M-C counties to lobby feds for prison facility

LAURIE WELCH/Times-News

Winston Inouye, a lobbyist and consultant for Idaho Policy Advisors, LLC, speaks to Cassia County commissioners on Monday regarding the potential for bringing a medium-security federal prison to southeast Cassia County.

Firm founded by Craig signs with M-C counties

By Laurie Welch
 Times-News writer

BURLEY — Cassia and Minidoka County commissioners Monday hired a consulting firm to assist in the procurement of a federal prison in southeast Cassia County that would partner with U.S. Geothermal Inc., the geothermal plant.

The consulting firm, New West Strategies, founded by former U.S. Sen. Larry Craig and Michael O. Ware, would assist Cassia County in the first phase of landing a $300 million medium-security prison.

The contract approved Monday calls for a monthly fee of $5,000, and commissioners also set aside a monthly travel budget of up to $500 for the effort.

Cassia County Administrator Kerry McMurray said in a phone interview Monday the city of Burley has agreed to chip in an undisclosed amount toward the consulting bill, while Cassia and Minidoka counties will split the remainder. McMurray said other cities may also join in the agreement.

McMurray said the issue of whether or not Craig would be breaking a ban on lobbying by a former senator for two years after leaving office has already been discussed by county officials.

“My understanding is that they have designed it (Craig’s consulting firm) to avoid any problems and to be in compliance with the law,” McMurray said.

Employees of Craig’s firm, however, are free to lobby

Aragon jury selection underway

By Andrea Jackson
 Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — Jury selection continues today in the trial of Robert Aragon, who is accused of involuntary manslaughter and injury to a child for the hypothermia death of his daughter last year in Lincoln County.

Aragon’s case continued to draw national attention on Monday as cameramen and producers from the Turner Broadcasting cable channel truTV removed an aisle of benches from the only courtroom in Shoshone to make room for recording equipment to be used in the trial that may begin today.

A truTV crew will tape video from the courtroom for the entire trial, the program’s field producer, Tania Mirza, told Judge G. Richard Bevan on Monday during a pretrial meeting for attending media. Prosecutors and Aragon’s defense attorney declined to attend Monday’s meeting.

Lawyers may finish jury selection today, and court officials said Monday that opening arguments won’t likely start until at least this afternoon. A four-day trial is scheduled, according to online court records.

Bevan said Shoshone’s aging courthouse suffered two power outages on Monday, though truTV staff said their equipment is low wattage and shouldn’t disrupt the courtroom.

Bevan’s media order concerning what photographers and videographers will be allowed to record in the courtroom for Aragon’s trial, which includes a prohibition of recording or photographing jurors, is identical to one used in the 2005 trial for Sarah Johnson, who is imprisoned for two life sentences in the 2003 murders of her parents in Blaine County.

The case against Aragon arose after he allegedly let his

WINTERY WEATHER

MEAGAN THOMPSON/Times-News

Lauren Rogers, 18, of Twin Falls, adjusts her stocking cap after taking it off during the National Anthem before the Twin Falls High School varsity boys soccer match against Wood River High School on a chilly Monday evening in Twin Falls. Rogers was at the match to root on her boyfriend, Bruins senior forward Dustin Hegstrom, in the team’s last regular-season game. Although Monday’s temperatures in the 40s cleared snow in Twin Falls, heavier snow in the Wood River Valley halted a match between the Bruins and Wolverines girls soccer teams for at least one more day.

Storms cut off power, close schools in Wood River Valley

Regional temperatures set to rise by weekend

By Nate Poppino
 Times-News writer

This weekend’s burst of winter weather knocked out power to much of the Wood River Valley and Fairfield on Monday, prompting at least two school closures and postponing other events.

But forecasters said temperatures could be back in the 60s in some areas by this weekend, and that the region shouldn’t see another large storm for roughly a couple of weeks.

About 3,600 Idaho Power Co. customers who rely on three feeder lines in and around the Wood River Valley lost power between 4:30 and 5 a.m., said Russ Jones, a spokesman for the utility. Communities affected included Hailey, Bellevue and Carey, as well as Fairfield.

All of the affected customers were back online by early Monday afternoon, leaving Idaho Power workers to focus on helping 650 customers in Featherville and Pine, who lost electricity at about 9:16 a.m. Sunday, Jones said. A SNOTEL station run by the U.S. Natural Resources Conservation Service and seated 11 miles from Pine recorded 27 inches of snow as of Monday morning.

“When we have real heavy snow like this, and if you have wind, that also has the potential to cause some problems,” Jones said when asked how the outages compared to what the utility faces each fall.

In Bellevue, outages closed both Bellevue Elementary School and The Mountain School. Elsewhere in the valley, a Wood River Middle School field trip today was rescheduled for Monday, and a Wood River High School girls’ soccer game was delayed.

Students at Bellevue Elementary were bused to Woodside Elementary School in Hailey to be picked up by their parents, though the power at the school came back on at about 11:30 a.m.

“There are so many trees down in Bellevue we just didn’t know” when the power would return, said

Laurie Kaufman, clerk of the Blaine County School Board.

Jack Messick, a meteorologist in the National Weather Service’s Pocatello office, said Bald Mountain received about 16 inches of snow Sunday and Monday, with a bit less at lower elevations. The rest of south-central Idaho received several inches of snow that largely melted by Monday afternoon.

The storm was “fairly unusual” for early October, Messick said, though it only showed up a week earlier than the Oct. 11 snowstorm that moved through the area last year. No major storms are expected until perhaps the weekend of Oct. 17, he said. But a northerly wind will keep temperatures colder until the coming weekend, when south-central Idaho should reach highs in the 50s or 60s.

“It will improve,” he said. “Skies will be clear.”

Fire district to pursue judicial confirmation

By Nate Poppino
 Times-News writer

The Rock Creek Rural Fire Protection District is preparing to apply for a $500,000 block grant to help it build a new fire station at Red Cap Corner.

The rest of the $1.5 million project would be paid for by the district itself, which plans to approach a judge for permission to go into debt. The strategy comes after Rock Creek failed to secure federal stimulus funding for the station earlier this year, said Battalion Chief Jason Keller.

The fire district covers the eastern tip of Twin Falls County, and also contracts with Kimberly and Hansen for services in those towns. A master plan commissioned last year found that three of its four fire stations will need improvement or replacement in the long term; Keller said the new station would provide sleeping quarters, a bigger training facility and be a viable building into the future.

“Once it’s paid for, we’ll man it,” Keller said.

Planning for the station began three years ago, but became more of a possibility earlier this year. Now, district officials are working with attorneys to plan out the application to the judge, while the application for funding through an Idaho Community Development Block Grant is due Nov. 20.

MORNING BRIEFING

Pat's Picks

Three things to do today

Pat Marcantonio

• Like lasagna? How about an auction? If you answered yes to either, head to the Twin Falls Christian Academy Harvest Fair Dinner and Auction, which starts with a 6 p.m. dinner at 798 Eastland Drive N., Twin Falls.

Proceeds go toward TFCA programs. Admission is $8. Information: 733-1452.

• Mining is dangerous. So is taking photos in and around mines. With that in mind, do something considerably less dangerous and check out "Mining the Wood River Valley," a display of mining photographs on display through Nov. 27 at 314 Second Ave., Ketchum. The display is free, but is only open from noon to 5 p.m., Wednesdays through Friday.

Information: sunvalley-center.org or 726-9491, ext. 10.

• Finally, find out how to merge your personal computer and that big LCD TV you have to form Voltron — or at least a sweet home entertainment system.

The College of Southern Idaho Community Education Center class "Computer Meets Home Entertainment" will tell you how to get the most out of your big-ticket electronics. Classes start at 6:30 tonight, with a second class on Oct. 13.

The cost is $45. To register: 732-6290, or communityed.csi.edu.

Salgado hearing postponed

Prosecution to examine physical evidence further

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — A preliminary hearing has been postponed for an Aberdeen man charged with first-degree murder after he allegedly shot and killed a Rupert man, beat the man's fiancée and stole her car.

Gerry Salgado, 22, was charged with first-degree murder, aggravated battery and grand theft, along with an enhancement charge for using a deadly weapon while committing a felony, after Salgado allegedly shot Liopoldo Amescua, 25, and beat Estella Castro, 46, of Rupert, near the Raft River Store on Sept. 19.

Salgado was scheduled for a preliminary hearing on the charges Monday but it was postponed after a Friday court order granted prosecutors extended time to obtain physical evidence, court records show. A new date for the hearing has not yet been set.

According to court records, Castro made a 911 call and told police that she and Amescua had picked up a man near Raft River who needed a ride to Idaho Falls. Castro told police that Salgado, whom she later identified through a photo lineup, attacked her and Amescua and stole her car.

Castro sustained cuts to her shoulders at the base of her neck, lost several teeth and was bruised on her upper body and head. She was taken by air ambulance to Portneuf Medical Center in Pocatello. Amescua died at the scene from a single gunshot wound to the head, according to court records.

Police later found Salgado's abandoned pickup off Interstate 86, Exit 15, with a handgun on the floorboard, court records state. Castro's vehicle was later found in the Snake River near Montgomery Bridge, where it had been dumped.

Salgado was arrested in Bingham County on Sept. 21. He is being held in the Mini-Cassia Criminal Justice Center without bond, due to the nature of the alleged crimes.

Burley man to change plea for gun assault on teen

Times-News

William Stirling Teeter, 50, of Burley, who was charged in June with felony aggravated assault for allegedly pulling a gun on a teenager in his yard, is scheduled to change his plea.

Court records show Teeter is scheduled to change his plea and be sentenced on Oct. 30.

According to a Cassia

County Sheriff's Office report, Teeter allegedly brandished a semi-automatic pistol on the 13-year-old boy.

The police report said the victim was playing with the ball while Teeter was mowing his lawn when the ball rolled onto Teeter's yard.

The victim said he walked over to retrieve the ball, and then, the report reads, "William drew a pistol from his hip."

The victim's father, according to the report, told police that Teeter has threatened his children with a firearm on at least one other occasion.

When questioned by Deputy Matt Arthur, Teeter allegedly said the "neighbor kid has been causing a lot of problems."

Teeter said he didn't aim at the kid.

"William told me that he was angry and drew his gun to shoot the ball. (The victim) picked up the ball and William holstered his pistol," the report continues. "I asked him if he thought it may have been a bad decision to pull a gun on a juvenile that was posing no threat. William told me that he knew he did wrong."

T.F. police warn of 'Rambo' game dangers

Times-News

The Twin Falls Police Department has recently responded to several complaints from citizens concerning a game called "Rambo," according to a Monday press release.

Rambo, according to police, is a game similar to hide-and-seek, in which several players start in one area of town and attempt to reach another location without being seen by other players in vehicles.

Although the game appears innocent, players running through yards and jumping fences in order to avoid detection have been mistaken for burglars or other criminals, leading to emergency calls from area residents.

Players who enter private property while playing the game may be committing crimes including, but not limited to: curfew violations, trespassing, disorderly conduct, disturbing the peace, property damage and various traffic offenses, according to police.

Since the game creates suspicious behavior, police will respond and take appropriate action, including filing appropriate criminal charges. Citizens are asked to be aware of activities in their neighborhood and report any suspicious activity.

Earlier in the case, Aragon and his cousin Kenneth Quintana were charged with more serious crimes of second-degree murder for Sage's death. Quintana was a passenger in Aragon's car on the day of Sage's fatal trek. Charges against him were later dismissed, and the second-degree murder allegation against Aragon was reduced to involuntary manslaughter.

Prison

"Lobbying is all about advocating for a particular client," Carpinelli said. "As of 2008, senators are prohibited from lobbying Congress for two years; former House members for one year. They're pretty strict about it. Former members are prohibited from lobbying efforts by e-mail, phone or any contact influencing policy."

The ban does not include communication with the Federal Bureau of Prisons or Cassia County.

"They (former senators) can lobby before any other entity in those two years," Carpinelli said.

Cassia County commissioners met Monday with Winston Inouye, a lobbyist and consultant for Idaho Policy Advisors, LLC who is retained by the Mini-Cassia Commerce Authority as a consultant on economic development issues. He will act as a liaison between the counties and Craig's firm, New West Strategies.

Inouye said it will be about 18 months before the county knows if it was chosen, and another four and a half to five years to build the facility.

"I say 'yes,'" said Cassia County Commissioner Dennis Crane. "Let's get it going."

Cassia County Commissioner Clay Handy noted that because the prison would be a federal facility there would be no property tax incentive for the county.

"Basically Cassia County would be carrying the ball for the whole community," Handy said. "And the benefit would be jobs."

CSI looking to start ROTC program

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

The College of Southern Idaho is looking into starting an Army ROTC program, which would likely begin in the fall of 2010.

The college's first ROTC class would likely start out with up to 25 students and provide a valuable opportunity for participants to gain leadership training, said Darrell Buffalo, department chair for trade and industrial education. Students in ROTC, or Reserve Officers Training Corps, get scholarships and a stipend during their four years of college, in exchange for a commitment to serve as an officer in the Army after obtaining a bachelor's degree.

In the case of CSI, its ROTC program would be affiliated with Idaho State University's ROTC program, but students also would have the flexibility to transfer to other four-year schools, including Boise State University and the University of Idaho, to finish the program, Buffalo said.

The college's curriculum committee still needs to review the ROTC program later this month.

Students are also able to participate in ROTC for their first two years of college without making a commitment to serve in the military after graduation. But there are still benefits for students who don't become officers.

"The first two years is really heavy in all types of personal leadership," Buffalo said.

The University of Idaho's program started ROTC classes in 2008 at North Idaho College, said Capt. Tim Tate, the ROTC scholarship officer for the University of Idaho.

"It's spurring interest in young people for the Army's sake," he said, adding that the first two years of classes offer fun outdoors and adventure-based training for students.

Students who complete ROTC programs have a commitment of four years active duty, followed by four years in the inactive reserves or six years in Army National Guard or Army Reserve, followed by two years in the inactive reserves.

ROTC participants receive a scholarship that covers books, tuition and fees, plus a stipend that starts out as $300 per month in the freshman year and grows to $500 a month in the senior year of college.

Is there a rival to Balanced Rock out there?

Ever hear of Monument Rock, Idaho? Neither have I. Neither has Greg Lanting of Twin Falls.

"My mom was looking in some tubs of items from my mom's parents' farm home," Lanting explained. "There are a bunch of very old postcards. Some of them have copyrights on the pictures from 1908. One postcard has a picture of a tall, spire-type of rock with a boulder perched on top. The front of the postcard says, Monument Rock Idaho."

In the photo on the postcard, two men are standing at the base. The rock appears to be about 50 feet tall.

"I have never seen or heard of this rock, nor have my parents," Lanting said. "I also Googled it and came up blank. Just wondering if it is a fake. Maybe your readers might have an idea?"

