Kids gain valuable experience at Fish and Game youth hunt

By Nate Poppino • Times-News writer

WENDELL — The boys gave it their best effort.

Bryan Kenworthy and his dog, Duchess, did the best they could to find some pheasants. Jerome Hansen, Idaho Department of Fish and Game regional supervisor, offered advice on areas to search.

But after more than an hour and a half, Clinton Newlan and Andrew Merkle still didn't have their birds.

Hopefully, they realized a hunt is about more than just getting their prey, said Josh Royse, the Fish and Game conservation officer who organized Saturday's youth hunt.

"It's not about the harvest, it's about the experience," Royse said.

The youth pheasant hunt, the first one put on by the agency in at least 10 years, brought nearly 30 kids to the Niagara Springs Wildlife Management Area on a search for some of 100 farm-raised birds released the day before. A number of Fish and Game staff and about 20 other volunteers walked the youth through clay-target shooting, several educational presentations and the hunt itself.

Some volunteers contributed dogs, including Kenworthy, who by day serves as project leader at the Hagerman National Fish Hatchery. Others simply did their best to help the young hunters navigate the area in search of the birds.

Most of Saturday's equipment was donated, from the hunter-orange hats adorning most heads to the clay targets and even the hot dogs grilled up for lunch. For safety reasons, the kids walked with unloaded guns; their adult mentors decided when to load them.

"That's part of the experience. We're learning to hunt around other hunters," Royse told the crowd before the hunt began.

Twin Falls reviews proposed animal-control contract with county, studies doing job itself

By Nate Poppino

Twin Falls County officials have slightly lowered the amount they're asking the city of Twin Falls to pay for animal-control services.

But the price tag attached to the work — more than $100,000 — has still prompted the city to look into doing the work itself.

Animal control has been handled by the county sheriff since 2000 and the agreement between the two entities is supposed to be renewed annually. But both went the entire previous fiscal year without a signed contract, partly because Mayor Lance Clow was concerned the city might be paying too much. The 2008-09 fiscal year ended on Wednesday.

As part of that annual renewal, Twin Falls County commissioners approved the new offer on Tuesday by a Between 300 and 400 refugees are expected to come into Twin Falls during the next 12 months through the College of Southern Idaho Refugee Center.

The center learned of the estimate following President Obama's signature last week that authorizes 80,000 refugees to enter the United States in fiscal year 2010, which lasts through Sept. 30, 2010.

The estimate mirrors the past fiscal year's count for refugees arriving in Twin Falls, which was 365, said Ron Black, director of the refugee center.

The refugees will come from countries such as Bhutan, Burma and Iraq.

Because of a higher number of arrivals in the last fiscal year, the center has about $200,000 in additional federal funding that will go toward efforts to help prepare the refugees for their new life — which includes a tough job market in a down economy.

The center plans to expand its English as a

Participants in a federal program that provides food and milk to mothers and young children can now receive fresh fruit, vegetables and whole grains through the nutrition program.

The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare announced this week that the options were added to the Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants and Children (WIC). Those choices are in addition to already existing WIC foods that include milk, cheese, eggs and cereal.

More than $6 billion in U.S. aid never reached Pakistan army

Only $500 million ever made it to the military

By Kathy Gannon
Associated Press writer

ISLAMABAD, Pakistan — The United States has long suspected that much of the billions of dollars it has sent Pakistan to battle militants has been diverted to the domestic economy and other causes, such as fighting India.

Now the scope and longevity of the misuse is becoming clear: Between 2002 and 2008, while al-Qaida regrouped, only $500 million of the $6.6 billion in American aid actually made it to the Pakistani military, two army generals tell The Associated Press.

The account of the generals, who asked to remain anonymous because military rules forbid them from speaking publicly, was backed up by other retired and active generals, former bureaucrats and government ministers.

At the time of the siphoning, Pervez Musharraf, a Washington ally, served as both chief of staff and president, making it easier to divert money intended for the military to bolster his start of the regular pheasant season in south-central and southwest Idaho. Only a few hunters managed to get a pheasant or two. Clinton, 12, of Wendell, seemed a bit bummed about his luck, though he put on a good face.

"Oh well, I'll come back later," he said.

Others, such as Iyanna Weatherly, 12, of Bellevue, said they enjoyed the excuse to hike around the Snake River Canyon for the day. Those hunters who did shoot the birds proudly showed off their catches in the crowded Niagara Springs parking lot.

"My dog got one by herself last year," said 12-year-old Ryan Loveless of Buhl, explaining that this year was his turn.

Royse was inspired to organize the hunt because his own first hunt was a similar youth hunt in Oregon. Youth programs are vital, he said, to reversing the nationwide decline in hunters.

"If we get them out and we get them a positive experience ... we know that we've got them pretty well hooked for life," he said of the kids.

second language program and offer more hours of instruction and additional computer lab time, Black said. Currently, the refugees have two hours a day, and the center is looking at expanding that to three or three and a half hours.

"Our big focus this year coming up is increasing their English skills and increasing their exposure to the workplace," Black said. "So hopefully when they go to an employer, they can talk to them and they have a sense of what the employer wants."

Black said he is also in the early stages of initial discussions that could lead to training opportunities at CSI's campus.

The goal is to identify a common thread of skills that are needed in a range of jobs and develop vocational training with that in mind, Black said.

"Refugees coming in are competing with a larger number of Americans with a lot more experience," Black said.

"We are excited about the change because we really think this will give people additional opportunities to eat healthy and get the nutrition that's really important in those early years of life," said Emily Simnitt, spokeswoman for the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, which administers the federal program.

While the options were added, the funding amount for WIC stays the same for recipients.

Participants in the program have increased about 10 percent between 2008 and 2009, Simnitt said. About 46,000 Idahoans use the program each month, she said.

Participants must meet income guidelines to qualify.

Blaine School Dist. schedules meetings for levy election

First meeting today

By Karen Bossick

Times-News correspondent

The Blaine County School District will be holding several community meetings to present information about its upcoming Plant Facilities Levy Election.

Voters are being asked to approve a 10-year, $59 million levy to be used for the following improvements including but not limited to: technology upgrades, middle school expansion, remodeling of the Community Campus auditorium, Carey School refurbishments and construction of a new elementary school.

Under the current proposal, property taxes would decrease slightly from what homeowners are paying on the current plant facility levy passed in 2000, said School Finance Director

Mike Chatterton.

The election will be held from noon to 9 p.m. Oct. 29 at Hemingway School in Ketchum, Hailey and Woodside schools in Hailey, Bellevue Elementary School and Carey Elementary School.

Absentee voting may be done at the District Office, 118 W. Bullion St., in Hailey through Oct. 28.

Informational meetings will be held from 6 to 7 p.m. today at Hemingway Elementary; 6 to 7 p.m. Tuesday at Wood River Middle School, and from 5:45 to 6:45 p.m. Friday, Oct. 16, at Carey School.

In addition, there will be a session on the environmental impact of the proposed levy at 6 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 15 at the Community Campus in Hailey.

vote of 2-0, with Commissioner Tom Mikesell absent. The new version of the contract weighs in at $114,000, a full $6,000 less than what the city paid during the 2008-09 fiscal year.

Sheriff's office representatives told commissioners they had weeded out some redundant costs, such as vehicles, ballistic vests and other items that already exist.

"We've justified all the costs," said Sheriff Tom Carter.

Carter told the Times-News after the meeting that both the county and city are comfortable with the new proposal. But the city still hasn't quite weighed in, and is researching what it would cost to provide similar services itself.

Assistant City Manager Travis Rothweiler said Friday that staff continues to evaluate both items, with a presentation to the City Council planned in the next few weeks. The existing contract, he said, carries a year-to-year extension clause that automatically kicks in if the parties take no action.

"It's our view that the service is still in effect,"

Rothweiler said.

Both Rothweiler and Twin Falls Police Lt. Craig Stotts, who is reviewing the costs of the city taking the service on, said the county's offer appears to be fair so far. But given the still-sizeable price increase, they said it's still worth studying their options. Stotts said he hopes to prepare his staff report for either the Oct. 12 or Oct. 19 City Council meeting.

According to the figures being compiled by Stotts, the city was first charged $17,000 a year when the arrangement began. That's gone up every few years: to $30,000 a year around 2003 or 2004, $50,000 a year in 2006 and 2007, and finally the jump to $120,000 last year. That last increase came after former Sheriff Wayne Tousley and county commissioners reviewed what the work cost the county, said sheriff's spokeswoman Lori Stewart.

"It was a losing proposition for county taxpayers," she said.

Despite questions about the price, city officials have made it clear they're happy with the level of service the county offers. The city today makes up 80 percent of the service's calls, Stotts said.

Pakistan

like subsidies, which is why everything looked hunky-dory. The military was financing the war on terror out of its own budget."

Generals and ministers say the diversion of the money hurt the military in very real ways:

● Helicopters critical to the battle in rugged border regions were not available. At one point in 2007, more than 200 soldiers were trapped by insurgents in the tribal regions without a helicopter lift to rescue them.

● The limited night vision equipment given to the army was taken away every three months for inventory and returned three weeks later.

● Equipment was broken, and training was lacking. It was not until 2007 that money was given to the Frontier Corps, the front-line force, for training.

The details on misuse of American aid come as Washington again promises Pakistan money. Legislation to triple general aid to Pakistan cleared Congress last week. The legislation also authorizes "such sums as are necessary" for military assistance to Pakistan, upon several conditions. The conditions include certification that Pakistan is cooperating in stopping the proliferation of nuclear weapons, that Pakistan is making a sustained commitment to combating terrorist groups and that Pakistan security forces are not subverting the country's political or judicial processes.

The U.S. is also insisting on more accountability for reimbursing money spent. For example, Pakistan is still waiting for $1.7 billion for which it has billed the United States under a Coalition Support Fund to reimburse allies for money spent on the war on terror.

But the U.S. still can't follow what happens to the money it does out.

"We don't have a mechanism for tracking the money after we have given it to them," Pentagon spokesman Lt. Col. Mark Wright said in a telephone interview.

Musharraf's spokesman, retired Gen. Rashid Quereshi, flatly denied that his former boss had short-changed the army. He did not address the specific charges. "He has answered these questions. He has answered all the questions," the spokesman said. Musharraf took power in a bloodless coup in 1999 and resigned in August 2008.

The misuse of funding helps to explain how al-Qaida, dismantled in Afghanistan in 2001, was able to regroup, grow and take on the weak Pakistani army. Even today, the army complains of inadequate equipment to battle Taliban entrenched in tribal regions.

For its part, Washington did not ask many questions of a leader, Musharraf, whom it considered an ally, according to a U.S. Government Accountability Office report released last year.

Pakistan has received more money from the fund than any other nation. It is also the least expensive war front. The amount the U.S. spends per soldier per month is just $928, compared with $76,870 in Afghanistan and $85,640 in Iraq.

Yet by 2008, the United States had provided Pakistan with $8.6 billion in military money, and more than $12 billion in all.

Brett Maselter looks over the damage Sunday caused by a tree branch laden with snow that crashed onto the roof of his 2003 GMC pickup at the corner of 17th Street and Burton Avenue in Burley after the season's first snowfall.

Snow sweeps through M.V.

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

Winter weather advisories swept through the Magic Valley on Sunday as the season's first snowfall kept police fairly busy with slide-offs and crashes on the area's slick roadways.

