Search for captured soldier yields few clues

Military has little to go on as to whereabouts of Hailey's Bergdahl

By Jason Straziuso
Associated Press writer

KABUL, Afghanistan — The troops hunting for the young private have little to go on: He disappeared near the border with Pakistan, his Taliban captors released a propaganda video of him two weeks later, downcast and frightened. Then, at least publicly, nothing about the only U.S. soldier missing in the Afghan war.

U.S. military officials in Afghanistan say they are still searching for 23-year-old Pfc. Bowe R. Bergdahl, who disappeared June 30 — three months ago on Wednesday — but they reveal little else for fear of jeopardizing the search or his safety. Advanced intelligence gathering aircraft are being used for the hunt, but it's not even clear if Bergdahl is being held in Afghanistan or Pakistan.

There has been no public update on the Hailey native since his captors posted the video of him in mid-July.

At home in Idaho, the streets are lined with yellow ribbons, and the local TV station displays one in the corner of the screen throughout the day. Bergdahl's family receives regular updates from the military, said Lt. Col. Tim Marsano, a spokesman for the Idaho National Guard who is in weekly contact with the family.

"They've prepared themselves for this to last as long as it's going to last," Marsano said.

It's part of how Wings Charter Middle School, which opened its doors this

Idaho lawmaker panel: Delay gas tax shift

The Associated Press

BOISE — An interim lawmaker committee has recommended Idaho delay for at least a year its plan to shift about $20 million in gas taxes from the Idaho State Police and the Department of Parks and Recreation to road construction.

The group also aims to kill the portion of that plan calling to redirect $4.3 million from the parks department's trail maintenance to highways. The tax shifts are now due to take place July 1, 2010, if the Legislature doesn't intervene as the committee wants.

Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, chairman of the task force, conceded that the eight-lawmaker panel fell short of expectations after several meetings by not agreeing on how to pay for the proposed funding changes. The group's recommendation to delay action until at least the highway funding deal that Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter and the Idaho House struck to end the 2009 Legislature.

July 1, 2011, all but unravels

"I wish we had a more concrete answer, but we don't," Cameron told the Spokesman-Review in a story published Wednesday. A couple of things

SIEDO appoints interim director

Regional economic development arm plans more aggressive approach

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

South-central Idaho's main economic development arm has appointed an interim director to take the helm until its executive director recovers from health related issues.

The Southern Idaho Economic Development Organization is expected to announce today that Bob Richards, a former economic development director with the city of Jerome and a current member of the Southern Idaho Tourism Board, will assume full-time duties as the organization's interim director.

Jan Rogers, the executive director of SIEDO and a leading force in attracting jobs to the Magic Valley, suffered a serious illness that has kept her hospitalized.

Richards said he has been working part-time for the organization responding to leads during Rogers' absence, but the board determined that SIEDO needed someone full-time until she returns.

"We have been following leads and continuing to market the region while (Rogers) has been gone, but I think what we decided to do is put a face to our efforts," Richards said. "That's the reason I will be filling in until Jan can return."

Richards, who is a native of the Twin Falls, has about 10 years of experience in economic development — including his work on the industrial park in Jerome County that houses the new

Deputy back to work after getting wounded in hand

By John Miller

GOODING — A Gooding County sheriff's deputy shot accidentally by another deputy at his home is back at work after four weeks recuperation.

Deputy Jeremy Smith, who returned to work Monday, was shot in the hand Aug. 31 by a .22-caliber Ruger Mark IV handgun at the Hagerman home of Sgt. Dave Kiger, the agency's armorer. Kiger was cleaning the weapon when it apparently misfired.

The incident didn't become public until this week, in part because no formal law enforcement report was filed and no other Idaho agency was called to assist the investigation.

An official at Idaho's law enforcement academy said enlisting another police organization to help with an accidental shooting probe involving two officers could be appropriate, but said that such decisions are left to local agencies.

Smith returned to work Monday, Gooding County Sheriff Shaun Gough said. Gough said there was an internal investigation that determined there was no criminal intent. An injury report was submitted to Gooding County, so Smith could receive worker's compensation payments while he missed work.

"The firearm was excessively dirty, causing the Jail consultant to attend two public meetings in Jerome

Times-News

JEROME — The consultant Jerome County hired for the promotion of the ballot question to authorize financing to build the proposed Jerome County Justice Facility, which would include a new jail, will attend two public informational meetings next week.

Consultant April Lee, of Rocky Mountain Corrections, will field questions from the public at the Jerome Chamber of Commerce Business After Hours at the Jerome County Courthouse, at 5 p.m., Oct. 7, at 5 p.m. jail tours will be available.

Lee will also meet the public at the Jerome Judicial Annex on West Main Street, at 6:30 p.m., Oct. 8.

Voters, on Nov. 3, will consider a question that would ask them to give the county authority to enter into a 30-

Both Lee and the county commission have stressed that an affirmative vote would not grant the county commission the authority to increase the tax levy.

Other public informational meetings are scheduled for 11:45 a.m., Friday, at the Jerome Senior Center no-host lunch, at 212 First Ave. E.; and a taco bar at El Sombrero Restaurant, 143 W. Main St., at 5:30 p.m., Oct. 15.

Arlen Crouch, chairman of SIEDO's board of directors, said leads on new or expanding businesses have declined due to the national economy.

But he added that SIEDO has been working to adapt the organization to a changing economy.

"There are going to be a few changes that will make us more aggressive because businesses are not doing a lot of moving around in this economy," Crouch said. He said specifics of the new strategy are still under discussion but will be made public on or before Oct. 9.

Richardson said his job as a regional economic development official will be far different from his experience in Jerome.

"In Jerome, we were really developing industrial areas and trying to make sure we had infrastructure and grants in the city and county," he said. "My job now is marketing the entire area to outside businesses."

Letha Blick, principal and superintendent of Wings.

With class sizes of 15 students, Wings offers more individual attention to students, Blick said. "They have a chance to answer individually and show their work individually and give input and shine," she said.

Charter schools are public schools provided with more leeway in designing their curriculum. Currently, Idaho has 36 charter schools, six of which started classes this year. Wings was founded by the Southern Idaho Learning Center.

Learning business skills for future careers is part of the learning experience too. Students have started developing business plans in fields that interest them.

The work is aimed at teaching them about areas such as marketing, designing brochures and selling a product.

"Part of our goal is to show them meaningful, realistic things to get them encouraged and excited," said Christopher McIntosh, an integrated projects teacher at Wings.

Bekki Robinson and Maddie Collins, two students, are starting to work on the business plans for companies that design video games and CD covers.

As for Calhoun, in the past, he said he hasn't talked in front of class very often. But his class at Wings has been polite, he said.

"The last few days, nobody's laughed," he said.

province of Paktika, where Bergdahl was based, said his police forces have joined Afghan soldiers and U.S. troops on operations looking for Bergdahl, "but unfortunately we were not able to find him."

"We don't have any information," said the police chief, Gen. Dawlat Khan. "Our intelligence sources were not able to find out anything about him. I'm not able to tell you where he is, whether Pakistan, or Afghanistan, because I have no idea."

One possibility is that Bergdahl's captors are holding him in Pakistan, which is off-limits to the thousands of U.S. forces based in Afghanistan. When militants captured a reporter for The New York Times in a dangerous region of Afghanistan last year, he was transported to Pakistan and held for months there. The reporter, David Rohde, eventually escaped.

In Pakistan, a senior military official said: "We have not heard anything about that soldier. We do not have any information on his whereabouts." The official spoke on condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of the issue.

Taliban spokesmen in Afghanistan said they had no information. In August a Taliban commander, Maulvi Sangin, told The Associated Press that he had Bergdahl and that Taliban leader Mullah Omar's council was waiting for a response to its demands before deciding the American's fate. Sangin couldn't be reached for comment.

"We are doing everything we can to locate him and bring him home," said U.S. Navy Chief Petty Officer Brian Naranjo, a military spokesman in Kabul.

A kidnapping and recovery expert, Chris Voss, the managing director of the New York-based Insite Security, said whether Bergdahl is in Afghanistan or Pakistan is less relevant than what kind of village he is being held in.

"It's more relevant as to what tribe is in control of the area, where the caves are they can go, where the villages are they can go," Voss said.

Voss said he thought it was possible Bergdahl could be found, noting that the July hostage video contained no harsh demands or threatening language.

Associated Press writers John Miller in Boise and Chris Brummitt in Islamabad contributed to this report.

Deputy

extractor, the part that grabs the chambered round and removes it from the gun, to malfunction and not remove the round," Gough said Tuesday. "What we did find was some procedural errors on the part of both deputies by not visually checking the chamber to make sure that the gun was unloaded."

Gough said he didn't see the need to file a formal report about the incident.

"It's not necessary," he said. "I've seen it a hundred times, when somebody accidentally discharges a gun into their foot or something."

Steven Raschke, interim head of the Idaho Peace Officers Standards and Training Academy in Meridian, said there's no statewide protocol on how best to report or scrutinize accidental shootings involving peace officers.

"The recommendation would be, to have a policy in place on what happens in the event of an accidental discharge," Raschke said. "If we were asked by another agency to take a look at circumstances surrounding an accidental discharge, we might investigate that as a disinterested third party."

Having another group scrutinize the situation could result in recommendations on how to improve safety and prevent repeat occurrences, Raschke said.

Smith was on duty and in uniform at the time of the incident, Gough said.

Kiger wasn't, but was cleaning some of the agency's weapons inside his home shop. Smith arrived and they decided to work on the Ruger, which is used in training to help officers improve their "trigger pull technique" because its .22-caliber ammunition is cheaper than that used in larger .40-caliber service weapons, Gough said.

"Deputy Smith removed the magazine from the pistol, and he manually worked the action by his account three times to make sure the weapon was safe," Gough said. "He then handed to gun to Sgt. Kiger to dismantle. Sgt. Kiger began to dismantle the firearm and it accidentally discharged, striking Deputy Smith in the hand."

Gough said he planned to ship the gun to its manufacturer, Sturm, Ruger & Co., Inc., for analysis, though he hadn't done so by Tuesday.

He said any personnel actions taken are not public record.

Kiger was shaken up by the incident, Gough said.

Smith and Kiger declined to comment Wednesday.

An attempt to obtain the Gooding County accident report filed by Smith was unsuccessful. Leslie Renner, the Gooding County deputy clerk, denied a public records request, saying the county attorney advised her that the information was confidential.

Tax

conspired to make the delay recommendation easier to stomach.

First, the Idaho Transportation Department is getting a good deal from contractors as the slumping economy lowers construction prices, so it can do more projects with less money.

In addition, a group selected by Otter to come up with additional highway maintenance funding options has until well after the 2010 Legislature to make its recommendations.

Opposition from off-road vehicle riders who feared losing the trail maintenance cash was critical in souring lawmakers on Otter's plan to give it instead to highway repairs. Boaters, snowmobilers and ATV riders bombarded the task force with pleas not to take away the 3 percent of Idaho's gas taxes that now goes for trail and waterway improvements.

"We have all learned that we made a mistake here," said Rep. Raul Labrador, R-Eagle.

After the task force's meeting this week, lobbyists for ORV enthusiasts stopped short of declaring victory, saying only that they reluctantly support a one-year delay — on the promise the 2011 Legislature will dump plans to shift trails money outright.

"We trust that you are going to do the right thing, and the right thing is to give us back our gas tax," said Sandra Mitchell, an advocate for motorized backcountry access.

Rep. Shirley Ringo, D-Moscow, and a task force member, hopes the Idaho Legislature eventually agrees to a permanent funding source for the state police's share of the gas tax it stands to lose. The panel looked at several proposals, including a $1 monthly surcharge on car insurance, which would raise $19.4 million a year, and a $3 fee on tire sales, to raise $4.8 million a year.

She opposes any plan to raid the general fund to come up with the money, on grounds that tax receipts from existing sources are scarce enough without adding more agencies to fight for a share of the dwindling proceeds.

Health district planning for H1N1 vaccine supplies

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

The South Central Public Health District is adjusting its plans in response to the timeline for when H1N1 flu vaccination supplies will reach the region.

Initially, health district officials had hoped to do mass immunization clinics in October and November. It's going to take longer than that, though, because vaccination supplies will be given out in incremental shipments to health districts starting next week through early January.

The Idaho Division of Public Health announced on Wednesday that it had ordered its initial shipment of 9,000 doses for the state, the amount authorized by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention for the state's first vaccine supply. In future weeks, additional shipments will come, though the final number of how much vaccine the state will receive is unknown.

On the local level, it means that the health district will wait until it has enough vaccine doses to provide mass immunization clinics, said Rene LeBlanc, the district's director.

"It's just going to take me twice as long," LeBlanc said.

The health district will form an ad hoc executive steering committee to help with planning the immunization clinics, LeBlanc said. The committee's membership will include county commissioners, school district superintendents, and representatives from hospitals.

The committee will look at weekly allotments of vaccine coming into the health district and make plans from there.

Based on the initial estimates for further vaccine supplies, LeBlanc said that at the earliest, a mass immunization clinic could happen on Oct. 24.

He estimated that the health district will receive 110,000 doses of vaccine between October and early January, though that figure could change in the months ahead.

Though the timeline is different, LeBlanc stressed that the goal is for everyone who needs the vaccination to receive it.

The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare on Monday provided health districts with estimates of the dosage amounts expected, though the estimates can change.

For the state as a whole, 921,934 doses were projected, but health officials stress that the final figure is unknown.

"What we do know is that there should be enough for everyone who wants it by January 8, if not before that time," said Tom Shanahan, spokesman for the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare.

Those recommended to take the vaccine are: pregnant women; caregivers of children under 6 months of age; healthcare workers; everyone 6 months to 24 years old; and people 25 to 64 years old with health conditions that create a higher risk of medical complications from influenza.

BLM not ruling out arson in Sunday's Lincoln Co. fires

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — An investigation into the cause of two wildfires in Lincoln County Sunday, that investigators consider suspicious, has not revealed any solid evidence of arson, although the Bureau of Land Management was not ruling that out Tuesday.

Both fires started near milepost 67 on the east side U.S. Highway 93, about five miles south of Shoshone.

"That has certainly been considered, the possibility that it's arson," said BLM fire investigator Brian Barney.

However, he said a safety chain dragging on asphalt created sparks, and poorly tuned ignition systems that emit exhaust carbon particles are also possible causes.

"We're right at the verge of calling it vehicle-related because it's right off the highway," Barney said.

He said one of the main reasons for considering a vehicle-related cause is that the road is so heavily traveled that an arsonist would likely have been seen by passing motorists.

"There is a witness driving by there almost all the time," Barney said.

"There are two ways that arson goes: It is a hot set and they take the ignition source with them, like a lighter. The other way is device and they are somewhere else when the fire starts. There was no device," he said.