Clearly, it isn't Balanced Rock in the photo. So anybody have an idea what — or where — Monument Rock might be?

Burley man pleads guilty in Walmart theft case

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

RUPERT — A Burley man and former employee accused of stealing nearly $4,400 worth of merchandise from the north Burley Walmart pleaded guilty Monday to two of the five charges against him and will be sentenced in December.

Adam Macaalay White, 21, was scheduled to face a jury Wednesday in Minidoka County 5th District Court on five counts of felony burglary but entered a plea agreement to plead guilty to two of the charges, according to court records.

He will be sentenced at 9 a.m. Dec. 14.

White, along with his roommates and accomplices, Kyle Casey Hotchkiss, 30, of Burley; Amanda L. Petersen, 24, of Burley; and Monica Rocha, 17, of Burley, were each charged with five counts of burglary after White, who worked in the photo department of the store, bagged up high-priced items and charged them for less-expensive merchandise, according to court records.

Hotchkiss is slated to face a jury at 8:30 a.m. Nov. 4, on five counts of burglary. Petersen pleaded guilty to three of five counts and will be sentenced at 9 a.m. Nov. 3. Because Rocha is a minor, her case was sealed, according to court records.

According to the court affidavit, store managers reviewed security tapes from the end of May through mid-June and discovered several occasions where the ploy was used by White.

The group allegedly stole more than 2,000 photos, iPods, a camcorder, a stereo, electronic game consoles and software, according to court records.

According to the court affidavit some of the merchandise was taken to the Walmart in Jerome, where it was returned for cash.

In Idaho the penalty for burglary is one to 10 years in prison for each count.

Law & Disorder...

... in Cassia County

From Sept. 15 police reports: Malicious injury to property:

A 38-year-old Burley man reported that he "got into an argument with his wife (39), and she hit him with a bat." After that, according to the report, she used the bat to break a tail light on his van. The man said he didn't want to press charges but wanted the light fixed.

"I did not see any injury or red marks anywhere on (his) face or head. (He) said he just had sinus surgery and was having a hard time breathing but he refused medical treatment. He was clearly upset and agitated," Deputy Peggy Marizza's report reads, adding that it appeared the argument "had lasted most of the day."

When the woman was questioned, she allegedly revealed that the man had been using meth with someone on felony probation since they moved to Burley in July to live with the man's mom. She reportedly admitted to breaking the light "because she was mad." The man, according to the report, told police he wanted the vehicle fixed but didn't want his wife to take any money out of the bank.

"I told him there was nothing I could do about the money because they are married. (He) thanked me for my time and walked away," the report reads.

Harassment:

A 35-year-old Burley woman told police that she works with someone named Guido at JB's Restaurant and that the two have been friends for about a decade but that the relationship "became physical" in July. After finding out about it, according to the report, Guido's wife wrote the woman a three-page letter "telling her she better quit JB's." The complainant allegedly added that "someone, possibly Guido and (his wife)," wrote her number on a restroom wall at the Blue Room Lounge in Rupert. She said the two of them had been in the bar that week but was told by Deputy Peggy Marizza that "this was not enough proof they wrote her number on the wall." The report concludes: "She found out that her name was on the bathroom wall because she got several phone calls from strangers who said they got her number off of the wall."

Educator promotes new ways to reach students

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Today's educators are often still using chalkboards to educate students living in an iPhone world.

While white chalk on a blackboard still works to present information, the lessons on those boards may not be reaching as many students as they once did, according to Jim Warford, an education expert who spoke to Blaine County School District teachers last Friday.

"Today's students are flat-out wired differently than we are," Warford said. "They're used to having information flying at them and, as a result, 10-year-olds have larger brains than we did at their age. That's why your students are so bored when we use old teaching methods."

Warford, former chancel-

Jim Warford holds up the Kindle, on which he downloads books and newspapers, as one way to keep up with students in today's rapidly changing world.

KAREN BOSSICK/For the Times-News

lor of public schools in Florida, is a senior consultant at the International Center for Leadership in Education, which analyzes the best schools in the nation to find out what works.

The world is changing faster than schools are, he said, noting the economy of the future is going to be controlled by those in biotechnology and genetic engineering.

"In the future we'll be able to regrow teeth, arms and other limbs. "That's the world your students will live in. Are we even talking about that in our public schools?"

And while President Obama recently called for a longer school year and more hours in school for U.S. children, Warford said the answer to helping the nation's underperforming students won't come by piling up homework or extending school hours.

What's important, he said, is that teachers move away from drills that rely on memorization and focus on creative problem solving.

"My son always told me, 'Dad, don't use my brain as a hard drive,'" Warford said. "We need to stretch our students."

Schools of tomorrow will look different thanks, in part, to the rise of online curriculum. Online curriculum will grow to 8.2 million courses from 1 million in 2007, according to Harvard business theorist Clayton Christensen.

"Given that, some legislators are already trying to figure out how they can remove teachers from the equation," Warford said.

High school science teacher Larry Barnes said he is trying to keep his students abreast of current developments in biotechnology.

"I tell my students that biotechnology will be to the 21st century what physics was to the 20th," he said. "It's interesting, however to contemplate the number of online classes that will be offered in the school of tomorrow."

Hailey engineer David Wray said it's important that today's students realize they'll compete on a global level for tomorrow's jobs.

"We're 26th or 27th in math and science," he said. "If we don't change the way we teach, we're going to become a third-world country."

Moscow mulls tighter rules on chickens

MOSCOW (AP) — The city is considering tougher rules on poultry amid an increased interest from residents who want to raise chickens in their backyards.

Moscow City Attorney Randy Fife has been asked to scratch out a new chicken ordinance.

"We're getting two competing interests," Fife told the Lewiston Tribune.

"There are people complaining about roosters and neighborhood chickens, and then we have increasing inquiries from people who want to raise chickens in their backyards," Fife said.

In the economic downturn, more people have become interested in growing things themselves or giving their children a small slice of farm living in their backyards, Fife said, "but on the other hand, you have people saying 'I'm not so sure in an urbanized setting that it's appropriate.'"

The rules now allow property owners to keep up to 50 chickens, limited at 25 for every 5,000 square feet of their lot.

The city ordinance applies to fowl in general, which means residents of this university town could also have up to 50 ducks or 50 geese, depending on the size of their property.

The average residential lot in Moscow is about 6,000 square feet.

"I would never suggest banning poultry," Fife said of revamping the ordinance.

"The way I'm going to approach it is try to find some balance number, something less than a commercial enterprise in a residential zone, but something more than nothing," he said.

Moscow resident Carol Spurling and her family keep their chickens — Nellie, Dorothy, Margaret, Myrtle and Mable — in a backyard coop on N. Lincoln St.

"Chickens are livestock, but really they're pets," Spurling said.

"They're good to have around because they really take care of our composting. And there's the egg factor. We love getting fresh eggs. And they're very friendly and personable birds," she said.

As outreach and ownership coordinator for the Moscow Food Co-op, Spurling is promoting a "Co-op Coop Cruise" on Sunday that includes stops at four backyard hen houses, including hers.

"It's to help people who are curious to learn about it, and find out if it's feasible for them," Spurling said.

Police end search for suspect near Granite Falls

By Gene Johnson
Associated Press writer

SEATTLE — If it was the notorious teen burglar, he got away again.

Dozens of police combed thick forest near the small town of Granite Falls, Wash., on Sunday night and Monday, after a shot was fired near deputies responding to a break-in. But they called the search off Monday afternoon without finding their suspect.

Because the break-in occurred near where a stolen plane from Idaho crash-landed last week, detectives thought it might have been the work of 18-year-old Colton Harris-Moore, a prolific burglar from Camano Island who may have stolen three airplanes in the past year.

"Obviously we're aware of what everyone's talking about, but deputies didn't see him, and so until we make an arrest and know who it is, we can't say," said Snohomish County sheriff's spokeswoman Rebecca Hover.

Harris-Moore was first convicted at age 12 and is suspected in nearly 50 cases since he snuck out the window of a halfway house in April 2008. He is believed to have taken and hard-landed two airplanes from the San Juan Islands in the past year before stealing a boat and making his way to Point Roberts, a nub of land in the northwest corner of Washington that's an easy walk from the Canadian border.

In the days before the Cessna was taken from the Bonners Ferry airport in Idaho last Tuesday, burglaries were reported at the Creston, British Columbia, airport, 35 miles north. Several planes were moved around, and a car was stolen which later was found about a quarter-mile from the U.S. border, Royal Canadian Mounted Police Staff Sgt. Gordon Stewart said Monday.

Another car was stolen on the other side of the border and ditched at the Bonners Ferry airport. Pat Gardiner, who owns the Cessna, told The Associated Press on Monday that his hangar and a few others were broken into over the Sept. 26-27 weekend; all that was taken was a Leatherman utility tool.

Idaho gets 1st batch of vaccine for swine flu

By Todd Dvorak
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Idaho received its first shipment of swine flu vaccine Monday, but it could be several weeks before the general public can line up for flu shots as public health officials wait for more shipments or devote initial doses to high-risk health care workers.

The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare announced that all seven of the state's public health districts received initial shipments of the 9,200 doses ordered last week. The first doses are the nasal-spray vaccine, which has a limited use.

"We're going to wait a while, then do mass immunization clinics in our area," said Amy Lierman, spokesman for the South Central Public Health District, which is based in Twin Falls and serves eight counties. "We're getting such small shipments right now, so it will take us a little time until we can begin reaching a lot of people."

Public health district officials said the first doses of the FluMist could be administered to doctors, nurses, emergency medical staff and law enforcement personnel by the end of the week.

Several cases of swine flu — what scientists call the 2009 H1N1 strain — have already been reported in Idaho's prisons, colleges and universities and public schools.

State health officials confirmed in late September that a man in Canyon County who was suffering from health problems died after getting swine flu — the first known swine flu-related death in the state this year. At the time, the state said it had 488 confirmed cases of swine flu since April, with more than a quarter reported in late August and September.

The first shipments are being apportioned to the seven districts based on population, said Tom Shanahan, spokesman for the Department of Health and Welfare.

For example, 1,000 doses of FluMist arrived at the Central District Health Department in Boise. The South Central District got just 400 doses.

As future doses of an injection shot are delivered, public health officials said they intend to schedule mass vaccination clinics in large public spaces or community centers. The vaccinations at those events will be free of charge, although private care providers may charge a fee for administering the shots.

"At this point, we plan on offering those clinics at the end of the month and through November, but it all depends on when we start getting in more shipments," said Laurie Boston, spokeswoman at Southwest District Health.

Idaho ordered 9,000 doses last week, the most allowed at the time by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The state ordered another 200 on Friday and will order more as soon as it is allowed, Shanahan said.

"It's pretty limited right now, but it's started and that's good news," he said.

As many as 7 million doses of vaccine are expected to be shipped by the federal government by week's end. But federal officials predicted that as many as 40 million doses will be shipped nationwide by the end of the month.

The FluMist form of the vaccine will not be administered to pregnant women, children under age two or those over 49.

Free land offer mostly fails in small Alaska town

By Rachel D'Oro
Associated Press writer

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Reality trumped the dream for most winners of a land giveaway in Alaska's rugged interior.

The town of Anderson — population 300 — is foreclosing on 18 of 26 large, spruce-covered lots it gave away because the new owners did not develop them as required.

"It sounded good in theory. Oh yeah, free land. But the reality is it costs a lot of money to build up here," said Eric Warner, one of the few to build a home, on Monday.

Officials blame a lack of local jobs and a bad economy for the failed homesteading experiment devised by high school students to boost the dwindling population of the town, 75 miles from the regional hub of Fairbanks. Nobody believes anyone was scared off by reports of the occasional day of 60-below weather.

The March 2007 giveaway prompted thousands of calls from around the world. By the day of the land grab, 44 waited in line. Many camped out in weather as cold as minus-25 for a shot at the 1.3-acre lots, which went to the first 26 people to claim them and put down nonrefundable $500 deposits.

Under the rules, winning applicants were supposed to build a house measuring at least 1,000 square feet within two years.

Many of the winners, however, never came back or communicated with the town, even to respond to formal letters asking what their intentions were, City Clerk Darla Coghill said. She still hears daily from others interested in getting some free land, but she tells them Anderson is out of that business these days.

She thinks most outsiders couldn't cut living in a place where the nearest gasoline and groceries are a 20-mile drive away.

Hailey bids farewell to longtime postmaster

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Kathleen Eder wasn't sure about taking the postmaster job in Hailey 27 years ago — the town didn't even have sidewalks, she recalled.

But the lure of being close to a world-class ski resort like Sun Valley was too great. And in the ensuing years, she played a role in bringing the small town into the 21st century with a modern 37,000-square-foot post office and home delivery. Someone else will have to take the reins from here, as Eder retired this week.

"The Postal Service needs to revamp itself. If I had the energy, I would stay around and help but..." she said. "I've got a sister who's a ski instructor in New Zealand and kids in Denver and Salt Lake City. This is the first time I've cut the cord and been able to travel."

Eder hadn't planned to become part of Uncle Sam's modern-day Pony Express. She majored in physical therapy at the University of Montana. But she began carrying mail to stay in Whitefish, Mont., after her internship there ended.

She carried the mail during summer in her shorts and in a down parka and Sorrel boots when temperatures dipped 30 and 40 degrees below zero.

In 1982, she followed in the footsteps of her father, a postmaster in Spokane and Great Falls, Mont.

Eder couldn't even find Hailey's post office when she arrived. It was tucked away off Main Street, behind what is now the Hailey Public Library.

Former Blaine County School District Superintendent Jim Lewis took a turn conducting the Wood River High School orchestra with Andy Lewis during a Sept. 27 retirement picnic. Jim Lewis was instrumental in starting the orchestra program at Wood River at a time when other schools were cutting music programs, said choir director Max Stimac.

HAILEY — He was nearly suspended from Castleford High School after he was caught trying to move his principal's outhouse in a prank.

But Jim Lewis learned a valuable lesson that night — that education is a privilege. He went on to become 2004 Idaho School Superintendent of the Year.

He also touched the lives

"We need to redo this picture," Jim Lewis told his wife, Joyce, as they posed for pictures beneath a large blow-up picture of them. On Sept. 27 a couple hundred adults and students turned out to wish Lewis "Happy fishing" during a retirement picnic of chicken fajitas and carrot cake served at Wood River High School.

Buses brought well-wishers from Carey and Ketchum. And students in the Wood River jazz band, orchestra and women's singing group performed as supporters read Jim Lewis trivia cards that told how the community of American Falls had named a track and field facility after him.

Severe chronic skin itching caused by a rare disorder

DEAR DR. GOTT: Would you like one more letter about a severe-itching diagnosis? I was in my 60s when mine started. I did not have a rash or any visible cause for it, but it was horrible. I would get up at night and take a cold shower or rub ice all over my body. The scratching caused bleeding and sores, so I went to my dermatologist.

