A construction worker drives nails on the south side of the new lodge at Soldier Mountain Ski Resort north of Fairfield on Tuesday afternoon. The old lodge was destroyed by fire on March 31. The new lodge is expected to be finished in time for this year's skiing season.

Soldier lodge should be done in time for skiing

Barring any surprises, a longtime Fairfield landmark should be rebuilt in time for this winter's ski season.

The Soldier Mountain Lodge, part of the ski resort owned by actor Bruce Willis and his Hailey-based Valley Entertainment Group, was destroyed in a March 31 fire, just two days after it closed for the season.

Plans for a new lodge were announced in July, and Valley Entertainment office manager Shelly Scott said Wednesday that contractor Young Construction of Ketchum expects to finish work by Dec. 8.

Deal reached on new Jerome Senior Center

Differences resolved on center's hours, revenue and management

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

JEROME — A dispute between the city of Jerome and the governing board of the senior citizens center over the new senior center on North Lincoln Street was apparently resolved at a special Jerome City Council meeting Thursday.

The council and the board of Jerome Senior Citizens Inc., reached a verbal agreement to finalize language in a five-year lease for the new building, ending a dispute over whether the senior group, which operates the current center, would have the right to rent the new center out for meetings and special events, and over which entity would keep rental revenue.

The dispute included the center's hours of operation, along with future revenue and management of the facility.

While one of the issues had been whether the city or the seniors would oversee the new center's management and rentals, the city has now agreed to allow the seniors to manage the facility and keep rental revenue.

The city has also agreed to allow the senior center manager to determine hours of operation.

Councilman John Shine questioned whether there should be a threshold where excess amounts of rental income could go to the city to offset expenses for the building.

It was later determined that it remains unknown how much operating costs will be.

Leon won't face trial in Jerome shootings

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

JEROME — First-degree murder suspect Fortino Leon is not legally competent to stand trial, Magistrate Jason Walker ruled Friday.

"Mr. Leon remains unfit to stand trial," said Jerome County 5th District Court spokeswoman Shelly Creek. "It is not set for any future hearings at this point."

Leon has been held at the State Hospital South in Nampa. When asked if he will remain in custody, Creek responded: "It will remain exactly as it is."

Jerome County Deputy Prosecutor Paul Kroeger was unable to say Friday if Leon will ever face trial for allegedly shooting his ex-wife and her lover.

"I suppose that depends," he said. "I don't think it's yet been determined if he will be competent to stand trial. If his condition changes, we can petition the court again."

Leon, 74, is accused of shooting and killing Javier Zavala-Paniagua, 22, and wounding his now ex-wife, Maria Abigail Leon, 41, in the street in front of 221 Fifth Ave. E. in Jerome in July 2008.

Court documents allege that Zavala-Paniagua was Maria Leon's lover and that they lived together.

Renova Energy Idaho LLC, which filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy in a Wyoming U.S. Bankruptcy Court in June 2008, may have a buyer for its Heyburn facility, according to Vice President of Marketing Terry Oldfield. Company officials hope the Idaho subsidiary will emerge from bankruptcy by the end of October.

Two ethanol plants await court rulings

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Two Mini-Cassia ethanol plants saddled by Chapter 11 bankruptcy are awaiting final rulings by the courts.

Renova Energy LLC and the company's Wyoming and Heyburn subsidiaries all filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy on June 20, 2008, in a Wyoming U.S. Bankruptcy Court.

Renova Vice President of Marketing Terry Oldfield said Friday that although Renova and its Wyoming subsidiary have emerged from bankruptcy, the Heyburn subsidiary, which was constructing a 21-million gallon-a-year plant, is still in bankruptcy court.

Oldfield said the company has an offer to purchase the Heyburn facility from a U.S. company that would pay to make the plant operational within the next 18 months.

"They have expressed a desire to use many of the same contractors," Oldfield said.

The plant exceeded its $40 million construction budget and was shuttered in December 2007, with the company still owing $15 million to subcontractors, many of them local.

Although Oldfield could not disclose the name of the company interested in purchasing the plant, or the purchase price, he said, "I will tell you, it's somewhat less money than we'd like to get."

County, private provider join hands to battle teenage substance abuse

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

After a couple years of program closures, a new treatment center for teens with substance-abuse problems is on its way to Twin Falls.

In April, Larry McArthur opened Daybreak Canyon — a residential center near Magic Hot Springs that serves youth with mental and behavioral issues.

On Tuesday, Twin Falls County commissioners approved a lease agreement with McArthur to bring a second operation to town, turning the county's old Competency Development Center into a residential substance-abuse treatment center.

Placed next to the county's juvenile detention center in southeast Twin Falls, the new program will help both boys and girls likely 12 to 17 years old to battle substance abuse.

Commissioners said they talked to a couple of different groups about providing the service, which will be integrated into the county's other health and juvenile programs. After having their own treatment experts review the options, they decided McArthur was who they were looking for — partly because his program provides for more family involvement, said Commission Chairman George Urie.

Once licensed, the center will open after reduced teen inpatient services in the Magic Valley.

Lodge

The building, sporting a Western design, will incorporate several features previously housed in separate structures, including a ski rental shop, ski school and ticket booth. Scott would not give a cost for the one-story building but said prices will not rise this year at the resort.

"We did some small ones, I think, last year," Scott said of price increases.

Though June rain caused some delays, everything since has proceeded just about as planned, Scott said. The new building is almost closed in and work should move inside the structure in time to avoid bad weather.

"We haven't had any problems with the schedule so far," she said.

Bringing the new building up to code has been one of the biggest tasks.

The older structure wasn't required to meet current access, electrical and other standards, something Scott noted likely contributed to the electrical fire that consumed it.

"It's good, and it'll be a safer building," she said of the new construction. "All of our customers will be really happy with it."

Scott said she expects all or most of those customers to return this season. News of the construction has people excited to visit Soldier Mountain, she said, and no loss of business is expected. The resort has attracted an average of 11,000 to 12,000 people a year over the last three years.

"I think we'll have a decent year this year," she said.

Jerome

"I'm confident we can come to a meeting of the minds of what we want," Mayor Charles Correll said at the beginning of the meeting.

"I know some of you have said you would like to have this signed before you move in," he said, adding that a verbal agreement Thursday night should suffice.

Resolved prior to the Thursday meeting was the name of the building, which will be Jerome Senior Center.

The city recently scrapped a proposal to name the new building the Jerome Community Center, a proposal that outraged senior citizens who use the existing senior center on First Avenue East.

There were questions raised that the city might have to repay $150,000 in grant funding if the facility is not called a senior citizens center.

City Administrator Ben Marchant said at the meeting Thursday the city has received an anonymous donation of $50,000 for landscaping at the new senior center.

Treatment

The Walker Center in 2006 closed its adolescent treatment unit for lack of use and inadequate state funding. St. Luke's Canyon View Behavioral Health Services shuttered its teen inpatient unit in 2007, and the Idaho Youth Ranch was restructured last year to focus more on younger kids.

"We're pretty excited, because since the Walker Center closed ... there just hasn't been a substance-abuse program anywhere close to our region," McArthur said, noting his two businesses will offer most of the absent services except the acute psychiatric care once provided through Canyon View.

First, though, he has to become licensed as both a child care center and a substance-abuse center through the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, a process that could take a few months.

The licenses are the last major step for the center. The CDC building — with classrooms, a kitchen, a play area and other amenities — has been refurbished by the county and is ready to go whenever the licenses come through, Commissioner Terry Kramer said.

That should make it easier to get everything set up, McArthur said. He applauded the county for stepping up to organize the services, especially the commissioners.

"That's really refreshing to see," he said.

Leon

Walker's ruling followed a Thursday competency hearing that was closed to all except witnesses who were expected to testify. Defense attorney Stacey Gosnell-Taylor requested to close the hearing to the public, citing medical confidentiality and the risk that further public knowledge of the case could make it difficult for Leon to get a fair trial should he be found competent. Kroeger concurred.

Closing the hearing precludes the public from knowing why Leon has not been declared mentally fit to stand trial for first-degree murder and aggravated battery and assault. In a related move Friday, Walker sealed the court record, saying Leon's right to privacy outweighs the public's interest in knowing why he won't be prosecuted.

The case had been stalled for 15 months while various experts examined Leon. Separate psychiatric reports released this past summer conflict on the competency issue.

One report by Dr. Nels Sather of the Idaho Department of Health and

Fortino Leon, seen here in a Jerome County Courthouse video feed in July 2008, has been declared not legally competent to stand trial for allegedly shooting and killing Javier Zavala-Paniagua in Jerome.

Welfare's State Hospital South found Leon competent to stand trial. The other report by psychologists James Tyson and Terry Fernandez Tyson, of Twin Falls, found Leon not competent.

All three mental health professionals were in court Thursday.

In April, Walker barred the public from a status hearing for Leon and sealed court records.

Times-News attorney Fritz Haemmerle answered with a motion filed in May to unseal the records. Walker rejected the motion and unsealed only court minutes.

Fortino Leon filed for divorce about two months before the shooting. He made unsuccessful bids for child support for a 14-year-old son and the house he owned with his wife. The court granted the divorce in June.

Gosnell-Taylor declined comment on the case on Friday.

Old school coming back to life as haunted house

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

HEYBURN — The city of Heyburn signed the first lease for the north campus of the old Heyburn Elementary School on Thursday — the same day it received the property in a transfer from the school district.

The Mindoka County School District gave the 19,000-square-foot building to the city as a gift after moving students to a new elementary school this fall. The district plans to continue using the south campus.

Although the term of the lease is only two and a half weeks and for the purpose of a Halloween haunted house, city officials hope it marks the start of a well-rounded community center.

The city leased the northeast wing to John Paskett, Eric Gochnour and Melissa Anglesey, who will operate a Halloween attraction from Oct. 14-31. The organizers will keep a third of the profits from the attraction, with a third going to the city and the other third to charity.

Heyburn Superintendent Scott Spevak said the city has received some proposals for other long-term leases.

"We have actually had a lot of interest in it," Spevak said. "And hopefully we can get some long-term tenants."

City officials have expressed a desire to pursue grants that would allow the city to open a library in the old school library room.

The Heyburn Alumni Association, which owns the art collection housed in a special climate-controlled room off of the library, plans to pay for the cost of insuring the paintings so they can remain in the room that was built to store them.

Fish and Game reports poaching of pronghorn

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game is investigating the apparent poaching of two buck pronghorn antelope, found in Elmore County near the Twin Falls County line.

The antelope were killed on Wednesday or Thursday and left to waste on Flat Mesa Road near Bell Rapids Road. Punishments for poaching in Idaho include a variety of fines, ranging from just hundreds to thousands of dollars.

Anyone with information about the kills can call the Citizens Against Poaching hotline, 800-632-5999, or Fish and Game's regional office, 208-324-4359. Callers may remain anonymous and could receive a reward if their information leads to a conviction.

Idaho receives $9.6 million for energy conservation

The Idaho Office of Energy Resources plans to use most of a $9.6 million federal stimulus award to improve energy efficiency at the local-government level.

The award, announced Thursday by U.S. Energy Secretary Steven Chu, is meant to support energy efficiency and conservation work through federal block grants. More than $8.1 million of Idaho's funding will be dispersed as sub-grants to city and county governments for energy audits, building and transportation efficiency programs and installing renewable-energy devices on government buildings. OER will work with the Association of Idaho Counties and Idaho Association of Cities to select projects and keep them accountable, according to a press release.

About $500,000 will also pay to train code-enforcement officials in the 2009 International Energy Conservation Code and help cities and counties adopt it.

The money should create more than 100 green jobs statewide, according to OER Administrator Paul Kjellander. Information: <http://www.energy.idaho.gov>.

County announces P&Z vacancy

Twin Falls County is searching for applicants to fill the seat left by former Planning and Zoning Commissioner Larry McKay.

McKay resigned for health reasons a couple of months ago, said P&Z Director Bill Crafton.

His successor must have been a county resident for at least two years and should have a strong commitment to the community, according to the job advertisement. While the commission isn't officially divided into districts, Crafton said, officials would like to find someone from the area south of Twin Falls and near Kimberly.

Applications are available at the Twin Falls County commissioners' office, 425 Shoshone St. N., or online at <http://www.twinfallscounty.org>. A resume is encouraged. The deadline to apply is Nov. 6.

DEQ seeks input on Jerome permit

The Idaho Department of Environmental Quality has asked for comments on a draft water-quality certification of a federal permit for the city of Jerome to discharge treated wastewater into the Snake River.

Federal law requires state certification of National Pollutant Discharge Elimination System permits issued by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency. DEQ's two-page draft certification would certify that Jerome's permit provides "reasonable assurances" that the discharges will comply with state standards.

The document would also allow Jerome to trade phosphorus credits with other dischargers in the region, as well as create a mixing zone to address chlorine issues.

The two-page draft certification is available at www.deq.idaho.gov/public/comment.cfm, as well as instructions for submitting comments. Feedback is due by Nov. 2. Information: Sonny Buhidar, 208-736-2190.

Comments invited on Stanley Lake camp renovation

The Sawtooth National Forest wants to know what the public thinks of its plans to renovate a popular camping area.

The federal agency first proposed rebuilding parts of the Stanley Lake Recreation Complex, about eight miles west of Stanley, in 2006. Problems cited include flooded campsites, congestion around a boat launch, a hiking trail that shares a road with motorized vehicles and water pumps that do not meet current standards, among other issues.

The work, which has already attracted some public criticism, would include moving the boat launch, converting some campsites to day-use, replacing older water pumps and restrooms, and developing a dispersed camping plan for the area. A decision is expected next year.

Comments on the proposal should be submitted by Oct. 30 and will become public record.

They can be e-mailed to comments-intermtn-sawtooth-nra@fs.fed.us or mailed to Stanley Lake Reconstruction, HC 64 Box 9900, Stanley, ID 83278-9802.

Ethanol

Oldfield said if the purchase deal goes through, the money will first pay administration costs and legal fees, with creditors dividing the remainder.

Oldfield said two creditor committees were formed consisting of lien holders and unsecured creditors. They will all have to agree that selling the facility will be the best way of recouping their losses.

Oldfield said if the purchase deal does not go through, creditors will have a short window to drum up financing to purchase the plant themselves.

"Short of that it will go on the auction block," Oldfield said.

Oldfield said the company is hoping for a court decree by the end of October.

"It's just a shame to go by there and see it sitting there unfinished," Oldfield said. "It's been a miserable 18 months."

Despite rumblings in the community about the Pacific Ethanol Magic Valley plant in Burley reopening, the site remained quiet on Friday.

Pacific Ethanol Inc. and its four subsidiaries, including its Burley facility, filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy on May 18. The Burley plant laid off 24 employees in January, which was initially announced as an annual maintenance shutdown.

"At this time, we do not know when the Magic Valley plant in Burley, Idaho, or our other ethanol production facilities in California, will reopen," said Pacific Ethanol Inc. Vice President Paul Koehler, on Friday. "These plants are in Chapter 11 and we are working to bring them back into production."

Employers still not ready to hire

WASHINGTON (AP) — Job hunters will face long odds well into next year. As the unemployment rate inches closer to 10 percent, most businesses are nowhere close to hiring again.

Uncertain about prospects for recovery — the economy's and their own — employers cut 263,000 jobs in September, the government said Friday. Unemployment crept up to 9.8 percent.

As the economy slowly turns around, sales are slowly growing and many companies are starting to make money again. But they're doing it by cutting costs, squeezing more work out of fewer employees and relying on part-timers and cheap overseas labor.

INSIDE

Southern Idaho unemployment rate rises slightly.

See Business 1

Until companies are confident the recovery is here to stay, they will probably keep laying off workers. The economy lost 62,000 more jobs in September than in August, and the unemployment rate notched up from 9.7 percent to a new 26-year high.

Most economists say the recession is probably over. But the recovery isn't robust enough to embolden businesses to hire again.

"Fear is a large factor for many companies," said Michael Williams, dean of the graduate school of business at Touro College in New York. "What happens after the government's stimuli end? Does the recovery morph into something durable, or is there an abyss on the other side?"

President Barack Obama called the jobless figures a sobering reminder that progress to reverse the recession will come in fits and starts.

Employers are expected to continue cutting payrolls for six to nine more months. Economists think the jobless rate will go as high as 10.5 percent around the middle of next year before declining gradually.

It could take three or four more years for unemployment to fall to normal levels. The worst recession since the Great Depression has already claimed 7.2 million jobs, and analysts figure 750,000 more jobs could disappear over the next six months.

The drumbeat of job losses is creating fear that Americans won't start spending again and the recovery may fizzle. Some worry the economy might succumb to a "double dip" recession — meaning it would stop growing and start shrinking again.

Fate of health care legislation in doubt

WASHINGTON (AP) — Barack Obama has pushed closer than any president in generations to creating a basic health care safety net for most Americans, yet the fate of legislation delivering on his promise is far from certain.