More snow is possible today, though forecasters say warmer weather could come by the middle or end of the week when temperatures may reach a comfortable 60 degrees. Temperatures in the high 40s are forecast for today with more precipitation possible.

The fall's first snowfall Sunday dropped an estimated 6 inches near Castleford, and several inches in Twin Falls, said National Weather Service Senior Meteorologist Les Colin in Boise.

On the Web

Check road conditions:
<http://511.idaho.gov>

Colin said Sunday that it is not unusual for south-central Idaho to see snowfall in early October.

"It's the first storm of the season, usually you get a cold storm like this in October," said Colin. "Every fall, you get one of these in (the Magic Valley)."

The first day of fall was Sept. 22.

"I think there's been more snow than that in late September on a few occasions," said Colin about Sunday's weather.

The season's first snow kept police fairly busy on the roadways.

Idaho State Police Master Corp. John Gibbs said Sunday afternoon there was a handful of weather-related slide-offs during the day in the Magic Valley. He noted that one interstate crash involved a semi truck that jackknifed in Cassia County, but there were no serious injuries.

Gibbs said with more precipitation expected overnight and today, roadways could continue to challenge motorists.

In Twin Falls County, sheriff's deputies also handled several slide-offs on Sunday morning and afternoon, said Sgt. Scott Bishop.

"If it starts to freeze, call load does go up," said Bishop.

Forecasters are expecting drier weather Tuesday through the end of the week.

Mormons told to exemplify Christian values daily

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mormons should dedicate their lives to serving others and avoid becoming caught up in the details of daily life that could detract from their role as the "Lord's hand" on earth, the church's president said Sunday.

"We are surrounded by those in need of our attention, our encouragement, our support, our comfort and our kindness, be they family members, friends, acquaintances or strangers," Thomas S. Monson said on the second day of the faith's semiannual general conference.

Service is a familiar theme for the 16th president of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints who is known for his pastoral approach and concern for the infirmed and widowed.

"We are the Lord's hand here upon earth with the mandate to serve and lift his children," he said.

Last year before his August birthday, Monson said his ideal gift would be an increase in acts of service by church members worldwide. This year, he was inundated with cards from members of all ages reporting how they had complied with his birthday wish — from yard work and visiting the elderly or sick, to hauling water and cleaning out a toy closet.

"My heart has been seldom as touched and grateful," said Monson, adding that he and his wife spent hours pouring through the letters.

Mormons gather in April and October to hear words of inspiration and direction from top church leaders. The two-day event draws more than 100,000 members to the church's downtown Salt Lake City international headquarters.

Messages about the importance of service and exemplifying the Christian values of love and forgiveness were repeated throughout the weekend.

"Try to show kindness in all that you do. Be gentle and loving in deed and thought," President Henry B. Eyring, one of two counselors to Monson in the church's First Presidency, said Sunday. "The joys come from putting the welfare of others above our own. That is what love is. And the sorrow comes primarily from selfishness, which is the absence of love."

New sheriff raises go against Blaine County pay freeze

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Since the Blaine County Sheriff's Office took over the Ketchum Police Department on July 1, Ketchum has been happy with the new regime.

The Blaine County commissioners, however, have questioned the specifics of the contract, saying that unexpected raises for eight county staffers haven't been appropriately justified.

"Absent that, we don't have anything to hang our hats on," said Derek Voss, county administrator, at a meeting about the issue on Tuesday.

As part of this year's budget process, the county decided not to allow any merit or market-based raises.

"I don't like being put into a position where I make a promise and have to break it to the rest of the employees," said Commissioner Tom Bowman, concerned about justifying any pay increases.

Voss did agree with Sheriff Walt Femling that changes in responsibility or workload could warrant a raise. The county commissioners said they would need to see the specifics of these changes in writing before they would authorize the application of fees collected from Ketchum to go to those eight staffers' paychecks. Seven are supervisors in the sheriff's office, while the eighth handles personnel issues in the county clerk's office.

A total of about $55,000 in "administrative fees" is part of the one-year contract for the sheriff's office to provide law enforcement services to Ketchum, including about $10,000 added to Femling's salary. Femling said he always knew some of the administrative fees would go toward employee compensation, but he didn't know the specifics of how they would be allocated until after the contract was signed and the transition had begun.

Commissioner Angenie

McCleary said she would have liked more specifics and for that information to have been more public before the commissioners signed the contract.

"Perhaps some mistakes have been made in oversight," said Commissioner Larry Schoen. "It was a complex document, on a first-time basis between these two agencies."

The commissioners asked Femling to return to them with the specifics of a work plan to justify salary increases before they authorize the administrative fees to be released into employee paychecks.

Also present was Gary Marks, Ketchum city administrator, who said he was comfortable with city funds going to supervisory functions that were not filled when the contract was enacted.

"We're very happy with the service so far," Marks said. "The transition has been fairly seamless; morale appears to be up significantly."

South Dakota town rids itself of MEAT MESS

Town no longer smells, but bills for cleanup linger

By Carson Walker
Associated Press writer

BRIDGEWATER, S.D. — Behind the freezer doors at a meat plant mysteriously abandoned by its owner, the 44 tons of bison meat managed to hold its own for months, masked by the brutal chill of two South Dakota winters.

Once the power was cut and spring thaw arrived, nature took over. And enough rotting meat to fill a high school gym did exactly what you'd expect: It stank.

It stank at the bank. It smelled at the law office. It reeked at the cafe. Even the jewelry store wasn't immune. Everyone in this tiny town could smell it, everywhere they went. A putrid odor so downright nasty the cleaners sent to mop up the gooeey mess of liquefied meat — topped by a blanket of swarming white maggots and buzzed by a legion of flies — gave up after two days.

"You've also got the city offices, the grocery store and the post office. And then you spread out to the local residences," said Mayor Marty Barattini, pointing to each place. "This is a small town. We have just over 600 people, so that stench was enough to overwhelm the entire town. Not just this street."

Fed up with the smell, a brave crew of 18 city and county workers took matters into their own hands this summer and stormed the plant to haul away the putrid meat and take back their town. What came next was the biggest indignity: Three months after the cleanup, the owner still hasn't paid the $11,151 cleanup bill, and owes about $14,085 in unpaid property taxes on top of it.

"We tried to work with that guy," said a dismayed Barattini.

The saga of the smell began in January 2008, when owner Ilan Parente closed Bridgewater Quality Meats and moved the business to Dawson, Minn., as Noah's Ark Processors LLC. He left the boxed kosher bison meat behind, apparently to be sold to a pet food company. It stayed frozen until the electricity was cut off in December for lack of payment.

When the town about 40 miles away from Sioux Falls began to warm in the spring, the smell began to creep out. Some said the scent was like road kill. The mayor said he spent two tours of duty in Vietnam and could not recall smelling anything as bad.

"This is worse than rotten bodies," Barattini said.

The city sent a notice to

In this photo taken June 23, a worker uses a skid loader to remove some of the 44 tons of spoiled kosher bison meat from a locker at Bridgewater Quality Meats in Bridgewater, S.D.

"I feel bad for the people of Bridgewater who had to live with the smell. But that's really where the extent of my feeling bad goes. It wasn't ever a health hazard to anyone."

— Ilan Parente, owner of the now-closed Bridgewater Quality Meat in Bridgewater, S.D.

Parente to remove the causative cause, and he dispatched two workers who toiled without protective masks, clothing, equipment or access to water or electricity. Defeated by the mess, they quit after two days.

So city and county officials got permission from the South Dakota Animal Industry Board to go inside and finish. It then became clear that the source of the smell was the meat: 88,420 pounds, according to the scale at the Sioux Falls landfill, where the mess was hauled in five dump trucks and three extra-large trash bins.

The crews and a skid loader spent two days removing the meat, which had swollen so much that the shrink-wrapped bags had burst, which caused the stacked boxes to topple. Most crew members wore an oxygen mask and hazardous materials suit because of the strong ammonia odor. Crews cleaned the building with fire hoses and doused it with bleach.

City employee and volunteer firefighter Todd Letcher wore his fire gear. "I don't think anybody should ever do something like that," he said of the job. "That was bad."

Parente's phone number is disconnected and the attorney representing him, Mike Unke, declined to comment. A woman who answered the phone at the Minnesota business said Parente is no longer affiliated with it. Requests for someone to comment went unanswered.

Parente has said before that he checked the meat in May and found it iced over due to a broken water pipe. He's claimed the meat might have stunk but says he never put anyone in danger.

"I feel bad for the people of Bridgewater who had to live with the smell. But that's really where the extent of my feeling bad goes. It wasn't ever a health hazard to anyone," he told The Daily Republic of Mitchell in July.

The county spent about $5,000 on dump trucks and men to drive them, the city submitted a bill of $3,918 to Parente for trucking costs, landfill fees, attorney fees, overtime and pest control, and the fire department's cost came in at $2,233 for wages, air tanks, two fire trucks and clothing replacement.

Parente also owes $8,628 in back property taxes and interest on the business and $5,457 on a rural house he owns, according to McCoy County records. Bridgewater City Attorney Mike Fink said that the city is in the process of discussing a settlement to recoup the cleanup costs. Months after the massive cleanup, though, the city hasn't seen a dime.

The stink wasn't the first issue with the plant. Problems with the business started several years ago when the city's sewer system began getting stopped up because of blood and other parts going down the drain at Bridgewater Quality Meats.

The state Department of Environment and Natural Resources filed a civil lawsuit against Bridgewater Quality Meats in 2003 seeking $10,000 per day of violation for dumping between October 2001 to October 2003. The last action on the case was a delay issued in March 2008. If convicted and assessed every day of that period, the penalty could top $7 million.

The fate of the building is in limbo. Parente has a "for sale" sign up in the window, but so far, there haven't been any takers. The mayor says the building could be used again, "but it would take some work." So after all the mopping, slogging, bill-paying and legal wrangling, the mayor and his citizens are left with one small, but not insignificant, benefit. The smell is gone.

Fires char wildland in California, Arizona

WRIGHTWOOD, Calif. (AP) — A wind-fanned wild-fire that charred some 5 1/2 square-miles of the San Gabriel Mountains continued to rage Sunday as firefighters worked to prevent flames from advancing toward a mountain resort community.

The 3,500-acre Sheep fire, driven by wind gusts of up to 40 mph, destroyed three homes and was 10 percent surrounded.

Between 4,000 to 6,000 residents were ordered to evacuate, said Robin Prince, public information officer for the San Bernardino National Forest.

"The winds are quite a problem," Prince said.

Firefighters were making a stand in the mountain resort community of Wrightwood, which contains a mix of full-time residences and vacation homes, spreading fire retardant gel to structures to protect them from advancing flames.

Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger declared a state of emergency for San Bernardino County, freeing up state resources to battle the fire.

Erratic winds and low visibility temporarily grounded air support, but helicopters and air tankers took to the skies by Sunday morning aided by about 1,000 firefighters on the ground.

The blaze broke out Saturday near Lytle Creek, a small community surrounded by the San Bernardino National Forest. Fueled by thick timber and brush, the fire pushed over hills and canyons by winds.

Evacuation centers were set up at a high school in nearby Rialto and at the Victorville Fairgrounds.

The cause of the fire was under investigation.