After my third visit, he recommended another dermatologist, who treated me for scabies. When nothing worked, she said she couldn't help me. It was awful: I couldn't sleep or eat.

Still another dermatologist was recommended. He tried a few things that didn't help, then decided to do a skin biopsy. So, lo and behold, we had a name for it: bullous pemphigoid. He put me on prednisone. I had a terrible reaction to that and lost all muscle control, and fell and broke my ankle in two places. The prednisone was then stopped, and he put me on Imuran and an antibiotic. That was the magic potion. My itch started clearing up, but it took a while. Now, 10 years later, I'm still taking the Imuran because I have spots that still break out from time to time. The dosage is gradually being reduced. I am so grateful to my doctor. I don't know why the other doctors didn't do a skin biopsy.

DEAR READER: Bullous pemphigoid is a rare, chronic skin condition that causes fluid-filled blisters to form, usually on the arms, legs or trunk. The disorder is thought to be autoimmune but the exact cause is still unknown. It usually affects people over the age of 60.

Common symptoms include redness, rash, irritation, blisters, itching, hive-like lesions, bleeding gums and mouth sores. Mild cases may not develop into blisters. Instead, slight redness and irritation may mind. I remember thinking: Maybe when the snow falls it will look better," she recalled.

She increased delivery to East Fork residents north of Hailey from three days a week to six. And in 1998 she oversaw the move of the post office from its 2,100-square-foot facility in Hailey's downtown to a site near the airport.

It was not easy, she recalls.

Eighty-two people lost their post-office box numbers, "And that was the end of the world to them," she said.

And she had to institute delivery — something Ketchum still doesn't have — after businesspeople complained it took too long to get in their cars and drive to the post office to pick up their mail.

She started with 100 deliveries before expanding into home delivery. Today carriers make 1,300 deliveries on four routes.

Over the years, Eder has been involved in a number of civic ventures, including Rotary Club, the building of St. Luke's Wood River Medical Center and the current push to build an assisted-living facility in Hailey.

Her community involvement was apparent on her last day, as a steady stream of people she had served — and served with — came by to wish her well, from former Blaine County Commissioner Len Harlig to Vicki Abrams, who is working to get the assisted-living facility built.

"My husband, Ed, retired from firefighting after 34 years on the force. For you to go 32 and one-half years in the same career — that's something you don't see much anymore," Hailey resident Carmen Northen told her.

Eder's boss, Bill Scouten, manager of post office operations in southern Idaho, watched the parade into the post office.

"She serves a unique clientele with people who call this home but are not here permanently," he said. "She's been a sterling manager who's taken care of business without a lot of oversight on our part. And, as you can see, she's tied to the community; she's been involved."

occur. Severe cases may leak fluid, appear crusty, become painful and develop into open sores.

Treatment includes oral or topical corticosteroids, such as prednisone or hydrocortisone, which reduce inflammation; immunosuppressant drugs that calm the immune response and reduce inflammation; or corticosteroid-sparing agents that help reduce the necessary dosage of steroid or immunosuppressant medications. It is also important to protect the skin from the sun by using sunscreen whenever going outside (regardless of the season); take supplements, such as calcium and vitamin D if on long-term steroid treatment; avoid injuries because of skin fragility; and, if the mouth is affected, avoid crunchy foods, such as raw fruits and vegetables, that may cause a flare-up.

With treatment, the condition usually recedes within one to five years. Untreated, it may disappear spontaneously but can take as long as 10 years, and there is no guarantee it will resolve on its own. Skin infections are common complications of the disorder, and keeping the skin clean and dry is important. Treatment to reduce symptoms will also help, since scratching often results in open wounds or tears in the skin, which then allows bacteria to enter.

I cannot say why your first two dermatologists failed to order a skin biopsy and am disappointed to hear that they both gave up so easily. I also applaud your current dermatologist for sticking with you to determine the cause of your itching.

Superintendent

Superintendents Association and president of the Idaho Administrators Association.

During his 13 years as superintendent and assistant superintendent for Blaine County Schools, he oversaw the district's first summer school, started the first dual-immersion program providing bilingual instruction for English- and Spanish-speaking students, and oversaw the startup of several high school academies focusing on finance, information technology, hospitality and travel, culinary arts, architecture, mechanical design, performing arts and construction.

He led the passage of a $38 million levy — the second largest plant facilities levy approved in Idaho history. And he oversaw the building of high schools in Hailey and Carey, as well as an elementary school in Hailey.

That's just for starters. "It's all about the kids," said Lewis, repeating his long-standing mantra. "I've always asked, 'Is this the best thing for the kids?'"

Rudi Lewis told how his father called upon his love of math to calculate horse racing odds by hand in the days before computers.

He also coached the Skyline High School boys basketball team in Idaho Falls to a 24-1 record and Class 5A state championship in 1989.

"As a coach he always overachieved with under-talented teams," said Lewis' other son, Ric Lewis. "When he coached he said, 'Every day in every way we get a little better.'"

A $15,000 scholarship — the Lewis Legacy Scholarship — has been established in Lewis' name, said Theresa Castellano-Wood, of the Works of Grace Foundation.

And Nov. 1 — Lewis' birthday — has been declared Jim Lewis Day by mayors of Ketchum, Hailey and Bellevue.

In addition, the entryway of the Community Campus in Hailey is being made over to feature two benches honoring Lewis, next to a rock that says "Promises Made, Promises Delivered."

The slogan refers to the school district's strategic plan, which Lewis signed off on just before his August retirement.

Bradley R. Mason Hepworth

On Oct. 2, 2009, at St. Luke's Medical Center, Bradley passed from his mother's loving arms clutching around him into his Lord's open arms. He could not fight off the pneumonia this time.

dearly and their bond was very special. After Bradley's grandpa died, John said, "Now you can call me papa." Now that John's health is failing, Bradley became his caretaker and loved every minute of it. Rodney, Bradley's brother, was the shining light in his eyes. He knew Rodney could fix anything, and he loved to call Rodney on the phone. His other love was for his nephew, Eric. He loved spending time with him and loved for him to come home from Boise and go out to eat with him. When his father died, it was a difficult time for Bradley. He loved him immensely.

"My dear son, Bradley, you have left an enormous hole in my heart; we had a special bond. Just with a look at each other, we knew what each other was thinking. You had a smile that could brighten a room and a sincere hug that could warm my heart on a cold day. We have been so lucky to have you in our hearts. Bradley, you are a part of who we are, each of us, and we are so thankful we had the opportunity to know and love you. You will always be remembered and missed." (Mama) "God take my son. He is a very special one."

Bradley started classes in special education at the Buhl schools and later transferred to Twin Falls. He participated in Special Olympics until his health declined. He loved going to the Center for Independent Living each day and being with all his friends. He learned sign language and helped deliver meals to the shut-ins. He could be a clown and keep everyone laughing. He had a special memory of people he met and places he went, all of his life. His Grandmother Feckner and he traveled every year to California, and he cherished those trips and the time spent with his grandparents. When they passed away, his mother and his Aunt Helen continued the traveling tradition which he looked forward to. Always a highlight was when they took him to New York City and standing and looking up at the big buildings and riding in the yellow taxi cabs.

His special friend of 30 years is Amy Reed. They graduated together and have celebrated each other's birthdays and holidays and the annual trip to the Filer Fair. He loved going to the Sun Valley condo, but after two or three days, it was time to get back to school and to his routine and friends. Bradley blessed us with 48 years of love, much longer than the doctors had predicted at birth. Although his verbal skills were limited, he could always find other ways of communicating and making you understand.

Church and prayer were very important to Bradley. He never wanted to miss church, but if he did, he would listen to the service on the radio. How much he really understood about prayer, we will never know, but it was important to him to have a prayer in church on his birthday and we know that God understood him.

On Saturday, his television was turned to Channel 4 all day just so he wouldn't miss Lawrence Welk; then he would spend the hour singing with them. You could hear him clear through the house. Many hours of the "Sound of Music" has permeated our home every month. He was very patriotic; sometimes he would get confused as to which side his heart was on, but it didn't matter, just that it was important to him to salute the flag. Thursday was the day for cleaning the house, and Bradley would stay home from school and help his dear friend, Agnes, clean, and he would dance around the house and make phone calls. He loved her dearly and they had a special relationship.

In 1977, John Hepworth and Bonita were married, and Bradley became the sunshine in John's life. John loved him

Winifred Barton Stivers

Winifred (Winnie) Barton Stivers, cherished mother, grandmother, aunt and friend, passed away peacefully in her home Saturday, Oct. 3, 2009, surrounded by her immediate family.

Winnie was born to Linna and Charles Barton in Antonito, Colo., on June 12, 1919. She had an older brother, Leland, whom she idolized. Her family moved around southern Colorado from Antonito to Menassa, ending up in Alamosa. Winnie graduated from high school in Alamosa in 1936. After attending Adams State in Alamosa for one year, Winnie began working at F.W. Woolworth's and met Thomas Walter (T.W.) Stivers. They married on Nov. 11, 1940. T.W. went into the Navy and, while he was deployed on a minesweeper during World War II, Winnie rented a room in a boarding house in San Diego, Calif. When T.W. retired from the Navy, they moved to Twin Falls. In 1946, Tom and Winnie had twins, Richard and Susan.

Winnie was always very involved in the Twin Falls community. She supported her husband and two children by being a leader in PTA, Bluebirds, Cub Scouts and Republican Women. Winnie had a lifelong love of reading and keeping up with local, state and national news. After moving to Twin Falls, Winnie played on a bowling league and was an avid bridge player, maintaining the same group for more than 50 years. Winnie always had a love of baseball. The Brooklyn Dodgers was her favorite national team, but the family supported the Magic Valley Cowboys here in Twin Falls. In the early 1960s, T.W. and Winnie bought Boone Land Title Company. The name changed to Title Fact Inc. when they built the office that is currently on Fourth Avenue in Twin Falls.

Winnie was an avid lifelong learner. She and T.W. did extensive world traveling. Both were interested in other cultures and their home is filled with souvenirs and memories of their trips to nearly every continent. It was tradition after each trip that the family would gather for a slide presentation put on in the basement of the family's home.

A common thread that ran through Winnie's whole adult life was her total and complete devotion as a wife, mother, grandmother and friend. She supported both her children in their community endeavors, as well as caring for her granddaughter, Ammy, when she was very young.

Winnie began writing a journal with her daughter, Susan, two years ago, and they would write in it together several times each week. Winnie noted that she wanted to be remembered as someone who saw the good in everyone and never complained. The biggest lesson Winnie learned in life was to accept what happens. She was quoted saying, "I don't try to fight it. Things are going to happen that you can't control. Several times in life, you have two choices and whatever choice you make will determine your future. I've never regretted any choice I've made." Her favorite phrase to any family member or friend who was suffering or enduring hardship, was "this too shall pass."

Winnie is survived by her twins, Richard (Kathy) Stivers and Susan (Deck) Waters; and granddaughter, Ammy Waters, all of Twin Falls; sister-in-law, Wanda Stivers of Hailey; and many nieces and nephews.

A visitation for friends and family will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 7, at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home, 2551 Kimberly Road in Twin Falls. A private family graveside service will be held at a later date.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made in Winnie's name to the Idaho Youth Ranch, 162 Main St. S. Twin Falls, ID 83301; Twin Falls Public Library Foundation, 201 Fourth Ave. E., Twin Falls, ID 83301 or CSI Foundation, P.O. Box 1238, Twin Falls, ID 83303-1238.

Researchers report success in treating addiction with vaccines

By Shari Roan and Karen Kaplan
Los Angeles Times

Vaccines to help people recover from such addictions as nicotine, cocaine, heroin and methamphetamine appear scientifically and medically achievable after doctors reported Monday that a vaccine to treat cocaine dependence had produced a large enough antibody response to reduce cocaine use in 38 percent of addicted individuals.

Those results come on the heels of last week's announcement that the federal government will fund a large clinical trial of a nicotine vaccine based on earlier promising studies.

Neither the nicotine nor the cocaine vaccine prevent addiction the way traditional vaccines prevent diseases. Nor do similar vaccines in development. Instead the products are designed for use with other treatments, such as behavioral therapy, to help people kick the habit. They work by stimulating the body's immune system to create antibodies that bind to the drug and prevent it from reaching the brain and producing a chemical high.

"Fifteen years ago, people thought this was completely stupid," said Dr. Thomas R. Kosten, a psychiatrist at Baylor College of Medicine and senior author of the cocaine study. But a series of technological advances has changed that, he said.

"This is trying to come out and attack drug abuse in a different manner," said Kim D. Janda, a professor of chemistry and immunology who works on vaccines at the Scripps Research Institute in La Jolla, Calif. "The National Institutes of Health has spent hundreds of millions of dollars to develop drug treatments, and they haven't gone anywhere. They have to see this is a better way."

But even as the developments highlight the promise of such vaccines, it seems unlikely that Americans battling addiction will benefit from anything but a potential nicotine vaccine — at least in the near future. Science aside, the financial and legal hurdles are too great.

"It's very worthy science, and we have to move it forward," Janda said. "Addiction tears at the fabric of society. Families are ruined. But that doesn't translate into dollars in pharmaceutical companies' pockets."

Drugs such as cocaine and nicotine are made up of molecules that are too small for the immune system to recognize, allowing them to slip through the body's blood-brain barrier.

More than 25 years ago, researchers realized they could circumvent that problem by tethering drug molecules to larger proteins that the body recognizes as foreign. Then the immune system would mount a defense against both.

Voters in city elections don't need candidates labeled

What level of government works best in Idaho? The cities. As a rule, municipal governance is less rancorous, more responsive and gets more bang for the taxpayers' buck than the state or the counties do.

How come? Maybe because mayors and city council members don't have to pass a political litmus test to do their jobs.

By state law, municipal officials are elected without party affiliation. That means they must check some of their political and ideological baggage at the front door of City Hall.

This lends clarity, independence and — above all — cooperation to the governing process.

Unfortunately, that's a tradition under assault from — you guessed it — the Republican and Democratic parties.

TJ Thomson, who is seeking an open seat on the Boise City Council, has everything short of a formal endorsement by the Ada County Democratic Central Committee. Mayor Dave Bieter backs him, as does 1st District Congressman Walt Minnick, former Gov. Cecil Andrus, three of the four Boise Democrats in the state Senate and six of the eight Ada County Democrats in the House.

Across the state, Bonneville County Republicans voted in July to endorse candidates in city council races.

It's a bad idea. Mayors and city council members now answer to voters and to each other. They're not subject to the additional layer of influence — and second-guessing — that political parties impose.

Is the Burley City Council any less conservative than Cassia County Republicans as a group? Is the Hailey City Council more liberal than Blaine County Democrats in general?