Republicans are nearly unified in opposition. Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell, R-Ky., warned Friday that the latest version, completed about 2 a.m. by the Senate Finance Committee but not yet formally ratified by the panel, would have "a dampening effect on what is already clearly a very, very difficult economic situation."

McConnell argued that the bill would cut benefits for seniors and raise taxes on individuals and businesses, something a nation reeling from recession and widespread job losses can ill afford.

Democrats are hardly united in support of the plan, either, with deep divisions over whether to allow the government to sell insurance in competition with private industry. There also are disagreements over the broad scope and cost of the legislation.

The Finance Committee wrapped up work early Friday morning on the most sweeping set of changes in a half-century. Obama hailed the developments as a milestone, and said, "We are now closer than ever before to finally passing reform that will offer security to those who have coverage and affordable insurance to those who don't."

The legislation is designed to spread health insurance to millions who now lack it, and it would crack down on industry practices such as denying coverage on the basis of pre-existing medical conditions.

More than $400 billion in federal subsidies would help defray premium costs for lower-income families and help small businesses offer coverage to their workers. Most policies would be required to cover preventive care as well as treatment for medical illness and vision, dental and mental health needs.

"This bill will lower taxes for more than 42 million Americans and reduce the federal deficit," said Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont., the committee chairman, as the panel wrapped up its work.

A final vote was delayed until next week so budget officials can certify the legislation would not add to federal deficits.

Alleged Letterman extortion plot unfolds

NEW YORK (AP) — A CBS newsman who prosecutors said was desperate and deep in debt was charged Friday with trying to blackmail David Letterman for $2 million in a plot that forced the late night comic to acknowledge having sex with some of the women who have worked for him.

The bizarre case created a messy legal and professional problem for one of CBS' most valuable personalities. Commentators and bloggers quickly accused Lett-erman of hypocrisy because he has made a career of mocking politicians mercilessly, often for their sexual transgressions.

From a strictly business perspective, Letterman's revelations on Thursday's show were an immediate success: His overnight ratings were up 38 percent over the same night a week ago, the Nielsen Co. said.

QUOTABLE

"The city of Chicago and the United States of America will make the world proud."
— President Obama telling the International Olympic Committee why it should pick Chicago as the site of the 2016 Summer Games

Blaine County schools' $60-million wish list

JEERS: Compared to the seven counties that surround it, Blaine County's personal income is half-again higher.

But this is still a county with an 8.1 percent unemployment rate and struggling retail and tourism sectors.

So the Blaine County School Board is asking a lot with a proposed $59.8 million bond issue vote scheduled for Oct. 29.

The plant facilities levy — far and away the largest ever in south-central Idaho — would replace an expiring levy. The money would go to classroom, tech and energy-saving improvements, eight new classrooms at Wood River Middle School and a new maintenance center.

It also might — might — include a $47 million elementary school, if enrollments rise.

The tax bite? One hundred fifty-eight dollars a year for a $419,000 home, after the homeowner's deduction.

The philosophy behind the proposal — that it's cheaper to pay as you go than deal with long-term debt — isn't a bad one and there are elements of the package that deserve support.

But a $47.1 million grade school? That can wait.

Even in Blaine County, taxpayers are beleaguered.

CHEERS: To Weldon Beck, an old-school public official who died last week at the age of 99.

Beck, a Republican, served 34 years on the Cassia County Commission before retiring in 1994. In that time, he resisted the county giving out food stamps — preferring instead to help needy people with commodities.

"He believed in the county and believed in unifying a community for results rather than waiting for a bureaucracy to get it done," said Weldon's son, Bruce.

Would there were more like him.

JEERS: When one law enforcement officer shoots another accidentally, the public has a right to know about it.

So the Gooding County Sheriff's Office's refusal to file a formal report or ask another law enforcement agency to investigate is unacceptable.

Deputy Jeremy Smith returned to work Monday after being shot in the hand Aug. 31 by a .22-caliber Ruger Mark IV handgun at the Hagerman home of Sgt. Dave Kiger, the agency's armorer. The deputies told their boss that Kiger was cleaning the weapon when it misfired.

The incident didn't become public until this week, in part because no formal law enforcement report was filed and no other Idaho agency was asked to investigate. Sheriff Shaun Gough said he didn't see the need to file a formal report.

"It's not necessary," he said.

"I've seen it a hundred times, when somebody accidentally discharges a gun into their foot or something."

We couldn't disagree more. Police agencies routinely write reports and release information when an average citizen is shot. The fact that officers were involved should have prompted more transparency, not less.

The public pays the salaries of the deputies and it paid the cost of dealing with Smith's injury and time off from work.

Gooding County taxpayers have the right to know when their employees make costly errors. They also have the right to know if their law enforcement agencies are up to the task of keeping them safe.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Thoughts about free speech, protesters and parking places

What is freedom of speech? Is it ethical that in order for freedom of speech to be exercised someone else's rights be ignored? Does freedom of speech mean that anyone can stand in front of a business and demonstrate against a meeting taking place inside?

Well, the answer is YES, but what if the building was being simultaneously used for another activity? Despite having the right to demonstrate, was it ethical for such demonstrators to be yelling at people "not go in the building;" ignoring, even after being told about the concurrent event, that maybe the people targeted by their harassment were going in to the dance and not to the meeting?

I have been helping the Twin Falls Senior Center by promoting line and couples dance classes on Tuesdays at 6 p.m. and volunteering to promote open weekend dances for all ages.

On Sept. 20, I got the Frank McCracken and the Lost Renegade Band to perform at our Sunday dance. Concurrently, there was a meeting being held in another room of the facility, whose participants never bothered us. Although it caused demonstrators not in favor of the meeting to congregate at the Twin Falls Senior Citizen Center.

Despite having the right to demonstrate, was it ethical for such demonstrators to take the parking space so anyone that wanted to come to the dance had to park far away or decide it was not worth the longer walk or the harassment that they had to go through just to check out the dance?

Although I'm happy to live in America and proud to have served in the military I am glad we do have the right to voice our opinion. Nevertheless, I must ask again if it was ethical for such protesters to step on someone else's rights in order to exercise what they viewed as their rights.

I have been working hard to promote smoke- and alcohol-free family friendly community dances at the Twin Falls Senior Center and, with the help of Merideth Humphreys, (center) executive director; I have found someone to work with for the benefit of the community.

The Twin Falls Senior Center promotes a variety of community events, such as daily lunches and bingo, and classes, such as dance, painting and basket weaving open to all ages.

The question demonstrators should ask themselves is, "who is being hurt by this demonstration?" Is it the people who were at the meeting? Or is it the people trying to make money for the TFCS? The answer to that is the dance got hurt and the people at the meeting never cared about the demonstrators.

Wondering about the lack of female judges

I have lived in Twin Falls since August of 1975. To the best of my recollection, we have never had a female judge appointed at the Magistrate or District level.

If I'm wrong, I would like to know who the judge was. If I'm not, I would like to know why we have never had a woman appointed to the bench in Twin Falls.

Brands on the run

Please, kind consumer, would you please allow me the chance to regain your trust?

Robert Trigaux

That, in a nutshell, is what many well-known global companies must say, and do, in order to rebuild the diminished trust and value their corporate brands suffered in the past year. So say the results of the 2009 Best Global Brands ranking, an annual assessment by Interbrand, a firm that creates and manages brand value for many corporations.

Brand does have a value. The No. 1 global brand in this year's survey, Coca-Cola, is valued at nearly $69 billion, up 3 percent from 2008. Overall, amid a terrible recession this past year, the combined value of the top 100 brands fell to $1.15 trillion, down 4.6 percent. And what former big brands are nowhere to be found on this year's top 100 list? GM, Nissan, LG and Merrill Lynch, among others. Can you guess which five company brands gained the most value in the past year, and which five are among the bigger losers? Match the corporate logo with the gain or loss in value and brief description. Answers are below.

Gain/loss in brand value

- A. Up 12 percent Nobody blends design and tech better. No company depends more on its CEO. Rank: 20.
- B. Down 49 percent. Former powerhouse now buoyed by $45 billion in TARP funds. Did it really never sleep? Rank: 36.
- C. Up 14 percent. Low price for latest fashion trends, quicker than most in - getting to market. Ole! Rank: 50.

- D. Up 22 percent. Challenging the need for conventional retail stores to sell big. Kindle, anyone? Rank: 43.
- E. Down 43 percent. A credit crunch dried up demand. Now hoping its own "hog" museum will rev up sales. Rank: 73.
- F. Down 16 percent. Closings galore, hammered by McDonald's. Needs a shot of its own caffeine. Rank: 90.
- G. Up 25 percent. Innovative reputation, with new products like Chrome and Android. Rank: 7.
- H. Down 50 percent. Lousy performance, weak ethics, now trying to make nice with the IRS. Rank: 72.
- I. Up 11 percent. It's not Ikea, but this Swedish pow- erhouse in youth market opens its first Florida presence in Orlando soon. Rank: 21.

- J. Down 11 percent. Still powerful brand overseas but puffing hard against government disapproval here. Rank: 17.

THE LIGHTER SIDE OF POLITICS

Doonesbury

Mallard Fillmore

By Bruce Tinsley

By Garry Trudeau

The Constitution doesn't say many things

What this country needs — says he, in a voice quivering with indignation and age, and pounding the table with a feeble fist — is a good five-cent remedial course in civics.

Tom Teepen

The outburst is occasioned by still another letter to the editor of his local paper, following others in the same furrow and mimicking as well the cry of innumerable talk-radio callers, all of them chesty with the dare that someone, anyone, show them just where in the Constitution its says the federal government can set up any sort of health care.

Indeed, the Constitution doesn't say the government has any business in health care.

It also doesn't say the federal government can run an air-control system. The Founding Fathers, see, didn't know about airplanes. What is more, we can't know, if they had somehow anticipated airplanes, whether the Founders and Framers would have thought the government should try to keep the planes from flying into one another.

The Constitution doesn't say government can create a national park system or an agency to police the purity and safety of foods and medicines or tell parents they can't send the kids off to work when they turn 8.

Happily, the Framers didn't write a document of detailed specs. They set a framework for governance, enumerated the basic steps for achieving and maintaining that and laid all that out under a canopy of principles to guide the resulting government in its evolution over the generations.

The odd notion that the Constitution bars the government from meeting any national need the Framers didn't foresee is one of several basic misunderstandings that put more knuckle into today's political fist-fights than necessary.

Stick for a moment more with the health care imbroglio. It is held against representatives and senators supporting reform that few can say they have read the proposed legislation word for word. So? The same is true of reform opponents. Staffs read, analyze and report. Members sensibly limit their reading to summaries and their close reading to passages of particular interest to them.

Similarly, the fact that the House's reform bill is 1,016 pages long is cited as somehow invalidating per se. But there is no more a right length for a bill than there is a right length for a novel. Both should be as long as they need to be to tell the story.

No time for new taxes or exhausting 'rainy-day' funds

The 2010 Idaho Legislative session will be an extremely challenging one, yet we cannot wait until January to start solving the problems, we must begin now. Abundant and lean times routinely follow one another, and the more prosperous times can often lead to government spending beyond what the lean times can comfortably support. This is the pattern that we are in now.

Idaho's economy enjoyed rapid growth in the period from 2002 to 2007, which the current recession has mostly wiped out. The decline in the economy essentially has taken away five years of revenue growth from the state, and by most accounts the recession is a long way from being over. Revenues have declined more than 21 percent and will have an impact on education, health services and other government programs that have been a part of Idaho for many years.

Idaho has a $151 million shortfall in the current budget and Gov. Otter has taken a step in the right direction in meeting the state's constitutional requirement for a balanced budget. He has proposed holdbacks ranging from 2.5 percent to 7.5 percent and more reductions may be implemented in the coming months.

Even with the governor's announced holdbacks, the issue is far from resolved. State leaders want to see what happens to revenues in the next few months before announcing additional holdbacks. The Legislature when it convenes in January will look at additional options. Gov. Otter has been working with legislative leaders and budget staff in the effort to reduce this shortfall.

READER COMMENT
Rep. Scott Bedke

These challenges reinforce the need for continuing emphasis on Idaho's traditional conservative core principles of limited government, fiscal prudence and the careful shepherding of resources. Idaho's Constitution requires us to have a balanced budget each year, a provision that we take seriously, unlike many other states which have been less practical and are now facing deficits in the billions of dollars.

Two approaches I want to avoid are:

1. Raising taxes to compensate for lost revenue. The health of government programs is not nearly as great a concern to me as the health of households in Idaho. This is unquestionably no time for raising taxes. Nearly 10 percent of Idahoans are out of work and families and businesses are struggling. In addition, federal tax changes are looming from an aggressive and expansive federal government.

2. Depleting the state's stabilization, or "rainy-day" funds. It probably will be necessary to use some funds from the state's saving accounts to make up for lost revenue. But it would be reckless to take all the money from those accounts, as some have suggested. We do not know how long the recession will last or when state revenues will rebound.

I do not view the budgetary situation as gloom and doom. On the bright side, I think we have the outline for a conservative and responsible budget plan that forces government to live within the taxpayers' means. Better days certainly lie ahead and Idahoans will continue to be well served by their state government despite some of the toughest economic times in Idaho's history.

Scott Bedke, a Republican from Oakley, is the assistant majority leader of the Idaho House of Representatives. He has represented Cassia, Oneida, Power counties and part of Bingham County in the Legislature since 2001.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Wanted: More action, fewer speeches from President Obama

Obama agreed with desert dictators that Israel occupies? I thought they fought with some unsavory tenants for their patch in the low-rent cul-de-sac and got their right to pitch a tent.

Remember when they gathered the neighborhood bullies in a sandbox UFC match for a 10-day rumble and decisively split some lips to get their street creds and now Obama defines them as squatters. A class act from your closest ally.

Iran should shut up and be glad Israel didn't opt for more prime lots in their house shopping days or that loud mouth with the 1980s Members Only jackets might be selling bootleg copies of American movies off a donkey cart instead of denying the holocaust from the presidential palace.

Our generals in Afghanistan asked for more troops and Obama left the memo on his desk for weeks while he golfs and makes speeches. Maybe he left them hanging until the UN meetings were over so he didn't look like a tyrant trying to destroy the rock-tossing bad guys.

Fact is, our troops are getting killed in higher numbers and the commanders at ground zero are getting a D.C. answering machine. He gives regurgitated speeches on healthcare to cherry-picked audiences and repeats Sunday TV interviews quad times. If you can't balance foreign and domestic affairs, pull the troops or drop healthcare.

The world apology tours were a bust unless you consider Castro and Chavez a ringing endorsement while Moammar calls him "son."

Too many speeches and not enough desk time from this president.

South-central Idaho's unemployment rate rises

Statewide rate declines

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

For the first time in more than a year the unemployment rate in Twin Falls increased — despite a decline across the rest of the state.

The unemployment rate for the Twin Falls area increased two-tenths of a percentage point to 7 percent in September while the state unemployment rate declined one-tenth of a point to 8.8 percent during the same period.

That means about 100 workers lost their jobs in Twin Falls during September.

The Burley area reported its unemployment rate was unchanged at 6.8 percent.

Jan Roeser, regional economist with Idaho Department of Labor, said the decline in the state unemployment rate is due in large part to an increasing number of workers who are exhausting their unemployment benefits.

"We are seeing about a 100 people per week exhausting their benefits in Idaho," she said.

At the same time, south-central Idaho is in the middle of a transitional period where hundreds of workers are being laid off from seasonal jobs in agriculture and wildland firefighting.

The report does not account for layoffs at the Dell call center, which will begin in November and are expected to force about 350 workers into unemployment.

"The months ahead will be difficult because of Dell and also because we are not expecting retailers to do much hiring for the holiday season this year," Roeser said.

Idaho Department of Labor's monthly forecast showed the number of unemployed workers in the state falling by more than 1,200 from August, the largest one-month decline on record.

However, that does not indicate a recovery.

"A lot of those folks have been seeking unemployment for so long that they are discouraged and have decided to stay home, go back to school or do something else," Roeser said.

Football fans cheer before the start of an NFL game between the Dallas Cowboys and New York Giants in Arlington, Texas. Led by the Dallas Cowboys, who put 105,000-plus spectators in their new, $1.15 billion stadium on opening night, the NFL sold out 45 of the first 48 games of 2009.

Even in a bad economy, sports fans love their games

By Eddie Pells
Associated Press writer

Sports fans are familiar with pain that's supposed to end their love affair with the game. There are the labor spats between billionaire team owners and millionaire athletes. The off-field antics that land players in handcuffs. The losing seasons.

Now, the Great Recession has sapped our wealth and ushered in an era of high unemployment and consumer frugality. It's put an end to many unnecessary luxuries and made people more cautious about spending on everyday items, too.

Yet sports fans — as they always do — are still coming back to the ballpark.