Still, Barney added, the BLM is not entirely ruling out arson.

"We will still keep an eye out in the area and throughout the district for that matter," he said.

The two fires charred an estimated 3,572 acres. Both were extinguished by sunset Monday. Both fires turned eastward and one threatened a feedlot south of Dietrich. The larger Power Station Fire burned about 3,500 acres and was the region's largest fire this season. The Substation Fire charred 72 acres.

The two fires burned into the 45,000-acre footprint of 2007's Red Bridge Fire, which threatened Shoshone.

BLM firefighters doused the fires with assistance from several fire departments including those from Dietrich, Gooding, Richfield, Shoshone, Jerome and the Jerome Rural Fire Department.

Barney cautioned people to exercise caution because cool windy days are among the worst conditions for wildfires, despite rain.

Simpson earmarks make it into negotiated bill

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

Money to rebuild a rock wall along the Little Wood River has made it into the final version of a negotiated bill for funding the U.S. Department of Energy and Army Corps of Engineers.

The project was one of several funding requests made by U.S. Rep. Mike Simpson, R-Idaho, who is a member of the House Appropriations Subcommittee on Energy and Water Development as well as part of a combined House and Senate conference committee that produced the negotiated bill. In a written statement Wednesday he said he expects the bill to receive full House and Senate approval later this week.

Among funds targeted for Idaho is $100,000 to start rehabilitation of 1.5 miles of lava-rock walls defining the channel the Little Wood River follows through the city of Gooding. The walls are falling apart, posing a number of safety hazards — including increased risk of flooding.

The sum is less than the $1 million Simpson originally requested for the project. But Simpson aide John Revier told the Times-News that the goal this year is to simply get approval for the Army Corps of Engineers to do the work. Repairing the wall will likely take as much as $9 million over three or four years.

Also slated for approval is nearly $3.9 million, also for the Corps of Engineers, to assist rural Idaho communities with repair, expansion or full replacement of water and wastewater systems. Funds from the program, for example, have been pledged to help the city of Bliss upgrade its aging wastewater system.

In addition, Simpson secured:

- $1.5 million for medical-isotope production at Idaho State University.
- $1 million to expand a geothermal heating system in Boise.

Herrett Center hosts NASA moon trailer exhibit

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

Fifth-grader McKenzie Ross, flanked by friends, walked through the parking lot at the College of Southern Idaho's Herrett Center for Arts and Science Wednesday. Having just made her way through the visiting NASA Exploration Experience Trailer, Ross is more knowledgeable about the future of NASA and knows a tad more about the moon itself.

"It was pretty cool. I really liked the moon rock," Ross said.

Ross' Oregon Trail Elementary School classmate Avery Hyden was impressed with the lunar material as well.

"Some of it was boring, the stuff where we just had to stand and listen, but the interactive stuff, the stuff we got to touch and do was pretty fun," Hyden said.

Nelda Gayer, para-educator at the school went through the NASA exhibit with the fifth-grade group Wednesday morning and said students lucky enough to visit would not only take away a mass of information but would leave inspired as well.

"The students got to touch an actual moon rock. We were told it was one of three such rocks available," Gayer said. "It was really interesting. I think it will help in the classroom and kids will retain what they were shown today."

Once the group entered the Herrett Center building there was more to learn, like getting to watch robots built out of Lego building blocks and equipped with light and sonic lasers demonstrate their skills.

The NASA Exploration Experience Trailer is at the Herrett Center for Arts and Science for four days, through Saturday, and is free to the public.

The 30- by 60-foot trailer was in Boise last week.

"We try and visit destinations throughout the state," said NASA Outreach Coordinator Keyke Reed. "We can't go everywhere but we want to see as many new faces as we can."

Reed said visitors are treated to a simulated visit to the moon where explorers build a lunar outpost and touch an actual moon rock. There is also an opportunity to explore a virtual model of the moon, interact with the lunar surface to learn about NASA's research and future plans for exploration. An interactive theater in the exhibit introduces visitors to NASA's plans to return to the moon in new vehicles that are currently being developed and to the technologies that have led to the improvement of the quality of life on Earth.

Reed said the exhibit could inspire a new generation of astronauts or open students' eyes to the possibilities of NASA, beyond space travel and study.

"Students are always surprised with everything else NASA does with research and development that does impact life on earth. For instance, NASA has been working with NASCAR with heat and fire safety," Reed said. "This may inspire kids to study and keep learning more math and science."

Herrett Center Education Coordinator Darcy Thornborrow said over 500 local students visited the exhibit Wednesday.

"We were inundated with schools and students today and were grateful they came. We had many homeschooled kids and even members of the public that came out," she said.

NEW YORK
'Handful' of men being watched in terrorism probe

A "handful" of men in New York are possible associates of the chief suspect in a suspected plot to use homemade bombs to attack New York City commuter trains, and investigators have them under heavy surveillance, law enforcement officials said Wednesday.

Investigators are still hunting for additional players and expect to make more arrests than just the chief suspect, 24-year-old Denver airport shuttle driver Najibullah Zazi, according to an official who declined to discuss when that might happen or how many people are under scrutiny.

Another official added that the men under surveillance are no longer considered a threat because the plot was thoroughly disrupted. Both officials spoke on condition of anonymity because the investigation continues.

Bank of America's CEO to step down

Bank of America chief executive Kenneth Lewis, whose relentless dealmaking drove the nation's largest bank to heights of astonishing profitability and then to the brink of collapse, epitomizing the rise and fall of an industry, will retire at the end of December, the company said Wednesday.

The announcement capped nine months of free fall for Lewis, who was widely feted last autumn for the apparent strength of his company and for his willingness to buy the crippled investment bank Merrill Lynch in a deal that he said was partly motivated by patriotism.

Lewis

Since then, he has been sharply questioned by his shareholders, called a liar by members of Congress and stripped of his title as chairman of the company. He leaves amid intensifying state and federal investigations.

Weary and frustrated, forced to spend ever more of his time meeting with lawyers, he decided to step down, according to a person familiar with the matter.

"I decided now is the time to begin to transition to the next generation of leadership at Bank of America," Lewis said in a statement.

The company did not name a replacement but said it would do so before Lewis leaves at the end of the year.

TENNESSEE
Search on for baby
taken by fake agent

NASHVILLE — A newborn snatched from a Nashville home was missing and his mother recovering from stab wounds she said she suffered in a struggle with the woman kidnapper posing as an immigration agent, authorities said Wednesday.

Maria Gurrola told reporters she had never seen the woman before she showed up at her door Tuesday evening. She said the woman got a knife from the home and stabbed her several times.

"I need my baby back," the 30-year-old mother said through an interpreter outside Vanderbilt University Medical Center.

Gurrola said the woman, whom she described as a robust white American, did not say anything about wanting to take the baby, who was on the sofa.

"She said she was an immigration officer and she was there to arrest her," said

Gurrola's cousin, serving as interpreter. It was not clear if Gurrola was an immigrant, but police said she has lived in Nashville for at least 10 years. The cousin said the family did not want to discuss her legal status.

Gurrola said she did not see the woman take the baby because she ran to a neighbor's home to get help. That neighbor, Eric Peterson, told The Associated Press that Gurrola banged on his door and was "covered from her head to her toe with blood" with gashes on her neck and upper chest.

She pleaded with him to rescue her children from the "lady in the kitchen" who had a butcher knife. He went to the home a few doors down and saw a woman speeding away from the home. He brought Gurrola's 3-year-old daughter back safely to his house, but found no baby, he said.

OKLAHOMA
FBI denies editing
'95 bombing tapes

OKLAHOMA CITY — The FBI says it did not edit videotapes of the aftermath of the 1995 bombing of the Oklahoma City federal building before turning them over to an attorney who is conducting an unofficial inquiry into the bombing.

The FBI turned over more than two dozen tapes taken from security cameras on buildings and other locations around the federal building to Salt Lake City attorney Jesse Trentadue, who obtained them through the federal Freedom of Information Act. Trentadue said the tapes are blank at various times in the minutes before the blast.

"They have been edited," Trentadue said Wednesday.

The soundless recordings show people rushing from nearby buildings immediately after a 4,000 pound fertilizer-and-fuel-oil bomb detonated in front of the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building on April 19, 1995, killing 168 people, including 19 children, and injuring hundreds more.

Some show people fleeing through corridors cluttered with debris. None shows the actual explosion that ripped through the federal building.

Trentadue said the absence of footage before the blast indicates something was on the tapes that the FBI did not want to make public.

"They don't do anything by accident," he said.

A spokesman for the FBI in Washington, Paul Bresson, said in an e-mail to The Associated Press that the agency did not edit the tapes before turning them over to Trentadue.

Bresson said the FBI identified 26 videos in its files in response to an April request by Trentadue for video from security cameras in 11 different locations. FBI agents did not report finding any security tapes from the federal building itself.

WASHINGTON
High court plans new look at handgun ban

The Supreme Court said Wednesday it will consider a challenge to Chicago's ban on handguns, opening the way for a ruling that could set off a vigorous new fight over state and local gun controls across the nation.

A victory for gun-rights proponents in the Chicago case is considered likely, even by supporters of gun control. If the court rules that the Second Amendment right to keep and bear arms doesn't allow the city's outright handgun ban, it could lead to legal challenges to less-restrictive laws that limit who may own guns, whether firearms must be registered and even how they must be stored.

The court last year moved in the direction of voiding tough gun control laws when it struck down a prohibition on handguns in the District of Columbia, a city with unique federal status. Now the court will decide whether that ruling should apply to local and state laws as well. The court will hear arguments in the case early next year, and a ruling probably would follow in the spring.

Abortion issue heats up health care battle

As the Senate Finance Committee continued to debate its version of a health care overhaul bill Wednesday, Democrats and Republicans clashed over abortion — potentially complicating President Barack Obama's drive for action this fall.

At issue is how far health care legislation should go to prevent insurance companies from offering abortion services to the millions of women who could get taxpayer subsidies to help them pay premiums.

Federal funding of abortions has been prohibited since 1976, when an amendment by Rep. Henry J. Hyde, R-Ill., banned Medicaid from paying for the procedure except in cases of rape, incest or medical necessity.

The bill now before the committee contains provisions that Democrats say would keep federal subsidy dollars from going to cover abortions. Republicans, however, say that the provisions are not strong enough. But an attempt to toughen them went down to defeat, and the confrontation threatened to further inflame debate over the issue.

Senate Democratic leaders are pushing to get a health care bill to the floor before the end of October, an imperative underscored Wednesday by Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., who announced that he would cancel the chamber's traditional Columbus Day recess.

Reid is waiting for the finance committee to finish its version of an overhaul before hammering out a final bill for consideration by the full Senate.

The committee, headed by Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., is in its second week of debate on the measure. Baucus has said he wants to finish up this week.

Democrat: GOP wants sick to 'die quickly'

House Republicans say it's payback time for the recent reprimand of one of their own for heckling President Obama.

They want a Democratic lawmaker to apologize or face a reprimand for saying the GOP wants Americans to "die quickly" if they get sick.

Rep. Alan Grayson, D-Fla. — a first-term congressman known for a provocative style — refused to back down on Wednesday.

As Republicans threatened to introduce a resolution disapproving of his remarks, he returned to the House floor and mocked their outrage by citing research showing that nearly 45,000 people die each year for lack of health insurance.

"I would like to apologize ... I apologize to the dead and their families that we haven't voted sooner to end this holocaust in America," he said, citing a study being published in the American Journal of Public Health.

Grayson's initial remarks came Tuesday night as he criticized Republican health care proposals as a "blank piece of paper."

"If you get sick, America, the Republican health care plan is this: Die quickly," he said on the House floor. "That's right. The Republicans want you to die quickly if you get sick."

The rhetoric wasn't spontaneous: He reinforced his point with signs saying the same thing.

Republicans immediately called for an apology, likening the comments to Rep. Joe Wilson's widely criticized shout of "You lie!" during President Obama's address to Congress earlier this month

ISU president is right: Idaho needs a 'skunkworks'

In 1943, the U.S. Army urgently needed a jet fighter to compete with the planes that Nazi Germany was building.

So it asked several aircraft manufacturers, including Burbank, Calif.-based Lockheed, for proposals.

Technologically, it was an especially daunting challenge because the aircraft was needed right away. So a Lockheed engineer named Kelly Johnson came up with an idea.

It was an idea not for the airplane, but for the process of developing one: Set up a working group within Lockheed, give it autonomy and cut the bureaucracy that slows progress.

Johnson called it the "Skunkworks," named after a malodorous enterprise in the "L'il Abner" comic strip popular at the time. The Army had its jet fighter in 143 days.

In the 65 years since, the concept of skunkworks has spread across business, technology and academia as shorthand for an incubator where new ideas could be developed. Now Idaho State University President Art Vailas thinks Idaho needs one to help new companies get started.

The politicians, so far, haven't recognized the urgency. Idaho TechConnect, a non-profit company that hooks people up with ideas and capital, saw its state budget cut in half in 2008 and eliminated altogether this year.

ITC sponsors an annual event called Tech Launch in conjunction with the Idaho National Laboratory and the Idaho Economic Development Association. Its purpose is to bring university students together with science and technology companies, government agencies, economic development professionals and business investors.

According to Boise Weekly, in the six years since ITC's inception, Tech Launch has helped 39 companies raise more than $37 million in investment capital and for research and development.

ITC also helps start-ups access universities, obtain equipment, prepare investor pitches and do market research.

Idaho invests a lot in business development, and — through its higher education system — spends still more to develop intellectual capital. But it's not so helpful in turning job-creating ideas into reality.

So Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter and the Legislature should take Vailas' suggestion to heart. And it can start by funding enterprises like Idaho TechConnect.

Our view: Good ideas plus investment capital create jobs. That's just what the doctor ordered for Idaho.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Bottom line: Is Afghanistan still a threat to the U.S.?

Rationales for maintaining the counterinsurgency in Afghanistan are varied and complex, but they all center on one key tenet: that Afghanistan must not be allowed to again become a haven for terrorist groups, especially al-Qaida. Debate about Afghanistan has raised reasons to question that tenet, one of which is that the top al-Qaida leadership is not even in Afghanistan, having decamped to Pakistan years ago. Another is that terrorists intent on establishing a haven can choose among several unstable countries besides Afghanistan, and U.S. forces cannot secure them all.

Paul R. Pillar

The debate has largely overlooked a more basic question: How important to terrorist groups is any physical haven? More to the point: How much does a haven affect the danger of terrorist attacks against U.S. interests, especially the U.S. homeland? The answer to the second question is: not nearly as much as unstated assumptions underlying the current debate seem to suppose. When a group has a haven, it will use it for such purposes as basic training of recruits. But the operations most important to future terrorist attacks do not need such a home, and few recruits are required for even very deadly terrorism. Consider: The preparations most important to the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks took place not in training camps in Afghanistan but, rather, in apartments in Germany, hotel rooms in Spain and flight schools in the United States.