No. But politically, the council members are free agents, which explains why the Burley council occasionally makes politically liberal choices and Hailey council members vote conservatively from time to time.

The value of political parties is in framing issues and organizing debate about them, and that works best at the state level. At the local level, party politics is at worst an impediment to good government and at best a distraction. There's not a county courthouse in Idaho that wouldn't benefit from having the “D's” and the “R's” stripped from behind the names of elected officials.

Still, this trend toward Republican — or Democrat — supported city council slates is likely to continue unless the electorate says otherwise.

And in Idaho Falls at least, it just might. The candidates backed by conservatives on the Bonneville County Central Committee have been remarkably unsuccessful in the past two council elections.

In local elections, Idaho voters just don't like being told what they think about the candidates.

Our view: City council elections in Idaho need party endorsements like Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter needs more pot-holes.
What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Job One for America? Self-restraint

Centuries ago, historians came up with a classic theory to explain the rise and decline of nations. The theory was that great nations start out tough-minded and energetic. Toughness and energy lead to wealth and power. Wealth and power lead to affluence and luxury. Affluence and luxury lead to decadence, corruption and decline.

David Brooks

“Human nature, in no form of it, could ever bear prosperity,” John Adams wrote in a letter to Thomas Jefferson.

Yet despite its amazing wealth, the United States has generally remained immune to this cycle. American living standards surpassed European living standards as early as 1740. But in the United States, affluence did not lead to indulgence and decline.

That's because despite the country's notorious materialism, there has always been a countervailing stream of sound economic values. The early settlers believed in Calvinist restraint. The pioneers volunteered for brutal hardship during their treks out west. Waves of immigrant parents worked hard and practiced self-denial so their children could succeed. Government did not protect people from the consequences of their actions, thus enforcing discipline and restraint.

When economic values did erode, the ruling establishment tried to restore balance. After the Gilded Age, Theodore Roosevelt led a crackdown on financial self-indulgence. The Protestant establishment had many failings, but it was not decadent. The old WASPs were notoriously cheap, sent their children to spartan boarding schools, and insisted on financial sobriety.

Over the past few years, however, there clearly has been an erosion in the country's financial values. This erosion has happened at a time when the country's cultural monitors were busy with other things. They were off fighting a culture war about prayer in schools and the theory of evolution. They were arguing about sex and the separation of church and state, oblivious to the large erosion of economic values happening under their feet.

Evidence of this shift in values is all around. Some of the signs are seemingly innocuous. States around the country began sponsoring lotteries: government-approved gambling that extracts its largest toll from the poor. Executives and hedge fund managers began bragging about compensation packages that would have been considered shameful a few decades before. Chain restaurants went into supersize mode, offering gigantic portions that would have been considered socially unacceptable to an earlier generation.

Other signs are bigger. In the three decades between 1950 and 1980, personal consumption was remarkably stable, amounting to about 62 percent of GDP. In the next three decades, it shot upward, reaching 70 percent of GDP in 2008.

During this period, debt exploded. In 1960, Americans' personal debt amounted to about 55 percent of national income. By 2007, Americans' personal debt had surged to 133 percent of national income.

Over the past few months, those debt levels have begun to come down. But that doesn't mean we've re-established standards of personal restraint. We've simply shifted from private debt to public debt. By 2019, federal debt will amount to an amazing 83 percent of GDP. By that year, interest payments alone on the federal debt will cost $803 billion.

These may seem like dry numbers, mostly of concern to budget wonks. But these numbers are the outward sign of a values shift. If there is to be a correction, it will require a moral and cultural movement.

Our current cultural politics are organized by the obsolete culture war, which has put secular liberals on one side and religious conservatives on the other. But the slide in economic morality afflicted Red and Blue America equally.

If there is to be a movement to restore economic values, it will have to cut across the current taxonomies. Its goal will be to make the United States again a producer economy, not a consumer economy. It will champion a return to financial self-restraint, large and small.

It will have to take on what you might call the lobbyist ethos — the righteous conviction held by everybody from AARP to the agribusinesses that their groups are entitled to every possible appropriation, regardless of the larger public cost. It will have to take on the self-indulgent popular demand for low taxes and high spending.

A crusade for economic self-restraint would have to rearrange the current alliances and embrace policies like energy taxes and spending cuts that are now deemed politically impossible. But this sort of moral revival is what the country actually needs.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Losing respect for President Obama

I was always taught to respect the office of the president of the United States, and to respect and honor my Flag, and to love and respect my country, its values, traditions and founding fathers, its Constitution. It's hard to hold all these attitudes in proper perspective, when my president tells the world what a bad country we are.

Yes, Mr. President, we have made mistakes, and with our Constitution and rule of law, we have tried to correct those mistakes with a great deal of success. Don't try to tear that down.

I cannot find it in my heart to respect or honor you even though you hold the highest office in the land.

I have many liberal friends with whom I disagree, but whom I love. And there are many honest liberal politicians whom I respect and honestly disagree with. Mr. President, you promised a bipartisan administration, but I have not seen any compromise

Come on over for some free medical care

To our Canadian friends: Spending many years in the Southwest during the winter months we have made many Canadian friends and acquaintances that have traveled to the United States seeking medical care at their expense for treatments of very serious conditions.

Treatments in Canada under their socialistic form of medicine have put most of them on waiting lists of six months and in some cases a year or longer to receive life saving care. Some simply didn't last long enough.

Well good news! Under President Barack Hussein Obama's extreme leftwing pal's plans they will not have to pay their own way to receive superior medical care in the United States. Our Canadians friends can simply illegally cross the open border to the north and quickly find the nearest emergency room where they can expect the same free medical care our friends from the south enjoy everyday.

That is just called being a good neighbor.

There is still nothing to fear but fear itself

WASHINGTON — How close did we come to the Great Depression 2.0? That question will spawn a cottage industry of books, studies and conferences.

But Christina Romer, the head of President Obama's Council of Economic Advisers, already has an answer: pretty darn close. Her conclusion deserves attention because Romer, in her previous academic career, was a scholar of the Great Depression.

"Depression" is a term of art. It's more than a serious economic downturn. What distinguishes a depression from a harsh recession is paralyzing fear of the unknown. Consumers, businesses and investors hoard cash and desperately curtail spending. They sell stocks and other assets. A devastating loss of confidence inspires behavior that overwhelms the normal self-correcting mechanisms (lower interest rates, inventory resupply, cheap prices) that usually prevent a recession from becoming deep and prolonged: a depression.

Comparing 1929 with 2007-09, Romer finds the initial blow to confidence far greater now than then. True, stock prices fell a third from September to December of 1929; but fewer Americans then owned stocks, and prices had risen early in the year. Moreover, home prices barely dropped.

From December 1928 to December 1929, total household wealth declined only 3 percent. By contrast, the loss in household wealth between December 2007 and December 2008 was 17 percent. Both stocks and homes, more widely held, suffered larger losses.

Thus traumatized, the economy might have gone into a freefall ending in depression. Indeed, it did go into a freefall. The anniversary of Lehman Brothers' bankruptcy in mid-September inspired much commentary that saving the investment bank wouldn't have averted the crisis.

From December 1928 to December 1929, total household wealth declined only 3 percent. By contrast, the loss in household wealth between December 2007 and December 2008 was 17 percent.

But allowing Lehman to fail almost certainly made the crisis worse by creating more unknowns.

As credit markets froze, stock prices collapsed. By year-end, the Dow Jones industrial average was down 23 percent from its pre-Lehman level and 34 percent from a year earlier. Financial panic poisoned popular psychology. In September 2008, the Conference Board's index of consumer confidence was 61.4. By February, it was 25.3. Shoppers recoiled, and spending on such "durables" dropped at a 12 percent annual rate in 2008's third quarter and at a 20 percent rate in the fourth. Businesses canned investment projects; that spending fell at a 20 percent rate in the fourth quarter and a 39 percent rate in 2009's first quarter.

That these huge declines didn't lead to depression mainly reflects, as Romer argues, countervailing government actions. Private markets for goods, services, labor and securities do mostly self-correct; but panic disarms these stabilizing tendencies. In this situation, only government can protect the economy as a whole, because most individuals and companies are involved in the self-defeating behavior of self-protection.

Government's failure to perform this role in the early 1930s transformed recession into depression. That changed when newly inaugurated Franklin Roosevelt closed all banks on March 5, 1933. Many were already shut, having suffered massive withdrawals by terrified depositors who feared their funds would be lost. Yet, when banks reopened in mid-month, Americans re-deposited most of that money. The reason was not just Roosevelt's first calming Fireside Chat ("It is safer to keep your money in a reopened bank than under the mattress"), argues a study by economist William Silber of New York University. FDR's pledge was credible because the Federal Reserve was authorized to supply currency to any reopened bank equal to 100 percent of its deposits.

Something analogous happened over the past year. Scholars will debate which interventions — the Federal Reserve propping up a failing credit system, the TARP, Obama's "stimulus" plan and bank "stress test" — counted most.

Regardless, they all aimed to reassure people that the freefall would stop and, thereby, curb the fear perpetuating the freefall. Confidence had to be restored so that the economy's normal recovery mechanisms could operate. This seems to have happened. By last month, the consumer confidence index had rebounded to 53.1. Housing prices had stopped falling.

By the Case-Shiller index, they've increased for three months.

But this improved confidence is not optimism. It is the absence of terror. The consumer sentiment index is still weak. Unemployment (9.8 percent) is abysmal, the recovery's strength unclear. Here, too, there is an echo from the 1930s. Despite bottoming in 1933, the Depression didn't really end until World War II. Government didn't ensure recovery. Some policies helped, some hurt. The good news today is simply that the bad news is not worse.

Americans still support health care reform

The Democratic faint-hearts in Congress may find their fragile courage bucked up a bit by recent polling.

The party's conservatives spent the summer's storms over health care reform shying at every clap and roll of thunder in the tumults stirred up by right-wing operatives and made by them to sound like the voice of the people in primal scream.

"Tain't so, as it turns out. Updated polling finds most of us pretty much in line with the principles and means for the health improvements set out by President Obama.

Crucially, the public endorsed the most contested of proposed reform features — the so-called public option, a government-administered health plan that the president favors as a price-check on private-plan costs — by a whopping 65 percent to 26 percent. (The other 9 percent were the don't-know, don't-care rump.)

The alarmist cries of socialism afoot don't seem to have produced the intended hysteria.

By the twisted definition pushed by reform opponents, such familiar programs as Medicare, Medicaid, the Children's Health Insurance Program and the Veterans Administration are all socialized medicine. But the sound of that somehow doesn't land right on American ears and the public, although presumed by conservatives to be a ready dupe for Karl Marx, hasn't called him in for an audition.

Most folks can tell the difference between actual socialism and the phony, boogeyman version dangled by conservatives to scare the kiddies. And the same poll found, too, that only 30 percent of the public has bought the lie that proposed reforms would insure illegal aliens and only 26 percent the lie that "death panels" would be set up to kill the elderly if their care becomes inconveniently costly.

The New York Times/

Tom Teepen

CBS poll reported that when asked "Regardless of how you usually vote, who do you think has the better ideas about reforming the health care system?," 52 percent said President Obama and 27 percent congressional Republicans.

An NBC News/Wall Street Journal poll found basically the same. When asked "Do you approve of the way Obama/the Republicans is/are handling health care reform?," 45 percent backed Obama, 21 percent the Republicans.

For all the noisy a-ginner crowds turned out here and there by right-wing radio and TV pitchmen and the cheerleading Fox News, it looks as though the dug-in opposition to health reform, in its general legislative outline, is little more than the hard-core Republican base.

That doesn't mean the president and reform will prevail. Polls aren't politics.

Special interests with big money at stake in the status quo are in the field. Many congressional Democrats are afraid of their shadows. Republicans are deeply invested in the proposition that defeating the Democrats' health care changes will set up Republican victories in the congressional elections next year and in the presidential election in 2012.

Maybe. But there's an attention-getter for both parties in one more finding from that NBC/WSJ poll. When asked who's to blame if health care reform doesn't pass this year, 10 percent said the president, 37 percent said congressional Republicans. Now, that's politics.

Rubber about to meet the road on health care reform

WASHINGTON — Barack Obama has reached the moment of truth for answering the persistent question about his core beliefs and political priorities. The coming votes in the House and Senate on his signature health care reform effort will tell us more about the president than anything so far in his White House tenure.

The challenge is not one he invited. All during last year's campaign, Obama skillfully skirted the question of whether he was a moderate, consensus-seeking pragmatist, as his words suggested, or a faithful adherent to the liberal agenda, as his voting record demonstrated.

In stylistic terms, he cultivated the pragmatic image. On issues, he was alternately one or the other — lining up with the liberals on Iraq and civil liberties, for example, but joining the hard-liners on Afghanistan and the budget.

In the campaign, he took the moderate side of the health care debate — disagreeing with Hillary Clinton on the necessity for an individual mandate to buy health insurance and suggesting he would be satisfied with incremental progress toward covering all the uninsured.

But now, a number of factors have combined to strip him of the camouflage he once enjoyed when it comes to health care policy.

His effort to craft a bipartisan package with significant Republican support has failed, as GOP leaders in Congress have chosen to take their chances on handing him a costly defeat rather than opting to claim a share of the credit for success. With Sen. Olympia Snowe of Maine apparently the only Republican who might vote for the evolving legislation, Obama will have to find virtually all the votes he needs among his fellow Democrats.

Also, the debates inside the five House and Senate committees that have shared in drafting the bills have dramatized the deep ideological splits on the Democratic side of the aisle. The symbolic issue has been the public option — the proposal for a Medicare-like insurance plan competing with those offered by private companies.

Four of the five committees have included that proposal; the fifth, the Senate Finance Committee, has explicitly rejected it.

Beyond that much-hyped dispute are multiple disagreements on the cost and financing of the overall reform, with no consensus between the more conservative Democratic Blue Dogs and the more numerous liberals, especially in the House.

The first imperative for House Speaker Nancy Pelosi and Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid is to find a formula that will produce 218 Democratic votes in the House and 59 of the needed 60 votes in the Senate.

Obama will have to be an active player in that process. But in addition, he will have to negotiate something that will be workable in the real world. As he contemplates a re-election race in 2012, he needs at least three years when his most important domestic initiative has not blown up in his face.

What are his chances of pulling it off? It will not be easy. In the House, Pelosi and a clear majority of the Democratic caucus members want a liberal bill, including the public option. They may have to offer some cosmetic concessions to the Blue Dogs, but they are unlikely to yield on the main points.

In the Senate, on the other hand, while the liberals may prevail on floor amendments to install the public option, they cannot by themselves deliver 60 votes for passage. At this point, the leverage swings to the handful of more conservative, small-state Democratic senators who, with the Republicans, may be able to force substantive changes.