The worst recession since World War II has dented but not ended America's passion for sports. Much of the hit has been to skyboxes and the most expensive seats. For the most part, fans are still opening their wallets and going to games.

Exhibit A: the new NFL season. Led by the Dallas Cowboys, who put 105,000-plus spectators in their new, $1.15 billion stadium on opening night, the league sold out 45 of the first 48 games of 2009.

Baseball? Attendance is down about 7 percent, but still nearly even with 2005, when the economy was booming.

Tennis' U.S. Open drew record crowds in New York last month.

And those who don't attend the games still look for ways to take part: CBS Sports.com reports about a 15 percent increase in fantasy football sign-ups, with many players paying $20 or more for a season's worth of interactive fun.

It's all in keeping with a trend that has endured through decades of strikes, lockouts and economic turndowns.

"What we're always finding out is that fans are going to consume sports in a passionate manner," says Wayne McDonnell, who teaches about sports and the economy at the New York University Tisch Center. "It might not be with the frequency they once did, but they are still going."

Major League Baseball, which bore the full brunt of the recession this season, can attribute at least part of its 7 percent attendance decline to both the New York Yankees and Mets moving into smaller ballparks.

Economy down, but fans pony up

Despite the rising cost of tickets, football fans continue to attend games. Through the first three weeks of this season, average attendance was higher than in 2008.

Bondholders committee, board OK CIT restructuring

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The nation's largest lender to small and midsize businesses has launched a debt restructuring effort it hopes will trim at least $5.7 billion from its balance sheet, but also is asking bondholders to approve a prepackaged reorganization plan in case it is forced to file for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection.

New York-based CIT has been devastated by the downturn in the credit markets and is attempting to restructure its operations to remain in business. CIT received $2.3 billion in federal bailout aid last fall, a $3 billion emergency loan in July from some of its largest bondholders, and bought back $1 billion in debt but

The company said late Thursday that its restructuring plan has been approved by its board and by the steering committee of its bondholders. Under terms of the deal, bondholders would exchange their current notes for a portion of five series of

Bank of America authorizes TARP dividend payment

The Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Bank of America Corp. said Friday its board authorized a $713 million dividend payment on preferred stock issued to the Treasury Department as part of the government's bank rescue program last year.

The government launched the $700 billion Troubled Asset Relief Program last fall at the peak of the credit crisis, providing hundreds of banks with capital to shore up their balance sheets, and in an attempt to thaw frozen credit markets.

Charlotte, N.C.-based Bank of America received $25 billion as part of the initial round of investments last fall. It then received an additional $20 billion in January shortly after it acquired Merrill Lynch & Co. in a heavily scrutinized deal.

In return for providing the money, the government received preferred stock in the banks and receives quarterly dividends.

The bank will pay the $713 million in dividends on Nov. 16.

Borrowers to grapple with adjustable mortgage resets

By Dina ElBoghdady
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Take a look around the corner.

Millions of adjustable-rate mortgages are going to reset in the coming years, possibly to higher interest rates, creating the prospect of a new round of foreclosures.

About 10 percent of all mortgages in this country are scheduled to adjust in the next few years, with the numbers peaking in mid- to late 2011, according to First American CoreLogic. Those loans are worth about $1 trillion, and nearly 20 percent of the borrowers who have them are already seriously behind on their monthly payments.

Many of these loans will lapse into foreclosure and disappear before they adjust, said Sam Khater, senior economist at First American CoreLogic. Others will terminate for less dramatic reasons as people sell their homes, refinance or have their mortgages modified.

"I suspect that at least a third of these (adjustable loans) won't be around by the time they are scheduled to reset," Khater said.

Traditional adjustable

loans made to prime borrowers generally carry lower rates than similar 30-year, fixed-rate mortgages written at the same time. They became popular in the 1980s, when interest rates soared and few could afford to commit to fixed-rate mortgages. They had another burst of popularity in recent years when lenders aggressively marketed them with artificially low teaser

Olympics loss is a blow to Obama

By Jennifer Loven and Julie Pace Associated Press Writers

WASHINGTON — OK, so it wasn't health care, climate change or war. Still, President Obama's high-profile failure to win the Olympics for Chicago could feed negative narratives already nipping at his heels — that he's a better talker than closer, more celebrity than statesman.

And this could hamper his efforts on the weightier issues. Despite Obama's fabled charm and powers of persuasion, his in-person plea for Chicago to host the 2016 Summer Games fell flat. It was a hugely embarrassing defeat. His adopted hometown — considered a front-runner heading into Friday's voting — didn't just lose, it took last place, shocking nearly all by getting knocked out in the first round while the remaining three contenders moved on.

The defeat could soon be a distant memory, and may never be more than a quixotic-blip trip. But if, for whatever reason, bigger losses start piling up in Obama's corner, his performance in this case could be regarded as emblematic.

Obama tried to put the best face on his trip, saying upon his return to the White House, "One of the things that I think is most valuable about sports is that you can play a great game and still not win." He said he was proud of everyone's effort.

However, almost every aspect of his involvement this week in the Olympics quest recalls a strain of criticism that has been gaining ground on him:

• He's trying to do too much at once. The line is familiar by now: It's nuts for Obama to tackle the dismal economy, the overhaul of two wars, a remaking of the U.S. health care system and climate change all in one year, and with other difficult issues on the agenda as well.

He has achievements to be proud of in less than nine months in office. But with most of the bigger issues still in the air, voters — even some in Obama's own Democratic Party — are beginning to wonder whether he's someone who tries a lot but succeeds at little, and whether he has the sense to focus on the most important things. A jaunt across the Atlantic, and an extraordinarily expensive one at that, doesn't help.

• He doesn't have what it takes to close a deal. The why-Chicago-lost story has many contributors, with Obama's last-minute flight to Copenhagen for an emotional appeal probably among the least of them. Regardless, he is now tied inexorably to Chicago's defeat, and that verdict isn't good.

Remember how Republican John McCain tried to stoke doubts about Obama during last year's presidential campaign by calling him all flash and no pan? A bit of that is in play here, too, where some perceive Obama as arrogantly relying too much on his celebrity status and not enough on the nitty-gritty work of winning votes. For instance, some IOC members resented the fact that Obama blew into Copenhagen for just five hours, jetting back down the runway toward Washington hours before the result was even announced.

Pirates hijack fishing boat

MADRID (AP) — Pirates hijacked a Spanish tuna trawler with a 36-member crew Friday in the Indian Ocean, officials said.

The ship Alakrana sent out distress signals advising of a pirate attack and since then its owner has not been able to communicate with it, said Echebaster Fleet, the firm that owns the ship.

Two planes from Luxembourg, taking part in an EU anti-piracy flotilla, flew over the ship and saw armed people aboard, said Pilar Unzu, the Basque region's fisheries and agriculture minister. Unzu said she had no indication that anyone among the crew was hurt in the hijacking. The Alakrana is based in the Basque port of Bermeo.

Close call Late score lifts Oakley past rival Raft River

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

OAKLEY — Friday night's Oakley-Raft River rivalry game proved the notion that football is a game of inches.

Trailing by six with 3:05 to play, Oakley faced a fourth-and-9. Hornet quarterback Brady Manning ran a sweep to the left sideline and when the referees brought out the chains to measure, Oakley had converted by just the nose of the football.

Three plays later, Stephan Ortiz threw a halfback pass 27 yards to Hunter Wadsworth for a touchdown, and Ortiz's two-point conversion run gave Oakley a 16-14 victory.

The No. 1-ranked Hornets avoided the upset to remain undefeated at 5-0 (4-0 Snake River Conference).

"I feel bad that anybody lost tonight because it was a good battle," said Oakley coach Tim Behunin. "It was a tough win and a true character builder for us. It was good to have your character tested and know that you have character to get it done."

Raft River dropped to 3-2, but is still very much in the hunt for a state playoff spot as the Snake River Conference receives three bids this year.

After Oakley's go-ahead score, Raft River had 2:03 remaining to put together a winning drive. But H.D. Tuckett's pass was intercepted by Wadsworth — his third of the game. His other two picks were in the second half and both were at the Hornets' goal line as Raft River was heading in to score.

"We knew we could do it. This team's got a lot of heart," said Raft River senior Rio Manning. "Nothing to hang our heads about, but it's still a heartbreaker"

Behunin admitted that he was out-coached by the dean of Snake River Conference coaches, Raft River's Randy Spaeth. The Trojans developed an offensive game plan out of a double wing set that Oakley wasn't prepared for.

"We went to (Raft River's) game last week to scout them out, and they came out tonight and ran something completely different that we weren't ready for," said Wadsworth.

Raft River also mixed up its defensive looks on every play to keep Oakley out of sync, something

Tigers tamed in Pocatello

Times-News

POCATELLO — Pocatello senior running back Wes Howard bulldozed his way over several Jerome defenders Friday at Holt Arena in Pocatello as he led the Indians to a 34-13 win over the Tigers.

The 6-foot-2, 235-pound Howard drove to the end zone on Poky's second play from scrimmage and ended up rushing for 228 yards and three scores of 36, 63 and 31 yards.

As much as Howard punished Jerome with his running, it was receiver Hanson's big receptions that turned the game Poky's way.

Jerome quarterback Cameron Stauffer connected with Billy Wight and Gus Callen during the second quarter to pull within a point of trailing the Indians, but the Tigers rarely threatened in the second half as they were shut out by the Pocatello defense.

However, two very different scenarios are on tap for today and Sunday's championship showdowns.

The battle for the Intermountain Pro Trucks Series title that has been brewing all season long is set to reach a boiling point today. Jeff Pohlman and Johnny Pierre both have their sites set on capturing their first championship, and the title is obtainable for either as Pohlman leads Pierre by just 26 points.

"Then I need to gain 27," Pierre said. "We're a lot closer than we were last year. We were pretty lucky in the last race the way things worked out."

The things worked out left Pohlman at the rear of the field for the night after some mental mistakes.

"I hate to see that happen to anybody," Pierre said of Pohlman's rough night, "but it did work in my favor and we'll take it. I am just going to go out and do the best I can and the cards are going to fall where they do. Hopefully the weather holds out and we can resolve this thing on the track. We're just one step away."

Said Pohlman: "Obviously I am a little nervous. It's not secure by any means. I screwed up last week so I am going to try and not have any kind of driver error. I really want to make a statement though, to show everyone why we got here."

"At the same time we need to be cautiously aggressive. The front of my truck will not see the back or side of another truck. If I pass anyone it will be because I got around them cleanly. I would like to qualify first, win my heat and then win the main, but I just really have to finish one point ahead of Johnny for the night."

Pohlman suffered serious burns on his foot after driving in the Super Stocks Series last Saturday but says he will be ready to go this weekend.

As for the Pepsi Late Models, Kris McKean, who already has one championship under his belt with the Budweiser Super Stocks, is perfectly poised to capture the Pepsi Late Models Series title on Sunday. McKean leads T.J. Woodhall by 120 points, an advantage that is mathematically impossible for Woodhall to overcome.

Despite a couple of setbacks, Woodhall was on top in the standings up until early August. But things took a big turn for the worse for the driver of the No. 41 car. Caught up in a wreck on the front stretch Aug. 22, Woodhall had another bad crash Sept. 19, effectively scrapping his championship hopes.

He is now just looking forward to a good finish and the ability to take his car home in one piece.

"I just hope that it goes off well without incident — because I'm tired of incidents," Woodhall said. "We've had a good car except for the luck. It's really killed our whole season. It's been disappointing for me — I know we're a lot better than that. I would like to at least go out with a win."

In addition to the championship events, MVS will host "open" format races involving several different classes both days. On Saturday, a full field of Modifieds will be featured in qualifying races along with main events for the Street Stocks and the Pony Stocks divisions. On Sunday, the Hornets will have one last go-around and the Modifieds will wrap up the weekend with a 100-lap main-event race. Additionally, the Super Stocks and Pro Trucks will run together for a special main event.

Gates open at 11 a.m. both Saturday and Sunday. Qualifying gets underway 2 p.m. and green flag racing will begin at 2:30.

Surprising Vandals host CSU

By Nicholas K. Geranios
Associated Press writer

Surprising Idaho takes a major step toward its first bowl game in a decade when the Vandals host Colorado State in a nationally televised game on Saturday (8:30 p.m., MDT, ESPNU) in Moscow.

Idaho (3-1), predicted to be among the worst teams in the nation, is off to its best start since 1994. Colorado State (3-1) will try to rebound after losing to No. 20 BYU last weekend.

Idaho coach Robb Akey, in the third year of a rebuilding program, has relied on a strong rushing attack and solid play from quarterback Nathan Enderle. The Vandals also are showing great confidence, he said.

"When adversity hits, we keep playing football right now," Akey said. "We think we can get a lot better."

This is only the fifth time Idaho and CSU have played, and first since 1992. Colorado State leads the series 3-2.

Colorado State coach Steve Fairchild is leery of playing inside the noisy Kibbie Dome. The Rams have played only three previous times in domed stadiums, in 2005 at Minnesota, in 2001 in the Superdome in New Orleans and in 1972 in the Astrodome.

"Offensively the snap count can be affected," he said. "Domes can have some noise issues, but again, we have worked our snap count and sideline count and have worked with noise."

He's more worried about the Vandals' players.

"They have size and speed on defense, and they have skill and an offensive line that rivals any we will probably see," Fairchild said. "In some ways, these guys might be the best team we are going to look at so far."

Idaho's 34-31 win at Northern Illinois last weekend prompted the Western Athletic Conference to pick Enderle as offensive player of the week. Enderle completed 18 of 23 passes, to 10 different receivers, for 270 yards and three touchdowns.

A trio of running backs helps keep the pressure off Enderle. DeMaundray Woolridge has rushed for 295 yards and an average of 7 yards per carry. Princeton McCarty has added 182 yards and an average of 5.5 yards. Deonte Jackson, a former 1,000-yard rusher, has added 110 yards.

reason the Vandals rank third in the WAC in passing and are ninth in the nation in third-down efficiency at 55.6 percent.

The game is the Vandals' first night game at home since 2005.

Colorado State is looking for a better start than it displayed against BYU, when the Rams fell behind 21-0 in the first quarter.

"It was downright embarrassing," Fairchild said.

Colorado State outscored BYU the rest of the game, but it wasn't enough. Grant Stucker completed 30 of 50 passes for 372 yards and two touchdowns for the Rams, whose six-game winning streak ended. Tyson Liggett had 11 catches for 156 yards and a touchdown.

TIGHT END HARDY OUT FOR GAME

Daniel Hardy, Idaho's starting tight end and second-leading receiver, will miss today's game versus Colorado State and could be sidelined even longer with a lacerated kidney, a source has confirmed. After Hardy missed practice earlier in the week, Vandals coach Robb Akey declined to elaborate on the junior's injury.

Hardy leads Idaho with 14 receptions, two for touchdowns, and is second on the team with 243 receiving yards. Peter Bjorvik and Kevin Small will likely see more time in passing formations with Hardy injured.

Details of how long Hardy will be out are still murky, but the injury occurred when he fell on a ball after making a catch in last Saturday's game at Northern Illinois.

Times-News correspondent Josh Wright contributed to this report.

the UC Davis attack. "They're multiple. They throw the ball," he said. "They have a couple of receivers that are very good. They keep you off balance."

Denham's favorite target is senior Chris Carter, who has 33 receptions through three games, including 18 in a loss against Montana.

The Broncos faced a similar challenge last week against Bowling Green's Freddie Barnes, who led the nation going into the game. But Barnes mustered only four catches for 24 yards against a BSU defense ranked fifth in the nation.

For the Broncos, this game is another chance to prove that they are getting better.

"It just comes back to us," Petersen said. "Are we playing the best we can? Are we practicing as hard as we can? Is our mind as sharp as it can be? That's what we ask of our guys."

Thus far, the players are responding, with talk centering on unity and focusing on the game at hand.

The players respond with the team in mind. They talk about unity and focus on the one game ahead.

"You can't get complacent," BSU cornerback Brandyn Thompson said. "You've just got to keep working hard and make big plays. It's all about progression. You can't stay the same. You have to keep getting better."

The scary thing for UC Davis is that the Broncos appear to be getting better. Mental mistakes are down, effort is up and the competition for starting roles didn't stop at the end of camp.

This week, Shea McClellin earned a start at defensive end over Jarrell Root. McClellin got it going last season, but his 2008 campaign ended on the injured list. A hamstring injury slowed him in camp. He worked hard to get back and at 100 percent, he gets the start.

"He's earned and deserved a chance to get some more reps," Petersen said. "We don't get so concerned about who's a starter and who's not. It's all about earning and getting more reps."

That's a tough thing in some positions, like middle linebacker, where energetic leader Derrell Acrey lost his spot to Daron Mackey last week. Acrey said he was told before the season it might happen at some point.

"The football game itself is a cutthroat game," Acrey said. "I was just lucky in the fact that coach (Jeff) Choate can give me a heads up on that. We knew it was a good competition and that there were going to be a lot of guys getting in."