In the past couple of decades, international terrorist groups have thrived by exploiting globalization and information technology, which has lessened their dependence on physical havens.

By utilizing networks such as the Internet, terrorists' organizations have become more network-like, not beholden to any one headquarters. A significant jihadist terrorist threat to the United States persists, but that does not mean it will consist of attacks instigated and commanded from a South Asian haven, or that it will require a haven at all. Al-Qaida's role in that threat is now less one of commander than of ideological lodestar, and for that role a haven is almost meaningless.

These trends have been familiar to counterterrorist cognoscenti for years but have gone mostly unmentioned in discussion of Afghanistan. This is probably because the intervention there in late 2001 was unquestionably a response to Sept. 11 — the "good war," in contrast with the misguided expedition to Iraq, where the only connection to the 2001 attacks was in the Bush administration's contorted selling of that invasion. The U.S. entry into the Afghan civil war succeeded in ousting the Taliban from power and rousting its al-Qaida allies, and the intervention would have occurred regardless of whether the occupant of the White House was named Bush or Gore.

The issue today does not concern what was worth disrupting eight years ago. And it is not whether a haven in Afghanistan would be of any use to a terrorist group — it would.

Instead, the issue is whether preventing such a haven would reduce the terrorist threat to the United States enough from what it otherwise would be to offset the required expenditure of blood and treasure and the barriers to success in Afghanistan, including an ineffective regime and sagging support from the population. Thwarting the creation of a physical haven also would have to offset any boost to anti-U.S. terrorism stemming from perceptions that the United States had become an occupier rather than a defender of Afghanistan.

Among the many parallels being offered between Afghanistan and the Vietnam War, one of the most disturbing concerns inadequate examination of core assumptions. The Johnson administration was just as meticulous as the Obama administration is being in examining counterinsurgent strategies and the forces required to execute them. But most American discourse about Vietnam in the early and mid-1960s took for granted the key — and flawed — assumptions underlying the whole effort: that a loss of Vietnam would mean that other Asian countries would fall like dominoes to communism, and that a retreat from the commitment to Vietnam would gravely harm U.S. credibility.

The Obama administration and other participants in the debate about expanding the counterinsurgency effort in Afghanistan can still avoid comparable error. But this would require not merely invoking Sept. 11 and taking for granted that a haven in Afghanistan would mean the difference between repeating and not repeating that horror. It would instead mean presenting a convincing case about how such a haven would significantly increase the terrorist danger to the United States. That case has not yet been made.

Paul Pillar was deputy chief of the counterterrorist center at the CIA from 1997 to 1999. He is director of graduate studies at Georgetown University's Security Studies Program. He wrote this commentary for The Washington Post.

Get the government out of health care

The main problem with American health care is too much government. Let's reduce government control and let real competition create better services and lower prices.

The shortest explanation of conservatives' approach to improving the best — albeit still imperfect — health care system in the world is this: Do the opposite of what President Obama wants.

I see four key components to the conservative approach.

First, it's time for honesty from Democrats, Republicans and the health profession. People don't know their own health care costs when they're covered, therefore they don't shop around for better prices and there's less incentive to keep costs low. Health savings accounts would put sanity back into the system because people would have "skin in the game." When people spend their own money, they spend it more wisely.

Second, government must not directly or indirectly control health care. Democrats and Republicans have demonstrated time and again that they succumb to special interests. Keep the government's nose out of patient-doctor relationships and do not create a government database of medical records.

Third, respect constitutional constraints, which means most federal involvement is barred or limited. Use the commerce clause of the Constitution productively, as it was intended, to break down inefficient barriers to interstate commerce. Allow citizens of any state to choose from what's available in all 50 states. Let consumers carry their coverage from job to job and from state to state. Include reasonable tort reform, but only in keeping with the Constitution.

Fourth, don't discourage profit. The desire for profit drives better prices, service and products.

Further, any reform should not require individuals to obtain health insurance. Besides being frightful, unprecedented Washington authoritarianism over individuals, mandating captive markets destroys incentives to keep costs lower and consumer service higher.

Obama claims health insurance is a moral imperative. By law, hospitals can't deny emergency treatment for patients who aren't insured, leaving an unpaid care gap estimated at more than $50 billion annually, according to the American Enterprise Institute. Conservatives and independents at the tea parties, town halls and beyond believe it is a moral imperative to stop burdening the next generations with trillion-dollar deficits and to stop government's stealing from the Medicare trust fund, which now has unfunded liabilities of $36.3 trillion, according to the Heritage Foundation.

Richard Viguerie is chairman of ConservativeHQ.com. He wrote this commentary for the Los Angeles Times.

OTHER VIEWS

Here's what other media are saying about ...

... some tax breaks don't work

New West, Missoula, Mont.

The big news ... out of Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's Innovation Summit (last week at) Boise State University was the announcement of a $5 million grant to Micron to help it develop light-emitting diode technology. While the money was awarded by the state, it comes from the ... the federal stimulus package.

Otter, as well as Scott DeBoer, Micron's Vice President of Process Research and Development, praised the announcement as supporting green technology, as well as providing new jobs for Idahoans.

"Through our 30-year history, the success of Micron and the state of Idaho have been closely tied," DeBoer said.

That's the problem.

Idaho persists in attempting to grow the economy, particularly the technology economy, by giving large grants and tax breaks to large companies, and today's announcement was just the latest example.

It doesn't work.

DeBoer wouldn't say how many jobs he expected the development to create, but according to a May article by the Idaho Statesman's Rocky Barker, "Micron expects to create or keep 35 jobs with annual wages of $60,000 to $130,000 and an additional 50 temporary jobs for retooling, remodeling and setting up the LED manufacturing modules. Thirty-nine indirect Idaho jobs would be created." (He also mentions that Micron originally had requested $20 million to $100 million.)

Also, while Micron is one of Idaho's home-grown success stories, it hasn't shown a lot of loyalty lately. In 2007, then-president and CEO Steve Appleton told Business Week, "I don't have to hire one more person in the U.S. I don't have to invest one more dollar here — and we'll be just fine."

This was after the Idaho Legislature had given the company big tax breaks to encourage management to locate a new chip manufacturing facility here ...The largest of the incentives is a property tax break that is available to any company that employs more than 1,500 people and spends at least $25 million a year in new property or equipment ... Micron also received a sales tax exemption on research and development.

Aside from the loyalty issue, researchers such as Richard Florida and Richard Foster have demonstrated that innovation and job creation happens more with small companies than with large ones. Companies that are wooed with grants and tax incentives just go on down to the next state that offers them a bigger bribe, Florida said in his seminal book, "The Rise of the Creative Class." Foster's book, "Innovation: The Attacker's Advantage," notes that companies with extensive existing relationships have a harder time introducing innovation because it tends to disrupt their existing suppliers, distributors, employees, and lenders...

... charters leave some kids behind

Lewiston Tribune

Public schools are supposed to be the last common denominator in American society.

But if you're white and your parents have money, you're more likely to be among the 12,000 Idahoans attending one of 36 tax-supported charters. If you're a member of a racial minority, poor or have special needs, you're more likely to be among the 275,000 children who attend Idaho's traditional schools.

So says a pilot study by the Idaho State University Center for Policy Studies, Education Research, and Community Development. Sought by Madison schools Superintendent Geoffrey Thomas and Twin Falls schools Superintendent Wiley Dobbs, the ISU report analyzed state data and found:

- Hispanics are 73 percent, American Indian students are 57 percent and students struggling with English proficiency are 96 percent more likely to attend a traditional school.

- White students are 12 percent more likely to be in a charter.
- There are 78 percent more economically disadvantaged students in traditional schools than in charters.
- Students with special needs are 41 percent more likely to attend traditional schools ...

Traditional school advocates have maintained charters drain away students and state dollars while leaving them with the same costs and programs to support.

But cherry-picking more advantaged kids into a charter school does those young people no service. At some point, they'll emerge into a global economy and a more diverse American society less prepared than they should have been.

Idaho law says only six new charter schools can be added each year. Lifting that cap, says state schools Superintendent Tom Luna, would help Idaho compete for $4.35 billion in federal education dollars.

Not so fast. Before Idaho follows Luna's lead, it should explore and expand the ISU pilot study. Let's first settle whether tax dollars are being spent to segregate students.

... not enough umbrellas

Idaho Statesman, Boise

Here's the good news, to the extent that there is good news about the state budget. On Friday, Gov.

C.L. "Butch" Otter broke out the umbrella.

Otter recommended a $49.3 million withdrawal from one of Idaho's rainy-day accounts to cover public schools. It's a practical acknowledgement that the state's budget crisis shows no signs of relenting.

And while the Legislature tends to give a lukewarm response to the governor's advice, this is one practical recommendation that lawmakers should wholeheartedly embrace. Public schools cannot afford another round of budget cuts, not after sustaining an unprecedented 7.7 percent cut in 2008-09. Further cuts could force school districts to the polls to seek budgetary backfill from local property taxpayers — a politically volatile situation in a gubernatorial and legislative election year.

Friday's day of budgetary reckoning wasn't too bad for Idaho schoolkids, but it was a rough day for Medicaid recipients, college students and their parents. For them, Otter's long-awaited budget announcement brought yet another round of cuts — and carried the threat of even more slicing and dicing later in the year. Otter has recommended "tiered" spending cuts to reduce the overall budget by 4 percent, a more nuanced approach than the arbitrary across-the-board cuts he used to balance the books in 2008-09. Still, it's a mixed bag.

Health and Welfare, including the state's Medicaid program, will take a 3.3 percent cut — a modest recognition of the importance of public health programs during a protracted recession. Idaho's two- and four-year colleges will suffer an inexplicably deep 6 percent cut, despite continuing enrollment increases across the university system. Make no mistake. For the 66,000 students attending Idaho colleges — including layoff victims returning to school to seek new job skills — a spending cut will result in onerous and ill-timed tuition and fee increases.

The frustrating part is that the Health and Welfare and higher education cuts, $32 million in all, could have been covered easily through reserve accounts of some $275 million. These programs deserved — and could have received — the same protection Otter afforded K-12.

And even deeper cuts remain possible. On Friday, Otter recommended $49.7 million in spending reductions and a $49.3 million withdrawal for public schools — but that isn't enough to cover Idaho's $151.4 million shortfall. Otter hopes to cover the rest by finding additional savings and by completing a "meaningful reorganization" of state government. Nice words, but at this stage in the downturn, the easy cutbacks and organizational tweaks have long since been made. It's time to protect the essentials, by digging deeper into the savings accounts.

LETTER TO

THE EDITOR

Health care reform may lead to Holocaust

Before the ovens, other methods of elimination were tried. They all failed, not because of concept but due to their inefficiency. When deportation ran its course, the next process placed the offensive and/or nonproductive members of society (those with physical or mental disabilities, radical ideological beliefs or undesirable ethnic origins) off somewhere to die by natural causes. Even starvation wasn't fast enough. Next, Adolph Eichmann gave them a nudge toward the grave. That still left burial problems to be solved.

Then came the ovens. The end resulting ashes/fertilizer even made the winter roses bloom.

Now, I'm not saying our government's new all-inclusive medical aid plan is a direct comparison. But if all those of you over the age of 65 see big dividend increases in your portfolio because Hotpoint, Kenmore, GE and other appliance manufacturers indicate large GSA orders for commercial ovens, don't make any long-term plans. It means the other methods weren't efficient enough.

Artists picture a more appealing Wood River Valley

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Can you see smiley faces replacing 5B on the license plates of Wood River Valley residents?

Don't laugh. It was one of the suggestions arts advocates in the Wood River Valley discussed this past week as they tried to come up with ideas for making Sun Valley more appealing to residents of the Magic Valley and Boise area.

The impetus for the discussion was the Wood River Arts Alliance Fall Arts Summit, which brought together four dozen representatives of groups like the Sun Valley Summer Symphony and Footlight Dance Centre to determine ways they could collaborate to grow their audience.

John Mauldin, Sun Valley Resort's entertainment director, said new market research showed that 60 percent to 70 percent of Southern Idaho skiers and snowboarders have never skied Sun Valley.

"The overall impression of Sun Valley is that it's exclusive and snobby," he said. "When I went to school in Jerome, we used to have Wood River Days where teachers and students dressed up rich and snobby. We need to change that perception."

Idaho Rep. Wendy Jaquet, D-Ketchum, said it's important for the economy as a whole because the arts bring in more than $18 million to the valley each year.

There are already some programs worth noting, participants noted.

Company of Fools Theater offers a "Pay What You Feel" night during each play run to attract those who might not be able to afford a $15 or $20 ticket.

The Sun Valley Center for the Arts started up a Junior Patron program this year that allows younger patrons to sample events like the annual wine auction for a modest fee. And the Sun Valley Summer Symphony just started a similar program titled Crescendo.

St. Thomas Playhouse performed "Little Red Riding Hood" before 700 youngsters in Boise this summer. And Company of Fools will take "A Year With Frog and Toad" before Magic Valley schoolchildren this year in hopes of developing a new fan base among Twin Falls residents.

Denise Simone, of Company of Fools, suggested that groups encourage regular patrons to invite younger members to a performance or exhibition, then go out for coffee afterward.

"For many people there is a fear about going to an arts event," she said. "When you've never been before, it can be intimidating. You think: I won't know anyone. What do I wear?"

Michael Faison, director of the Idaho Commission on the Arts, suggested that arts organizations turn the camera around on their audiences having fun as a way of attracting additional audience members.

Congress fashions $350 million dairy aid plan

By Andrew Taylor
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Amid a crisis of low milk prices and mounting losses in dairy country, lawmakers in Congress are fashioning a $350 million emergency aid package aimed at helping struggling milk farmers.

Secretive talks on Capitol Hill have produced a tentative compromise, slated to be unveiled Wednesday, that would leave it to Agriculture Department chief Tom Vilsack to figure out how to deliver most of the aid, $290 million. It's unclear how much farmers struggling with low prices would benefit.

The original $350 million plan was passed by the Senate in August without any binding directions about how the money would help farmers.

But the poisonous politics of dairy subsidies hung over recent informal House-Senate talks — an official session is slated for Wednesday afternoon — as supporters of small dairy operations in states like Wisconsin and Vermont wrangled with lawmakers such as Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., whose state is host to huge dairy farms.

According to congressional aides briefed on the closed-door talks, who requested anonymity because an official House-Senate negotiating session has yet to convene, much of the $290 million would be devoted to direct monetary payments to dairy farmers, while $60 million would be spent on purchasing stocks of surplus cheese and other dairy products in hopes of raising prices. The food would be given to food banks.