As this plays out — finally, in a House-Senate conference committee — the political cost of the Republican decision to be simply a blocking force will become clear. Had the GOP furnished even a few votes in return for seeing some of their concerns addressed, chances are Obama and the Democratic congressional leaders would not have felt the necessity to keep all the liberals in line. This would have given the president more room to maneuver.

As it is, his main leverage point is the realization among nearly all Democrats that nothing would be as costly to them, in their individual 2010 races, as the failure of this Congress, with its heavy Democratic majorities, to pass a substantive health reform bill.

That may be enough in the end for Obama to succeed. But the task of getting there will really test him — and expose his core values.

WASHINGTON
WH: Obama will not walk away from war in Afghanistan

President Obama won't walk away from the flagging war in Afghanistan, the White House declared Monday as Obama faced tough decisions — and intense administration debate — over choices that could help define his presidency in his first year as commander in chief.

The fierce Taliban attack that killed eight American soldiers over the weekend added to the pressure. The assault overwhelmed a remote U.S. outpost where American forces have been stretched thin in battling insurgents, underscoring an appeal from Obama's top Afghanistan commander for as many as 40,000 additional forces — and at the same time reminding the nation of the costs of war.

Obama's defense secretary, Robert Gates, appealed for calm — and for time for the president to come to a decision.

Obama packs Rose Garden with doctors to pitch health plan

On the cusp of a key legislative push, President Obama on Monday filled the Rose Garden with doctors supportive of his health care overhaul, saying "nobody has more credibility with the American people on this issue than you do."

Obama's White House event gave him another chance to frame the debate on his terms as his top domestic priority enters its most critical phase with legislation moving toward floor debates in the Senate and the House.

The Senate Finance Committee is expected to clear its long-debated, intensely scrutinized bill this week. Sen. Debbie Stabenow, D-Mich., said a vote originally expected by Tuesday has been pushed back, because the Congressional Budget Office is still crunching cost and coverage numbers.

The latest version of the Finance bill will cover fewer people, after senators last week softened penalties for not carrying health insurance. Stabenow said she expects it will cover 92 percent or 93 percent of Americans, down from about 95 percent in earlier versions. The penalties were reduced because there's not enough money in the $900-billion, 10-year bill to provide subsidies for all middle-class households.

Head of Pakistani Taliban vows revenge for U.S. airstrikes

SARAROGHA — Flanked by heavily armed fighters, the new leader of the Pakistani Taliban sat on a blue blanket, amiable and relaxed as he cracked jokes and mixed in threats of vengeance for deadly U.S. airstrikes.

One day later, a suicide bomber attacked a U.N. office in Islamabad.

Hakimullah Mehsud met with reporters Sunday for the first time since winning control of the militant group, quashing speculation that he had been slain in a succession struggle following the killing of his predecessor in a U.S. drone attack.

He also described his group's relationship to al-Qaida as one of "love and affection." Osama bin Laden and other top al-Qaida leaders are believed to be hiding out in the remote border region with Afghanistan, possibly in territory controlled by Hakimullah.

3 Americans win Nobel medicine prize

Three Americans won the Nobel prize in medicine on Monday for discovering how chromosomes protect themselves as cells divide, work that has inspired experimental cancer therapies and may offer insights into aging.

The research by Elizabeth H. Blackburn, Carol W. Greider and Jack W. Szostak revealed the workings of chromosome features called telomeres, which play an important role in the aging of cells.

Blackburn, 60, who holds U.S. and Australian citizenship, is a professor of biology and physiology at the University of California, San Francisco. Greider, 48, is a professor in the department of molecular biology and genetics at Johns Hopkins University School of Medicine in Baltimore.

London-born Szostak, 56, is a professor of genetics at Harvard Medical School and a researcher with the Howard Hughes Medical Institute.

TENNESSEE
Many questions remain in Tenn. kidnapping case

NASHVILLE — A kidnapped newborn is safe in foster care and an Alabama woman suspected of taking him is in custody, but investigators say the case of 4-day-old Yair Anthony Carillo is far from closed.

Among the questions still unanswered are whether a woman who posed as an immigration agent and stabbed the baby's mother was working alone and why state child welfare workers took the baby and three siblings into custody shortly after the family was reunited.

Child welfare officials would say only that Maria Gurrella's children were placed in foster care for "safety" reasons. The department said in a statement Monday that a juvenile court hearing is expected in Nashville Tuesday.

"Like everyone in Tennessee and beyond, we want this episode to have the happy ending it deserves," Commissioner Viola P. Miller said. "We, as much as anyone, want to see these children reunited with their family and out of state custody."

Meanwhile, investigators who had been focused on finding Yair are working to piece together exactly what happened and who was involved, Tennessee Bureau of Investigation spokeswoman Kristin Helm said.

Italian debunkers reproduce Shroud of Turin

ROME — Scientists have reproduced the Shroud of Turin — revered as the cloth that covered Jesus in the tomb — and say the experiment proves the relic was man-made, a group of Italian debunkers claimed Monday.

The shroud bears the figure of a crucified man, complete with blood seeping out of nailed hands and feet, and believers say Christ's image was recorded on the linen fibers at the time of his resurrection.

Scientists have reproduced the shroud using materials and methods that were available in the 14th century, the Italian Committee for Checking Claims on the Paranormal said.

Bathroom break a ploy for Pakistan suicide attack

By Chris Brummitt
Associated Press writer

ISLAMABAD — A suicide bomber who killed five staffers at the U.N. food agency's headquarters in Pakistan on Monday was dressed as a security officer and allowed to enter the heavily guarded building after he asked to use the bathroom.

The United Nations announced it was temporarily closing all its offices in Pakistan after the noontime bombing, which blew out windows and left victims lying in pools of blood in the lobby of the three-story World Food Program compound.

"This is a heinous crime committed against those who have been working tirelessly to assist the poor and vulnerable on the front lines of hunger and other human suffering in Pakistan," U.N. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon said in Geneva.

Despite the office closures, the U.N. said its Pakistani partner organizations would continue distributing food, medicine and other humanitarian assistance. The world body said it would reassess the situation over the next several days.

Pakistani authorities launched an investigation into the major security lapse, saying they would question guards who failed to stop the bomber from militants targeted the World Food Program because of its work in Pakistan or were simply looking to kill foreigners or those working with them. The dead were four Pakistanis and an Iraqi.

Extremists in Pakistan, Afghanistan and Iraq seeking to attack high-profile Western targets have shown no hesitation in striking foreign humanitarian agencies, including the United Nations, regardless of the work they are doing in relieving the suffering in the countries. A blast in June on a luxury hotel housing many foreign aid workers in the northwestern city of Peshawar killed two U.N. staffers and wounded others.

Sometimes the very nature of their work invites attack. In Monday's bombing, insurgents may have believed that by feeding refugees from the fighting in the Swat valley, the World Food Program is propelling up a Pakistani government they view as a U.S. puppet or somehow supporting the army offensive there.

Farmers' input costs rising faster than crop prices

Sugar industry riding on rising prices and increased acreage for beets

By Cindy Snyder
Times-News correspondent

The downturn in the world economy is taking a bite out of Idaho's agricultural economy, but many researchers say a return to economic growth will boost agriculture again.

Higher world demand for food and fiber pushed both prices and production of agricultural commodities higher in late 2007 and early 2008.

When wheat prices neared $20 per bushel in the winter of 2007, for instance, Idaho producers responded by shifting acreage away from sugar beets and dry beans to wheat. And those that had wheat to sell benefitted from the higher prices.

Paul Patterson, University of Idaho extension economist, said many producers found a short reprieve from the traditional cost-price squeeze in the last few years.

But when demand fell and prices plummeted in 2008 and 2009, that squeeze returned with a vengeance.

Between 1990 to 2008, inputs costs increased twice as fast as the prices that farmers received for their product. But when the first three quarters of 2009 are added, the rate of change increased 3.2 times faster.

"Farmers were finally catching up on the gap between the prices paid and the prices received," Patterson said.

But no longer.

Even though fertilizer and fuel prices have fallen in 2009, the prices farmers receive for their crops have fallen even faster.

The dairy industry is just one example. Since February 2009, milk checks have ranged from $9.50 to $10.25 per hundred-weight. Losses at individual operations average $110,000 to $125,000 per 1,000 head of dairy cows. Dairy profits are down 41 percent in the first six months of 2009 compared to the first six months of 2008, said Bob Naerebout, executive director of the Idaho Dairymen's Association.

Although milk prices are finally beginning to improve, the structure of the dairy industry will change because of this downturn.

"It's not only the depth of the current downturn, but the length of it," he said. "The dairy industry has lost a lot of equity and will want to regain that as prices improve."

The quickest way to regain equity is to lower debt and that likely means slower future growth of the industry. Idaho's dairy industry grew by 72 percent between 2000 and 2008.

The loss of equity during 2009 has some recalling the farm crisis of the mid-1980s.

But Patterson said agriculture as a whole is in much better shape

Jason Adler, 34 walks through a field of sugar beets full of weeds on the Rasmussen farm near Longmont, Colo. Six farmers in Boulder County are in a battle with the county over the right to grow Monsanto Corp.'s Roundup Ready Sugar beets on land leased from the county. The Roundup Ready Sugar beets grow weed free after the soil is treated with Roundup. A debate could bar any genetically altered crops from county land.

Sugar beet growers hear complaints about safety

By Catherine Tsai
Associated Press writer

BOULDER, Colo. — Famur Rasmussen Jr. and five other farmers filed what they thought was a routine request to grow genetically modified sugar beets on public land in Colorado's Boulder County. The county already had allowed genetically altered corn.

But the farmers got an earful. Complaints from residents and organic food activists concerned about the crops' safety and local businesses hoping to maintain Boulder as a center for natural and organic products prompted county commissioners to reassess their genetically modified crops policy.

"This went from a campfire to a raging wildfire," the Rasmussen, 45, said of the reaction to the six farmers' December request.

While farmers like Rasmussen already grow genetically modified sugar beets on private land, the prospect of devoting more county-owned land to the new crops was too much for opponents.

Aurora Organic Dairy Chairman Mark Retzloff opposed the altered corn six years ago, but said a lack of public awareness may have led the county to allow it.

"Many of us decided this time we needed to be proactive," he said. "Last time, it wasn't made an issue to the public."

The protests are part of the growing battles over genetically modified organisms, or GMO.

At issue in Boulder County is Monsanto Corp.'s Roundup Ready sugar beets, which Rasmussen wants to grow on land leased from the county.

About 95 percent of the 1.15 million acres of sugar beets planted nationwide have been bred to resist the weed killer Roundup, also made by Monsanto, according to the American Sugarbeet Growers Association. The beets were widely commercially used for

Over the fence: greener drought-resistant grass

By Karen Kaplan
Los Angeles Times

In a parched experimental plot at the edge of the University of California's Riverside campus, several dozen mounds of grass poke out of powdery soil.

These plants have the soft, narrow leaf blades and dark-green hue that would make them a welcome addition to any home's lawn. Most important, they lack the feature that threatens to doom today's turf — an unsustainable thirst for water.

With mandatory watering restrictions turning grass brown from California to Florida to Massachusetts, a small but dedicated cadre of turf scientists is on a mission to engineer a drought-proof superlawn.

They are acutely aware of the technical challenges. Millions of years of evolution have failed to devise a turf that thrives in dry, hot summers and cool, damp winters, and trying to one-up Mother Nature certainly is an exercise in horticultural hubris.

Low water demand is crucial, but it's not enough. To have a shot at commercial success, the grass also would have to tolerate shade, be resistant to fungi and pests, grow at a relatively slow pace, produce ample seeds and pass down the same characteristics from generation to generation.

Elevators full of unsold wheat lurk amid fall harvest

By Roxana Hegeman
Associated Press writer

WICHITA, Kan. — Amid a global glut of wheat stockpiles, grain elevators across parts of the Great Plains remain crammed with unsold winter wheat as facilities brace for expected bumper fall harvests of corn, sorghum and soybeans.

"This is going to be putting a lot of pressure on storage facilities and the transportation system. Overseas buyers are sitting on their hands seeing these prices continue to fall," said Mike Woolverton, a grain marketing economist at Kansas State University.

The lackluster demand for wheat has clogged the nation's grain-handling pipeline, particularly in major wheat-producing states like Kansas where a good winter wheat crop this summer will be followed by anticipated record harvests of other crops this fall.

"From a physical handling perspective, we are fully expecting grain to be placed on the ground in some areas," said Tom Tunnell, executive director of the Kansas Grain and Feed Association, the industry group for the state's elevators.

Most of that grain likely will be sorghum, which has the lowest value and is easiest to store on the ground, he said.

Still, elevator operators will have to decide whether they want to handle the excess crops because spoilage losses are higher for crops stored on the ground — typically a 3 percent loss as compared to 0.5 percent for crops stored inside, Tunnell said.

"While it is a challenge, we would rather have too many bushels than not enough bushels," Tunnell said.

Poor crops in neighboring Oklahoma benefited Kansas

TODAY ON WALL STREET

NEW YORK (AP) - The first growth in the service industry in a year and an upgrade of big banks pulled investors into the stock market after a two-week slide.

Major stock indicators rose jumped about 1 percent Monday, including the Dow Jones industrial average, which added 112 points.

The Institute for Supply Management said its service index rose to 50.9 in September from 48.4 in August. Analysts polled by Thomson Reuters had expected a reading of 50, the dividing line between growth and contraction. The index hadn't grown since August 2008.

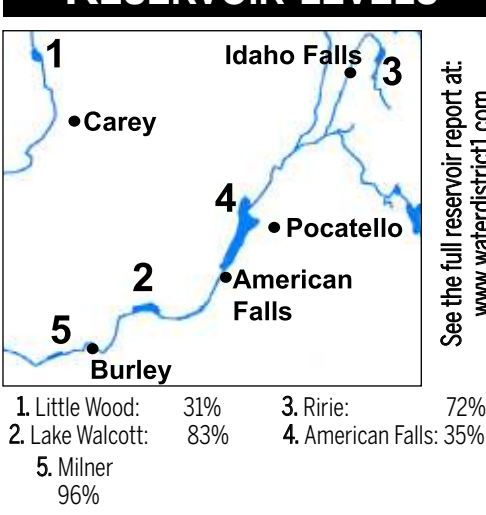

Financial and energy stocks led the gains after Goldman Sachs raised its rating on large banks and the price of oil jumped.

The advance follows the market's first two-week slide since July, which came as reports on manufacturing and consumer sentiment fell short of expectations.

Stocks had fallen for seven of eight days, which likely brought buying interest from investors seeking bargains. The Dow lost 332 points, or 3.4 percent, in two weeks.

Monday's advance came as trading volume was light, which can skew price moves.

