dodge Dakota, driven by Heather Cornell, 27, of Jerome, an ISP press release said. Cornell was driving north on U.S. 93 and tried to make a left turn onto State Highway 25 when her Dodge collided with the motorcycle. State police said the collision happened around 12:18 p.m.

Eberhard was pronounced dead at the scene of the crash, the ISP said, and was not wearing a helmet. Cornell was wearing her seatbelt and was not injured, according to ISP.

ISP Cpl. Sean Walker said no charges are pending and alcohol is not thought to be a factor.

Both southbound traffic lanes on U.S. 93 were blocked, and one northbound lane was being used to accommodate the southbound traffic. The eastbound traffic lane on State Highway 25 was also blocked.

... in Cassia County

From Sept. 13 police reports:

Information: A 41-year-old Oakley man reported to police that his son, 17,

"threatened to slit his throat." According to the report, the teenager became angry when his father told him that he couldn't "invite a girl to a church dance."

After that, the report reads, the man's son said he would slit his throat as he walked outside and punched the front door.

"At this time [the juvenile] was at the hospital getting his hand checked out. I do not know if it is broken," Deputy Brice Nelson's report reads.

GOP using Wilson for fundraising pitch

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican Party is using the newfound fame of the lawmaker who shouted “You lie!” at President Obama to raise money for GOP candidates around the country.

Although party leaders initially called Rep. Joe Wilson’s presidential insult disrespectful and unacceptable, fundraisers have apparently decided his outburst can be an asset.

Wilson, a previously obscure South Carolina Republican, is slated to appear at a fundraiser next month for Tim Walberg, a former Michigan

Republican congressman. Attendees can get a photo with Wilson for $150. He is soliciting money for statehouse Republicans in Virginia, and this week the GOP’s national fundraising arm sent out a nationwide plea from Wilson asking conservatives to combat Democratic efforts to “spin and mislead the public” on health care reform.

“If we can raise more money than the Democrats, we’ll send a message to (House Speaker Nancy) Pelosi, Obama, and their friends that the American people are firmly behind the Republicans in opposition to government-run health care,” he wrote in the new national plea.

Andy Sere, a spokesman for the National Republican Congressional Committee, defended the new national strategy, saying Wilson is now a “national figure” who is raising important concerns.

“I think the substance of his argument is correct, and that’s why we’re working in tandem with him to raise money,” Sere said.

Prosecutor: Terror plot focus was 9/11 anniversary

By Ivan Moreno and P. Solomon Banda

DENVER — An Afghan immigrant was on the verge of unleashing a terrorist attack on New York City on the Sept. 11 anniversary but was scared off after drawing suspicion from police, prosecutors said Friday as they provided new details about how far along the plot was.

Najibullah Zazi, 24, was stopped by police on Sept. 10 as he entered the city, and he dropped his plans for an attack once he realized that law enforcement was onto him.

Zazi was sent to New York on Friday by federal marshals to face charges of conspiracy to use weapons of mass destruction in a plot law enforcement has said was focused on blowing up commuter trains.

“The evidence suggests a chilling, disturbing sequence of events showing the defendant was intent on making a bomb and being in New York on 9/11, for purposes of perhaps using such items,” federal prosecutor Tim Neff told a judge in arguing for Zazi’s transfer to New York.

Prosecutors said Zazi received explosives training from al-Qaida in Pakistan and returned to the U.S. bent on building a bomb.

Over the summer, he and three associates went from one beauty-supply store to another in a Denver suburb buying chemicals to make explosives like those that killed dozens of people in transit bombings in London and Madrid, investigators said.

At least three and possibly more of his accomplices remain at large, and investigators have been fanning out across New York in pursuit of suspects. Authorities have also issued a flurry of terrorism warnings for sports complexes, hotels and transit systems.

three unidentified associates bought “unusually large quantities” of hydrogen peroxide and acetone — a flammable solvent found in nail-polish remover — from Denver-area beauty supply stores. The products had names such as Ion Sensitive Scalp Developer and Ms. K Liquid 40 Volume.

Zazi also searched the Web site of a Queens home-improvement store for another ingredient needed to make a compound called TATP (triacetone triperoxide), the explosives used by shoe bomber Richard Reid and the terrorists who carried out the London bombings that killed more than 50 people, according to court papers.

Zazi intensified his bomb-making experiments this month, cooking up substances in a Colorado hotel suite he rented on Sept. 6-7 before driving 1,600 miles to New York over the course of about two days.

He became aware that law enforcement was onto him when he was stopped entering the city on Sept. 10, causing the plot to unravel.

Neff said Zazi “was in the throes of making a bomb and attempting to perfect his formulation.”

The Metropolitan Transportation Authority — which runs New York City’s subway system, buses and commuter rails — declined to comment on the revelation of a Sept. 11-timed plot. It issued a statement from earlier in the week that it has boosted its police presence at “key commuter rail locations” since the terror threat became public.

The plot has also cast the spotlight on the everyday chemicals that are used in hair salons around the country but also can have a more sinister purpose.

who spoke on condition of anonymity because of the ongoing investigation said associates of Zazi visited Colorado to help him buy the chemicals using stolen credit cards before returning to New York.

Another law enforcement official said that authorities had been especially worried about Zazi’s Sept. 10 visit to the city because it coincided with a visit by President Barack Obama. Police considered arresting him right away. The official spoke on condition of anonymity because the investigation continues.

Police have been especially active in the neighborhood in Queens where Zazi visited during his New York trip, staying at an apartment with a group of cab drivers and food cart operators he knows.

Zazi ran a coffee cart in Manhattan before moving to Denver this year and getting a job as an airport shuttle driver.

FBI raids beginning Sept. 14 rattled a quiet, predominantly Asian neighborhood in Queens. Muslim men said dozens of FBI agents ransacked their homes and questioned them for hours, sometimes taking DNA samples and prints from their shoes.

Because of frequent visits by police, fewer people have been attending regular services at the Masjid Hazrat Abu Bakr mosque. Zazi had returned there to pray during his brief return trip to the city earlier this month.

The FBI has also been visiting beauty shops and home-improvement stores in Colorado and New York for details about the alleged bomb-making purchases.

Court papers say that during the summer, Zazi and

VA to issue emergency checks for GI benefits

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Veterans Affairs Department said Friday it would begin issuing emergency checks of up to $3,000 to Iraq and Afghanistan veterans whose payments under the new GI Bill have been delayed.

Tens of thousand of veterans from the recent wars have been waiting for payments under the newly enacted Post 9/11 GI Bill, which was the largest expansion of education benefits since World War II.

“It’s clear to me that we have to do something, just to be on the safe side to alleviate any stress that students are facing,” Veterans Affairs Secretary Eric Shinseki said late Friday.

Through persistence, 93/30 bypass becomes reality

CHEERS: To state Rep. Leon Smith, R-Twin Falls; Twin Falls County rancher Gerald Tews, the Idaho Transportation Board and others who worked hard to make the Twin Falls Alternate Route Stage 2 project — the Highway 30/93 bypass — finally happen. Construction on the $26.6 million, 18-month bypass project will begin next week. It will use federal stimulus funds and is expected to create or sustain 500 jobs. When completed in mid-2011, the project will link the interchange at the junction of U.S. Highways 30 and 93 with Pole Line Road — and then to the Perrine Bridge. Years in the making, it wasn't long ago that this enterprise was stalled at the bottom of the Idaho Transportation Department's to-do list. Now it's poised to provide the Twin Falls area with a major economic shot in the arm just as Dell Computer Inc. shuts its Pole Line Road call center and eliminates or moves 500 jobs. JEERS: It's fine that the University of Idaho's Kibbie Dome now looks bigger and lighter. It's questionable that the school had to borrow $10 million to get the job done during a recession. With the university facing holdbacks for between 4 percent and 6 percent in the current academic year and an uncertain financial picture in 2011, there's no reason this project couldn't have been deferred a year or two.

The west wall of the 34-year-old multi-purpose stadium has been partially replaced by translucent, fiberglass panels that let in more light. The state Board of Education in December approved the university's plan to borrow $10 million to improve the look of the dome. Safety improvements and an expanded press box are also planned. Little of the money will come of the taxpayers' pockets, but in hard times perceptions count.

CHEERS: To a group of north Idaho legislators, who have launched a bipartisan campaign to restore funding to parks and the Idaho State Police that the Legislature “borrowed” last spring to fix highways. Refusing to raise the gas tax or registration fees, lawmakers instead shifted $21 million in fuel tax revenue from the ISP and the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation beginning next July. Ever since, outdoor groups have complained long and loudly. Rep. Shirley Ringo, D-Moscow, says she's heard from a number of people who “are not amused” by the funding shift, largely because it undermines a longstanding commitment to use taxes on fuel bought for off-road vehicles to pay for off-road trail maintenance and other recreational projects. The funding transfer would cost ISP $16.4 million per year, while Parks and Recreation would lose about $4.6 million, including $1.8 million in its off-road and road/bridge maintenance account, $1.2 million for waterway improvements and $1.2 million for capital improvements. “The whole thing was a lame, hurried decision that should be reconsidered,” Ringo said. The folks who use the highways — and not boaters, hikers and off-roaders — should pay to fix the highways.

A down-to-Earth space program

For the last five years, the United States has been saddled with a space program that man-ages to be both unrealistic and uninspiring. It's unrealistic because it depends on funding and technology that are not available, and uninspiring because it proposes a mere repeat visit to the moon and a trip to Mars that is way too far off to excite any young person alive today. Last week, a panel of former astronauts and space entrepreneurs convened by the Obama administration to review the 2004 program released its preliminary findings, which offer a way out of our space dilemma. It will be a pity if they fall into the oblivion that is so often the destiny of such exercises. In 2004, President George W. Bush promulgated a space vision calling for the development of two new rockets, Ares I and V, to jointly carry crew and equipment into low-Earth orbit and then on to the moon. Basically, the elements of the mission dubbed Constellation — rockets, exploration and landing vehicles — looked much like the Apollo program's, except that everything would be bigger and more capable. Meanwhile, however, early retirement of the space shuttle would leave the U.S. unable to service the International

Space Station and at the mercy, for the next five to 10 years, of other countries to put this country's people and stuff into orbit. Although the rationale for returning to the moon was to ultimately send astronauts to Mars, perhaps in two or three decades' time, that explanation made little sense. “Saying that we have to go to the moon to get to Mars is kind of like saying that in order to get to Europe from New York City, we need to go to Montauk Point on eastern Long Island first,” commented Donald Rapp, the author of “Human Missions to Mars,” a book on enabling technologies needed for Mars missions. A mission to Mars and back using conventional rocket technology would take about two years, and the simple fact is that we don't know how to keep four astronauts cramped in a capsule safe from deadly radiation, physically fit, sane and satisfied for that length of time. “Scientists estimate that astronauts on a 1,000-day mission will be exposed to just over 1 sievert of radiation, equal to about 26,000 dental X-rays,” reported provide the public and stakeholders with a series of “firsts,” to sustain interest and motivation. This “steppingstone” vision draws on a number of earlier top-level reports and enjoys wide support in the astronautic and space exploration communities. The panel also argued for extending the space station's life — an idea international partners would embrace — by saying it seems unwise on the face of it “to de-orbit the station after 25 years of assembly and only five years of operational life.” The station has cost tens of billions of dollars to build and operate, and Europe, Canada and Japan contributed sizable shares. Those partners have been frustrated by the delays in getting the station up and running, and by its scheduled demise. By the time the station was built, its original commercial and scientific backers had lost interest and the attention of the coming generation had drifted elsewhere, complained Jean-Jacques Dordain, the director-general of the European Space Agency. “We have to define milestones that are challenging enough” to engage young people's interest and keep them engaged, he said. The clocks are ticking on Iran

On Thursday the United States and other great powers will restart talks with Iran, a new round in a long and so far fruitless effort to stop Tehran's march toward nuclear weapons. This may be the most important diplomacy President Obama has attempted — a test of his policy of "engagement" with adversaries, with war and peace in the balance.

The negotiators have been here before. In earlier rounds, the Iranians made vague statements about world peace, said they needed more time to consider U.N. Security Council demands that they stop enriching uranium and then, after several months, quit returning the West's phone calls.

This time the Obama administration and its allies say they're determined to prevent a repeat performance. "We are not willing to be played," said a top U.S. official involved in the talks but not authorized to speak publicly.

How will the U.S. and its allies make this round different? First, by insisting on action, not words. Iran will have to slow its work on nuclear technology in some tangible way — if not the full enrichment freeze the West has been asking for, something else. "The measure of (the negotiating process) is that it affects their nuclear clock," the U.S. official told me. Second, the negotiators will set a deadline for Iranian action: the end of the year, with no wiggle room. "The end of the year means the end of the year," the official stressed.

That remorseless nuclear clock is very much on the administration's mind. U.S. officials say they believe Iran could achieve "break-out capability" — the ability to quickly build a nuclear weapon — in one to three years.

There's also an Israeli clock. When Iranian leaders say they'd like to remove Israel from the map, Israelis — a sensitive people when it comes to their existence — take it literally. Israel-watchers believe Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu will give the great powers until next summer or fall to get results. After that, the likelihood of an Israeli military strike against Iran goes up. Is the Israeli threat real? Nobody knows. But the U.S. and its allies are using it to concentrate everyone's mind, like the prospect of a hanging.

The October talks are designed to enable the Western powers to start a clock of their own: action from Iran or else "crippling sanctions," in Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton's words. That message isn't directed only at Iran but to the players who have been reluctant to impose sanctions in the past: Russia, China and the European countries whose banking, insurance and oil companies would lose business as a result.

The problem with sanctions, is that nobody knows whether they will work. The Iranian regime, now thoroughly in the hands of hardliners who don't rely on the business class for political support, seems to care even less about the damage wrought by sanctions than it did before. "They just don't give a damn," said Ray Takeyh, an Iran expert at the Council on Foreign Relations.

There's nothing wrong with concessions if they lead to greater results in return. The confrontation with Iran is moving into a critical period. To Iran's nuclear technology clock, and Israel's existential threat clock, add a third clock: Obama's promised results clock. The clocks are running.

Doyle McManus is a columnist for the Los Angeles Times.

On energy, America's finally walking the walk

The United States has entered a new energy era, ending a century of rising carbon emissions. As the U.S. delegation prepares for December's international climate negotiations in Copenhagen, it does so from a surprisingly strong position, based on a dramatic 9 percent drop in U.S. carbon emissions over the past two years and the promise of further huge reductions.

Prominent among these carbon-cutting initiatives are stronger automobile fuel-economy standards, appliance efficiency standards, and the potential to heat, cool and light buildings with carbon-free sources of electricity. On the supply side are efforts supporting the development of U.S. wind, solar and geothermal energy resources.

Part of this decline in carbon emissions was caused by the recession and higher gasoline prices, but part came from gains in energy efficiency and shifts to carbon-free sources of energy, including record amounts of new wind-generating capacity. This impressive decline should enable the United States to push for a steep cut in Copenhagen.