The plan is expected to be unveiled Wednesday afternoon, when House-Senate negotiators are to meet on a $23.3 billion agriculture appropriations bill for the fiscal budget year starting Thursday.

Economy dips at 0.7 percent pace in second quarter

By Jeannine Aversa
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The economy shrank less than expected in the second quarter as businesses and consumers trimmed their spending at a slower pace, buttressing beliefs that the economy is now growing.

The 0.7 percent dip in gross domestic product for the April-June quarter follows the 6.4 percent annualized drop in the first three months of this year, the worst slide in nearly three decades. In the final quarter of last year, the economy sank at a rate of 5.4 percent

New census estimates show stable poverty rate in Idaho

Times-News staff

New Census Bureau estimates show Idaho's poverty rate remained stable between 2006 and 2008.

The estimates placed Idaho's poverty rate of 12.6 percent or nearly 188,000 people. The percentage ranked 25th in the nation.

Nationally, the poverty rate was estimated at 13.2 percent, down fractionally from 2006. Idaho's rate dropped slightly, but statistically not significantly, in 2007 from 12.6 percent in 2006.

The number of Idaho children living in poverty in 2008 was up slightly but not significantly from 2006. The Census Bureau estimated 15.8 percent, or 64,500 of the state's children under age 18, lived in poverty, placing Idaho's rate at 28th among the states and below the national rate of 18.2 percent.

Idaho's median household income from 2007 to 2008 rose by 2.9 percent. While higher than the national average gain of 2.5 percent, it was below the 7.9 percent increase Idaho households saw from 2006 to 2007.

Local teams, even T-ball, can be marketing tools

On football and soccer fields across the nation, small business owners are taking advantage of a huge marketing opportunity: sponsoring local sports teams.

Just about every sport, from T-ball played by 5-year-olds to semi-pro baseball or basketball, offers small businesses a chance to get some name recognition and create goodwill in their communities. And the cost is quite small, in many cases a few hundred or a thousand dollars.

Carrie Mitchell has sponsored soccer and T-ball teams, getting the name of her Raleigh, N.C.-based company, ASAP Office

Joyce M. Rosenberg

Supply Inc., on uniforms and on a sign on a practice field. She has also sponsored a swim team, which meant getting her company's name announced at meets and an ad in a quarterly neighborhood newsletter.

The T-ball team was the one her son played on, and her first thought was to contribute money to help out. But, she said, "I did think that every one of those kids has parents, and every one of those parents work, and they have to buy their office supplies somewhere."

A sponsorship cost her $350, and it paid off by bringing in business. Mitchell recalls the mother of one of the team members "saying she was going to tell her company owner about me and our business, and see about getting us their business, and they did."

"For a $350 investment I got a customer that spends more than that a year," she said.

Tom Rizk, who sells office machines to other businesses, has sponsored high school football teams and a semi-pro baseball team in Santa Barbara, Calif.

"I learned very early on when I sponsored a Friday football TV show. ... The following week I had people walking in the front door," said Rizk, owner of Goleta, Calif.-based Coastal Copy. Fans listening to the Santa Barbara Foresters games on the radio hear Coastal Copy's name mentioned on each broadcast. The company, like other sponsors, also has its own special day during the season, and gets to throw out the first pitch.

The opportunities for sponsorships are numerous, and aren't limited to having a sign posted in a Little League ballfield or an ad in a

Dairy

The House version of the bill doesn't include any emergency dairy aid, but Appropriations Committee Chairman David Obey, D-Wis., embraced the $350 million proposal - and wanted to devote most of the money to the Milk Income Loss Contract, or MILC, program. It gives payments to farmers when prices fall, but benefits are capped after the first 3 million gallons of milk produced, the annual output of perhaps 200 cows. That mean northeastern and midwestern family farmers with smaller herds disproportionately benefit from MILC.

Obey's plan ran into opposition from Feinstein, among others, leading Sen. Herb Kohl, D-Wis. - chief negotiator for the Senate for his post atop the agriculture spending subcommittee - to suggest the pending compromise. Under it, $290 million would go to an emergency assistance program for livestock producers that gives the department great flexibility to distribute the money, which is expected to be divided between additional purchases of surplus dairy products and direct payments to producers.

"The goal is to get the money into the pockets of family-based dairy farmers all over this country who are fighting right now for their survival," said Sen. Bernie Sanders, I-Vt., whose amendment added the money to the agriculture spending bill. "What we're looking at right now is a form of direct payment, plus some money going for purchases of cheese for food banks."

Economy

Department on Wednesday, shows the economy shrinking less than the 1 percent pace previously estimated. It also was better than the annualized 1.1 percent drop that economists were predicting.
The final revision of second-quarter GDP comes on the last day of the third quarter, in which many analysts predict the economy started growing again at a pace of about 3 percent.

"Growth should be solidly positive," said Mark Vitner, economist at Wells Fargo Securities.
Gross domestic product measures the value of all goods and services - from machines to manicures - produced in the U.S. It is the best estimate of the nation's economic health.
A main reason for the second-quarter upgrade: businesses didn't cut back spending on equipment and software nearly as deeply as the government had thought. Consumers also didn't trim their spending as much.

Many analysts predict the economy started growing again in the July-September quarter, due partly to President Obama's $787 billion stimulus package and the government's now defunct Cash for Clunkers program. It offered people rebates of up to $4,500 to buy new cars and trade in less efficient gas guzzlers.

Companies willing to spend a little more can get their names splashed across team uniforms in some leagues, especially in sports like adults' softball. Some communities might shy away from having children's jerseys used as advertising, however.

Dee Phelps, left, pauses with her family on the tarmac Tuesday at Boise Airport in Boise as the remains of her first husband, Chief Warrant Officer Don Phelps, arrives on a flight from Hawaii. Phelps died in 1965 when his helicopter disappeared over the mountains of southern Vietnam in Gia Lai Province, Vietnam. His remains were found and identified earlier this year. He'll be buried today.

Boise family marks return of Vietnam MIA after 44 years

By Kathleen Kreller
The Idaho Statesman

BOISE — Passengers on the United Airlines flight from Denver to Boise Tuesday afternoon refrained from the typical chaos of getting off a long flight and instead sat quietly in their seats while two somber passengers deplaned.

The crowd was hushed, that is, until it gave a standing ovation to Ron and Jeff Phelps and their precious cargo.

The Phelps brothers were bringing their father home. Chief Warrant Officer Don Phelps, a decorated helicopter pilot, was killed in 1965 during the Vietnam War. His aircraft, his body and the bodies of three crewmates were missing for nearly 44 years until the crash site was uncovered earlier this year.

"As we were landing, the flight attendant was choking back tears. She said that (United Airlines) is honored to be transporting the remains of a fallen soldier in Vietnam," Ron Phelps said Tuesday night. "As we were getting off, we got an ovation from everybody on the plane. Emotionally, I was already pretty well spent.... That was it. I was tearing up."

The brothers were returning from the military's special forensics lab in Hawaii where their father's remains had been identified.

When they stepped onto the tarmac at the Boise Airport, their mother, brother and sister were waiting, along with a military honor guard in crisp blue uniforms.

It was an emotional family reunion as the flag-draped casket emerged from the airplane's belly. The red, white and blue stood in stark contrast to Tuesday's gray skies and the gunmetal-colored commercial airliner.

Lori Phelps, the youngest of the couple's children, sobbed as she caressed the casket of the father she had

"The first thing I said, I leaned over and said, 'Mom, I brought him home. It is a happy occasion.

There might be a little closure here, and think happy thoughts."

— Ron Phelps, on bringing his father's remains home from Vietnam after they were identified by the military's special forensics lab in Hawaii never really known. Dan Phelps was somber and quiet.

Phelps' widow, Dee Phelps, dabbed at her eyes with a blue and white gingham handkerchief.

"The first thing I said, I leaned over and said, 'Mom, I brought him home,'" Ron Phelps said. "It is a happy occasion. There might be a little closure here, and think happy thoughts."

Law enforcement officers, veterans and a group of Patriot Guard Riders on motorcycles escorted the family and the casket in a funeral hearse to Cloverdale Funeral Home in Boise.

Phelps, who was 28 when he died, had been awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross for his heroism. He flew more than 125 combat missions in less than four months.

For decades, the family waited and hoped while the Joint POW/MIA Accounting Command and family advocacy groups searched and lobbied the United States and Vietnamese governments to continue searching and to allow better access to crash sites.

Phelps is the third missing-in-action serviceman to be brought back to Idaho since the Vietnam War.

He'll be buried today at the Idaho State Veterans Cemetery in Boise.

Ruby Carlson Wyatt

Ruby Carlson Wyatt, 86, a lifelong resident of Twin Falls, passed away Friday, Sept. 25, 2009.

Ruby was born Jan. 18, 1923, to Herbert and Mary Carlson. She was the youngest of six siblings with five older brothers. Ruby grew up in the Magic Valley, where her family farmed. She graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1941. Ruby moved to Portland, Ore., and then to Los Angeles during the war years. She was very proud of the fact she was one of the first women tellers at Bank of America in Los Angeles. She then returned to Twin Falls, where she met and later married the love of her life, Wayne Wyatt, on June 20, 1948. They had two daughters.

Ruby loved being a homemaker and mother. When the girls were young, she was involved in Bluebirds, Girl Scouts, 4-H and Job's Daughters. Her greatest joy was spending time with her grandchildren. Ruby was a very active member of the community.

She was involved with the Republican Party, Daughters of the Nile, Order of Eastern Star, PEO, and an active member of the First Presbyterian Church. Ruby was a fabulous cook and loved to share her recipes. Everyone enjoyed eating Ruby's food. Her delicious recipes continue to be served on many tables today.

Ruby will always be remembered for her optimistic attitude, her kindness toward others and always finding the best in every situation.

Life's little pleasures meant the most to her. Her bright and happy spirit will be greatly missed by her family and large circle of friends.

Larry Howard Buhler

Larry Howard Buhler, 73, of Twin Falls, died Sunday, Sept. 27, 2009, at River Ridge Care Center.

Larry was born Aug. 15, 1936, at Bern, Idaho, the son of Howard H. and Marguerite A. Hirschi Buhler. He was raised in Bern until age 7, when he moved with his family to Darby, Mont., where he continued his education and helped on the family ranch. Larry enjoyed fishing, hunting and camping. "He was born 100 years too late." He would have made a great mountain man. While hunting, Larry was a great shot and was a sharp shooter for the Montana National Guard.

Larry is survived by his wife, Corene of Twin Falls; his children, Larry Mark (Nancy) Buhler, Tammy (Jim) Etherington, Susie (Mark) Brown, Heidi (Jeff) Stearns, Jake (Dawn) Buhler, Tashina (Walter) Robinson and Jentrie (Matt) Stearns; nine grandsons; seven granddaughters; two great-grandson; three brothers, Clifford (Ethel), Clayton (Alta) and William; one sister, Mary (Dee); and numerous nieces and nephews. SAMOA Aid flows to tsunami-hit region; death toll at 119

APIA — Police searched a ghastly landscape of mud-strewn streets, pulverized homes and bodies scattered in a swamp Wednesday as dazed survivors emerged from the muck and mire of an earthquake and tsunami that killed at least 119 in the South Pacific.
 Military transports flew medical personnel, food, water and medicine to Samoa and American Samoa, both devastated by a tsunami triggered by an undersea earthquake. A cargo plane from New Zealand brought in a temporary morgue and a body identification team.
 Officials expect the death toll to rise as more areas are searched.
 Survivors fled to higher ground on the islands after the magnitude 8.0 quake struck at 6:48 a.m. local time (11:48 a.m. MDT) Tuesday. The residents then were engulfed by four tsunami waves 15 to 20 feet high that reached up to a mile inland.
 The waves splintered houses and left cars and boats — many battered and upside down — scattered about the coastline. Debris as small as a spoon and as large as a piece of masonry weighing several tons were strewn in the mud.
 The two-hour drive from the Apia airport to the heavily damaged southeast coast initially showed no sign of damage before becoming little more than a link between one flattened village after another. Mattresses hung from trees, and utility poles were bent at awkward angles.
 It was clear that tourists were among the casualties, but figures were impossible to ascertain immediately with officials saying they had no solid head count on the number of visitors in the area.

Thousands fled in panic, fearing a tsunami. Buildings swayed hundreds of miles away in neighboring Malaysia and Singapore.
 In the sprawling low-lying city of Padang, the shaking was so intense that people crouched or sat on the street to avoid falling. Children screamed as an exodus of thousands tried to get away from the coast in cars and motorbikes, honking horns.
 The magnitude 7.6 quake hit at 5:15 p.m. (4:15 a.m. MDT), just off the coast of Padang, the U.S. Geological Survey reported. It occurred a day after a killer tsunami hit islands in the South Pacific and was along the same fault line that spawned the 2004 Asian tsunami that killed 230,000 people in 11 nations.
 A tsunami warning was issued Wednesday for countries along the Indian Ocean, but was lifted after about an hour; there were no reports of giant waves.
 The temblor flattened buildings and felled trees in Padang, damaged mosques and hotels and crushed cars. A foot could be seen sticking out from one pile of rubble. In the gathering darkness shortly after the quake, residents fought some fires with buckets of water and used their bare hands to search for survivors, pulling at the wreckage and tossing it away piece by piece.
 Health Minister Siti Fadiah Supari told MetroTV that two hospitals and a mall collapsed in Padang.

WASHINGTON
 Top officials, advisers study Afghan war

With top commanders and congressional Republicans pushing for more troops, President Obama pressed key members of his national security team on their views on Afghanistan war Wednesday during a three-hour marathon session that ended with no decisions on strategy changes or troop increases.
 There was no specific dis-ussion of troop levels during the meeting in the Situation Room in the White House basement, according to a senior administration official.

 But the talks revealed the emerging fault lines within the administration on the issue, with military commanders solidly behind the request for additional troops and other key officials divided.
 Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton and special Afghan and Pakistan envoy Richard Holbrooke appeared to be leaning toward supporting a troop increase, but are not yet ready, said the official, who spoke on the condition of anonymity because the discussions were private. White House Chief of Staff Rahm Emanuel and Gen. James Jones, Obama's national security adviser, appeared to be less supportive, the official said.

BAHAMAS
 Travolta says medic threatened him

NASSAU — John Travolta testified Wednesday that a Bahamas paramedic threatened to sell stories to the news media suggesting the movie star was at fault in the death of his 16-year-old son.
 Travolta said paramedic Tarino Lightbourne, who is now on trial for extortion, demanded $25 million.
 If he did not pay, Travolta told the jury, Lightbourne indicated he would use against him a consent document that the actor initially signed refusing to have his son Jett sent to a local hospital. The document cleared Lightbourne of any liability.
 "They were stories that would imply that the death of my son was intentional and I was culpable in some way," Travolta said.
 Travolta was testifying in the second week of the trial of Lightbourne and Pleasant Bridgewater, a former Bahamas senator who allegedly negotiated with the actor's lawyers for the medic. Both defendants have pleaded not guilty.