In Arizona, some residents of the city of Williams remained away from their homes for another day as a prescribed burn that grew out of control threatened the town known as the "Gateway to the Grand Canyon?"

Punky Moore, a Kaibab National Forest spokeswoman, said the Twin Fire scorched about 1,000 acres, or more than 1 1/2 square miles, by Sunday morning. It was burning forest undergrowth and ponderosa pines on Bill Williams Mountain.

Illinois treasure hunt halted as possible prank

By Jim Suhr
Associated Press writer

ST. LOUIS — An Illinois woman who set out on a treasure hunt for buried gold coins after finding a cryptic note in an antique rocking chair may have been the victim of a prolific prankster who died more than 30 years ago.

With help of a donated backhoe, Patty Henken recently tore up a vacant lot in Springfield, Ill., where a typewritten note signed by "Chauncey Wolcott" — found in an old chair she bought at auction last November — suggested she would find a chest containing more than $250 in U.S. gold coins.

The dig turned up nothing but bricks and old bottles. Henken planned to return Tuesday with the donated services of a man with ground-penetrating radar meant to detect any buried items, but the treasure note's promise may already be debunked.

An Iowa woman who read news accounts of the hunt said she knows Wolcott's true identity: John "Jay" Slaven, a notorious practical joker and coin collector who often used a typewriter in his pranks.

Slaven used the pen name "Chauncey Wolcott" and lived for decades at the location where the dig took place, until his 1976 death, according to Betty Atkinson Ryan of Mason City, Iowa. She e-mailed a columnist for the State Journal-Register of Springfield to set the record straight.

Atkinson Ryan told the newspaper that Slaven was her boss in the Journal-

Register's classified advertising department decades ago. She said Slaven often used a typewriter to compose some of his jokes and signed them "Chauncey Wolcott." The newspaper said archived news articles described Slaven as an actor with a "booming voice" that he used in television appearances, about 50 radio shows and to narrate the annual Illinois State Fair film.

Henken's life got interesting in May when, while prying off the seat of a rickety rocking chair she bought at auction five months earlier, she discovered a small envelope with "Finders Keepers" typewritten on it. Inside, a key was taped to a typed note.

"This DEXTER key (number sign) 50644T will unlock a lead chest," the note began, before spelling out a location in Springfield — 1028 N. Fifth St. — where a chest containing more than $250 in U.S. gold coins supposedly was buried 12 feet below ground.

The stash, the note claimed, included eight $20 gold pieces, six $10 gold pieces, five $5 gold pieces, three $2 1/2 dollar gold pieces and two $1 gold pieces.

The undated note, signed by a "Chauncey Wolcott," included a request to contact the Springfield newspaper if the chest was ever found.

It wasn't.

Henken, of Mount Sterling, Ill., said Sunday that she was disappointed there's no closure but still was hopeful Slaven may have left something to unearth.

Shoshone-Bannock Tribes sign contract with BIA to pay for operations at justice center

FORT HALL (AP) — The Bureau of Indian Affairs has signed an agreement with the Shoshone-Bannock Tribes to help pay for operations at the tribes' $19.7-million Justice Center.

The contract signed last week commits the BIA to provide recurring funding for operations and maintenance at the new facility. The exact amount of money has not yet been determined.

"This is a very historic day for the tribes — it's been a long time coming," James Glaze, legal counsel for the Tribes, told the Idaho State Journal. "The tribes are truly taking control of their own justice systems."

Construction of the center started in June. It is expected to be completed in December and open in February.

The Justice Center will consist of three courtrooms and separate detention areas that will be able to hold up to 80 adults and 20 juveniles.

"This (Business Council) is progressive and on a fast track to get the justice center completed," said BIA Special Agent Matthew W. Pryor. "They are going to set standards for other tribes wanting a justice center."

Report: 13 million babies worldwide born premature

Lauran Neergaard
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — They call it kangaroo care: A premature baby nestles skin-to-skin against mom's bare, warm chest. In Malawi, mothers' bodies take the place of too-pricy incubators to keep these fragile newborns alive.

Nearly one in 10 of the world's babies is born premature, and about 1 million infants die each year as a result, says a startling first attempt to measure a toll that in much of the world is hidden.

It's a problem concentrated in poor countries, with the vast majority of the nearly 13 million preemies born each year in Africa and Asia, according to the report released Sunday by the March of Dimes.

But take a closer look at the proportion of all babies born too early. Those rates are highest in Africa, but followed closely by North America, concludes the first part of a collaboration with the World Health Organization to tackle the growing problem.

How? "That's the 13 million-baby question," said March of Dimes epidemiologist Christopher Howson, who headed the project being debated this week at a child health meeting in India.

Different factors fuel prematurity in rich countries and poor ones. Wealthy nations such as the United States have sophisticated neonatal intensive care units for the tiniest, youngest preemies. That produces headlines about miracle babies and leads to a false sense that modern medicine conquers prematurity — without acknowledging lifelong problems including cerebral palsy, blindness and learning disabilities that often plague survivors.

Scientists don't even know all the triggers for preterm birth or how to stop early labor once it starts, one reason that the report urges major new research. Nor does much of the world even track how many babies are born too soon, why or what happens to them.

"These are conservative estimates," Howson said. "As shocking as this toll is, that toll will only rise" as next year the WHO finishes a more in-depth country-by-country count.

Yet even in very poor countries, there are steps to improve preemies' survival if only more mothers knew, said Dr. Joy Lawn, a pediatrician-turned-policy director for Save the Children who is based in South Africa.

"Even in educated families, there's a sense of fatalism if a baby is born preterm. There's no expectation they can do anything," Lawn said. "With pretty simple solutions, these deaths could be halved, but it doesn't seem to be a priority."

Waves of new fund cuts imperil U.S. nursing homes

By Dave Collins
Associated Press writer

HARTFORD, Conn. — The nation's nursing homes are perilously close to laying off workers, cutting services — possibly even closing — because of a perfect storm wallop from the recession and deep federal and state government spending cuts, industry experts say.

A Medicare rate adjustment that cuts an estimated $16 billion in nursing home funding over the next 10 years was enacted at week's end by the federal Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services — on top of state-level cuts or flat-funding that already had the industry reeling.

And Congress is debating slashing billions more in Medicare funding as part of health care reform.

Add it all up, and the nursing home industry is headed for a crisis, industry officials say.

"We can foresee the possibility of nursing homes having to close their doors," said David Hebert, a senior vice president at the American Health Care Association. "I certainly foresee that we'll have to let staff go."

The funding crisis comes as the nation's baby boomers age ever closer toward needing nursing home care. The nation's 16,000 nursing homes housed 1.85 million people last year, up from 1.79 million in 2007, U.S. Census Bureau figures show.

Already this year, 24 states have cut funding for nursing home care and other health services needed by low-income people who are elderly or disabled, according to the Center on Budget and Policy Priorities, a nonprofit research firm based in Washington, D.C.

Some facilities are now closed because of money problems — including four in Connecticut — and others have laid off workers because of what industry officials say are inadequate Medicaid reimbursement rates. Medicare cuts are troubling, they say, because the higher Medicare reimbursements have been used to compensate for the lower Medicaid rates.

In Griswold, Conn., the community's only nursing home shut down earlier this year because of rising costs and an inability to pay for $4.9 million in needed renovations for the 90-bed facility.

"A 92-year-old woman was screaming and crying as she was loaded into the ambulance, saying 'This is my home,'" Griswold First Selectman Philip Anthony said. His 88-year-old mother was a resident of the same home at the time.

Anthony sought and found a new facility for his mother, but she died of pneumonia before the Griswold Health and Rehabilitation Center closed in the spring.

"To be hit with a sudden and deliberate closure like this, it just drained the heart right out of you," Anthony said.

Connecticut Gov. M. Jodi Rell and state lawmakers gave no Medicaid rate increases to nursing homes in the state last fiscal year and kept the funding flat for the next two years.

The Griswold home was one of four nursing homes in the state that have closed since December because of financial problems, a higher rate than usual, said Deborah Chernoff, a spokeswoman for District 1199 of the New England Health Care Employees Union in Connecticut, which represents more than 20,000 health care workers in the state.

"We're really teetering on the edge of what we see as the collapse of the long-term care system," she said.

Chernoff said many of Connecticut's 240 or so nursing homes have been reducing workers' hours to deal with money problems, while two are in bankruptcy now.

Also this year across the country:

- The Motion Picture & Television Fund said in January it would close a hospital and nursing home in Woodland Hills, Calif., founded to care for actors and other entertainment industry workers, because of financial losses.
- The Westchester Medical Center in suburban New York said it would close a nursing home and cut 400 jobs to deal with Medicaid and other fund cuts.
- The Dove Health Care nursing home in Glendale, Wis., near Milwaukee, closed this summer because of heavy debt.
- Medicaid reimbursement rates to nursing homes were cut this year by Rhode Island (5 percent); Michigan (4 percent) and Florida (3 percent).
- Washington state legislators whacked nursing home funding by $93 million for the next two fiscal years.

Gary Weeks, executive director of the Washington Health Care Association, said some of the organization's 400 assisted living and nursing homes have laid off workers. Some will not survive, he said.

At the request of Weeks' association, a federal judge in July issued a temporary restraining order blocking the cuts because state officials didn't do a required analysis of how the reductions would affect care quality and access.

"There's a lot of pain going on everywhere, but it's clearly a crisis in long-term care," Weeks said.

Twins, Tigers set for 1-game playoff in AL Central

By Ben Walker
Associated Press writer

The chase for the AL Central championship once again is going to extra innings.

Trying to save their seasons, the Detroit Tigers and Minnesota Twins both won Sunday, leaving them all even for the division lead and forcing a one-game tiebreaker.

They'll meet Tuesday at 3 p.m. MDT at the Metrodome in what could be the final baseball game at the Homer Hankie haven. Detroit rookie Rick Porcello (14-9) will start against Scott Baker (15-9).

"It's going to be fun. I'm sure Minnesota is going to be rocking,"

Tigers center fielder Curtis Granderson said.

This marks the second straight year a tiebreaker will decide the AL Central. Last season, the Twins lost 1-0 at Chicago.

The teams get an extra day off — not for travel, but because Brett Favre and the Minnesota Vikings host Green Bay tonight. Because of that, the logistics could become complicated.

The New York Yankees, holding home-field advantage throughout the postseason, can choose whether they want to start the playoffs against the Twins-Tigers winner on Wednesday or Thursday. The tricky part: The Yankees get one hour after the tiebreaker to announce their decision.

That means a quick turnaround for the AL Central champ if, as expected, New York picks to play Game 1 at Yankee Stadium on Wednesday at 4 p.m. MDT.

"It's strange," Yankees star Alex Rodriguez said. "That's what great about baseball. Play 162 and you're going to need one more game. That's pretty awesome."

Boston will open at the Los Angeles Angels in the other best-of-five AL matchup, either Wednesday or Thursday.

The National League first-rounders begin Wednesday — wild card Colorado at the World Series champion Philadelphia Phillies by day, and Albert Pujols and St. Louis at Manny Ramirez and the Los Angeles Dodgers at night.

Ryan Howard and the East champion Phillies went 4-2 against Troy Tulowitzki and the Rockies. It's a playoff rematch from 2007, when Colorado streaked into the playoffs and swept Philadelphia in the first round.