For a country where oil and coal use have been growing for more than a century, the fall since 2007 is startling. Last year, oil use dropped 5 percent, coal 1 percent and overall carbon emissions 3 percent. Projections for this year, based on Energy Department data, show oil use down by an additional 5 percent, coal by 10 percent. Altogether, carbon emissions from burning fossil fuels, including natural gas, dropped 9 percent over the two years.

The improving numbers on carbon emissions are not debatable.

Although Congress is considering legislation that would cut emissions only 15 or 20 percent by 2020, it's clear that with just a little effort, the United States could far surpass this. Given the potentially catastrophic climate change the world faces, we should push in Copenhagen for an 80 percent reduction by 2020.

Lester R. Brown

Efforts to reduce fossil fuel use and cut carbon emissions are underway at every level of government and in corporations, utilities and universities. Millions of Americans are altering their lifestyles to reduce energy use and carbon emissions.

Despite the coal industry's $45 million annual budget to promote "clean coal," utilities are giving up the coal ghost. In July, Bruce Nilles, coordinator of the Sierra Club's national program to ban new coal-fired power plants, announced the 100th cancellation of a proposed plant since 2001.

The Tennessee Valley Authority, with a fleet of 11 aging coal plants and a court order to install more than $1 billion worth of pollution controls, is considering closing its John Sevier Fossil Plant near Rogersville, Tenn., along with the six oldest units out of the eight at the Widows Creek Fossil Plant near Stevenson, Ala. Altogether, about 22 coal-fired power plants in 12 states are being replaced by wood-fired power, wind farms or natural gas plants.

Utilities are facing falling demand because of the economic slump and advances in efficiency. The potential is evident in the wide variation among states, with some embracing energy-efficient technologies and others mired in old ones. The Rocky Mountain Institute calculates that if the 40 least-efficient states were to achieve the electrical efficiency of the 10 most-efficient ones, national electricity use would be reduced by one third, allowing the equivalent of 62 percent of the country's 617 coal-fired power plants to be closed.

Last year, 102 wind farms came online, providing 8,400 megawatts of electricity-generating capacity, the equivalent of eight coal-fired power plants. This year 49 wind farms were completed and 57 more are under construction. More important, 300,000 megawatts of wind projects (think 300 coal plants) await access to the grid so that construction can begin.

U.S. solar cell installations are growing at 40 percent a year, growth that should continue with new government incentives. Solar thermal power plants using mirrors to concentrate sunlight and generate electricity are going up fast in California, Arizona and Nevada. A molten-salt, heat-storage technology that enables the plants to continue generating power up to six hours past sundown is spurring broad investor interest. About 6,000 megawatts of solar thermal power plants are under construction or development.

Underlying the carbon-cutting question are: Where will the new energy industries be located? Who will be building the wind turbines, solar panels and highly efficient light emitting diodes? The countries that cut carbon emissions fastest will have a competitive advantage.

Stabilizing the earth's climate is a complex undertaking and fraught with risk. If the United States leads — and does so boldly — I believe the world will follow.

Lester Brown is president of the Earth Policy Institute. He wrote this commentary for The Washington Post.

Economic data signal bumpy recovery

Home sales, durable good orders report weaker than expected

By Christopher S. Rugaber
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — A reminder that the path to an economic recovery will be a slow and bumpy one emerged Friday from weaker-than-expected data on durable goods orders and new home sales.

The reports "are a wake up call for anyone expecting a smooth transition to a strong economic recovery," said Paul Ashworth, senior U.S. economist for Capital Economics.

The durable goods figure caused some economists to lower their forecasts for third-quarter economic growth. Still, the volatility isn't unexpected as the economy struggles to arise from the worst recession since the 1930s.

"No one said this would be a smooth recovery," Benjamin Reitzes, an economist at BMO Capital

The reports also reflect the uncertainty that lies ahead as some government stimulus efforts wind down.

Even as the housing sector is recovering, for example, a tax credit for first-time buyers that's helped boost sales is set to expire Nov. 30. There's a bipartisan push on Capitol Hill to extend the credit, but prospects for the real estate market remain hazy.

Similarly, while the manufacturing sector has made gains, they're partly due to the Cash for Clunkers program that supplied buyer rebates but that ended last month.

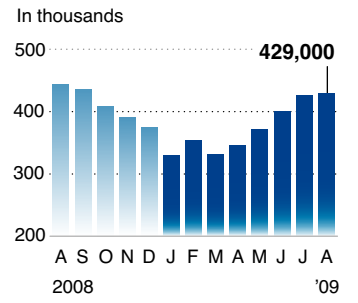

And the banking system has managed to stabilize mainly because of extraordinary aid from the Federal Reserve and the Treasury, which are starting to rein in some of that financial support.

President Obama gestures while speaking to reporters at the Group of 20 summit meeting in Pittsburgh, Pa., on Friday. Global leaders announced Friday that the once elite club of rich industrial nations known as the Group of 7 would be permanently replaced as a global forum for economic policy by the much broader Group of 20, which includes China, Brazil, India and other fast-growing developing countries.

Obama: G20 brought economy back from brink

By Tom Raum and Emma Vandore
Associated Press writers

PITTSBURGH — President Obama asserted on Friday that he and other leaders of the world's 20 largest economies took actions that "brought the global economy back from the brink" and saved or created millions of jobs.

"We leave here today confident and united," he said at the conclusion of a two-day summit to deal with the worst economic crisis since the 1930s.

He spoke as world leaders lined up behind sweeping promises designed to fix a malfunctioning global economic system in hopes of heading off future financial meltdowns.

The leaders agreed to leave stimulus programs in place for now until recoveries are more firm. "We must make sure that when growth returns, jobs do, too," he told a wrap-up news conference.

"We brought the global economy back from the brink. We laid the groundwork today for long term prosperity," Obama said.

"It is important to recall the situation we faced" in April when the Group of 20 leaders last met and when talk was rampant about a second Great Depression.

In a statement issued at the conclusion of the summit, the full G-20 leadership echoed Obama's sentiment. "It worked," the statement said of stimulus and other measures taken by the world leaders.

"Pittsburgh was a perfect venue for this work," Obama said of the one-time despairing Rust Belt city. "This community has known its share of hard times. It picked itself up and dusted itself off. It serves as a model for turning the page to a 21st century."

Obama brushed off demonstrations in the city. He said they were mild compared with some in the past at international gatherings.

"I fundamentally disagree with their view that the free market is the source of all ills," he said. "Many of the protests are just directed generically at capitalism. ... One of the great things about the United States is you can speak your mind."

Obama said that tough new financial regulations

Funds post big numbers as investors bet on rebound

NEW YORK (AP) — As the third quarter ends, the performance of many mutual funds confirms that investors have regained their taste for risk amid more signs of an economic recovery.

Some of the quarter's best performers were growth funds, considered the most vulnerable in a recession, but the ones most likely to soar when the economy picks up again.

"Appetite for risk is rising," said Tom Roseen, an analyst with fund tracker Lipper Inc. "People are betting on the economy to grow a little bit."

Some of the strongest stocks during the quarter were materials and energy producers and companies like retailers that depend on consumers' discretionary spending. These types of businesses often do well as the economy picks up.

The gains helped lift a range of mutual funds. Diversified U.S. stock funds posted an average return of 14.9 percent. For the first nine months of the year, the return is 22.7 percent. These funds in general have varied holdings instead of focusing on a particular industry.

The latest figures reflect trading through Thursday, and so don't include the final four trading days of the third quarter.

The average return at large-capitalization value funds was 15.5 percent, according to Lipper. For large-cap growth funds it was 13.4 percent.

Value funds hold stocks that are believed to be undervalued and that are expected to pay dividends. Growth funds, meanwhile, hold stocks that are expected to show strong price appreciation and that are not likely to pay dividends; these stocks tend to include many smaller companies without long track records.

It is the second straight quarter of strong returns after major stock indicators bounced off 12-year-lows on March 9. In the July-September period, a steady diet of improving economic news has given investors hope that the economy has emerged from the longest recession since World War II.

The S&P 500 index is up 13.6 percent for the quarter and an enormous 54.4 percent since hitting a 12-year low of 676.53 on March 9. The index, which serves as the basis for many mutual funds, is still down 33.7 percent from its peak of 1,565.15 in October 2007.

Analysts warn that the stock market's rally can't continue at such a pace.

"My caution in seeing these great numbers is that people are going to start jumping back in when, in fact, maybe we're due for a little breather," Roseen said. "We've got to take a break."

Since March, funds that focus on financial services stocks, among the most badly beaten by the recession, have an average return of 114 percent. For real estate funds, which also took a huge hit, it's 93.3 percent.

Agency: Cash for Clunkers program almost all paid up

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Transportation Department has approved nearly all the claims for repayment filed by dealers under the Cash for Clunkers auto rebate program, the federal agency said Friday.

About 98 percent of the claims that dealers filed have been paid or approved for payment, according to the most recent statistics released by federal officials. That amounted to $2.78 billion worth of claims.

Nearly 700,000 vehicles were sold through the program that ran in late July and for most of August. Car buyers were offered rebates up to $4,500 off the price of a new car if they traded in less fuel efficient vehicles. The program, originally budgeted for $1 billion, proved far more popular than the government expected, prompting lawmakers to boost it to $3 billion.

Tweet about this: Twitter valued at $1 billion

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Twitter Inc.'s founders now have a billion-dollar baby, and they seem determined to raise it without a corporate parent.

That was the message underlying Friday's news that Twitter has lined up $100 million to finance its operations while founders Evan Williams and Biz Stone plot ways to make money off one of the Internet's most popular communications tools.

The investment values the 3-year-old company at $1 billion, even though it has yet to generate any meaningful revenue, let alone profits.

Twitter itself didn't provide specifics about the size of the investment, saying only it involved a significant sum. Two people with knowledge of the negotiations confirmed the amounts to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because the parties had agreed not to announce the specifics.

Williams and Stone declined an interview request.

The latest stakes were sold to three of Twitter's existing investors — Benchmark Capital, Institutional Venture Partners and Spark Capital — and two new shareholders, Insight Venture Partners and T. Rowe Price. San Francisco-based Twitter had previously raised $55 million, with the latest infusion of $35 million coming just seven months ago.

With so much money in the bank, Twitter now has the means to buy more computers and keep improving the reliability of its outage-prone service. It can expand its work force of 60 employees without feeling the pressure to sell to a larger company.

"This is a smart move by Twitter because it buys them more time to capitalize on their momentum and come up with a business plan," said Ken Marlin, a technology investment banker in New York with Marlin & Associates.

Obama, other leaders confront Iran

Country has secret nuclear site

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Bluntly confronting Iran, President Obama and the leaders of France and Britain accused the Islamic republic Friday of clandestinely building an underground plant to make nuclear fuel that could be used to build an atomic bomb.

"Iran is breaking rules that all nations must follow," Obama declared. "The size and configuration of this facility is inconsistent with a peaceful program," he said of the formerly secret site, warning of severe consequences if Iran does not come clean about its nuclear efforts and intentions.

Britain Prime Minister Gordon Brown and President Obama make a statement at the G20 Summit in Pittsburgh Saturday about new intelligence on Iran's nuclear capability.

He and the other leaders revealed and condemned the plant's existence in a dramatic early morning appearance at a world leaders' summit that was otherwise focused on recovery from the global economic meltdown. They demanding that Iran open all nuclear sites for inspections by the International Atomic Energy Agency.

Unbowed, Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad said his country had done nothing wrong and Obama would regret his accusations.

At a news conference in New York, Ahmadinejad said the plant wouldn't be operational for 18 months but sidestepped a question about whether Iran had sufficient enriched uranium to manufacture a nuclear weapon. Still, he said Tehran rejects such armaments as "inhumane."

The plant, near the holy city of Qom southwest of Tehran, would be about the right size to enrich enough uranium to produce one or two bombs a year, but inspectors must get inside to know what is actually going on, one U.S. official said.

Disclosure of the site added urgency to a diplomatic standoff with Iran over the nature of its nuclear program, a subject sure to be raised at a meeting next week in Geneva between Iran, the U.S., Russia, China, Britain, France and Germany. It also appeared to increase the likelihood of new U.N. sanctions against Iran for what Obama called a troublesome pattern of cheating on its international nuclear obligations.

"We will not let this matter rest," said British Prime Minister Gordon Brown, who accused Iran of "serial deception."

French President Nicolas Sarkozy said Iran has until December to comply with demands for a fuller accounting of its program or face new sanctions.

On Capitol Hill, three senators — Democrat Evan Bayh of Indiana, Republican Jon Kyl of Arizona and Independent Joe Lieberman of Connecticut — issued a joint statement condemning Iran.

"Given Iran's consistent pattern of deceit, concealment and bad faith, the only way to force Iran to abandon its nuclear ambitions is to make absolutely clear to the regime in Tehran that its current course will carry catastrophic consequences," the senators said. "We must leave no doubt that we are prepared to do whatever it takes to stop Iran's nuclear breakout."

Iran had previously acknowledged having only the one uranium enrichment plant, under international monitoring, and had denied allegations of undeclared nuclear activities.

Said Obama: "The Iranian government must now demonstrate through deeds its peaceful intentions or be held accountable to international standards and international law."

A few hours later, the head of Iran's nuclear program suggested U.N. inspectors would be allowed to visit the site. Ali Akbar Salehi called the facility "a semi-industrial plant for enriching nuclear fuel" that is not yet complete, but he gave no other details, according to the state news agency IRNA.

2 men charged in unrelated Illinois, Texas bomb plots

By Anabelle Garay
Associated Press writer

DALLAS — Two men were in custody on Friday after each tried to blow up what they thought were vehicles packed with explosives outside a Texas skyscraper and an Illinois courthouse, authorities said.

The two cases were unconnected to each other and to the investigation that set off the most intense flurry of national terrorism warnings since the aftermath of Sept. 11.

Hosam Maher Husein Smadi, 19, a Jordanian who lives in Texas, appeared in court Friday after federal officials said he parked what he thought was an explosive-laden truck in a parking garage beneath the 60-story Fountain Place office tower in Dallas. Smadi mostly looked down as he was led into the courtroom in handcuffs, and when asked whether he understood his rights, he softly answered, "Yes."

Michael C. Finton, 29, who also went by the name Talib Islam and idolized John Walker Lindh — the American-born Taliban fighter — was arrested Wednesday in Springfield, Ill., after federal officials said he attempted to detonate what he believed to be explosives in a van outside a federal courthouse in the Illinois capital.

In both cases, decoy devices were provided to the men by FBI agents posing as al-Qaida operatives. Both are charged with trying to detonate a weapon of mass destruction and face up to life in prison if convicted. Finton also is charged with attempting to murder federal officers or employees.

Smadi, who federal prosecutors said lived and worked in the north central Texas town of Italy, came to the United States in 2007 with his brother, Hussein, on student visas, their father Maher Hussein Smadi told The Associated Press in Jordan. The father said Hussein Smadi, 18, was arrested in California, but would not elaborate. That arrest could not immediately be confirmed by officials in the U.S.