 Travolta testified last week that he signed the document because he initially wanted his son flown to Florida for treatment. But Jett, who had suffered a seizure at a family vacation home on Grand Bahama island, was taken instead to a local hospital, where he died on Jan. 2.

CSI Basketball Bash marks return of Felix, Plunkett

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

For Carrick Felix and Maddy Plunkett, tonight has been a long time coming.

Felix, a 6-6 shooting guard on the College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team, and Plunkett, a 6-2 sophomore post for the Golden Eagle women, both suffered season-ending injuries last fall. Tonight, they'll finally play before a

Felix

Plunkett

CSI crowd once again as the men's and women's programs open practice for the 2009-10 season with the CSI Basketball Bash.

CSI BASKETBALL BASH

The CSI Basketball Bash will follow today's 7 p.m. volleyball match between CSI and Colorado Northwestern Community College. Admission to the volleyball match is $1 and fans are invited to stay and watch the Bash, which will include introductions of this year's men's and women's basketball teams. The men and women will play intra-squad scrimmages and compete in a 3-point shooting contest and ball handling exhibition. The men will have a slam dunk contest. CSI's cheer and dance teams will also perform.

"It seems like a long time," Felix said of the last time he played a game at CSI

Gymnasium. He broke his wrist during the third game of the 2008-09 season and was forced to watch the remainder of a 22-9 campaign while taking a medical redshirt. "I feel like I've been sitting out for three years." But today, the wait is over. Felix said he and the other returning CSI players have told the 11 first-year Golden Eagles about the support the team gets in its home gym. They're anxious to see that on display tonight.

So is Felix.

"I just love the environment, the noise of the people supporting us," he said. "I'm just happy to be back."

BSU making case for BCS title berth

By Andrew Bagnato
Associated Press writer

The Boise State Broncos are breathing some rare BCS air.

The fifth-ranked Broncos have climbed higher and faster than any non-BCS team in the controversial system's 12-year history.

The Broncos, pride of the Western Athletic Conference, have shouldered in front of three storied powers — USC, Oklahoma and Ohio State, each with one loss. Now Boise State is trying to scale the college football equivalent of Mount Everest and become the first team from outside the six BCS conferences to play for a national title.

Best known for their blue field and an exhilarating Fiesta Bowl victory over Oklahoma, the Broncos have ignited a debate that figures to grow hotter after the first BCS standings are released on Oct. 18.

"It is unprecedented," WAC commissioner Karl Benson said Wednesday from his office in Colorado. "The stars are kind of lining up for Boise State."

But BCS numbers-cruncher Jerry Palm advised the Broncos to take a photo of the summit, because he doubts they'll ever reach it. He believes that once-beaten teams from major conferences will climb past the Broncos down the stretch.

"There's a chance that Boise has peaked earlier than anyone else in their position has peaked," said Palm, editor of collegebcs.com. "But maybe not."

COLLIDING PATHS

Once teammates, Canyon Ridge quarterback Tyler Myers and Twin Falls QB T.J. Ellis will meet on the field Friday in the inaugural Service Bowl

By David Bashore • Times-News writer

For junior quarterbacks Tyler Myers and T.J. Ellis, it's a case of paths colliding — again. Last year the two competed head-to-head for the starting quarterback job at Twin Falls High School. Before that, they played together in AAU basketball and rivaled each other in junior high football.

On Friday, they'll line up opposite each other trying to earn the distinction of being the winning quarterback in the first-ever Service Bowl rivalry game between Twin Falls and Canyon Ridge.

"It's going to be kind of odd because we all know each other," said Ellis, the Bruin QB. "But we've been excited about this for a long time. You go off the field at halftime this season and the loudspeaker says the Canyon Ridge score. We've thought about this a long time, and it's going to be a fun game."

A conjoined path began to separate again when Ellis ultimately won the job at Twin Falls last year, leaving Myers to consider his options.

Initially Myers wanted to stay and beat Ellis out for the position this fall. In the end he decided to join the first-year Riverhawks program instead, for a number of reasons — though he's quick to note that an open quarterback position was not among them.

"I'm not the kind of guy that just wants something handed to me — in fact, I really don't like that," Myers said. "I'm a competitor, and I want to be the best. I want to earn it.

"I had my heart set the whole time on staying at Twin and trying to win the job there. But I talked to the coaches at Canyon Ridge and I really liked the coaches, and I really like the players and the people there. The season's not going the way I wanted it to, but it's still a great situation in the long run."

Under Ellis' leadership under center, the Bruins are off to a 1-3 start that belies their talent. After upsetting Jerome a couple of weeks ago, Twin Falls is alongside Minico on the inside

T.F. boys first, girls second at windy Kleinkopf

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

Wind is never a welcome element on a golf course. Not even for a cross country meet.

Blustery conditions made Wednesday's Kleinkopf Classic a tricky one for the 446 runners representing 23 schools as they faced a mix of headwind and tailwind at Canyon Springs Golf Course in Twin Falls.

"Today was a more strategic race than usual," said Twin Falls junior Amanda Ward. "I knew that I would have to take it the first half, because you have the wind at your back and it goes quick."

On the second half of the race, Ward said she drafted behind other runners, then hit the accelerator around the final corner and sprinted to victory on the home stretch with the wind at her back.

Ward finished in 19 minutes, 29 seconds to win the second Kleinkopf Classic of her career. She outlasted second- and third-place finishers Kylie Hutchison (19:40) of Highland and Mackenzie Chojnacky (19:51) of Jerome. The top three runners were neck-and-neck most of the race.

"When I got the wind at my back, I decided to go for it," Ward said. "The first of my season has been OK, but it's definitely getting better because I had a really good race last week and a good race this week."

CSI volleyball hosts pair of SWAC foes

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

It might not be the most glamorous pair of matches on the schedule, but they're the next ones on the schedule. And that means they're the most important ones on the schedule.

The No. 2-ranked College of Southern Idaho volleyball team, fresh off of 34 hours of road travel in the space of four days, hosts lowly Colorado Northwestern Community College tonight, before welcoming in the College of Eastern Utah on Saturday.

After winning 85 percent of their matches so far (17-3) and firmly planting themselves in the Top 5 nationally, the Golden Eagles could be forgiven for just being happy to be home. But they know all too well the dangers of a trap match.

"We have to take care of matches on our home floor," said CSI coach Heidi Cartisser. "We can't look past anybody, and we have to prepare just as much for these matches as we do the others. But it'll be really nice to be home. It feels like we've been going, going, going — even at our tournaments at home we felt like that."

Tonight's match is CSI's proper home-opener. Outside of nine tournament matches, the Golden Eagles have not played at CSI Gymnasium this season.

This week's home stay may be important track to winning the Great Basin Conference.

Myers, meanwhile, has done his best to channel his inner Tim Tebow — who Myers admits is his favorite player and football role model — to spur his club on to better things than those to which they've ascribed so far.

"I just love everything about him," Myers said of Tebow. "I love that he's religious, that he works hard, that he's a good football player and a great leader. I don't try to copy him, but I do look up to him as a role model and try to do some of the same things."

While Ellis and Myers were trying to one-up each other in the starter's race last year, each player took something from the other that has helped make him better after their paths diverged.

"I just remember that Tyler was always quiet when he was going to start — he was just really focused in on what he needed to do," Ellis said. "I've been trying to work on that this season, not letting myself get distracted and settling in on the task at hand."

Said Myers: "T.J. was always in his play-book, making sure he knew everything about all the plays he needed to run. He's always been a smart player, making good reads and progressions, and I've been working hard to get better at that."

The two remain casual friends off the field, rooting for each other from afar, talking about football and inquiring about the other's games and season whenever they cross paths.

But they both admit it'll be all business on Friday, even if there will be mixed emotions.

"I miss the guys at Twin a lot, even though I love being at Canyon Ridge," Myers said. "It's not going to take anything away from the game, but being in the visitors' locker room and on the other side of the field is going to be strange."

"Twin is an awesome team, and it's going to be tough to go in there and win. But I've got 100 percent faith in my team that we'll play well too."

each placed five girls in the top 20, and the Knights (57 points) edged out the Bruins (62) for the team title.

The team placings flip-flopped on the boys side, with Twin Falls (56 points) winning the team title ahead of Hillcrest (82 points).

The Bruins had four boys in the top 20, with third-place finisher Erik Harris finishing behind Dallin Farnsworth (16:30) of Highland and Chase Caulkins (16:36) of Wood River.

"I've been really impressed with Dallin and Chase, they've really gone out there and I'm just trying to catch up," said Harris. "The wind, coming back the last mile, it certainly slowed things down, it was a lot tougher. The team really did well today, we were really strong. Everyone ran great, it was awesome."

Wood River placed fourth as a team, led by second-place Caulkins and fourth-place James Paris (16:49).

High School High five

A look at five of this week's biggest high school football games

BUHL AT FILER

7 p.m., today

The skinny: Buhl (4-0) was hit by the flu this week, while Filer (1-4) has been bit by the injury bug with running back Ryan Orr out for the season and fellow rusher Tyler Kreft sidelined with a groin injury. The Wildcats, playing on their new field for the first time, are the fourth straight spread offense team Buhl has faced.

Buhl coach Stacy Wilson: "Our kids get a little more pumped up and ready to play when it's Filer week. ... We have to establish the ground game and run the ball, especially if the weather gets nasty."

Filer coach Russ Burnum: "(Buhl hasn't) played really strong opponents. They're really fast though. They have some really fast backs. We feel we can match up with them speed-wise, so we want to be as aggressive as we can and try to contain their speed."

PRESTON AT MINICO

7 p.m., today

Radio: 970 AM KFTA
The skinny: Minico's (3-2, 2-0 GBC) defense has shut out its last two opponents, but the Spartan offense has been sluggish out of the gate, averaging just 3.6 first-half points this season. Minico could get on track against Preston (0-5), which gave up 422 yards rushing to Hillcrest last week.

Minico junior Moises Iturra: "We've got to get going against Preston. We have a tough game. Our Nevada (Wildcat) offense, they step it up every game, they bring us back in it. They've done that quite a few times, but our regular offense has to step it up this next game."

DECLO AT WENDELL

7 p.m., today

The skinny: If Declo's (4-0) injured starting QB Jeremy Jenkins can't go, junior Justin Cameron will fill in. Wendell (2-2, 1-0 SCIC) is 1-1 vs. Class 2A Canyon Conference opponents this season.

Declo coach Kelly Kidd: "We're preparing for a tough football game. (Wendell) has had some success when they run the football and they've got some good athletes. We'll try to stuff up the run and force them to pass."

JEROME AT POCATELLO

Friday, 7 p.m.

Radio: 1400 AM KART
The skinny: Jerome (2-2, 1-1 GBC) returns to Holt Arena for the first time since losing the Class 4A state title game last November. The Tigers had an entire bye week to think about their GBC loss to Twin Falls, and they'll look to get back on track in a non-conference matchup against a 1-4 Pocatello (1-4) team.
Jerome coach Gary Krumm: "We'd really like to get two complete halves of football on both sides of the ball. ... I think we'll find out what type of heart we have."

It's the "maybe not" that has the college football world buzzing this week.

The Broncos have introduced the shadow of a doubt into the sport's convoluted system for selecting the teams that will play for its Waterford Crystal championship trophy.

And the Broncos aren't alone. No. 11 Texas Christian of the Mountain West

UC Davis at Conference and No. 5 Boise State 1 2 t h - r a n k e d Houston of Conference USA are also clamoring for BCS recognition.

"I think people like the Cinderella," TCU coach Gary Patterson said this week. "They like the underdog. It makes a great story"

The rise of the BCS outsiders comes after an off-season that saw more threats - but no real action - by politicians to dismantle the lucrative system that grants automatic berths to the Atlantic Coast, Big East, Big Ten, Big 12, Pac-10 and Southeastern Conferences. The gist of the politicians' argument is that the BCS is unfair to schools outside the six richest conferences.

BCS honchos bowed to Congressional pressure when they added a fifth game in 2006 and eased access for outsiders.

For Boise State, that tweak in the BCS paid off in 2006. The Broncos went unbeaten, rose to No. 8 in the BCS standings and stunned No. 10 Oklahoma 43-42 in an overtime Fiesta Bowl thriller.

At the time, some wondered whether Boise State belonged in the national title game on the same field a week later. But most observers seemed to think the Broncos, with their sandlot plays and a tail-back proposing to a cheerleader after the game, were a nice little story that would go away.

Well, they're back.

Boise State is building a case for a BCS title berth on two foundations.

The first is the Broncos' 19-8 victory over Oregon on Sept. 3 - a game that made national news when Oregon's LeGarrette Blount slugged Boise State's Byron Hout.

No. 16 Oregon has rebounded with three straight wins, and every Ducks victory adds a measure of credibility to Boise State's resume.

The Broncos need help from Eugene, because they won't be getting much lift from their WAC brethren. Boise State ranks second, behind Florida, in this week's Sagarin Football Ratings, one of the BCS computer rankings. The next-highest WAC team is No. 50 Fresno State, and four teams are ranked outside the top 100.

"Their league is not going to help them at all," Palm said.

How can the Broncos counter that? "They can't afford a 23-20 game," Palm said. "They've got to light everybody up."

So far, so good: the Broncos have yet to trail this year.

The second pillar of Boise State's case is history. Non-BCS teams are 3-1 in BCS bowls, with Boise State beating OU, Utah beating Pitt and Alabama, and Hawaii losing to Georgia.

Although those results shouldn't matter in this year's voting, Benson hopes the pollsters keep them in mind.

In the past, non-BCS teams have faced a steep climb in the polls. But Boise State opened at No. 16 in the coaches poll, so it didn't have to go far as team after team tumbled from the top 10.

This week, the Broncos trail Florida, Texas, Alabama and LSU in the coaches and Harris Poll, the two BCS human rankings. They're also No. 5 in the AP poll.

Only one SEC team can emerge unbeaten. If all three lose, or if the Longhorns stumble, that could open up a lane for Boise State.

And remember, the Broncos only need to be in the Top 2 of the final BCS standings to draw an invitation to the title game in Pasadena on Jan. 7.

But there are plenty of skeptics, including Mountain West commissioner Craig Thompson.

"Anything is possible," Thompson said in an e-mail response to a question. "For an undefeated non-(automatic qualifying league) team to play in a national title game, it would probably take everyone else with two losses."

Palm said he thinks the Broncos' only hope is a pileup of two-losses teams from the power conferences.

"If Boise State were Michigan State, they would move up if the teams ahead of them lost," Palm said. "But it doesn't work that way for the Boise States of the world. Teams like that always have to watch their back as much as they need to watch what's going on in front of them."

