National groups ask EPA to look at CAFOs

By Nate Poppino
 Times-News writer

A coalition led by the Humane Society of the United States has asked the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to start regulating confined-animal feeding operations under the Clean Air Act, curbing emissions of hydrogen sulfide, ammonia and two greenhouse gases.

The petition, which would also target methane and nitrous oxide, comes as the EPA is close to wrapping up a study of emissions at 24 U.S. CAFOs. The agency says it does not yet have enough information to determine whether such facilities deserve more regulation; industry groups argue their overall contributions are small and that the petitioners are simply attacking animal agriculture.

The coalition, also including the Association of Irrigated Residents and Friends of the Earth, submitted a 69-page petition on Sept. 21. CAFOs are Images along Main Avenue in Twin Falls began to take shape on Thursday, with bright colors bringing life to a gray canvas of sidewalks.

The chalk art was drawn by artists for the Magic Valley Arts Council's Main Avenue Chalk Walk, an event that adds another layer of decorations right before Oktoberfest, which begins today.

"It's just a nice lead-in to Oktoberfest," said Carolyn White, program director for the Magic Valley Arts Council. "It gets everybody in the spirit."

The chalk artwork varies from autumn themes to others. Adan Robles, a Man illegally shot at wolf pack from ultralight

By John Miller
 Associated Press writer

BOISE — A shotgun-wielding motorized parachutist fired on a pack of wolves earlier this year from the eastern Idaho sky, something forbidden even under a state permit that allows aerial gunning of foxes and coyotes.

Carl Ball, a sheep rancher, was flying his aircraft June 5 near St. Anthony above a 160-acre sheep pen when he saw at least four wolves, according to an Idaho Department of Fish and Game law enforcement report obtained Thursday by The Associated Press.

Ball reported he shot at the wolves after they'd already left the pen and said he believed one animal outfitted with a radio collar had been killed, though state and federal wildlife officials who arrived hours later never found a wolf carcass.

"He shot the wolf at least two times on subsequent flyovers. He believed the wolf had crawled under some brush and died,"

Skeleton of 'Ardi' provides clues to human origin

By Joel Achenbach
 The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Ardi lived 4.4 million years ago in the woodlands of East Africa. She spent most of her time in the trees. She stood about four feet tall, weighed 110 pounds, and had long arms, short legs and a grasping big toe that was perfect for clambering branch to branch. She ate in the trees, raised her offspring in the trees, slept in the trees.

But sometimes she came down to the ground, and stood upright. She could walk on two legs. She was, in a sense, taking baby steps on a journey that would change the world.

"Ardi" is the nickname given to a remarkable, shattered skeleton that an international team of scientists believes is a major breakthrough in the study of human origins. The skeletal remains were

JEROME — Jerome County 5th District Court Judge Jason Walker closed a competency hearing Thursday for first-degree murder suspect Fortino Leon, specifically saying the media could not be present.

A decision by Walker is expected today on whether Leon is competent to stand trial for allegedly shooting and killing Javier Zavala-Paniagua along a Jerome street in July 2008.

Defense attorney Stacey Gosnell-Taylor made a motion to close the hearing to the press on the grounds of medical confidentiality and because records were previously sealed. Jerome County Deputy Prosecutor Paul Kroeger concurred.

This year, she drew Snoopy. The famous beagle from "Peanuts" was in a pumpkin patch and holding a sign that said "Boo!"

regional conservation officer John Hanson wrote in his report. "He has a hunting license, pilot's license and an aerial gunning permit from the Department of Agriculture."

Four years ago, then-Gov. Dirk Kempthorne, Idaho's congressional delegation and sheep ranchers persuaded Federal Aviation Administration officials to allow licensed pilots to shoot coyotes and other wild predators while flying overhead in ultralight flying machines.

Rifle- and pistol-packing pilots of dirigibles, balloons, gliders, flying trikes, gyroplanes and powered parachutes can take a few hours of instruction and get an Idaho Sheep Commission-issued permit to shoot varmints from the heavens.

But even though the federal government earlier this year lifted Endangered Species Act protections from more than 1,000 wolves in Idaho and Montana, and both states have legal hunting seasons, that's only for people shooting from the ground or trees.

Blasting wolves from the sky remains off limits because state wildlife managers consider them big game animals, not predators.

Ball didn't return a phone call seeking comment Thursday.

But state Sen. Jeff Siddoway, a Republican from Terreton who owns the 160-acre sheep pen where the incident occurred, said Ball called him that morning from a cell phone while circling above the wolves with his gun loaded with No. 4 shot. Siddoway, in turn, contacted big game manager Brad Compton of the Fish and Game Department and contends he was told shooting a wolf from a powered parachute was allowed under a valid aerial gunning permit.

"He said, 'Go ahead,'" Siddoway recalled. "We do it at our leisure for coyotes. This was just the first time we did it for a wolf."

It wasn't until later in the day, Siddoway maintains, that another official informed him the permit didn't cover aerial wolf gunning.

Compton didn't immediately return a phone call, but Jim Unsworth, Fish and Game's deputy director, said his agency most certainly didn't give Siddoway the green light to shoot wolves from the sky.

"Brad or I probably told him he could legally protect his livestock," Unsworth said. "But I don't think anybody told him to shoot it out of a powered parachute."

The state agency investigated the incident, Unsworth said, but opted to drop the case, in part because no dead wolf was ever found.

Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Mike Fergus in Renton, Wash., said his agency wasn't aware of the incident.

Wildlife activists said the confusion over whether wolves are legitimate aerial gunning targets underscores the absurdity of allowing people to use kit-built and experimental flying contraptions to kill animals.

"The fact that wolves have been delisted, people probably believe they can just go after them now," said Wendy Keefover-Ring, the Denver-based coordinator of a national coalition of environmental groups aiming to halt aerial shooting. "We have the confluence of two bad policies coming together: the new allowances (for airborne hunting) and also the delisting of wolves under the Endangered Species Act."

Meanwhile, Siddoway is planning to introduce a bill in the Idaho Legislature next year to expand animals covered by the aerial permits to include wolves, too. The wolves didn't kill any of his rams that June morning, Siddoway concedes, but more than 100 of his roughly 18,000 ewes, lambs and rams have been killed by the big predators this year.

"It's insane that I would have to ask for permission over my own ground," he said.

T.F. bomb squad blasts clothing box

Bomb scare turns out to be act of goodwill

By David Cooper
Times-News writer

Four police cars and a bomb squad trailer surrounded Twin Falls City Park Thursday night to inspect a suspicious package that turned out to be filled with donated clothes.

"Thankfully, it was benign and done very safely," said Twin Falls Staff Sgt. Dan Lewin. "It's packed full of nice clothing and somewhat of a gesture of goodwill."

Officers responded to the scene around 7:30 p.m. David Brown, who stood by the scene with his wife and friends, said he was the one to call police after he discovered the heavily wrapped package on a picnic table near St. Edward's the Confessor Catholic Church. On the top, he said, it was marked with writing that said "FREE."

"I started walking up to the table and picked it up and saw it was all taped," Brown said. "I tried to push it and there was something really heavy inside it. It looked suspicious."

Lewin said three of the box's flaps were taped shut, and what appeared to be a black bag was inside.

Cars soon lined up along Hansen Street between the Twin Falls Public Library and St. Edward's.

About 40 minutes after arriving, police sent in the bomb squad robot. The device first blasted a shot of water to knock the box off the table. The robot's extended arm then lifted the box to empty its contents.

Lewin said those who found the box did the right thing by calling police. "Nowadays we just don't walk up to mess around with these things. Having the robot available to us, the officers don't need to have to go up and look inside."

Finding the box in that location made sense, Lewin added, "because there is a certain percentage of homeless people that stay here in the park." He advised that the goodwill donations be sent to a proper charitable organization.

"They will take the box of clothing to D.I. or Salvation Army where it should have been taken."

painstakingly recovered from the Ethiopian desert along with bones from at least 35 other members of a species scientists call Ardipithecus ramidus. The 15-year investigation of Ardipithecus culminated Thursday in the publication of a raft of papers in the online edition of the journal Science, as well as dual press conferences in Washington and Addis Ababa, Ethiopia.

"This is huge. This is the biggest discovery really since the 'Lucy' skeleton of the 1970s," said Carol Ward, a University of Missouri paleoanthropologist who was not involved with the research but had been given a preview so that she could offer an independent assessment.

Human origins is a field with high stakes and small bones, and the elaborate roll-out of the Ardipithecus research probably will trigger debate about the message contained in fossils so fragile they had to be excavated with dental picks and porcupine quills. If the scientists who found Ardi are correct, she represents a transitional figure, almost a hybrid — a tree creature who could carry food in her arms as she explored the woodland floor on two legs.

Ardi lived more than a million years before Lucy, the name given to a 3.2 million-year-old skeleton found in 1974 that is the best example of Australopithecus afarensis, a small-brained primate that had fully adapted to a bipedal life and had expanded its habitat beyond the forest into the savannah of Africa.

Unlike Ardi, she lacked the grasping big toe that extends laterally from the foot. Lucy's big toe pointed forward, aligned with the other toes, and was used for propulsion. Ardi and Lucy had different teeth, with Lucy's enlarged molars more adapted to a wide-ranging diet on the savannah. But Ardi and Lucy had rather similar faces, skulls, hands and pelvises.

The scientists who found Ardi do not contend that Ardi necessarily evolved into Lucy, or that Ardipithecus ramidus was necessarily a direct human ancestor. The human family of primates could have splintered into multiple species along the way, with some winding up as genetic dead ends. If that were the case, Ardi would be more of a distant cousin to human beings rather than a direct forebear.

"The individual, Ardi, that female individual, is she our ancestor?" said Tim White, a University of California at Berkeley paleoanthropologist who led the research team. "And the answer is, probably not. If she didn't have any kids, tough luck, she's nobody's ancestor."

The Ardi team, however, does make the case that the genus Ardipithecus, which could have encompassed a number of species, is ancestral to the genus Australopithecus. Thus the general body plan of Ardi would evolve into the general body plan of Lucy, and on down the line until the genus Homo appears.

"The Ardipithecus genus gave rise to Australopithecus even though we can't say exactly what species did. Maybe ramidus did. But certainly something like ramidus did," White said.

go to the press would preclude Mr. Leon from having a fair trial," Gosnell-Taylor said.

Before Walker closed the hearing to the public, other than witnesses expected to present testimony, he cited First Amendment rights for the media that are guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution, along with Leon's right to a fair trial and privacy concerning medical issues.

Closing the hearing precludes the public from knowing why Leon, 74, has not been declared mentally fit to stand trial for first-degree murder and aggravated battery and assault.

Leon is accused of fatally shooting Javier Zavala-Paniagua, 22, and wounding his now ex-wife, Maria Abigail Leon, 41, in July 2008. The double shooting took place outside 221

Fifth Ave. E. in Jerome, in front of 5- and 6-year-old children who were riding their bicycles past the house.

Court documents allege that Zavala-Paniagua was Maria Leon's lover and that they lived together.

The case has been stalled in the court system for 15 months.

Walker issued an order Sept. 3 to seal two recent medical reports, citing medical confidentiality and Leon's right to fair trial that time, too.

In April, Walker barred the public from a status hearing for Leon and sealed court records, leaving unanswered questions. Times-News attorney Fritz Haemmerle answered with a motion filed in May to unseal the records. Walker rejected the motion and unsealed only court minutes.

Jeanne Rideout's amazing Twin Falls journey

She wasn't born in Twin Falls and hadn't lived here for many years before her death last Sunday in a Stockton, Calif., nursing home. But nobody, perhaps, exemplified this town better than Jeanne Rideout.

YOU DON'T SAY Steve Crump

Or packed more fun into 89 years.

She danced with actor Sal Mineo, wrote songs for TV dance parties and served as J.C. Penney's — yeah, that J.C. Penney — right-hand woman.

Rideout, a native of The Dalles, Ore., moved to Twin Falls when her dad was hired to run the local JC Penney store. She graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1938 and was named Miss Twin Falls in 1939. Rideout won a walk-on part in the movie "Sun Valley Serenade" while working as a cashier at the Sun Valley Lodge, and sang in a girl group at the Ram.

After a couple of years at the University of Washington, Rideout married her high school sweetheart, Horton Granville "Granny" Haight — I.B. Perrine's first grandson and descendent of the Mormon leader who first sent settlers to the Oakley area in the 1880s.

Granville Haight lived at Blue Lakes Ranch with his grandparents while he attended Twin Falls High.

"He had a pet fish named Willie that would eat out of his hand, and, when a man from Hagerman caught it, Granville's mother never forgave him," Rideout said in a 1993 interview.

The courtship was romantic. "We had lover's lane all to ourselves. He would always say, 'Meet me at the top' (of the Blue Lakes Grade); the same spot where his parents had courted on horseback."

"Granville called me at college, and my parents told me not to do anything rash," Rideout said, "but I left with him in a second-hand car and drove across the country."

Granny Haight was a chemical engineer, and spent World War II working for DuPont in New Jersey, developing pesticides to combat malaria. Jeanne drove a bread truck.

During the early years of her marriage, Rideout opened a Fred Astaire dance school. She composed a "bunny hop routine" that was featured on Dick Clark's "American Bandstand" and eight twist songs for Columbia Records.

Along the way she had five children. The Hights eventually divorced, and Jeanne married a physics professor who died three years later. By that time, she had looked up the then 90-year-old Penney and signed on as his executive secretary.

"He remembered me from Twin Falls when I was a little child and he used to dangle me on his knee."

At age 49, Jeanne moved to California where she met her third husband, accountant Eugene Rideout.

Into her 70s, Rideout traveled to Switzerland, Africa and Hawaii, often playing in international bridge tournaments. She was also a painter, poet and published author.

ITD seeking grant for I-84/U.S. 93 interchange

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

The Idaho Transportation Department has filed a grant application for federal stimulus dollars that would pay for an $18.9 million in improvements at the Interstate 84/U.S. Highway 93 interchange north of Twin Falls.

ITD will find out in January if it has won the funds, which are awarded on a competitive basis. The Magic Valley proposal is one of three that ITD is seeking for the state. The other two are in Lewiston and the Treasure Valley.

Originally, the project was scheduled for fiscal year 2004, but there hasn't been enough funding for it to become a reality, officials said.

"It's just been hanging out there waiting for us to find the available funding," said Nathan Jerke, ITD spokesman.

If the grant is awarded, improvements include:

- Replacing the existing overpass bridge with a longer structure that has a higher vertical clearance.
- Currently, the overpass' lowest point is 15 feet, 3 inches tall, and the new structure, if built, would have a minimum clearance of 18 feet, Jerke said.
- Widening U.S. 93 and adding right-hand turn lanes for I-84 westbound ramps.
- Reconstruction of eastbound on-ramps and one mile of I-84 near the interchange.

- Adding a traffic signal at the entrance of Crossroads Point off of U.S. 93.
- Installation of fiber optic cables.

The project, if awarded, would be paid with Transportation Investments Generating Economic Recovery (TIGER) funds that are part of $1.5 billion approved for the nationwide competitive program.

already a national EPA priority for other issues under the Clean Water Act.

Those representing the petitioners include Charlie Tebbutt, co-chairman of the Dairy Education Alliance. Tebbutt is also an attorney with the Western Environmental Law Center and is one of three attorneys challenging a Jerome County decision to allow a CAFO just more than a mile west of the Minidoka National Historic Site.

The EPA still says it needs to learn more about the issue. Spokesman Dave Ryan said the federal agency will review and respond to the petition as appropriate within 120 days. Meanwhile, the two-year study — launched as part of a compliance agreement with the industry — should give his agency a better idea of just what pollution the facilities produce when results are released next year.

That didn't keep the petitioners from quoting past EPA figures, as well as information from United Nations reports and other sources, when making their case. Tebbutt said that the coalition hopes the agency will "act promptly and thoroughly," noting the EPA statements about not having enough information.

"So here is one piece of the puzzle for them to begin to bring this unregulated industry under control," Tebbutt said.

Industry representatives say they don't need that control. Tom McDonnell, executive vice president of the Idaho Cattle Association, said other studies have proven animal agriculture only emits as little as 3 percent of U.S. greenhouse gases and argued the groups behind the petition just want to destroy livestock operations.

"Anymore, you really have to take this really seriously," McDonnell said. "These people have friends in power right now."

In Idaho, ammonia emissions at dairies that emit more than 100 tons a year are already monitored by the state departments of Environmental Quality and Agriculture. Martin Bauer, head of DEQ's air-quality division, said any new EPA rules would be in addition to the state program, which has improved after running into reporting and inspection problems last year.

Public lands managers warn of beetle epidemic

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

HAILEY — There's a lot going on around public lands in Blaine County, and a couple times a year, county commissioners ask representatives of the agencies that manage those lands to come in and give them an update.

On Tuesday, Ketchum District Forest Service Ranger Kurt Nelson updated the commissioners on this year's fire season. Fires have hit only 53 acres in his district, 28 of which were in wilderness areas, where the fires were observed and monitored.

"We got 'em all, and it was a nice, cool, wet summer," Nelson said. If the weather cooperates, he said, a few controlled burns will be conducted in the Little Wood River area by the end of October.

Of more concern is what's happening in the area hit by the 2007 Castle Rock Fire. The 48,000 acres are susceptible to bark beetles, and Nelson warned of a pending epidemic.

Pouches of pheromones intended to "firebreak" the forest were unsuccessful due to high winds that blew the beetles into formerly unaffected areas. Nelson said aerial applications of the pheromones, which give the beetles the message to move on to other areas, may be necessary.

Epidemics last four to six years in a typical cycle, Nelson said, but the effects of the beetles, which eat away the living interiors of the trees, will be seen next year in the Upper Warm Springs and Upper College areas of Bald Mountain. Though the affected trees are still green, they're dead and will be red and brittle by next summer.

Nelson also said records were set last year for personal firewood cutting, and permits are still in high demand this year.

Commissioners also heard about strategies that have been in development since 2004 for the Boise, Payette and Sawtooth national forests. Intended to help manage the forests better for harvest, recreation and species preservation, the proposed changes will have exceptions for emergencies like fires, public safety, prior rights and treaties, and the need to meet other statute requirements like the Endangered Species Act.

Blaine County nears a decision on McHanville housing overlay near Hailey

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

HAILEY — For decades the McHanville area of Blaine County, which surrounds St. Luke's Wood River Medical Center, has been both an opportunity and a challenge.

It was identified in the early 1990s as a special-use area due to nonconforming uses, including businesses in residential zones.

The commissioners' intention in changing the zoning is to bring these uses into conformity, as well as to create a place where affordable housing is encouraged.

"Not one unit of community housing has been built in this overlay district in the year since it's been approved," noted Blaine County Commissioner Larry Schoen on Tuesday at a meeting to discuss incentives under consideration for development of affordable housing.

Among the incentives would be greater allowable densities, options for master-planned developments, and other flexibilities the board would gain to encourage developers to build affordable units.

The area in question encompasses approximately 200 acres on a backwards "r" shaped piece of land on either side of Idaho Highway 75, also known as South Gateway.

One of the last changes to the ordinance language the commissioners considered was an exemption for St. Luke's Wood River that would have allowed the hospital to expand without providing community housing.