"The issue is completely fabricated and in our family we never condoned terrorism," the father said.

Richard Anderson, the public defender appointed to Smadi in Dallas, said after Friday's hearing that he had "little to say" until he figures out more about the case. He said his client is scared and has no family nearby.

The FBI had been keeping tabs on Smadi since an undercover agent discovered him in an online extremist group, according to an affidavit in the case. Undercover agents communicated and met with Smadi over several months, posing as members of an al-Qaida sleeper cell, the affidavit said. The agents provided Smadi with what he believed was a car bomb but was actually an inert device, it said.

Smadi on Thursday parked a vehicle containing the device in a garage beneath the Dallas office tower and set the device's timer, the affidavit said. Smadi then met with an agent, who drove several blocks away and Smadi dialed a cell phone in an attempt to detonate the bomb, according to the affidavit, which said he picked the Fountain Place because it housed banks.

A similar scenario played out the day before in Illinois. Finton also had been closely monitored by federal agents including in the months leading up to his arrest, according to an affidavit in that case. It said an FBI agent who posed as an al-Qaida operative presented Finton on Wednesday with a van containing materials he described as explosive but which actually were harmless.

The two men parked the van at the courthouse and close to the office of U.S. Rep. Aaron Schock, R-Ill., which Finton allegedly hoped also would be damaged. They then drove a short distance to where Finton twice used a cell phone to try to detonate the explosives, the affidavit said. He was arrested immediately.

The affidavit traced two years of activities by Finton. It said Finton's parole on a previous conviction was revoked in August 2007 and writings found at the time included reference to a letter to Lindh, who is now in prison.

Public records show Finton was in an Illinois prison from 1999 until 2005 aggravated robbery and aggravated battery convictions. After getting out, Finton told his parole officer he had converted to Islam, the affidavit said.

Finton appeared in federal court in Springfield on Thursday and said he was an unmarried, part-time cook at a fish and chicken restaurant in the central Illinois city of Decatur. A message was left for his attorney, federal defender Robert Scherschlight.

Device approval exposes political pressure on FDA

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration has taken the unprecedented step of acknowledging that it buckled to "extreme" pressure from Capitol Hill in its approval of a knee repair device last year. While FDA officials call the situation an anomaly, experts said Friday there is nothing to stop similar political lobbying from influencing future decisions.

In a sweeping critique Thursday, FDA leadership said the agency failed to protect its scientists from outside pressure after they twice rejected ReGen Biologics' Menaflex device.

The Hackensack, N.J.-based company ultimately won approval last December after enlisting the support of four New Jersey lawmakers, who urged then-FDA Commissioner Andrew von Eschenbach to intervene on the company's behalf. Approval came despite protests by FDA scientists that Menaflex — which reinforces damaged knee tissue — provided little, if any, benefit to patients.

The report marks the first time FDA has openly criticized its own conduct, as Obama appointees try to restore the agency's credibility following a string of bungled drug and food safety issues.

An FDA official called the pressure from Capitol Hill "the most extreme he had ever seen" and the access granted to the commissioner "unprecedented."

Several staffers at the agency called the ReGen ordeal "the worst experience in their professional careers," according to the report.

ReGen Chief Executive Gerald Bisbee said in a statement Thursday that FDA's review involved "procedural irregularities" and does not reflect on the safety of the company's device.

Biden swears in Kirk, successor to Sen. Kennedy

WASHINGTON (AP) — Former Democratic Party chairman Paul G. Kirk Jr. stepped in Friday as the temporary replacement in the Senate for his longtime friend, the late Edward Kennedy.

Kirk said taking over the Massachusetts seat left him with mixed emotions, particularly because he was still feeling the "profound absence" of his old pal.

"It's exhilarating and sobering at the same time," Kirk said.

Democrats applauded his arrival. Kirk's swearing in by Vice President Joe Biden gave Senate Democrats a filibuster-resistant, 60-vote majority with the health care fight at a critical juncture. Contentious battles also lay ahead on climate change and financial regulation.

The swearing in came just a few hours after a Massachusetts judge rejected a Republican request to delay it.

The state GOP had argued that Democratic Gov. Deval Patrick exceeded his constitutional authority by appointing Kirk before a traditional 90-day legislative waiting period had expired. State lawmakers passed a bill this week giving Patrick the power to choose an interim senator.

5 U.S. troops killed as debate grows over Afghan war

By Heidi Vogt
Associated Press writer

KABUL — Five U.S. troops died in attacks in southern Afghanistan, military officials said Friday, adding to this year's record death toll as American public support is dwindling for operations in the country that once hosted Osama bin Laden.

The Obama administration is debating whether to add still more troops to the 21,000-strong influx that began pouring into Afghanistan over the summer. Most of those have gone to the south, where they've been assailed by roadside bombs and ambushes as they battle to take back Taliban-controlled areas.

The commander of U.S. and NATO forces, Gen. Stanley McChrystal, told "60 Minutes" that the strength of the militant group took him by surprise when he arrived this summer.

"I think that in some areas that the breadth of the violence, the geographic spread of violence, is a little more than I would have gathered," he said in the interview to be broadcast on Sunday.

This has been the deadliest year for American troops since the 2001 invasion to oust the Islamic extremist Taliban. The five deaths announced Friday bring to 214 the number of troops killed so far this year, well ahead of the 151 who died in all of 2008.

Four soldiers died Thursday in the same small district of southeastern Zabul province. Three were killed when their Stryker vehicle triggered a bomb in its path, and the fourth was shot to death in an insurgent attack, said U.S. military spokesman Lt. Robert Carr. The Stryker brigade arrived in Zabul as part of the summer surge to try to secure the region ahead of Afghanistan's Aug. 20 presidential election.

Meanwhile, a U.S. Marine was fatally shot while on foot patrol in southwestern Nimroz province, said Capt.

Elizabeth Mathias, a military spokeswoman.

The U.S. is on track to have 68,000 troops in Afghanistan by the end of 2009, but the Pentagon said McChrystal would ask this week for as many as 40,000 new forces. Some question the wisdom of sending more troops to support a government facing allegations of widespread fraud in last month's disputed vote.

On Friday, election officials agreed to recount results from a sample of 10 percent of polling stations with suspect results in a push to release long-delayed results before winter makes any runoff vote impossible. Though preliminary results show President Hamid Karzai winning, there are enough questionable ballots that the recounts could force him into a runoff with his top challenger.

About half of all Americans oppose increasing troop levels in Afghanistan, according to a poll released Friday.

1st swine flu vaccine may arrive Oct. 5

ATLANTA (AP) — The first swine flu vaccine should be in some doctors' offices as early as Oct. 5, U.S. health officials said Friday. These early batches of vaccine will protect 6 million to 7 million people. Over time, the government expects to have a total of 250 million doses of the new vaccine, although 10 percent of

has been promised to other countries. The U.S. vaccine shipments will go directly to doctors, clinics and other providers designated by each state, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention officials said at a press conference. Most of the initial doses will be a nasal spray form of vaccine, but the majority of doses during flu season will be shots. CDC officials also said swine flu is widespread in 26 states now, up from 21 a week ago. Some possible good news — the intensity is trending down a little in the Southeast. The percentage of doctor's office visits for flu-like illnesses fell slightly in Georgia and some other states. However, the improvement is only slight and it's not clear if it's the start of a national trend or not, CDC officials said. The CDC doesn't have an exact count of swine flu deaths and hospitalizations, but existing reports suggest the infection has caused more than 600 deaths and more than 9,000 hospitalizations.

School nurse shortage hampers swine flu response

By Terence Chea
 Associated Press writer

SAN FRANCISCO — As schools grapple with a resurgence of swine flu, many districts have few or no nurses to prevent or respond to outbreaks, leaving students more vulnerable to a virus that spreads easily in classrooms and takes a heavier toll on children and young adults. The shortage of school nurses could lead to more students falling ill from the H1N1 virus, which can be particularly dangerous for children with weakened immune systems or respiratory conditions such as asthma, experts say.

"It's really irresponsible of the school district to not really provide medical oversight while kids are in school," said Jamie Hintzke, who has two kids in Northern California's Pleasanton Unified School District, including a son with severe food allergies. The district has one nurse for 15 schools and almost 15,000 students. "I'm playing Russian roulette every single day he goes to school." When the swine flu emerged last spring, it was a school nurse in New York City — Mary Pappas at St. Francis Preparatory School — who helped identify and curtail the country's first major outbreak after she noticed large numbers of students complaining of high fevers and sore throats. But many schools around the country don't have a medical professional who can quickly diagnose students and detect outbreaks. A 2008 survey by the National Association of School Nurses found that only 45 percent of public schools have their own full-time nurse, another 30 percent have a part-time nurse, and a quarter don't have any nurses at all. The average nurse-to-student ratio nationwide was one nurse for every 1,151 students, but in 14 states there was only one nurse for more than 2,000 students, according to the nurses association. States with the highest ratios include Oregon with one nurse for every 3,142 students, Michigan with one for every 4,204, and Utah with one for every 4,893. Only 12 states, mostly in the Northeast, met the 1-to-750 ratio recommended by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the association found. In Michigan, severe financial problems prompted the Pontiac School District to lay off five of its six nurses, who played a key role in the district's response to swine flu last spring. "If H1N1 is anything like the prediction, schools without school nurses will be missing their front line of defense," said Susan Zacharski, the district's only remaining nurse. She now works in a center for special needs students who are legally entitled to a nurse, but there are no nurses to serve the district's other 7,200 students. With swine flu cases rising with the new school year, districts are depending on teachers, principals and secretaries with little medical training to identify, isolate and send home sick children, as well as monitor absences and illnesses for signs of a wider outbreak. "We're asking so much more of untrained staff as far as providing medical management," said Nina Fekaris, a nurse in the Oregon's Beaverton School District who is responsible for four schools with 4,300 students. "It's putting our kids at risk." Some teachers complain they haven't received guidance or training on how to deal with swine flu. "We really don't know what symptoms to look for, how to caution our kids or how to protect ourselves," said Robert Ellis, a first grade teacher at Washington Elementary School in Richmond, Calif. "I'm really concerned about it spreading in the classroom, how many kids will be impacted and the loss of educational time." Since it was first identified in April, the swine flu has infected more than 1 million Americans and killed nearly 600, the CDC estimates. So far swine flu does not appear to be more dangerous than seasonal flu, which kills an estimated 36,000 Americans each year, but it appears to be more contagious and health officials are concerned that it could mutate and become deadlier. Federal health officials are urging parents to have their kids vaccinated, but the H1N1 vaccine will not be ready until October. In districts that have them, school nurses are developing plans to screen and quarantine sick students, teaching students proper classroom hygiene, urging parents to keep ill children at home, organizing vaccination campaigns and instructing teachers and school staff how to identify sick students.

S. California wildfire nears containment

MOORPARK, Calif. (AP) — A 27-square-mile Southern California wildfire was 85 percent contained Friday as the withering Santa Ana winds that had fanned it faded away. Firefighters hoped to have the 17,500-acre blaze in Ventura County between the cities of Moorpark and Fillmore fully surrounded sometime Sunday. No homes had been lost. "The fire is not making any significant runs," said county fire Capt. Ron Oatman. The fire began Tuesday and burned through rugged land interspersed with orchards, farms and ranches. Agricultural officials were involved in the damage assessment process, but Oatman said he did not believe there were significant losses in that industry. Firefighting costs have topped $6 million.

Weather remained a concern because air over the region remained hot, with temperatures in the 100s and high 90s except right along the coast, and humidity levels were still very low. Forecasters said "red flag" warnings of fire danger would be in effect until 9 p.m. Saturday and a cooling trend was expected Sunday. Elsewhere in Southern California, a new fire broke out Friday afternoon in the Antelope Valley near Elizabeth Lake west of the desert city of Lancaster in Los Angeles County. The blaze burned 75 acres and was 65 percent contained, said Los Angeles County fire Inspector Frederic Stowers. No homes were damaged and none are threatened, Stowers said. San Bernardino County prosecutors, meanwhile, filed unspecified charges against a 16-year-old boy suspected in more than a dozen arson wildfires.

Ohio woman implanted with wrong embryo delivers

TOLEDO, Ohio (AP) — An Ohio woman who had the wrong embryo implanted by a fertility clinic has given birth to a boy. Sean and Carolyn Savage said in a statement that the "healthy baby boy" was delivered Thursday at St. Vincent Thersy Medical Center in Toledo. No information about the baby or the circumstances surrounding the delivery was released. The Savages said earlier this week the baby was to be born in the next two weeks via cesarean section. The Savages offered their "heartfelt congratulations" to the baby's biological parents, Paul and Shannon Morell of Michigan. They said their family is going through a very difficult time and requested privacy in the days ahead. The Savages have said the fertility clinic transferred the wrong frozen embryo to Carolyn's womb in early February.

Century picks off Twin Falls

Bruin offense struggles in homecoming loss

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

A failure to consistently execute on offense short-circuited a strong defensive performance as Twin Falls suffered a 14-0 loss to Century on Friday in the Bruins' homecoming game. The Twin Falls defense largely thwarted the Diamondbacks' ground game and came up with two fumble recoveries. But Bruin quarterback T.J. Ellis threw four interceptions and the Bruins failed to score despite two trips to the red zone. "We didn't get on track at all, just didn't make plays," said Twin Falls coach Allyn Reynolds. "I'm not going to name names, but some guys didn't come to play. ... I don't usually blame it on kids, but the game plan was there and just didn't make it happen. "We can't play the game for them and some key guys didn't get it done and they know who they are." Century (3-1) got it done early as running back Terence Quenton ripped off a 67-yard run on the first play of the Diamondbacks' second possession to provide a 7-0 lead. "Our people just blocked amazing and got me the hole that I needed and just outran everybody," said Quenton, who rushed for 128 yards on 14 carries. Backfield mate Rhys Borchert added 83 yards on 23 carries and capped the scoring with a 5-yard plunge with 1:44 left in the game. But the middle portions of the game featured struggles from both offenses as they exchanged punts and turnovers. "Usually our offense doesn't get shut down like

HOMECOMING HEARTBREAKER

CRHS still waiting for first football win

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

They still haven't found what they're looking for. The Canyon Ridge Riverhawks were denied their first victory in football once again Friday as they fell 35-13 to the Kimberly Bulldogs. It was the team's first home game at Riverhawk Stadium, and the 'Hawks now fall to 0-4 in the season.

Despite a homecoming heart-breaker, the Riverhawks considered the experience a positive one. Their two scores were an improvement over the last two games, when they were shut out by Buhl and only managed a field goal against Jerome.

"Everybody's getting more football savvy," Riverhawks quarterback Tyler Myers said, "on offense and defense. We got a lot better. This is a big improvement." Myers, who was the 'Hawks' lead rusher with 142 yards on 13 carries, connected with teammates Alex Ridgeway and Nick Kytle for a score each.

Ridgeway hauled in a 35-yard pass to score on the 'Hawks' second possession, while Myers (13 of 32 for 153 yards, 2 TDs, 3 INT) found Kytle unguarded in the end zone as he scrambled out of the pocket late during the third quarter.