Tonight, a lot of players will get in on an expected blowout.

RB Blount may return for Oregon

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Oregon running back LeGarrette Blount's season-long suspension for punching an opponent could be lifted if he meets certain conditions, coach Chip Kelly said.

"It's not a football decision, it's a human being decision. It's about that individual," Kelly said Friday. "And he's got a lot of things he's got to do."

Blount

Blount punched Boise State's Byron Hout in the aftermath of Oregon's 19-8 season-opening loss to the Broncos. The suspension banned him from games, but Blount was allowed to remain on scholarship and practice with the team.

Kelly said he set down academic, behavioral and football-related "ladders" that Blount must achieve for possible reinstatement, but he did not provide specifics. Academics could not be addressed earlier because classes had not started.

Blount signed an agreement outlining the requirements last week.

Should Blount meet the conditions, the earliest he could return to the team is Oregon's Nov. 7 game at Stanford — and there is no guarantee that he would be allowed back at that time, if at all.

"There's a distinct possibility he'll never play football here again," Kelly said. "But the ball is in LeGarrette's court."

If and when Blount meets the conditions, Oregon will have to appeal to the Pacific-10 Conference to reduce the original discipline.

"The power to reinstate rests with the Conference, and if and when the university decides to make such an appeal, the Conference will take the matter under advisement and make a decision," commissioner Larry Scott said in a statement.

Winless ISU faces another ranked foe in No. 17 Eastern Washington

By Mark Liptak
Times-News correspondent

POCATELLO — Things aren't looking good for the Idaho State football program. The Bengals have lost 15 of their last 16 games, including last week's 33-22 home loss to NCAA Division II team Central Washington. Still, ISU head coach John Zamberlin is trying to stay positive and rally his beleaguered team to get ready for yet another ranked opponent as Eastern Washington (3-1, 2-0 Big Sky) comes to Holt Arena for homecoming today (3:30 p.m.).

The No. 17 Eagles are the fourth consecutive ranked opponent the Bengals (0-4, 0-1) have played following Oklahoma (FBS poll), Weber State (FCS poll) and Central Washington (Division II poll).

Despite the challenging circumstances, ISU cornerback Michael Wright refuted the notion that the Bengals are already mentally defeated this fall.

"Everybody on this team is a fighter," he said. "I'm not a loser and we don't think we are regardless of the record."

E. Washington at ISU

Zamberlin, who normally coaches the linebackers, is pulling additional duty as he moves over to help coach an offensive line thinned by injuries and simply not helping to establish any type of running game.

"I'm going to stress the details to the line, to get them to react quicker and I want to see who's going to want to play. We've got to be physical with Eastern," Zamberlin said.

EWU boasts a former league MVP in quarterback Matt Nichols, who is coming close to breaking all of the school passing records, they also have a bevy of good receivers. But what sets them apart this season is running back Taiwan Jones, last week's FCS national player of the week.

"Let me tell you, he's the real deal," said Zamberlin. "He is legit and he is fast and on turf he's going to be faster."

Jones had 190 rushing yards and four touchdowns on only 15 carries in a 56-30 win over Sacramento State last week.

Despite an obvious difference in success thus far, EWU head coach Beau Baldwin vowed his team is focused on nothing but the Bengals.

"The main thing for us to focus on is Idaho State," said Baldwin. "The players did an incredible job of locking in on our goal this past week of beating Sac State. Our whole focus this week will be on Idaho State."

Like with the Central Washington game, it's a homecoming of sorts for Zamberlin, who coached at Eastern Washington from 1992-1994. Baldwin was also his assistant at Central Washington from 1997-2002.

The two will renew friendships beforehand, but when game time rolls around Idaho State has to get down to business.

"For us to compete in this one, we have got to run the football and take some of the heat off our quarterback," said Zamberlin.

THIS WEEK'S OTHER BIG GAMES

NO. 4 LSU (4-0)
AT NO. 18 GEORGIA (3-1)
1:30 P.M. (CBS)

Line: Georgia by 3.
Series record: LSU leads 14-12-1.
Last meeting: 2008, Georgia 52-38.

What's at Stake

The winner clears a big hurdle in the brutal Southeastern Conference and remains unbeaten in league play, but it's probably a bigger game for LSU. The Tigers face top-ranked Florida next week and get No. 3 Alabama late in the season. Georgia could lose and still decide its own fate in the SEC East when it faces Florida on Oct. 31.

Key Matchup

Georgia WR A.J. Green vs. LSU CB Patrick Peterson and FS Chad Jones.

NO. 7 SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA
AT NO. 24 CALIFORNIA
6 P.M. (ABC)

Line: USC by 5.
Series record: USC leads 61-30-5.
Last meeting: 2008, Southern California 17-3.

What's at Stake

The winner remains in the thick of the race for the Pac-10 title and a Rose Bowl bid. The loser could be looking at the Holiday Bowl or even worse. That'd be a huge hit for two teams that began the season with national title hopes.

Key Matchup

USC S Taylor Mays vs. Cal QB Kevin Riley. Riley threw four TD passes in the opener against Maryland but only one in three games since. He'll have to contend with the nation's best safety today.

NO. 8 OKLAHOMA (2-1)
AT NO. 17 MIAMI (2-1)
6 P.M. (ESPN)

Line: Oklahoma by 7.
Series record: Tied, 3-3.
Last meeting: 2007, Oklahoma 51-13.

What's at Stake

Oklahoma returns to the scene of last year's BCS championship game loss to Florida, looking for a third consecutive shutout following a Week 1, 14-13 loss to BYU. For Miami, coming off a loss at Virginia Tech this game is all about seeing how the program is progressing. Two years ago, the Hurricanes went to Oklahoma and got whipped, losing by 38 points.

Key Matchup

added a 35-yard touchdown run on his only carry early in the fourth quarter. "My blockers gave me a huge hole and I just hit it. That was a huge momentum boost for us, especially when we stuffed them on their first possession."

Myers was scrambling to buy time for a throw before deciding to ground it, but he left too much air under the ball and allowed Jordan to make the diving pick. It was the first of Myers' two interceptions, as he finished 11-for-25 for 101 yards and a touchdown.

"I was just playing in the flat like I'm supposed to, and he threw it where I could make the play," Jordan said.

Jordan caught touchdown passes on his only two aerial touches of the game, scores of 15 and 11 yards.

Ellis found a rhythm on one of the Bruins' timing patterns, an inside screen pass to wide receiver Brennan Lancaster. Ellis and Lancaster connected 10 times in the first half for 142 yards and a touchdown. Jordan was the only other receiver with more than one catch.

"That's just a normal play we run, and screens are good things to throw at a defense," Ellis said. "Last week I was overthrowing everyone, and I just wasn't giving our receivers a chance. This week I really wanted to work on just giving our playmakers a chance to make plays."

Ellis only really threw one ill-advised pass, and it still came out in his favor. He threw into double-coverage for Jordan's second touchdown, but the Canyon Ridge defenders whiffed on the pick and Jordan strolled into the end zone.

Twin Falls returned the favor in the second quarter when Myers found Colton

But it wasn't enough to save face for the Riverhawks (0-5, 0-3), who couldn't get back on the bus fast enough after the game. They managed three first downs in the second half, all on their first drive, and finished with 143 total yards to the 424 piled up by the Bruins, who didn't commit a turnover.

Notes: Twin Falls running back Josh Settlemoir was injured on Welker's kickoff return and did not return, and linebacker Todd Anderson hurt his knee recovering a fumble, one of Canyon Ridge's five turnovers. Anderson didn't return either and was seen on crutches after the game.

Hepworth and Twin Falls athletic director Mike Federico worked together on the project with the Canyon Ridge student council to get representatives of the armed forces involved.

"Step one was having the color guard," Staff Sgt. Gonzalez said. "Step two was finding a trophy"

Prior to the game, the Twin Falls and Canyon Ridge teams stood on their respective sidelines while Sgt. Armando Aspeytia, Spc. Jeremy Toothman (a TFHS alumnus), Pfc. Skyler Nalley (also a TFHS alumnus) and Pfc. Brandon Eddison, citizen soldiers of the Idaho Army National Guard, marched the colors to midfield where Sgt. Levi Hancock of the U.S. Army sang "The Star-Spangled Banner" as the sun set to the west. During the game, the P.A. system blared each branch's official song during time-outs and recognized those in attendance who had served.

While the Bruins made a statement about who is king of football in Twin Falls, both sides made a statement together: Thank you.

Hall leads No. 20 BYU past Utah State, 35-17

PROVO, Utah — Max Hall threw three touchdown passes and Harvey Unga ran for 118 yards and a score in No. 20 BYU's 35-17 victory over Utah State on Friday night.

The Cougars (4-1) capitalized on two critical mistakes by the Aggies deep in their own territory while winning for the 10th straight time in the state series.

Utah State (1-3) turned it over on a bad option pitch with 39 seconds left in the first half and the Cougars stopped the Aggies on fourth-and-1 early in the fourth quarter. Both plays led to quick touchdowns that gave the Cougars a safe cushion even before Hall's third TD pass gave BYU a 35-10 lead with 2:45 left in the game.

Utah State fell to 1-50 against teams ranked in the AP poll.

PITTSBURGH 35, LOUISVILLE 10
LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Bill Stull threw for 242 yards and three touchdowns to help Pittsburgh overwhelm Louisville 35-10 on Friday night.

Dorin Dickerson caught two of Stull's scoring tosses as the Panthers (4-1, 1-0 Big East) overcame a shaky first half to hand the Cardinals (1-3, 0-1) their eighth straight loss to a Football Bowl Subdivision opponent.

Freshman running back

Dion Lewis ran for 87 yards, Ray Graham added 75 yards and Pittsburgh dominated the second half to take some of the sting out of a second-half collapse at N.C. State last week.

HAWAII QB ALEXANDER TO MISS REST OF SEASON

HONOLULU — Hawaii quarterback Greg Alexander will miss the rest of the season after injuring his left knee Wednesday night in a loss at Louisiana Tech, school officials said Friday.

The 6-foot-3, 230-pound senior will have surgery Saturday to repair "major ligament damage," leaving the pass-heavy Warriors with virtually no game experience at the quarterback position.

"This is a huge loss for our football program and I'm just heartbroken," Warriors coach Greg McMackin said.

"Greg put in a great amount of hard work over the offseason and fall camp and improved his skills enough to be one of the top quarterbacks in the nation. He's a great competitor and we'll miss him immensely."

Alexander, who succeeded record-breaking quarterback Colt Brennan at Hawaii last year, had gotten off to a fast start this season, throwing for 1,433 yards, nine touchdowns with four interceptions.

Rio de Janeiro wins right to host the 2016 Olympics

COPENHAGEN (AP) — Like sweet, sultry samba music, Rio hit all the right notes.

Chicago had Barack Obama. Tokyo had $4 billion in the bank. Madrid had powerful friends. But none of that mattered. Rio de Janeiro had the enchanting story — of about 400 million sports-mad people on a giant untapped and vibrant continent yearning, hoping, that the Olympics finally might come to them.

And the International Olympic Committee was hooked. Olympians, we'll see you on Copacabana beach in 2016. Let Carnival begin.

On a chilly Danish evening of high drama, the IOC on Friday sent the games of the 31st Olympiad to Brazil's bustling, fun-loving but crime-ridden city of beaches and mountains, romance and slums.

The IOC closed its eyes to the risks — the huge projected costs of the Rio Games, the concerns about how athletes will get around and where people will sleep — to focus on the reward of lighting the Olympic cauldron in one of the last corners of the globe yet to be bathed by its light.

"It is Brazil's time," said the country's charismatic president, Luiz Inacio Lula da Silva.

Chicago was knocked out in the first round — in one of the most shocking defeats ever handed down by the committee of former Olympians, sports administrators, royals and other VIPs.

"I was shocked. I was disappointed. I couldn't believe it," said Chicago mayor Richard M. Daley, who didn't even have time to get to the voting ceremony in Copenhagen before the IOC bounced Chicago en route to picking Rio de Janeiro.

While blues legend Buddy Guy twanged "Sweet Home Chicago" in a promotional video the city played to the IOC, bad blood between the committee and its U.S. branch — they've had flare-ups over revenue sharing and lucrative broadcasting rights — proved to be a note of discord. IOC members said the slap to Chicago was more directed at the U.S. Olympic Committee than the Windy City itself.

The win was decisive: Rio beat Madrid by 66 votes to 32.

Chicago got just 18 votes in the first round, with Tokyo squeezing into the second round with 22.

Madrid was leading after the first round with 28 votes, while Rio had 26.

In the second round, Tokyo was eliminated with just 20 votes. Madrid got 29, qualifying it for the final round face-off with Rio, which by then already had a strong lead with 46 votes.

Ninth-grader leads LPGA Classic

PRATTVILLE, Ala. — Ninth-grader Alexis Thompson shot a 3-under 69 on Friday for a share of the lead with top-ranked Lorena Ochoa and three others after the second round of the Navistar LPGA Classic.

The 14-year-old Thompson, from Coral Springs, Fla., is trying to become youngest winner in LPGA Tour history. Marlene Hagge won the 1952 Sarasota Open 14 days after her 18th birthday and took the Bakersfield Open two months later, but both were 18-hole events. Paula Creamer won the 2005 Sybase Classic at 18 years, 9 months to become the youngest winner of a full tournament.

Thompson, the sister of PGA Tour player Nicholas Thompson, won the 2008 U.S. Girls' Junior and tied for 34th in July in the U.S. Women's Open. She shot a 65 on Thursday.

Ochoa (68), Laura Davies (65), Yani Tseng (63) and Giulia Sergas (65) matched Thompson at 10-under 134 on the Senator course at the Robert Trent Jones Golf Trail's Capitol Hill complex. Tseng matched the tournament record with her 63.

WATSON LEADS SENIOR PLAYERS CHAMPIONSHIP

TIMONIUM, Md. — Tom Watson shot a bogey-free 68 in windy conditions to take a two-stroke lead at the halfway point of the Senior Players Championship, the last of the Champions Tour's five major tournaments.

Watson made two birdies Friday, the second with a 50-foot putt on No. 13. Seeking his first win of the year on the Champions Tour, the 60-year-old Watson completed 36 holes at 6-under 134 on Baltimore Country Club/Five Farms' East Course.

Craig Stadler (65), Mark Wiebe (67), Bob Tway (68) Jay Haas (70) were 4 under, and Bernhard Langer (65), Loren Roberts (67) and John Cook (68) were another stroke back.

TAYLOR IN FRONT AT TURNING STONE

VERONA, N.Y. — Vaughn Taylor has shot his second straight 5-under 67 to take a one-stroke lead over three players after another cold, wet and somewhat windy day at Turning Stone Resort Championship.

Matt Kuchar (68), rookie Leif Olson (69) and Nicholas Thompson (67), whose 14-year-old sister, Alexis, was tied for the second-round lead at the Navistar LPGA Classic in Alabama, were tied for second on the Atunyote Golf Club course.

Rookie Scott Piercy (66), Fredrik Jacobson (67) and Bo Van Pelt (66) were 8 under. Van Pelt moved into contention with seven birdies on the back nine, six of them in a row, in steady late-afternoon drizzle that intensified toward dusk.

MCILROY FIRES 65 AT ALFRED DUNHILL

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland — Northern Ireland's Rory McIlroy birdied the last two holes on the Old Course at St. Andrews for a 7-under 65 and a share of the second-round lead in the Dunhill Links Championship.

The 20-year-old McIlroy made a 15-foot birdie putt at the "Road Hole" 17th, then drove the green at the 357-yard closing hole and two-putted from 40 feet.

Set to play Kingsbarns on Saturday before returning to the Old Course on Sunday, McIlroy was at 11-under 133 along with countryman Michael Hoey and Scotland's Richie Ramsay.

Close call puts Hendrick teams on defense

KANSAS CITY, Kan. (AP) — Mark Martin and Jimmie Johnson used a pair of wins to race their way to the top of the Sprint Cup standings. Fair and square. No cheating involved.

INSIDE

The complete list of qualifiers.

See Sports 3

Even so, tongues were wagging Friday at Kansas Speedway after NASCAR warned the two Hendrick Motorsports teams they came awfully close to failing post-race inspection at Dover.

"There was no room to breathe," Sprint Cup director John Darby said. "Both cars passed inspection, or we would be having a whole different conversation with this."

Johnson led Martin to a 1-2 finish on Sunday, and their Chevrolets were taken back to NASCAR's research and development center in North Carolina for further inspection. Johnson's car was taken as the race winner, while Martin's represented the random selection.

During the inspection, NASCAR found that the body of the cars came very close to exceeding allowed specifications. Hendrick officials were called in the next day to go over the measurements and NASCAR let the teams go with a warning:

"Don't put it so close that your head's in the guillotine and somebody is holding a lighter on the rope," Darby said.