The commissioners were concerned about that idea, in part because of potential legal issues involved in having a law aimed at a specific business, and in part based on the arguments of local community housing advocates who said the third-largest employer in the county should be a leader in housing lower-income residents instead of becoming exempt from it.

"This is a case where size matters," said Larry Helzel, speaking for the Ketchum City Council. "Everyone needs to pitch in and do their share for now and for the future."

Kathy Grotto, executive director of the Blaine County Housing Authority, encouraged the commissioners to make the ordinance as flexible as possible to allow them to consider unusual project proposals.

The board removed language limiting allowable hospital uses to not-for-profits, saying that St.

Luke's is established and doesn't need board protection, and noting that other nonprofits might attempt to take advantage of the language to also request exemptions from the community housing regulations.

The commissioners closed public comment on the ordinance, and are expected to approve it when a revised draft returns to them at their Oct. 13 meeting.

Feds add Slickspot peppergrass to threatened list

By Todd Dvorak
Associated Press writer

BOISE — A plant with small white flowers that is exclusive to southwestern Idaho was listed as threatened on Thursday by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

The new designation of Slickspot peppergrass under the federal Endangered Species Act comes more than a year after a federal judge ordered the service to again reconsider its decision not to classify the plant as endangered.

In that case, the judge sided with environmental groups and biologists who claimed federal officials had made an arbitrary decision and downplayed scientific evidence.

In changing course, federal officials now say the habitat for the plant — a member of the mustard family and native to southern Idaho's Snake River Plain, the Owyhee Plateau and the foothills north of Boise — is becoming more vulnerable to threats primarily from wildfire and invasive plants.

"We have carefully assessed the best scientific information available, as well as public comments, regarding the past, present and future threats to slickspot peppergrass," said Jeff Foss, state supervisor for the Fish and Wildlife Service. "Evidence indicates the sagebrush-steppe habitat of this species continues to degrade in quality."

While not considered on the fast track to extinction, the service concluded that extinction is likely unless changes are made.

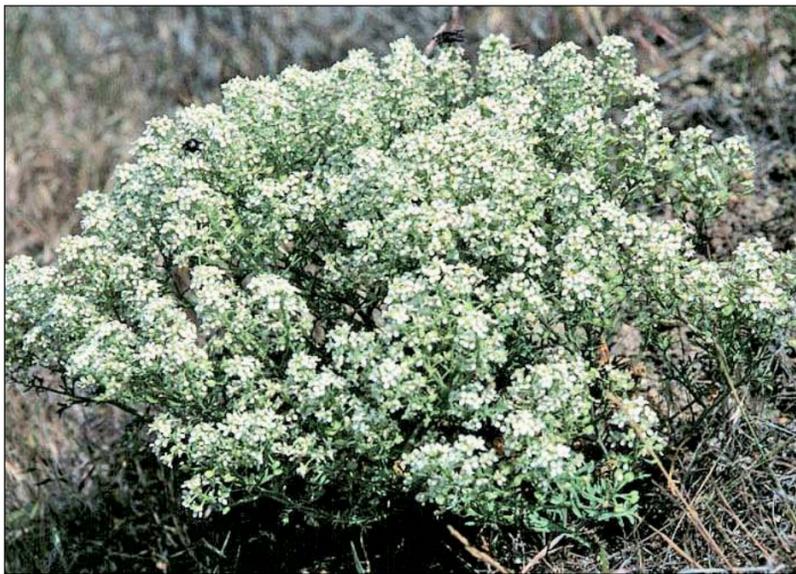

About 98 percent of the plant's population is found on federal land managed by the Bureau of Land Management and the Department of Defense, including the Juniper Butte Training Range, which is managed by the Mountain Home Air Force Base. Less than 1 percent of its population is on state land and another 1.6 percent on private land.

Its range is also spread across landscape prized for grazing livestock. The protracted battle to protect the plant, fought in several federal lawsuits, was also highlighted by efforts by Idaho and some of its most powerful political officials who sought to avoid federal influence and have the state oversee management of the species and avoid harming ranchers.

"We're clearly disappointed," said Jon Hanian, spokesman for Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter, who worked to keep the plant off the ESA while serving three terms in the U.S. House from 2000-2006.

Hanian said the state intends to file a lawsuit in federal court challenging the listing.

"It's in the works," Hanian said.

Kootenai deputies shoot pug for snarling rush hour traffic

COEUR D'ALENE (AP) — Sheriff's deputies say they were forced to shoot a pug on Interstate 90 after they were unable to catch the dog during rush hour traffic.

Kootenai County sheriff's Lt. Dan Soumas says officers from three agencies — the Idaho State Patrol, the Post Falls Police Department and the sheriff's office — used food and entreaties to try to catch the little pug Friday afternoon, but the animal kept darting away from them, scampering into the 70 mph traffic and nearly causing several wrecks.

Some passers-by also stopped to help, and the officers even brought a couple of leashed dogs out of cars to see if the pug would come over to check out a fellow canine, he said.

"The first person on the scene was a state trooper, who said he needed more people out there before someone got killed," Soumas said. "You could hear the cars skidding over the radio. It was at the peak traffic hour, and this time of year the sun is shining directly down the interstate — it's just a really bad situation."

Soumas said that when all their attempts to catch the dog failed, they had to make the call to shoot the animal to ensure the safety of the travelers on the interstate.

"Nobody wanted to do that — that's the sad thing about it. While it's tragic that we had to put the dog down, it would have been more tragic if someone got hurt or lost a child in a collision," he said.

Law enforcement officers stopped traffic in both directions on the highway, and after failing again to catch the pug, they shot it.

"Frankly, we stand behind what we did," said Soumas, who has a 14-year-old pet dog at home. "It wasn't the most popular thing, and certainly we've received a lot of feedback, but I don't really know what choice we had. The guy that actually had to take the shot feels really bad about it."

Soumas said the deputy that shot the dog had recently taken his own dog to a veterinarian to be euthanized because the animal was in poor health.

Calls and e-mails have been pouring into the department since the incident from people furious that the pug was killed, Soumas said.

"We would have loved to catch the pug and take it to the pound — we do that every day, but it just didn't work out that way," Soumas said.

Soumas says the pug didn't have a collar and its fur was matted, as if it had been a stray for some time.

No one has come forward to say that the dog was their pet, he said.

Idaho water board OKs ESPA recharge plan

BOISE (AP) — Millions of gallons of water will be sent into eastern Idaho irrigation canals this October and November, all part of the Idaho Water Resource Board's 2009 plan to help pump up the Eastern Snake Plain Aquifer.

Exactly how much water gets released into the canals depends on several factors, including weather.

The idea is, the water that's released is meant to seep into cracks in the canals and eventually make it into the big aquifer that supplies the region with much of its water.

The plan, approved recently by the board that oversees the water system that's the liquid backbone of the Idaho economy, foresees a majority the recharge happening below the American Falls Reservoir.

Altogether, the board set aside $200,000 for the work and between 30,000 and 60,000 acre feet could be released.

An acre foot is enough water to cover one acre with a foot of water.

"We are overwhelmed with victims and ... lack of clean water, electricity and telecommunications."
 — Fauzi Bahar, mayor of the Sumatra island city of Padang, where at least 367 people died in an earthquake

EDITORIAL

Having acted in haste, legislators now repent in leisure

It was the going-home bill in the last Legislature, and it wasn't a very good one. To break a 117-day impasse last spring, Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter and the Legislature agreed to shift gas tax funding away from the state parks department and the Idaho State Police. "We have all learned that we made a mistake here," said Rep. Raul Labrador, R-Eagle, a member of a joint legislative committee that voted Thursday to recommend delaying the shift for a year.

Otter was looking for something — anything — to plug the gaps in the state's highway repair backlog after unsuccessfully pitching an increase in the gas tax or higher vehicle registration fees.

Recreationists complained about being asked to solve the state's highway funding problems through less money for trails and waterways programs, but the greater impact was on the stretched-thin ISP.

The task force this week declared its intention that the part of the state police budget that comes from the gas tax be replaced with a new dedicated funding source.

Rep. Rich Wills, R-Glenns Ferry, argued that because gas-tax funds will decline in the long run, a stable and permanent source must be found to replace them.

Perhaps that could come in the form of higher vehicle registration fees, an auto dealer vehicle sales tax, tire fees, a dedicated sales tax on transportation items, a surcharge on local and wireless access lines or a vehicle insurance surcharge of, say, $1 a month.

ISP Director Jerry Russell likes Utah's practice of tying the number of vehicle registrations to the number of state troopers. As do we.

Highway funding, meanwhile, is back to square one pending the recommendations of another task force appointed by Otter.

And it's back to square one until after the 2010 election. The Legislature, reluctant to get out ahead of the governor's task force recommendations, isn't likely to approve any new major funding for the Idaho Transportation Department when it convenes in January.

What's the lesson in all this? Mostly that brinkmanship produces bad public policy.

Our view: A legislative task force concluded — correctly — that hikers, boaters and state cops shouldn't have to shoulder the cost of fixing the state's crumbling roads.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Obama: Rappin', revolution and radicalism

When the White House announced plans for the president's nationwide address to schoolchildren two weeks ago, worried parents were dismissed as "kooks." We pointed to the subtext of "social justice" activism rampant in American classrooms. It's time for a big fat Told You So.

Michelle Malkin

Out of the spotlight, politicized lessons continue to supplant core academics.

Earlier this year, at the B. Bernice Young Elementary School in Burlington Township, N.J., schoolchildren were instructed to memorize a paean to Barack Obama. A video uploaded to the YouTube account of Charisse Carney-Nunes, author of the children's book "I Am Barack Obama" and a self-described Harvard Law "schoolmate" of the president's, showed students lined up in the auditorium snapping their fingers and chanting in unison:

"Mmm, mmm, mmm, Barack Hussein Obama He said all should lend a hand to make the country strong again.

Mmm, mmm, mmm, Barack Hussein Obama He said we must be fair today, equal work means equal pay.

Mmm, mmm, mmm, Barack Hussein Obama He said take a stand, make sure everyone gets a chance.

Mmm, mmm, mmm, Barack Hussein Obama He said red, yellow, black and white, all are equal in his sight.

Mmm, mmm, mmm,

Barack Hussein Obama. Yeah! Barack Hussein Obama. ...Hello, Mr. President, we honor you today For all your great accomplishments, we all do say hooray. Hooray, Mr. President, you are No. 1 The first black American to lead this nation."

Acknowledging the historic nature of Obama's presidency ("the first black American") is one thing. Deifying him with creepy spiritual references ("red, yellow, black and white, all are equal in his sight") is cribbed from the famous hymn "Jesus Loves the Little Children"; cheering "you are No. 1" is quite another. Burlington Township school officials said the recording and dissemination of the video was "unauthorized," but acknowledged the Obama praise session was part of the curriculum.

Carney-Nunes' Obama book was on prominent display during the students' performance. It is a tool, she says, that "allows children to see themselves through the inspirational story of President Obama growing up as an ordinary child, asking, 'Who will change the world?' Ultimately, he realizes that he will." Seeing everything through the lens of Obama is a trademark of the perpetual Obama campaign.

This O-cult lesson is exactly the kind of junior campaign lobbying activity White House officials planned around the president's education speech. Alert parents and administrators called out the Department of Education's activist, Obama-centric education manuals before the event. Federal officials altered the language. Obama delivered an innocuous speech. But on cue, education radicals goaded students to engage in political activism. White House and Hollywood moguls launched a "Get Schooled" initiative this month with Obama that urges students to lobby for higher teacher pay and embrace the rallying cries "Know Your Rights" and "Change the System."

In addition to radical White House Teaching

Fellows like Chicago high-school educator Xian Barrett (a charter school foe who founded a "Social Justice Club") and Michelle Bissonnette, a Los Altos, Calif., teacher who is "focused on developing my leadership as a more culturally and racially conscious educator," the White House has embraced homosexual rights advocate Kevin Jennings as "Safe Schools czar." Jennings founded GLSEN (Gay, Lesbian and Straight Education Network), which pushes sexually explicit, age-inappropriate books and lesson plans on alternative lifestyles.

Lost in all the chanting for change is the core commitment to impart actual knowledge. For progressives in the Age of Obama, setting high academic standards is secondary to the self-improvement of the "whole child" and "service" to the cause of social justice.

Out: readin', writin' and 'rithmetic. In: rappin', revolution and radicalism.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Ceremony included lots of heroes

On Sept. 19, there were several heroes that were part of history on the Rupert Square. We had the honor to be part of the second annual POW/MIA ceremonies. What a program it was.

To start off, the Patriot Guard from southern Idaho and northern Nevada escorted the family of one MIA into town with engines roaring and flags flying; what an awesome sight. Then came the dedication of the POW/MIA bench. Then there were speeches by Mayor Paul Fries, senior Idaho Sen. Dean Cameron and Idaho State Rep. John A. Stevenson, and the list goes on to the entertainment from Tony Garcia and Damian Rodriguez; both of these men sang and there was not very many dry eyes in the crowd. There were several other men who also provided entertainment that were very good also. The finishing touch were the military rites for Cpl. Max L. Bailey. There were several people who came together to do the rites, Larry Hansen, Hansen Mortuary, Rupert Floral, Mini-Cassia Veterans and members of the 116th Division of the Idaho National Guard, which also did the POW/MIA ceremony which is a beautiful ceremony to see. All of these people and several others, and the great God bless our troops and God bless us all,

Idaho roads better than those back east

I couldn't help but chuckle after reading Mr. Crafton's recent letter to the editor regarding Idaho highways. If Mr. Crafton thinks Idaho has the worst roads in the states, he hasn't been very far out of state.

My daughter and I recently completed a 5,000-plus mile trip to the east coast in a motor home. We found I-70 across Illinois and Indiana to be absolutely the worst. It has potholes big enough to lose a 36-foot motor home.

We learned that states with toll roads do not necessarily have the best roads. And hopefully, Idaho will never adopt the Massachusetts road plan of having roundabouts in state highways. Anything we have seen in Idaho is much better than many of the roads back east.

Praise for Jerome and its dedicated workers

I would like to take a moment to thank the city of Jerome for taking a proactive approach to the water issues that face our wonderful city. Although some of the actions have been very controversial, we all know it is time to do something. I do not think the employees of our fair city have received enough credit for all they do. They have been working very hard to make sure all of us have good clean water and a successful sewer system which, in case you haven't heard, is a pretty dirty job.

Also, I would like to mention that all of the other services our city provides, from our fire department to our wonderful library, do not receive enough credit.

So next time you run into one of your city servants, please take a moment to thank them. Thank you for your service.

American Cancer Society seeks drivers

Having cancer is hard. Finding help shouldn't be. That's why the American Cancer Society offers a number of services to help people with cancer and their families overcome obstacles in their personal cancer fight so they can focus on getting well.

One of the toughest challenges people face is getting to and from much-needed cancer treatments. They may be too sick to drive themselves, may not have a car or someone to drive them, or may not be able to afford gas or other transportation costs.

The American Cancer Society provides patients with free rides to treatment centers, and that's where you can help. Your American Cancer Society is looking for people who can use their own vehicles to drive patients who are undergoing cancer treatment to and from their appointments. Interested volunteers can call Tracy at 679-3713 or Cindy at 436-0280 to find out more about this important program and how they can get involved.

By giving a little of your time, you can help save lives while fulfilling your own.

Iran, world powers agree to further nuclear talks

Tensions appear to ease over Iran's nuclear activities

By George Jahn
Associated Press writer

GENTHOD, Switzerland — Iran and six world powers put nuclear talks back on track Thursday at a landmark session that included the highest-level bilateral contact with the U.S. in years and a pledge to meet again this month. President Obama then challenged Tehran to make good on its promises quickly.

Iran also agreed to allow U.N. inspectors into its covertly built enrichment plant during the talks, held at a villa outside Geneva. The discussions appeared to defuse tensions that had been building for weeks.

Speaking in Washington, Obama called the talks “a constructive beginning” and said Iran must match its words with action.

Tehran “must grant unfettered access” to international inspectors within two weeks, he said, warning that if Iran fails to follow through,

“then the United States will not continue to negotiate indefinitely and we are prepared to move towards increased pressure.”

“Our patience is not unlimited,” Obama said. “Going forward, we expect to see swift action.”

The tone of Thursday's meeting was considerably more positive than just a week ago, when the U.S. and its allies were threatening Iran with tough new sanctions if it refused to freeze its nuclear activities, which they suspect are aimed at creating an atomic weapon.

Perhaps the most significant development of the day was a 45-minute one-on-one meeting between U.S. Under Secretary of State William Burns and Iran's senior nuclear negotiator, Saeed Jalili. It was the first direct U.S. negotiations with Iran since Washington severed relations in 1980.

The encounter appeared to add to the positive atmosphere that led to agreement by all the parties — Iran, the U.S., Britain, France, Russia, China and Germany — for a follow-up meeting this month.

It also appeared to be concrete proof of Obama's commitment to engage Iran directly on nuclear and other issues — a sharp break from policy under the Bush administration.

However, statements made by the two sides reflected the continuing divide between them.

U.S. Deputy State Department spokesman Robert Wood said Burns used the meeting with Jalili “to reiterate the international community's concerns about Iran's nuclear program.”

“He addressed the need for Iran to take concrete and practical steps that ... will build international confidence in the exclusively peaceful nature of its program,” he said.

Dems ease impact of health bill, big advance nears

By David Espo
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Fearing a backlash, Democrats worked to smooth the impact of sweeping health care legislation on working-class families Thursday as they pushed President Barack Obama's top domestic priority toward a crucial Senate advance. The most far-reaching overhaul in decades aims to protect millions who have unreliable coverage or none at all and to curb insurance company abuses.

Republicans on the Senate Finance Committee attacked the bill as riddled with tax increases that violated Obama's campaign promises, but failed to remove any of them.

After marathon public debate, agreement by the Senate Finance Committee is all but certain for the legislation, although no final vote was expected until next week. That formality — Democrats hold a 13-10 committee majority — will clear the way for the full Senate to begin debating the measure at mid-month.

The measure, like a companion bill under construction in the House, would bar insurance companies from denying coverage or charging higher premiums on the basis of pre-existing medical conditions. It also includes federal subsidies to make insurance available to millions who lack it, and it takes steps to slow the skyrocketing growth in health care costs nationwide.

Supporters said the overhaul's cost was in the range that Obama has set, about $900 billion over a decade, and would not raise federal deficits. Gradually, health care has grown to dwarf all other issues in Congress, and is causing supporters and opponents to spend more than $1 million a day on television advertising to sway the outcome.

After days spent largely turning aside Republican calls for changes in the bill, Senate Democrats coalesced behind two of their own that could alter the legislation in significant ways.

One, backed by Sen. Maria Cantwell, D-Wash., would allow states to negotiate with insurers to arrange coverage for people with incomes slightly higher than the cutoff for Medicaid, the government health care program for the poor. That change was approved.

Approval was deferred on a second, which would exempt millions from a requirement to purchase insurance that is currently in the bill. As it stands, individuals and families would be required to buy coverage as long as it cost no more than 10 percent of their income, and would have to pay a penalty if they refused.