Closer to capitalism

WILLIAM BOOTH/Washington Post

Oscar Carvallo, right, works on land on Havana's outskirts that was lent to him by the Cuban government — and he works for a profit. Has capitalism come to the communist isle? Not quite, but close.

Cuba pins hopes on new farms run for profit

By William Booth
The Washington Post

CEIBA DEL AGUA, Cuba — Faced with the smothering inefficiencies of a state-run economy and unable to feed his people without massive imports of food, Cuban leader Raul Castro has put his faith in compatriots like Esther Fuentes and his little farm out in the sticks.

If Cuba is searching for its new New Man, then Fuentes might be him. The Cuban government, in its most dramatic reform since Castro took over for his ailing older brother Fidel three years ago, is offering private farmers such as Fuentes the use of fallow state lands to grow crops — for a profit.

Capitalism comes to the communist isle? Not quite, but close. Raul Castro prefers to call it “a new socialist model.” But Fuentes gets to pocket some extra cash.

“The harder you work, the better you do,” said Fuentes, who immediately understood the concept.

Castro's government says it has lent 1.7 million acres of unused state land in the past year to 82,000 Cubans in an effort to cut imports, which currently make up 60 percent of the country's food supply.

The United States, which has maintained a diplomatic deep freeze and a punishing economic blockade against the island for almost 50 years, is the island nation's largest supplier of food and agricultural products, selling it an average of $350 million worth of beans, rice and frozen chickens each year since 2001, when Congress created exceptions to the trade ban.

At a major speech honoring the revolution in July, Castro smacked his hand on the podium and announced: “The land is there, and here are the Cubans! Let's see if we can get to work or not, if we produce or not, if we keep our word. It is not a question of yelling ‘Fatherland or Death!’ or ‘Down with imperialism!’ or ‘The blockade hurts us!’ The land is there waiting for our sweat.”

In an August speech, Castro said that the Cuban economy, walloped by three hurricanes last year as well as global recession, grew just 0.8 percent in the first half of 2009. The hurricanes decimated crops and caused $10 billion in damage.

Critics of Cuba's communist-style collectivist agriculture system say that the country should be a virtual Eden, given its rich soil and abundant rain, and should not have to import tons of dried peas from the imperialist aggressor to the north.

After the collapse of the Soviet Union and the loss of subsidies from Moscow and Eastern Europe, Cuba abandoned its huge farms devoted to sugar cane — and that land was quickly taken over by marabu, a tenacious, thorny weed that now covers vast tracts of Cuba the way kudzu blankets the American South.

“If they really wanted to solve their problem, they could solve it in a minute, with the stroke of a pen,” by allowing private ownership and free markets, said Jose Alvarez, a professor emeritus and authority on Cuban agriculture at the University of Florida.

Although he has stepped out of his brother's shadow since taking office, Raul

Castro told the Cuban National Assembly in August: “I was elected to defend, maintain and continue perfecting socialism, not destroy it. We are ready to talk about everything, but not to negotiate our political and social system.” Those who hope that Cuba will crumble after “the death of Fidel and all of us,” Castro said, “are doomed to failure.”

Brian Latell, a Cuba expert at the University of Miami and author of “After Fidel,” said: “This farm reform is one of Raul's highest priorities. He talks about it constantly. But the steps have been more reluctant, slower, more tentative than many Cubans would probably like.”

Out in the countryside, Castro's farm reform has set the villages buzzing. Chewing on an unlit cigar, Fuentes took a visitor on a tour of his new domain. Last year, he worked nine acres of land, mostly for self-consumption, “plus a little left over to sell.” This year he applied for and was quickly granted another 20 acres. The plot is his to farm for 10 years, and the only requirement is that he plant crops.

Heritage Cattle Co. ranked ninth largest registered producer

Times-News

Heritage Cattle Co LLC, Twin Falls, ranked as ninth largest in registering the most Angus beef cattle in Idaho, having recorded 103 head of Angus with the American Angus Association during fiscal year 2009, according to Bryce Schumann, CEO of the American Angus Association.

Angus breeders across the nation in 2009 registered 282,911 head of Angus cattle. “Our year-end statistics continue to demonstrate strong demand for Angus genetics and solidify our long-held position as a leader in the beef cattle industry,” Schumann said. “These results underscore our members' commitment to providing genetic solutions to the beef cattle industry.”

The American Angus Association, headquartered in Saint Joseph, Mo. is the largest beef registry association in the world in terms of both annual registrations and active members. For more information about the Angus breed go to www.angus.org.

Some Ky. tobacco farmers dealt late-season setback

The Associated Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky. — Recent heavy rains that soaked Kentucky delivered a late-season setback to some tobacco farmers as their leaf ripens, dampening their hopes for a bumper crop after a couple of drought years.

More than a half-foot of rain fell across part of the Bluegrass State last week as the bulk of the burley tobacco crop was curing in barns — an autumn ritual when the long green leaves gradually change to reddish brown in a process that prepares the leaf for market.

The prolonged stretch of wet weather in the state that leads the nation in burley production at least briefly heightened the risk of tobacco being afflicted with mold or fungus that can rot away part of the leaf.

Fields with uncut tobacco turned into muddy bogs, slowing harvest and hurting leaf quality.

Will Snell, a University of Kentucky agricultural economist specializing in tobacco, said burley, an ingredient in cigarettes, started out curing well, but the combination of high humidity and rain has been “very hard on the crop.”

today than it was in 1985. U.S. farmers have a 9.1 percent a debt-to-asset ratio today, much better than the 22.2 percent of 1985.

“Farmers in the aggregate have pretty solid balances sheets,” Patterson said. “But as land values start to decline, that cushion gets smaller.”

Credit availability has not yet been a problem for credit worthy Idaho farmers and ranchers, but that could change. As the economy has softened, the credit crisis that first affected home mortgages is now being seen in the commercial sector. As banks are forced to deal with those deteriorating commercial loans, agricultural producers could find it harder to get credit themselves. Dairies in particular may find their credit options limited in the next few years.

One bright spot in Idaho agriculture this year is the sugar beet industry. After watching acreage plummet to around 130,000 acres in 2008, acreage has recovered to near normal level. At the same time, a world shortage of sugar is pushing prices higher.

“Tonnage is up significantly after last year and prices are up, that could mean one hundred million more dollars going to growers off the 2009 crop than the 2008 crop,” Patterson said.

Potato growers are also set to have their fourth profitable year in a row. After years of chasing the market which resulted in growers experiencing four years bad years to every one good year, producers have begun working together to reduce acreage.

“That's been one of the most positive trends in the potato industry in Idaho,” said Jerry Wright, CEO of United Potato Growers of Idaho. “Growers working cooperatively together have affected the profitability and sustainability of the industry.”

because the losses freed up storage space in terminals down there, Tunnell said.

In Enid, Okla., grain elevators are nearly full with winter wheat that has come down from Kansas and Nebraska, said Joe Hampton, executive director of the Oklahoma Grain and Feed Association. Elevators in the rest of the country have plenty of available space.

“We had a terrible wheat crop and our corn crop was burned up in June — what corn we had,” Hampton said. “We don't have a (storage) problem. I wish we did, but we don't.”

On the Chicago Board of Trade, wheat futures are trading around $4.5575 a bushel, down from $5.7725 in early August.

Ben Boerner, executive director of the Texas Grain and Feed Association, said his state also encountered significant drought that has decimated yields.

But other wheat-growing states north of Kansas are bracing for the fall bounty.

“I don't know if it is going to be as tight as it is going to be in Kansas,” said Pat Ptacek, executive director of the Nebraska Grain and Feed Association.

Grass

It could take years, even a decade — if the effort succeeds at all. But as water becomes increasingly scarce, researchers say the need for less thirsty lawns is too great to ignore.

“Thirty years from now, it would be nice to say it really did pay off,” said plant geneticist Jason Goldman of the U.S. Department of Agriculture, who already has invested five years in his effort to create a superlawn in Woodward, Okla. With California mired in its third year of drought, UC Riverside turfgrass specialist Jim Baird has become a true believer. He hopes his water-wise prototypes will grow up to be the lawns, parks, golf courses and athletic fields of the future.

“My colleagues will be crazy,” he said. “But it doesn't hurt to dream.”

Appearance has always been the most important aspect of a lawn.

Today, about 50,000 square miles of lawns, golf courses and parks blanket the United States, according to estimates derived from NASA satellites. That's enough to cover the entire state of Mississippi, with some to spare. Keeping all that grass green requires about 200 gallons of water per American per day, NASA scientists have calculated.

Water restrictions make such maintenance increasingly untenable.

“We need to convince people that in the summer, you don't need to have a lush green lawn,” said Bingru Huang, a turfgrass physiologist at Rutgers University in New Brunswick, N.J.

Baird — whose obsession with grass grew out of a teenage interest in golf — doesn't think Americans will ever be swayed of any such thing. He believes Americans would sooner rip out their lawns than tolerate months of brown grass in their yards.

“We're trying our best to ensure we have some turf around,” he said.

Baird focuses his energy on a patchwork of grass samples in UC Riverside's 15-acre experimental plot, the center of academic turf research in California. The samples were created by crossing a ryegrass with a variety of meadow fescue.

Ryegrasses have the deep emerald complexion Americans crave, along with other useful traits such as the ability to withstand foot traffic. But they lack tolerance for heat, drought and disease — all natural strengths of fescues.

“What we're doing here is combining the best of both worlds,” Baird said.

White House quietly touting public option

By Noam N. Levey and Janet Hook
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Despite months of outward ambivalence about creating a government health insurance plan, the Obama White House has launched an intensifying behind-the-scenes campaign to get divided Senate Democrats to take up some version of the idea for a final vote in the coming weeks.

President Obama has cited his preference for the so-called public option. But faced with intense criticism over the summer, he strategically expressed openness to health cooperatives and other ways to offer consumers potentially more affordable alternatives to private health plans.

In the past week, however, senior administration officials have been meeting with senior Democratic staff almost daily to discuss ways to include a version of the public plan in the bill that Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., plans to bring to the Senate floor later this month, according to senior Democratic congressional aides.

Among those regularly in the meetings are Obama's top health care adviser, Nancy-Ann DeParle, aides to Reid, and staff from the Senate Finance and Health committees, both of which developed health care bills. The measure that goes to the floor will be an amalgam of the two committees' bills, put together by Reid and key Democrats. The Health Committee bill contains a national government plan; the Finance Committee version does not.

Obama also has been reaching out to rank-and-file Senate Democrats, telephoning more than a dozen in the past week to press the case for action.

The White House initiative, unfolding largely out of public view, follows months in which the president appeared to defer to senior lawmakers on Capitol Hill as they labored to put together gargantuan health care bills.

It also marks a critical test of Obama's command of the inside game in Washington in which deals are struck behind closed doors and wavering lawmakers are cajoled into supporting major legislation.

The challenge is to go to the Senate floor and hold the deal, said Steve Elmendorf, a lobbyist who served as chief of staff to former House Democratic leader Dick Gephardt.

"They are more involved than people think," he said. "They have a plan and a strategy, and they know what they want to get, and they work with people to get it."

With the Senate Finance Committee wrapping up work on its legislation and moving toward a formal committee vote this week, senior Democrats in the House and Senate are working on detailed compromises. Although on paper Democrats hold majorities in both houses, nailing down those majorities has not been easy, particularly in the Senate where Democrats need a 60-vote supermajority to head off a Republican filibuster.

"They are more involved than people think. They have a plan and a strategy, and they know what they want to get, and they work with people to get it."

— Lobbyist Steve Elmendorf on the Obama administration's work on health care reform to 40 majority, including two independents, but several centrist Democrats have expressed reservations about parts of Obama's health care agenda.

No issue has proven more divisive than the proposal to create a national insurance plan operated by the federal government and offered to some consumers as an alternative to private insurance.

Though favored by liberals as the best protection for consumers from high premiums charged by commercial insurers, a government plan is still viewed warily by many conservative Democrats and nearly all Republicans.

Just last week, two proposals to create a national government plan were defeated in the Finance Committee when Republicans and conservative Democrats voted against them.

Those votes were viewed by some as the death knell of the public option, but the White House and its congressional allies are under heavy pressure from the Democratic Party's liberal base to breathe life back into it.

Supreme Court begins with argument over lawyer request

By Jesse J. Holland
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court began its new term Monday with Justice Sonia Sotomayor on the bench as the court tried to hash out how long a suspect's request for a lawyer should be considered valid by police and the courts.

The high court, listening to its first arguments of the session, seemed skeptical of defense lawyers' arguments that police should be banned from talking to a suspect without a lawyer present because of the possibility that the suspect had asked for a lawyer in related — and even unrelated — cases years ago.

Michael Shatzer was imprisoned at the Maryland Correctional Institution in Hagerstown for child sexual abuse in 2003 when police questioned him about allegations that he sexually abused his 3-year-old young son. When Shatzer refused to talk to a police officer and asked for a lawyer, the questioning ended and the case was dropped.

In 2006, Shatzer's son was old enough to offer details. When a different police officer approached Shatzer in prison about the allegations two years and seven months later, Shatzer waived his Miranda rights, made incriminating statements, failed a polygraph test and was eventually convicted.

Lower courts threw out his confession because he asked for an attorney when he was first questioned in 2003.

public defender Celia Davis, if her interpretation of the law meant police can't talk to a suspect who asked for a lawyer when being questioned about joyriding in 1999, but is arrested for murder in 2009.

"Yes, it does," she replied. "You don't think that's a ridiculous application of the rule?" Alito said.

Davis said the request for a lawyer should apply even if 40 years later the person is a suspect in a civil rights violation that related to the murder.

"You're saying for 40 years, he's immunized from being approached by police?" said Sotomayor, who was sitting in on her first regular argument as a Supreme Court justice.

Pa. woman killed by pet bear caged near her home

ALLENTOWN, Pa. (AP) — Authorities in northeastern Pennsylvania say a woman was killed by her pet black bear as she cleaned its cage.

State police say 37-year-old Kelly Ann Walz was mauled to death Sunday evening by the 350-pound bear.

A state Game Commission spokesman says Walz kept the bear inside a steel and concrete cage near her house about 20 miles northeast of Allentown.

Officials say Walz threw a shovelful of dog food to one side of the cage to distract the bear while she cleaned. At some point the bear turned on her and attacked.

Window seat storage unit

The motivation: Upon the arrival of a new baby, Jarrett Hall and his wife, Robin, had to move their now 3-year-old daughter, Audrey, to an upstairs bedroom. To make the small room feel more comfortable, Hall decided to add a window seat with storage and shelves. He drew up his own plans based on Internet information and got to work.

Timeline: Weekends from mid-January to March.

The bill: About $550.

Bang for the buck: The storage unit provides a nice reading spot by the window for Audrey and anyone who is willing to read to her. The seat opens up to storage for blankets and large toys. Small drawers store videos and stuffed animals, and shelves hold books and a small television.