Martin won his career-best seventh pole of the season with Dale Earnhardt Jr. second and Brad Keselowski third. Johnson qualified 11th for Sunday's race.

But the two Hendrick Motorsports teams are on the defense at Kansas, where rival teams openly wondered if Martin and Johnson were given an unfair pass by NASCAR so their championship chances would not be disrupted. Martin, winner of the Chase opener at New Hampshire, holds a 10-point advantage in the standings over Johnson, the three-time defending champion.

"If we were cheating, I wouldn't be standing here today, I'd be back in Charlotte," said Johnson crew chief Chad Knaus. "The cars were legal. That's the thing everybody has to understand. It's turned into a bigger issue than what it really should."

Martin crew chief Alan Gustafson argued that as a five-time winner this season, his cars have been scrutinized more than anybody else in the series. Gustafson said the No. 5 has gone back to the R&D center after all five of its wins, and again last week.

White Sox top slumping Tigers

DETROIT — Jake Peavy delayed Detroit's chance to move closer to the AL Central title, pitching the Chicago White Sox past the slumping Tigers 8-0 Friday night.

The Tigers went into the final weekend with a two-game lead over Minnesota, but got off to a bad start when Scott Podsednik hit a leadoff home run.

Detroit lost for the fourth time in six games, all while the Twins were taking a big lead against Kansas City.

TWINS 10, ROYALS 7

MINNEAPOLIS — Jeff Manship's first major league win was well-timed for the Minnesota Twins, who got a grand slam from Delmon Young and hung on for a 10-7 victory over the Kansas City Royals on Friday night that cut Detroit's AL Central lead to one game. The Twins and Tigers each have two games remaining.

ORIOLES 13, BLUE JAYS 7

BALTIMORE — The Baltimore Orioles endorsed the guaranteed return of manager Dave Trembley in grand style.

Michael Aubrey hit a two-run homer and his first career grand slam, Matt Wieters added a three-run shot, and Baltimore ended the Toronto Blue Jays' six-game winning streak.

RAYS 13, YANKEES 4

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — B.J. Upton ruined CC Sabathia's bid to become a 20-game winner, going 5 for 5 while hitting for the cycle and driving in a career-high six runs to help the Tampa Bay Rays beat the New York Yankees.

NATIONAL LEAGUE MARLINS 7, PHILLIES 2

PHILADELPHIA — Rick VandenHurk overcame Ryan Howard's early home run and the Florida Marlins once again beat the NL East champion Philadelphia Phillies, 7-2 Friday night.

DIAMONDBACKS 12, CUBS 3

CHICAGO — Eric Byrnes had his first multihomer game in more than two years and drove in five runs.

Chris Young homered and had four hits, and Rusty

Ryal drove in four runs for Arizona (69-91), which already is assured of finishing last in the NL West.

PIRATES 3, REDS 1

CINCINNATI — Rookie Daniel McCutchen pitched into the seventh inning for his first major league win and Lastings Milledge homered. Andy LaRoche drove in two runs despite twice being thrown out trying to stretch singles into doubles.

METS 7, ASTROS 1

NEW YORK — Jeff Francoeur and Daniel Murphy each hit two-run homers and David Wright had an RBI double in the first and finished with three hits for New York, which had lost four of five — including an embarrassing three-game sweep at Washington.

NATIONALS 6, BRAVES 3

ATLANTA — Rookie Ian Desmond homered, tripled and drove in three runs and the Washington Nationals kept up their strong finish to a dismal season.

BREWERS 12, CARDINALS 6

ST. LOUIS — Adam Wainwright's hope for a 20th victory unraveled along with the St. Louis bullpen and the Milwaukee Brewers rallied for a win.

Ryan Braun doubled twice to leave him one hit short of 200 and drove in the tying run before scoring the go-ahead one in the seventh inning.

Domestic violence: It's everyone's problem

Welcome to October and Domestic Violence Awareness Month.

This month is going to be devoted to domestic violence issues and what we can do to help slow this plague. To the readers out there, I ask this one simple question: What is domestic violence?

Let's see. I hear hitting, calling people names, hurting people and other answers like that. You are partially right but if you have been with me long enough, you'll know the answer I'm looking for.

The simplest and easiest answer is "control" or "power". Domestic violence is any coercive behavior that is used to control another.

Controlling another takes many forms and does not have to cause physical pain. It will always cause mental anguish. Most domestic violence starts out with the simplest phrases: "You're stupid," or "Nobody will believe you" are examples.

POLICEMAN DAN

The whole goal of a person committing domestic violence is to get the other person to do exactly what that person wants them to, through actual or assumed power. If the controlling person never has to hit, he or she won't until the feeling of control starts to slip.

Now let's talk about what domestic violence isn't. Domestic violence is not a woman's issue or somebody else's problem. It does not simply go away if the parties separate. Domestic violence is not something that can be looked at as no big problem because it is a huge problem that won't go away by simply being ignored.

The truth is that domestic violence is everyone's problem and it's up to each of us to do what we can to fix it. The catch is that it will take generations to fix the way we are taught to treat each other. We need to be ready to fight the long fight because in the end a lot of other criminal issues could be reduced as well.

The statistics are many but the few I have always carried with me to prove my point is that the majority of officers killed violently are killed responding to domestic disturbance calls.

In 2001 the FBI showed a statistic that people who had grown up in domestically violent homes killed 52 percent of the officers killed that year. It is also recognized by the group, Men Against Domestic Violence, that 50 percent to 80 percent of the men in the prison system grew up in violent homes.

You might be asking what you can do to help. The simple truth is to always be there for the ones you care about. Even if you have seen that person continually return to an abusive relationship, they still will need your help. The abuse is not why they go back — the love is — even as demented as that sounds. They love the person but hate the abuse.

Next week I will try to explain why victims stay in an abusive relationship, so stay tuned.

Officer down

Please put these officers, killed in the line of duty, and their families in your prayers. God bless them.

Sense of smell troubles elderly woman

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm an 81-year-old female in reasonably good health. I have never smoked or used alcohol; however, for the past two years, I have had problems with smells and taste to the point where I cannot eat some foods that I used to eat all the time.

Smells that bother me are fumes from the gas range when it first starts up, liquid antibacterial soaps, perfumes and fabric dryer sheets. Coffee smells especially bad, as do cucumbers and onions. Foods and drinks that cause problems are beef and chicken when cooked in a slow cooker, cooked egg whites, cooked dry beans, tuna, soft drinks and more.

My throat is always red, and there is a spot on the top of my head on the right side that pains on occasion. I have no idea if this is related to my smell and taste problem. I had an MRI on my head, allergy tests, had my sinuses checked, and still have no answers.

ASK DR. GOTT

I take Vytorin and fish oil for cholesterol, Levothyroxine for my thyroid, Nifedical for hypertension, vitamin D, zinc, selenium, a B complex, vitamin E and calcium.

DEAR READER: I commend you for leading what appears to be an exemplary lifestyle. Now let's see what we can do to tackle your ongoing problem with taste and smell.

There are several possible reasons for a loss of smell and taste. The first that comes to mind is nasal polyps blocking your sinus passages, infection, inflammation, some prescribed or over-the-counter medications, or even Alzheimer's or Parkinson's. Other medical conditions that can affect the sense of smell include diabetes, hypertension, obesity, malnutrition, multiple sclerosis, Korsakoff's psychosis and vitamin B-12 and zinc deficiencies. Infections and inflammation of the mouth (marked by swelling and redness), Bell's palsy and head injury can cause a loss of taste.

It's commonly known that, as people age, they may lose their ability to taste and smell. And some may never regain those senses. As you report, smells that were appealing once may be offensive now. Tastes you once craved may not be enjoyable and may appear metallic or unpleasant. This is, unfortunately, quite common.

The Vytorin can cause headaches and nasal congestion. This could be the cause of your occasional head pain. Nifedical can cause dyspepsia, gastroesophageal reflux and taste perversion. Levothyroxine can interact with anticoagulants. Fish oil in high doses can cause bleeding tendencies. It may increase the activity of levothyroxine, which can lead to drug-induced hyperthyroidism that, in turn, can cause increased blood pressure.

As you can see, there are plenty of possibilities that your prescription medications and vitamins and supplements may be interacting to cause your current taste and smell issues. Discuss your symptoms and medications with your physician. Be sure to mention your over-the-counter supplements, as well.

Sister RoseMary Boessen, executive director of La Posada Ministry in Twin Falls, has been chosen as the 2009 recipient of the Lumen Christi Award for her years of service to the community's poor. The award is the Catholic Church's highest honor given to a missionary.

Catholic nun helps community's poor; recognized with award

Sister RoseMary Boessen believes in prayer. She claims to have seen miracles happen because of it.

Her prayers, however, are often "on the go" because, for her, there's just too much to do, too many people to help.

"I have a walking relationship with God," she said. "I like to help people. I've always liked to help people."

Those aren't idle words.

Because of her years of service in the Diocese of Boise to help the community's poor, Boessen, a Roman Catholic nun in the Sisters of Mercy of the Americas, is the 2009 recipient of the Catholic Church Extension's Lumen Christi Award — the church's highest honor given to a missionary. A mass will be held in her honor Wednesday evening at St. Edwards the Confessor, followed by a dinner at Canyon Crest where she'll be recognized for her work.

"What is striking to me about this woman is that for 50 years she's devoted her life to helping the poor in our country," said Father Jack Wall, president of the Catholic Church Extension in Chicago. "If you follow her journey, you see that as the years go by she gets deeper and deeper into serving the poor."

Boessen was born in St. Thomas, Mo., but her life's work would eventually lead her West. After graduating with a degree in home economics, her service took her to Nebraska and Washington State before coming to Buhl, where in 1970 she was assigned as deanery coordinator for the Religious Education for the Southern Deanery at the Immaculate Conception.

Over the years her work included developing religious education programs, establishing a foster home for teenage girls, ministering to prisoners, and serving Hispanics in south-central Idaho.

Though she had served many individuals over the years, Boessen wanted to reach out to entire families, she said.

In 1993 she opened La Posada

Ministry, a nonprofit organization that assists local Hispanic families with everything from writing residency papers for immigrants to providing their families with food and clothing. La Posada is an extension of the work she helped accomplish at Guadalupe in Twin Falls, when Father Juan Garatea asked her to help him serve the growing Hispanic population.

"I couldn't speak the language, but he knew I was a good worker," Boessen said.

The rest, as they say, is history.

A room full of clothes and food items, donated by the community, fill a backroom of La Posada; another room serves as a counseling center, while part of the building is devoted to the more technical and financial aspects of service.

"I keep my sewing machine set up all the time," she said, referring to the many clothes donated by residents but which often need mending. "I like to sew, cook, iron." Just some of the things she learned from her home economic classes and which come in handy in her service today.

Boessen said she appreciates the community's support, and has seen miracles happen because of God's grace and the generosity of others. One time, she recalls, she wanted to give money to help a Hispanic man but didn't have enough to meet his needs. Almost immediately someone came into the building and donated the money.

Burley man writes book about Joseph Smith's sword

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

After 165 years, the sword Joseph Smith used during the Nauvoo Legion is today fulfilling a new mission.

At least that's what Howard Carlos Smith, of Burley, says.

Howard Smith is the author of "Keeper of the Prophet's Sword," a book he released in April but that only now is being marketed to its intended audience — history buffs and members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

The sword, Smith claims, was given to Joseph Bates Noble, a church Seventy and bodyguard to the prophet, after Joseph Smith was shot by a mob in 1844 in Carthage, Ill. It was handed down to succeeding generations of the Noble family, who today reside in Bountiful, Utah.

Smith — no relation to Joseph Smith — grew up in Bountiful across the street from the Nobles. It wasn't until 2007, however, that he first viewed the sword used by the Mormon prophet during the Nauvoo Legion, a militia group authorized by the state of Illinois and formed by Joseph Smith in 1840. As part of the state militia, the Legion was at the disposal of the governor, though it mainly was used to protect the Latter-day Saints from mob violence.

At its peak the Legion, by some estimates, had nearly 5,000 members, some of them non-Mormons. It was disbanded in 1845, but reactivated again under the direction of Brigham Young once the Latter-day Saints moved West.

Knowing its history, Smith claims the sword wields a certain power — enough so that it prompted him to write a book about it.

Smith does not consider his volume a religious book as much as a history book. Even so, he claims to have had experiences that verge on the religious.

"I felt the spirit of Joseph Smith when I slipped my hand into (the sword's) hilt," he told the Times-News. "It was powerful."

During the latter part of 2007, Smith was allowed to keep the sword in his home. "It was a choice experience," he writes in his book, "and I spent many hours studying the Legion Sword, regarding its measurements, photo taking, and

Pope meets new U.S. envoy, praises Obama

By Frances D'Emilio
Associated Press writer

VATICAN CITY — Pope Benedict XVI pledged on Friday that the U.S. Catholic church will keep working to shape American consciences on ethical questions such as abortion as he praised the United States for its "vibrant" democracy.

He told new U.S. Ambassador Miguel H. Diaz, a university theology professor who is a Roman Catholic, that he was confident the two sides would continue to enjoy "fruitful dialogue and cooperation in the promotion of human rights, and the service of justice, solidarity and peace."

Vatican teaching forbids abortion, and some Catholic bishops have threatened to withhold Communion from Catholic politicians who support legalized abortion.

President Obama is pro-choice but the Vatican welcomes many of the new U.S. administration's other initiatives and Benedict praised Obama's recent efforts at the U.N. Security Council to work toward a "goal of a world free of nuclear weapons."

Diaz, presenting his credentials to the pope in a ceremony in the Apostolic Palace, hailed Benedict for emphasizing "moral imperatives."

Benedict endorsed American Catholics efforts to be vocal about their faith's teaching on public issues.

"The church in the United States wishes to contribute to the discussion of the weighty ethical and social questions shaping America's future by proposing respectful and reasonable arguments grounded in natural law and confirmed by the perspective of faith," the pontiff said.

The U.S. church contributes through "the formation of consciences" particularly on issues regarding "the inalienable right to life from the moment of conception to natural death," Benedict said. "Conception to natural death" is a phrase the Vatican frequently uses to refer to abortion and euthanasia.

The church also needed to speak out clearly on behalf of the Book aims to help LDS writers get published

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

Thousands of religious books are published every year, hundreds in the LDS market alone. Even more books sit on their authors' shelves, unpublished.

If you're an aspiring LDS author with a manuscript or book idea waiting to break into print, you might want to check out the LDS Writer's Market Guide 2010, a handy, easy-to-use book published and distributed by Silverton-based Windriver Publishing.

"The book has been very popular," said Windriver publisher E. Keith "JB" Howick, Jr. "The LDS mar-

THE BOOK

LDS Writer's Market Guide 2010 is a little more than 200 pages long, including the index, retails for $9.95, and is published and distributed by Silverton-based Windriver Publishing. For more information, including where to purchase the book: 208-752-1836 or www.windriverpublishing.com.

ket has expanded so much over the last 10 years, with an explosion of publishers and authors trying to get into the market. We thought it made a lot of sense to do something like this."

The journey from book idea to published manuscript, whether fiction or non-fiction, is a long one.

Research and writing, formulating plots and creating characters is time-consuming and not always easy work. But that's just the beginning. Then comes editing, peer reviews and rewrites. Perhaps more research, more editing, and additional rewrites.

The journey isn't complete once you've submitted your manuscript to a house, especially if it's accepted for publication. Then it's evaluated and edited by professionals, reviewed by readers, and marketed to potential book vendors, Howick said.

The LDS Writer's Market Guide doesn't make the publishing process any easier, but it does provide writers with market insight on where to submit their manuscripts. It's a handy tool for any serious writer of LDS-themed material, and lists the publishers geared to that market. While the book won't get you published, it will point you in the right direction.

Besides distributors and book publishers — traditional publishers as well as vanity presses — the book highlights magazines, newspapers and online sites where the work of LDS writers might find a home.

As the back of the book describes, it "contains the most up-to-date information about periodicals, publishers, online magazines and resources, literary agents, foreign markets, newspapers, contests, conferences, bookstores, writing support groups, and much more."

First published in 2007, the market guide is updated every two years, Howick said. The company has plans to publish a 2012 expanded edition, which will be released in late 2010. Besides book publishers, the edition will list song and music publishers, he said.

Treasures in the sandbox

It was the Most Important Day of second grade, and Sarah was ready.

And why not? She had been looking forward to this moment since ... well, since the Most Important Day of first grade. But now she was older. Wiser. More aware. And she was anxious that this Most Important Day be properly observed.

So of course it was important that everything be just so. A week before The Big Day she asked if she could get her hair trimmed to a shorter, more mature length. And the night before she laid out her most stylin' school clothes, featuring khakis, a hot yellow shirt and these really neat shoes that were sort of like tennis shoes, only they weren't, and they had buckles and ... well, you just had to see them, that's all.