"They were playing so well. I don't care who they were playing. Up to that point, no one in the NL could stop them," Phillies center fielder Shane Victorino recalled. "They came in and walked right through us in three games."

Phillies manager Charlie Manuel could pick Cliff Lee, who beat the Rockies shortly after being traded over from Cleveland in July, for Game 1.

"I haven't been told for sure, other than the fact that all the games are equally important," Lee said. "It's an unbelievable opportunity. It's a chance for me to help a team potentially go back to back and reach the World Series."

Idaho soaks in best start since 1994

By Josh Wright
Times-News correspondent

MOSCOW — Nathan Enderle touched his knee to the Kibbie Dome turf and chaos ensued. Idaho students scurried en masse down from stands, players danced on the field and coaches rejoiced.

After all the agony the program has lived through, the Vandals were going to squeeze every second of enjoyment from this night.

Playing in front of 16,000 fans packed in like sardines into the Dome — and a nationally televised audience on ESPNU — Idaho staged a momentous rally to eke out a 31-29 victory over Colorado State on Saturday night.

After their biggest win in years, the Vandals continued the program's finest start since 1994.

"It feels really good," coach Robb Akey said. "I see a football team that's growing up."

The Vandals (4-1) climbed out of holes of 14-0 and 20-7 by unleashing a quick-strike aerial assault. Quarterback Nathan Enderle threw for 333 yards and three touchdowns, two of which went to Eric Greenwood on streaks down the sideline.

With Daniel Hardy out with a kidney injury, Greenwood and fellow wideout Max Komar combined for 18 catches for 282 yards.

It was a striking reversal of fortunes after Enderle's costly interception deep in CSU territory on Idaho's

"It's always a downer

when you're about to score and it goes the other way," Enderle said. "That was a tough break for us. ... (But) it shows some growth as a

Jeff Pohlman was second fastest in qualifying, placed second in his heat race and wound up fifth in the main event, but most importantly he was No. 1 in the point standings at the end of the day.

Pohlman sealed the deal on his first championship in the Intermountain Pro Trucks Series Saturday afternoon at Magic Valley Speedway with a 26-point margin over runner-up Johnny Pierre.

"I am glad it's over, I was just full of nerves," Pohlman said. "The truck was not that good today, so I just kind of settled in and worried about the championship. Johnny is a heck of a competitor, but we're glad to have it behind us. I wish my dad was here though, I think he would be proud of us."

Stewart wins at Kansas to improve title chances

KANSAS CITY, Kan. — Tony Stewart didn't have time for a debate. He had one last chance to grab the win at Kansas Speedway, and it came down to one critical decision.

Two tires, or four? The two-time series champion asked for two on the final pit stop Sunday, and crew chief Darian Grubb immediately agreed with the strategy. The rapid thinking got Stewart the race lead, and he held on over the final 26 laps for his fourth win of the season.

"He asked me what I thought, I kind of put my vote in, and he said it was exactly what he was thinking," Stewart said. "It made me feel good that we both agreed on the same thing that quick. It was like, to both of us, it wasn't even an option."

"We pretty much knew what we both needed."

What he needed was a win.

After a rocky start to the Chase for the Sprint Cup championship, Stewart found himself in danger of allowing Mark Martin and Jimmie Johnson to pull the title out of his reach in just the third of 10 races. Stewart went into the race fifth in the standings, 106 points behind leader Martin, and in a slump of five of six finishes outside the top 10.

Grubb knew they needed to turn it up, and soon, to stay in title contention.

"We knew going into the Chase it was a must-win situation," Grubb said. "You're going to have to win races against these competitors. You have to go in with the mindset you have to win races."

The victory at Kansas moved Stewart up one spot in the standings to fourth, and his deficit was cut from 106 points to 67 behind Martin.

Fans complicit in BSU's gloomy outing

BOISE — It rained on homecoming.

It was supposed to be a festive environment. The marching band could be heard romping around the Boise State neighborhood all Saturday afternoon. The Broncos owned a No. 5 ranking. They faced a Football Championship Subdivision opponent in UC Davis, who they promptly beat 34-16.

But, it rained on homecoming.

So why do the now No. 6

Broncos seem to be failing while never trailing the Aggies?

Looking at the stats, it seems like a typical Bronco win. They stopped the run. Kellen Moore was efficient, for the most part. He threw some passes you expect him not to, but Moore is so solid, fans get riled when he throws an incompletion.

Writing "interception" in my notebook after Moore's name feels foreign. He usually doesn't make mistakes, but he had issues against the Aggies. He was 22-for-31 passing, for 285 yards and three scores, but he and Thomas Byrd repeated their woes on the snap exchange. Moore said a few times the ball slipped out of his hand, but it wasn't an excuse.

Charged with finding the "why" in the story, not just the "who" and "what," I think one contribution to the strange feel in the stadium was the fans in the stands.

When I heard the attendance mark of 32,497 announced in the third quarter, I thought it was a lie. The student section never did sell out. Thousands of empty seats scattered the soaked stadium. Only once in the entire game did I hear that raucous

A full slate of pro football includes home games for Seattle, Arizona and Denver. If football isn't your cup of tea, NASCAR's Chase for the Sprint Cup Championship continues.

Steelers hold off S.D. rally in 38-28 victory

PITTSBURGH — Ben Roethlisberger threw touchdown passes on fast-starting Pittsburgh's first two drives, Rashard Mendenhall surpassed his previous career total with 165 yards rushing and two scores and the Steelers opened a 28-point lead, then held on to beat the San Diego Chargers 38-28 on Sunday night.

The Chargers (2-2), out-gained nearly 4 to 1 until late in the third quarter, made an apparent blowout close as Philip Rivers threw touchdown passes of 30 yards to Antonio Gates and 13 yards to Chris Chambers and Jacob Hester scored on a 41-yard fumble return, all in the fourth quarter.

SAINTS 24, JETS 10

NEW ORLEANS — Darren Sharper returned one of his two interceptions of rookie Mark Sanchez 99 yards for a score, Will Smith forced a fumble in the end zone to produce a second defensive touchdown, and New Orleans handed the New York Jets their first loss, 24-10 on Sunday.

New York (3-1) lost despite stopping the Saints twice on fourth-and-short and holding Drew Brees to 190 yards passing and no touchdowns.

BRONCOS 17, COWBOYS 10

DENVER — Champ Bailey knocked away a potential tying touchdown pass from Tony Romo to Sam Hurd with 1 second left. On fourth-and-goal from the 2, Tony Romo found Hurd cutting over the middle, but Bailey reached around and swatted the pass away at the last second, giving the Broncos their first 4-0 start since 2003.

The Broncos took the lead on Brandon Marshall's 51-yard touchdown catch with 1:46 remaining.

49ERS 35, RAMS 0

SAN FRANCISCO — Tight end Vernon Davis caught a 13-yard pass for his third touchdown in two weeks, Patrick Willis returned an interception 23 yards for a score and the 49ers overcame the absence of star running back Frank Gore.

The 49ers (3-1) scored in every way to take command of the NFC West.

DOLPHINS 38, BILLS 10

MIAMI — With quarterback Chad Henne making his first NFL start, the Dolphins controlled the ball for 37 minutes and earned their first victory.

Miami ran for 250 yards and mounted scoring drives of 65, 66 and 65 yards.

PATRIOTS 27, RAVENS 21

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. — Tom Brady and Randy Moss hooked up for their first touchdown pass of the season and Baltimore failed on fourth-down plays on its last two series.

Moss' touchdown made it 24-14 late in the third quarter, but Joe Flacco's 13-yard pass to Willis McGahee cut that to 24-21. Stephen Gostkowski's 33-yard field goal gave the Patriots (3-1) a six-point lead midway through the fourth quarter.

BENGALS 23, BROWNS 20, OT

CLEVELAND — Shayne Graham's 31-yard field goal, set up by Carson Palmer's 15-yard run on fourth down — on the last play of overtime won it.

Not wanting to settle for a tie, Bengals coach Marvin Lewis gambled on fourth-and-11 from the Cleveland 41 with 1:04 remaining. Palmer dropped back to pass and then tucked it away and scampered up the middle for the first down. Cincinnati ran two plays to get Graham in position, and the kicker, who had an extra point and field goal blocked, drilled it through the uprights.

JAGUARS 37, TITANS 17

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — David Garrard threw for 323 yards and three touchdowns, two to Mike Sims-Walker, and the Jaguars dismantled the Tennessee Titans 37-17 Sunday.

Garrard shredded Tennessee's injury depleted secondary, often picking on rookie cornerback Jason McCourty, and Jacksonville's defense made the Titans (0-4) look, well, like a winless team.

COLTS 34, SEAHAWKS 17

INDIANAPOLIS — Peyton Manning led the Colts to touchdowns on four of their first five drives, tied milestones established by Fran Tarkenton and Dan Marino and extended Indianapolis' regular-season victory streak to 13.

Manning finished 31 of 41 for 353 yards, marking the first time in 12 NFL seasons he has topped 300 yards in four consecutive games.

GIANTS 27, CHIEFS 16

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Eli Manning, before leaving in the fourth quarter with a bruised right heel, threw for 292 yards and three touchdowns and the Giants (4-0) remained unbeaten.

Kansas City (0-4) has lost 27 of its last 29 games.

BEARS 48, LIONS 24

CHICAGO — Jay Cutler threw two touchdown passes and ran for another score, and the Bears pulled away in the second half a week after Detroit snapped its 19-game losing streak.

Matt Forte ran for 121 yards and rookie Johnny Knox returned a kickoff 102 yards.

REDSKINS 16, BUCCANEERS 13

LANDOVER, Md. — Jason Campbell made up for a pair of first-half interceptions with two second-half touchdowns, and the Redskins scored on three straight possessions for the first time this season. Washington (2-2) staved off the sky-is-falling talk in the nation's capital for at least one more week.

TEXANS 29, RAIDERS 6

HOUSTON — Steve Slaton scored two touchdowns, Jacoby Jones returned a kickoff for a score and the Texans (2-2) finally found their running game.

QUOTABLE

“We have a great city. These are great people. We have a future just as bright as anyone else.”
— Chicago Mayor Mayor Richard Daley after the city wasn’t picked to host the 2016 Summer Olympics

EDITORIAL

We’ve seen the future, and it’s smoggy here

It could happen 10 years from now, or maybe 30. But sooner or later the critical mass of traffic on the Pole Line/Blue Lakes/Highway 93 corridor will force Twin Falls County — and perhaps Jerome County too — over federal air-quality limits.

That, in turn, will likely trigger vehicle testing.

If the current experience of Canyon County is any indication, we should put off that day as long as possible.

Canyon County’s plan to reduce vehicle emissions would not limit pollution as much as required testing would, the state Department of Environmental Quality said last week. The county and its cities had proposed the voluntary system with the incentive of a lottery to get people to test their cars.

That’s right. A lottery.

The winner would get a $5,000 prize. The county planned to put up $50,000 to help people pay for the repairs if their cars didn’t pass the test.

That’s not quite what regulators — or the Legislature — had in mind.

Lawmakers last year passed legislation requiring a regional emissions testing program if pollution levels are within 85 percent of the federal limits of ozone and if cars are one of the top two pollutant sources.

The law says an affected county or city must select one of three options: start a vehicle emission testing program, come up with an alternate that will achieve the same amount of air pollution reduction as emission testing, or let the state run the emission testing.