New skills learned: Just about everything from tongue-and-groove carpentry to basic construction, he said. To smooth out the process, Hall sought help from his wife's father, Myron Glatz.

"I learned from a great teacher," he said.

Biggest challenge: Building around the old house, which had uneven walls and floors. Originally, Hall wanted symmetrical shelves, but he abandoned the idea when he found the sloped ceiling was uneven. He also had to get the angles right so the shelves fit under the slope.

What's next: The Halls are thinking about downsizing the massive stone fireplace in their living room. The fireplace limits their furniture arranging options, Hall said.

Replaced pine tree with koi pond

The motivation: A gnarled old pine tree in the front yard blocked the view of Nijaz and Nada Heric's home. The branches hung low over the walkway, making it difficult to make it to the door, and the roots were cracking the sidewalk, Nijaz said.

So they decided to replace the tree with a koi pond. They recruited their two children — Alen, 19, and Arnea, 24 — and Arnea's boyfriend, Erik Winther, and got to work in late July.

The bill: Between $900 and $1,000, Nijaz said. They saved money by gathering stones in the South Hills with a permit. The project was cheaper than they thought it would be, allowing them to make the pond bigger than they had planned.

Bang for the buck: The money paid for pumps, filters, 12 fish, stones and even a turtle. The pond adds an elegant look to the front yard — much better than the old tree.

Neighbors are impressed, too. While walking home from school, children stop in their yard to admire the fish, Arnea said. (It hasn't all been good; one boy confused a bunch of decorative barley growing in the bottom of the pond for a dead hamster, she said.)

Even the family's four dogs are enjoying the pond. Pomeranian Gizmo likes to jump in the water, chase the fish and harass the turtle.

Timeline: The Herics started in late July and wrapped up on Sept. 9. They could have finished sooner, Nijaz said, but hot August weather forced them to limit their outdoor labor to evenings.

New skills learned: Arnea learned how to give lamps a stained-glass look, painting the panes of ready-made yard lanterns.

What's next: Although they don't have any set-in-stone plans, this definitely won't be the family's last project. "Any extra money we have, we always like to do something with the house," Nada said.

And she has a few ideas. After the pond, a swimming pool sounds really nice.

New deck

Dusty Votroubek and his father-and-law built the new deck and stairs.

Honorable mention:
Dusty Votroubek and Tony Rost,
Twin Falls

The motivation: When Dusty Votroubek moved into his home three years ago, he noticed immediately how unstable the deck outside the second-floor bedroom was. The structure was coming away from the building, and the wood was in bad shape.

"We couldn't even walk out

The Votroubeks' new deck is seen from the yard. The existing second-floor deck was too dangerous to use and had no access from ground level.

Photos by MEAGAN THOMPSON/
Times-News

here," Votroubek said. "It was too dangerous."

And it was too far gone for repair.

The bill: $3,800. Father-in-law Tony Rost, who lives in an apartment out back, estimates they saved about $3,000 in labor by building the replacement deck themselves.

The timeline: Aug. 8 to Sept. 7.

Bang for the buck: The new second-floor deck connects to the existing downstairs deck, so family members can access it from outside or from the master bedroom. Trex deck material is more resistant to weather than the oak of the old deck, so it will last as long as Votroubek and his wife own the house, he said. The deck has a seating area and a rail.

Another plus: Votroubek and Rost are closer than ever after the project, Rost said.

Dutch designer liberates bulbs from mass plantings

By Dean Fosdick
For The Associated Press

Whoever authored the phrase "strength in numbers" must have been a flower bulb grower. Gardeners for decades have been planting bulbs in mass beds — at least 50 at a time — to intensify their colors in the otherwise drab surroundings of late winter and early spring.

Garden design evolves, however, and one Dutch landscape architect is acquiring an international following by freeing bulbs from their traditionally crowded and formalized settings. Jacqueline van der Kloet comes up with new tonal and structural combinations throughout the growing season by scattering a few well-chosen bulbs alongside perennials in random layouts.

"Jacqueline's idea of liberating tulips and other bulbs from drifts is radical," said Sally Ferguson, spokeswoman for the Netherlands Flower Bulb Information Center at Danby, Vt. "Perennials become the bones. The underlying tulips, daffodils and others flesh out the early growth with their subtle colors."

Bulbs — tulip bulbs, in particular — were relatively scarce for many years, until the advent of commercial gardens in Holland, where they were mass-produced and began to be widely propagated and distributed. That's when you began to see gardeners planting them by hand by the hundreds in "drifts" or "swaths" to attract and direct the eye from one display to another through the garden.

Recently, however, landscapers have begun designing bulb gardens with a more natural look, emulating, in part, the more solitary look of the bulb's origins in mountainous areas of central Asia.

Mass plantings evolved "to planting bulbs in smaller clumps in perennial gardens, and now it's coming down to planting them wherever you want in flower gardens," said William Miller, a professor at the Cornell University Department of Horticulture.

Van der Kloet's casual arrangements combine the pleasing with the practical. She uses bulbs for soft applications of color while the inter-planted perennials are just beginning to peek up from the ground.

The perennials, particularly broad-leafed varieties, grow quickly enough to helpfully screen the bulbs after they've finished blooming, during the unattractive but necessary dieback period that gives bulbs enough energy to flower again the following spring.

There is nothing calculated about the way van der Kloet shapes her bulb layouts. She mixes the bulbs up by color and variety in wheelbarrows, tosses them onto the ground as she walks, then plants them where they lie.

Bulb size is an exception: She divides large bulbs from small by plant-

YOU CAN WORK WITH FLOWER BULBS YEAR-ROUND

Fall has become a popular second season for planting, particularly for spring-blooming flower bulbs. Trowel-carrying gardeners return to action once the summer heat abates to set more tulips, crocus or daffodils into the ground.

But bulb planting can be done any time of year. No matter what the climate — banana belt or ski country — you can coax blooms from one kind of bulb or another, displaying them indoors or out. Here are some season-by-season examples:

Fall

Plant tulips, daffodils, iris, hyacinth, narcissus, crocus, eranthus, fritillaria, scilla, cyclamen and liliium at least a few weeks before the first killing frost, although some gardeners routinely linger longer.

"I often wait until Thanksgiving before putting them in," said Sally Ferguson, spokeswoman for the Netherlands Flower Bulb Information Center at Danby, Vt. "The bulbs still have enough time to get rooted before winter."

All are good for hardiness zones 4 through 8. Some will begin to flower even before the last of the snow has melted. All go dormant in summer.

Winter

Force bulbs for indoor blooms. Start around Sept. 1 if you want to use them as Christmas presents. Oct. 1 is good if you simply want to display them around the house during the holidays.

Start by potting up a few of your favorite spring-blooming bulbs. Keep them in a cool, dark but frost-free place for several months, then place them at a sunny indoor site after they bloom. Beware mixing varieties in the same pot since they may not share the same maturity dates.

Spring

To produce blooms from May through October, plant begonia, tigridia, eucomis, allium, amaryllis, gladiolus and oxalis as soon as the soil warms to about 60 degrees. These bulbs generally are good for zones 4-10.

Summer

Autumn-blooming bulbs like fall crocus and colchicums should be planted in early- to mid-summer.

— The Associated Press

ing them in layers.

"They do not mix that well," said van der Kloet. "So first, you mix the bigger bulbs (tulips, narcissus) and in the second round, you sprinkle the smaller ones (muscari, crocus) inbetween."

She prefers bulb varieties with longevity. "I hardly ever use bulbs that are not suitable for naturalizing or perennializing. The only thing is that if you suggest people use 'proven performers,' you also have to mention the maintenance — that it is important they get enough light after the flowering period, and that they should be left in peace after the flowering period. No cutting down of withering leaves."

Some additional suggestions built around her distinctive bulb-perennial pairings:

- Find an anchor. "To integrate bulbs in a natural setting, I think it is always nice if there is an item in the area that can be highlighted by bulbs: a blanket of bulbs under a single tree or a number of trees that can be connected to one another by a meandering

ON THE WEB

For some bulb/perennial combinations, see this Cornell University Dept. of Horticulture site: www.hort.cornell.edu/departments/faculty/wmiller/combos/FeaturedCombos/Best15Combos ribbon of bulbs. Or a splash of bulbs in the turn of a pathway."

- Set a color scheme. "In natural areas, I would use softer colors, but also the light is important," van der Kloet said.

"Bright colors are better in full sunlight, while softer colors" — such as pink, soft blue, lilac and creamish white — "are much more beautiful in dappled shade. The latter is true not only for bulbs but for perennials as well."

- Plant for continuous color. "Succession is very important. That's why I always choose a number of bulbs in a border, to make sure they follow one another."

- Use bulbs of the same species in large borders rather than adding bulbs from other species, to avoid "mixing up" the setting, she said.

Some noteworthy plant partners include tulips with hostas, particularly the variegated varieties; crocus and a groundcover like the somewhat aggressive leadwort; daffodils among ornamental grasses and bleeding heart (dicentra); narcissus with phlox or coral bells (heuchera); tulips again with sedum or geraniums (cranesbill).

There also is nothing wrong with adding native wildflowers to the mix. Sprinkling a species as common as cow parsley in among masses of multi-colored tulips can evoke a meadow, van der Kloet said. "Quite stunning"

This front-loading clothes washer uses very little water and offers many water/energy-saving wash cycles.

New designs mean more efficient clothes washing

DEAR JIM: Our old clothes washer is leaking, so we need to buy a new one. We have a large family and do a lot of laundry, so efficiency is important. What are the most efficient designs and do they clean well? — Candi G.

DEAR CANDI: You are in luck. The most efficient clothes washers also are the best cleaning ones. To attain high efficiency, these clothes washers must minimize the amount of hot and cold water used. This is quite an accomplishment by the product designers. It is much easier to design a washer to clean clothes well with a large volume of hot water as previous washers used to do.

In general, the most energy efficient clothes washers use a front-loading design. I use a first-generation Frigidaire front-loading clothes washer in my own home. In addition to being very efficient (both water and energy), it cleans and rinses my clothes very well. The only drawback I have found is it is slightly more difficult to load and unload than with a top-loading washer.

Although a clothes washer uses electricity to operate the motor and, to a lesser extent, the controls, much of the energy used is for warming the wash water. For all but the grimeiest, greasiest clothes, like my coveralls from the garage, use cold or warm water for the wash cycle.

Always use the cold-water setting for the rinse cycles.

Front-loading clothes washer use an intuitively logical wash concept.

Since the wash drum rotates on a horizontal axis, the clothes are tumbled through a small volume of soapy water at the bottom of the drum.

Vanes inside the drum carry some water up as it rotates to also shower the clothes with water.

In contrast, a typical top-loading washer (on a vertical axis) must fill with much more water to get all the clothes wet. Also, in a front-loading washer, the fabrics are not beat against an agitator so there is less wear. Miele washers use a unique honeycomb drum design with very tiny holes. This keeps the fabric from protruding out the holes as the drum spins to even further reduce damage to the fabrics.

Just as the tumbling wash action cleans better, it also rinses the clothes better. Another key rinsing advantage of a front-loading washer is it can spin much faster during the multiple rinse cycles. This gets more dirty soap residue out of the clothes and greatly reduces drying time for even more energy savings.

If you really do like a top-loading design, Whirlpool offers an efficient Cabrio design. Instead of using an oscillating agitator in the drum, it uses a wash plate that moves and flexes clothes in a fountain-like motion providing good cleaning while minimizing water use.

Still another option is a combo washer/dryer which both washes and dries clothes in the same unit.

DEAR JIM: I have an enclosed light fixture at the top of the stairs. It is difficult to reach to change the bulbs. I would like to use one of the long-life compact fluorescent bulbs. Will it get too hot for the fixture? — Jane F.

DEAR JANE: Replacing the standard incandescent bulb with a CFL (compact fluorescent light) will be fine. In addition to the bulb life, which is about 10 times longer than an incandescent bulb, it uses 75 percent less electricity.

With every type of light bulb, nearly all the electricity it uses ends up as heat. Since CFL's use so much less electricity, heat generation is seldom a problem. The only drawback is some of them take a few seconds to attain full brightness.

Dusty Votroubek says the stairs were the hardest part of the building process. The deck, attached to a bedroom, sits over a hot tub on the Twin Falls home's ground level.

Skills learned: Both Rost and Votroubek are handy around the house, but neither had built a staircase before.

Biggest challenge: Votroubek hated tearing down someone else's work, he said. Second to that, the staircase was a lot harder than it looked.

"These stairs really tested the father-in-law, son-in-law relationship," Rost said.

What's next: Votroubek has already jumped into his

Clocks tell time in style

Cool Clock Shop's Alexandre Martinot Wall Clock, a reproduction of an original in painted wood and aged brass.

By Kim Cook
For The Associated Press

At this year's recent New York International Gift Fair, it wasn't hard to keep track of the time.

There were interesting clocks on every aisle: digital and analog, with hands formed out of slivers of steel, forks, Legos, romping cows, even little plastic insects (on a clock shaped like a fly-swatter).

Stylish or silly, design studios have fun concocting clever ways to combine artistry and timekeeping.

As a decor accent, you can't go wrong with a cool clock. It's the epitome of form and function.

Reproduction enamelware kitchen or classroom clocks look great in both cooking and play spaces.

Modernists can accent a clean-lined space with sleek aluminum, glass or wood clocks.

Pick up a tone in the room with a colored clock face, or bold graphic numbers.

Many of these styles work well with mid-century, Craftsman or minimalist decor. We're not talking about those bulky grandfather clocks that are difficult to decorate around, or prim, traditional mantel clocks. The trick is to treat the clock as one more artistic element in your room; it should add a touch of surprise, and even drama.

Machine cogs are popular cleaned and polished; the industrial design is fun and functional.

Faux vintage advertising makes a decorative backdrop for a simple mechanism, and coordinates well with French or English Country decor.

Cuckoo clocks have found favor among trend-setters recently. Kikkerland.com has a deconstructed one in several shades, while Momento Italia has a clever version with a tree graphic on a slab of wenge or black wood, with a little bird appearing on the hour to the sound of waterfalls.

Fred Flare's Early Bird alarm clock would be a nice way to wake up; the clock face features a bright blue sky, and a little bird glows to simulate the morning sun. Another fun alarm for style-savvy early birds comes from Italy: Conran's USA has the Vespa headlight-inspired alarm clock that reflects the vogue of '60s-era Rome; retro alarm clocks are a great way to hit the hip decor button on a small scale.

For iconic clocks, look at MOMA's reproductions of Hans Hilfiker's Swiss Railway Clock, the stalwart European rail station timepiece. They've also got A Gear Clock designed by Wil Van Den Bos, $100 from Modern Clocks. A stainless steel rim houses the exposed innards of this ultra-cool clock.