Mom helped to get the day off to a great start by making Sarah's favorite French toast. Only Sarah sort of dribbled syrup on her hot yellow shirt and stylin' khakis, so she had to run upstairs to change into her second-best outfit consisting of blue jeans and a Jonas Brothers T-shirt.

Nice, but not killer. The last-minute change put her way behind schedule, and the school bus was beginning to pull away from the curb as she rounded the corner. She dashed to catch the bus and was just reaching to pound on the door when the bus driver saw her, stopped the bus and flung open the door — right in Sarah's face. Blood dripped from her nose onto her second-best outfit, and tears streamed from her suddenly swollen eyes as the chagrined bus driver tried to comfort her.

"Maybe we should take you home, sweetheart," she said as she dried Sarah's tears.

"No!" Sarah insisted. "I'm OK. It's the Most Important Day of the Year! I can't miss it! I just can't!"

They did their best to mop the blood off of Sarah's face and clothes, and then chugged off to school. Sarah was so excited about the day that she quickly forgot all about the morning's calamities. When they got to school there were still a few minutes until classes were scheduled to start, so she went to her favorite swing on the playground and pumped herself to heights she had never before been able to achieve. At the apex of her swing she saw her best friend across the schoolyard. At precisely the wrong moment, she let go of the swing with one hand to wave. She flew out of the swing and landed — hard and awkwardly — on the playground sand, breaking a leg and spraining a wrist. As she lay in the sand, slowly drifting out of consciousness, she noticed a shiny object on the ground beside her. With her good hand she grabbed it. Then she blacked out.

After being summoned by the school nurse, Sarah's Mom rushed into the sick room to pick up her daughter. She was stunned by what she saw: her sweet little second grader with her arm in a sling, her leg in a splint, a swollen nose, a black eye and blood stains on her second-best outfit. But what really troubled her was what was on Sarah's face: a big, bright smile.

"Sarah, look at you!" her mother wailed. "You're bruised and bandaged, and you've probably ruined your second-best outfit. We're going to have to take you to the doctor and you're going to miss the Most Important Day of second grade. Why on earth are you smiling?"

"Look, Mommy!" Sarah exclaimed, extending a still-sandy palm. "I found a quarter!"

Life, like school, can be like that. It can be tough, even painful at times. But there are always treasures in the sandbox that make the challenges worth overcoming and the pain worth enduring.

On the Most Important Day, and every day.

"right to conscientious objection" by health-care workers "and indeed all citizens" on moral issues like abortion, Benedict said.

Benedict said that when he visited the United States last year he found a "vibrant democracy, committed to the service of the common good and shaped by a vision of equality and equal opportunity based on the God-given dignity and freedom of each human being."

While not commenting directly on Obama's uphill battle with the U.S. Congress to guarantee health care to all Americans, Benedict cited "basic health care" along with secure access to food and water among a spectrum of global issues "linked to the future of humanity and the promotion of human dignity."

Other similarly vital priorities in the pontiff's view were "just policies" on trade and immigration, including matters involving families.

getting a feel (of) the hilt ..."

On Thursday, Smith visited the National Book of Mormon Prophecies two-day conference in Midway, Utah, where he addressed audiences about his book and made history when, with the Noble family's permission, unveiled to the public for the first time the sword and other Mormon relics, such as a cane made from Joseph Smith's casket.

The author also will be guest speaker at two other symposiums this month, one Oct. 17 in Mesa, Ariz., the other Oct. 23-24 in St. George, Utah.

It took him two years to write his book. The first draft was a learning experience, he says, and he wound up throwing the manuscript in the trash. He began again, writing at times in the presence of the sword. He says it gave him inspiration to finish the second draft.

"I read about 30 books on Joseph Smith to get a feel for the prophet's life," he said, noting that he often slept for just four hours a night after waking with inspiration to write.

After being rejected from a traditional publisher, Smith decided to publish the book himself — locally.

The book is printed by Blip Communications in Twin Falls and distributed by Brigham Distributing in Brigham City, Utah. He's sent copies of the book to the church's First Presidency and members of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles. So far, he said, church officials have not contacted him about the sword.

The small volume contains some awkward sentences and it takes a while for the reader to learn the thrust of the story, yet it's an insightful book in many ways.

It won't be his last.

Smith is currently working on a companion volume, which will detail some of the spiritual experiences he's had with the sword and other relics once owned by the Mormon prophet.

Look for it sometime in 2011, he says.

In 2008, La Posada received about 3,000 families, according to a news release.

On Wednesday, Boessen will be recognized with the Lumen Christi Award, originally announced Aug. 6, as well as a check for $25,000. She plans to put the money back into La Posada, she said. Another $25,000 will be given to the Diocese of Boise, whose bishop, Michael Driscoll, nominated Boessen for the award.

At the end of an interview with the Times-News recently — while not missing a beat to help others — Boessen went to the reception area of her building to greet another visitor to La Posada.

If she was talking with God, like usual, it was "on the go."

Winning artists chosen in Mormon art competition

SALT LAKE CITY — The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has chosen three artists as the winners of its Visitors' Choice Awards in its international art competition.

The winning artists' works will be displayed at the church's conference center through Oct. 11.

Al Young of Orem, Utah, and Greg Olsen and Joseph Brickey of Provo each won $500 for their oil paintings.

Nearly 13,000 votes were cast by exhibit patrons over the past five months. The winning works were among 197 pieces created by Mormon artists from 36 countries.

Police investigate vandalism targeting Portland churches

PORTLAND, Ore. — Portland police are investigating a wave of vandalism that's targeting local churches, though they say it appears only some of the cases are related.

At least a dozen churches have been hit in the past month. Two people were arrested in connection with vandalism in Southwest Portland, but the crimes have continued in Southeast Portland — most recently at Waverly Heights United Church of Christ last week, when two bricks were thrown at the church, shattering a glass door.

The worse damage was at the Pilgrim Lutheran Church, which was hit twice earlier this month. Someone shoved a garden hose inside and flooded the church with 650 gallons of water, forcing the church to replace sheet rock. Police say the Southeast Portland cases could be related.

Relic of soon-to-be saint to be shown in Detroit

DETROIT — The Archdiocese of Detroit will display a relic of the unofficial patron saint of HIV and AIDS patients.

The heel of Rev. Damien de Veuster, who in 1873 began working in Hawaii with quarantined leprosy patients until dying of the disease 16 years later, will be displayed Oct. 13-14 at the Cathedral of the Most Blessed Sacrament in Detroit.

Pope Benedict XVI is expected to name Damien a saint on Oct. 11 at the Vatican.

Roman Catholics consider anything associated with a saint as a relic.

The Most Rev. Clarence Silva, bishop of Honolulu, tells The Detroit News Damien's heel was selected because it was kept out of his tomb when his body was transferred from Hawaii to Belgium in 1936.

The public is invited to attend the Detroit veneration on Oct. 13.

Greek court gives suspended sentences to rebel monks

THESSALONIKI, Greece — A court has convicted a rebel abbot and 13 of his monks of obstructing the functioning of their 1,000-year-old monastery by refusing orders to leave it.

The 14 were given one-year suspended prison sentences, court officials in Thessaloniki said last week.

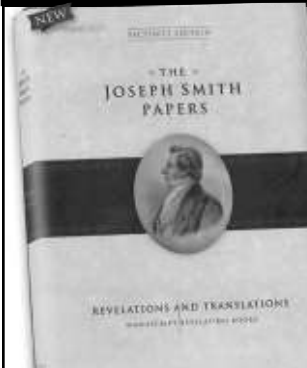

The occupants of Esphigmenou Monastery are in a bitter fight with Orthodox Christian authorities. Ecumenical Patriarch Bartholomew I, spiritual leader of the world's Orthodox Christians, has declared the rebels schismatic and ordered them out of the walled monastery on the autonomous Mount Athos peninsula in northern Greece.

The patriarch is backed by an older eviction order from Greece's top administrative court.

The monks oppose efforts to improve relations between the Orthodox Church and the Vatican.

Detroit pastors packing heat

By Corey Williams
Associated Press writer

DETROIT — The Rev. Lawrence Adams teaches his flock at the Westside Bible Church to turn the other cheek. Just in case, though, the 54-year-old retired police lieutenant also wears a handgun under his robe.

Adams is one of several Detroit clergymen who have taken to packing heat in the pulpit. They have committed their lives to a man who preached nonviolence and told followers to love their enemies. But they also say it's up to them to protect their parishioners in church.

"As a pastor, I'm referred to as a shepherd," Adams said. "Shepherds have the responsibility of watching over their flock. Do I want to hurt somebody? Absolutely not!"

Responding to a break-in at his church Sunday evening, Adams surprised a burglar carrying out a bag of loot and shot the man in the abdomen after the man swung the bag at him.

The burglar survived but the reverend said he could have been hurt or killed if he had not been armed.

Detroit had the nation's highest homicide rate last year among cities of at least 500,000 residents. The city has been losing manufacturing jobs for decades, and these days about one in four working-age residents is without a job.

The northwest Detroit neighborhood surrounding Adams' church isn't one of the city's most dangerous. But there have been many recent reports of crimes in the area, including four burglaries, three auto thefts, one armed robbery and four assaults, including one with intent to murder.

Rev. Lawrence Adams is shown outside of the Westside Bible Church in Detroit, Wednesday. Responding to a break-in at his church Sunday evening, Adams surprised a burglar carrying out a bag of loot and shot the man in the abdomen after the man swung the bag at him. The burglar survived, for which Adams is grateful, but the reverend said he could have been hurt or killed if he had not been armed.

"It's getting worse because of the economy," Adams said. "People are out of work and feel they have to provide for their families."

Prior to 2000, anyone who wanted to carry a concealed weapon in Michigan had to show a need to do so. Now, gun owners simply have to pass a stringent background check and complete eight hours of handgun training.

"I get people from all walks of life, including pastors," said Rick Ector, owner of Rick's Firearm Academy in Detroit. "But it's not anything specific to pastors. Detroit is not a very safe place."

Michigan allows pastors to decide if someone registered to carry a handgun can do so for protection inside churches.

The clergy in Detroit who arm themselves say they do so because of the high overall crime rate. But churchgoers elsewhere have been the target of violent attacks several times in recent years:

- Last year in a New Jersey church, a man fatally shot his estranged wife and a man who intervened in the attack.

- A pastor was found stabbed to death in August in an Oklahoma church.

- A Maryville, Ill., preacher was gunned down during his Sunday sermon in March.

- In December 2007, a gunman killed two people at a Christian youth mission center near Denver and two others at a megachurch in Colorado Springs.

- Near Detroit, a man was shot to death in 2003 while worshipping in a Catholic church. And an attacker fatally shot a woman and wounded a child inside another Detroit church three years ago because of a domestic dispute.

"I don't know what kind of issues people are bringing with them. You could be running from estranged husband, boyfriend," said Bishop

Charles Ellis III, pastor of the 6,500-member Greater Grace Temple in Detroit.

Ellis said he sometimes carries a gun, but never in the pulpit. His church has a "ministry of defense" for Sunday services made up of about 18 armed congregants who are off-duty law enforcement officers.

Clergy are adjusting to society, said the Rev. Kenneth J. Flowers, pastor of Greater New Mt. Moriah Baptist Church in Detroit.

"In addition to their faith, they are carrying weapons," said Flowers, who does not carry a gun. "There used to be a time when everybody respected a pastor. Even a drunk would straighten up if a preacher came by."

Many people are uncomfortable with the idea of an armed clergy, because Christ preached against violence and taught people they should love their enemies.

"But the scriptures also are clear that civil authority is part of God's plan," said Claude Wiggins, a former pastor and current assistant at the Detroit Baptist Theological Seminary.

"In our country, it says in due process that you may bear arms to protect yourself. While we should be committed to trusting God, that doesn't prevent us or command us to be totally passive," Wiggins said.

Al Meredith, pastor of the Wedgwood church in Fort Worth, said some off-duty police officers who are deacons at his church carry guns, but he's uncomfortable with the idea of an armed congregation.

"It discourages the crazies from acts of violence if they see uniforms around, but I don't want everybody bringing guns," Meredith said. "My ultimate conviction is what does the word of God say and what would Jesus do? Can you in your wildest imagination ever see Jesus packing a .38?"

A prayer app for your iPhone

The Washington Post

It was only a matter of time. There's now a prayer app for the iPhone. You can send a prayer via the app to be printed out and placed on the Western Wall in Jerusalem.

"The only iPhone app that puts you directly in touch with God," or so goes the marketing tagline from its creators' Web site.

The new $1.99 app is a variation on the twitter-a-prayer-to-Western-Wall phenomenon that got a lot of attention this summer. It was produced by Chabad.org, and developed by a Silicon Valley company called Muna. It will be interesting to see whether any big names send something via iPhone. The wall has been getting some attention lately, from Gov. Charlie Crist, R-Fla., and his miracle prayers against hurricanes to President Obama and the prying thief that filched the prayer he wrote.

Blasphemy Day

The first-ever International Blasphemy Day was held Wednesday. The organization behind it is the Center for Inquiry, a secular/atheist group that among other things explores paranormal and fringe claims.

The point of Blasphemy Day, the center said, is "not to offend the religious," although there will probably be plenty of that, but to focus attention on "the right of the individual to express their viewpoints opinions, and beliefs about all subjects — including religion!"

UI researcher who faced scrutiny plans to retire

POST FALLS (AP) — President Tim White and Gary Maki, the former director of the University of Idaho's Center for Advanced Microelectronics and Biomolecular Research who was demoted in 2007, is retiring.

Now a professor of computer and electrical engineering, the 66-year-old Maki says it is his decision to retire next week.

"This was entirely my initiative, not the university's," Maki told the Lewiston Tribune.

A 2006 audit of the center Maki directed found Maki and other employees improperly used university resources to benefit companies in which they had an interest. The audit also criticized employees for not properly tracking their work hours.

Maki was demoted in 2007 after a letter believed to have been sent by a NASA official to the university criticizing researcher Kenneth Hass appeared to have been drafted by Maki in a bid to discredit Haas.

Maki, according to school records, wrote a draft of the letter and sent it to a colleague at NASA with instructions that it be sent back to the school "close to the way it is" so he could take it to then-UI President Tim White and use it against Haas.

But Hass obtained the letter and an e-mail through Idaho's open records laws and gave the information to The Spokesman-Review newspaper.

Hass' criticism of how Maki ran the center initiated the 2006 audit.

"As far as CAMBR is concerned, the issues have all been addressed," Maki said. "The only outstanding issue may still reside in Moscow."

The main campus of the University of Idaho is located in Moscow.

The Idaho attorney general's office opened an investigation into the center but has declined to comment.

On another front, an attorney for the university, Randy Adams, said a lawsuit filed against the university by Hass and his wife, Martha, will be resolved out of court.

The couple claimed in the lawsuit that the university retaliated against them for reporting their concerns about the center.

Maki said that he will continue to do some work at the center even though he is retiring.

"I have a couple of students I want to help finish their degrees," he said.

Fay Louk Sessions

GOODING — Fay Louk Sessions was born in Iona, Idaho, on April 4, 1928, and was taken home on the wings of angels on Oct. 1, 2009. She was escorted into the loving arms of the Lord by her parents, Joe and Bertha Louk; her brothers, George and Earl Louk and Monty Spellman; and her beautiful daughter, Marianne Sessions.

Her courageous life's battle stands as an example to the loved ones she leaves behind: her daughter and son-in-law, Teresa and Bradston Miller; her grandchildren, Aimee Laseter and Daniel Miller; her great-grandchildren, Hope, Jaydon, Rylee, Skye, Storie and Talon; her brothers, Tom and Jim Louk; her sisters, Helen Scheer, Edna Wilhelm and Gnetty Pearcy; as well as many nieces and nephews.

Fay lived her life under the precipices of care, compassion and love; the love of her family; her career as a registered nurse, and the small treasures that life had to offer. Fay never met a stranger and saw the light in everyone. Her life is a testament to her favorite saying "I can't change yesterday, I don't know what's gonna happen tomorrow, but today is a good day."

No public services will be held at this time. Cremation arrangements have taken place under the direction of Demaray Funeral Service, Gooding Chapel. A private family graveside service will be held on a later date at the Iona Cemetery in Iona, Idaho.

Idaho wants to land choppers in wilderness to collar wolves

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Idaho again wants permission to land helicopters in the Frank Church River of No Return Wilderness to dart wolves and outfit them with radio collars.

The U.S. Forest Service resisted a similar request in 2006 to allow choppers into the federally protected wilderness outside of established airstrips.

That didn't stop the Idaho Department of Fish and Game from landing a helicopter in the wilderness without federal permission after darting a wolf on April 12, 2009, when it was still considered an endangered species. Federal officials labeled the landing "an incursion."

Environmental groups have argued that such landings disrupt the pristine wilderness. They also fear information from tranquilizing and collaring wolves here could lead to more-aggressive wolf killing across Idaho.