The touchdown came on their only sustained drive of the game as they marched down the field 73 yards in about three minutes.

While Kimberly drove more consistently, many of the Bulldogs' scores came when the 'Hawks gave up a big play.

touchdown carries were on runs of 78 and 25 yards, and Ethan Richmond found the end zone once on a 85-yard carry. He had accomplished a similar feat during the first half, but an illegal block penalty nullified it.

Richmond finished with more than 170 yards on 19 carries, Wadsworth had the same on 10 carried, while Cody Casperson contributed around 55 yards and a touchdown on 15 carries. Seth Champlin rushed for 21 yards and one score on two carries.

"We knew what we had to do and everybody played his hardest," Richmond said.

Linemen such as Scott Holmes were responsible for creating all those opportunities, and he credited the team chemistry for their success.

Both teams shared two common traits: penalties and turnovers. Each team was flagged at least eight times and lost more than 50 yards during the game. Myers threw three picks, all to Champlin, while the Bulldogs had trouble holding on to the ball, fumbling four times during the first half and losing two of those. The 'Hawks lost one of their two fumbles also.

"The penalties killed us,"

Ridgeway said.

Despite the miscues, the Bulldogs (2-2) will take the momentum from this victory into next week as they begin Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference play. They host Gooding Thursday.

"This is big for us," Kimberly quarterback Nick Dame said.

Canyon Ridge (0-4) is gearing up for the double-whammy next week: the 'Hawks head for Bruin Stadium in east Twin Falls, where they'll meet the Bruins for the first intercity game, which is also a Great Basin Conference contest.

No place like home

Minico shuts out WR in homecoming

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

RUPERT — The term "homecoming" had a literal meaning for Minico Friday night.

Five weeks into the season, the Minico football team finally played a home game. And while it took a while for them to become reacquainted with where the Bill Mathews Field end zones are located, the Spartans earned a 28-0 win over Wood River to remain unbeaten in Great Basin Conference play.

The game had a déjà vu feeling to Minico's 29-0 win over Burley last week. Just like last week, the teams played a scoreless first half. Just like last week, Minico used its wildcat offense on its first drive of the second half and scored a touchdown. And just like last week, Edgar Espinoza returned an interception for a TD on the ensuing possession to give Minico all the momentum.

"We have a great crowd and our coaches have us pumped up, then we go out there and we just can't perform," said Minico's Moises Iturra, who had an interception and a 53-yard touchdown reception. "We need to step it up (in the first half) in the future if we want to win more games. Can't take anything away from Wood River. They're a great team and we weren't ready to play!"

Wood River (1-3, 0-1) executed its game plan to near perfection in the first half, controlling the clock with running backs Tyler Peters, Alex Padilla and Nathan

No. 8 Broncos aim to ground Falcons on the road

By Dustin Lapray
Times-News correspondent

BOISE — Each time the Boise State Broncos rise in the rankings, the target on their back grows a bit larger. There is just something about playing a Top 10 team that motivates an underdog.

Today, the No. 8 Broncos (3-0) head to Bowling Green State University for a 5 p.m. (MDT) game against a 1-2 Falcon squad looking to establish a tradition of its own under first-year head coach Dave Clawson.

The Falcons utilize the spread offense under the direction of senior quarterback Tyler Sheehan, who set two BGSU passing records in a 17-10 loss to Marshall last week. Sheehan was 43-of-62 passing for 383 yards. The attempts and completions were both school records, and the yardage total was the second-highest of his career.

"I really like (Sheehan)," BSU head coach Chris Petersen said. "He can make all the throws, he can throw it to the wide side of the field. He hangs in the pocket nice."

Championship night lights up Magic Valley Speedway

By Linda Brittsan
Times-News correspondent

Among other contests, two family feuds will be settled — at least as far as the 2009 championships are concerned — this evening at Magic Valley Speedway.

Battles have been fought on the grounds south of Twin Falls since early April and tonight track champions will be crowned in the Budweiser Super Stocks, NAPA Pony Stocks, Magic Valley Pipe Street Stocks, Quale's Electronics Hornets and Jr. Stingers. The Idaho Six Cylinder Racing League will celebrate a new champion as well.

Kris McKean is holding fast in the Super Stocks Series with a 59-point lead going into tonight's rounds, but while his lead is comfortable, it is not insurmountable.

"You always have to be confident though or otherwise when you go out there you're not going to earn your best," he said. "I am a little bit nervous because Jerry (McKean) is a good driver. It's really just a matter of who stays out of trouble and can get to the top first."

Uncle Jerry is Kris' closest rival with Allen Williams running third in the standings, 52 points behind Jerry McKean.

"I don't really have a chance to win the championship," said Jerry McKean. "I am just going to go out there and try and win the race. I really want to do that for (Jonathon) Gomez, who have been helping me out all year long."

Kris McKean says it's the ones in the background who got him to this point.

"The guys down at the shop have done a great job keeping the car running fast and in top shape," he said. "And my crew chief Bill Stanley has helped me out a lot. Every week there's something we have to do, but it's a group decision."

Especially for tonight, Kris McKean hopes everyone makes the right decisions.

"You just have to be on top of your game," he said. "We're going to go out there and get the best finish we can — hopefully a win. But the championship is always more important."

As for the other title battles, NAPA Pony Stocks driver Raymond Homolka has accumulated the biggest point spread in the local classes with a 125-point advantage over second-place Michael Stuart.

POINTS STANDINGS

Pepsi Late Models: 1. Kris McKean 1,404; 2. TJ Woodhall 1,284; 3. Dan Lowther 1,226; 4. Jeff Wade 1,190; 5. Lonnie Lowder 1,181.

Budweiser Super Stocks: 1. Kris McKean 1,436; 2. Jerry McKean 1,377; 3. Allen Williams 1,325; 4. Daniel Shirley 1,151; Jason Abbott 1,150.

NAPA Pony Stocks: 1. Raymond Homolka 1,051; 2. Michael Stuart 926; 3. Josh Pitz 896; 4. Wade Henslee 889; 5. Todd Audet 462.

Magic Valley Pipe Street Stocks: 1. John Newell 1,273; 2. Steve Edens 1,247; 3. Craig Nuthak 1,191; 4. Rosalee Weller 1,126; 5. Chase Carraway 1,122.

Quale's Electronics Hornets: 1. Bob Gilligan 1,124; 2. Jeff Peck 1,076; 3. Jenna Quale 985; 4. JB Rogers 907; 5. Casey Pehrson 882.

Jr. Stingers: 1. Taylor Patrick 812; 2. Dustin Patrick 763; 3. Russell Dalton 750; 4. Hannah Newhouse 562; 5. Caitlin Stroebel 110.

Idaho Six Cylinders: 1. Dean Waltman 550; 2. Randy Sellars 382; 3. Bob Parks 366; 4. Bob Bachman 347; 5. Jasen Skyberg 337.

However, with just 26 points separating rookie in the series John Newell and 2008 champion Steve Edens, the stage is set for a classic battle in the Magic Valley Pipe Street Stocks series. In addition newcomers to the division, Rosalee Weller and Chase Carraway, stand just four points apart as they vie for fourth-place bragging rights in the final standings.

Quale's Electronics Hornets driver Jeff Peck has been sizzling lately with victories in the previous two main events. Peck captured the title in the division for 2007 but Bob Gilligan will be pushing hard to make up the 48 point deficit to Peck in an effort to repeat his 2008 championship.

A sibling rivalry has formed in the Jr. Stingers championship run with Taylor and Dustin Patrick the contenders for the title. Taylor will be defending her 49 point advantage over her brother as they compete for their first series championship.

Last but not least the Super Sixes will be closing out their season with Dean Waltman poised to shut the door on a stellar year.

Gates open at 3 p.m., qualifying begins at 5:30 and green flag racing for the championships begins at 6.

Martinez screamer lifts Jerome boys over Burley at home

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

JEROME — Sergio Martinez wheeled away from the penalty area, on a beeline for the Burley supporters.

The Jerome senior earned a yellow card for letting the fans know the score, but no one could deny him the right to celebrate.

Martinez smashed a 25-yard strike between Burley keeper Taylor Whitehead and the post in the last minute of normal time as Jerome stormed back from two goals down to bag a vital 3-2 win on Friday.

"I saw an opening and decided to take a shot. Fortunately the ball didn't bounce and I hit it solid," said Martinez. "The space kept opening up and I thought I was going to see the goalie throw himself at it. At first I thought it hit the post but when I saw the net move, there was just relief. This was important for us."

Fermin Martinez hit the other two goals for Jerome (13-1-0, 6-1-0 Great Basin, 18 pts.), including a smash of his own four minutes ahead of his namesake's. The Tigers waited until late to salvage a win, after being upset in their previous conference match by Wood River.

But as Burley coach Wes Nyblade said, the Tigers showed why they are two-time defending conference champions by simply finding a way to win.

The Bobcats (6-3-2, 3-3-1, 10 pts.) had their game plan working to perfection, as long-ball passing over the top led to goals when Gustavo Castaneda and Woody Anguiano both

"At first I thought it hit the post but when I saw the net move, there was just relief. This was important for us."

— Jerome senior Sergio Martinez

were able to spring the off-side trap within minutes of each other in the first half.

But a hotly-disputed penalty near the end of the first half gave Jerome momentum, and in the second half Burley lost its two best players within minutes of each other. Alex Magana reaggrieved an ankle injury when he stepped on a teammate's foot, and Anguiano received a second yellow card for dissent after voicing his displeasure to the referee about the way the match was being officiated.

After that, things fell apart for the visitors.

"We just were gassed in that second half. We had a pretty bad injury, and then the sending off, so we played 25 minutes without our two playmakers," Nyblade said. "No excuses, though. Jerome is a fine team and they scored two hellacious goals at the end. I'm proud of my team for the way they competed."

The loss essentially locks Burley into the conference's third seed for the postseason tournament, while Jerome leads Wood River by two points with three matches to play.

The Bobcats will play at Century today, while Jerome is at Minico on Monday.

Gabbert leads undefeated Missouri past Nevada

RENO, Nev. (AP) — Blaine Gabbert passed for 414 yards and three touchdowns, including scoring tosses of 74 and 31 yards to Danario Alexander, to help Missouri beat Nevada 31-21 on Friday night.

Alexander finished with nine catches for a career-high 170 yards, and Grant Resel made all four of his field-goal attempts to run his streak to 10 for 10 this season for the Tigers (4-0), who have won a school-record 14 consecutive nonconference games.

Luke Lippincott ran for 114 yards for the Wolf Pack (0-3), who took a 13-7 lead on the first series of the second half on Colin Kaepernick's 11-yard touchdown run and had a chance to regain the lead early in the fourth quarter before Lippincott fumbled on Missouri's 4.

that, but I guess our team wasn't on top of our game the first three quarters," said Quenton.

Brady Barton's fumble recovery set Twin Falls up at Century's 20-yard line in the second quarter, but the Bruins lost 12 yards on their first play from scrimmage and wound up punting.

Josh Settlement had a 17-yard reception and a 20-yard run to put the Bruins at the Century 19 later in the quarter, but the drive ended in a missed field goal.

"It was a disappointing night," said Reynolds, who called Century "a very beatable team."

Ellis finished just 15 of 39 for 121 yards and four picks. Borchert, Emilio Guerrero and Albert Ramirez were among those with interceptions for Century.

Trailing 7-0 late in the game, the Bruins failed to convert on third-and-1 at their own 39-yard line. Ellis sneaked the ball on fourth-and-inches, but a measurement left Twin Falls a few inches short.

Quenton and Borchert each ripped off 18-yard runs to set up Borchert's game-sealing score.

"On that last drive, we were blocking like we usually do and got that touchdown," said Quenton.

Reynolds chalked Century's final drive up to his defense simply being on the field too much.

Owning the time of possession, the Wolverines kept Minico's offense off the field. When the Spartans did have the ball, several drives were marred by seven first-half penalties.

Zamberlin faces former team in ISU's home opener

Minico grad Morgan expected to see action

By Mark Liptak
Times-News correspondent

POCATELLO — Today's game is an important one for John Zamberlin and the Idaho State Bengals. After a brutal three-game road stretch, ISU hosts Central Washington at 3:30 p.m. today in its home opener.

For Zamberlin, there may be added pressure today. He is in the final year of his contract and no extension news has been forthcoming from ISU. The last thing the third-year coach needs is to lose a home opener to an NCAA Division II program.

But Central Washington isn't your typical D-II squad. The Wildcats boast a 4-0 record with many players still on the roster that Zamberlin recruited during his 10-year tenure at the school. Zamberlin is the coach who built the Wildcats into a Division II powerhouse and knows how good they are.

"They've got a very good program," he said. "We recruited a lot of those kids and they've gotten a lot of transfers for other programs that can play. Their middle linebacker for example is 6-2, 260 pounds and transferred from Alabama. They've got a good defense and they like to throw the football."

ISU was originally slated to play Montana-Western to open the season, but the NCAA ruled the projected game date was too early in the year and disallowed the contest. The Bengals were forced to scramble to pick up another game and Central Washington was the only program available. It puts Zamberlin in an awkward position.

"I really wish we weren't going to play them this early," he said. "I did think we could get a game with them a few years down the road, but it is what it is."

Still, Zamberlin is focused on one thing. "I want to beat them," he said of his former team. "Heck, this program needs to beat them."

To do it, his Bengals 0-3, are going to need to fix some issues that plagued them in their 44-17 loss last week at Weber State. They got called for 15 penalties, which hampered any offensive productivity. Three turnovers didn't help matters.

"We definitely have to work to clean up some of those things," Zamberlin said.

The Bengals are also fighting injuries with changes being made on the offensive line and in the backfield. Braeden Clayton moves back to left guard as that unit is being shuffled due to an injury to Lance Cartwright. Minico's Skylar "Poke" Morgan, slated to redshirt this fall, may also see his first action due to injuries to fellow running backs Clint Knickrehm and Ben Laporta.

"I was talking to Skylar at practice and asked him what he thought," said Zamberlin. "He said 'Let's do it! He's a confident kid. We'll see what happens.'"

Twin Falls High product Bryant Ward, coming off a four-catch performance with a touchdown last week, remains the starting H-back.

Vandals face tough test at NIU

By Josh Wright
Times-News correspondent

MOSCOW — The Idaho Vandals should get another good barometer for how legitimate their surprising start really is when the visit North Illinois this afternoon.

Northern Illinois went toe-to-toe with Wisconsin before losing 28-20, then upended Purdue on the road last week. NIU probably doesn't have the same talent level as Washington, which handed Idaho its only loss thus far, but the Mid American Conference school might be more well-rounded.

"I think it's the best defense we've seen to this date from an overall standpoint," Idaho offensive coordinator Steve Axman said.

Vandals have fallen flat in recent years. But this is a different Idaho squad, starting with a much-improved passing game and a run defense that ranks first in the WAC and 29th in the country.

The defense will be tested by NIU, which averages 208 rushing yards per game, led by Me'co Brown's 6.5 yards per carry and Chad Spann's six TDs.