USC's Stafon Johnson resting, alert after injury

LOS ANGELES - Southern California tailback Stafon Johnson rested and tweeted Wednesday, two days after sustaining a frightening throat injury in a weightlifting accident.

Johnson is still recovering from seven hours of reconstructive surgery Monday after a weight bar fell on his neck, crushing his larynx and throat. The senior received a visit from the seventh-ranked Trojans' coaching staff, although his family is limiting his visitors.

"He's feeling good, he's functioning well and all that," USC coach Pete Carroll said. "He can't move very much because they want to keep his head and his neck very still. ... These are long, hard days for him, but he's like the commander of the Starship Enterprise with all the technology around him."

Johnson also opened a Twitter account to communicate with fans sending good wishes.

"Thank you every1 4 all the love and support," Johnson said in his first tweet.

USC (3-1, 1-1 Pac-10) also received encouraging news Wednesday about two top players heading into Saturday's showdown with No. 24 California (3-1, 0-1).

Quarterback Matt Barkley showed more improvement in his arm motion during practice. The freshman played through pain from a bruised right shoulder last weekend against Washington State after missing the Trojans' upset loss at Washington, but Barkley is much closer to full strength this week.

"Without question it was the best day for his arm motion," Carroll said. "It's still not 100 percent, but it was the best he's been."

USC also had freshman defensive end Nick Perry back in practice after the Pac-10's sacks leader missed Tuesday's workout with a bruised knee. Perry has six sacks in his first four games.

Receiver Ronald Johnson did some running on the side for the first time since breaking his collarbone in the Trojans' mock game one week before the season opener. Johnson, a projected starter this fall, has targeted USC's trip to Notre Dame on Oct. 17 for his return, although Carroll still is being cautious.

"I would bet RoJo is going to be pretty close in the next couple of weeks," Carroll said.

STOOPS GIVES NO UPDATE ON BRADFORD

NORMAN, Okla. - Sam Bradford's status for Oklahoma's game against Miami is still a mystery.

Sooners coach Bob Stoops skipped his usual post-practice interview session Wednesday, instead sending team spokesman Kenny Mossman to tell reporters there was no update on the quarterback's status.

The Heisman Trophy winner has missed No. 8 Oklahoma's last two games after spraining an AC joint in his right shoulder in the season-opening loss to BYU.

Stoops has said Oklahoma would spend the week watching Bradford's recovery and determine whether he can play Saturday against the 17th-ranked Hurricanes, perhaps as late as game day.

He has said Bradford has not had any setbacks in his recovery, but refused to give any details on what he has been able to do in practice.

Tigers push Twins to brink in AL Central race

DETROIT — Magglio Ordonez hit a three-run double and the Detroit Tigers beat the Minnesota Twins 7-2 on Wednesday night to move closer to the AL Central title.

Eddie Bonine pitched five effective innings after getting off to a rough start for Detroit, which increased its lead to three games over the Twins. The Tigers can clinch their first division title since 1987 with a victory in this afternoon's series finale.

BLUE JAYS 12, RED SOX 0

BOSTON — Roy Halladay pitched a three-hitter for his second consecutive shutout and Toronto sent the Red Sox to their sixth straight loss.

The Red Sox started only two regulars after clinching the AL wild card late Tuesday night. They were hitless until Joey Gathright's clean single to left with one out in the sixth.

RAYS 5, ORIOLES 3

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — James Shields carried a shutout into the eighth inning, Ben Zobrist hit a three-run homer and Tampa Bay extended Baltimore's losing streak to 13 games.

Baltimore can tie the second-longest skid in franchise history set in August 1954 with a loss in the series finale against the Rays today.

ROYALS 4, YANKEES 3

NEW YORK — Joba Chamberlain lasted just 3 2-3 innings in his final tuneup for the postseason and was booed by fans at Yankee Stadium in a loss to Kansas City.

Derek Jeter homered leading off the first, and Nick Swisher's 29th homer tied the score in the fifth, a two-run drive off Robinson Tejeda.

Raul Ibanez hit his career-high 34th homer and Jimmy Rollins had a double and triple for Philadelphia, which is heading to the postseason for the third straight year for the first time since Mike Schmidt, Steve Carlton and crew won three consecutive division titles from 1976-78.

NATIONALS 7, METS 4

WASHINGTON — Justin Maxwell's grand slam off All-Star closer Francisco Rodriguez with two outs in the ninth inning gave the Nationals their first win all season when trailing after eight innings.

MARLINS 5, BRAVES 4

ATLANTA — Ricky Nolasco struck out nine straight Braves and finished with 16 strikeouts — the most by a major league pitcher in more than two years — and Florida held on for a victory.

Nolasco's nine consecutive strikeouts in one game were one short of the big league record set by Hall of Famer Tom Seaver for the New York Mets on April 22, 1970, against San Diego.

REDS 6, CARDINALS 1

CINCINNATI — Laynce Nix hit a grand slam off John Smoltz, Bronson Arroyo pitched into the ninth inning and Cincinnati beat St. Louis.

CHICAGO — Ryan Doumit had four hits and four RBIs to help the Pirates beat the Cubs for a doubleheader sweep.

Jeff Karstens (4-5) tossed five innings for the second victory by a no-name Pittsburgh pitcher over a high-priced Cubs starter on the day. A few hours before Karstens beat Carlos Zambrano (9-7), Charlie Morton (5-9) threw a four-hitter in a victory over Ted Lilly (12-9).

ROCKIES 10, BREWERS 6

The Rockies extended their NL wild-card lead to four games over Atlanta with four to play.

Indians fire manager Wedge; he'll finish season

CLEVELAND (AP) — Eric Wedge lost his job and kept his uniform.

Wedge was fired Wednesday as manager of the Cleveland Indians, who are in the final days of a terrible season that began with high hopes.

Despite being told he would not be back next season, Wedge will manage the last six games of his seventh year with Cleveland, which entered Wednesday's doubleheader against the Chicago White Sox one game out of last place in the AL Central.

"I still wanted to finish what we started this year," said Wedge, who led the Indians to one playoff appearance since 2003 and went through two rebuilding projects with the midmarket club. "I felt it was the right thing to do. It's been a long run here — as managers go."

General manager Mark Shapiro said he and owners Larry and Paul Dolan came to a collective decision on Wedge's future "fairly recently" and that Cleveland's coaches were told Tuesday night that they would not be retained for the 2010 season. Wedge was under contract for 2010.

Community College, the men's and women's teams will hold intra-squad scrimmages and compete in a 3-point shooting contest and ball handling exhibition. The men's team will also hold a slam dunk competition.

A day after being named a NJCAA Preseason All-American, Plunkett tore the ACL in her right knee Oct. 24, 2008, during a scrimmage in Salt Lake City.

"Last year I thought it was going to be my last year (at CSI), so I wanted to come out and have a big year like my freshman year and play hard and really get out there," said Plunkett. "Obviously that didn't happen."

After sitting out the season, Plunkett signed to play at the University of Arkansas, but later changed her mind and returned to Twin Falls. While her hopes are high the coming campaign, last year's injury is still giving her fits. Shortly after returning the court this summer, Plunkett again had pain in the knee. She sat out two weeks of basketball class during September, but didn't find any relief.

"It has been very frustrating," she said.

Still, she'll be on the floor today, doing what she can in the scrimmage and trying to help the CSI women beat the men in the 3-point contest. It marks the start of a season in which the CSI women will try to claim a third straight Scenic West Athletic Conference title.

"I'm really excited for this year. I think we have a really great team," said Plunkett. While a freshman-laden roster may take some time to gel, Plunkett added, "I think we have a lot of talent. ... Once we get going, we'll definitely be good."

Getting going begins tonight as the teams prepare for their respective Nov. 6 season openers in Wyoming. As Felix put it, the Bash is "going to set the tone for the rest of the year."

Miami, Cal looking to rebound

By Ralph D. Russo
Associated Press writer

This is not the ideal way to bounce back from a loss.

Miami and California, both coming off ugly performances in their first defeats of the season, get thrown right back into the grinder Saturday.

The 17th-ranked Hurricanes are home after a soggy and unsuccessful trip to Blacksburg, Va., to face No. 8 Oklahoma.

The Golden Bears, who plummeted from No. 6 to No. 24 in the rankings after getting drubbed at Oregon, return home for No. 7 Southern California.

Miami's 31-7 loss to Virginia Tech dampened, but didn't ruin, a good start to the season by the Hurricanes. They had already won two Atlantic Coast Conference games against ranked teams.

If Miami can rebound with a victory against the Sooners, who might have Heisman Trophy winner Sam Bradford back at quarterback, the Hurricanes should make another big jump in the rankings and talk of making a national title run can resume.

Lose to Oklahoma and, well, the 'Canes are still in good shape in the conference and they emerge from the toughest part of their schedule 2-2.

Bradford hasn't played since his right shoulder was sprained on a hard hit at the end of the first half of the season-opening loss to BYU.

Oklahoma coach Bob Stoops said whether Bradford plays will not be a game-time decision.

At Berkeley, Cal and USC were supposed to be playing the game of the year in the Pac-10. With both the Bears and Trojans having already lost conference games, the matchup doesn't quite have the zing anymore.

NEW MEXICO LOOKING INTO LOCKSLEY FIGHT

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — University of New Mexico administrators have opened an investigation into a fight where football coach Mike Locksley struck an assistant, and the first-year coach could face suspension or firing. The probe will be directed by the university's Human Resources Division.

"It has been given a high priority," university spokeswoman Susan McKinsey said Wednesday.

The investigation comes after athletic director Paul Krebs announced Monday that Locksley had been issued verbal and written reprimands for his role in a Sept. 20 dispute.

Receivers coach J.B. Gerald told police Locksley struck him during a staff meeting at the football office, splitting his lip.

At his weekly news conference Tuesday, Locksley said he accepted responsibility for his actions and said he apologized to Gerald, the coaches and the team.

Under the university's policies, employees face progressive discipline for violent behavior and some violations "may be of such serious nature that immediate suspension or discharge may be appropriate."

Agency: Vick re-signs with Nike

NEW YORK — Michael Vick is back with Nike more than two years after the company severed ties over the quarterback's involvement in a dogfighting ring.

The managing director of the agency that represents Vick announced the deal Wednesday while participating on a panel at the Sports Sponsorship Symposium. Michael Principe of BEST referred questions to Vick's agent, Joel Segal, who did not return calls from The Associated Press.

Segal told SportsBusiness Journal that Vick will wear Nike shoes, gear and apparel, but would not reveal the terms of the agreement.

"Mike has had a great relationship with Nike and is excited to be part of the Nike team again," Segal said.

The deal is the latest step forward for Vick as he seeks to rehabilitate his career and his image after serving 18 months in federal prison. On Sunday, Vick played his first regular-season game since December 2006.

MORA: DON'T EXPECT HASSELBECK OR JONES ON SUNDAY

RENTON, Wash. — The Seahawks are planning to be without quarterback Matt Hasselbeck and best blocker Walter Jones again on Sunday.

Coach Jim Mora said Wednesday he does not expect his three-time Pro Bowl passer or his nine-time Pro Bowl left tackle to play at the undefeated Indianapolis Colts.

The 34-year-old Hasselbeck, who broke a rib 10 days ago, still can't run and still has pain when he takes a deep breath. Mora said he doesn't know for sure if Jones, who has yet to play this season, will play at all in 2009.

PITTSBURGH — If Steelers quarterback Ben Roethlisberger is touching a raw nerve with coach Mike Tomlin by appearing at a wrestling show less than 24 hours after Sunday's game against San Diego, the coach isn't saying.

Tomlin offered only a "no comment" when asked about Roethlisberger serving as the guest host at the televised WWE Raw show Monday in Wilkes-Barre, Pa.

Experts said that the work was not definitive but that it fit in with other studies suggesting a long-term risk from head injuries in sports.

In the new work, 1,063 ex-players were asked if they'd ever been diagnosed with dementia, Alzheimer's disease or other memory-related disease. About 2 percent of the former players ages 30 to 49 said yes. That's 19 times the rate for the same age group in the general population.

LT BACK AT PRACTICE FOR BOLTS

SAN DIEGO — LaDainian Tomlinson was back at practice for the first time since spraining his right ankle during the season opener, an encouraging sign for a San Diego Chargers team that's struggled to run the ball.

Tomlinson said Wednesday that he hopes he can play in Sunday night's game at Pittsburgh, where the Chargers haven't won since shocking the Steelers in the AFC championship game following the 1994 season.

FOX STICKING WITH DELHOMME AS PANTHERS STARTING QB

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Though Jake Delhomme has just two touchdown passes and seven interceptions, he'll remain winless Carolina's starting quarterback.

Asked Wednesday if Delhomme was still his guy moving forward, Panthers coach John Fox left no doubt.

"I didn't think that was a question, but if that needs to be clarified, yes with a capital Y," Fox said.

Fatal motorcycle crash reignites U.S. 93/Idaho 25 junction safety concerns

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

JEROME — With a long history of serious motor vehicle crashes along a stretch of U.S. Highway 93 in Jerome County, a fatality Friday at the intersection of U.S. 93 and Idaho Highway 25 prompted Commissioner Joe Davidson to question Sheriff Doug McFall Monday about the safety of that intersection.

Davidson was responding to the head-on crash between a car and a motorcycle Friday afternoon that claimed the life of Bradley Eberhard, 21, of Gooding.

He asked McFall if the installation of a traffic signal to replace existing stop signs along Idaho 25 is warranted.

McFall said lights might not be the answer. He offered the example of the intersection of Blue Lakes Boulevard and Pole Line Road in Twin Falls, which has a signal.

"They have crashes there all the time," McFall said.

He explained that some motorists see a green light and might not notice a signal change. "They see green and they go for it," McFall said.

"A traffic light wouldn't have prevented the crash (Friday)," he said, and suggested that the driver of the car that collided with Eberhard might not have seen the bike.

While the Idaho Transportation Department is expected to make improvements to U.S. 93 in Jerome County at some point in the future, McFall said he does not know of a proposal to install a signal at that location.

"I think the more urgent need for a light is at the Flying J," he said.

McFall was referring to the access off U.S. 93 into the Crossroads Point Business Park, the location of the Flying J Travel Stop and several other businesses.

He said there have been several fatalities in recent years at U.S. 93 and Idaho 25, but there have been more crashes at the access for Crossroads Point.

Commissioners unanimously approved a letter to ITD on Aug. 3, requesting that a five-mile stretch of U.S. 93 between Interstate 84 and Idaho 25 be added to the ITD list of approved projects for 2010.

In July, a three-vehicle crash in the same five-mile stretch of roadway claimed the life of Frank Orth, 65, of Wendell.