Idaho Department of Fish and Game wildlife managers insist trapping wilderness wolves on foot has been only marginally successful. By combining wolf-collaring missions with helicopter big game counts that occur every winter, they hope to more successfully track packs that roam some of the nation's most-remote territory.

"We don't even land, really. We put a toe in. It takes about 15 minutes, once you've got a dart in them," Deputy Fish and Game Director Jim Unsworth said.

"We do believe we have the legal authority" even without permission, Unsworth said Friday. "The reason we want to work with the Forest Service is, because we're partners and we'd like to do things within their process, if we can."

His latest plan calls for choppers to touch down up to 20 times in the 2.4-million-acre area to collar up to 12 wolves.

"Some information is known about wolf packs within the state of Idaho, however, extent of range, number of animals, and population dynamics between packs are not well understood, especially in wilderness," the state argues in its request to the Forest Service.

Idaho wouldn't use helicopters to kill any wolves in the wilderness, Unsworth said, adding he'd like to eventually expand landings to the 1.3-million-acre Selway-Bitterroot Wilderness on the Idaho-Montana border.

But the 1964 Wilderness Act generally prohibits mechanical transport "except as necessary to meet minimum requirements for the administration of the area." The Forest Service can authorize such transport after analyzing the impacts.

Plane stolen from Idaho found in Wash. clearcut

EVERETT, Wash. (AP) — A plane stolen from Idaho has been discovered after a hard landing in a Snohomish County clearcut, and authorities are wondering if a notorious teen burglar is responsible.

The plane was taken from the Bonners Ferry Airport on Tuesday.

It was discovered by a logger near Granite Falls on Thursday.

Boundary County, Idaho, and Snohomish County,

Wash., authorities say they don't know whether Colton Harris-Moore, an 18-year-old suspect in dozens of break-ins on Camano, Orcas and San Juan Islands as well as Point Roberts, is to blame. But they say it fits his pattern, and that he could have traveled through Canada to Idaho.

Harris Moore is also being investigated in two airplane thefts in San Juan County, one last year and one this year.

Inmate fashioned handcuff keys

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The jail inmate was found with a set of homemade handcuff keys and a lock pick inside his shoes.

Authorities said the career criminal had already arranged for a getaway car. He planned to break out from a hardened prisoner van at highway speed while traveling to court.

"That's the missing piece — we don't know his final plans to exit the vehicle," James Thompson, chief deputy U.S. marshal in Utah said Friday.

"There could have been an ambush involved that we're still looking into. This is a serious issue because prisoners are transported all the time."

Authorities foiled the escape attempt just before Douglas L. Francom, 52, was to be delivered to Salt Lake City to answer state drug charges.

Francom, who was being held on unrelated federal drug charges at the Logan jail, now faces additional charges: two counts of conspiracy to escape.

Woman found pinned under garage door dies

BOISE (AP) — A 35-year-old southwestern Idaho woman found pinned under the garage door of the Canyon County paramedic building has died.

The Caldwell Police Department says a preliminary investigation indicates Melissa Farris attempted to go under the garage door as it was closing after an ambulance left Thursday.

Police responded at about 11:30 p.m. and found Farris pinned under the door, unconscious. The woman was transported to a local hospital, where she died from her injuries.

Authorities say they do not know why Farris was attempting to enter the building and none of the employees inside were expecting her visit.

Farris' car was found parked across the street from the building.

Insomnia is putting a strain on sleep-deprived couple

DEAR ABBY: I have been with my boyfriend, "Simon," for a year and a half. He's a good person, but my problem is I suffer from insomnia and have a hard time staying asleep. It is extremely frustrating — not to mention lonely — lying in the dark. I start to think about crazy things and it scares me.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

If it gets really bad I wake Simon up, but he doesn't understand. He starts going off on me for waking him, to the point that I'm reduced to tears. Then he goes back to sleep.

overcome whatever is keeping you up, because both you and Simon need a good night's sleep to remain healthy and effective during the daytime.

What should I do? This is a disorder that is going to be with me for some time. Simon doesn't seem to care despite my numerous attempts to explain it to him. I know people hate being awakened from a sleep, but he's my significant other. Isn't he supposed to help me out?

DEAR ABBY: My fiance and I are being married in about a month. Some friends in another country (who don't speak English) offered to design and give us our rings as a wedding gift. They asked whether we wanted white or yellow gold, and we specified white or a combination of both — but not yellow by itself.

— ANXIOUS IN ANCHORAGE
DEAR ANXIOUS: Of course he should. However, because he is either unwilling or unable to offer the emotional support you need to help you through your night terrors, you are going to have to help yourself. That's why I'm recommending you talk to your physician about a referral to the nearest sleep disorder clinic. You need to understand and Yellow gold is what my parents used to wear — and they had a terrible relationship and an even worse divorce.

The rings arrived and they are beautiful, but they are yellow gold! I'm assuming something was lost in translation. I know a marriage isn't about the rings, but I had my heart set on wearing ones unlike my parents'.

I don't think anything can be done at this point, and I don't want to raise an objection about such a generous gift. Have you any words of wisdom to help me overcome my hang-ups and this silly feeling of disappointment?

— FEELING SHALLOW IN SUNNY CALIFORNIA

DEAR FEELING SHALLOW: Your parents had a rotten marriage, but their rings had nothing to do with it. We create our own symbols and attach meaning to them. Instead of allowing the gold rings to remind you of your parents' unhappiness, why not let them serve as a reminder of what's important in a marriage so you won't make the same mistakes they did? And if that doesn't work, consult a jeweler about having them plated.

DEAR ABBY: Is it rude to put salt on your food before you have even tried it? My husband was terribly offended when I blurted out, "Try it before you season it!"

— NADINE IN ONTARIO, CANADA

DEAR NADINE: Yes, it is rude. And it's interesting that your husband became so defensive, because usually it's the person who cooked the dish who is offended. The polite thing to do is to first taste the item before deciding to correct the seasoning.

IF OCTOBER 3 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Polish your skills in the year to come. This month, you possess an unbeatable combination of business savvy and inspired reasoning, so can make progress with your job or career. By December you may have to guard against getting caught up in a fantasy that might involve a romantic someone or your investments. You will succeed best by calling your own shots and making your own decisions in March and April when your innate wisdom sparkles like a diamond and many misconceptions are clarified.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Snuggle up with the love of your life for a night of pleasure. Parties and outings may be more enjoyable than you've anticipated.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Simple warmth and friendliness can be mistaken for passionate intentions under these stars. Don't thrown down a seductive gauntlet.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Turn adversaries into friends by sharing plans and being completely frank. Pertinent disclosures can turn obstacles into assets.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You may feel like a dog with a bone. Once engrossed in an activity or caught up in a fresh enthusiasm, you may find it hard to let go.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Birds and bees do it. Go ahead with some lighthearted flirtation. Passing infatuations may lead to amorous meetings behind closed doors.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Keep your money in your pocket and your heart on a leash this weekend. Stick to tried and true methods with people you already know.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Lucky you! You may experience the pleasant feeling of being the most attractive person on earth, or at least in your part of it.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A long-term companion might be wildly enthusiastic and encourage your ardor, but a new hookup might seem more attractive by night.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A rustle in your hedgerow doesn't mean you must fall head over heels in love. You are not aware of all the details about someone.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Mutual fascination can cast a spell over a casual love affair and make it seem that it has the potential for long-term commitment.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You might have stars in your eyes that help you look for love in all the right places. Others find you more attractive than usual.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Immerse yourself in romantic moments with a special someone — but don't be fooled into thinking the grass is greener elsewhere.

Ten years ago: Sony co-founder Akio Morita, the entrepreneur, engineer and savvy salesman who helped give new meaning to the words "Made in Japan," died in Tokyo at age 78.

Five years ago: National security adviser Condoleezza Rice, interviewed on ABC's "This Week" program, defended her characterization of Saddam Hussein's nuclear capabilities in the months before the Iraq invasion. Actress Janet Leigh died in Beverly Hills, Calif., at age 77. The comedy-drama series "Desperate Housewives" premiered on ABC.

One year ago: Amid dire warnings of economic disaster, a reluctant Congress abruptly reversed course and approved a historic $700 billion government bailout of the battered financial industry; President George W. Bush swiftly signed it. Thirteen years to the day after O.J. Simpson was acquitted of murdering his ex-wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman, the former football star was found guilty of robbing two sports-memorabilia dealers at gunpoint in a Las Vegas hotel room. (Simpson was later sentenced to nine to 33 years in prison.)

TODAY IN HISTORY

In 1952, Britain conducted its first atomic test as it detonated a 25-kiloton device in the Monte Bello Islands off Australia.

In 1962, astronaut Wally Schirra blasted off from Cape Canaveral, Fla., aboard the Sigma 7 on a nine-hour flight.

In 1988, Lebanese kidnappers released Indian educator Mithileshwar Singh, who'd been held captive with three Americans for more than 20 months.

In 1995, the jury in the O.J. Simpson murder trial found the former football star not guilty of the 1994 slayings of his former wife Nicole Brown Simpson and her friend Ronald Goldman. (However, Simpson was later found liable in a civil trial.)

In 2002, five people were shot to death in the Washington, D.C., area within a 14-hour period, beginning the hunt for the "Beltway Sniper." (In all, 10 people were killed; mastermind John Allen Muhammad and teenage accomplice Lee Boyd Malvo were later caught.)

THE ACES ON BRIDGE[®] Bobby Wolff

"Nature is under control but not disturbed."
 — Queen Beatrix, on opening a sea barrier

Berry Westra and Enri Leufkens of the Netherlands are the only partnership ever to have won a World Junior Championship and a Bermuda Bowl. They did very well today, first by reaching four hearts from East after the four-card major opening, and then by cooperating well in defense.

North-South's sacrifice in five diamonds looks very reasonable. Although their opponents' game could have been defeated, it was never going to be easy for South to lead the spade ace at trick one against four hearts, while five diamonds appeared to be one down at worst. However, despite the big trump fit, five diamonds doubled turned out to be very expensive.

Westra (conveniently sitting West, to make life easy for the journalists) led the heart jack and switched to a trump. Now declarer made the slightly careless play of drawing three rounds of trump, ending in dummy, instead of attacking clubs at once. It is far from obvious why this play is so dangerous; indeed, against most people he would not have been punished. The point is that it looks simple for declarer now to give up two clubs and set up dummy's suit, but when declarer led a club to his queen, Westra found the fine play of ducking! Westra hopped up with the club ace on the next club play and led a second heart. Now there were not enough entries to dummy to establish the club suit. With the spade suit similarly dead, declarer finished three down for minus 500.

ANSWER: Unfortunately, your kings may be facing shortage in your partner's hand, but it is not wise to conceal support from your partner. Raise to three clubs first; worry about future developments later.

Family counsel: LDS leadership among presenters at 'World Congress'

By Doug Fox
The Daily Herald

The institution of family received a boost in an unlikely place recently as more than 900 delegates from 63 nations convened in Amsterdam for the World Congress of Families V in Amsterdam.

Amsterdam may be well-known internationally for its lax laws in relation to the drug and sex industries, but for three days at least, the focus was on the sacred institution of family with representatives gathered from around the world as more than 100 plenary session and panel speakers discussed an array of family-related topics.

A trio of prominent representatives from The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints spoke at the Aug. 10-12 event, which, in addition to those in attendance, also drew more than 3,000 people worldwide watching the live telecast on the Internet. Elder Russell M. Nelson, a member of the church's Quorum of the Twelve Apostles, and his wife, Wendy, addressed the gathering on the final day of its conference. Sheri Dew, president and CEO of church-owned Deseret Book, also chaired one plenary session and served as the master of ceremonies at the Opening Ceremony.

"We are blessed to have many LDS leaders that have been involved with the World Congress of Families project and our organization, The Howard Center for Family, Religion and Society," said Larry D. Jacobs, managing director of the World Congress of Families, in an e-mail, noting that, among others, Elder Dallin H. Oaks has served on its board of directors and remains an honorary board member.

Jacobs said the World Congress of Families brings together people from all walks of life, who can put aside their differences to advance one common goal — promoting and strengthening the family.

"What is unique and world changing about the World Congress of Families is that we bring together Evangelical Christians, Catholics, Pentecostals, traditional Protestants, Orthodox Christians (and

On Dec. 25, 1925, in Buenos Aires, Argentina, Elder Melvin J. Ballard of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints dedicated South America for the preaching of the gospel. The following year, while speaking at a sacrament meeting in Buenos Aires, Ballard said that the church in South America was like an acorn, but that it was destined to grow into a mighty oak, eventually becoming one of the strongest areas of the church.

As the LDS Church becomes an increasingly global denomination, with significantly more than half of its 13.5 million members now located outside of the United States, an enormous amount of that growth is taking place, as Ballard in part foresaw, in Central and South America. Official church statistics show that there are now 1,158,236

Latter-day Saints, 21 missions and 12 temples in Mexico alone.

So it's perhaps not surprising that, 30 years after the publication of an LDS edition of the King James Version of the Bible, the church's first Bible to be printed in a language other than English, is in Spanish. The new Bible, with all of the features — Topical Guide, Bible Dictionary, Joseph Smith Translation excerpts, footnotes, maps — found in its English-language counterpart, arrived at LDS distribution centers earlier this month.

The Spanish Bible is not, as some might suppose, a direct translation from English to Spanish of the LDS edition of the KJV. Rather, it is based on the text of the Reina-Valera Bible, a Spanish-language Bible that, like the KJV, dates back to the 16th century.

The inscription on the title page of most Reina-Valera editions reads,

On the Web:

santabiblia.lds.org

"Ancient version of Casiodoro de Reina (1569), revised by Cipriano de Valera (1602), and subsequently compared with diverse translations, and with the texts in Hebrew and Greek?"

Elder Jay E. Jensen, a member of the presidency of the First Quorum of the Seventy, said that when church officials, at the urging of apostle Elder Boyd K. Packer, began the process of producing an LDS edition of the Bible in Spanish, they first inquired about using the 1960 Reina-Valera Bible, which the church has informally used as its Spanish Bible for the past four decades.

Joseph Smith Papers Project releases next volume

By Cody Clark
The Daily Herald

Members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, as well as those with a more academic interest in the faith and its history, have eagerly followed the ongoing Joseph Smith Papers Project, an exploration of the rich personal history of Smith.

The JSPP is a church-supervised effort to collect and publish every document originated by Smith, received or owned by him, or created under his supervision. The project is currently planned to include 32 volumes when completed.

The first Joseph Smith Papers volume was published last year and the second was released earlier this month. The initial JSPP volume was the first in a series of three that will cover Smith's personal journals. The new volume, "The Joseph Smith Papers: Revelations and Translations — Volume 1: Manuscript Revelation Books," is the first in a series of four that will cover documents created by Smith while acting in what Latter-day Saints believe was his prophetic calling to receive divine revelation and translate ancient scripture.

In the July issue of Ensign magazine, LDS Church historian Elder Marlin K. Jensen wrote, "The volumes in the series titled 'Revelations and Translations' will reproduce the earliest manuscripts of Joseph Smith's written revelations and translations, together with the official editions of these documents as they were published during his lifetime."

Getting to know Neil L. Andersen

By Cody Clark
The Daily Herald

Though his family lived in Logan, Utah, when he was born and in Colorado for a few years after that, Neil Linden Andersen mostly grew up on a dairy farm in Pocatello.

In an article published in the August issue of the Ensign magazine, Andersen said that living on a farm taught him the value of hard work.

"I milked a lot of cows and moved a lot of irrigation pipe," Andersen said. "I can remember that on Christmas morning before we opened our presents, we had cows to milk."

Working with cows provided another life lesson for Andersen when he was about 16. His father got him out of bed late at night so that the two of them could retrieve the carcass of one of right, politely refused, and the church settled on the 1909 Reina-Valera Bible, which is in the public domain.

Words and their meanings

For at least one of the hundreds of men and women involved in the translation project, the society's refusal was a welcome development. "When I was a missionary, 100 years ago, we used the Reina-Valera 1909," said James Taylor, a former professor of Spanish at Brigham Young University. (Taylor served his mission to the South American nation of Uruguay in the late 1940s and early 1950s.) So working on the new Bible was like reconnecting with an old friend.

Taylor, 79, and his wife, Deanna Taylor, 69, were contacted by Jensen in 2006 and asked to join the translation project as church service missionaries. They ended up serving for 30 months, taking on a daily commute from their home in Orem to Salt Lake City. "We'd leave at 6 in the morning on the bus to Salt Lake," James Taylor said, "and get home at 6:30 every night."

Over a period of a little more than five years, the translation teams carefully reviewed the 1909 Reina-Valera, comparing it to the most respected Greek and Hebrew texts. "We took the Reina-Valera and went through it verse by verse, word by word, period by period and comma by comma," Taylor said.