"We've got a great challenge in front of this week," Idaho coach Robb Akey said.

Humbled BYU hosts Colorado State

PROVO, Utah (AP) — BYU has already endured a season's worth of highs and lows just a month into the schedule.

A humbling 54-28 loss to Florida State last week in Provo changed the 19th-ranked Cougars' hopes from the BCS, possibly even a national championship, to winning the Mountain West Conference title.

The lopsided loss at home overshadowed what BYU did by upsetting then third-ranked Oklahoma in the season opener. The Cougars open conference play today against Colorado State, hoping to stem the disappointment from a week before.

"On the long horizon I'd love to win a national championship, but this is a work in progress toward that," coach Bronco Mendenhall said.

Despite the bleak feeling in LaVell Edwards Stadium as fans left long before the game ended last week, the season is not over. The Cougars (2-1) still have nine games remaining and can win a third Mountain West title in the last four years.

Colorado State (3-0) and TCU are the only MWC teams without a loss. The Rams nearly upset the Cougars last year in Fort Collins, but quarterback Max Hall saved BYU with a 76-yard drive and touchdown with 22 seconds remaining for a 45-42 win.

Hall tried to save the Cougars last week after Florida State continued to pull ahead, but threw three interceptions, including one that was returned 63 yards for a touchdown that really unraveled BYU.

"We all know we don't play nearly as well when we press and move away from our identity," Mendenhall said. "That's something we can continue to work on."

BYU finished with five turnovers and allowed Florida State to rush for 313 yards. The Seminoles also converted on third down 12 of 15 times.

The Cougars had just held Tulane to three points and 162 yards of offense the week

Utah recovering from first loss since 2007

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Utah hasn't recovered from a loss in a long time.

The Utes haven't had to until now. Utah (2-1) hosts Louisville (1-1) today (5:30 p.m., CBS College Sports), trying to shake off last week's 31-24 loss at Oregon that ended the Utes' 16-game winning streak.

"When you're not accustomed to losing, it tears your heart out," Utah offensive lineman Zane Taylor said. "But this isn't going to kill us. This isn't going to ruin our season. We're going to truck on and keep winning games."

Utah and Louisville last met in 2007, when the Utes won 44-35 and got back to .500 after a 1-3 start. Utah didn't lose again until the final regular season game at BYU, which was also the last time the Utes lost at all before the trip to Oregon last week.

The loss knocked Utah out of the AP Top 25 for the first time since the 2008 preseason poll.

"The key is going to be how we react to this," coach Kyle Whittingham said. "We haven't been in this situation for awhile but we have a Louisville team that is coming in and is very similar to Oregon in that they have talent, speed and athleticism."

before and allowed Oklahoma to score only a touchdown and two field goals.

"I hope we can stay a very confident defense — a defense that's going to get after it and work hard," defensive end Jan Jorgensen said. "Hopefully that game doesn't take away from what we've done already and for what we have the potential to do."

BYU has beaten Colorado State five straight times and haven't lost a conference game at home since 2005.

THIS WEEK'S OTHER BIG GAMES

NO. 9 MIAMI (2-0)
AT NO. 11 VIRGINIA TECH
1:30 p.m. (ABC)

Line: Miami by 2½.
Series Record: Miami leads 17-9.
Last Meeting: 2008, Miami won 16-14.

What's at Stake

This may be the most difficult game left on the schedule for both teams, and as Coastal Division members in the Atlantic Coast Conference, the winner becomes the favorite to win the division — and reach the ACC championship game at the end of the regular season.

Key Matchup

Miami QB Jacory Harris against the Virginia Tech defense. Harris has been so good in two games his name is suddenly being mentioned in Heisman talk. He's only been sacked once and plays behind a surprisingly strong offensive line, but Virginia Tech is likely to work hard to find a way to see how good Harris can be when he's not in a comfortable backfield cocoon.

Notes: Virginia Tech has beaten its old Big East rival nine times in their last 14 meetings. ... Miami's ranking is its first inside the top 10 since the final poll of 2005.

FRESNO STATE (1-2)
AT NO. 14 CINCINNATI (3-0)
Noon, Saturday
(ESPN Regional)

Line: Cincinnati by 14.
Series Record: First meeting.

What's at Stake

Cincinnati is trying to build on the momentum of its second 3-0 start in the last three years. This one has put the Bearcats in the discussion of top teams in the country. Cincinnati's highest ranking was No. 12 — at the end of last season, after the Bearcats had won the Big East and a berth in the Orange Bowl, where they lost to Virginia Tech. Fresno State is coming off two stinging losses — 34-31 at Wisconsin in double overtime and 51-34 against No. 10 Boise State last week.

Key Matchup

Cincinnati's defense proved it can win a game when the offense is merely above-average. The defense, which had 10 new starters this season, held Oregon State in check for a 28-18 win last weekend. Now, it has to stop what Cincinnati coach Brian Kelly calls "arguably the best offensive team we've seen in quite some time." The Bulldogs are fourth in the nation in rushing.

NO. 15 TCU (2-0)
AT CLEMSON (2-1)
1:30 p.m.

Line: Clemson by 2½.
Series Record: Clemson leads 2-1.
Last Meeting: 1965, Clemson 3-0.

What's at Stake

TCU can boost its Bowl Championship Series credentials with a second win at an Atlantic Coast Conference opponent, although the intersectional matchup will only be available to watch on the Internet. The Horned Frogs opened their season with a 30-14 victory at Virginia two weeks ago. Clemson is seeking its first win over a ranked opponent since Dabo Swinney took over as coach at midseason last year. The Tigers have lost to both ranked teams they faced since — Florida State last November and Georgia Tech two weeks ago.

Key Matchup

Clemson RB C.J. Spiller vs. TCU Defense: The Tigers star had 225 all-purpose yards against Boston College last week. TCU's defense has given up just 88 yards rushing through two games. The Horned Frogs are allowing just 213 yards per game.

BSU

isn't all he does.

"They line him up at quarterback in the Wildcat formation," Petersen said. "He can do a lot of things. He's a playmaker, a good athlete. He's the leading receiver in the country — there's a reason for that."

Most of Barnes' catches are for short yardage in the screen game.

"He's a big physical guy, he's almost like a running back. He can take that pounding," Clawson said. "He is clearly our best receiver, and the No. 1 playmaker we have on offense."

The Broncos should have the tools to stop the passing attack. BSU's defensive pass efficiency rating in its 4-2-5 scheme ranks eighth nationally.

On the flip side, the Falcons have struggled to stop the run this season, yielding 156 yards a game. Against BSU, they cannot load the box to stop the run game or Kellen Moore and his receivers will pick them apart in play-action.

"They kind of line up and run a standard defense, a lot like what we saw from Fresno (State), but they mix up their blitzes very well," BSU fullback Richie Brockel said.

Clawson knows his defense faces a tough task today.

"If there's any weakness in your team, it gets exposed against Boise," Clawson said. "You can be up 21-0 in the first quarter and not be safe."

BSU is the highest-ranked team ever to play in Perry Stadium. The Broncos have won both previous meetings between the teams. Clawson downplayed the hype of playing the No. 8 Broncos.

"I don't think there can be changing motivation levels depending on who you play," Clawson said. "If your players can't get up for all 12 of your games, you have issues."

The Broncos feel the same, knowing one slip can ruin their BCS dreams.

"We know we're going to get everybody's best shot," Petersen said. "They're all big games when we play in them. The more they talk about you, the higher-ranked you are, the better effort you're gonna get out of the other side."

Stoker, Declo run past Filer

Times-News

McCoy Stoker ran for four first-half touchdowns as Declo celebrated homecoming with a 59-8 shellacking of Filer on Friday night.

Tyler Briggs opened the scoring with a touchdown catch and added two running scores for the Hornets (4-0).

"Our blocking up front was tremendous," said Declo coach Kelly Kidd, who praised Sage Warner, Drew Matsen, Brandon Hurst and Jared Pateson. "They did a marvelous job of blocking."

Filer was shut out until Colton Baratti's late touchdown run.

Declo travels to Wendell next Thursday, while Filer hosts Buhl.

Glenns Ferry led 46-8 after the first play of the fourth quarter, before the Trojans (2-2) scored 22 unanswered points to make the scoreline respectable.

"For a good portion of the game I thought our defense played really well," said Glenns Ferry coach Rob Spriggs. "We kind of broke down a little in the fourth quarter, but I thought we did a good job on countering what they were trying to do offensively."

The Pilots are off next week before traveling to undefeated Buhl on Oct. 9.

HAGERMAN 58, SHO-BAN 6

Zach Reid returned the opening kickoff for a Hagerman touchdown and the Pirate special teams posted three more scores as Hagerman beat the host Chiefs 58-6 in Snake River Conference action.

The game ended at the half due to the 45-point rule. "It was an important conference win," said Hagerman coach Ed Pinger. "It's a short week, and now we have to get ready for Challis on Wednesday."

For the game, Hagerman recorded 139 total yards, and the Chiefs were held to 76 yards.

CAREY 54, DIETRICH 8

Carey moved to 4-1 overall and 3-1 in the Sawtooth Conference as the Panthers beat the visiting Dietrich Blue Devils 54-8. The game ended with seven minutes remaining in the fourth quarter due to the 45-point rule.

"Our defense really flew to the ball tonight," said Carey coach Lane Kirkland. "We had seven sacks and 15 tackles for losses. After a good week of practice to regroup both mentally and physically, we were not going to get beat tonight. It was an overall great team effort. The special teams came alive tonight."

The Panthers had a balanced offensive attack with 133 yards rushing and 137 yards through the air. Gonzalo Zarate was the leading rusher for Carey, gaining 79 yards on eight carries and two touchdowns. Peck was 6 of 14 for 101 yards and threw touchdown passes of 12 yards to Wacey Barg and 39 yards to Zarate.

The Panther defense was led by Peck at linebacker with 18 tackles (three tackles for losses), two sacks and an interception. Dillon Simpson recorded 11 tackles and one sack.

Girls soccer

JEROME 2, BURLEY 1

Aubree Callen scored the match winner as the Jerome girls soccer team won 2-1 at Burley on Friday night.

The Bobcats trailed 2-0 at halftime but got a goal from Gelyn Pauly after the break. They couldn't take advantage of their shot edge to find the equalizer, however.

Burley hosts Century today.

Gordon wants elusive 5th title, first in Chase era

DOVER, Del. (AP) — His career championship count has been stuck on four since 2001. Jeff Gordon might as well have reset that number to zero since the inception of the Chase for the championship.

Gordon has done it all in a career that long ago marked him as one of NASCAR's all-time greats.

The one blemish is failing to have won a Cup championship since the Chase format was instituted in 2004. He's seemingly figured out everything in the No. 24 Chevrolet, winning Daytona and the Brickyard, except how to find that consistent streak over the final 10 races to win that elusive fifth title.

If NASCAR ever went back to the old way of deciding a champion, Gordon probably wouldn't complain.

"Do I wish that we had the old points system? Sort of," Gordon said Friday. "I liked the old points system. It worked very well for me, but that is a personal thing."

The 38-year-old Gordon takes it personally that he hasn't been able to bring home another season title to Hendrick Motorsports. Team owner Rick Hendrick might not mind so much since another of his star drivers, Jimmie Johnson, has won the championship three straight years.

Gordon, who has battled a bad back all season, still has the ambition of a rookie to win it all again.

"I don't like to finish second or anywhere after that. That is what motivates you,"

Gordon said. "I have never won a Sprint Cup before so, to me, it is like never winning a championship. The four that we have won are something that we are very proud of, but it is under the old format, so I feel like we are as hungry as we have ever been to win a championship."

Gordon finished 15th in the first Chase race last week at New Hampshire and sits in 10th place heading into Week 2 at Dover International Speedway. He's 102 points behind leader Mark Martin, also a Hendrick teammate.

Gordon finished seventh last season.

The 50-year-old Martin won four races in the 26-race regular season leading up to the Chase. Gordon no longer takes a spin in Victory Lane with the same regularity as he did in the late 1990s (three straight double-digit win totals) or even as recently as 2007 (six times).

He shockingly failed to win a race last year for the first time since 1993 and had only one victory this season. He's still had 25 top-five finishes in the last two years to at least position himself as a contender over the final two months of the season.

"This past offseason was a huge motivator for me because it was the most time I have ever had to really relax and step away and realize how much me personally wanted to come back this year and be very competitive and put behind us the year that we had last year," Gordon said.

Woods holds narrow lead after Tour Round 2

ATLANTA — Tiger Woods had the lead and was ready to turn the Tour Championship into a run-away Friday.

First came a 5-wood up the hill on the par-5 15th that narrowly cleared the bunker, hopped onto the green and rolled toward the flag until it stopped just over 4 feet away. On the next hole, Woods started walking before his shot began its descent to inside 4 feet.

There were so many fans around the 16th green that it was hard to read the video board showing Woods' PGA Tour ranking on putts between 4 and 5 feet. No one would have been surprised to see that Woods had only missed seven from that length all year.

This time, he missed them both. Woods still wound up in the lead Friday at East Lake with a 2-under 68, one shot ahead of Padraig Harrington and Sean O'Hair.

CVS/PHARMACY LPGA CHALLENGE

DANVILLE, Calif. — Sophie Gustafson shot a 3-under 69 to take a one-stroke lead over Lorena Ochoa, Maria Hjorth and Shanshan Feng in the CVS/pharmacy LPGA Challenge.

After opening with a 65 on Thursday, Gustafson missed three eagle putts and struggled with her touch on the greens Friday at Blackhawk Country Club.

VIVENDI TROPHY

SAINT-NOM-LA-BRETECHE, France — Simon Dyson and Oliver Wilson beat Henrik Stenson and Alvaro Quiros 2 and 1 in fourball play to help Britain and Ireland take a 6-4 after two days in the Vivendi Trophy matches against Continental Europe.

Ross Fisher and Nick Dougherty edged Soren Hansen and Peter Hanson 3 and 2, and Anthony Wall and Chris Wood beat Miguel Angel Jimenez and Soren Kjeldsen 3 and 2 in Britain and Ireland's other victories.

Rockies enhance grip on Wild Card

DENVER — Yorvit Torrealba's sacrifice fly scored Troy Tulowitzki from third base with the winning run in the bottom of the ninth and the Colorado Rockies edged St. Louis 2-1 on Friday night.

That prevented the Cardinals from becoming the first team in the majors to clinch their division and kept the Rockies 3½ games ahead of Atlanta in the NL wild-card race.

BRAVES 4, NATIONALS 1

WASHINGTON — Javier Vazquez allowed a run and three hits in his third complete game of the season, leading Atlanta past Washington.

PIRATES 3, DODGERS 1

PITTSBURGH — Brandon Moss' two-run single gave Pittsburgh an early lead and the Pirates, stuck in their worst slump since 1984, used five pitchers to beat Los Angeles.

METS 6, MARLINS 5

MIAMI — Pinch-hitter Cory Sullivan delivered a go-ahead, two-run single in the ninth inning for New York.