DEQ wants Canyon County motorists to test every two years, at a cost of $20 per test, unlike the annual tests required of Ada County motorists.

Something similar can happen here too, and perhaps sooner than we think unless we starting changing the way we get around.

Consider:

- Eighty-three percent of Twin Falls motorists drive to work alone, according to the city of Twin Falls’ master transportation plan. Only 12 percent of Twin Falls commuters car-pool, resulting in thousands more vehicles on the road than there need to be. Even Burley, with four-fifths fewer residents than Twin Falls, has a higher percentage car-poolers.

- Twin Falls lacks a coherent network of bicycle-friendly arterial streets where cyclists can travel safely.

- Pubic transportation is negligible. There simply aren’t many alternatives to driving where you need to go.

As a community, we for years have made a lot of easy assumptions about being able to manage the consequences of growth headed our way. But they’re not going to be easy forever.

WHAT’S THE DEAL ABOUT OZONE?

Ozone is a molecule that contains three oxygen atoms. In high concentrations, created by pollution and the sun’s ultraviolet rays, it can make it harder for people to breathe and irritate respiratory systems.

Exposure to ozone and the pollutants that produce it has been linked to premature death, asthma, bronchitis, heart attack and other cardiopulmonary problems.

The Clean Air Act directs the Environmental Protection Agency to set National Ambient Air Quality Standards for ground-level ozone, and counties out of compliance — including Ada and Canyon counties in Idaho’s Treasure Valley — are required to take steps to reduce their levels. Last year, the EPA lowered its ozone standard from 80 parts per billion to 75 ppb.

That’s considered high by many environmentalists, the World Health Organization recommends a limit of 51 ppb. So there’s a strong possibility that the ozone standard could be reduced again, affecting even isolated cities like Twin Falls.

The trouble with us vs. them

I hate to write about this, but I have actually been to this play before and it is really disturbing.

I was in Israel interviewing Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin just before he was assassinated in 1995. We had a beer in his office. He needed one. I remember the ugly mood in Israel then — a mood in which extreme right-wing settlers and politicians were doing all they could to delegitimize Rabin, who was committed to trading land for peace as part of the Oslo accords. They questioned his authority. They accused him of treason. They created pictures depicting him as a Nazi SS officer, and they shouted death threats at rallies. His political opponents winked at it all.

Thomas Friedman

And in so doing they created a poisonous political environment that was interpreted by one right-wing Jewish settler as a license to kill Rabin — he must have heard, “God will be on your side” — and so he did so.

The parallels to Israel then and America today turn my stomach. Criticism from the far right has begun tipping over into delegitimation and creating the same kind of climate here that existed in Israel on the eve of the Rabin assassination.

What kind of madness is it that someone would create a poll on Facebook asking respondents, “Should Obama be killed?” The choices were: “No, Maybe, Yes, and Yes if he cuts my health care.” The Secret Service is now investigating. I hope they put the jerk in jail and throw away the key because this is exactly what was being done to Rabin.

Even if you are not worried that someone might draw from these vitriolic attacks a license to try to hurt the president, you have to be worried about what is happening to American politics more broadly. Our leaders, even the

The American political system was ... designed by geniuses so it could be run by idiots ... But a cocktail of political and technological trends have converged in the last decade that are making it possible for the idiots of all political stripes to overwhelm and paralyze the genius of our system.

president, can no longer utter the word “we” with a straight face. There is no more “we” in American politics at a time when “we” have these huge problems — the deficit, the recession, health care, climate change and wars in Iraq and Afghanistan — that “we” can only manage, let alone fix, if there is a collective “we” at work.

Sometimes I wonder whether George H.W. Bush, president “41,” will be remembered as our last “legitimate” president. The right impeached Bill Clinton and hounded him from Day 1 with the bogus Whitewater “scandal.” George W. Bush was elected under a cloud because of the Florida voting mess, and his critics on the left never let him forget it.

And Obama is now having his legitimacy attacked by a concerted campaign from the right fringe. They are using everything from smears that he is a closet “socialist” to calling him a “liar” in the middle of a joint session of Congress to fabricating doubts about his birth in America and whether he is even a citizen. And these attacks are not just coming from the fringe. Now they come from Lou Dobbs on CNN and from members of the House of Representatives.

Again, hack away at the man’s policies and even his character all you want. I know politics is a tough business. But if we destroy the legitimacy of another president to lead or to pull the country together for what most Americans want most right now — nation-building at home — we are in serious trouble. We can’t go 24 years without a legitimate president — not without being swamped by the problems that we will end up postponing because we can’t address them rationally.

The American political system was, as the saying goes, “designed by geniuses so it could be run by idiots.” But a cocktail of political and technological trends have converged in the last decade that are making it possible for the idiots of all political stripes to overwhelm and paralyze the genius of our system. Those factors are: the wild excess of money in politics; the gerrymandering of political districts, making them permanently Republican or Democratic and erasing the political middle; a 24/7 cable news cycle that makes all politics a daily battle of tactics that overwhelm strategic thinking; and a blogosphere that at its best enriches our debates, adding new checks on the establishment, and at its worst coarsens our debates to a whole new level, giving a new power to anonymous slanderers to send lies around the world. Finally, on top of it all, we now have a permanent presidential campaign that encourages all partisanship, all the time among our leading politicians.

I would argue that together these changes add up to a difference of degree that is a difference in kind — a different kind of American political scene that makes me wonder whether we can seriously discuss serious issues any longer and make decisions on the basis of the national interest.

We can’t change this overnight, but what we can change, and must change, is people crossing the line between criticizing the president and tacitly encouraging the unthinkable and the unforgivable.

CRHS stadium could use a few tweaks

On Friday evening (Sept. 25) we had an enjoyable time attending the Canyon Ridge homecoming football game.

The band is coming right along, the cheerleaders are giving it their all, and the boys scored some points. I have a couple of observations of the overall event, however:

1. I couldn’t believe there is only one urinal in the men’s bathroom! There was a long line and even the head referee who was in line right behind me commented about that. I kidded him that maybe the game would have to be delayed because of the long line!

2. There is definitely a need for a second popcorn machine as they couldn’t begin to keep up with the demand.

3. There needs to be some pipes installed leading up to the refreshment stand so the crowds can be kept in line and to eliminate the line jumpers. This would also aid the servers so each could attend to a specific line of customers. Last night they were running all over the place behind the counter and one didn’t know from the other what customer had ordered and was waiting for popcorn or their hamburgers.

Other than those, the stadium is beautiful and as our team matures you will see more points and eventually lots of wins!

Beggar won’t take help from church

There’s an old song about a grasshopper who spends his days fiddling rather than working. It says, “Oh the world owes me a living Deedle dardle doodle deedle dum.” I hum it every time I go past the church where my dad is a pastor.

Standing on the sidewalk at the corner of Filer and Washington Street North is a ponytailed man who approaches cars at the stoplight and asks for money. Sometimes he carries a sign that says, “Need help. Can’t feed my kids.”

When we first noticed him standing there, one of our church members invited him inside and loaded up a bag of groceries from our food bank. She suggested a place he would find work and offered to have her husband drive him to the job site. Her offer was refused.

The next week, my dad invited him in and again offered groceries and a ride to a job site, but his offer was refused. In fact, the guy said that what he needed, and wanted, was money, not groceries. Since then, many people have offered food and a job and each time, this fiddling grasshopper says, “No thanks.”

Our church has received calls from people in the community asking how we could allow a poor man and his kids to beg in front of our church. When mom goes shopping people say things like, “Can’t your church do something about him?” We tried.

The police claim begging is not against the law in Twin Falls. They say there’s nothing they can do unless he’s on private property. I guess I’m not really surprised. We have a president who thinks the people who do work should pay the people who don’t work. No wonder the grasshopper out in front of my church is free to beg! “Deedle dardle doodle deedle dum.”

Samoans flock to churches to mourn tsunami victims

APIA, Samoa (AP) — Islanders gathered Sunday to mourn victims of the South Pacific tsunami that obliterated entire villages on the shores of American Samoa and Samoa, leaving at least 176 dead.

Monsignor Ioane Vito celebrated the first Mass of the day in a 19th century Roman Catholic cathedral on the waterfront of the Samoan capital, Apia, urging the congregation to unify to rebuild from the disaster that devastated the opposite side of Upolu island.

“Don’t dwell on it but rebuild our lives together as a community,” Vito said at the Immaculate Conception of Mary Cathedral. “Pain will unite us, and unity will give us strength.”

Unity also was the theme on American Samoa, where residents were set to hold a national prayer service that territorial Gov. Togiola Tulafono said would bring the community together. It will be held at the headquarters of the Congregational Christian Church of American Samoa, the largest religious denomination in the U.S. territory.

Families were still coming to terms with the sudden losses inflicted by Tuesday’s tsunami waves that roared ashore after an underwater earthquake with a magnitude of up to 8.3. The disaster claimed at least 176 lives in Samoa, American Samoa and Tonga.

Villagers in remote areas of American Samoa were waiting for government officials to assess damage to their homes and shops before they can start to clean up.

HEAVY RAINS HOLD UP SEARCH FOR BODIES IN INDONESIA

JUMANAK, Indonesia (AP) — Heavy rains hampered search teams Sunday in the hills of western Indonesia where hundreds of people were buried alive in landslides triggered by a massive earthquake that wiped out four villages.

Officials said at least 644 people were buried and presumed dead in the hillside villages in Padang Pariaman district on the western coast of Sumatra island.

Aid and rescue efforts have been concentrated in the region’s capital, Padang, a coastal city of 900,000 people where several tall buildings collapsed and hundreds died.

But the quake was equally devastating in Pariaman, where entire hillsides were shaken loose, sending down a cascade of mud, rocks and trees. Hordes of aid workers, military personnel, police and volunteers carrying heavy earth-moving equipment finally arrived Sunday to relieve residents who had been digging for corpses with their bare hands.

Ex-Alabama judge accused of trading sex for leniency

Phillip Rawls
Associated Press writer

MONTGOMERY, Ala. — Herman Thomas had an enviable political record as a black Democrat elected and re-elected in a county overwhelmingly white and increasingly Republican. The respected circuit judge once was the Democratic Party’s choice to be the first black federal judge in south Alabama.

Then his career collapsed under allegations that he brought inmates to his office and spanked them with a paddle. Later, an indictment accused him of sexually abusing male inmates in exchange for leniency. The trial on charges of sodomy, kidnapping, sex abuse, extortion, assault and ethics violations is set to start today.

The case has shocked Thomas’ friends and former colleagues.

“I’ve always had the highest regard for him. The allegations were a complete surprise to me and everyone else who knew him,” said Bob Edgington, a prominent Mobile attorney and former Democratic state senator.

Thomas stepped down from the bench in 2007 after the allegations of paddling surfaced and just ahead of a judicial ethics trial that could have forced him out of office. He was indicted on the more-serious charges this past spring by a Mobile County grand jury. If convicted of the most serious charges — sodomy and kidnapping — he faces from 20 years to life in prison.

The oldest incident in the charges dates to 1999, his first year as a circuit judge. The first public claim against Thomas surfaced in lawsuits filed by an inmate in 2001 in Mobile circuit court and in federal court that claimed the judge offered to help him with his case in return for sex. Both lawsuits were dismissed, and Thomas’ reputation remained unblemished.