The teams also compared the Reina-Valera to other Spanish translations. All of the meticulous comparison resulted in a computerized first draft of the new LDS text. For the most part, changes were made to avoid words that have taken on negative connotations, clarify or revise antiquated expressions and increase precision.

One example, according to Jensen, concerns the Spanish word for "work." For one usage, Jensen said, the team chose the word "trabajo" over the equivalent term "obra." "In one particular country," he said, "obra has the connotation of being in labor, giving birth to a child."

Because Spanish words sometimes vary in their meaning from one country to the next, the translators relied on review groups from 10 different countries to check their work. "There's a word in Spanish that's perfectly acceptable in Spain," James Taylor said, "but if you use it in Argentina it refers to sexual relations."

'Very conservative revision'

One thing that didn't change is what's analogous to all of the "thee-ing" and "thou-ing" in the KJV. The Spanish of the Reina-Valera translation has a classical flavor that sounds to contemporary Spanish speakers much like the Early Modern English of the KJV does to contemporary English speakers.

"We tried to preserve the original Biblical flavor as long as it was understandable," James Taylor said. "People are used to that." On the whole, he said, apart from translating and including the uniquely LDS study helps (footnotes, chapter headings, Topical Guide, Bible Dictionary and so forth), "it was a very conservative revision."

As with the occasional knotty problem encountered in other translation projects, Jensen said that the First Presidency and Quorum of the Twelve would make the final determination on issues that the translation teams couldn't agree on. Jensen couldn't think of a specific example from the Spanish Bible project, but recalled a problem encountered when translating the Book of Mormon into Asian languages.

In some Asian languages, he said, words like brother or sister specify more than just a sibling relationship. There's one word for older brother and a different word for younger brother. So when the Book of Mormon team got to the prophet identified in the text of the Book of Mormon only as "the Brother of Jared," the First Presidency and Quorum of the Twelve were called on to specify his exact relationship to Jared.

"They determined, by the way, that the Brother of Jared would have been an older brother," Jensen said.

Once everyone was agreed on each new section, meticulous proofreading had to be done. In addition to supervising the flow of documents into and out of Salt Lake City, Deanna Taylor, who speaks and teaches Spanish like her husband, assisted with proofreading. "When we first started out," she said, "I thought, 'Proofreading, I can't do that.' My daughter does all of my proofreading."

Looking at page after page for things like errant commas or periods, incomplete sentences and incorrect capitalization, however, helped her develop a sharp eye. By the time the project was done, Deanna Taylor said, "I could spot an italicized period."

A long-awaited development

There's no knowing the level of anticipation for the new Bible among all Spanish-speaking Latter-day Saints, and Jensen said that the Church hadn't widely publicized the translation project before announcing its completion earlier this year. While the project was ongoing, he said, "we didn't promote it or talk a lot about it." On the other hand, Jensen said, "those who came to know about it would express great enthusiasm and excitement for it."

Alejandro Gomez, a marketing specialist who lives in Lindon, said that many Spanish speakers have been waiting for an LDS edition of the Bible since the church published its "triple combination," a bound volume containing the Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants and Pearl of Great Price, in Spanish in the early 1980s.

Gomez, 46, said that he remembers being a missionary in northern Mexico and filling his Bible with notations copied from the KJV Bibles of his American companions. "I still have that Bible," he said. When he heard about the new Spanish Bible, one of the first things to come to mind was his old missionary Bible: "I thought to myself, 'I never got to finish with this.'"

For Sonia Ochoa, who lives in Orem and is director of distance studies for Midwives College of Utah, the new Bible brings back memories of teaching LDS seminary classes in Mexico. "I was a seminary teacher for seven years," she said. Whenever she needed to teach cross-references between the Bible and Book of Mormon, she said, "I had to actually read the Bible in English."

The new Bible received an initial print run of 800,000 copies and is available in both hardcover and softcover bindings. In a letter to Spanish-language wards, the First Presidency said, "We encourage each of you to obtain a personal copy of this new edition and to use it in your regular personal and family study and at Church."

Gomez said he's not sure whether the Spanish Bible will have an immediate impact on missionary work. "I know that it will be a great tool for the conversion of those who are already members, for the strengthening of their testimonies," he said. On the other hand, however, "the perception is going to be out there that this is a bible that favors our faith."

Such problems seem likely to arise, but Jensen said that the new Bible also demonstrates an important, sometimes overlooked facet of LDS faith. "We love and revere the Bible," he said. Now the worldwide Spanish-language community has one more reason to believe that.

the family's steers that had wandered onto a road and been hit by a truck. After dragging the dead animal from the road, they butchered it for the meat that could still be recovered.

Describing the experience for a 1995 Ensign article, Andersen wrote that, "We didn't finish until about 3 in the morning. The smell, the slime, the dirt, and the filth clung to me."

The relief of removing his dirty clothes and washing himself once the job had been completed left a lasting impression. When he went back to bed, Andersen said, "I was exhausted, but the feelings of tiredness did not approach the sensational satisfaction of being washed and clean." The exhilaration of being physically clean, he said, became a memorable metaphor for spiritual cleanliness.

After graduating from Highland High School and attending a year of classes at Brigham Young University, Andersen accepted the call to be a missionary in France, where he would later return to serve as a mission president.

After completing his mission, Andersen returned to BYU, where he met Kathy Sue Williams. They were married in the Salt Lake Temple on March 20, 1975, just prior to his graduation. The newlyweds spent the next two years in Massachusetts, where Andersen completed a master's degree in business administration at Harvard University.

After graduating, Andersen moved to Tampa, Fla., and applied his business administration training in the fields of advertising, real estate development and health care. When Andersen was called to serve as president of the France Bordeaux Mission in 1989, he owned a successful advertising agency. At the time, Andersen was unsure how, or even whether, his business affairs could be left in the hands of others while he was away.

Trusting that the situation could be handled somehow, Andersen began preparing to move his family overseas. A few weeks later, he received an unsolicited offer to purchase the business. "It was clearly the Lord's hand at work in a miraculous way," Andersen said.

Shortly after returning from France, he accepted a call to full-time church service as a general authority in 1993. He was called to the Presidency of the Seventy in 2005, and has had a number of church responsibilities, including serving as executive director of the Church Audiovisual Department, where he managed the development of the film "The Testaments: Of One Fold and One Shepherd" and supervised the initial launch of the missionary Web site, Mormon.org.

Andersen is the second apostle to be called during the tenure of President Thomas S. Monson. He was called to fill the vacancy left by the death of Elder Joseph B. Wirthlin.

Mormon Tabernacle Choir marks 80 years of 'Music and the Spoken Word'

By Natalie Hollingshead
Daily Herald correspondent

For the past eight decades, millions of viewers have found inspiration in the Mormon Tabernacle Choir's weekly network broadcast, "Music and the Spoken Word." You could say the half-hour long program is music to their ears.

On July 15, the venerable choir celebrated the 80th anniversary of the program, regarded as the world's longest continuing live radio network broadcast. It is carried on more than 2,000 radio and television stations and cable systems.

"It is just such a phenomenal feat when you consider that they started July 15, 1929, and have broadcast every week since. In good times, in bad times, in war, in peace, there has been a broadcast that emanated from Temple Square in Salt Lake City, with the choir sending a message of inspiration over the airwaves," said Scott Barrick, general manager of the Mormon Tabernacle Choir. "It is just phenomenal to think about doing anything that consistently."

The 360-person choir marked the occasion with several events filled with music and the spoken word. On the mid-July day on which the first program was aired 80 years ago, the Choir and Orchestra at Temple Square performed at the Dee Events Center in Ogden. On July 17, the annual Pioneer Day Commemoration Concert — held in honor of the arrival of Mormon pioneers to the state in 1847 — lauded the pioneering broadcasting efforts of "Music and the Spoken Word." The Choir and Orchestra performed pieces from their recently commenced tour, interspersed with video and narration about the acclaimed broadcast through the years. That concert was broadcast via satellite to LDS meeting-houses and private homes throughout the world. Finally, on the Sunday following the 80th anniversary, a special ceremony was held in the LDS Conference Center in Salt Lake City. Speakers included Thomas S. Monson, president of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Choir President Mac Christensen and Music Director Mack Wilberg. A handful of former music directors and organists were also in attendance.

"Being a part of something like 'Music and the Spoken Word' you are really aware of the people that came before you," said Kevin Brown, 30, a choir member and Brigham Young University graduate student from Kaysville. "It's amazing that it has been going on so long. We live in a world that is so changing and transient, but this is something that is reliable. You always know that it will be there for you."

At the final event, President Monson noted that he was not quite 2 years old when "Music and the Spoken Word" aired for the first time. As such, President Monson said he could not remember a time when the program has not been part of his life.

"Over the years, this weekly program of beautiful music and uplifting sermons has inspired countless individuals throughout the world," President Monson said. "I, myself, have had many experiences with those whose lives have been changed as a result of the Sunday morning broadcasts."

The anniversary concluded as it does each week with the Choir singing "God Be With You Till We Meet Again."

The basic format of the program has remained unchanged over the years. The broadcast begins with a welcome from the commentator — Lloyd D. Newell has been the voice of the choir since 1990. Newell's message is interspersed with four or five songs performed by the choir and one or two organ solos.

"Whenever we've talked to people they've said, 'Don't change the format,'" Barrick said. "It is a source of comfort and inspiration, so we don't fiddle with it."

Oquirrh Mountain temple dedication takes more than building materials

The Daily Herald

It took more than cement, mortar and steel to build the Oquirrh Mountain Utah Temple. In fact, it took a lot more.

According to The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints' Web site, LDS.org, the Oquirrh Mountain temple required: 17,096 exterior stones, 47 miles of linear wood, 4,668 cubic yards of concrete, 407 tons of structural steel, 80 miles of electrical wiring, and 184 individual doors, not to mention the morning prayer offered each morning before construction.

According to a news release by LDS.org, the teams of engineers, construction workers and temple missionaries met each morning to inventory the day's tasks and assignments. The meeting concluded with a prayer.

But while prayer may have helped in the construction process, it certainly didn't appease the elements.

In June, a lightning bolt struck the Angel Moroni statue, blackening his face, arm and trumpet. A replacement angel was installed 10 days before dedication services began.

Open to the public for two months before its dedication, the Oquirrh Mountain temple drew nearly 600,000 visitors for an average of 12,000 people per day, excluding holidays and Sundays.

Jews, as well as Mormons, who believe these same principles about the family, and we empower people, organizations and governments to take action to support the family," Jacobs said. "Even moderate Muslims — all of the Abrahamic faiths, if you will — take part in our World Congress of Families...."

"As WCF founder and international secretary Allan Carlson is fond of saying, World Congress isn't an ecumenical movement, nor is it sectarian. Rather, it is a coalition of believers who span the religious spectrum. While separated by doctrine, we are united in our defense of the family."

Jacobs noted that the LDS Church's 1995 statement, titled "The Family: A Proclamation to the World," fits in well with his organization's beliefs and, indeed, is quite similar in nature to the WCF Declaration adopted in Amsterdam.

The WCF Declaration, among other things, defines the natural family as the marriage between a man and a woman, says that the future of nations rests on families that are spiritually grounded, and maintains that the natural family can be a solution to poverty.

The one-man, one-woman definition of marriage has been a lightning rod of controversy for the LDS Church as it has received both credit and backlash for its public support of California's Proposition 8 last November, which banned gay marriage in that state.

In his talk, Elder Nelson spoke on the theme of "The Family: The Hope for the Future of Nations."

"That topic is timely," Elder Nelson said in his discourse. "On all sides, the family is under attack. Many wonder if the institution is no longer needed. Our response is certain. If there is any hope for the future of nations, that hope resides in the family. Our children are our wealth; our children are our strength; our children are indeed our future!"

Elder Nelson said that any attempt to expand the definition of marriage outside the traditional family "weakens the institution of marriage as God defined it." "Marriage is not simply a contract between individuals; it affects all of society," he said. "For that reason, governments have long recognized the family as the fundamental unit of society and have endorsed and encouraged traditional marriage through legal recognitions, protections and benefits."

Elder Nelson also talked about his own family circle, and those of his children, noting heartbreaks and setbacks, including death and divorce, which were later resolved through further family ties. One particularly poignant example was when he mentioned the death of one of his daughters.

"I know what it is to lose a daughter from cancer and to walk from her funeral carrying her two young sons in my arms," he said. "I have also felt the joy when our son-in-law married a wonderful woman who once again completed their family circle."

Jacobs said Elder Nelson's talk was well received.

"Many of those in attendance told me it was one of the best of the Congress — a balance between faith, personal stories and examples, and intellectual arguments to support the natural family," Jacobs said. "It provided hope to people for the future of our world and families."

The talk also resonated with Don Feder, communications director for the World Congress of Families.

"I liked the personal anecdotes — the way he spoke of tragedies bringing his family closer together," Feder said. "We heard from many experts with all sorts of sociological data. It was good to hear someone speak from the heart. When he spoke of walking away from a daughter's funeral carrying two young grandchildren — I don't see how anyone could fail to be moved."

The World Congress of Families is scheduled to reconvene in 2011 at a yet-to-be-determined location.

Save and storage: 10 simple tips for stretching your food storage dollar

The Daily Herald

LDS Church leaders have repeatedly counseled members to store a reserve of food and water for times of need. There's a lot of peace that comes from having extra supplies, but when times are tight it may be hard to pay for today's groceries, let alone tomorrow's. The good news is you don't have to spend a fortune on stored food, and you don't have to buy it all at once. Below are several suggestions for saving money on food storage.

Follow tips from the Daily Herald's Savvy Shopper, Amy, to bolster your food storage.

Get organized

Take stock of your current food storage conditions. Determine if the items you canned yourself 20 years ago at the family reunion and have religiously packed around on four subsequent moves are really still edible. Figure out the needs of your family and store those things you know your family will eat. Set aside a monthly budget toward buying food storage items. Start now. You don't have to build up your storage overnight. It's a gradual process.

Buy at the lowest price

You don't want to pay regular price for one can of food, let alone 50. Shop caselot sales and warehouses for bulk products such as canned food. And use the Herald's Savvy Shopper (www.savvyshopperdeals.com) or another couponing resource to know when to stock up on everything from rice to canned beans, and from salad dressing to sports drinks.

Store it properly

Most food storage items should be stored in sealed containers in a cool, dry place. Food storage staples left in bags are highly susceptible to moisture, insects and rodents. It doesn't do any good to store food long-term if it goes to waste and is unusable by the time you actually need it.

Consider the big picture

Wheat is one of the best, long-lasting food storage products. But to use it, you'll need a wheat grinder of some kind, which can run upwards of $200 for the electric version. (You'll want a hand grinder, too, in the event you can't access electricity.) For a cheaper option, some blenders are also capable of grinding wheat. However, if you make bread weekly, you'll make the money back for your grinder quickly. If you have a garden and have enough produce to can, it may be worth the money to buy home canning products — available in a variety of prices — so that you are able to can your own food supplies.

Maintain a garden

Your own garden will not only supply you with fresh produce throughout the growing season, but it also will allow you to can and store the surplus. Get the most out of your garden by planting the items that your family will actually look forward to using. Spinach and Swiss chard may grow great in this climate, for example, but if only one person in your family eats them, it does no good to have rows of the leafy vegetables rotting in the sun. A well-organized garden is really just cheap food storage in your own backyard. The Utah State University Extension (extension.usu.edu) is a great resource for gardening and agriculture.

Store water

While it is great to have a year's supply of staples like wheat, beans and rice, it won't do you much good if you don't have water available. Build up your initial water storage by buying bottled water containers in bulk — like those sold at Costco, for example. Invest in some 55-gallon containers for longer-term storage. Also, it would be wise to purchase a water filter, so you can convert whatever water may be available in an emergency into usable drinking water. Remember, in an emergency you'll not only need water for drinking and cooking, but also for washing. The 55-gallon water barrels can be purchased at stores like Macey's, Walmart and Emergency Essentials, among others.

Plan your menus

Focus your storage efforts on buying food that your family will eat. Try out recipes now that use the items in your food storage. It's better to learn now what recipes are a hit with everyone than at a time when you have more limited options. Also, build up a supply of items that add variety to your staples. It may be important to have main items like wheat, milk, rice and beans, but don't forget things like baking soda, baking powder, bouillon, cooking oil and shortening, to name a few.

Breadmaking classes

If you don't know how to make bread, it's time to learn. Wheat is one of the best, longest-lasting food storage products, but you'll need to know what to do with it. An excellent food storage and breadmaking resource is the local company Pantry Secrets. Visit their Web site at www.pantrysecrets.net.

Rotate your supply

Build up an initial supply of three months worth of items that you use on a daily basis. Then augment your storage with longer-term items. Once you have built up a three-month supply, be sure to rotate through your items — using the items that have been on your shelf the longest. This will help prevent the needless waste of food that is stored then forgotten — only to be retrieved from the shelf after its expiration date.