Florida spoiled the Mets' postseason chances in each of the last two seasons but it was New York dealing out a damaging loss this year. The Marlins, who fell five games behind NL wild card-leading Colorado, led 5-4 in the ninth but couldn't hold it.

BREWERS 8, PHILLIES 4

MILWAUKEE — Prince Fielder hit his 43rd homer and drove in four runs to become the major league leader for RBIs, powering Milwaukee past Philadelphia.

Fielder hit a run-scoring single in the first and a three-run shot in the fifth to give him 136 RBIs — one more than the Phillies' Ryan Howard.

REDS 10, ASTROS 4

HOUSTON — Joey Votto drove in four runs with a homer and a double and Cincinnati won its fifth straight.

Jay Bruce had a homer and double and Juan Francisco went 3 for 5 for the Reds who have won 9 of 11 and 22 of 32.

Colorado Rockies shortstop Troy Tulowitzki (2), right, is congratulated by teammates after scoring the game winning home run during the ninth inning of Friday's game in Denver.

Friday night, while Joba Chamberlain picked up his first win in 1½ months.

Alex Rodriguez homered, drove in four runs and tied a career high with three steals as the Yankees lowered to three the magic number for their first AL East title since 2006.

BLUE JAYS 5, MARINERS 0

TORONTO — Roy Halladay struck out nine in a seven-hitter and Aaron Hill hit a two-run homer as Toronto blanked Seattle.

INDIANS 4, ORIOLES 2

CLEVELAND — Fausto Carmona pitched six strong innings and Cleveland ended its 11-game losing streak.

The Indians improved to 4-19 in September and avoided tying the franchise record of 12 straight losses set in 1931.

WHITE SOX 2, TIGERS 0

CHICAGO — Jake Peavy pitched seven innings and Gordon Beckham homered to break up Eddie Bonine's no-hit bid as the White Sox slowed Detroit's chase of the AL Central title.

RANGERS 8, RAYS 3

ARLINGTON, Texas — Ian Kinsler homered to become a 30-30 player for the first time, Julio Borbon had three hits and Texas clung to its slim playoff hopes.

TWINS 9, ROYALS 4

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Michael Cuddyer hit his 30th home run and walked with the bases loaded and the Minnesota Twins moved within two games of first-place Detroit in the AL Central.

Pearl apologizes for KKK joke at fundraiser

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Tennessee coach Bruce Pearl apologized for a joking remark that linked the rural home of one his players to the Ku Klux Klan.

The Volunteers' fifth-season coach was caught on camera Thursday by WBIR-TV during a charity fundraising event describing the challenge of shaping a team of players from different backgrounds.

"I've got a tough job," the Boston native said. "I've got to put these guys from different worlds together, right? I've got guys from Chicago, Detroit. I'm talking about the 'hood! And I've got guys from Grainger County, where they wear the hood!"

The audience laughed loudly, but after WBIR-TV aired the remarks the coach issued an apology.

"I made the statement in jest to describe the diverse group our staff recruits year-in and year-out," Pearl said in a statement released Friday to The Associated Press. "Unfortunately while I was trying to excite the crowd and encourage employees to give, I made an inappropriate joke."

He said he "certainly did not intend to offend anyone and I apologize to everyone, especially the people of Grainger County," the northeast Tennessee county that's home to freshman Skylar McBee.

"There's no hard feelings at all," McBee's father, Doug McBee, told The Knoxville News Sentinel. "We are country up here, but we're not prejudiced. It was a joke, and that's how I took it."

The family of U.S. Army Cpl. Max Bailey filled the first two rows of chairs as Bailey received his last rites during a ceremony in Rupert. Bailey was assumed to be killed in the Korean War battle at Chosin Reservoir on Nov. 30, 1950, along with 1,600 other American soldiers. His remains have never been recovered.

Officers can also be cited for traffic violations

Q: If an officer sees another officer break the rules of the road, does the observing officer have the obligation to pull over and cite the offending officer? Can a citizen sign a complaint against any officer observed breaking the rules of the road when they are not headed to an emergency?

POLICEMAN DAN
Dan Bristol

A: That's a tricky question to answer, as it really depends on the situation. I know that's a political type of answer, but the truth is that a slew of factors can come into play.

Here's one situation: An officer needs to quickly and quietly travel to a crime scene where using officer lights or sirens could tip off criminals. The emergency vehicle may speed and change lanes without signaling, but the driving officer would be exempt from following traffic laws. This doesn't mean the officer can drive like he or she's turning down the backstretch at the Daytona 500, because an officer who causes a crash while heading to a crime scene would still be liable.

If the officer is driving in such a manner without an emergency to justify it, then an observing officer should make contact with the offending officer and use his or her best discretion to determine if a citation should be issued. Officer discretion is used with all drivers, so favoritism shouldn't become a factor.

Ethics come into play if an officer frequently breaks the rules of the road. I'd hope that one warning would be enough to remind that officer to exercise more restraint in his or her driving habits so another officer wouldn't be forced issue a citation that could spark some animosity.

In the more than 15 years I've been in law enforcement, I've never had to deal with the driver of an emergency vehicle breaking the rules of the road around me.

However, I'd add that any officer who thinks he or she has the right to disobey the rules of the road while driving their personal vehicle is grossly mistaken. Any off-duty officer driving in a negligent manner should expect to be ticketed like anyone else. My theory is that an officer shouldn't cite anybody for a violation they do themselves.

As for whether a citizen can sign a citation against an on-duty officer, yes, they can. Of course, it would have to be proven that the officer wasn't headed to a call or setting up for the enforcement of traffic compliance. Officers can supersede the rules of the road to enforce traffic laws.

Officers may sometimes be exempt from the rules of the road but we are not exempt from the liability and consequences we could create for ourselves or others through dangerous driving. Great care must always be taken while behind the wheel. Automotive accidents have been and still are the leading cause of officer fatalities — including this week's officer down.

Officer down

Please put this officer, killed in the line of duty, and his family in your prayers. God bless him.

Rupert gives last rites to missing Korean War soldier

By Coreen Hart
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — Mini-Cassia veterans sent a clear message during the second annual POW-MIA Day, held Sept. 19 in Rupert. They have not, nor will ever, forget those who were lost in battle.

The family of U.S. Army Cpl. Max Leon Bailey filled two long rows of seats as the last letter Bailey sent to his mother was read by event organizer George Maas during a ceremony of final burial rites for the Korean War soldier.

Like many soldiers, Bailey promised to answer all their letters he received. He wrote he'd been at a dance a few nights before and promised to send some photographs. He said he missed his family and longed to take his place at their dinner table once again.

Less than one week later, Bailey disappeared into a harsh winter day on a Korean War battlefield.

Know a Mini-Cassia veteran

POW-MIA Day organizers George Maas, Larry Cottom and others are seeking names of Mini-Cassia soldiers who were prisoners of war or missing in action for their roster of soldiers to remember. If you know of someone who should be included, contact Maas, 436-0151.

The Hazelton-born teenager, who enlisted in the Army against the wishes of his parents, was assigned to a heavy mortar unit and went with it to the Chosin Reservoir, Korea, where on Nov. 30, 1950, he presumably fell in a bloody, 17-day battle that claimed the lives of more than 1,000 U.S. soldiers and tens of thousands of Chinese soldiers.

Bailey's remains were among those never recovered from the battlefield.

In an effort to find and identify his remains, several family members have given DNA material, hoping that someday there will be a match. They know only that he is believed to be buried in a shallow grave against the foot of the Taebaek Mountains. Because the ground was frozen by temperatures sometimes reaching -35 degrees Fahrenheit, graves were only a foot deep.

Bailey was posthumously awarded the Purple Heart and other medals for his wartime service.

Last Saturday in Rupert, a large audience attended as the "Star Spangled Banner" and other patriotic songs rang out to begin the ceremony. To honor Bailey, a table was adorned with empty wine glasses, black napkins marking the empty place where Bailey should be seated and a single red rose.

Four uniformed servicemen conducted the symbolic service, opening and re-folding an American flag before inverting wine glasses, indicating the blood spilled by the nation's fighting servicemen.

The American flag and MIA flag were presented to Geneva Tadlock, 81, who is Bailey's sister.

"Thank you for remembering my brother," she said softly. "We have never forgotten him."

A 15-gun salute and the playing of "Taps" followed the flag presentation.

"Please remember our POWs and MIAs," said Larry Cottom at the conclusion of the service.

Following the ceremony was the dedication of the city's new POW-MIA memorial on the Rupert Square. North of the gazebo a paved area with two flag poles bearing three flags have been placed by a granite bench. Organizers said they hope the memorial will be used by family members and veterans as a place to remember and to honor soldiers.

Rep. Bert Stevenson, R-Rupert; Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert; and Rupert Mayor Paul Fries took part in the dedication. There was a moment of silence, and then Bailey's family members closed in to study the memorial.

Cameron said in his address, "We honor them when we stand up for our freedoms, the freedoms for which they died. We will always be prepared, so we will always be free."

Stevenson urged the audience to never stop hoping that all American soldiers will be found and returned to U.S. soil.

"We will try to recover the remains of those who are missing in action," he said. "In our hearts we never stop wondering what happened to them."

Jerome church members put faith into action by

Serving on the Sabbath

Story and photos by Andrew Weeks

Times-News writer

JEROME — As 82-year-old Mary Crabtree watched four members of The Believers Church paint her back porch, she spoke about how nice it was to have people care enough to do something for her that she couldn't do herself.

"I think it's great," she said. "It's nice for them to give up their Sunday to do something like this."

The four were part of a couple dozen or so members of the church who, after a 30-minute worship service, went to their cars — supplies in hand — and headed off in different directions to exemplify the instruction of James to serve the elderly and widowed.

One group went to a senior's home to chop and stack wood; two other groups split up to do yard work at two other homes. Ashley Gines of Gooding, John Babcock of Jerome, and Mike and Stephanie Pierre of Twin Falls visited Crabtree's trailer home to paint her back porch.

"This is not about us," Mike Pierre said as he pushed a paint brush across wooden railings. "We're here showing them that we care."

Stephanie and Mike Pierre, of Twin Falls, and Jerome resident John Babcock, background, paint Mary Crabtree's back porch Sunday in Jerome. Members of The Believers Church get together one Sunday every other month to serve the community's elderly and widowed.

The Believers Church, 100 Ave. E., Jerome, meets at 10:30 a.m. for Sunday services. Faith in Action is held on the third Sunday every other month. For more information: 404-1747

The Pierres have been members of the church since November 2008. After attending other churches in the valley, they found their niche at The Believers Church, they said.

"Everybody has a spot (where they fit in)," Stephanie said. "This is our spot."

Part of what makes the church a good fit for them, the couple said, is being able to get with other congregants one Sunday every other month to serve those who need it most.

"This was one of those things that just clicked," Mike Pierre said of his membership in the church.

"We're willing to serve all types of people — Christian, Mormon, Buddhist, it doesn't make any difference."

Weather doesn't make a difference either. Even a wind storm that started Sunday morning, stirring dust in the air, didn't hamper their service. In winter church members plan to shovel snow, wash windows and do other tasks to help those in the community.

Lutheran church grapples with change

By Jacqueline L. Salmon
The Washington Post

"We are struggling. We are really struggling."

— St. Martin's pastor, the Rev. Gerald A. Miller, in a letter to his congregation

St. Martin's Evangelical Lutheran Church of Annapolis is a house of worship on the brink. It recently voted to explore leaving the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America because of the denomination's decision last month to allow gay people in committed relationships to serve as clergy.

St. Martin's pastor, the Rev. Gerald A. Miller, said he isn't sure whether his church will leave the 4.6-million member ELCA to join another Lutheran denomination.

"We are struggling," said Miller, who wrote a heartfelt letter to his 1,000-member congregation about the issue of gay clergy last month. "We are really struggling."

On Friday, he and about 1,200 other conservative Lutherans from across the country gathered in an Indianapolis suburb, where many considered whether to walk away from the ELCA.

A similar controversy has strained the Episcopal Church, and whether gay people should be allowed to serve in church leadership roles is a question that also troubles other mainline Protestant denominations.

The ELCA has long allowed celibate gay people to serve, but its national assembly voted last month to let gay people in lifelong, monogamous relationships serve as clergy and professional lay leaders in congregations that want them.

For ELCA conservatives, the decision represented a breakdown in the Scriptural underpinnings of their Lutheran faith. The meeting outside Indianapolis was organized by a conservative umbrella group, Coalition for Reform, whose members believe that the new policy is heresy.

Attendees were invited to form a "free-standing synod" (or diocese) that leaders say will carry out ministries separate from the ELCA and encourage congregations to direct their donations away from the ELCA.

The ELCA, the largest Lutheran denomination in the United States, was formed 21 years ago by the merger of three Lutheran organizations.

"The reality is that many traditional congregations will leave, and many will stay," said Ryan Schwarz, a District of Columbia lay leader of the conservative effort. "We intend to care for both, developing structures that allow both those who leave and those who stay to do so with integrity and to remain in common mission together."

On Wednesday, ELCA Presiding Bishop Mark S. Hanson wrote in a pastoral letter to church leaders that he is "disappointed" that some people are encouraging congregations and members to take actions that "will diminish our capacity for ministry." He warned that such actions could affect the denomination's ability to start churches, send out missionaries and rebuild communities after disasters.

Across the country, other gatherings are taking place as congregations grapple with the change.

America's 'no-religion population' grows, new report finds

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — The growing number of Americans who don't claim religious affiliation are more likely to be male, younger, living in the West and politically independent, a new report finds.

"American Nones: The Profile of the No Religion Population" takes a deeper look at data collected for the American Religious Identification Survey 2008, which was released earlier this year by Trinity College.

The report identified an estimated 34 million adult "nones" in 2008 — up from 14 million in 1990. Those not affiliated with any religion accounted for 15 percent of U.S. population, up from 8.1 percent in 1990. Most of the gains took place during what the authors called the "secular boom" of the 1990s.

If current trends hold true, "nones" could account for about one-quarter of the U.S. population in two decades, the study projects.

The religiously unaffiliated are beginning to more closely resemble the general population as their ranks grow, but distinctions exist on gender and age, the study found. Sixty percent of "nones" are male, and 40 percent are female; 30 percent are under age 30 and only 5 percent are 70 years or older.

The religiously unaffiliated in the U.S. "embrace philosophical and theological beliefs that reflect skepticism rather than overt antagonism toward religion," the report says.

Only 27 percent of "nones" profess belief in a personal God, compared to 70 percent of adults overall. But only a small number of the unaffiliated — 7 percent — are atheists. Groups the study identified as "hard agnostics" and "soft agnostics" accounted for 35 percent of the religiously unaffiliated.

Leprosy patients to see 1800s priest canonized

Father Damien

By Audrey McAvo
Associated Press writer

HONOLULU — Most need wheelchairs. Their average age is 80.

Neither fact is stopping 11 elderly Hawaii leprosy patients from traveling 12,000 miles to the Vatican next month to watch as the Catholic Church canonizes Father Damien — a priest who cared for leprosy patients throughout the islands more than a century ago before dying of the disease himself.