Chief Assistant District Attorney Nicki Patterson said authorities began looking at Thomas after he changed a jail sentence in 2006 for his cousin, former Mobile County school commissioner David Thomas, even though the case was being handled by another judge. Other cases that Thomas had taken over from other judges without their approval soon surfaced, she said.

Some inmates in those cases described being checked out of the jail for meetings with Thomas in his car or in his private office in the county courthouse. First, there were reports of inmates having to pull down their underwear for spankings with a wooden paddle. Then came allegations of oral and anal sex, according to court records.

Retired Mobile County Circuit Judge Braxton Kittrell said people thought Thomas’ personal interest in the defendants was positive.

“Everyone thought he had a lot of concern for people who got into criminal difficulty. All of this was a surprise to everyone,” he said.

Defense attorney Robert

“Cowboy Bob” Clark calls the accusers “lying felons” who are trying to wreck the career of “a prestigious member of the Bar for over 20 years.” The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, a leading civil rights group, has defended Thomas and claims race is behind his prosecution.

But Patterson disputes that, noting that each of the victims is black, and says that jail checkout records back up inmates’ claims about trips to Thomas’ private office, and other inmates spotted marks after paddlings. There also is other evidence, according to court records, including one inmate’s seminal fluid on the office carpet. The inmates also were able to describe in detail Thomas’ unmarked windowless office.

Prosecutors say they have 15 current and former male inmates lined up to testify in a trial that could take several weeks.

The 48-year-old attorney, whose license to practice has been suspended, maintains his innocence. He has said he was trying to mentor the inmates.

Cybersecurity starts at home and in the office

By Lolita C. Baldor
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — When swine flu broke out, the government revved up a massive information campaign centered on three words: Wash your hands.

The Obama administration now wants to convey similarly clear and concise guidance about one of the biggest national security threats in your home and office — the computer.

Think before you click. Know who’s on the other side of that instant message. What you say or do in cyberspace stays in cyberspace — for many to see, steal and use against you or your government.

The Internet, said former national intelligence director Michael McConnell, “is the soft underbelly” of the U.S. today. Speaking recently at a new cybersecurity exhibit at the International Spy Museum in Washington, McConnell said the Internet has “introduced a level of vulnerability that is unprecedented.”

The Pentagon’s computer systems are probed 360 million times a day, and one prominent power company has acknowledged that its networks see up to 70,000 scans a day, according to cybersecurity expert James Lewis.

For the most part, those probes of government and critical infrastructure networks are benign. Many, said McConnell, are a nuisance and some are crimes. But the most dangerous are probes aimed at espionage or tampering with or destroying data.

The attackers could be terrorists aiming at the U.S. culture and economy, or nation-states looking to insert malicious computer code into the electrical grid that could be activated weeks or years from now.

“We are the fat kid in the race,” said Lewis. “We are the biggest target, we have the most to steal, and everybody wants to get us.”

Government finds higher autism figure: 1 in 100

Carla K. Johnson
Associated Press writer

CHICAGO — Two new government studies indicate about 1 in 100 American children have autism disorders — higher than a previous U.S. estimate of 1 in 150.

Greater awareness, broader definitions and spotting autism in younger children may explain some of the increase, federal health officials said.

“The concern here is that buried in these numbers is a true increase,” said Dr. Thomas Insel, director of the National Institute of Mental Health. “We’re going to have to think very hard about what we’re going to do for the 1 in 100.”

Figuring out how many children have autism is extremely difficult because diagnosis is based on a child’s behavior, said Dr. Susan E. Levy of the Children’s Hospital of Philadelphia and a member of the American Academy of Pediatrics subcommittee on autism.

“With diabetes you can get a blood test,” said Levy. “As of yet, there’s no consistent biologic marker we can use to make the diagnosis of autism.”

The new estimate would mean about 673,000 American children have autism. Previous estimates put the number at about 560,000.

One of the studies stems from the 2007 National Survey of Children’s Health. The results were released Monday, and published in October’s Pediatrics.

In that study, based on telephone surveys, parents reported about 1 in 91 children, ages 3 to 17, had autism, including milder forms such as Asperger’s syndrome.

The other government estimate has not been formally released yet. But because of the new published findings, officials from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention decided to announce Friday during an embargoed press briefing that their preliminary findings also show about 1 in 100 children have the disorders.

The CDC uses an in-depth method for its estimate, said CDC researcher Catherine Rice. An agency network reviews the education and health records of 8-year-old children in selected cities and determines whether the children meet the diagnosis. Autism experts generally consider this method more rigorous than a telephone survey.

President Obama has made autism a priority for research, Insel said. Federal stimulus money has been earmarked for autism, and a 2006 law pumped millions of dollars of new federal money into autism research, screening and treatment.

The published findings, which include state-level data, will help the government plan new services, said

Michael Kogan, a researcher with the federal Health Resources and Services Administration, who led the new study, which lists authors from several government agencies, including CDC.

The findings are based on the results of a national telephone survey of more than 78,000 parents of children ages 3 to 17. The survey dealt with many health issues and included two questions on autism.

Parents were asked whether they had ever been told by a doctor or other health care provider that their child had autism, Asperger’s syndrome, pervasive developmental disorder or some other autism spectrum disorder.

Realities of AGING

Today, we're more open to discussion

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

Aging can seem like the most natural thing in the world and the world's biggest secret, all at once.

Your body begins to fail you, your mind to betray you. Joints ache, hairs turn grey, you forget where you left your keys for the 18th time this week. But, as 87-year-old Wally Rothgeb Sr. of Ketchum quoted the tongue-in-cheek saying, getting older is "better than the alternative."

In past generations, aging wasn't really talked about — not only was life expectancy much lower, but the realities of menopause, incontinence and inability to get an erection simply weren't topics of conversation with anyone except a doctor.

Today, they're pharmaceutical ads on primetime television.

"If you just looked at those ads, you'd think 90 percent of the men in this country would have erectile dysfunction!" said Joan Nathan, caregiver at Senior Center of Blaine County.

The opening of the public conversation is opening discussions in personal relationships, said Sharon Hardy-Mills, manager at Golden Heritage Senior Center in Burley.

"These folks here, their parents were dead and gone when they were this age.... Their parents did not talk about this kind of stuff, they didn't talk about the frailties of age, body functions, you just didn't talk about that," said Hardy-Mills, 57. "We grew up with a more open generation. It's not just Mom complaining. Listen, all of them are saying the same thing, it must be normal. It's nice to know it's not just me that's going through that, it's to be expected."

Rothgeb, who is still a skier even though he has to bring along a portable oxygen tank, said he was fit all his life — until he had a couple of heart attacks.

"I didn't think about the future, as far as health-wise, I felt I was always in good shape," he said. Today, he'll chat a bit about his health, but he prefers to keep his mind off it unless he has to. "I think there are better things to

THE POSSIBILITIES

Here are a few things that could happen to you as you get older. As you read, you may have to remind yourself they're "better than the alternative," as senior Wally Rothgeb Sr. says.

And, as caregiver Joan Nathan notes, how you experience aging will depend on your overall physical fitness, your personal medical conditions and your family history.

- Macular degeneration.

Rather than glaucoma, Nathan said, this is often what inhibits eyesight.

- Turning in your keys. Night vision is often first to go, and evening drives to the movies go with it. Then daytime trips will be less frequent, and as vision and reaction time weaken, it may be time to give up the car altogether. "That's the hardest thing to admit and the hardest thing to give up," said Sharon Hardy-Mills.

- Naps. Taking a snooze during the middle of the day may be common for toddlers and those who work the night shift, but adults often don't realize that with increasing age comes increasing fatigue, and a daily nap may be more and more necessary.

- Walkers and canes. As joints weaken or fail, knee and hip surgeries become more common, and a little help getting around may require a nifty fashion accessory.

- Aches and pains. The Tylenol or Advil bottle may become more of a daily companion than a cup of coffee as your back or neck or knees begin to complain more loudly and vociferously. Just don't wait until the painkillers stop working to see the doc about it.

Barefoot-running movement gains a toehold

By Stephanie Desmon
The Baltimore Sun

BALTIMORE — David Engwall got home from work the other day, slipped on his workout clothes and left for a run, his sneakers still at the door. Yes, that guy jogging down Poplar Avenue is barefoot.

The only one in Arbutus, an area in Baltimore County, who will run with a barefoot Engwall is his frisky dog, Beans. It isn't that his fiancée, Galina Portnoy, is embarrassed to be seen with him. She's just worried the 26-year-old will step on a piece of broken glass or pick up some bacteria.

"She threatened to call my mother," he said.

Engwall is part of a mini-movement of barefoot runners that has taken shape over the better part of the decade and appears to be gaining ground. One driving force behind it is an underground theory that the expensive running shoes everyone is wearing actually could be contributing to jogging injuries. The runners say our feet have become weak because the fancy sneakers with their arch supports and thick cushioning do all the work. They point to cultures with long traditions of long-distance shoeless running, to the barefoot Ethiopian athlete who won the marathon at the Rome Olympics in 1960, to Zola Budd, the world-class South African runner who trained and competed without shoes.

And many new converts seem to have been inspired by "the book," Christopher McDougall's "Born to Run," released in May. At its heart is the true story of the Tarahumara Indians, a tribe isolated in some of Mexico's most treacherous terrain and Topics: wellness of the mother; labor and delivery process with relaxation and breathing techniques; care of the postpartum mother and newborn; breastfeeding and bottle feeding; and a video tour of the Women's and Infant Center. Bring a labor support person, if possible.

Cost is $60. Pre-registration required; 732-3148.

Childbirth refresher

Childbirth refresher class of St. Benedicts' prepared childbirth series, 7-9 p.m. Wednesday, at Jerome Ambulance Building, 240 E. Main St.

Topic: Review of labor and childbirth. Bring a labor support person, if possible. Mothers may enroll even if their babies will be born at a different hospital. The class is offered separately, or as part of the childbirth series.

Cost is $5. Register: 324-6133.

About Asian diagnosis

CSI's Community Education Center offers "Intro to Asian Diagnosis" class, 6-9 p.m. Thursday, in Room 105 of CSI's Shields Building. Jill Skeem, macrobiotic health counselor, will instruct.

Asian diagnosis is among the oldest medicines in the world and can make you aware of potential health issues in the early stages, class organizers say. Learn how to identify common health problems using the face, hands and feet, and learn what colors indicate when they appear on your skin and what moles, dots or marks mean.

Cost is $39. Register: 732-6442 or communityed.csi.edu.

About diabetes

Diabetes education class, 7-8:30 p.m. Thursday, in the Evergreen Room at Cassia Regional Medical Center, 1501 Hiland Ave. in Burley.

Physical therapist Curtis Mason will discuss exercise and diabetes.

Free; 677-6288.

About childbirth

The birthing class of St. Benedicts' prepared childbirth series, 7-9 p.m. Thursday, at Jerome Ambulance Building, 240 E. Main St.

Topics: the birth process and breathing techniques. Bring a labor support person, if possible. Mothers may enroll even if their babies will be born at a different hospital. The class is offered separately, or as part of the childbirth series.

Fee is $5. Register: 324-6133.

About Alzheimer's

Alzheimer's Support Group meetings, 2-3 p.m. Saturday, at Rosetta Estridge, 1177 Estridge Court in Twin Falls.