Thousands are still missing in Indonesian quake

By Irwan Firdaus

PADANG, Indonesia — Across this coastal provincial capital, hardest hit by the latest earthquake to devastate Indonesia, mourners, survivors and rescue workers alike clawed through the rubble.

Some, like Malina Utami, had already realized the worst. She was just looking for the shoes missing from her dead daughter's body, found in the rubble of a four-story school that was flattened within seconds.

As the death toll climbed Thursday — to 1,100 by one U.N. estimate — others looked for survivors, with thousands of people missing and feared trapped in the wreckage of shattered buildings.

When search efforts were suspended for the night, an eerie quiet fell over the city of 900,000.

“Let's not underestimate. Let's be prepared for the worst,” President Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono said in the capital, Jakarta.

Wednesday's 7.6-magnitude earthquake started at sea and quickly rippled through Sumatra, the westernmost island in the Indonesian archipelago.

Government figures put the number of dead at 777, with at least 440 people seriously injured. John Holmes, the U.N.'s humanitarian chief, set the death toll at 1,100, and the number was expected to grow.

President Obama, who spent part of his childhood in Indonesia, pledged to support earthquake recovery efforts there, as well as provide assistance to the South Pacific countries of Samoa and American Samoa, which were hit by a deadly tsunami Tuesday.

Most of the confirmed deaths in Indonesia were reported in Padang, where more than 500 buildings were severely damaged or flattened.

Where a mall once stood was a heap of concrete slabs layered like pancakes with iron rods jutting out. Police and army rescue teams used bulldozers, backhoes and electric drills to clear the wreckage in intermittent rain, or climbed the hills of rubble to dislodge pieces of concrete with bare hands.

Relatives of the missing gathered outside ruined buildings, hoping to hear good news. But mostly, the rescuers found bodies.

Occasionally, they saved lives. A Singaporean, John Lee, was pulled alive from the Maryani hotel after surviving under the rubble for 25 hours. Rescue workers, responding to his cries for help, dug for 12 hours to free him. Lee suffered only a broken leg.

One of the hospitals in the town had collapsed completely while the state-run Djamil Hospital was partly damaged — its walls cracked and windows broken. Staff at the hospital treated the injured in tents set up in the open. In another area, rows of yellow body bags were laid out in rows.

Mira Utami, a sophomore a week shy of her 16th birthday, was taking an end-of-term English exam along with dozens of classmates at the Indonesia-America Institute when the ground shook so severely that the tremors were felt in neighboring Malaysia and Singapore.

Her father, Zul, rushed to the school, but it was already a heap of concrete when he got there. Still, he pulled at the slabs and managed to save two other children and an adult.

His wife, Malina, said rescuers found their daughter's body much later, but her feet were bare.

“We are in a shock,” sobbed Malina, wearing her daughter's brown veil and seeking other items to keep her connected to the girl. “We had planned to celebrate Utami's 16th birthday on Oct. 7. Now I don't know what we will do.”

Elizabeth Smart says captor raped her daily

By Jennifer Dobner
Associated Press writer

SALT LAKE CITY — Taking the stand for the first time since she was snatched from her girlhood bedroom seven years ago, Elizabeth Smart testified Thursday that her captor raped her three or four times a day, kept her tied up with a cable around her leg, and threatened to kill her if she tried to escape.

Asked by a prosecutor to describe Brian David Mitchell, the self-described prophet accused of holding her captive for nine months, Smart replied: “Evil, wicked, manipulative, stinky, slimy, greedy, selfish, not spiritual, not religious, not close to God.”

Smart, now a 21-year-old college student, gave her horrifying account in federal court as part of a proceeding over whether Mitchell is mentally competent to stand trial.

The 55-year-old, one-time street preacher has been behind bars since 2003 — mostly in a state mental hospital — but has yet to stand trial. Twice he has been ruled mentally incompetent in state court, and he has often demonstrated bizarrely singing hymns in the courtroom and once yelling at a judge to repent.

Smart testified that within hours of her 2002 kidnapping at knifepoint, she was led away to a secluded mountain campsite and in a quickie ceremony became the polygamous “wife” of the older man.

“After that he proceeded to rape me,” Smart said, sharing for the first time publicly her account of the ordeal. She said Mitchell showed her pornography and plied her with alcohol and drugs to lower her resistance to his sexual advances. Once, Smart said, she tried to fight Mitchell off by biting him.

On the stand for nearly two hours, Smart was poised, her voice never wavering. She did not come face-to-face with her alleged tormenter. Mitchell was removed from the courtroom for disruptive behavior — singing hymns — before Smart arrived, and watched the proceedings from a holding cell.

A federal judge ruled earlier this week that Smart's testimony is relevant to the question of Mitchell's competency. Mitchell's competency hearing is not set to begin until Nov. 30, but Smart testified early because she is going on a religious mission for the Mormon church in Paris.

Smart's parents and other family members were in the courtroom to support her. Her father, Ed Smart, had already heard much of the story but said later outside court he had learned a few new details. He did not elaborate.

Cities, states order swine flu vaccine

ATLANTA (AP) — Orders for the first shipments of swine flu vaccine are rolling in, and federal health officials say the first doses should be given in some places early next week.

Twenty-five states and metro areas placed orders Wednesday — the first day they could. That's nearly half of the roughly 60 states, cities and territories that are eligible to place and direct swine flu vaccine orders for the public.

An estimated 6 to 7 million doses of vaccine should be out next week, and they should include both shots and the nasal spray form of the vaccine. But the first 600,000 doses, which should be available Tuesday, will all be nasal spray, said officials with the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The nasal spray is not recommended for some of the people who are most in danger of complications from flu, including pregnant women and people with asthma.

So “we believe that a lot of the states will be directing those early doses to health-care workers,” who are another priority group, said Dr. Anne Schuchat, who heads the CDC's National Center for Immunization and Respiratory Diseases.

According to the CDC, the states that placed orders Wednesday include Alaska, Arkansas, Delaware, Georgia, Hawaii, Idaho, Indiana, Kentucky, Maine, Maryland, Mississippi, Nevada, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Oregon, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Vermont, Washington and Wisconsin.

Chicago, New York, Philadelphia and Washington, D.C. also did.

Amtrak route supporters question findings of study

POCATELLO (AP) — Supporters of restoring passenger rail service through southern Idaho and eastern Oregon are questioning a recent feasibility study that concluded the Amtrak route would lose money each year. The study released last month also found Amtrak's Pioneer Route would be dependent on federal subsidies to make ends meet, and costs to get the project up and running could exceed $400 million. Sen. Mike Crapo, R-Idaho, who along with Sen. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., pushed for the study, said he had talked to experts who indicated the numbers in the Amtrak report are too vague and ridership estimates are based on outdated data. "They need to have further justification on how they reached those numbers," Crapo said.

The lawmaker sent Amtrak President Joseph Boardman a letter this week outlining his concerns with the report. The route once stretched from Denver to Portland with stops in Salt Lake City, Pocatello and Boise. It was discontinued in 1997 due to financial losses. Congressional leaders have been working to restore it, claiming the region needs more transportation options. In its preliminary report released Sept. 18, Amtrak vowed to work aggressively with state and federal partners to restore the route if Congress agrees to kick in the startup and annual operating costs. Officials with the Pioneer

Restoration Organization, a coalition of communities along the route, and the Montana-based Yellowstone Business Partnership said they were also disappointed with data provided in the report. "We take exception on many points," said C.B. Hall, coordinator of the Pioneer Restoration Organization. The study examines the route's previous record and doesn't adequately address future opportunities for growth, connectivity and streamlining of operations, Hall said. "They're making tomorrow look like yesterday," he said. Amtrak accepted comment on the preliminary study through Thursday. A final report will be presented by Oct. 15 to Congress, which may have the final say in restoring Amtrak service.

Dealers see letdown after Cash for Clunkers program

By Dan Strumpf and Kimberly S. Johnson
Associated Press writer

DETROIT — U.S. auto sales fell sharply in September, enduring a tough hangover from this summer's Cash for Clunkers buying spree.

General Motors Co. and Chrysler Group LLC posted the biggest slowdowns during the month, while Hyundai was the sole winner among big carmakers, reporting a 27 percent rise in sales from a year earlier.

"It was a more difficult month than we anticipated," Mark LaNeve, GM's vice president of U.S. sales, told reporters during a conference call.

The September slump for car and truck makers follows a heady summer. Automakers got a big lift in July and August from clunkers, which spurred sales of nearly 700,000 new vehicles. The government program's big discounts lured in many customers who otherwise would have waited until later in the year to walk into dealerships.

Now automakers are starting to feel the effect.

GM's sales plunged 45 percent to 155,679 vehicles in September, compared with a year earlier. Chrysler sold only 62,197 vehicles last month, down 42 percent.

Even higher incentives didn't shake buyers from their fall slumber. Automakers spent an average of $2,557 per vehicle in the U.S., up $83 from August, according to the auto Web site Edmunds.com. But that was due largely to big increases from domestic automakers.

"After five straight months of decline, incentives are on the rise again," Edmunds analyst Jessica Caldwell said in a statement. "Now that Cash for Clunkers is over, automakers have to give consumers an incentive to buy — out of

August pending home sales rise to 2-1/2 year high

By Alan Zibel
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Aspiring homebuyers rushed to take advantage of a tax credit for first-time owners that expires in November, driving up the number of signed sales contracts for the seventh straight month in August.

Construction spending also rose unexpectedly in August on the biggest jump in housing activity in nearly 16 years, another sign the real estate market is recovering from its four-year slump, data Thursday showed.

Sales and homebuilding are being fueled by a tax-credit of up to $8,000, low mortgage rates and cheap foreclosures. In some of the most hard-hit areas, like Phoenix and Las Vegas, there are bidding wars for deeply discounted properties. And in all but a few cities, home prices are slowly starting to rise, reversing their three-year descent.

To make sure first-time buyers can complete their purchases by the Nov. 30 deadline, real estate agents "have been pushing buyers to sign a contract at least a couple months in advance" according to Abiel Reinhart, an economist with JPMorgan Chase.

More than a dozen bills have been introduced in Congress to extend the credit, but it's unclear if lawmakers want to continue to subsidize the market.

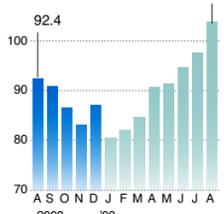

The National Association of Realtors said Thursday its index of sales agreements rose 6.4 percent from July to 103.8, beating forecasts. It was the highest since March 2007 and 12 percent above a year ago. Economists surveyed by Thomson Reuters expected the index would rise to 98.6.

Typically there is a one-to-two-month lag between a contract and a done deal, so the index is a barometer of future sales. However, new rules for home appraisals and rigid lending standards have scuttled many sales agreements recently. In addition, the index may also double-count some buyers who agree to purchase other homes after the first deal falls through.

These factors have made the index a less reliable gauge for completed sales. Despite a steady increase in the number of signed contracts this summer, for example, completed sales actually took an unexpected 2.7 percent dip in August.

"Perhaps the real question is how many transactions are being delayed in the pipeline, and how many are being canceled," Lawrence Yun, the Realtors' chief economist, said in a statement. "Without historic precedents, it's challenging to assess."

Santa on a budget

Prices key for toy sellers this holiday season

By Mae Anderson
Associated Press writer

Santa's on a budget this year. Toy retailers and makers plan to make the best of it by offering more deals and cut-price versions of more expensive toys that they hope will spur parents to spend even if they're scrimping elsewhere. Two influential lists of expected hot holiday toys show only one over $100.

Parents are likely to keep shopping cautiously as they worry about job security, despite an uptick in home values and a rallying stock market.

"Price is more of a driving factor this year than it was before, and we will probably get our shopping done earlier so there are more choices," said Decatur, Ga., resident Ingrid Allstrom Anderson, 32, whose husband's engineering firm has been hurt by the long slowdown in construction.

BMO Capital Markets analyst Gerrick Johnson predicts toy sales will fall 1 percent during the holiday quarter. They were $9.82 billion last year, according to data from research firm NPD Group Inc.

That's a smaller drop than the 5 percent decline from a year ago, but still bad for a quarter when toy retailers make up to 40 percent of their annual sales. Toy makers can make up to half.

"I think its going to be weak, but I don't think its going to be the disaster it was last year," Johnson said. "Parents have a better idea of what their budgets are at this point, so parents will scrimp elsewhere, not on kids."

One bright spot comes from an unlikely place: a small manufacturer's toy hamster that retails for $8 to $10 and could be the first true "must-have" toy — that is, a toy that sells out, is hard to find and appeals to both boys and girls — since Mattel's Fisher Price TMX Elmo in 2006.

Cepia Inc.'s Zhu Zhu Pet Hamsters squeak and moves around, and they've been impossible to keep on shelves, Toys R Us and Walmart Stores Inc. say.

New jobless claims rise; Americans' spending jumps

By Christopher S. Rugaber and Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — First-time claims for jobless benefits increased more than expected last week in the U.S., a sign employers are reluctant to hire and the job market remains weak.

And even though consumer spending jumped by the most in nearly eight years in August, due partly to the government's car buying incentives program, economists question whether the improvement can be sustained. They note that households face rising unemployment, tight credit conditions and other obstacles.

The Labor Department said Thursday that initial claims for unemployment insurance rose to a seasonally adjusted 551,000 from 534,000 in the previous week. Wall Street economists had expected an increase to 535,000, according to a survey by Thomson

Reuters. The increase comes after three weeks of declines. Weekly claims have been trending down since the spring, but the decline has been painfully slow. The four-week average, which smooths out fluctuations, dropped to 548,000, about 110,000 below its peak in early April.

"This is a bit disappointing but not unduly alarming," Ian Shepherdson, chief U.S. economist for High Frequency Economics, wrote in a note to clients. The increase "leaves the downward trend in claims intact."

Economists closely watch initial claims, which are considered a gauge of layoffs and an indication of companies' willingness to hire new workers. Many economists say initial claims below 400,000 would be a signal that employers are adding to the net total of jobs.

Reports send natural gas prices tumbling

By Chris Kahn

NEW YORK — Natural gas prices tumbled nearly 8 percent Thursday after the government reported consumption has dropped so low that the U.S. is now storing more than at any other time on record.

Elsewhere, oil prices ticked higher as the dollar strengthened and traders mulled a mixed bag of economic reports that suggested the United States wouldn't enjoy a swift economic recovery.

Benchmark crude for November delivery added 21 cents to settle at $70.82 on the Nymex. In London, Brent crude lost 12 cents to settle at $69.19 on the ICE Futures exchange.

Bernanke subdued on Fed's consumer protection role

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke told a skeptical Congress Thursday that the central bank is “well suited” to oversee colossal financial companies whose failure could endanger the entire economy.

His written testimony did not mention the Fed losing some of its consumer protection duties, after the Fed chief previously criticized the Obama administration for its plan to strip the central bank of some of those powers.

Testifying before the House Financial Services Committee, Bernanke said only that protecting consumers from abusive practices involving mortgages, credit cards and other financial products is “vitaly important.”

In past appearances on Capitol Hill, Bernanke has laid out a spirited defense that the Fed should keep those powers. The administration wants to create a consumer protection agency for risky financial products.

Rep. Melvin Watt, D-N.C., was stunned by what he thought was Bernanke's short shrift to the consumer protection issue. “Five sentences on consumer protection when everything else that we talked about this morning get substantially more space,” Watt said. “It's just not a good message to send.”

Gas

Natural gas for November delivery lost 37.5 cents to settle at $4.466 per 1,000 cubic feet on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

The Energy Information Administration reported Thursday that underground aquifers and caverns in the lower 48 states stored 3.589 trillion cubic feet of natural gas last week, topping the previous all-time high of 3.545 trillion cubic feet set on Nov. 2, 2007. Government records go back to 1975.

Analyst Steven Schork said supplies have grown so much that the U.S. is nearing its storage capacity for natural gas. If that happens, producers could dump more of it on the open market, dropping prices even more.

But Peter Beutel at Cameron Hanover said prices have dropped so low this summer that they'll likely spring back as winter approaches.

Toys

Laura Phillips, WalMart vice president of toys, says the furor over the hamsters is similar to the craze she saw for the furry robot Furby in 1998 and the electronic pet Tamagotchi in 1997.

“As soon as we're getting them in, they're literally selling from boxes. It's hard to get them on shelves,” Phillips said.

Retailers certainly see the toy business as full of potential this holiday.

Walmart is expanding a $10 toy promotion to 100 items, up from 10 last year. Toys R Us is opening 350 temporary stores in malls and inside Babies R Us stores in an effort to gain market share since the demise last year of KBToys, which was the largest mall-based toy seller. Sears has also jumped into the fray with toy aisles in 20 locations.

“It's the year of competing for the consumers dollar,” said Laurie Schacht, president of The Toy Insider, a trade publication that puts together a list of toys expected to be hot for the holi-

European and Japanese manufacturers cut their spending on incentives, which include offerings like financing deals and rebates that induce consumers to buy.

Japan's Toyota Motor Corp. said sales fell 13 percent while Nissan Motor Co. said its sales fell 7 percent. Honda's sales fell 23.3 percent to 77,229.

Ford Motor Co. had the smallest decline among major manufacturers, falling 5.1 percent to 114,241, but the decline followed two straight months of rising sales.

Ford's sales fell 37.2 percent from August. Two of Ford's vehicles — the Focus and Escape — were top sellers in the clunkers program. But now, with clunkers done, sales of the those vehicles posted steep declines. The fuel-efficient Focus fell 64.1 percent between August and September. The Escape crossover declined 58.5 percent.

Jackpot Elementary designated Blue Ribbon school

By Kimberly Williams-Brackett
Times-News correspondent

JACKPOT, Nev. — The U.S. Department of Education selected Jackpot (Nev.) Elementary School as a 2009 National Blue Ribbon School.

"It's a huge honor," said Jackpot Combined School Principal Brian Messmer. "I'm extremely proud of my students and staff on this achievement."

Messmer and sixth-grade teacher Mike Strom will be honored at an awards ceremony on Nov. 3 at the Omni Shoreham Hotel in Washington, D.C.

Strom has been with the school district for 27 years.

The U.S. Department of Education celebrates schools that beat the odds.

The Blue Ribbon program awards schools for achieving standing within the top 10 percent of schools on state tests, with at least 40 percent of students from disadvantaged backgrounds demonstrating improved performance. This year, Camas County Elementary-Junior High School in Fairfield was one of two Idaho schools to win the award. Nationally, 314 schools were awarded. Since 1982, more than 6,150 of America's schools have received the award.

"One unique thing about this award is it's for grades K-12 because data was gathered for the last six years," said Messmer.

The Jackpot Combined School enrolls 238 students.

Jackpot Elementary has been classified as a school which met Adequate Yearly Progress as defined under the federal No Child Left Behind criteria in the areas of English language arts, mathematics, and school-wide attendance rates.

With an eligible population of 70 students at the elementary school, 97.1 percent of students were continuously enrolled.