Damien, who was born in Belgium as Joseph de Veuster, remains a beloved figure among many in Hawaii. In the 1870s, the leprosy patients Damien cared for were shunned by most people, even doctors, because of an intense stigma that was associated with the disease.

Today's patients from Kalaupapa, the isolated peninsula where Hawaii's leprosy patients were banished for more than 100 years, feel particularly close to Damien.

Dr. Kalani Brady, their physician, said Thursday the trip to Rome will be an "energy-laden" voyage for many of his patients.

"They're going to see their personal saint canonized," said Brady, 53, who will accompany the group to Rome. It's "incredibly important, incredibly personal for them," he said.

Tourists walk through a cemetery past the grave, left, of Father Damien at Kalawao, Hawaii. Father Damien will be canonized in Rome in October.

The reverence for Damien transcends religious sects, Brady said, noting that one 84-year-old making the trip is Mormon.

"He's bound to a wheelchair, he's completely blind. So it's important enough for him to go, despite the hurdles which he has to overcome," Brady said.

The Catholic Church announced earlier this year that it would make Damien a saint after determining a Hawaii woman was cured of terminal cancer after she prayed to Damien and he interceded on her behalf. The church found there was no medical explanation for the woman's recovery.

Pope Benedict XVI is due to preside over Damien's canonization on Oct. 11. Damien was beatified — a step toward sainthood — in 1995 by Pope John Paul II.

The pope is expected to meet privately with the patients during their stay in Rome.

The 11 are among about 20 patients who still live at Kalaupapa. The Kingdom of Hawaii began banishing leprosy patients to the remote section of Molokai island in the 1860s to control an outbreak of the disease that was killing Native Hawaiians in large numbers.

Many Hawaiians had no natural immunity to leprosy, as well as other diseases that led the Hawaiian population to shrink 70 percent in the seven decades after Captain James Cook, the first European to visit the islands, arrived in 1778.

Some 90 percent of the 8,000 people exiled to Kalaupapa were Native Hawaiians.

Successive governments

continued to exile patients to Kalaupapa for over a century through 1969, when the state of Hawaii finally stopped the practice more than two decades after the discovery of drugs that could treat the disease.

Many patients chose to stay at Kalaupapa even after the medical isolation order was lifted because the community had become their home.

Today, many patients still have to fight the indignity of stereotypes and misperceptions about the illness.

Leprosy, also known as Hansen's disease, is spread by direct person-to-person contact, although it's not easily transmitted. It can cause skin lesions and lead to blindness.

But it's been curable since the development of sulfone drugs in the 1940s, and people treated with drugs aren't contagious.

Damien built homes for the sick, changed their bandages and ate poi, a Hawaiian staple, from the same bowl as the patients. He put up no barriers between himself and those he ministered to.

He was diagnosed with leprosy 12 years after he arrived and died five years later in 1889.

Overall, some 650 people from Hawaii are traveling to Rome for the canonization. Most, between 520 and 550, are expected to be part of the Catholic Diocese of Honolulu's delegation.

Former bank robber found ministry through crime

By Ron Wood
Associated Press writer

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — A slug from a .357-caliber Magnum ended Ken Cooper's 13-year career as a bank robber and started him on the path toward redemption and a network of five prison ministries.

Cooper describes the moment when he encountered a sheriff's deputy as he walked out of his last score in 1982.

"As if in slow motion, fire flashed from the shooter's pistol. The plate glass exploded into fragments, coming at me like glistening darts. A slug slammed into my chest, knocking me backward. Shards of glass pierced and sliced my skin. Fire burned in my chest. Someone screamed, the sound bouncing around my mind like an echo. Everything faded to black," Cooper wrote in his book, "Held Hostage: A Serial Bank Robber's Road to Redemption."

Cooper details his double life as a respectable husband, father and "gentleman bank robber" and the punishment for his crimes: Spending a few years in "The Rock," Florida's toughest prison, known for its murders, rapes and suicides.

But before he got there, he says he found Christ in a county jail while awaiting sentencing. He wrote that his conversion occurred after he fell to his knees and prayed, "Jesus, I'm a horrible sinner; please come into my heart and change me. I've made a terrible mess of my life — and the lives of others."

After being released from prison about four years later, Cooper co-founded five prison ministries, which have sponsored more than 2,000 men coming out of prisons. They are Prisoners of Christ and 20/20 World Vision, Ken Cooper Prison Ministry, in Jacksonville; House of Hope in Gainesville and Mercy House in Tallahassee.

The ministries provide inmates with a place to stay and help with their adjustment to life outside the bars. They teach classes on overcoming addiction at Lawtey Correctional Institution, one of the state's four faith and character-based based prisons. There are also seven facilities with faith-based/self-improvement dorms. Together, they can house 4,855 inmates.

The faith-based prisons are an effort to reduce the number of people returning to prison by offering character-based programming for prisoners.

"A hundred times a year, my wife and I conduct worship services and discipleship classes in prisons where we share the good news that God will save and deliver 'a wretch like me' through Jesus Christ," Cooper said.

"Ken Cooper is the real deal. He is a prison success story who holds out hope for inmates who want to make changes and family members of inmates who hope change is possible," said Chaplain Alex S. Taylor, the head chaplain for the Florida Department of Corrections.

Now a mild-mannered 72-year-old grandfather of six and great grandfather of nine, Cooper began holding up banks for the thrill it provided.

"Pulling holdups is about that adrenaline rush — starting down death. It's not in me to hurt people, and it's really not about the money," Cooper said, adding he averaged about $8,800 per bank.

His "banking job" ended when he was shot July 26, 1982, by a Hillsborough County sheriff's deputy who was responding to an alarm at the Exchange Bank in Tampa.

When he was released from prison, Cooper worked as a newspaper reporter before beginning his ministry.

One man's muddled mind

If my calculations are correct (and that isn't necessarily a given — just ask the IRS), this column is the 1,001st of my column-writing career.

OK, there were all of those other columns I wrote during six years as a TV critic for a daily newspaper. But come on — I was writing about TV. That doesn't really count, does it?

I started writing this weekly column in 1990. I wish I could tell you that I keep doing this week after week because I feel like I'm really making a difference in the world, or there are people out there who need my weekly words. But that would be pretentious — if not an outright lie. Because when it comes right down to it, I do this for me. It is almost completely selfish. I write because I need to write. This is how I cope. This is how I wrestle with the daily dilemmas of life. It isn't just what I do — it's who I am.

Back in 1982, before I had this weekly forum, my Mom died. It wasn't unexpected — she suffered with a lung disease, and we knew the end was coming. When my big brother Bud called me in the middle of the night to let me know that she had passed, I took the news stoically. And Bud was concerned about that. I was, after all, Mom's baby — the youngest of her eight children. She and I had a special relationship. I was a Mama's boy. And I was, no doubt, her favorite.

VALUE SPEAK

Pay no attention to what my sister Kathy says on the matter. I was. End of discussion.

Bud understood that, which is why he was troubled by my calmness at the news.

"Are you OK?" he asked after a moment of silence.

"Yeah," I said. "I'm fine. Really?"

And then I hung up the phone and went to my little Selectric typewriter and started to write. I didn't have an audience in mind. I wasn't writing for publication. I was just writing because — well — I write. I sat down, closed my eyes and let my feelings and emotions flow out of my fingers. By the time I was done I was ready to face the world Mom-less.

Or at least, as ready as I was going to be.

By way of contrast, Sept. 11, 2001, fell on a Tuesday — the deadline day for my column (many apologies to the editors who keep hoping I'll turn it in on Monday — I will keep trying). I had the TV on as I was sitting in front of my computer trying to get a column done when news of the first plane hitting the World Trade Center came through. I sat there, riveted to the TV set, stunned by each new event — the second plane hitting the World Trade Center, the plane hitting the Pentagon, the plane crashing near Shanksville, Pa.

So much death. So much confusion. So much fear.

So of course, I wrote. Only this time I had someone — or many someones — to whom I could write. This column became my outlet, as I let flow all that I was feeling in a world suddenly, frighteningly, horrifically turned upside down.

That is what the column has been for me — all 1,001 of them. Not all of them have been good, of course. Some of them have been frankly awful. Others have been painfully self-indulgent (like this one, I'm afraid). But they have all reflected what I was thinking and feeling and experiencing at the time. You have been my outlet, my therapist, my own personal crisis hot line — which means I probably owe you some kind of counseling fee.

Good luck collecting on that.

I hope there has been some benefit for you in all this — maybe a word or two of comfort, or a little cheer when you needed it. Perhaps by sharing my experiences and thoughts I have triggered some pleasant memories and thoughts of your own. That would at least be some compensation for what you have given me.

At the very least I owe you my thanks. Thanks for being there. Thanks for listening. Thanks for writing back occasionally — even those of you who scold me when I'm out of line (which is all too often, I'm afraid). Thanks for overlooking the weak columns and embracing the good ones. But more than anything else, thanks for reading. It's what binds us one to another, and makes this weekly adventure into one man's sometimes muddled mind a shared experience.

One I hope to share with you at least 1,001 more times.

those in the community.

Pastor Clay Ramirez, who started the church last year, said he came up with the idea to get members out of the church and give meaningful service after he read the Epistle of James: "Pure religion and undefiled before God and the Father is this, To visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction ..." (James 1:27.) He also referenced Jesus Christ's teachings about doing good on the Sabbath (Mark 3:4; Luke 6:9) — which, for members of The Believers Church, is Sunday.

"Most of our members are available to do something like this on Sundays, and since they're already at church on that day we figured, why not?" he said.

Ramirez started the service projects, called Faith in Stephanie and Mike Pierre of Twin Falls, members of The Believers Church in Jerome, help paint the back porch of an 82-year-old Jerome woman Sunday. The woman, Mary Crabtree, said she wanted the porch painted for some time and is grateful for the service the church members provided. "It's something I can't do myself," she said.

Action, in July after he approached the Jerome Senior Center for support. The center provides the church with the names of the elderly who could use help around their homes. Most are widowed.

"The simplest things that most people can do, such as cleaning windows or washing a car, are difficult for a lot of seniors," he said.

After completing the projects, members invite those they've served to join them at the church for lunch. The program is not a gimmick to get people to join the church, Ramirez said, but is a way to reach out to those who, because of age or infirmity, are often lonely and in need of help.

"Our hope is that it opens up their hearts to the love of God," he said. "We just want to reach people for the Lord."

"We're not 'the church,' we're part of the church community. We're just a church doing our part."

Mormon church releases second Smith papers book

SALT LAKE CITY — Mormon church historians released the second book in a 30-volume documentary series that chronicles the life and work of the faith's founder.

"The Joseph Smith Papers: Revelations and Translations" is the first of two volumes documenting the manuscripts of Smith's revelations that shaped the doctrines of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Church historian Elder Marlin K. Jensen presented the first copy of the book to Elder Russell M. Nelson, of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles, during a 10 a.m. ceremony Tuesday, just before its release to the public.

The series is said to be the most comprehensive collection of Smith's writings. It's being published by the Church Historian's Press, a church-owned imprint.

N.J. diocese sends probe of miracle to Vatican

PISCATAWAY, N.J. — A Roman Catholic diocese in New Jersey has sent to the Vatican the results of an investigation into a possible miracle.

The probe could lead to sainthood for the late founder of the Carmelite Sisters for the Aged and Infirm.

Metuchen Diocese spokeswoman Joanne Ward says a family in the area prayed to Mother Mary Angeline Teresa McCrory after their unborn child was diagnosed with a genetic abnormality. The defect was not present to the degree that had been expected when the baby was born in the Diocese of Oakland, Calif.

The family's name has not been released.

Officials interviewed 10 to 15 people during the four-month probe and two doctors visited the child.

The Vatican's review could take years.

McCrory was 91 when she died in 1984.

On the clock: Motor City mulls patron saint pick

DETROIT — The Motor City is looking for a Divine bailout.

The Archdiocese of Detroit this week announced that it's seeking suggestions from parishioners to select a patron saint for southeastern Michigan's 1.4 million Roman Catholics.

The Detroit Free Press reports Archbishop Allen Vigneron said in a flier the Detroit area's "needs are many" and the region deserves a saint it can call its own.

Vigneron says, "We have friends in high places. Why not make use of them!" Other adopted patron saints include: St. Patrick in New York City; St. Louis in St. Louis; and Our Lady of Guadalupe in Mexico.

Vigneron and others will consider suggestions, and Pope Benedict XVI will make the final decision. Parishioners are being asked to submit suggestions by Dec. 8.

Pope Benedict XVI to visit Fatima

By Barry Hatton
Associated Press writer

LISBON, Portugal — Pope Benedict XVI will visit the Fatima shrine in Portugal next year, the Portuguese president's office announced Thursday.

The pope will preside at the shrine's annual May 13 ceremonies, a brief statement said. Three shepherd children claimed to have seen the Virgin Mary during apparitions in Fatima in 1917, the first time on May 13 of that year.

Fatima, a small town 70 miles (110 kilometers) north of the capital Lisbon, attracts an estimated 6 million visitors each year. Pope Benedict's visit will be the fifth by a pontiff. Paul VI was the first, in 1967.

The Roman Catholic church in Portugal, meanwhile, is fighting political challenges to its teachings. The Socialist government passed a law allowing abortion two years ago. Portugal has parliamentary elections Sunday, and the Socialists say if they are re-elected they will propose a law to permit gay marriage.

The three Fatima children — Lucia, Jacinta and Francisco, who were cousins — said the Virgin Mary appeared to them on the 13th day of each month and predicted events, such as world wars, the reemergence of Christianity in Russia and one that Church officials say foretold the 1981 attempted assassination of Pope John Paul II.

The last visit to Fatima by the head of the Roman Catholic Church was by John Paul nine years ago.

John Paul, who died in 2005, believed the Virgin of Fatima saved his life after he was shot by a Turkish gunman in St. Peter's Square in 1981. The attack, on May 13, coincided with the feast day of Our Lady of Fatima, and John Paul credited the Virgin's intercession for his survival.

In 2000, John Paul visited Fatima to beatify Jacinta and Francisco. It was his third visit to the shrine in 18 years.

Last year, Pope Benedict XVI put Lucia, who died in 2005 at age 97, on a fast-track to possible sainthood.

The customary waiting period before beginning the process that can lead to sainthood is five years after a person's death. Lucia, who became a nun, was granted the same waiver as was given in the cases of Mother Teresa and Pope John Paul II.

Other possible trips by Pope Benedict XVI next year include Malta and Britain.

Feds raid Idaho company in steroid probe

MERIDIAN (AP) — Federal authorities said they raided an online fitness and bodybuilding business in southwest Idaho after 23 products bought by an agent tested positive for one or more of five anabolic steroids.

Robert Blenkinsop, a special agent with the Food and Drug Administration, said in an affidavit he bought 31 products from bodybuilder.com in four separate purchases.

Nearly two dozen tested positive for madol, tren, superdrol, androstenedione or turinabol, he said.