Open to Twin Falls County residents who have family members with Alzheimer's.

Information: Lisa Junod, 734-9422.

Self hypnosis

CSI's Community Education Center offers the class "Self Hypnosis," 7-9 p.m. Wednesdays, Oct. 14 to Nov. 18, in Room 106 at CSI's Shields Building. Curtis Johnson, master hypnotist and certified hypnotherapist, will instruct.

Learn how to enter a self-hypnotic state and how to reprogram your mind to reach goals such as weight loss, smoking cessation and stress relief.

Participants also learn to release limiting emotions and experiences that have blocked success, class organizers say.

Cost is $125, plus $10.50 payable to the instructor for materials. Register: 732-6442 or www.communityed.csi.edu.

Barefoot

whose members can run hundreds of miles with ease — and without Nikes.

McDougall writes that there were few running injuries before the 1970s, when Nike introduced the first cushioned running shoe. The author has taken up ultramarathoning and reportedly trains barefoot, believing that's the way humans were meant to run.

"Obviously, it's resonating with people," said Dr. A. Ben Pearl, a podiatrist in Arlington, Va., who has spoken on barefoot running. "It's become a culture of its own."

Pearl said there isn't enough data to know whether barefoot running is safe or if it prevents injuries. He says people in good shape shouldn't be afraid to try it, but they must start slowly. Their feet need to develop calluses. The rest of the body has to adapt. When barefoot, Pearl said, a runner touches more lightly on the heel and lands more on the ball of the foot, which is different than the way a runner in standard shoes tends to strike the ground. This takes getting used to.

"Sometimes people get so committed to the idea of David Engwall displays a pair of his thin, ultralight shoes, called Five Fingers. The footwear is something of a runner's compromise between traditional shoes and bare feet.

barefoot running that if something happens to them, 'It's something else,' Pearl said. "They rationalize it."

"It's unlikely to be incredibly harmful for people with normal feet," said Dr. Gregory Guyton, an orthopedic surgeon at Union Memorial Hospital in Baltimore who specializes in foot and ankle reconstruction. "There's a lot of people that have run barefoot for a long time on this Earth."

With the appropriate caveats — don't run three shoeless miles on your first try, for one — "I wouldn't object to a patient of mine who said, 'I want to take up barefoot running," Guyton said.

But he cautions that there is no evidence that high-tech running shoes are to blame for jogging injuries or that barefoot running is a cure-all. He says much of the research out there is not of high quality.

"A lot of claims," he said. "No solid data."

Not everyone in the "barefoot running" movement is actually running shoeless. They are simply shunning the "advancements" in shoe technology and looking back to a time when running shoes had flat soles, no arch support, no motion control.

Shoe companies have seen an opportunity. Nike's answer is what it calls the Free, a throwback shoe with little support.

Then there are the Vibram Five Fingers, thin, ultralight shoes designed for boaters. They fit the foot like a glove, with each toe getting its own individual compartment. The main protection offered is against road debris. Some say you can feel the grass between your toes as you run. And these "barefoot shoes" cost as much as fancy running shoes.

Engwall, a substance abuse counselor, has a pair. He thinks they look like bear's feet. He wears them only when he runs with his fiancée.

There's a statistic about running that screams from the pages of "Born to Run."

McDougall writes: "Every year, anywhere from 65 to 80 percent of all runners suffer an injury. That's nearly every runner, every single year. No matter who you are, no matter how much you run, your odds of getting hurt are the same. It doesn't matter if you're male or female, fast or slow, pudgy or ripped as a racehorse, your feet are still in the danger zone."

Aging

to talk about.

"I would say, take it as it comes, but I don't think it does anybody any good to go around with a downturned mouth."

And attitude appears to be key.

No matter what medical condition is causing pain or forcing you to change a daily habit, both seniors and those who aren't quite yet in the discount set say a positive attitude will take you far.

"I always thought I was going to be young," said Hardy-Mills. "I can sit in my chair and think, 'I need to do this and this and this,' and then I stand up — I don't think so! That part has been amazing, frustrating, and I did not anticipate that being an issue already. I expected those things when I approached 80, not when I approached 60."

The fatigue and lack of energy don't get her down, though. She jokes with her friends that she "gets a lot done in her mind," and she now simply plans for tasks to take a lot longer. "You've got to take life in stride and say, 'I'll do part of it (now) and do part of it tomorrow."

Lois Brannan of Jerome, 86, said it's relatively easy to maintain a positive attitude about the physical and mental changes she's undergone. What's been harder is how death has surrounded her.

"That's even harder than the loss of memory and the loss of sleep and the aches and pains. Those things are not as important to me as the loss of my family and friends as time goes on," Brannan said.

So she keeps busy. She retired gradually, exchanging a full-time teaching position for a part-time library position and volunteering regularly. "People need to look forward to retirement and plan so their life doesn't just quit," she said.

And that's really what it's about: not quitting, not giving in to the "alternative." Life — with its aches, pains and missing keys — is worth living, no matter what age you are.

Denise Austin still a part of the physical fitness scene

By Lori Kozlowski
Los Angeles Times

Denise Austin has made a life of motivating people to get moving. For more than 25 years, she has watched the fitness world transform and has been there cheerleading along the way. She's sold more than 20 million exercise videos and DVDs, starred in fitness television shows since the 1980s and written 10 books. She's married and lives in Washington, D.C., has two teenage daughters, runs an online diet-and-fitness program on her Web site and is preparing to make more DVDs and TV shows and write more books.

Austin, 52, paused and reflected on physical fitness, whether the perfect body is possible and her plans for 2010.

Question: In terms of personal fitness, what is new now that we are nearing 2010?

Austin: I'm a big believer in a balance of workouts — a well-balanced workout plan. Part of it is cardio, part strength training and then flexibility. You really need all three. You have to make your muscles feel surprised. Mix in interval training, boot-camp-type workouts, a little yoga, a little Pilates. I personally have switched my routine to be a little bit of everything.

Walking is one of the best universal exercises, of course, because you can do it anywhere.

I also often tell people: "You are your own architect!" Most Americans are sitting for 7 1/2 hours a day. Think about how you are sitting. Ask yourself: "How am I living those 16 waking hours of my life?" Exercise is important, but so is how you live your whole life.

Q: How has the fitness world changed over time, and where is it headed?

Austin: We still have a lot to do as fitness experts. In the 1970s, it was running. Then we went to aerobics to low-impact aerobics to step aerobics to yoga. The thing is to find something you love and stick with it.

The true message is that we still have a lot to do to get in shape. Everyone knows they have to work out. It's finding the time in our busy lives to actually do it.

Q: Is the perfect body more attainable now than it ever has been?

Austin: Well, honestly, I don't ever think of a perfect body. I think of a healthy body. No one is ever just perfect.

I tell people: It isn't about being a skinny mini. It's about being fit, being healthy, it's how you live your life, how you are balanced.

You have to live. I believe in everything in moderation. Sometimes when people overdo things, they quit. My goal for people is to make it attainable.

"Everyone knows they have to work out. It's finding the time in our busy lives to actually do it."

— Denise Austin

Now with the economy, people need a way to get rid of their stress. It's so important to get out for a walk at lunchtime. If you're 40, you really need to prevent things now. I'm 50, so I can relate.

Q: What can women expect from their bodies after 50?

Austin: I believe a woman can get a fit, toned and sexy body at 50, but she has to work out for it. Fight gravity all the way. Exercise is a must. Especially muscle-conditioning moves. To keep up your muscle tone and firm up, work out at least three times a week with weights, your own body weight, Pilates or boot-camp-type exercises that focus on strength.

Of course, cardio is so important, too, as well as stretching for flexibility.

Q: What about your children? How did your body change after pregnancies?

Austin: I have two daughters. I exercised during both pregnancies — even filmed my TV shows and did videos while pregnant. I gained 30 pounds with each one. It took me about three months afterward to look OK and about six months to get back to my pre-pregnancy form. I had to film my TV show six weeks after each baby so, of course, I didn't look my best, but it was real — nursing and all. Plus, it was interesting to note that the ratings went way up. Probably to see if my tummy was flat.

Quick Study

The topic: Optimism

Optimism may make heart problems less likely

THE QUESTION

Does a person's outlook on life — whether, for instance, they think good things or bad things will happen in the future — affect the health of his or her heart?

THIS STUDY

It analyzed data on 97,253 women, 50 to 79 years old, who did not have cardiovascular disease at the start of the study. In the next eight years, women with the most optimistic attitudes were 9 percent less likely to develop heart disease, 14 percent less likely to die prematurely from any cause and 30 percent less likely to die from heart disease than were women deemed to be the most pessimistic. Those rated as the most cynically hostile — meaning they generally distrusted people and had hostile thoughts about them — were 16 percent more likely to die during this time than were women who were the least cynical and hostile.

WHO MAY BE AFFECTED?

Post-menopausal women. More women in the U.S. die each year from heart disease than from anything else, 1.6 times more than die from all types of cancer combined.

CAVEATS

Ratings of optimism, pessimism and cynical hostility were based on the women's responses to questions. Whether the findings apply to men was not determined.

FIND THIS STUDY

It's in the Aug. 10 online issue of Circulation.

FITNESS IN BRIEF

The right way to stock a first aid kit

Are you prepared for blisters, a scissor accident, a twisted ankle ... or worse? Better check that your first aid kit is fully stocked.

Make sure it includes necessary medications and emergency phone numbers. The American Red Cross also recommends the following for a standard household kit: absorbent compress dressings, adhesive bandages (in assorted sizes), adhesive cloth tape, antibiotic ointment, antiseptic wipes, aspirin, a blanket, an instant cold compress, non-latex gloves, hydrocortisone ointment, scissors, roller bandages, sterile gauze pads, a non-mercury thermometer, tweezers and a first aid instruction booklet

You can also purchase ready-to-go emergency and first aid kits from the Red Cross at redcrossstore.org.

Counting calories

Ever wonder how many calories you really burn during your morning jog? The University of Maryland Medical System (UMMS) has an online calculator that can give you the answer. For someone who weighs 150 pounds and jogs for 30 minutes at about 7 miles per hour, it works out to be about 460 calories. How about playing tennis for an hour? That's 400 calories. Just plug in your weight, activity and the time you spend doing that activity, and the calculator spits out an estimate for calories burned.

UMMS has 23 other calculators that can tell you your risk of developing heart disease, how many grams of carbohydrates you should eat daily, what the likelihood is that your teenager may try marijuana, and more. But user beware: These tests should only be used as guidelines for addressing certain health issues. Still, if you have 15 minutes of down time, they are pretty entertaining. Check them out at www.healthcalculators.org

Coping with tension

Between worrying about making ends meet during a recession, staying healthy during flu season, and dealing with everything else you have going on in your life, the stress adds up. But there are some easy — and free — things you can do to cope with all the tension. Here is what James S. Gordon, the author of "Unstuck: Your Guide to the Seven-Stage Journey out of Depression," suggests:

- Meditate. Several times a day, practice slow, deep breathing with eyes closed and belly relaxed.

- Exercise regularly. It increases mood-enhancing neurotransmitters in the brain and decreases the levels of stress hormones.

- Reach out to friends or family for comfort and support. Sometimes just talking with others can help you put things in perspective.