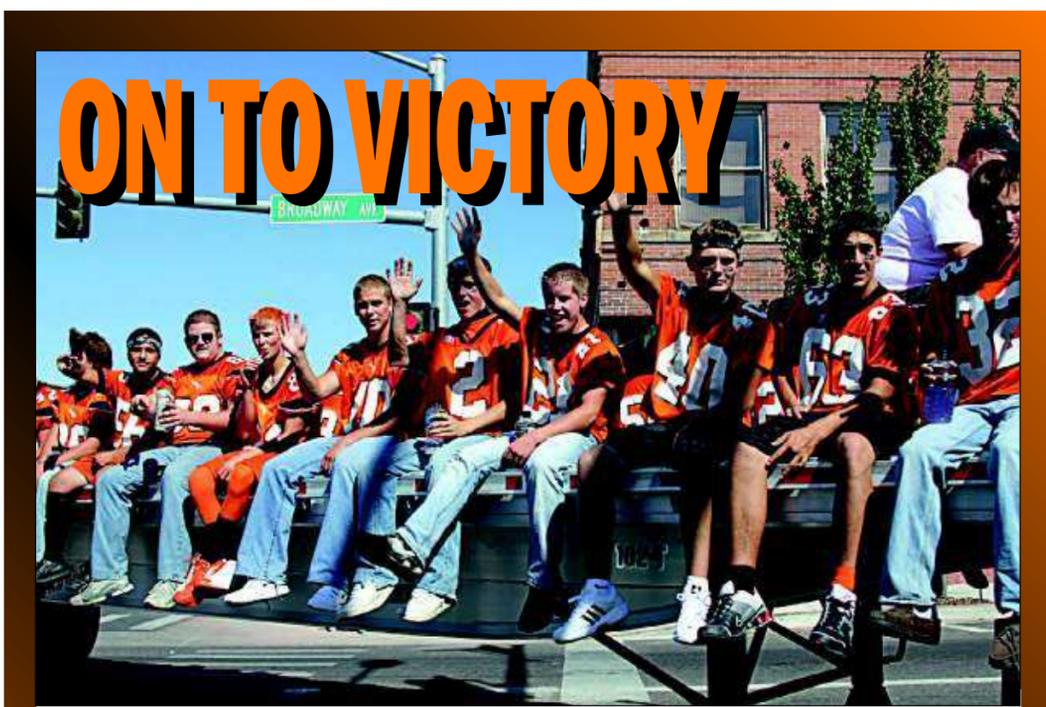

The Nevada Department of Education placed Jackpot Elementary on a watch list after it didn't meet the AYP benchmark in math during the 2004-05 school year. Jackpot Elementary has received exemplary and adequate designations, while Jackpot Junior High School was designated high achieving status in 2006.

Buhl turns out for varsity football team

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Last Friday night the Buhl High School varsity football team ran past the visiting Gooding Senators, 36-8.

Was the victory tied to the fact that many community members showed up downtown to rally the team, that afternoon, during the homecoming parade? Probably not directly, but it never hurts to know your hometown is proud.

Buhl was one of many Magic Valley communities that celebrated its high school's homecoming festivities last week.

Tina Thompson, of Buhl, stood on the corner of Broadway Avenue and Main Street to catch sight of and wave to her daughter Lacy Hall, who was in the running for homecoming royalty.

"It's huge. Homecoming is a big deal for the high school. My daughter's been excited all week and the parade is awesome," Thompson said.

As her daughter passed by with the other senior queen candidates in a horse-drawn carriage, Thompson beamed.

"The best part is seeing the senior girls in the carriage," Thompson said.

Even relatives from neighboring towns came to Buhl to support their youth athletes.

"I've got two grandsons on the team. Homecoming is a big deal and it nice for parents, family and the public to come out and show the team we're rooting for them," said Beth Owen, of Castleford. "I'll be at the

A public open house and reception will be held from 1 to 4 p.m., Oct. 10, at Chaparelle House, 1880 Harrison St. N., Twin Falls.

Stoddard worked most of her life in Twin Falls, teaching generations of dancers steps from ballet to the hula. From 1940 to 1955 she owned and operated 13 dancing schools in south-central Idaho.

While the youngest of her five children was in school, Stoddard returned to college, earning a Bachelor of Arts in Speech Therapy and Audiology at the University of Hawaii in 1958, and a Master of Arts from the University of Connecticut in 1960.

Stoddard worked as a director and therapist at the Easter Seal Clinic for 22 years. She became certified as a neurological developmental therapist in 1967 and later published a book, "Happy Babies; Prevention of Learning Difficulties through Freedom of Movement," that detailed her practices as a therapist helping children and adults with physical and learning disabilities, and speech problems.

Until recently, Stoddard continued to teach dance to seniors and middle-aged adults, and tap-danced with some of her students at community functions.

Some valuable information about the H1N1 virus

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm confused about the swine flu I keep hearing about on television and the ordinary flu I'm immunized against every fall. Are they both the same strains or different? My family feels I should get both injections, simply because I am elderly and have several medical issues. Also, I love pork and question if I will have to give up one of my favorite dishes.

DEAR READER: In April 2009, a new strain of influenza was detected in Mexico and the United States. Because it shared numerous similarities to flu viruses that commonly occur in pigs, it was dubbed swine flu. Further studies, however, discredited the presumed similarities, and the name was changed to H1N1. Cases were discovered worldwide, primarily because of people who traveled outside the countries of origin. Because it met specific requirements, it then took on the term "pandemic."

Signs and symptoms of the disorder strongly resemble those of the influenza we are immunized for each year and include fatigue, headache, chills, fever, cough, sore throat and more. Symptoms range from mild to severe.

With seasonal influenza, certain people are at higher risk than others: those with pre-existing medical conditions, the young and old, and those working in the medical field. Statistics reveal that more than 200,000 people are hospitalized for flu-related causes and that approximately 36,000 will die as a result.

In the case of H1N1, healthy adults older than 64 do not appear to be at increased risk of contracting the virus, but those with diseases or chronic conditions may be at risk for serious complications. Therefore, they should be vaccinated. In fact, the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) feel that almost one-third of people older than 60 may have antibodies to protect against getting the virus. Oddly, those commonly affected are younger than 25. Underlying causes for acquiring the virus include a compromised immune system, heart or kidney disease, pregnancy and neurological disorders.

Symptoms of H1N1 flu virus are similar to those of seasonal flu and include fever, sore throat, cough, body aches, chills, headache, fatigue and a runny or stuffy nose. Many also have reported diarrhea and vomiting. Some symptoms warrant emergency-medical attention and include severe or persistent vomiting, difficulty breathing, a gray cast to the skin, irritability and flu-like symptoms that appear to improve, only to return with fever and a worsening cough, shortness of breath and dizziness.

It appears that those infected can spread the infection to others from one day prior to symptoms presenting to seven days after. An H1N1 vaccine is being produced as I write and should be ready by fall (around Oct. 15). In the interim, common sense prevails. Protect against droplet contamination, the means by which H1N1 is spread. Cover your nose and mouth with a tissue or the crook of your elbow when sneezing or coughing. Wash your hands more often than you normally would, or use an alcohol-based hand sanitizer. Avoid close contact with sick people, and avoid crowds whenever possible. The CDC recommends people remain at home for at least 24 hours after a fever breaks. Germicides, including chlorine bleach, hydrogen peroxide, rubbing alcohol, antibiotics with an iodine base and soap, are effective when used for a sufficient length of time and in a proper concentration.

To answer your question, H1N1 cannot be acquired from eating pork or pork products. There is also no documentation to indicate water in swimming pools poses a problem. Keep in mind, however, that water fountains certainly do. Children have a tendency to touch the base of the water supply and could certainly contaminate it, since studies indicate that the influenza virus can remain on surfaces for up to eight hours after being deposited.

Ethel M. Kadel

PAUL — Ethel M. Case Kadel, age 83, of Paul, has been freed from the bonds of Alzheimer's disease and has joined her husband, Lloyd, and son, Douglas, in the presence of our Heavenly Father. Ethel passed away from a stroke on Wednesday, Sept. 30, 2009, in Ontario, Ore.

After Lloyd's death this past January, Ethel resided in an assisted living facility in Payette. Although Alzheimer's had changed her life, she retained her sense of humor, sweet personality and was still able to remember familiar faces.

She was born July 12, 1926, in Malheur County, Ore., the fifth of eight children born to Cecil and Edith (Morgan) Case. She graduated from Adrian High School in 1944. Ethel married the love of her life, Lloyd Kadel, on Aug. 4, 1946 and they began their life together in Caldwell, where they started raising their family. In 1961, the couple drew on a homestead west of Paul and lived there until moving into town in 1997.

Ethel was a homemaker most of her life, but she also enjoyed being a Mary Kay Consultant and Amera Nail Care Distributor where she made many friends. She was an excellent seamstress and loved making clothing for her family. She also served as a 4-H leader and taught many young girls how to cook, sew and knit. Later in life, she was involved in quilting for her church and family. She left several quilts as a legacy of love. Ethel loved children and raised not only her own, but had a hand in raising many of the younger relatives and neighbor kids. She spent countless hours tending her beautiful flower gardens, which were enjoyed by all.

She was a member of the Christian Women's Fellowship at the Rupert First Christian Church and was involved in teaching Sunday School, Bible School and children's activities. Other interests included bowling in the Housewives' League, reading and golf. She was a lifetime member of the Paul Order of the Eastern Star.

She is survived by four children, Brian Kadel of Heyburn, Janell (Steve) Rekow of Lakeview, Oregon, Kristine (Pat) Ryan of Fruitland, and Kevin (Jody) Kadel of Ogden, Utah; four grandchildren, Corri Rekow, Cody Rekow, Jennalee Ryan and Bryndee Ryan; her siblings, Verna Case Frazier and Myra Case Andrews both of Caldwell; and sisters-in-law, Lily Case of Wilder, and Donna Case of Caldwell.

Ethel was preceded in death by her husband, Lloyd; a son Douglas; her parents; and five siblings, Bill Case, Dick Case, Don Case, Tom Case, and Nellie Trembly. Also by Shirley Murray, Kermit Kadel, Don Kadel, Marjorie Kadel, Judy Cope, Doyle McPherson and Susie Kadel.

She will be sorely missed by members of the Kadel family, including Rosie Kadel of Notus, Gary (Mary) Kadel of Florence, Ore., Herb (Blanche) Kadel of Boise, MaryAnne Hammons of Chandler, Ariz., Lois McPherson of Caldwell, Barbara (Wilbur) Shell of Sunriver, Ore., Al Kadel of Meridian, Bernice Kadel of Boise, and Gerald (Anita) Cope of Pine.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Monday, Oct. 5, at the Rupert First Christian Praise Chapel, 1110 8th St., in Rupert, where friends and family may call one hour prior to the service. Officiating will be the Rev. Thomas (Mac) McSweeney. Burial will be in the Paul Cemetery.

Arrangements are under the direction of the Rasmussen Funeral Home of Burley.

The family suggests memorials be directed to Alzheimer's research in care of Rasmussen Funeral Home.

'Mini-Colosseum' unearthed near Rome

By Ariel David
Associated Press writer

ROME — A team of British archaeologists working in ancient Rome's seaport has unearthed the remains of a "mini-Colosseum" — a smaller version of the monumental arena built in the center of the imperial capital.

The foundations of the tiny amphitheater, dated to the early third century, were discovered outside Ostia, a once bustling port town about 15 miles southwest of Rome through which much of the riches and goods destined for the city flowed.

The find underscores how ancient arenas came in different sizes and were used for a variety of purposes, not just the public gladiatorial bouts and gory animal shows for which the Colosseum is famous, lead archaeologist Simon Keay said Thursday.

"There are a lot of amphitheaters in the Roman world and people assume they were all used for animal and gladiatorial combat," Keay said. "But they could be used for other things," such as a private theater or for administrative purposes.

The discovery was particularly surprising because this was the only amphitheater in Ostia and it was rare to find one so close to a harbor.

The "mini-Colosseum" was located inside a palace built 100 years earlier by the Emperor Trajan. The administrative complex housed the "procurator," the official in charge of the harbor, but may have also hosted emperors as they left or returned from sea voyages, Keay said.

Experts are still puzzling over the purpose of the amphitheater, said Keay, a professor of archaeology at the University of Southampton and at the British School at Rome, which worked jointly on the dig.

"It's a very enigmatic building, it's not meant to be seen from miles around, it's very discreet," he said in a telephone interview. "We are not entirely sure of what went on in the amphitheater."

Unlike the Colosseum, which was used for public spectacles, the Ostia venue likely had a private use.

The procurator may have used it for shows to entertain his guests or as a place to address his staff, Keay said. It may have also served as a training ground for the local "vigiles" — ancient Rome's firefighters, he said.

The arena, measuring 138 feet by 125 feet, was uncovered in August at the end of a three-year digging campaign in the area of the "portus," the sea harbor built in imperial times near Ostia's older fluvial port on the Tiber.

Further study is needed to determine the arena's height and capacity, but Keay speculated the structure could hold up to 2,000 people. By comparison, the Colosseum, built in the first century, could seat about 50,000 spectators.

Aside from the foundations, not much is left of Ostia's amphitheater because it was demolished during the Byzantine period to build fortifications.

Military searches for bodies, brings aid to tsunami-stricken Samoas

By Rod McGuirk and Audrey McAvoey
 Associated Press writers

APIA, Samoa — Convoys of military vehicles brought food, water and medicine to the tsunami-stricken Samoas on Thursday as victims wandered through what was left of their villages with tales of being trapped underwater, watching young children drown and hoisting elderly parents above the waves.

The death toll rose to 160 as grim-faced islanders gathered under a traditional meetinghouse to hear a Samoan government minister discuss a plan for a mass funeral and burial next Tuesday. Samoans traditionally bury their loved ones near their homes, but that could be impractical because many of their villages have been wiped out.

The dead from by Tuesday's earthquake and tsunami include 120 in Samoa, 31 in American Samoa and nine in Tonga. Hundreds of police and others resumed what Samoan police commander Lilo Maiava called "a painstaking search" for bodies that could continue another three weeks.

Doctors and nurses were sent to devastated villages, and a refrigerated freight container was being used as a temporary morgue for the scores of bodies showing up at a Samoan hospital, officials said.

The United States, Australia and New Zealand sent in supplies and troops, including a U.S. Navy frigate carrying two helicopters that will be used in search-and-rescue efforts. The Hawaii Air National Guard and U.S. Air Force flew three cargo planes to American Samoa that carried 100 Navy and Army guard personnel and reservists.

New Zealanders Joseph Bursin and Nicky Fryar said they scrambled to reach high ground as the tsunami wave surged toward their beachfront vacation resort in Samoa. Their sandals were slipping off as they sprinted up a rock-covered 45-degree hill and climbed over a lagoon full of mud.

They remember the noise most — the roar of the water, the clanging of metal roofing smashing against cars, the sound of buildings collapsing.

"We had about 15 or 20 seconds before the water came in underneath us," Bursin said. "There were people behind us who didn't make it and were taken by the water."

Al Palmer returned to his home in American Samoa and saw nothing but rubble following Tuesday's 8.0-magnitude earthquake and tsunami. The tsunami swept his wife out of their home and sent her several hundred feet inland. She survived by grabbing hold of a pole and is now in the hospital being treated for injured fingers.

CSI STUDENT ACTORS DIG INTO SHAKESPEARE

Story by Melissa Davlin

The College of Southern Idaho's Theater Department is staging a classic interpretation of William Shakespeare's "Othello," opening Wednesday.

So how do you put on "Othello" without a black actor? Easy, said Zachary David Lloyd, who plays the title role. Shakespeare's text is ambiguous enough to allow for flexibility in the casting.

Lloyd, the self-proclaimed "whitest guy on the cast," said Othello the Moor is often portrayed as a foreigner. (In the production currently playing on Broadway, the character is played by a Latino.) In this production, when the actors refer to Othello as "black," the audience should think of the word figuratively, Lloyd said.

Most of the actors were unfamiliar with the classic play. Andrew Chojnacky, who got the part of Iago after the original actor dropped out,

Lamb roasts and wool felt

Sheep festival turns focus to foods and fibers

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

The woolly buggers will still get their moment in the spotlight as they bleat their way down Ketchum's Main Street next weekend before tens of thousands of spectators snapping Kodak moments.

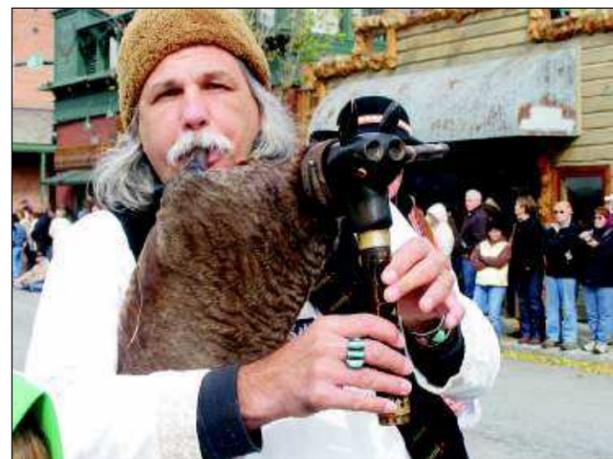

But shh, don't tell the ewes: This year the Trailing of the Sheep Festival is focused on the end products. As in lamb nibbles and wool felt. The festival, Oct. 9-11, is themed "Culinary Adventures and the Wonders of Wool."

The festival is collaborating this year with Gallery Walk to present an Art and Lamb Foodie Fest from 5 to 7:30 p.m. Oct. 9. Nine restaurants — Ciro, East Avenue Bistro, Rickshaw, Raspberry's, Cristina's, The Roosevelt, The Sawtooth Club, The Brickhouse and Vintage — will serve up free tastes of lamb meatball, lamb stew, shanks, leg of lamb and other culinary delights along with the wine and sparkling water that's customarily served on the gallery walks. Participating galleries are Gilman Contemporary, De Novo Gallery, Kneeland Gallery, Broschofsky Galleries and Friesen Gallery.

"We have some of the best restaurants in the world," said Mary Austin Crofts, Trailing of the Sheep director. "We want to promote the area as a culinary destination. And

KAREN BOSSICK/For the Times-News

Rik Palieri, a Polish highlander from Vermont, considers the Trailing of the Sheep as worthy a sightseeing venture as the Grand Canyon and Yellowstone.

Sheep

Continued from Entertainment 1 we want to promote American and local lamb."

The Oct. 9 walk will end at Ketchum's nexStage Theatre for the Sheep Tales Gathering. There'll be more lamb tastings there, along with music by Hal Cannon and Leonard Coulsen of the Deseret String Band. Also expect several storytellers, including Picabo rancher Bud Purdy, Carey sheep ranchers John and Diane Peavey, Don Atkinson of Atkinsons' Market, Nevada rancher Hank Vogler, sheepshearer William Fairchild and folklorist Tamara Kubacki of the Knit and Stith Spin and Yarn knitting circle.

On Oct. 10 and 11, festival goers will have two other new opportunities to sample lamb, in addition to the usual Basque Dinner put on by St. Charles Church and the lamb specials at Wood River Valley restaurants.

For the first time, Hank Minor is staging a Lava Lake Lamb roast from 5 to 9 p.m. Oct. 10 at Apple's Bar and Grill at the bottom of Baldy on the Warm Springs side.