When county commissioners approved the final plans for the second and third phases of Crossroads Point in August, there were no caveats for the developer to pay for roadway improvements at the intersection at Crossroads Point.

There were discussions at the time that highway and intersection improvements could be the burden of ITD, the developer, or both.

Commission green-lights bigger CAFO

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

JEROME — Jerome County commissioners gave approval to a confined animal feeding operation application Tuesday that would allow the Si-Ellen Dairy to expand from 10,171 cows to a permitted maximum of 14,213.

All that remains is for the commission to sign the written memorandum of decision next week.

Engineer Matt Thompson, of AGtec of Twin Falls, represented Si-Ellen Dairy. He said the new permit asks for authorization to combine two existing permits for dairy and beef operations and add a few more than 4,000 cows to reach the permitted maximum.

He said the proposal includes a new animal waste lagoon, additional composting areas and five new corals.

There was no opposition to the permit at a public hearing before the county commission Tuesday.

There was one opponent to the expansion at a Planning and Zoning Commission hearing Aug. 31. Lyndon Jackson, manager and caretaker of Reichard Ranch and Fairyland Park, presented a letter from his employer, Gene Reichard, opposing the expansion, citing concerns about odors associated with the dairy, which is located about a mile from the property southeast of the city of Jerome.

The P&Z Commission voted unanimously to recommend approval.

Jerome commission balks on fair board reappointment

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

JEROME — The Jerome County commission omitted Jerome County Fair Board member Jim Pierce when they reappointed the remainder of the board Monday.

Commissioners instead requested Pierce appear before the fair board and apologize to Fairgrounds Manager Kathleen Diederick for an Aug. 6 incident during the rodeo before he can become eligible for reappointment.

"He has been requested to make a public apology to Kathleen Diederick," Commission Chairman Charlie Howell told the commission before it voted on the reappointments.

He said the fair board had stipulated that Pierce both explain his actions to his colleagues on the board and apologize to Diederick before he could be eligible for reappointment.

The commission will revisit Pierce's possible reappointment in October.

The issue stems from an intoxicated vendor who brought food to the fairgrounds for rodeo staff and participants and then left without delivering the food. Fair board members other than Pierce made an executive decision to fund meals for rodeo cowboys and staff. Pierce objected, according to Howell, and a confrontation followed with Diederick and one or more other board members.

Attempts to reach Pierce were unsuccessful.

Influenza is a contagious respiratory illness that is caused by an influenza virus. Statistics reveal 5 percent to 20 percent of the population of the United States will be affected with seasonal flu, and symptoms will vary from mild to severe. Winter is traditionally flu season. Cases have been reported as early as October; however, January and February are commonly the hardest-hit months. The most appropriate time to obtain the vaccine from your physician is middle to late October. In that way, you will have the protection later in the season, when you need it most. However, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention recommend immunization in September or as soon as possible. There are certain people and age groups that should make an attempt to get vaccinated every fall. Those targeted are people of any age with specific chronic medical conditions, people aged 50 and older, children aged 6 months up to 19, healthcare workers, pregnant women and those residing in nursing homes or long-term healthcare facilities.

Immunization does not guarantee you will remain flu-free; however, it can protect you from the three strains researchers indicate will cause the most illness this year. (See tomorrow's column for more information regarding H1N1 flu, which requires its own vaccine.) I stress this point because flu viruses change annually. This is the reason why a vaccine manufactured in the past will not be beneficial for the current season. Remember that production takes place months before a vaccine is administered. How well the current vaccine works depends on how close a match it is to the strains researchers have predicted will hit.

Influenza viruses are commonly spread from person to person through vapor droplets from coughs and sneezes. While you may think you aren't exposed, imagine riding a bus or going to a grocery store where someone coughs or sneezes without covering his or her mouth or nose, touching a door handle, shopping cart, gasoline pump, car door, using a telephone or coming into contact with a thousand other possible contaminants. You then touch your nose or mouth and voila! You have been exposed.

Healthy adults can infect other people a day before they experience any symptoms. This continues for up to five days following illness. Children have the uncanny ability to pass the virus on for more than seven days. Symptoms generally begin up to four days after a virus enters the body. People without symptoms can unknowingly spread the virus to others.

Simple precautions are the rule of the day. Avoid people you know are contagious. Carry tissues, and cover your mouth or nose when coughing or sneezing, or use the crook of the elbow if tissues are not readily available. (Tissues can be disposed of properly, handkerchiefs cannot.) Keep an alcohol-based hand sanitizer in the glove box of your car or purse. (Be sure that it contains at least 60 percent alcohol to ensure the viruses are killed.) Take a small packet of disinfecting wipes when grocery shopping to use on shopping-cart bars. Wash your hands more frequently than you would at other times of the year. Be practical, but avoid obsessive actions. Eat healthful meals, exercise regularly, and get enough sleep. All these steps might keep you from getting the flu.

State wolf hunt expands, opens in Magic Valley

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

Thousands of hunters will be in the hills as the Idaho wolf hunt opens in every district in the state today, including the Magic Valley region. But, if anything, that might just mean more frustrated hunters.

Pursuing wolves in other parts of the state so far has been an eye-opener, say Idaho Department of Fish and Game officials.

"People are definitely excited," said Regan Berkley, regional wildlife biologist. "But wolves are predators; they make their living by being sneaky. People are finding that, in some cases, hunting them is trickier than they expected."

So far, 14 wolves have been legally taken since the first hunts opened Sept. 1, Berkley said Tuesday. She expects the number of harvested wolves to climb once general deer season opens Oct. 10 and hunters

See HUNT, Outdoors 2

BEFORE YOU HUNT

Capturing wolves: No person may trap, snare or otherwise capture or hold any wolf. Trapping seasons will be considered in future years.

Big-game feeding sites: It is unlawful to hunt or pursue wolves within a half-mile of any active Idaho Fish and Game big game feeding site.

Weapons restrictions: Same as for other big game animals. See Page 65 in the 2009 big game rules.

Electronic calls: No electronic calls may be used to attract wolves for the purpose of harvest.

Bait: Baiting or hunting over bait for wolves is not allowed. It is unlawful to hunt wolves within 200 yards of the perimeter of any designated dump or sanitary landfill.

Dogs: Use of dogs to attract or pursue wolves is prohibited.

Retrieving meat: Hunters are not required to retrieve meat from a harvested wolf. Hide and skull must be physically presented to a Fish and Game regional office within five days of kill.

Jerome Co. Rod and Gun Club seeks new members

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

JEROME — Seeking new members, especially young people, the Jerome County Rod and Gun Club promotes safe shooting at the public range it has operated north of Jerome since 1962.

Discounted fees are offered for youth and first-time adult shooters.

The 100-acre site with several public and private shooting ranges is located one-half mile off U.S. Highway 93, 11 miles north of Interstate 84 near mile marker 64.

"We shoot all the time and we do it in a safe manner," said Kenny Siemens, the club's past coordinator and a member for several years.

Offering several ranges at 10, 25, 50, 100 and 200 yards, a clubhouse and restrooms, the facility has hosted private parties, weddings and reunions. It also features a Western village with building fronts where a "cowboy action shooting" group practices with single action guns.

There are several private ranges leased by various organizations including the cowboy action group and a silhouette shooting group.

The Jerome County Sheriff Department and Idaho Department of Fish and Game have ranges at the facility. Idaho State Police use the Fish and Game range.

The club boasted 385 members last year and expects to be near the 400 mark with expected end of the year memberships. New this year is 135 feet of steel awning with covers where people shoot on the rifle and pistol ranges. Public ranges do not close except when winter driving conditions make access unavailable.

Siemens said there has been an average of 178 shooters each month on the public sporting clays range.

See CLUB, Outdoors 2

IF YOU GO

Memberships are available for $25 for individuals and $35 for family memberships, which include a spouse and minor children. The shooting fee is $20 for adults and $14 for those younger than 18. Non-members pay an additional $5. First-time shooters pay $15 for 100 targets. Memberships are available by mail at P.O. Box 6057, Twin Falls, ID, 83303. Gray Wolf vs. Coyote

As the wolf hunt opens in the Magic Valley, it's important for hunters to know the distinct differences between gray wolves and coyotes.

Devils Lake offers prime Oregon trout fishing

By Mark Morical
The (Bend) Bulletin

BEND, Ore. — Some places just have that certain effect on anglers, providing a bond with nature that can far outweigh the thrill of catching fish.

Central Oregon's Devils Lake, with its stunning, colorful water, is one of those spots. But the fishing on the small lake just northwest of Mount Bachelor is not to be underestimated.

The clear, turquoise water sparkled in the morning sun as Redmond's Joe White cast out into the middle of Devils Lake recently.

"This is almost like therapy to me," White said. "I come out here and I'm able to sort out some of my problems. If I've got things that are bothering me, I can come up here and take my mind off it."

"When I do that, sometimes the answers come to me, and I'm not even looking for it."

And the fish come as well. Using rainbow PowerBait, White landed four shiny rainbow trout in about 20 minutes.

"The fish," White said, "are a bonus."

Nestled within lava rock below South Sister with a shimmering light-blue hue, Devils Lake turns a lot of heads in the vehicles passing on nearby Cascade Lakes Highway.

Devils Lake is a small (23 acres), nutrient-poor water body, and one would assume that fishing is just an afterthought at the lake, where camping, kayaking and hiking are popular — most South Sister climbers start their journey at Devils Lake. But anglers can actually find frequent success for hatchery rainbow trout on the lake, located about 30 miles southwest of Bend.

The Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife stocks Devils Lake five times throughout the spring and summer for a total of 5,000 hatchery rainbow trout each year.

"Typically, we do get carryover (fish) from year to year," said Brett Hodgson, fish biologist for the Oregon Department of Fish and Wildlife in Bend. "So there are the 8- to 9-inchers, and this time of year you could run into some 12- to 16-inch fish from earlier stockings."

From the west bank of Devils Lake, White continued fishing. He was trying for his fifth trout, which would give him his limit for the day.

He cast his PowerBait to the middle of the lake near a dark, rocky shelf where he said rainbows like to congregate.

The trout in Devils Lake are not trophies by any means, but they are well worth the effort.

"Some of these fish down here I caught are really, really firm, really good biters," White said, pointing to his stringer of four 10- to 12-inch rainbows.

He then pointed to a larger fish, easily visible as it swam close to shore in the crystal-clear, green-blue lake.

According to Hodgson, Devils Lake gets its turquoise color from a combination of a rocky shoreline, shallow depth (10 feet at its maximum), and a lack of nutrients.

But despite the lake's lack of natural production, stocked rainbow trout seem to hold their own there.

"They do OK," Hodgson said. "We don't see phenomenal growth (of fish), like Crane Prairie (Reservoir) or Big Lava (Lake), where there's more nutrients."

Hodgson said that fly angling on Devils Lake is most effective in the mornings and evenings, when fish can be found close to shore. In the middle of the day, when the rainbows head for deeper water, bait or lures are an angler's best bet.

Because the lake is so clear the fish can spook easily, so fishermen should stay still and quiet.

"If you're fly-fishing, you'll want to use a light leader and not thrash around too much," Hodgson said. "There's an advantage to getting to the middle of the lake. If you're fly angling, you'll definitely do better with a float tube."

Some of the most productive dry-fly patterns on Devils Lake include midge imitations, Adams, and Pale Morning Dun, Hodgson said. If there is no insect hatch, anglers can fish below the surface with Prince nymphs, pheasant tails or leeches.

Avoid shell-shock with these budget loads

Despite the setback to local hunters by the recent die-off of thousands of ducks at the upper end of American Falls Reservoir, the 2009-10 waterfowl seasons are officially under way.

Biologists believe that record early summer rains — which caused extensive shallow flooding of mudflat and wetland areas — set the stage for the outbreak. These warm, low-oxygenated waters provided the perfect environment for the proliferation of the toxin-producing botulinum bacterium, Clostridium botulinum.

Waterfowl and shore birds that feed upon vegetation and small invertebrates contaminated with the bacteria soon fell victim to the paralyzing effects of the powerful nerve toxin. Infected birds can be easily identified. Prior to their death, they have great difficulty flying, paddling, and holding their heads up. Avoid harvesting or handling any waterfowl demonstrating these behaviors.

Should you unknowingly harvest and consume an infected bird, fear not: proper cooking destroys the bacteria. In all cases, avoid eating raw meat.

Dog owners would be well advised to stay clear of this outbreak zone until the emergency has passed to avoid unnecessarily exposing themselves and their trusty (and expensive) hunting companions to infected birds.

energy on target than lead. In order to equal or exceed lead shots' density, ammo makers began to experiment with exotic combinations of non-toxic metals, such as bismuth, tin, and zinc.

They have succeeded, but the resulting hybrid shotshells can cost up to $4 apiece. Too much for ordinary working folk like myself.

Several years ago, Winchester came to our rescue by offering an economical line of quality steel waterfowl loadings the company dubbed "XPert High Velocity shotshells."

Improvements in powders, wads, and shot concentricity have enabled these loads to reach velocities up to 1,550 fps. These are wonderfully effective shotshells, ideal for slapping decoying teal or highballing northern mallards.

Shot sizes cover the full range of waterfowling needs with Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, BB loadings; 2 3/4-, 3-, and 3.5-inch chamberings are available for 12-gauge guns; 20-gauge 3-inch loads also are available for youth and smaller-framed hunters.

The best news of all: prices for a 25-round box of XPerts will run you about $9 for the 2 3/4-inch, $11 for the 3-inch, and a miserly $15 for the Roman candle sized 3.5 inches. For these prices, you can have your drake and eat it too.

Good hunting!

Wyo. hunter gored by bison recovering

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — The co-worker of a man who was gored by an injured bison near Shadow Mountain over the weekend said Cole Campbell is recovering at an Idaho Falls hospital.

"I talked to his boss who's there with him in Idaho Falls and he's got seven broken ribs," Johnie Filveck said. "He's pretty bruised up and he's got a big ol' hole in his buttocks, but he's going to be OK."

Filveck said he and Campbell were guiding a client for Double Diamond Outfitters and Drag n Tag Saturday when the 48-year-old Campbell was gored.

Filveck said the Riverton client wanted to shoot a bison big enough for the record books with a pistol.

The client shot a .500 Magnum cartridge from a Smith & Wesson pistol at the bison from about 60 yards, Filveck said. The bison ran and the client shot it twice more before it fell over, he said.

"You could see the buffalo was still alive," Filveck said. "And I shouted that out to them. They were trying to get around to a get a killing shot."

The bison got up and gored Campbell, throwing him 15 feet in the air, he said.

The client shot the bison several more times before it died.

Bison hunts will continue until early January, and Filveck plans to guide several more trips.

"We're getting smarter, though," he said. "We won't go up on them like that. I knew not to then, I was shouting for them not to, but the excitement of the deal just overrode them."

will be in the field. More than 16,000 wolf tags had been sold by Tuesday, Berkley said.