Mastering the Interview

By Sean Bosker

The job interview is your proving ground, the place where you must demonstrate why you are the best person for the job. Making that powerful statement that you're the best of all the candidates requires the three Ps: Preparation, Presentation and Perception. PREPARE PREPARE PREPARE

When you walk into an interview, the more prepared you are, the better the chances are that you'll succeed. Memorize everything you put on your resume and cover letter and be prepared to explain each item. But you should also be ready to talk about more than just yourself. Get to know your future employer.

Warren Davis, the Director of Recruiting and Employment for RadioShack, emphasizes this point. "Your resume and application are fair game. Candidates should study themselves and the company with whom they're interviewing."

Read industry trade magazines, visit the company web site, and do a company search on Yahoo! Finance to find current news about your prospective employer. Be prepared to demonstrate what you know about the company and the industry. Michele Stagg, the Director of Human Resources at Banana Republic, says she is consistently impressed when candidates work their skills into the context of company news. "The more an informed candidate can tie past experience to the requirements of the job they are interviewing for, particularly in terms of what the company is doing, the better."

Another important part of preparation is making sure you look the part. Choosing what you wear is so important that it deserves its own article - Interview in Style.

PRESENTATION IS PARAMOUNT

Keep in mind that you are marketing yourself to everyone you meet. The more people you leave with a good impression, the better your chances are of being remembered. Project yourself as someone who is thoughtful, helpful, and prepared. Effective presentation includes being in the right place, at the right time. If you're late for the interview, you could inadvertently tell your interviewer that you're not right for the job.

With 35 years of experience in HR, Peter Ackerson, Specialist Leader at Deloitte Consulting, has been directly involved in hiring hundreds of candidates. When it comes to job interviews, he's seen it all. "There's nothing worse than getting a call from someone who is hung up in traffic or went to the wrong office," he explains.

Once you arrive, introduce yourself to the receptionist and turn off that cell phone. "Having a phone go off during an interview is a real turn off," says Ackerson. According to psychologist Albert Mehrabian, more than half of our communication is nonverbal or body language. Stagg agrees. "Body language is exceptionally important. Positive, upright and open body language shows self confidence and interest." During introductions give a firm handshake and then take a seat facing the interviewer.

When you go over your resume focus on your accomplishments instead of reiterating job descriptions. Presenting yourself as an active problem solver will show an employer that you can contribute and succeed in the role. Stagg agrees that this technique can make a fantastic impact. "Give very specific examples of your qualifications. If you have qualifications in financial analysis, give examples of projects you worked on where your analysis was necessary. Describe your experiences that tie in to your skills or qualifications. Even better, tell me how those will help you meet the requirements of the role you might fill in our company."

PERCEPTION IS KEY
The best way to know if your interviewer is getting what he needs is to ask questions. Susan Vobejda, the VP of Marketing at HotJobs elaborates, "When your interviewer asks you a complicated question, don't launch into your answer straightaway. Make certain you understand what is being asked." A clarifying question, or restating the question in your own words saves you from wasting your interviewer's time, and demonstrates that you are a careful listener. Asking the right questions can also demonstrate your ability to think strategically, and help you decide if the position is right for you. To that end, Stagg suggests ending the interview with this question: "What are you looking for in a candidate to fill this role?" If the answer turns out to be something that doesn't match your expectations, then you need to speak up.

Many candidates are so intimidated by the interview, they forget that the interviewer has a stake in seeing the candidate succeed. Peter Ackerson describes his attitude going into an interview as one of "hopeful skepticism." "They don't want you to fail; they want you to show them why you will succeed with their company. The sooner they hire you, the sooner the search can end."

Thanksgiving hostess decides it's time to pare her guest list

DEAR ABBY: I know it's early, but my problem is Thanksgiving. For the past several years we have included four other families for Thanksgiving dinner in our home. Their children are married now, and including their spouses and stepchildren, the number of guests is now close to 30. I feel it is too many and would like to downsize.

One family is my son's in-laws, whom I consider to be family. Another family hosts everyone for Easter, and I would still like to include them because we're close and we spend holidays with them.

The other two families are not as close with us anymore. We have never been invited to celebrate a holiday in their homes. They could cook for their families, and I feel like I am being used. I would like to tell them, after Thanksgiving is over this year, that we plan to have a smaller gathering next year. That will allow them ample time to make other plans. My husband agrees. How do I do this without causing a rift, since two families will be included and two won't?

— THANKSGIVING QUANDARY

DEAR QUANDARY: Because you are feeling "used," why not draw the line now? If you do, the two families will still have time to make other plans.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

The way to handle it would be to say: "This has been a year when everyone has had to cut back, and we are no exception. That's why we are limiting the number of guests we will be entertaining this Thanksgiving. We wanted you to know so there is enough time for you to make other arrangements. The parties have simply become too much work and too expensive to continue."

If those folks are friends, they'll grasp the economic reality and won't resent your honesty and pragmatism. And if they don't, they weren't real friends to begin with.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a 42-year-old female physician. I have been dating an engineer for some time who is currently unemployed. He's a good person, gentle and affectionate. However, he won't introduce me to his mother. I'm not sure why. The subject has come up several times, and he keeps putting it off. She's his only living family member.

Should this raise a red flag? We're both from India and he lives with his mother, which is common practice.

— M.D. IN A MUDDLE

DEAR M.D.: If the man is financially or emotionally dependent on his mother, he may be afraid that she will disapprove. Or, it could have something to do with the fact that he's unemployed. Whatever his reason, he owes you an explanation if you've been seeing each other for an extended period of time. And yes, it is a red flag. Bright red.

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend of several years has just told me he won't marry me as long as I have student loan debt to pay off. I have always been upfront with him about the amount of money I owe. It's a sizable sum, but my credit is good.

He says he loves me but cannot, in good faith, start a life with me owing that much money. Abby, am I wrong to think that student loans should not stop two people who love each other from getting married?

— LOANED OUT

IN NORTH CAROLINA

DEAR LOANED OUT: No, you are not. And furthermore, I suspect that rather than the money being the issue, it's that your boyfriend has had a change of heart.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

have the ability to anticipate the needs of others.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Form a philosophy. Others may challenge you to think things through and to develop a viable plan of action for the future.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Become the big fish in your local pond and get in the swim. You will be happiest when mingling with like-minded people.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You don't need to receive credit for your good works. You may be in a position to help a partner make some money.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): If you begin exploring business possibilities, you can easily gather momentum and gain speed with the least amount of effort.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Listen to the buzz of the beehive and set your sights on getting as close as possible to the queen bee. Turn on the charm and smile.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The more you give to others, the more you are likely to receive. Sympathy and generosity are tools you can put to good use today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You might hear something that sounds callous at first. Look deeper and you can find some genuine inspiration.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Don't take action based on frustrated ambitions. The obsessions that pop up now should be left to simmer on the back burner.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Communication devices can be lifelines that connect you to others. It is easy to show off your verbal talents and creativity.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Crystal-clear communications get the message across without delay or doubts. You will find that mental imagery works in your favor.

Today is Monday, Oct. 5, the 278th day of 2009. There are 87 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On Oct. 5, 1921, the World Series was carried on radio for the first time as Newark, N.J., station WJZ (later WABC) relayed a telephoned play-by-play account of the first game from the Polo Grounds, where the New York Giants were facing the New York Yankees, to a studio announcer who repeated the information on the air. (Although the Yankees won the opener, 3-0, the Giants won the series, 5-3.)

On this date: In 1829, the 21st president of the United States, Chester Alan Arthur, was born in Fairfield, Vt. (Some sources list 1830.)

In 1892, the Dalton Gang, notorious for its train robberies, was practically wiped out while attempting to rob a pair of banks in Coffeyville, Kan.

In 1931, Clyde Pangborn and Hugh Herndon completed the first nonstop flight across the Pacific Ocean, arriving in Washington state some 41 hours after leaving Japan.

In 1947, President Harry S. Truman delivered the first televised White House address as he spoke on the world food crisis.

In 1953, Earl Warren was sworn in as the 14th chief justice of the United States, succeeding Fred M. Vinson.

TODAY IN HISTORY

In 1958, racially desegregated Clinton High School in Clinton, Tenn., was mostly leveled by an early morning bombing.

In 1969, the British TV comedy program "Monty Python's Flying Circus" made its debut on BBC 1.

In 1970, British trade commissioner James Richard Cross was kidnapped in Canada by militant Quebec separatists; he was released the following December.

In 1988, Democrat Lloyd Bentsen lambasted Republican Dan Quayle during their vice presidential debate, telling Quayle, "Senator, you're not Jack Kennedy."

In 1989, a jury in Charlotte, N.C., convicted former PTL evangelist Jim Bakker of using his TV show to defraud followers. The Dalai Lama, the spiritual and temporal leader of Tibet, was named winner of the Nobel Peace Prize.

Ten years ago: It was announced that MCI WorldCom Inc. had agreed to pay $115 billion for Sprint Corp. (However, the deal collapsed less than a year later amid regulators' objections.) Two packed commuter trains collided near London's Paddington Station, killing 31 people.

Five years ago: Vice President Dick Cheney and Democratic rival John Edwards slugged it out over Iraq, jobs and each other's judgment in their one and only debate of the 2004 campaign. Americans' supply of flu vaccine was abruptly cut in half as British regulators unexpectedly shut down Chiron Corp., a major supplier. Americans David Gross, H. David Politzer and Frank Wilczek won the Nobel Prize in physics. Tiger Woods married Swedish model Elin Nordegren in Barbados. Comedian Rodney Dangerfield died in Los Angeles at age 82.

One year ago: Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice visited Kazakhstan, where she met with Foreign Minister Marat Tazhin; during a news conference, Rice said no one should question Kazakhstan's desire to have good relations with all countries in its region. In the wake of the global financial meltdown, Germany said it would follow suit with Ireland and Greece in guaranteeing all private bank accounts. The Detroit Shock won their third WNBA title in six seasons, beating the San Antonio Silver Stars 76-60 in Game 3. Producer and TV personality Lloyd Thaxton died in Los Angeles at age 81.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Like one that on a lonesome road Doth walk in fear and dread."
— Samuel Coleridge

Most people go into a cold sweat when faced with a squeeze, but often only a bit of technique is needed. In today's deal, for example, declarer employed the Vienna Coup, a device whereby a long suit can be run without one hand being embarrassed for discards.

West leads two top hearts against six clubs and South ruffs the second one. If the diamonds break 3-3, there are 12 tricks. But even if they don't, there is a chance for a squeeze.

Suppose that you continue by running the clubs. Four discards are needed from dummy, spades being the obvious candidates. But if either defender holds the spade king and four diamonds, as here, he should simply bare his spade king. When dummy's spade ace is cashed, the king will fall, establishing the queen. But now there is no way back to your hand to cash that spade winner.

If instead you cash the spade ace before running the trumps, your problems are solved. Here it is East who holds the spade king and the diamond guard, but it could have been West for the same money. When you play your last club, dummy's last low spade is discarded. If the spade king has been discarded, you cash the spade queen, then dummy's three top diamonds. If not, simply play diamonds from the top and hope for the best.

ANSWER: In situations of this sort, where you have a suit of your own, but partner has overcalled at the two-level, my bet would be on leading the club jack. The diamonds (dummy's likely long suit) can probably wait. However, if your sequence were in spades, where you might need to lead them at once, the situation would be far more problematic.