And on Oct. 11, La India owner Ken Sangha will stage a friendly competition pitting Indian cooking against Idahoan as he serves up a lamb barbecue Indian-style — after the Trailing of the Sheep parade — on Irving's Hill on Ketchum's Main Street across from Sturto's. The barbecue, a fundraiser for the festival, was donated by Trailing of the Sheep board members Mitch Lucero and Acee Laudert, Julie and John Noh and Julie Oxarango-Ingram and Judge John Ingram.

The United Nations has proclaimed this the International Year of Natural Fibers. And in keeping with that, the festival and the College of Southern Idaho will present a Fiber Arts Workshop from 10 a.m. to noon Oct. 10 at the Community Campus.

Mende Ward, an instructor for Mountain School in Bellevue, will show participants how to transform wool from raw fiber into a felted product. There are two methods, she said. One is to soak wool in warm water and soap, agitating the fibers so they stick together. The other is dry needle felting: using a long, barbed needle to agitate the wool and embellish sewing projects.

A lot of quilters use the dry felt method for applique. Knitters use it to add appliques to sweaters and bind materials like wool and silk together, she said. One of the most common uses is for dolls.

While fiber artists are jabbing at wool to create felt, 50 of the best sheep dogs in the nation will vie for $3,000 in prize money as they herd cantankerous Idaho sheep in timely fashion outside the Community Campus.

The competition will feature Tess, currently ranked fourth in the nation. The 6-year-old dog, owned by Wilder handler Lavon Calzacorta and sponsored by Meridian's Dyna-Pro probiotics, came in fourth among 150 dogs in the 2009 National Sheepdog Finals near Klamath Falls, Ore., on Sept. 27.

Next weekend's sheep dog trials will be held on Quigley Canyon just behind Wood River High School. Dogs are welcome to check out the scene, provided they're on leashes and don't interfere.

"There'll be cupcakes for the dogs, dog neckerchiefs, natural herb products and a drawing for a doggie care basket," Crofts said. "We'll also have an announcer for the first time to tell people what's going on."

Rik Palieri, a Polish Highlander bagpiper from Vermont, has come to the Trailing for the past few years, decked out in a wool vest made by villagers in Poland's mountains, a lamb's wool cap, woolen pants and Polish moccasins. He plays a koza, a bagpipe made of a goat that boasts a carved wooden head on top.

"I think this is one of most real events in the United States," he said. "Last year I brought a friend from Germany with me. I took him to the Grand Canyon, Yellowstone, but I felt it's very important that he see this. What's started as a sheep event has become something bigger. It's become about getting people to celebrate their ethnicity?"

Karen Bossick may be reached at kbossick@cox-internet.com.

Othello

Continued from Entertainment 1 said he showed up to rehearsal without knowing the play at all.

"I'd heard of it, but I didn't really know the story that well," he said.

Now that they have been rehearsing "Othello" for three hours a day, five days a week, they are starting to love the play and its characters. Billy Perry, who plays Cassio, said Shakespeare's script has become one of his favorites over the past few weeks.

"It grew on me," he said. LaToya Crabtree, who portrays Desdemona, agreed: "I absolutely love the play"

OTHELLO

Played by Zachary David Lloyd

The title character is a foreigner and general to the armies in Venice.

Although he's powerful, he's plagued by insecurities about his outsider status, which are exploited by Iago.

Lloyd taps into that insecurity by imagining what he would feel like if his wife cheated on him — not something he likes to dwell on, he added.

CASSIO

Played by Billy Perry

Cassio, Othello's demoted lieutenant, is a young soldier who attracts Iago's wrath with his youth and high post. Perry believes that Cassio's unwavering loyalty and desperation to make Othello proud are both his strength and weakness, and enjoys playing the boy soldier. He believes Cassio is a little stuck-up, but the one genuine good guy in the play.

"It was fun," he said. "I really got to develop him."

IAGO

Played by Andrew Chojnacky

Chojnacky comes across as a mellow guy — completely the opposite of passionate, jealous Iago, who resents

Othello for his status. To get into character, Chojnacky takes aspects of his favorite melodrama villains and applies them to Iago.

"Their overacting is really useful when you're doing Shakespeare," he said.

DESDEMONA

Played by LaToya Crabtree

Crabtree portrays Desdemona as a sweet, loyal wife who loves her husband.

"She's very poised," Crabtree said. As Othello begins to distrust her, however, Desdemona loses that confidence.

"It comes to the point where I'm just in utter shock," she said.

Emotions and environment

Consider mining's effects at new Ketchum exhibit

Times-News

A new project presented by the Sun Valley Center for the Arts takes a look at the impact of mining on the environment and on the economy — at local and global levels — through visual arts exhibitions, films, lectures and classes.

The opening celebration for "Prospects: An Exploration of Mining" is scheduled for Oct. 9, to coincide with Ketchum's Gallery Walk. The project ends Dec. 11.

"Mining is an essential part of the history of the Wood River Valley, but it's a subject that elicits strong opinions," the center's Courtney Gilbert said in a press release. "Advocates for the environment sound an alarm about the ruinous effects of mining, but when mines close, towns suffer and sometimes fail."

An exhibition at the center's Ketchum location features mining-related work by seven artists, including Brazilian photographer Sebastiao Salgado and Chilean artist Alfredo Jaar. It opens Oct. 9 with a free "Mining & Martinis" party from 5 to 8 p.m. (legend has it that martinis were invented when a miner in Martinez, Calif., asked a bartender for a drink worth its weight in gold). Meet some of the artists and view Lucy Raven's film "Chinatown." All ages are welcome; show ID to be served a drink.

The exhibition features images from Jaar's "Gold in the Morning," a film and photographic project that documented the manual labor of thousands of pit miners in Brazil, as well as Salgado's photographs of Serra Pelada, once the largest open gold mine in the world, the press release said. Closer to home is a large painting by Jennilie Brewster based on a visit to Wyoming's Black Thunder Mine, the most productive open coal mine in the U.S., and Victoria Sambunaris' aerial photographs of mines in the eastern and western U.S.

Andre Yi's paintings of abandoned buildings at 19th-century mines in the American West explore the relationship between mining, architecture and landscape. Artist Lucy Raven's installation of photos explores the story behind Daybreak, Utah, an enormous housing development owned by Kennecott Land, sister company to Kennecott Mining. Daybreak is on land adjacent to Bingham Mine, a copper mine still in operation.

Some of the art isn't in the gallery: Film and video artist Valerie Sullivan Fuchs created an installation of solar-powered light boxes and digital thermal prints, featuring aerial images of the Appalachian Mountains that show the results of mountaintop removal mining. These images will be mounted around Ketchum.

A companion exhibition at The Center in Hailey features historical mining photographs from the Idaho State Historical Society and the Hailey Public Library's Martyn Mallory Collection. The Hailey exhibition, already open, continues through Nov. 27.

Alfredo Jaar's 'Gold in the Morning,' from 2002, is among the pieces in 'Prospects: An Exploration of Mining,' an exhibit opening next week.

Lectures and films

"Red Gold," 7 p.m. Oct. 21; Sun Valley Center for the Arts, Ketchum; free.

The documentary introduces viewers to the Bristol Bay region in southwest Alaska, where a proposed mine would impact a prolific salmon run. Residents tell how this mine would affect their lives.

"The Good Times Are All Gone Now," lecture by Julie Weston; 7 p.m. Nov. 5; The Center, Ketchum; free.

What happens to a town after the mines close? Hailey resident Weston's memoir is about growing up in the once rowdy mining town of Kellogg. Her story starts the day the smokestack comes down and looks into collective and personal memory to understand a way of life that is now over.

Classes

Family day, 3-5 p.m. Oct. 17; The Center, Ketchum; free.

Families can tour the show, talk about the artwork and create their own art project.

"Adult Field Trip: Exploring Mines of the Wood River Valley," with Tom Blanchard;

10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Oct. 24; $25 for members and $50 for others; registration deadline is Oct. 9.

Join local historian Blanchard for a discussion of the mining industry's impact on Wood River Valley's culture and landscape. See Idaho's role in setting federal policy relating to mine cleanup. Class will be conducted outside at multiple mine sites, and a bus will provide transportation.

Teen workshop, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Nov. 14; The Center, Hailey; $10 pre-registration.

Create handmade books inspired by historical materials collected in and around local mines. Students will be taught the whole bookmaking process while learning about the valley's mining history.

Indie rock: The Killers

Sept. 25 at Qwest Arena in Boise

Between lead singer Brandon Flowers' marvelous stage presence, the brilliant light-and-fireworks show and the random opening mariachi band, this was the most memorable show I have seen in years. The confetti at the end turned the arena into a pulsating snow globe, and everyone I saw was smiling.

Festival: Thousand Springs Festival of the Arts

Sept. 27 on Ritter Island

Even our short visit to the festival — just enough for spicy trout, a Basque sandwich, fall sunshine and the discovery of one lovely lidded pot — was worth a drive to Hagerman. I now have enough Alta Harris pieces in my home that I should proclaim her my favorite local potter.

Country music: Sound County

Seen Sept. 26 at Rowdy's in Gooding

Sound County opened to a full house on Saturday night. The crowd loved them, and they kept the dance floor packed. They played some new material from their album "On the Road Home" and did an excellent job on the songs they covered from other artists.

Hailey troupe participates in simultaneous premieres

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Ten years ago Company of Fools presented "The Laramie Project," examining the questions and emotions that arose following the murder of a 21-year-old gay college student in Laramie, Wyo.

On Oct. 12 — the 11th anniversary of Matthew Shepard's death — the Fools will join 120 other theater companies around the world in presenting "The Laramie Project: 10 Years Later."

The unique collaboration will start at 6 p.m. with a live pre-show webcast hosted by actress Glenn Close at Alice Tully Hall at Lincoln Center. Each theater group will then conduct a staged reading of the play, which is so fresh it is still being revised.

In Hailey, John Glenn will direct a cast that features Jana Arnold, Michelle Nelson, Christine Leslie, Claudia McCain, Chad Smith, Joel Vilinsky, Scott Creighton and Andrew Alburger.

Arnold, who will take the part of Shepard's mother, said she followed the case when it happened and visited the site where two men lured Shepard out of a bar and beat him savagely, leaving him lashed to a fence one frigid October night in 1998.

The brutal slaying of a young man in Chicago this week reminded her of the incident once again.

"I'm glad they're doing an update on the Matthew Shepard case," she said.

The original off-Broadway play featured the voices of those intimately acquainted with the murder, including Matthew's father, Dennis Shepard, who opted to give the two murderers life in prison rather than the death sentence "in memory of someone who no longer lives. May you have a long life, and may you thank Matthew every day for it," he told the two.

The play is one that people still talk about 10 years later, said Fools core artist Denise Simone.

Though about hate, it's also very much about tolerance, Nelson said: "It teaches you to understand where hate comes from and helps you understand why a person might feel that way."

Playwright Moises Kaufman and his Tectonic Theater Project co-writers conducted scores of interviews, including new interviews with Matthew's mother, Judy Shepard, for the new play. They had only the second interview ever done with convicted killer Aaron McKinney, who is serving two consecutive life sentences.

PLAY IN PROGRESS

- What: "The Laramie Project: 10 Years Later"
- When: 6 p.m. live pre-show webcast, 7 p.m. reading, Oct. 12
- Where: Liberty Theatre in Hailey
- Tickets: $15, at 578-9122. Proceeds go to the Matthew Shepard Foundation, which raises awareness about intolerance and advocates passage of hate-intolerance laws.

Their mission: to find out how the murder transformed the town of Laramie and the long-term effects of the hate murder.

"They're asking: Is there change? What has changed? And how do you measure change?" said Simone.

As with its predecessor, the new 80-minute epilogue will have a documentary feel with minimal staging.

The producers will answer questions live from across the country after the performances.

In staging simultaneous premieres of the play on the same night, Kaufman is taking a page from the New Deal's Federal Theater Project, which did the same thing.

Simone said her initial reading of the play sent shivers down her spine. She was fascinated that the story had changed for some of the people of the community from a hate crime to that of a botched burglary attempt.

Some Laramie residents dealt with the sensational murder by refusing to talk about it. Others continued to ask questions.

"It's really fascinating to hear Aaron's take and what he has to say about being in prison," she said. "I guarantee you there won't be any lack of conversation and discourse about this play."

DANCING TO THE TOP

Hometown fans cheer Olander's 'ABDC' win

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

Riquel Olander might be a successful dancer now, but not everyone has always been thrilled with her moves.

When she was a teenager in Twin Falls, she competed in a high school pageant and showed off some of the bootylicious hip-hop moves she and her sister Keesha had learned at workshops in California. At rehearsal, a faculty member stopped her in the middle of her dance and ordered her off stage, telling her not to perform her risque dance again.

"People would be horrified by what the little Olander girls did," said Olander's mom, Connie Jones.

The nation's MTV viewers weren't horrified. On Sunday, dance crew We Are Heroes beat competitor AfroBorike on the season four finale of "Randy Jackson Presents America's Best Dance Crew," winning $100,000 and the Golden B-Boy trophy. Members Olander, Hiroka McRae, Mami Kanemitsu, Ali Iannucci and Nichelle Thrower are the first all-female dance crew to win the reality show.

Throughout the two-month competition, remembering her family, friends and fans in Magic Valley helped keep Olander sane, she said in a phone interview from Los Angeles on Wednesday.

Olander grew up in Twin Falls, where she and Keesha took classes at Nielsen School of Dance. From the beginning, both sisters worked hard to pursue their dance careers.

They taught swimming and dance lessons to pay for their own lessons and trips to California, where they would take hip-hop dance workshops, Jones said.

Keesha moved to Los Angeles at 17 to pursue a dance career, and Olander joined her three years ago. Since then, the sisters have danced for Tyrese, Kanye West, The Dream and Jamie Foxx.

Last week, Jones traveled to Los Angeles for the finale, which aired live on MTV.

"It was pretty dang exciting," she said. Because the show aired live, she found out her daughter won at the same instant as viewers at home.

Jones said business offers have been pouring in since We Are Heroes won, but the women are still figuring out their commitments to MTV. Olander and the other dancers have been busy since the Sunday finale, giving interviews, meeting with managers, appearing on "The Ellen DeGeneres Show" and celebrating with friends.

The appearance on DeGeneres' talk show wowed Olander almost as much as winning the contest. "She always cheers me up," Olander said of the comedienne. (Her excitement showed when she talked to DeGeneres on Tuesday's show and breathlessly called her an inspiration.)

The action won't stop anytime soon. Other dance crews who have won the contest have worked steadily since their victories, including appearing in commercials and dancing at NBA games, Olander said.

Back home, Olander's former dance teacher, Kim Nielsen, said he and his students have been closely following We Are Heroes.

"Some of the girls she used to dance with are still around and they were all excited," said Nielsen, owner of Nielsen School of Dance in Twin Falls. Although Nielsen didn't vote for Heroes — he doesn't have a cell phone with which to text in his vote, he said — his daughters and students did.

Twin Falls belly dance instructor and family friend Cyndie Woods has also been glued to the television since the beginning of the season and was thrilled on Sunday night when We Are Heroes won.

"I was extremely excited," she said. "In fact, I screamed."

Olander and her sisters grew up with a dance studio in their home, where Jones teaches dance classes, Woods said. "They were dancing all the time."

Olander hasn't forgotten where she got her start. Even after winning the high-profile contest, she is grateful to fans from her hometown. The messages from old friends kept her going during long hours of rehearsals.

"Just so many people have been so supportive from back home," she said. "It's such a blessing to hear from people, especially people who believed in me all the way."

Buhl tailback Isaac McCreery (20), trying to push off Filer defender Tyler Kreft (31), runs for the end zone Thursday during the first quarter of their game in Filer. The Indians won 49-9.

Buhl wrecks Filer's homecoming

First game on new field not memorable for Wildcats

By John Derr
Times-News writer

FILER — The Filer football team's first game on its brand new field will not be a happy memory.

Buhl played the role of spoiler, scoring early and often Thursday on the way to a 49-9 South Central Idaho Conference victory. Running back Isaac McCreery scored four touchdowns to lead the Buhl offense.

"We are big rivals, and we wanted to come out and show them who we were," said McCreery, who tallied 72 yards along with the four scores. "We were motivated. We want to get the SCIC trophy back and get to state."

The complex, complete with a track, football field, locker rooms, concessions and bleachers, was built with funds from the $15 million bond levy passed by voters in 2008.

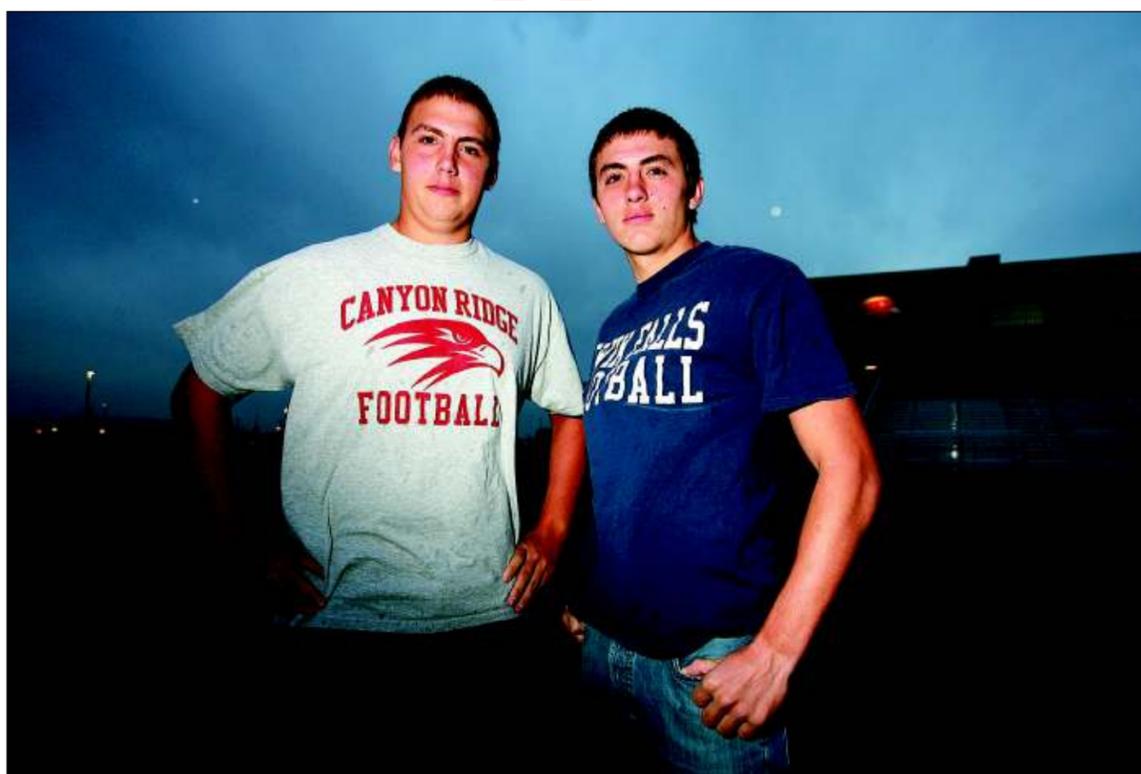

The Indians must have liked it as they used their running game to dominate early. Evan Wray picked up 22 yards while Blake Finney took it the final 11. Quarterback Cade Owen took over on the Indians next drive, connecting with J.D. Leckenby for 35 yards and Finney for 24. Isaac McCreery drove it in from the 5, and the rout was on.