Four wolf packs roam the Magic Valley region: The Steel Mountain Pack, north of Featherville; Soldier Mountain Pack, north of Fairfield; Phantom Hill Pack, north of Ketchum; and the Little Wood River Pack in the Little Wood River area. Each pack has four to nine wolves, Berkley said.

"We do occasionally get visits from other packs, and there's definitely some undocumented wolf packs in the region as well," she said.

On Sept. 16 the state approved a plan to issue special wolf hunting tags to be auctioned for state conservation projects and wolf management. The 10 tags went to six different organizations, most of them in Idaho but one to the Wine, Wheels and Wildlife event in Lexington, N.C.

The day before, wolf advocates decided not to appeal a federal judge's decision to allow hunts in Idaho and Montana.

Berkley estimates that Idaho has about 1,000 wolves but not everyone agrees.

"I believe there are far more wolves than what's being reported," said Jeff Frost of Twin Falls.

Frost said that in recent years many out-of-state big-game hunters have skipped Idaho because of declining deer and elk populations, in large part due to wolves. That's not good for the local economy, he said.

"Sportsmen welcome the wolves as any other big-game animal in the state," Frost said. "We're hoping to do what we can to keep the wolf population in check and to help bring back viable big-game animals."

"People don't hunt wolves for food. They hunt deer and elk for food, and in today's economy ... I'm all about that."

"We never have known all the numbers and probably never will," said Siemens, explaining that the club is too small to have a caretaker or range master at the site. His group keeps track of its own members. People using the range are requested to leave fees in envelopes that are provided.

The club holds sporting clays the first Saturday and third Sunday of every month. Other public shoots are held on other dates.

Some organizations, including Ducks Unlimited, hold shoots that are open to the public. Other groups hold private and invitation-only shoots. They include 4H, a Perrine Bridge Festival fundraiser and Intermountain Gas.

A free youth shoot every June is open to youths younger than 18 from the Magic and Wood River valleys. Participants must be accompanied by an adult and must have passed a hunter safety course.

Sun Valley plans nine-day Nordic festival

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

For years, Sun Valley's Nordic trails have been called one of the Nordic skiing's best kept secrets.

No more. A new Sun Valley Nordic Ski Alliance hopes to attract the attention of Nordic skiers around the country with a new nine-day Sun Valley Nordic Festival to take place Jan. 30 through Feb. 7.

"We believe we have one of the top destination Nordic places in the United States and we want to celebrate it in a compelling week," said Jim Keating, executive director of the Blaine County Recreation District, which oversees Galena Lodge, ski trails north of Ketchum and Quigley Nordic.

The event is not just for hardcore cross-country skiers. It's designed for newcomers to the sports and families, as well, said Keating.

The week will kick off with Ski the Rails, a free event that draws skiers of all ages to ski from Ketchum to Hailey, stopping for free cocoa, Gatorade, brownies and Power Bars along the way.

It will end with the 32-kilometer Boulder Mountain Tour — one of the premiere cross-country ski races in the United States, an afternoon of free demos and lessons and, possibly, an old-fashioned Nordic ski race down Baldy.

In between, there will be a festival launch party with music, food and winter games at Quigley Nordic in Hailey, a reception-cocktail party to send off local Nordic skiers to the 2010 Winter Olympic Games in Vancouver, snowshoe walks and races, Nordic sprints, talks by Nordic greats, the Best of Banff Film Festival, a bonfire party with fun obstacle courses, ice sculptures and more.

For the first time in the Boulder's 35-year history, a half-Boulder Mountain Tour will be offered, giving 125 participants a chance to join the 800 other racers at Baker Creek and ski from there to the Sawtooth National Recreation Area headquarters.

Children may accompany a parent for one additional dollar. Half-Boulder racers will be feathered in after the most competitive racers pass Baker Creek so the newcomers won't get run over, said Rick Kapala, director of the Sun Valley Ski Education Foundation's Nordic program.

The Nordic community will also offer a $49 nine-day Nordic ski trail pass that can be used for both Sun Valley Nordic and North Valley Trails, along with discounted ski rentals, lodging and dining. Last year daily trail fees cost between $15 and $18. Keating said the group wanted to stress the affordability of Nordic skiing, as well as "the incredible diversity of skiing we have here that's hard to find elsewhere."

Skiers here can ski in the shadow of an old mining town at Galena one day, be all alone in the wilderness of the Harriman Trail the next, enjoy the posh trails radiating from the multi-million dollar Sun Valley Nordic lodge the next day and then ski for free along a trail that runs more than a dozen miles from Ketchum to Hailey winding up at Quigley Nordic, he noted.

Kapala said Norwegian Olympic gold medalist Thomas Alsgaard, who trained in Sun Valley prior to the 2002 Winter Olympics in Salt Lake City, blogged about the area being the best place to ski he'd ever been.

"When you consider the volume of trails, the standard of grooming and the consistent snow conditions, it's unparalleled."

Kevin Swigert, a former competitive skier who heads up the Boulder Mountain Tour, concurred: "I've skied all over the world and this area blows my mind for the quality of cross-country skiing — and so few people know about it."

Organizers said they know of no similar festival anywhere in the United States — or the world, for that matter.

"We have no idea how many people might take advantage of the festival in its first year," said Bob Rosso, owner of The Elephant's Perch outdoor store. "We could have thousands of people or we could get three. But they'll be really happy people."

The moon's horns point the way for the sun

Even a casual sky watcher will have noticed that the crescent moon's horns sometimes appear to point nearly straight upward, and other times sideways. Time of day, latitude and season all affect the crescent moon's tilt.

The earth, orbiting the sun once per year, creates the appearance that the sun circumnavigates the zodiac from west to east once annually.

The moon orbits the earth on a path similar to the sun's, but completes its round-the-sky journey monthly instead of yearly.

Thus, an evening crescent, east of the setting sun, will tip in a direction presaging the sun's track in the coming weeks.

A springtime waxing crescent points its horns nearly straight up, as if shepherding the sun toward its high summertime arc. Autumn's evening crescent is a backwards letter "C," lying to the left of sunset, the horns tipped horizontally toward the sun's winter nadir.

Morning crescent moons are west of the rising sun, and so their horns point not where the sun is going but where it has just been.

Springtime's waning crescent is a forward "C," with horns pointing back toward the winter solstice to the sun's right. Autumn's morning crescent has horns aimed high, toward summer's solar apex now trailing behind.

The above description applies to locations throughout mid-northern latitudes, encompassing the entire contiguous 48 states as well as Europe, Asia and the Far East. Residents of temperate zones in the southern hemisphere would see much the same thing, only

Biologists seek more safeguards for Utah's bats

SALT LAKE CITY — Utah wildlife officials say more needs to be done to safeguard the 19 species of bats in the state.

A disease that has decimated bat populations in the East hasn't hit Utah but state biologists say local populations face other threats.

In a report to the state wildlife board, biologists are recommending a series of steps to protect them, including changes in timber harvest practices, use of alternative pesticides and nets that cover toxic ponds near oil and gas operations.

Kim Hersey, a sensitive species biologist for the Utah Division of Wildlife Resources, says the goal of the plan is to sustain the populations and keep them from being placed on the endangered species list.

The wildlife board is scheduled to discuss the plan today.

Bird die-off slows at Idaho reservoir

AMERICAN FALLS — Idaho Fish and Game officials say between 12,000 and 15,000 birds have died from a botulism outbreak at American Falls Reservoir, but the deaths appear to be slowing down.

Regional conservation manager Tom Lucia says workers have been able to remove the majority of the dead birds from the northern part of the reservoir. The cleanup effort was important because botulism can easily spread when birds begin eating maggots on infected bird carcasses.

The outbreak affected several species of waterfowl, including mallards, pintails, teal, widgeons, seagulls and ibises.

Issues of color still ripple through American identity

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: "Wondering in Goldsboro, N.C.," asked why President Barack Obama is considered to be African-American when he's biracial. While your response was accurate, you missed an opportunity to educate your readers by failing to give the historical context as to why most people refer to him as African-American.

There was a time in this country when "blacks"/African-Americans were considered only to be three-fifths (3/5) of a human being. Also, if a person had one drop of "black" blood they were considered black. Although as a society we have progressed intellectually and in our understanding of what a human being is, we continue to hold on to archaic beliefs about skin color that not only pigeon-hole an individual, but may force an individual to choose what so-called racial group that he/she identifies with most.

I can clearly see that the conversation regarding "race" and skin color must be continued in this country. Though we've "come a long way, baby," we still have a long way to go in understanding this country's deep-rooted responses to skin color.

— LIVING IN AMERICA
DEAR LIVING: I think if one digs deep enough, we will come to the realization that there has always been a component of economic exploitation and perceived economic threat that is, and has been, at the root of racial discrimination. (But that's just my opinion.)

Read on:
DEAR ABBY: In Obama's book, "Dreams From My Father," he calls himself a black man of mixed descent. His decision to do that is as much a political decision as it is a personal one.

Most people of color of mixed race in our society have felt we had to choose to be the darker color because we can never be white. In our society, most people who do or don't know of Obama's mixed background would treat him as a black man. (If you saw him walking down the street, would you say, "Hey, that guy's half-white!") By embracing his political identity he supports and strengthens all black people in the U.S. by standing proudly as one of us.

— NICOLE IN MARIN COUNTY, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: African-American does not denote skin color, but an ethnic culture, a term that describes those of us who are descendants of captive Africans in America. It holds the same level of pride as it does for those who pronounce they are Italian-American or Asian-American.

— MICHELLE IN MARYLAND

DEAR ABBY: You write that the term African-American is used in this country as a label that describes skin color. I believe you are correct, and that's the problem. "African-American" identifies origin or ancestry, not skin color. Furthermore, if the anthropologists are right, then — going back far enough — we are ALL African-American.

— AFRICAN-AMERICAN MEMBER OF THE HUMAN RACE IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR ABBY: Why can't we all be called just plain AMERICANS if we grow up in America and are citizens of America? I think a lot of people have wondered this.

— SANDY B. IN HARRISBURG, PA.

DEAR SANDY: That's a good question and one that I hope will one day be put to rest — if not by our children, then by our children's children. — SINCERELY, ABBY

IF OCTOBER 1 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You may learn to take pride in your ability to be a "free spirit" during the year ahead. It could be that you begin to develop an interest in new age ideas and philosophies — or, on the other hand, you may be given free rein to come and go as you please. In some way, there will be more excitement in your life between now and the first of the year. In January some of your ideas and objectives, or perhaps new relationships, will not be realistic or valid, so wait until February to make life-altering decisions, commit to a relationship or set important plans into motion.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): New ideas and perspectives may light a fire under your ambitions for a few hours. Be wary of signing contracts or making promises.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): At the moment you would be wise to rely on the facts, not on your friends. Contracts and agreements could contain numerous errors.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Some people get by on good looks, but you have mental prowess to see you through. You will come up with an ingenious solution.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You are able to direct your energies in progressive directions. Adopt a pet, give a pint of blood or just add to the donation jar.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Make money, as well as love, the old fashioned way. People expect you to be brilliant but expect you to be conscientious, as well.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your physical attractiveness can be used to an advantage, so look your best. Something from your past could come back to haunt you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22):

Today is Thursday, Oct. 1, the 274th day of 2009. There are 91 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Oct. 1, 1949, Mao Zedong proclaimed the People's Republic of China during a ceremony in Beijing.

On this date:
In 1800, Spain ceded Louisiana to France in a secret treaty.

In 1908, Henry Ford introduced his Model T automobile to the market.

In 1936, Gen. Francisco Franco was proclaimed the head of an insurgent Spanish state.

In 1939, Winston Churchill, recently appointed First Lord of the Admiralty by British Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain, described Russia as "a riddle wrapped in a mystery inside an enigma" during a radio address on the invasion of Poland by Nazi Germany and the Soviet Union.

In 1949, a 42-day strike by

TODAY IN HISTORY

the United Steelworkers of America began over the issue of retirement benefits.

In 1961, Roger Maris of the New York Yankees hit his 61st home run during a 162-game season, compared to Babe Ruth's 60 home runs during a 154-game season.

In 1964, the Free Speech Movement was launched at the University of California at Berkeley.

In 1971, Walt Disney World opened in Orlando, Fla.

In 1979, Nigeria's military rulers handed over power to a civilian government.

In 1987, eight people were killed when an earthquake measuring magnitude 5.9 struck the Los Angeles area.

Ten years ago: South Korean activists thanked the U.S. government for promising to investigate an Associated Press report that U.S. forces had killed refugees at the start of the Korean War, but also demanded the U.S. punish some of the veterans involved and compensate the victims' relatives.

Five years ago: Mount St. Helens in Washington state erupted for the first time in 18 years, but without nearly the force of the 1980 disaster. Police found Lori Hacking's body in a landfill after picking through the trash for weeks in a search for the young Utah woman murdered by her husband, Mark. Fashion photographer Richard Avedon died in San Antonio at age 81.

One year ago: After one spectacular failure in the House, the $700 billion financial industry bailout won lopsided passage in the Senate, 74-25, after it was loaded with tax breaks and other sweeteners. Nick Reynolds, a founding member of the Kingston Trio, died in San Diego at age 75. TV actor House Peters Jr., the original "Mr. Clean," died in Los Angeles at age 92.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"Something between a hindrance and a help." — William Wordsworth

When people ask me what the secret of bridge is, I tell them that it is a game of errors. Winners make the fewest mistakes and, crucially, keep their partners on the right track. There is not much you can do when partner is declaring — except put trumps down on your right. But on defense it is a different story.

Take this deal from the match between Israel and Canada in a Junior World Teams tournament, where the Israeli East had a chance to cherish his partner. After both Souths opened one spade, the Wests had to decide how much to bid. Wolpert for Canada at our featured table bid five diamonds, but South ended up in five spades.

After the diamond-ace lead, Wolpert decided to shift and (correctly in my opinion) elected to play his partner for the heart ace rather than very good clubs, or a slow club trick plus a major-suit winner. He shifted to his heart, and that meant 11 tricks for declarer.

By contrast, in the other room the Israeli West bid only four diamonds at his first turn. North bid four spades now, and Amir Levin, East, bid five clubs as a lead director, suggesting clubs and a diamond fit. When North-South pushed on to five spades, the defense led clubs and could now set the game. (Note, by the way, that five spades was necessary insurance over five diamonds, which might easily have made.)

ANSWER: Did you remember the message from today's deal? Bid three clubs, a fit-showing jump to show heart support and a source of tricks in clubs. You could simply raise hearts, but then how would partner know where your cards are if he has to decide what to do over four spades? As a passed hand, your jump should not be just clubs — you would have opened three clubs with that hand.