Blenkinsop also said there was probable cause to believe some of the products were "falsely and misleadingly labeled as dietary supplements."

Many of the products were not "safe nor legal" and by selling them the company was "misleading, defrauding and endangering its customers," he said.

The company, which does about $150 million in online sales a year, said it was working with the FDA on its inquiry.

"We are not the manufacturers of the products in question," Amanda Cheslock, a spokeswoman for the company, told the Idaho Statesman.

Investigators with the FDA conducted searches of bodybuilding.com's headquarters in Meridian and a warehouse in Boise on Thursday.

Wendy Olson, an assistant U.S. attorney in Boise, said the searches took place after two warrants were signed by U.S. Magistrate Judge Candy W. Dale.

The FDA cited reports that men between 22 and 55 who had used such products have suffered liver problems, stroke, kidney failure and blockage of an artery in the lung, called a pulmonary embolism.

The company was founded by Ryan DeLuca and his family about 10 years ago. The searches were part of a two-year investigation.

The raid came days before a hearing scheduled in the Senate to talk about the multibillion-dollar supplement industry. Critics say it is grossly underregulated. Defenders say the current FDA regulations are acceptable and that people selling steroids aren't really part of the supplement industry.

Indian artifacts returned to tribes

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — More than 1,400 artifacts taken from Native American sites were returned to tribal members at the federal courthouse in Spokane.

The Spokesman-Review reports the items turned over Thursday — recovered from the collection of Kenneth L. Milette of Newport — included arrowheads, necklaces and part of a jawbone. They were given to members of the Spokane, Colville, Coeur d'Alene and Nez Perce tribes.

Milette was indicted in September 2008 on charges of illegally possessing and selling Native American artifacts and human remains. He pleaded guilty to four counts and was sentenced in January to three years of probation. He was ordered to forfeit the artifacts and to pay $7,000 in restitution and a $10,000 fine.

"It saddens me to think my ancestors may have been lying in somebody's basement," said Jim Sijohn, an elder with the Spokane Tribe of Indians. "If we don't honor our ancestors, we lose our culture and our history."

Retired U.S. Attorney Tom Hopkins said the investigation began, in part, when he first saw an ad listing items for sale in the Nickel Nik want ads. Milette was interested in selling the items in bulk for large sums of cash to finance his retirement, Hopkins said. He also advertised online on sites such as eBay.

"I don't know how you could really put a value on something that is sacred," said Larry Greene, of the Nez Perce Tribe in Idaho.

Native American artifacts and remains are covered by the federal Archeological Resources Protection Act.

Only 14 percent of reported looting incidents on federal lands are solved, and 96 percent of the people caught are charged with misdemeanors, officials said. Four percent are charged with felonies, as was the case for Milette.

Phillip Harvey LeBakken

BURLEY — Phillip Harvey LeBakken, 75, of Burley, passed away Wednesday, Sept. 23, 2009, at his home.

Phillip was born Aug. 30, 1934, in Eau Claire, Wis., to Harvey and D. Slye LeBakken. He served in the U.S. Navy and was a cook during the Korean War. For many years, he was a service manager for Big O tires and a security guard for J.R. Simplot and for the Amalgamated Sugar Co. He was a member of the Lutheran Church and enjoyed fishing and camping with family, along with playing cards and dancing.

He is survived by his children, Wayne and Margertte Hotchkiss, Rick and Roxy Hotchkiss, Mike and Cindy Hotchkiss, Brad and Kaye Harkness, and David and Ronda Rogers; 13 grandchildren; and numerous great-grandchildren. He was preceded in death by his parents and his wife, Doris LeBakken.

The funeral will be held at 10:30 a.m. Saturday, Sept. 26, at the Hansen-Payne Mortuary, 321 E. Main St. in Burley, and viewing for family and friends will be held from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. following the service at the mortuary. Services are under the direction of Hansen-Payne Mortuary.

The family wishes to give a special thanks to all those who helped care for their father, Home Health and Hospice and especially to Dr. Brett Campbell and Dr. David Spritzer for granting Phillip his last wishes by allowing him to return home for his final days. A special thanks to Sandy Martinez.

Idaho lawmakers question moving airport system

BOISE (AP) — Idaho lawmakers are asking the Federal Aviation Administration to delay a plan to move an air traffic control system from the Boise Airport to Salt Lake City, saying an audit is needed to prove the plan is feasible.

Idaho Sens. Mike Crapo and Jim Risch, and Rep. Mike Simpson, all Republicans, and Democrat Rep. Walt Minnick wrote in a letter to the FAA last week that the audit is needed to determine whether the agency's financial calculations are correct in saying moving the system will save money.

The agency says moving the Terminal Radar Approach Control system, called TRACON, will save the agency $24 million over 25 years.

The system keeps track of air traffic from five to 65 miles outside an airport. Air traffic controllers in the Boise Airport tower would still track aircraft within five miles. Other controllers track aircraft outside the 65-mile range.

The Boise system is scheduled to move to Salt Lake City in January 2011.

But the Idaho lawmakers said in the letter, obtained by the Idaho Statesman, that the agency has failed to show that moving the system would save money.

"In fact, the evidence that we've seen actually continues to indicate that service would be diminished and intrinsically, safety and efficiency would also suffer," the lawmakers wrote.

A spokesman with the FAA said it had received the letter and was preparing a response.

AROUND THE WEST

Wyoming wants to block Yellowstone snowmobile plan

LARAMIE, Wyo. — Wyoming wants the federal courts to block the National Park Service from reducing the number of snowmobiles that could enter Yellowstone National Park this winter.

A three-judge panel of the U.S. Court of Appeals heard arguments Friday in the legal battle over snowmobiles in the park. The Denver-based court heard the case at the University of Wyoming law school.

The Park Service has said it intends to limit snowmobile traffic to 318 trips a day starting this winter.

The Wyoming Attorney General's Office says the Park Service plan would violate an order by U.S. District Judge Clarence Brimmer of Cheyenne that set the daily limit at 720 snowmobiles a day.

The National Parks Conservation Association has asked the panel to invalidate Brimmer's order.

Tribe denies housing project for group

FORT HALL — The Shoshone-Bannock Tribes' Land Use Policy Commission has denied a request by a religious group to build a dormitory-style building on the Fort Hall Reservation.

The commission rejected a request for a permit by Church of the Firstborn of Heaven member Joseph Ahlstrom to build a three-story, 18,000-square-foot building on 3.68 acres of property, the Idaho State Journal reported Friday.

The commission also told Ahlstrom in a letter that he was in violation of the laws and regulations of the Shoshone-Bannock Tribes because the single-family residence he owns has about 30 people living on the property.

On its Web site, the Church of the Firstborn of Heaven says the sect was started by Terrill Dalton, who was excommunicated from the Mormon church.

Elizabeth Smart may face alleged abductor in court

SALT LAKE CITY — Elizabeth Smart would tell a court the former street preacher accused of abducting her was motivated by sex, not religion, if she is allowed to testify at his competency hearing, a federal prosecutor said Friday.

If Smart's testimony is allowed, it would be the first time she has faced Brian David Mitchell in court.

The 55-year-old who allegedly held Smart captive for nine months after kidnapping her in June 2002 has been diagnosed with a delusional disorder and was found incompetent to stand trial, along with his wife, Wanda Eileen Barzee. Both were charged with multiple felonies in state court in 2003, and last year a federal grand jury indicted the pair on charges of kidnapping and unlawful transportation of a minor.

Smart's father, Ed Smart, believes Mitchell's antics — singing in court and refusing to cooperate with psychiatric evaluators — are an act.

Idaho man accused of lewd conduct

MERIDIAN — A 60-year-old Meridian man has been arrested on accusations by police that he inappropriately touched a young girl and showed her pornography.

Authorities say Charles Villi appeared to have been preparing to leave the state when they arrested him Thursday on suspicion of possession of sexually exploitative material, lewd conduct with a child under 16 and disseminating harmful material to a minor.

Police say a girl younger than 10 revealed to a parent that Villi had been touching her sexually and exposing himself to her for several months.

Police say they found child porn pictures after searching Villi's home.

Classmate's criticism stuns smart student into silence

DEAR ABBY: I'm one of the smartest people in my seventh-grade class. Sometimes it's hard being that person. Once, when I was in fifth grade, someone came up to me and told me, "No offense, but I think you're a know-it-all." Let me tell you, that did not feel good!

What should I do? I know almost all the answers in class, but I don't want to answer because of what people will think. Please help me.

DEAR ABBY
Jianne Phillips

— SMART SEVENTH-GRADER IN MICHIGAN

DEAR SMART SEVENTH-GRADER: Talk to your teacher and also your school counselor about your feelings. If you know all the answers in class, it's possible that you would qualify for advanced classes — or even for skipping a grade. Of course, your parents would have to agree, but it's worth a try.

One thing is certain, you should not refrain from participating to the fullest extent you can in class. And the classmate who called you a know-it-all in fifth grade was out of line.

to bed at the same time. I'm 13, and my brother is 17. I have no problem waking up in the morning, and I make good grades. So why do they insist on an early bedtime for us? Most of the kids in my grade have a bedtime of 10 to midnight. What are your feelings on this?

— FRUSTRATED TEEN IN FLORIDA

DEAR FRUSTRATED TEEN: While most individuals have different bi-rhythms, I have read over the past few years that many people in this country are not getting enough sleep. This has a negative impact on their ability to concentrate, learn, drive and work efficiently. It can also affect the immune system. Regardless of what "most" of the kids in your grade are doing, your parents are doing what they feel is right for you and your brother.

DEAR ABBY: I am getting married next month. It's a first marriage for both of us, and I love "Evan" with all my heart. I'd do anything and everything for him — but I'm scared.

A few days ago, Evan said he wanted to move back the date of the wedding. It just about killed me. I thought maybe he didn't want to marry me, or he doesn't love me. He saw how badly I took the news and told me later that night that the wedding could go on as scheduled.

Abby, how do I know if Evan wants to marry me? What if he is doing it just so I won't be sad? I don't want him to marry me if he's not ready. Please help.

— WORRIED BRIDE-TO-BE IN OKLAHOMA

DEAR WORRIED BRIDE-TO-BE: Tell Evan that you were shaken when he told you he wanted to postpone the wedding. Then tell him that if that's how he really feels, you agree it would be a good idea to wait. If he seems relieved, you will have your answer, and be glad you found out before you married him, not after.

However, if your fiancé says he still wants the wedding to go on as planned, tell him that you'll agree only if he agrees to premarital counseling. It could avert any number of problems later. Trust me.

IF SEPTEMBER 26 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Self-discipline and patience will be great assets in the year ahead. You have great ambitions, but must be willing to gather necessary experience and pay your dues before you can climb any higher on the ladder of success. Don't begin any crucial project or sign any significant agreements between now and mid-December. In January, avoid burning key bridges because after this year is over you may need access to these connections again. April might be a great month to plan a romantic escape or take a vacation to an exotic location.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Take on all comers. You should meet all challenges head on and nip problems in the bud before than can take root and grow.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Control issues have some in your circle going for each other's throats. Show them that a democracy is much better than a dictatorship.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Keep your opinions about a particular issue to yourself to spare someone's feelings. Compassion can diffuse tense situations.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): If lines of communication seem garbled, clear the air and slow things down. Have faith that the results will lean in your favor.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): If you can't finish, don't start. You may get caught up in someone's crazy scheme that could be nothing more than a wild goose chase.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Don't jump into anything before seeing the situation thoroughly. Playing a game of chess could provide you with strategies.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It is your time to take center stage. It will be a joy to be the center of attention surrounded by your friends and loved ones.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): If you pose as the strong, silent type, it will be impossible to say anything wrong when dealing with the object of your affections.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Pay attention to the advice of others and you may gain the insight to see your plans through. Don't take no for an answer.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You need work when it comes to regaling others with your exploits. Learn by listening carefully to the tales others have to tell.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Beauty is only skin deep. Let true beauty fill your soul by taking an angelic viewpoint and flying high above petty squabbles.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A friend in need is a friend indeed. It's time to be a true friend and throw out a life preserver to a pal who needs your help.

Today is Saturday, Sept. 26, the 269th day of 2009. There are 96 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On Sept. 26, 1789, during the administration of President George Washington, Thomas Jefferson was confirmed by the Senate to be the first U.S. secretary of state; John Jay, the first chief justice of the United States; Edmund Randolph, the first U.S. attorney general; and Samuel Osgood, the first U.S. postmaster general.

On this date:

In 1777, British troops occupied Philadelphia during the American Revolution.

In 1892, John Philip Sousa and his newly formed band performed publicly for the first time, at the Stillman Music Hall in Plainfield, N.J.

In 1914, the Federal Trade Commission was established.

In 1918, the Meuse-Argonne offensive, resulting in an Allied victory against the Germans, began during World War I.

In 1955, following word that President Dwight D. Eisenhower had suffered a heart attack, the New York Stock Exchange saw its worst price decline since 1929.

In 1960, the first debate between presidential candidates took place as John F.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Kennedy and Richard M. Nixon faced off in Chicago before a national TV audience.

In 1969, the "The Brady Bunch" premiered on ABC.

In 1986, William H. Rehnquist was sworn in as the 16th chief justice of the United States, while Antonin Scalia joined the Supreme Court as its 103rd member.

In 1991, four men and four women began a two-year stay inside a sealed-off structure in Oracle, Ariz., called Biosphere 2. (They emerged from Biosphere on this date in 1993.)

In 1997, a Garuda Indonesia Airbus A-300 crashed while approaching Medan Airport in north Sumatra, killing all 234 people aboard.

Ten years ago: Police responding to a 911 call from an apartment in Rogers, Ark., found a dying 13-year-old boy, Jesse Dirkising, who'd been bound to a bed and repeatedly raped. (Two men, Davis Don Carpenter and Joshua Macabe Brown, were later sentenced to life in prison without parole.) America won its first Ryder Cup since 1993 after trailing the European team going into the final round. (To the anger of the Europeans, U.S. players, along with caddies, officials and wives, stormed the green to congratulate Justin Leonard for a 45-foot putt that all but won the tournament for the Americans.)

Five years ago: Hurricane Jeanne struck near Stuart, Fla., with 120 mph winds, resulting in five U.S. deaths. Pakistani forces killed Amjad Hussain Farooqi, a suspected top al-Qaeda operative wanted for his alleged role in the 2002 kidnapping and beheading of Wall Street Journal reporter Daniel Pearl. Israel assassinated Izz Eldine Subhi Sheik Khalil, a Palestinian militant from Hamas, with a car bomb in Damascus, Syria.

One year ago: Hollywood screen legend and philanthropist Paul Newman died in Westport, Conn., at age 83. In their first debate of the presidential campaign, held at the University of Mississippi, Republican John McCain portrayed himself as a battle-tested elder running against a naive rookie, while Democrat Barack Obama suggested McCain was a hothead who'd made the wrong choices on the Iraq war, corporate taxes and more. Swiss pilot Yves Rossy leapt from a plane over Calais, France, and crossed the English Channel on a homemade jet-propelled wing in 13 minutes.

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Concepts Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