The Wildcats moved the ball through the air on their third possession, but an intentional grounding penalty and a failed fake punt kept them from the end zone.

SIBLING RIVALRY

ASHLEY SMITH/Times-News

McNews on opposing sides in tonight's Service Bowl

In the McNew household, sibling rivalry takes new meaning tonight.

When the Twin Falls and Canyon Ridge high school football teams line up tonight at Bruin Stadium for the inaugural Service Bowl, two brothers will find themselves on opposite sides of the line of scrimmage.

In parts of the country like Texas or the South where football is an obsession, rivalries can sour a divided household. Brady McNew, a senior wide receiver for the Bruins, and Colten McNew, a junior lineman for the Riverhawks, are not letting the district boundary of Blue Lakes Boulevard turn into such a schism.

"They get spirited," their

Bruins, Riverhawks kickoff football rivalry tonight

They're playing for bragging rights, and more importantly, a notch in the win column of the Great Basin Conference standings.

The Twin Falls Bruins and Canyon Ridge Riverhawks meet for the first time on the gridiron tonight at Bruin Stadium, and while both teams have struggled to find a breakout player in the backfield not named T.J. Ellis or Tyler Myers, Twin Falls has something Canyon Ridge doesn't: a victory.

The Bruins have experienced some success with quarterback Ellis running more of the option.

Vandal O-line looking solid

U of I prepares for Colorado St.

By Josh Wright
Times-News correspondent

MOSCOW — A mere four Saturdays into the season, Dan Finn has gathered enough evidence to be certain of one thing: This is the finest batch of linemen he's seen at Idaho.

And the Vandals' offensive line coach reminds his players of that constantly.

"I think we have more talent up front since any time I've been here," said Finn, in his third year at Idaho. "And I think we're pretty good."

The veteran offensive line has provided a steadying presence for the 3-1 Vandals — off to their best start since John L. Smith was coach in 1994. Led by behemoth left guard Mike Iupati, the front five has helped the running game click and given quarterback Nathan Enderle the time to feel at ease in the pocket.

The results, to this point, would have been unthinkable a month ago. Idaho's aerial attack is ranked No. 3 in the Western Athletic Conference, and Idaho is ninth in the nation in third-down efficiency (55.6 percent).

The upstart program will try to take another surprising step when it hosts Colorado State (3-1) on Saturday night. Kickoff is 8:30 p.m. (MDT) on ESPNU.

The Vandals' offensive line consists of four seniors — a group that's "grown up together," center Irvin Stevens III said — and sophomore Matt Cleveland, who has quickly adapted after missing last season with a broken leg.

Although Idaho's interior is crowded with vets, it doesn't necessarily have starter-savvy experience. Stevens replaced four-year stalwart Adam Korby at center. Right guard Adam Juratovac was a backup last year, and Bryce Sinclair alternated at right tackle before this season.

"We've all gotten to play," Stevens said. "I think that's the biggest thing. It would be a different story if I wouldn't have gotten to play last year."

The Vandals' mainstay and inside force is Iupati, a 6-foot-6, 330-pounder who has the potential to go in the first few rounds of next spring's NFL draft. The American Samoa native, via Anaheim, Calif., is the club's offensive captain and someone "the team looks up to quite a bit," Finn said.

Iupati being at full health after missing time last year is a big reason why this might be the program's best offensive line in years. But Finn himself also has played a key role as an intense, unifying figure who's obsessed with the fundamentals of line play.

The 33-year-old former Northern Arizona standout is easily the Vandals' most animated coach during practices, often getting in his players' faces for simple errors. Finn's demeanor, though, takes a 180-degree turn in the film room, Stevens said.

CSI's Carrick Felix makes a final slam dunk with a dramatic leap from the free-throw line Thursday night in the slam dunk competition at the college.

Happy returns as CSI holds hoops Bash

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

It was a night of many happy returns.

The College of Southern Idaho men's and women's basketball programs returned to the floor for the first time since March, opening the 2009-10 season with the CSI Basketball Bash Thursday night.

The evening featured the return to Twin Falls of former Twin Falls High School star Devan Matkin, who spent her final prep season at Vallivue High in Caldwell.

"I'm glad to be back. I love it here. It's so fun to be here at CSI," said Matkin, who hit two 3-pointers during the women's intra-squad scrimmage and knocked down 12 treys in 60 seconds to help the women beat the men in a 3-point shooting contest.

Maddy Plunkett returned to the floor after missing last season with an ACL tear in her right knee. Sporting a knee brace, Plunkett came off the bench during the scrimmage and promptly hit two triples while sporting a wide smile. She added another trey in the second half in helping the Black team to a 23-23 tie with the White team.

For the men, Carrick Felix made his return to the floor a good one, scoring a team-high 13 points as the Gold team beat the Black 37-25 in the men's scrimmage. He then won the slam dunk contest, taking off from just inside the free throw line and throwing down a jam that earned a perfect 50 from the judges.

"It was wonderful," said Felix, who missed all but the first three games of last season with a broken wrist. "A lot of the guys, this is their first time actually playing in front of crowd like this, so they were excited."

The men's scrimmage largely resembled a slam dunk contest, with perhaps the best throw-down

Raft River, Oakley renew rivalry tonight

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

OAKLEY — The Oakley football field was silent following an evening session of two-a-days in August. Then, one by one, vehicles began pulling up. A pickup hauled in a barbecue grill. The plan was for the Hornets to camp out at the field, down some hamburgers and build team unity.

"I need to run home and grab some Italian seasoning for the burgers," one player said.

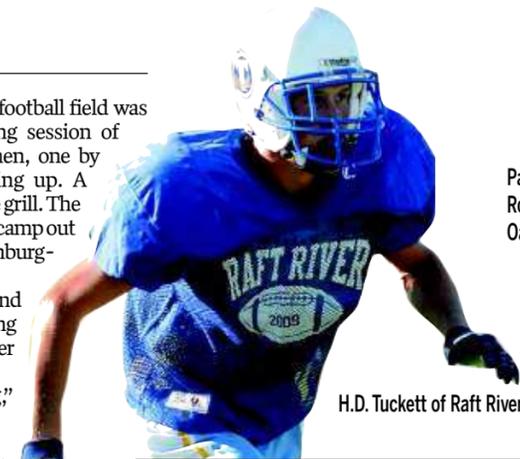

"I have garlic seasoning," another replied.

"It's not the same."

No, it's not the same. And neither are the Hornets this season, as new head coach Tim Behunin has brought his own flavor of football to Oakley. But other than adding a pinch here and a dash there, the Hornets are still serving up the Snake River Conference the same way they've done the past two years.

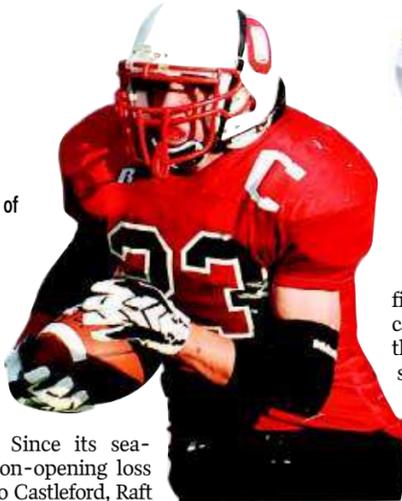

Oakley hasn't lost a regular season game since Oct. 13, 2006. Coming off a bye week, the Hornets (4-0, 3-0 Snake River Conference) own four mercy rule victories this season, outscoring opponents 222-26.

"There is a lot of talent on that Oakley team," said Raft River coach Randy Spaeth, whose Trojans (3-1, 3-1) will travel over the hill to Oakley tonight for a 7 p.m. rivalry showdown.

Webcast: Idahosports.com

Adding to the intrigue, tonight marks the first-ever Raft River-Oakley game to be webcast live at Idahosports.com. While he jokes that his players might get exposure from sumo scouts in Japan, Spaeth isn't preparing anything special, despite his team being the underdogs.

"We're preparing just like we would for any other game. I know that's maybe cliché, we believe we prepare hard for every team we play," Spaeth said.

But not every team the Trojans prepare for have an enormous and deep line in the trenches. Both coaches are former offensive linemen, so expect a grind-it-out battle tonight.

"They have an extremely well-coached line," Behunin said of Raft River. "They get good line surge up the middle and they move well as a line. It is important that we get penetration on the defensive front, and then on the offensive front that we maintain blocks so that our backs can read the holes."

But Twin Falls could be on the right track. Head coach Allyn Reynolds said that the offensive linemen are communicating more and improving each week, which would give Ellis more time to make good decisions. As Reynolds put it, he's the catalyst.

"If he's good, we're good," Reynolds said. "He doesn't have to be great, he has to be good."

On defense, the Bruins can shut down the bulk of the Riverhawk offense by containing No. 4, quarterback Tyler Myers.

On the west side of Blue Lakes Boulevard, Canyon Ridge has struggled even more than its counterpart to the east. The offense sputters at best, managing only 7.5 points per game, and the defense hasn't held an opposing team to fewer than 28 points. Even so, the Riverhawks are progressing bit by bit each week. Head coach Bill Hicks said it's a matter of not shooting themselves in the foot.

"We have to execute on offense, play fundamentally well on defense and not give up the big plays," he said. "If we can compete for the whole game, we can make it a good game."

Twin Falls (1-3 overall) is 1-0 in conference play, tied with Minico. Burley, Wood River and the Spartans are still on the Bruin schedule. The Riverhawks fell to Burley and Jerome for a 0-2 start (0-4 overall) with only Minico and Wood River remaining after today. The Great Basin gets four berths to the Great Eight portion of the Class 4A state playoffs.

keeping Brady and Colten together, but they made sure the decision was Brady's.

"I wanted to go to the new school with him," Brady said, "but all my friends were staying ..."

When the juniors took that ballot home last year, Brady took it down to the wire.

Once the school year and football season began, the consequences of Brady's selection were fully realized, though nothing the family couldn't overcome. Brad and Carolyn engage Friday nights with the mantra of "divide and conquer." They split up for games or split the time by attending the first half of one game and leaving to catch the second half of the other game. Brady gets slightly more attention as this is his final year, but it's not an issue with Colten.

"They're trying to equal it out," he said. "They went to both homecomings."

While mom and dad will enjoy the ease of sticking to one venue tonight, emotions run deep for this game. They knew it was coming, and now it's here.

"It's going to be hard because you don't want either son to lose or either team to lose," Carolyn said. "But one of them has to, so we're just cheering hard both ways and hoping it turns out well."

"You hope it could turn out in a tie, but it can't be that way."

Too bad the McNew brothers didn't play soccer this year, as the Bruins and Riverhawks tied both times they met on the pitch.

As for the boys themselves, they swapped some mild verbal jabs earlier this season, but they're keeping the game in perspective.

"I just hope both of us play hard," Brady began, before Colten finished, "... and both teams do well."

Minico struggles in home loss

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Minico's roller-coaster ride of a season hit its lowest low thus far Thursday night, as the Spartans suffered a 18-9 non-conference home loss to previously winless Preston.

The loss dropped Minico to 3-3 on the season, matching its highest loss total since the 2005 season. It was also the Spartans' first regular-season loss at Bill Matthews field since Oct. 10, 2005.

"We're not playing as a family," said Minico senior Colby May. "The past couple years, the team we've had has been a family and we just don't have that this year."

Three of Minico's first-half possessions started in Preston territory, but the Spartans could only come away with two scores — a 20-yard touchdown pass from Kade Miller to Mark Leon and a 39-yard Coltin Johnson field goal.

After trailing 9-0, Preston (1-5) capitalized on Minico miscues and took the lead on the first drive of the third quarter. The Indians received the second-half kickoff and drove 80 yards in 10 plays, capped by a 19-yard touchdown pass from Bridger Hall to Derek Chatterley.

A Minico fumble set up Preston's next score, which the Indians punched in with nine minutes remaining in the game. The Spartans fumbled on the ensuing possession, however, essentially sealing the Indians' win.

Miller completed 11 of 19 passes for 111 yards, but was sacked six times. The Spartans rushed for 132 yards. Preston head coach Shawn Marlow said he was surprised Minico didn't try to establish the run more.

"We've faced a lot of running teams all fall and we've struggled against them. I liked our chances better with (Minico throwing the football). Our defense really stepped up and we were able to pressure the quarterback."

Hall finished 16 of 27 for 186 yards and two touchdowns. Each of Preston's second-half scoring drives included fourth-down conversions by Hall.

"We're making too many mistakes to win football games right now," Minico coach Tim Perrigot said. "I'm not sure we had the kids ready, as a coaching staff, and I apologize to the community for that. I believe that the talent is there and we show signs of greatness, but we're going to have to find our way one game at a time and hopefully we'll be ready for the playoffs."

Perrigot said the team would use the long weekend to take some time off for reflection and to try to find its identity.

"The first game of the year when we lost to Bishop Kelly it seemed like no one cared," May said. "Tonight, there are a lot of teary eyes and there are a lot of people that care and they want to win and they realize they let their team down. I think we're coming together, we just haven't got there yet."

With three games remaining, the Spartans are still very much in the thick of the Great Basin Conference race at 2-0. Minico plays at Canyon Ridge next week.

"Hopefully tonight was a good thing and we'll learn from it and it will give us a little fire coming into these next three conference games," May said.

Golden Eagles throttle CNCC

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

The College of Southern Idaho volleyball team's 25-7, 25-12, 25-11 victory over Colorado Northwestern Community College was expected.

The manner in which the No. 2 Golden Eagles dispatched their visitors on Friday probably wasn't.

CSI rolled past CNCC while resting four of its starters, and allowing a fifth to play just two of the three sets.

Rotation player Danielle Dean led the charge, and the bench players proved more than capable during their chance to prove they deserve more playing time.

Dean led the Golden Eagles (18-3, 1-1 Scenic West Athletic Conference) with 10 kills on the night, while Alyssa Everett, Alex van Dyke and Samantha Misa each had six.

"Coach (Heidi Cartisser) said that she was going to start some girls that didn't normally get to start, and if we played well she'd leave us out there," said CSI freshman and Dietrich graduate Jesse Dill, who started at the second middle position and picked up five kills. "Of course you're going to give it all you have out there if it's what's going to keep you out there on the floor, and I thought we played really well!"

Dean

The Golden Eagles totaled 13 service aces on the night, led by five from sophomore setter Laticia Lehman and three from freshman and Hagerman grad Chauncey Axelson.

Dean said the team didn't have much trouble finding focus despite dominating the Spartans.

"You always expect to win, but at the same time you still have to go out there and get it done," Dean said. "When you're there in the third set you just have to keep getting after them and finish it off as quickly as possible."

The match allowed the Golden Eagles to continue working on bolstering depth ahead of the rest of the season. Jessica Peacock, Barbara Alcantara, Elisa Brochado and Torrey Hulsey, all starters, didn't see the floor on Thursday night.

That allowed Dill and company to enjoy a banner night.

"With friends and family coming out ... it did mean a lot to me, and it was special," Dill said of getting the start just a 45-minute drive from her hometown. "We're always trying to have fun when we play, but you have to work hard too. Every game is a building block to getting better for the next one."

CSI will look to continue building its depth when it hosts the College of Eastern Utah at 3 p.m., Saturday.

Buhl

Filer's defense stepped up early in the second quarter, recovering a fumble then earning a safety on a bad punt snap. It would not take long for the Indians to change that.

Buhl's Michael McDonald intercepted the Wildcats on the next drive, returning it to the Filer 20, which set up McCreery's second touchdown from 10 yards out.

The lead grew to 35-2 at the half as McCreery scored twice more on shorts runs in the final two minutes as the Indians took advantage of another turnover and penalties.

Buhl started the third quarter just like the rest of the game as Owen connected with Jessi Flinn from 73 yards out then two minutes later hit Marco Avelar for a 37-yard touchdown.

"The receivers ran good routes, and the line gave me time," said Owen, who tallied 197 yards on 7 of 13 attempts. "I just threw it up there and let them go get it."

Filer's Cody Reynolds took over at quarterback and with a mix of run and pass moved the ball down the field. He connected with Cassidy Babb from 19 yards out, marking Filer's first touchdown at the new field and the final points of the night.

Filer coach Russell Burnum said his team needs to generate more offense.

"We competed for awhile but were not consistent enough," said Burnum, who has just 14 regular players on the varsity. "We need to compete."

Filer, (0-2, 1-4) travels to conference foe Gooding next week while the Indians (2-0, 5-0) host 2A Glenns Ferry in a battle of unbeaten Magic Valley teams.

Declo stays perfect, shreds Wendell 54-12

Larsen Webb scored three touchdowns and Mark Knobbe added two more as visiting Declo beat Wendell 54-12 on Thursday in nonconference football action.

With starting quarterback Jeremy Jenkins on the sideline, backups Justin Cameron and Ross Sanders combined to throw for 130 yards. Declo also lost starting running back Tyler Briggs with a sprained ankle on its first series.

"We were really sluggish at first. When you don't have Jeremy Jenkins out there running the show, it makes it difficult," said Declo coach Kelly Kidd. "I'm thrilled with how our kids stepped up without two of our main players in the game."

Dustin Hegstrom scored twice to help Twin Falls rescue a 2-2 draw at Minico on Thursday.

The Spartans went ahead on goals from Adrian Mendoza and Dylan Winnmill, but Hegstrom lobbed the keeper and then got a second shot through to level just before halftime.

Minico (3-8-4, 1-5-2 Great Basin, 5 pts.) hosts Jerome today. Twin Falls (4-9-3, 1-5-3, 6 pts.) hosts Wood River in Monday's regular-season finale.

BURLEY 2, CANYON RIDGE 1

A late goal from Cesar Cardenas lifted Burley to a 2-1 win over Canyon Ridge in Twin Falls on Thursday. The Bobcats took a 1-0 lead on a penalty kick goal by Angel Anguiano early in the second half, but the Riverhawks answered thanks to Inicce Alejo.

Canyon Ridge (3-8-4, 1-5-3 Great Basin Conference, 6 pts.) hosts Jerome on Tuesday, while Burley (7-4-3, 4-4-1, 13 pts.) is home against Minico.

TWIN FALLS 9, MINICO 0

The Twin Falls girls soccer team kept hopes of taking the top seed to the Great Basin Conference tournament Thursday with a 9-0 shutout of Minico at Sunway Soccer Complex in Twin Falls.

Nine different Bruins scored goals against the Spartans: Erin Grubbs-Imhoff (two assists), Claire Goss (one assist), Allie Webb (one assist), Madi Worst (one assist), McKenzie Johnson (a goal off a header), Anne Kent, Ryann Simpson, Lauren Rogers, Brooke Wagner. Alexin Clark and Isabel Vonzastrow also assisted on goals.

The Bruins (12-2-2 overall) are now 8-1-0 in league play, giving them 24 points. They travel to Hailey Monday to face points leader Wood River. A victory would tie the teams at the top as they head into the tournament. No matter the outcome, the Wolverines and Bruins will have a first-round bye.

"It comes down to that game," Bruins head coach Katie Kauffman said. The Wolverines defeated Twin Falls in their first meeting in mid-September.

BURLEY 4, CANYON RIDGE 0

The Burley girls soccer team earned its first win in two years Thursday, defeating Great Basin Conference foe Canyon Ridge 4-0 at home.

Delyn Pauly scored twice for the Bobcats, while Caitlyn Bennett and Megan Graham scored the other two goals. The program's last victory came on Oct. 3, 2007, when the Bobcats defeated Jerome 2-1 in the first round of the Great Basin Conference West Division playoffs.

Burley (1-12-1, 1-7-1 GBC, 4 pts.) travel to Rupert Monday to face Minico. Canyon Ridge (1-14-3, 1-8-0, 3 pts.) travels to Jerome Monday. District tournament play begins Thursday.

Boise State receiver Titus Young (4) runs the ball into the end zone for a touchdown past Bowling Green's Jahmal Brown (24) Sept. 26 in Bowling Green, Ohio.

Young brings speed, big plays to Boise State

BOISE (AP) — Boise State has its burner back.

After missing most of last season for disciplinary reasons, Titus Young is once again giving tacklers fits and the Broncos offense and special teams that burst of speed and elusiveness that so often turns a simple play into a game changer.

And his ability to stretch a screen pass, end run or kick return into a huge gain or touchdown is one of the reasons the Broncos (4-0) have climbed to No. 5 in the country and into the national title conversation.

"He's an extremely explosive player. It's always nice to see him with a little bit of space and the ball in his hands," Boise State coach Chris Petersen said. "If you miss a tackle or take a bad angle, he's going to outrun it and make you pay."

Just ask the defenders Young has left in his wake.

Young, a receiver and special teams ace, has six touchdowns this season. He leads the team with 20 catches for 247 yards, averages nearly 30 yards a crack on kick returns and has 607 all-purpose yards over the first four games. Three of his scores have come through the air, two more on the ground, and another on what so far is one of the biggest plays of the season.

Two weeks ago at Fresno State, Young trailed on a 74-yard dash by running back Jeremy Avery, looking for opportunities to block oncoming tacklers. But the ball was batted out of Avery's grasp just before the goal line, only to be saved when Young dove on it before it headed out the back of the end zone for a touchdown.

The score helped the Broncos regain momentum and a 10-point lead late in the game en route to a 51-34 victory.

That kind of hustle has earned Young praise from coaches, but even more, left the impression he's playing with a greater sense of urgency and purpose.

Young was suspended by Petersen for 10 games last year, including the last nine. The junior from Los Angeles was cleared to rejoin the team this spring but so far has been barred from talking to the media.

Petersen has refused to delve into the reasons for the suspension, but maintains it was the right thing for Young and the team.

"It was hard. I think we're all better for it," Petersen said. "I think he's better for it."

In what ways? Petersen says Young is more disciplined and mature, growth that shows in his detailed route running and care in handling the ball after the catch.

Young still has a knack for getting in the coach's dog house, but the reasons are less significant. This week, Petersen said Young would be doing extra sets of calisthenics for showboating after a touchdown in last week's 49-14 victory at Bowling Green.

Asked if Young a year ago would have hustled and stayed with a play like he did in recovering the loose ball at Fresno State, Petersen paused for a few moments before answering.

"I think so. It's hard to get that ingrained, to play hard all the time," Petersen said.

Young's speed has given Boise State's offense and return game the kind of sizzle it lacked a year ago.

Heading into Saturday's matchup against UC Davis, the Broncos boast the nation's seventh best kick return game, with Young and Doug Martin pairing for an average of 32.7 yards per return, a major improvement from last year when the team finished 47th in the nation.

Young's longest kick return went for 77 yards and set up a score against Fresno State.

Hall looks for answers as No. 20 BYU hosts Utah State

PROVO, Utah (AP) — Max Hall is trying to stay patient.

A month into the season, Hall has thrown as many interceptions as he has touchdown passes. For somebody who threw for 35 touchdowns a year ago, it's an alarming trend early in his senior season.

Going into tonight, when the 20th-ranked Cougars (3-1) host Utah State (1-2), Hall is as baffled as anyone else how his ratio of touchdowns to interceptions can be so far off his career average.

"It's just kind of been weird. A lot of the interceptions have kind of been things that don't usually happen or miscommunication," Hall said. "I think that number will start going down."

Hall entered the season with 61 career touchdown passes and 26 interceptions. This year, he has thrown eight of each.

"It's easy when the standard goes very, very high to only focus on what he's not doing. I think he's making tremendous progress," coach Bronco Mendenhall said. "The flaws, because the standard is higher, will always be exposed and talked about."

BYU is in the middle of a stretch of four games that will do little to restore the national attention the Cougars lost in a 54-28 loss to Florida State two weeks ago. A loss, however, or even a close game in the next three games could drop BYU even further, like last week when the Cougars beat Colorado State 42-23 and fell a spot to No. 20 in the AP Top 25.

After Utah State, the Cougars visit UNLV and San Diego State. They host No. 11 TCU on Oct. 24 in BYU's first game with BCS implications since the Cougars were knocked out of the BCS running by Florida State.

Hall hopes to have the interceptions out of his system long before TCU comes to town.

"If I can just keep managing the game, control the emotions and not do anything to put our team at risk and just continue to make plays

The women combined to drain eight 3-pointers during their 10-minute scrimmage, setting the table for their victory in the 3-point contest.

Plunkett hit 10 treys in her minute, while sophomore All-American post Shauneice Samms showed her range,

"On the field he's a very fiery guy. In the office, he's a very calm, cool, collected guy," the center said. "He talks to you. He lets you know what you've done wrong, what you're doing right."

Vandals turning to Woolridge late

Idaho's tailback rotation still features a mixed bag of threats. But when it comes to the fourth quarter, DeMaundry Woolridge has shown a strong finishing kick, and coaches are rewarding him with more playing time.

He helped salt away the Vandals' 34-31 nail-biting win at Northern Illinois last week by being the featured guy in crunch time. The week before, Woolridge reeled off two fourth-quarter touchdowns to help fend off San Diego State.

"I think they're starting to have confidence in me as a game-finisher," the Washington State transfer said of his coaches. "And it probably comes with me being a senior and knowing I have that senior urgency, that last-stand urgency."

Around the WAC

Louisiana Tech's 27-6 thumping of Hawaii on Wednesday night illustrated just how jumbled the middle of the WAC should be this season. Every team but Idaho and Boise State now has two losses. ... The WAC's desire to get exposure, no matter what day the conference has to play, is still evident. Tonight's Utah State at BYU affair will be the third straight week that the WAC has been featured on Friday night.

2016 Olympic race too close to call ahead of vote

COPENHAGEN (AP) — In 30 minutes, it will be over.

Years of preparations, arm-twisting, sweet-talking and hopes will be rejected or rewarded Friday when the International Olympic Committee votes to select the host for the 2016 Games.

Chicago, Rio de Janeiro, Madrid and Tokyo — one by one — will be eliminated in a tense half-hour of successive rounds of secret balloting until one stands alone.

Shortly afterward, IOC president Jacques Rogge will break open a sealed envelope containing the winner's name and utter the magic words: "The games of the 31st Olympiad are awarded to the city of..."

But on the eve of the vote, the IOC's 106 members were, as ever, keeping their thoughts to themselves. Only Tokyo seemed to have fallen out of the running. Otherwise, it was still too close to

As cities go out, loyalties will shift. That is where the contest will be won or lost.

call between the beaches and bossa nova of Rio, the bustle and Lake Michigan waterfront of Chicago or the European elegance of Madrid. Everyone had reason to be hopeful, none reason to be sure.

"This is the big question, how will it go?" said Willi Kaltschmitt, an IOC member since 1988.

"There have been so many surprises in the past," he said. "It's very even at the moment. It all depends what happens in the first round."

As cities go out, loyalties will shift. That is where the contest will be won or lost. If Tokyo goes out first, will its supporters swing behind Rio, Madrid or Chicago and by how much for each? Could Madrid stun front-runners Chicago and Rio in the second round, knocking one of them out, with its seemingly solid core of backers?

The variables are such that any city could conceivably win or lose. A few votes either way could decide it. That is especially true this time, with all four cities seen as generally capable of holding the games. Some IOC veterans say there has been no closer contest in recent memory.

To prevent bribery, IOC members aren't allowed to visit the bidding cities — so they'll be deciding instead based on what they've read in committee reports. Some will go with their gut instincts, their emotions and personal interests.

Which is where President Barack Obama comes in, literally. He jets in Friday morning, for just five hours, to try to tip the outcome to Chicago. An Obama star turn could swing it — or possibly rebound against him if his adoptive hometown is knocked out. Coming for the day of the vote is a political risk, but so, too, was the risk that Rio might win if Obama didn't lend his charisma and inspirational example to Chicago's final push.

His election as the first black president in U.S. history resonated loudly in Europe, which has the most IOC voting members — 46.

His wife, Michelle Obama, has worked the room before him, wowing IOC members with her charm and smarts. The first lady flew in Wednesday. While hesitant to declare that Barack Obama's appearance could be decisive, IOC members acknowledged it was hotly anticipated.

"It is a very special moment," said Gerhard Heiberg, an IOC executive board member from Norway. "Let me listen to him and see what kind of vision he has for the games."

Talk show star Oprah Winfrey is part of Chicago's hard sell, too. She swept Hollywood-style into the marbled lobby of the IOC hotel on Thursday, turning heads and stopping every other step to shake a hand or pose for a photo with IOC members and their wives.

But Chicago is up against equally charismatic opposition in the shape of Brazilian President Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva. The bearded former union leader makes a compelling case for Rio. Foremost of those is that South America has never before held an Olympics and that the games shouldn't be the exclusive preserve of rich, developed countries. That is an argument the other cities can't use because their countries have all held the Olympics before.

Rockies clinch playoff spot, eye NL West crown

DENVER — The Colorado Rockies are back in the playoffs after a one-year hiatus.

Aaron Cook pitched four-hit ball over eight spectacular innings in his second start since missing a month with a sore shoulder, and Garrett Atkins drove in three runs for the Rockies in a 9-2 win over the Milwaukee Brewers on Thursday.

The Rockies' fourth straight victory eliminated Atlanta, their final pursuer, from contention for the NL wild card. Colorado can still catch the Dodgers for the NL West title if the Rockies sweep a weekend series in Los Angeles.

The Dodgers, who have lost four straight, were off Thursday and watched their division lead over the Rockies get sliced to two games with three left.

CARDINALS 13, REDS 0

CINCINNATI — Ace pitcher Chris Carpenter hit a grand slam and drove in six runs, getting St. Louis back on track with his arm and bat in a rout of Cincinnati.

The right-hander also threw five innings of three-hit ball for his 17th win.

GIANTS 7, DIAMONDBACKS 3

SAN FRANCISCO — Tim Lincecum struck out seven in his final start of the season, Andres Torres homered and hit an RBI triple and San Francisco finished its home schedule with a victory over Arizona.

Lincecum (15-7) outpitched Dan Haren (14-10) in a matchup of aces. The reigning NL Cy Young Award winner completed his season with 261 strikeouts and a 2.48 ERA.

NATIONALS 2, BRAVES 1

ATLANTA — Pete Orr hit a tiebreaking single in the ninth inning and the Washington Nationals beat Atlanta 2-1 on Thursday night, hours after the Braves were eliminated from playoff contention.

Orr's one-out single to left field drove in Ryan Zimmerman, who opened the ninth with a double off Rafael Soriano (1-6).

ASTROS 5, PHILLIES 3

PHILADELPHIA — Cliff Lee was shaky in his playoff tuneup and the Philadelphia Phillies, one night after clinching their third consecutive NL East title, lost 5-3 to the Houston Astros on Thursday.

Miguel Tejada homered to extend his hitting streak to 18 games and Lance Berkman had a two-run double for the Astros.

DETROIT — The AL Central is still up for grabs.

Scott Baker got plenty of run support and pitched the Minnesota Twins to a testy victory, preventing the Tigers from clinching their first division title in 22 years.

Minnesota avoided elimination from the playoff race and moved within two games of the first-place Tigers with three to play.

RANGERS 11, ANGELS 3

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Chris Davis homered and drove in three runs, Julio Borbon triggered a six-run sixth inning with a go-ahead RBI single and Texas beat the playoff-bound Los Angeles Angels.

Kevin Millwood (13-10) recorded his 20th career complete game and third this season. He gave up two earned runs and seven hits in his season finale, tying a season high with 10 strikeouts. He also threw a season-high 122 pitches.

RED SOX 3, INDIANS 0

BOSTON — Jon Lester showed no ill effects from his injury last week and was splendid in a final tuneup for the playoffs, pitching into the seventh inning as the Red Sox handed the Indians their club record-tying 12th straight loss.

Boston snapped its season-long six-game skid.

ORIOLES 3, RAYS 2

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Chris Waters allowed one run over five innings in his first start of the season and Baltimore stopped a 13-game losing streak by beating Tampa Bay.

The skid was the longest in the majors this season and the third-worst in Orioles history. Baltimore dropped 14 consecutive games in August 1954 and opened the 1988 season by losing 21 straight.

Wie, Ochoa two back at LPGA Classic

PRATTVILLE, Ala. — Scotland's Janice Moodie shot a bogey-free 8-under 64 on Thursday to take a one-stroke lead over 14-year-old Alexis Thompson in the Navistar LPGA Classic, with Michelle Wie and top-ranked Lorena Ochoa two strokes back.

Moodie, a two-time winner on the LPGA Tour, played her final nine holes — the front nine on The Senator course at the Robert Trent Jones Golf Trail's Capitol Hill complex, in 6-under 30. She birdied her final four holes and six of her last seven.

Thompson had eight birdies and a bogey.

Wie eagled the par-5 fifth — hitting a 3-wood to 6 feet — and had five birdies and a bogey on the links-style course.

"It's a fun golf course. It's interesting," Wie said. "It's really nothing like we played all year. You know, it's a fun golf course. You have to put it in the fairway and get on the greens and make the putt."

Ochoa, the defending champion who finished second last week behind Sophie Gustafson in the CVS/pharmacy LPGA Challenge in Danville, Calif., had a bogey-free round. She's winless in 11 starts since the Corona Championship in April and has two victories in 17 events this season after winning 21 times in the previous three years.

"I'm feeling good," Ochoa said. "I'm for sure really happy with my round. It was a good day, an easy day, because I didn't make any bogeys. It was just a lot of birdie chances, and we love to have those days."

OLSON, PETROVIC FIRE 66S AT TURNING STONE

VERONA, N.Y. — Rookie Leif Olson and Tim Petrovic shot 6-under 66s in rainy and cold conditions to share the first-round lead in the Turning Stone Resort Championship, the first event of the five-tournament Fall Series.

Matt Kuchar, John Senden, and Vaughn Taylor were a stroke back, and Adam Scott, Scott Gutschewski, Kevin Stadler, Ken Duke, Jimmy

Lorena Ochoa waves after making her putt on the No. 11 hole during the first round of the Navistar LPGA Classic at the Robert Trent Jones Golf Trail at Capitol Hill on Thursday in Prattville, Ala.

Walker, Nicholas Thompson and Matt Jones shot 68s. Defending champ Dustin Johnson birdied his last two holes for a 69.

The round was stopped because of darkness with a handful of players still on the soggy Atunyote Golf Club course.

WATSON, HAAS ONE BACK AT SENIOR PLAYERS CHAMPIONSHIP

TIMONIUM, Md. — Lonnie Nielson shot a 5-under 65 to take a one-stroke lead over Tom Watson and Jay Haas in the Senior Players Championship, the last of the Champions Tour's five majors tournaments.

Sandy Lyle opened with a 67, and Bob Tway, Dan Forsman, Eduardo Romero and Mike Reid shot 68s on the Baltimore Country Club/Five Farms' East Course.

BJORN LEADS ALFRED DUNHILL LINKS CHAMPIONSHIP

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland — Denmark's Thomas Bjorn shot an 8-under 64 at Kingsbarns to take a two-stroke lead in the Alfred Dunhill Links Championship.

England's Ross McGowan opened with a 66 on the Old Course at St. Andrews, and Northern Ireland's Gareth Maybin shot a 66 at Kingsbarns

Now wearing purple, Favre says he's not out for revenge against Pack

GREEN BAY, Wis. — One minute, Brett Favre sternly insists he isn't out for revenge against the Green Bay Packers on Monday night. The next, he says it's only human for him to feel like he has something to prove to the team that traded him.

In his first extended interview session with Wisconsin-based reporters since well before his unremitting saga went public last summer, Favre reluctantly revisited his departure from Green Bay. He also awkwardly backpedaled from previous comments that indicated a grudge against Packers general manager Ted Thompson.

Favre will be wearing the purple uniform of the Packers' bitter NFC North rival at the Metrodome on Monday night, but said his career moves over the past year aren't based on revenge.

"Never was motivated for that reason," Favre said in a conference call. "No. That has nothing to do with it."

But when reminded of his comments to si.com in February, in which Favre said part of his motivation for coming back last season was "sticking it" to Thompson, Favre acknowledged he did want to show the Packers he still belonged in the NFL.

"It's human nature to feel, I didn't use the word revenge, but to prove that you still could play," Favre said. "To prove someone wrong, or prove a group wrong. So you can call it what you want."

Packers coach Mike McCarthy wasn't about to step back into a controversy that caused a major disruption during last year's training camp before Favre was traded to the New York Jets.

"I'm not going to comment on his thoughts and his words or anybody's thoughts or their words in Minnesota," McCarthy said. "We're really looking forward to playing the game, like we do every year. There is definitely added juice to it, no doubt about it, so we'll just leave it at that."

NIKE: NO 'CONTRACTUAL RELATIONSHIP' WITH VICK

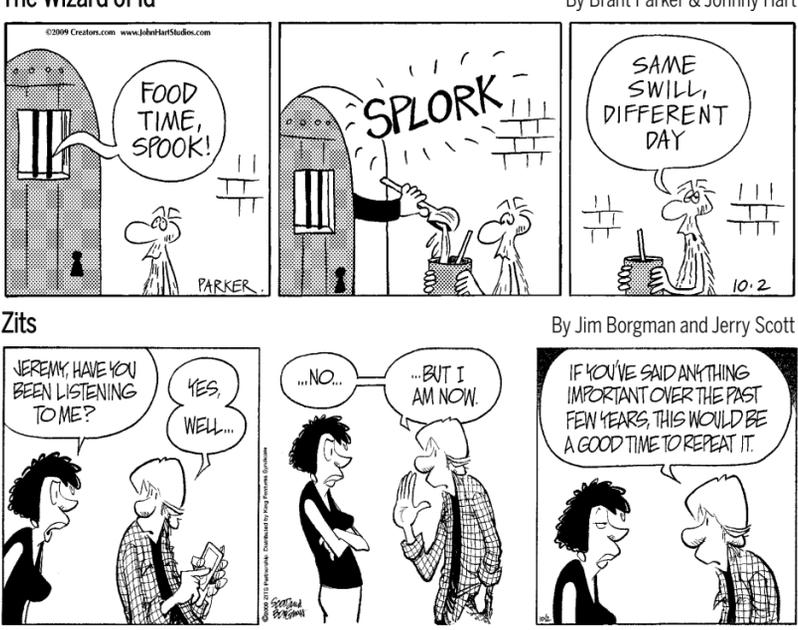

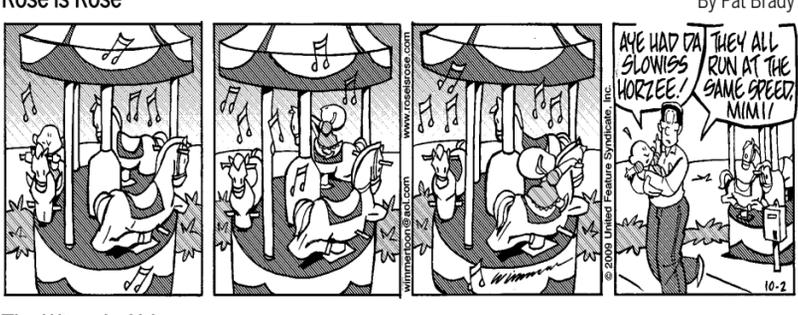

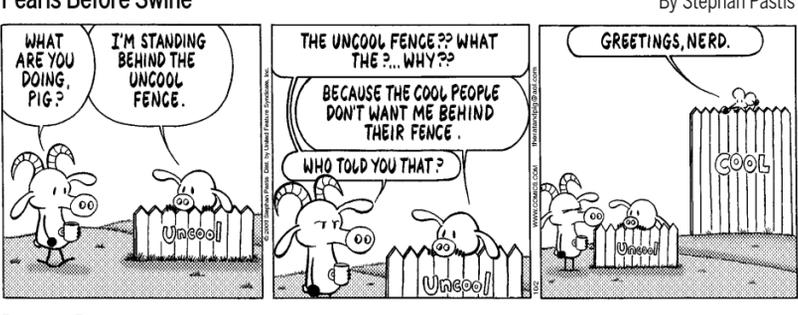

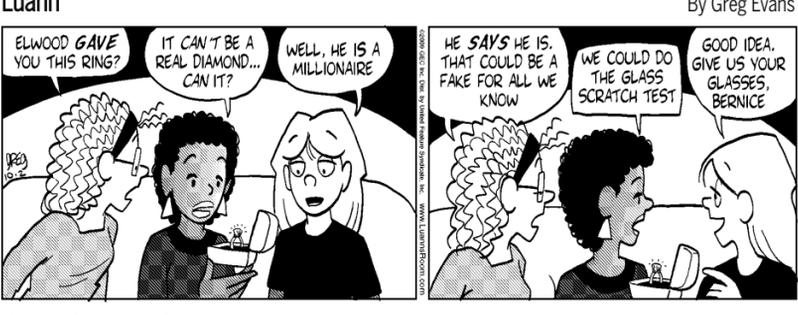

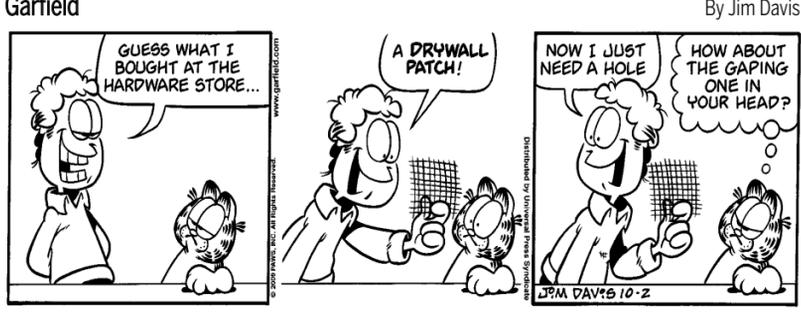

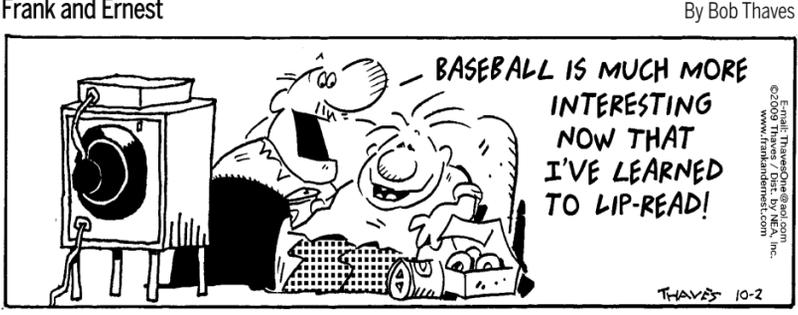

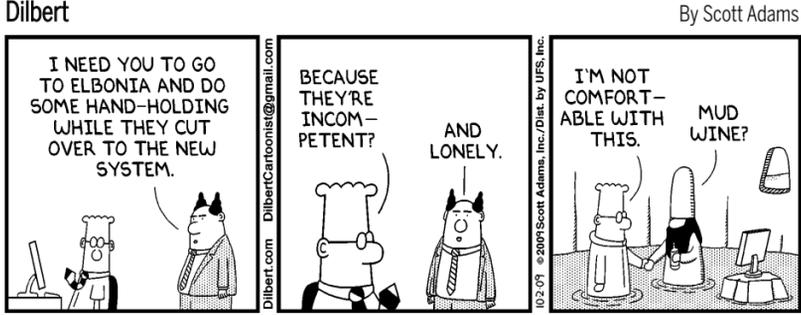

NEW YORK — Nike said Thursday it does not have a "contractual relationship" with Michael Vick, a day after the quarterback's agent announced a deal with the manufacturer.

In a statement released

Thursday morning, Nike said it has "agreed to supply product to Michael Vick as we do a number of athletes who are not under contract with Nike."

On Wednesday, Michael Principe, the managing director of BEST, the agency that represents Vick, announced the Philadelphia Eagles player had a new deal with Nike during a panel discussion at the Sports Sponsorship Symposium.

2010 FORD FUSION SEDAN

NEW GOOD LOOKS, NEW POSSIBILITIES!

RoadWorthy!
By Ken Chester, Jr.
Motor News Media Corporation

The all-new 2010 Ford Fusion sedan has been designed shake up the cut-throat mid-size sedan segment, offering unsurpassed 4-cylinder gasoline fuel economy, more power, class-exclusive technologies including a blind spot detection and warning system and Ford SYNC and more total passenger and luggage capacity.

"With the new Ford Fusion, we are offering consumers more choice, even better fuel economy and the leading quality and reliability that they have come to expect," said Derrick Kuzak, Ford's group vice president of Global Product Development. "But that isn't all - we weren't satisfied with just matching the competition in the segment, we wanted to give consumers even more by delivering engaging driving dynamics and technologies that make the in-car experience more comfortable and connected."

Available in S, SE, SEL and Sport trim levels, Ford's attention to detail with the freshened Fusion begins with a new design that gives the car a look that is both sportier and more upscale as well as improved aerodynamics. The car's newly designed front end, including a powerfully domed hood, and new headlamps, grille and larger fog-lamp area further enhance the sporty nature of the 2010 Fusion. Aerodynamic enhancements and new underbody shields further boost Base power for the 2010 Fusion is generated by an all-new 2.5L four-cylinder powerplant.

The available Duratec30 3.0L V6 engine has also been upgraded and is now E85-capable. For maximum performance, the Fusion Sport features a 3.5-liter V6 engine. Torque is communicated to the pavement through the newly standard six-speed manual gearbox. A six-speed automatic is an available option.

Front-wheel drive and on-demand all-wheel drive are available with V6-equipped models. Both V6 engines are also available with SelectShift for individual gear control. The versatility in the powertrain systems creates a wide range of options for customers designed to fit every need.

Upgrades to control hardware include revisions to Fusion's front stay bar and rear suspension link geometry to improve steering, handling, and ride. The suspension springs, shocks, and stabilizer-bars have also been retuned to take full advantage of the revised geometry and new steering system.

Comfort improvements to make the Fusion quieter include an acoustic windshield, thicker front door glass, new hood insulators, inner and outer dash absorbers, and carpet, revised sealing baffles, additional sound deadening in the trunk, and new interior headliner absorption material. Improved body and door sealing also contribute to Fusion's best-in-class standing in wind noise.

With all models, the interior design team created a more contemporary, technical look with metallic new finishes on the instrument panel that carry through on the center console, doors and steering wheel. The all new instrument panel is finished with a soft upper and lower skin and has much less hard plastic than Japanese competitors. The instrument panel displays and switches have also been updated with a contemporary ice blue lighting. A redesigned leather wrapped steering wheel with form fitting palm swells, a new shifter, and wrapped and padded armrests increase the Fusion's sportiness and comfort at all key driver touch points.

The gauge cluster has been designed with day time backlighting, a black lens, and 3-D elements to create a high tech jewel-like appearance, similar to a fine watch. Drivers will be greeted by a new 'welcome' sequence that makes the Fusion seem as if it's coming to life. Gauge needles sweep back and forth as the lighting and new chimes come on. The ambient lighting system offers the option of illuminating the front and rear footwells and front cup holders.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE Bobby Wolff

"Think nothing done while aught remains to do." — Samuel Rogers

Josephine Culbertson was credited with playing today's deal. As was the style in those days, the bid of four no-trump showed two aces and the king of a bid suit. The response promised two aces.

West led the club king against the heart slam, and declarer could count only 10 tricks: five trumps, the two sets of ace-kings and the club ace. Even if spades produced an extra trick, that would still leave her a trick short. Her only hope was to rely on trumps being 3-2 and to ruff three clubs in hand. This would give her six trump tricks, three on power and three from club ruffs.

So she took the lead with the ace and ruffed a club with the 10. Then she crossed to the spade king and ruffed another club high. Next she played the heart four to the eight and ruffed dummy's last club with her king. When the clubs proved to be 4-4, her chances had improved. Things looked up still further when she overtook her heart jack with dummy's queen and both opponents followed suit.

After discarding her losing diamond on the third trump, she continued with the spade ace and then a third spade. All she needed now was to be able to play the spades for three tricks. That would come about if the spade queen fell in two or three rounds, or if East had the length in spades. Her luck was in today.

ANSWER: This is a takeout double, and since you have already denied having four hearts or four spades (or you would have bid at your previous turn), you can bid two hearts now to suggest three trumps. You may not be confident you are going to reach a comfortable spot, but you really can do nothing else.

Today's Feature - Write a Resume That Stays In Play

Beyond the Business Card

By Cheryl Ferguson

Networking in the 21st Century

Networking is more than just a buzzword. It's probably the best opportunity you will ever have to make connections, build relationships and help yourself and others in the networking group succeed. Networking with like-minded individuals is also a great way to explore new career options, learn more about a specific industry, gather insights from peers on critical business issues and grow professionally.

Networking With a Goal in Mind

Think about what you want to accomplish by joining a particular networking group. Are you looking for a job, trying to develop new business or do you want to expand your network of contacts and become known as the go-to person in the industry? You can choose to be either an active or passive member of the group, but will get the most out of the experience by regularly attending and participating in the activities.

Once you decide on the networking group that matches your goals, you can immediately increase your visibility by volunteering to participate on a committee.

Access and Exposure

According to Executive Career Consultant Kathleen Jennings, of The Jennings Company, "It's not who you know, it's who knows you." Joining a professional networking group is an opportunity for you to gain access and exposure to people you might not otherwise meet: a company executive in an industry that you've always wanted to learn more about, a keynote speaker who's an expert in your field, and yes, even someone who may be in a position to offer you a job, or who can connect you to the hiring manager at a company where you've always wanted to work.

You can find out when and where networking groups meet by scanning the business-events section of your local newspaper or business weekly. Visit the website of the networking group before going to the first event to learn more about their members, mission and focus. Armed with this information, you can go to the next breakfast, lunch, or after-hours function prepared with questions for the members and guests you introduce yourself to at the meeting.

Stay Connected Between Meetings

The internet is a great tool to use to stay visible and connected to your networking group between meetings. You can:

- Search on Yahoo! for the name of the person you're planning on meeting for that informational interview.
 - Forward a link to an article of interest to the new member you met at the last function.
 - Send an email with contact information for a referral.
 - Post a reply to a request on the group's message board.
- There's a fine line between being seen as a resource and being seen as a spam artist: don't send excessive or inappropriate email. Make sure that your contacts between meetings are relevant and pertinent to the business at hand.
- Listen First
An easy way to relax at a networking function is to take the focus off yourself by first listening to the other person. This technique also helps you gain insight as to how that contact can help you, making the connection that much stronger. It's not about collecting the most business cards; it's about collecting the right ones.

Thank-you notes and quick follow-up to requests for information are little courtesies that mean a lot. Your professionalism will be noted, your calls returned and your referral business will blossom. It also signals to the parties involved that you are committed to success -- yours and theirs.

If you take advantage of all that networking has to offer, and if you have joined the right networking group, you'll find that suddenly, you seem much more visible. People will seek you out and recognize you as a valuable resource.

If you're networking correctly, you'll find you have more visibility, greater knowledge, and a wider circle of reliable contacts, and that you can leverage those assets to further your career.

Man comes out of closet and surprises old friends

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR ABBY: I spent my high school years chasing girls and participating in sports. I made good grades and was popular with peers and faculty.

I have since graduated and entered college. I have also come out of the closet as gay. Due to popular sites such as Facebook, I have reunited with old friends who are interested to hear about my "new life."

With those not "in the know," I feel uncomfortable having to come out of the closet again and again. I don't feel ashamed about myself or my boyfriend, but I feel a certain discomfort when my former and present lives meet.

I have many friends, old and new, gay and straight, who I care about. But I feel some anxiety over the reactions I get from some of those people, even though they no longer hold a prominent place in my life. I'd greatly appreciate it if you could tell me how to handle and deal with such situations.

- BETWIXT AND BETWEEN IN SAN ANTONIO

DEAR BETWIXT: I understand your anxiety, but the reaction you're getting from some of your old friends is a direct result of how effectively you hid your homosexuality behind chasing girls and the misperception that being a talented athlete has anything to do with a person's sexual orientation.

You need to accept the fact that people will be surprised because they assumed you were straight like they are. Some of them will be accepting; others won't. But the people who count will get beyond it. The way to handle this is with the same humor and compassion you would like from others. It may take some practice and coming to terms with your own feelings, but I have every confidence that you'll do it as thousands of other people have.

DEAR ABBY: I am 48 and recently divorced from my husband of 25 years. Like others in my age group, I worry about my prospects of finding another partner - especially because I am no longer the "cute young thing" I once was.

A few days ago, I was at a local wildlife park and struck up a conversation with a pleasant senior couple. They looked as though they had been married more than 50 years, but they happily informed me they were on their honeymoon! When we finished our chat, the woman said to her husband, "I guess we'd better be going, baby;" and off they went, hand-in-hand.

It just goes to show that it's never too late for love to blossom!

- WILLING TO WAIT IN NOVA SCOTIA

DEAR WILLING TO WAIT: I'll say! My lovely cousin Suzie is being married in about two weeks after 26 years as a widow. It never is too late for love to blossom - all it takes is a seed of friendship and a couple who decide they're ready to make a commitment.

DEAR ABBY: I am a young woman in my 20s who, while very friendly, is funny about being touched. I am extremely uncomfortable when people outside my immediate family hug me, rub my shoulders or place a hand on my back or arm. Yet somehow, people tend to do this with me.

How can I express my discomfort without sounding antisocial or mean? I'd appreciate your advice.

- TOUCHY SUBJECT

DEAR TOUCHY SUBJECT: Do it with humor. Say, "If you do that again, you'll have to marry me!" It should work with members of both sexes, depending upon the state you live in.

IF OCTOBER 2 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY:

You've got a dream. You can achieve your dream if you are willing to work hard and follow your inspiration wherever it may lead between now and January. February and April are the two best months for planning sessions, making important decisions or receiving fortunate opportunities. In February and April, your instincts about people and business are better than usual so you can safely make a commitment that involves a new relationship - or accept a job offer and expect it to work out in your favor.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Since you are more entertaining and friendly than usual, a night on the town might attract new admirers who fuel your ego.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Networking can pay off in the end, as two heads are better than one. Brainstorm with a partner who may offer a fine sounding board.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): All eyes could be on you today. Your lack of conventionality might be the very thing that makes you seem like a genius.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A casual acquaintance may share a common background or political view. Your significant other may be filled with ideas for fun.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Remember, it takes two to tango. Don't cry over spilled milk: Put vital energy into activities that will improve joint resources.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You are able to fool people easily, so it is tempting to take unfair advantage. Take the high road; do not be a deceiver today.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You and a special someone can turn into a dynamic duo.

This weekend, people might think you are more attractive than you really are.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You may need to kiss a lot of frogs to find your prince or princess charming. Exciting outings will break up the monotony.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Someone may shake you out of a dreamy reverie. Those in close connection may move swiftly to get things done.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): There is a tendency to become absorbed in a pet project to the exclusion of all else. Be sure you don't waste precious resources.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Refuse to settle for the ordinary when the extraordinary is within your grasp. Remind yourself that Rome wasn't built in one day.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): If you feel free to come and go as you please, you will be happy as a clam. Remember, it isn't possible to maintain double standards.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Oct. 2, the 275th day of 2009. There are 90 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On this date:
In 1780, British spy John Andre was hanged in Tappan, N.Y., during the Revolutionary War.

In 1835, the first battle of the Texas Revolution took place as American settlers fought Mexican soldiers near the Guadalupe River; the Mexicans ended up withdrawing.

In 1869, political and spiritual leader Mohandas K. Gandhi was born in Porbandar, India.

In 1944, Nazi troops crushed the two-month-old Warsaw Uprising, during which a quarter of a million people were killed.

In 1950, the comic strip "Peanuts," created by Charles M. Schulz, was syndicated to seven newspapers.

In 1958, the former French colony of Guinea in West Africa proclaimed its independence.

In 1959, Rod Serling's "The Twilight Zone" made its debut on CBS-TV with the episode "Where Is Everybody?" starring Earl Holliman.

In 1967, Thurgood Marshall was sworn as an associate justice of the U.S. Supreme Court as the court opened its new term.

In 1985, actor Rock Hudson died at his home in Beverly Hills, Calif. at age 59 after battling AIDS.

In 2006, an armed milk truck driver took a group of girls hostage in an Amish schoolhouse in Nickel Mines, Pa., killing five of them and wounding five others before committing suicide.

Ten years ago: The Brooklyn Museum of Art opened its much-hyped "Sensation" exhibit which had drawn controversy because of New York City Mayor Rudolph Giuliani's move to cut off city funding to the museum. (Giuliani objected to some of the artwork, which included a portrait of the Virgin Mary decorated with elephant dung.)

Five years ago: Suspected separatist rebels began four days of attacks in India's Nagaland and Assam states that killed 73 people.

One year ago: Republican Sarah Palin and Democrat Joe Biden sparred over taxes, energy policy and the Iraq war in a high-profile vice-presidential debate at Washington University in St. Louis, in which Palin sought to reclaim her identity as a feisty reformer and Biden tried to undercut the maverick image of GOP presidential hopeful John McCain.

More than a year after millionaire adventure Steve Fossett vanished on a solo flight over California's rugged Sierra Nevada, searchers found the wreckage of his plane but no body inside. (Fossett's remains were discovered in late October 2008.)