Momento Italia's Albero Cucuruku Cuckoo clock, $350. The clock strikes at every hour but can be switched off, while a light sensor make it stays quiet at night. While it's striking, you can hear waterfalls on the background.

Vitra Design Museum's 1949 George Nelson Sunburst clock in aluminum and oak. There are cheaper knockoffs if you're just after the look.

A mid-century-style clock evokes the era without resorting to specific artwork, or even much in the way of furniture.

And remember, a clock doesn't need to function to "work"; an intriguing old metal clock face, or something oversized, is a wonderful sculptural element on its own that adds surprise and interest.

As Elsa Michelson, the Encinitas, Calif.-based owner of online shop Modern Clocks, points out: "There's something about a great timepiece that puts the finishing touch anywhere."

Aston Sutton's Wave Clock, with Italian Murano tempered glass of a blue mosaic design inspired by the church of Santa Marai Dei Fiori. From Cool Clock Shop, $189.

5 tips for quick interior fixes

By Beth Luberecki
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Bad day? Blame your condo. That's what designer Lori Ludwick might do, especially if your home looks as if it's in dire need of some TLC.

For Ludwick, the way people's homes look and function can affect everything from their temperaments to their pocketbooks. "I think a well-designed space influences your mood so much," says Ludwick, principal designer at InDesign in suburban Alexandria, Va. "I want each of my spaces to reflect the owner's personality more than my own. And I want every client to want to come home to this very personal space every day."

When housing prices were going through the roof, many homeowners simply fixed up the properties for the next buyers in hopes of big returns on their investments, rather than settling in for the long haul. But as the economy prompts more owners to stay put, people are increasingly interested in creating a personal space they love. According to Ludwick, who has practiced residential and commercial design here since 1994, it's as important to enjoy your home as it is to add value for when it's time to move on.

"Even if you're not selling your home, your environment impacts the way you feel about everything so much," Ludwick says. "Little improvements ... will help you live better."

Ludwick offered five easy fixes, all of which can be done over a weekend, to make home a hipper, healthier place.

• Try a new hue

"A coat of paint can go a long way in freshening up your interior," Ludwick says. "Clean walls convey a clean house in good working order. Remember the ceiling: It's the fifth wall."

Ludwick favors paints from Duron and Benjamin

Moore and says there are no "awful" colors to avoid: "It's more how you use them and where."

• Delight in your lights

"Remove those old brass hardware-store lighting fixtures; they're not doing anyone any favors," she says. "Replace them with a fixture matching the period of your home or a more modern fixture to add interest and improve the overall feel of the space."

For period reproductions, Ludwick turns to the catalogue from Rejuvenation.

• Accent the architecture

"Decorative moldings around the ceiling, floor, doorways or windows can give a builder-grade house a more luxurious feel," Ludwick says. "Make sure the moldings keep with the character of your home. And stay away from standard 2 1/4-inch moldings; bigger is better."

• Use modern appliances

This is a way to make a big impact without much effort, even if you're on a budget, Ludwick says. New appliances, no matter how many bells and whistles they have, are more energy-efficient and will function better than older ones. And you don't need to shell out for the stainless-steel machines that buyers on HGTV's "House Hunters" always salivate over.

"A lot of people are finding stainless steel kind of cold," she says. "White is always a good classic standby."

• Toss tired fixtures

"Switching out your old bathroom faucet with a shiny new one makes a big impact," Ludwick says. "Make sure you're matching the finish of the rest of the fixtures in the room. And because the faucet is something you touch every day, it's worth the money to spend a little more for a quality fixture." She recommends a matte chrome or nickel finish and likes the selection at Ferguson Enterprises (www.ferguson.com).

CLEANING

Question:

My old vacuum is making me grouchy! It's a cheapo we bought at a discount store, thinking we got a stealer deal. But when I use it, I feel like it is just spreading the dirt around instead of really sucking it up. I'm thinking I need a professional vacuum. Are they worth the money?

Lori Chandler
Cleaning Center owner
734-2404

Answer:

There are so many advantages of a professional vacuum, I don't have space to list them all. But let me explain just one. A lot of inexpensive vacuums now have a HEPA filtration, but that only refers to the filter itself. Turn your vacuum on in a dark room and shine a flashlight: Do you see dust? If so, your vacuum is not properly sealed. The very debris you are trying to remove is being re-circulated, contaminating your indoor air. Professional vacuums like LINDHAUS are sealed to trap organisms down to .3 microns in size. For this reason alone, it's worth the money!

"A swarm of bees who have lost their queen."

— Christopher Fry

This month the Tuesday deals will all be from Ron Klinger's latest book, "Right Through the Pack Again." Each deal features one of the 52 cards in a lead role. All the cards are trying to rouse the real hero of the book — the Old Master — from a coma.

Here is the tale of the spade queen, told in the first person. How would you fare as declarer with this problem?

"After the lead of the spade six to the king, and the spade jack return, the natural temptation is to rise with the spade queen, expecting East to have A-K-J-10-x-x. The Old Master resisted the impulse and played low after a brief moment's thought. The defense could take only three tricks and the Old Master finished with an overtrick.

"Might it have been right to play you?" asked the club two.

"Not if the contract was to succeed," replied the spade queen. "The Old Master's clear mind instantly saw that if the spade queen won, he would have eight tricks. However, to make more, he would need to find the club king with East, but was that possible?"

"Surely if East held the spade A-K-J-10-x-x plus the club king, he would have been too strong for a weak jump-overcall. Placing the club king with East as a matter of necessity meant that the spade ace figured to be with West. Hence the Old Master kept me in hand to block the spade suit."

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Concepts Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

Dispute over bed-making centers on a pillow fight

DEAR ABBY: "Pillow Talk in Abilene" (July 24) had to have been written by my husband, Dick. I went looking for him and asked if he had written to you. When I held up your column, he was shocked. We laughed so hard I had trouble reading the piece to him.

This scenario must be universal. I make the bed with the pillow opening on the outside; Dick makes it with the opening on the inside. We always thought it was funny because we do many things differently. Thanks for the dose of morning humor.

- PAT AND DICK IN SPRING HILL, FLA.

DEAR PAT AND DICK: I'm pleased to have started your morning on a light note. Read on for more - as well as some practical explanations:

DEAR ABBY: There's a very good reason why the open end of the pillow faces the inside of the bed. When I was 3 or 4, I realized that placing the open end toward the inside would prevent monsters from getting into my pillow. It has worked like a charm for 55 years.

- RESTING EASY IN KANSAS

DEAR ABBY: I was in the military, and bed-making is one of the things you learn in boot camp, in addition to how to properly fold T-shirts, underwear and bras -

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

yes, folding bras. The mantra for placing pillowcases is, "Seam and Slack to the Center of the Rack," open end to the left (which indicates the outside edge of the bed). So there you go - straight from Uncle Sam himself.

- SHELLIE IN CHICAGO

DEAR ABBY: It sounds to me that "Pillow Talk" and his wife have too much time on their hands. If all they have to do is debate which way to turn the pillows when they make the bed, how do they feel about the epidemic of belly-button lint? What difference does it make which way the pillow edges are turned? They're usually hidden by a comforter or spread anyway.

- PRACTICAL IN WINSTON-SALEM, N.C.

DEAR ABBY: In nursing school we were taught that the opening of the pillowcase should face away from the entrance to the room. The reason is when you walk, germs and particles from the floor are kicked up and can enter the side of the pillow, which increases the potential for infections and disease through the capture of microorganisms in the pillow opening.

- SANDY IN ARIZONA

DEAR ABBY: I didn't think your readers could top (or bottom) the great toilet paper debate (over the front or under the back), but the question about the direction of the pillowcase opening has done it. Most of us are preoccupied with worrying about health care, the economy, the two wars we are fighting, our jobs and putting food on the table. That couple needs to get a life!

- JOHN W. LEXINGTON, KY.

DEAR ABBY: As a young girl I was taught the "proper" way to make a bed was with the pillowcase opening facing the edge of the bed - not the middle. Back then, this was done so leaking feathers wouldn't end up inside the bed but on the floor.

- INGER IN PORTSMOUTH, N.H.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I had the same argument, until he explained why he wanted the edges facing out. When he put his arm under me to "spoon," he would get caught in the pillowcase if it faced in. We solved the problem by making the bed up for "looks," but when we turn it down for the night, we flip the pillow around. Now we're both happy!

- MINDY IN NEW MEXICO

IF OCTOBER 6 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY:

You currently possess a powerful combination of both ambitions and foresight. Because you can imagine success, it is easy to create it. In January, you might be misled by a person who seems like your romantic ideal or tempted by a pie-in-the-sky business proposition. Wait until March and April to make irrevocable commitments or to put your most important plans into motion. May is a great time to meet the person of your dreams or to interview for the job you have had your eye on for a long time.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Adopt a diplomatic attitude. Sometimes it pays to be businesslike even when dealing with romantic matters.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Look for the yin that complements your yang. Walk a balancing beam between flirtatiousness and businesslike decorum.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Suck up new information thirstily as though you had a straw in a root beer float on a hot summer day. Learn a new skill.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be kind to strangers. Gallant gestures may create a treasure trove of fine memories for you as well as the recipient.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You stand out in a crowd. In fact, you appear to others as an island of excellence, especially when surrounded by a sea of mediocrity.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A place of higher learning doesn't always have doors and a chalkboard. You might hone your knowledge in front of a computer screen.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A certain someone may admire your exuberance and sexy, take-charge attitude. You shine in a crowd or at social gatherings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Make a favorable impression on everyone you meet. Escape to a quiet place and whisper sweet nothings to a special someone.

LEGAL NOTICE OF DECISION

USDA Forest Service Sawtooth National Forest

Fairfield Ranger District

Camas County

Anchustegui Sheep &amp; Goat Complex Livestock Grazing

Management Project

Notice of Decision

As the Responsible Official, District Ranger Mike Dettori signed a Decision Notice and Finding of No Significant Impact (FONSI) on September 30, 2009 approving the Anchustegui Sheep & Goat (S&G) Complex Livestock Grazing Management Project. Copies of the Environmental Assessment and Decision Notice/FONSI are available at the Fairfield Ranger District office.

The decision authorizes continued grazing on the Anchustegui Allotment Complex with a ten-year permit and updating of the Allotment Management Plan (AMP). An adaptive management strategy will allow for flexibility during the implementation of the AMP. The boundary of the allotments will remain the same.

Decision Subject to Appeal

The decision is subject to appeal pursuant to Forest Service regulations at 36 CFR 215. Appeals must meet the content requirements of 36 CFR 215.14. Only individuals or organizations who submitted comments or otherwise expressed interest in the project during the formal 30-day comment period may appeal. Appeals must be postmarked or received by the Appeal Deciding Officer within 45 days of the publication of this notice in Times News newspaper. This date is the exclusive means for calculating the time to file an appeal. Timeframe information from other sources should not be relied on. The Appeal Deciding Officer is Forest Supervisor Jane Kohlmeier. Appeals must be sent to: Appeal Deciding Officer, Intermountain Region USFS, 324 25th Street, Ogden, Utah 84401; or by fax to 801-625-5277; or by email to: appeals-intermtn-regional-office@fs.fed.us. Emailed appeals must be submitted in rich text (.rtf), Word (.doc) or portable document format (.pdf) and must include the project name in the subject line. Appeals may also be hand delivered to the above address, during regular business hours of 8:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Implementation of Decision

If no appeals are filed within the 45-day time period, implementation of the decision may occur on, but not before, five business days from the close of the appeal filing period. When appeals are filed, implementation may occur on, but not before, the 15th business day following the date of the last appeal disposition. Additional information on the decision may be obtained by contacting John Shelly, Project Manager, Fairfield Ranger District at (208) 764-3202.

7 tips for staying warm at a football game

I had never held another man's hand before. And I won't lie to you, it felt good. On a bitter cold late October night about a hundred years ago, I was in the huddle with 10 other football players when our wide receiver, Sawyer, offered to hold my hands in his.

Ryan Howe

Apparently, he had stuffed a pair of oversized receiver gloves with hand warmers, making him look like Mickey Mouse. We ran in an option offense 99 percent of the time, so he didn't have to use his hands much anyway.

Memories of holding hands in the huddle with Sawyer came to mind as temperatures dipped in time for football games last week, prior to the first snow on Sunday.

It got me thinking of the best ways to keep warm during these final weeks of the fall sports season:

Tip 1: Dress in layers. This seems like a no-brainer, but it deserves mention. Try explaining to Minico's glitter sprayed, face-painted student body president Garth Crane that running up and down the sideline in shorts isn't recommended in 30-degree weather.

Tip 2: The beanie. Top off Tip No. 1 with headgear to keep the ears from falling off. As you can tell from my photo, I frequent the same barber as Stacy Wilson, Brad Neuendorf, Dave Slotten and Dee Lewis. Or, if you're still follically intact, go with a visor a la Tim Perrigot. It's the anti-beanie.

A beanie is as necessary for me to perform my job duties as a notebook and pen. Unfortunately my editors didn't agree when I tried listing beanies on my expense report.

Speaking of pens, I keep an extra in my pants. It's a trick I learned after my pen froze as I covered a playoff game while working for a newspaper in Utah.

Tip 3: Find the guy who brought the propane heater and become his best friend. Every school has that guy.

Tip 4: Bring your own hot chocolate in a thermos. I don't care how cold it is, concession stands selling $1 cups of hot chocolate is robbery. Last I checked, it was hot water with a scoop of powder in a flimsy Styrofoam cup.

Tip 5: Taters. During the tailgate, bake some potatoes and wrap in foil. When you're ready to enter the stadium, stuff them in your pockets for a combination hand warmer and snack. Don't forget the sour cream and chives.

Tip 6: Extra, extra. Your feet freeze on the cold metal bleachers or cement. The solution is to bring a copy of Sunday's Times-News to the game and put it in front of your seat. The paper will insulate the bottom of your footsies (no joke). On the list of practical uses for your newspaper, this tip ranks between lining your bird

Petersen probes UC Davis film

By Dustin Lapray
Times-News correspondent

BOISE — Boise State head coach Chris Petersen always says "It's never as good as it looks, and it's never as bad as it looks" when he gets done looking at film.

Last Saturday's 34-16 win against UC Davis looked "bad" on first impression, but Petersen found a bunch of positives from the game. He blamed the failure to score on the opening drive for possibly setting an uncomfortable precedence for the rest of the game.

"If we score on that first drive, it's a different feel for the whole rest of the game," Petersen said. "When it doesn't go as planned, kids start pressing a little bit and really trying too hard. That's the problem with paying attention to how it's 'supposed to go' and what the score 'should be.'"

BSU prides itself on getting playing time for a bunch of players, but its starters remained in the game until the very end.

"The starters are the starters," Petersen said. "They need to win the game for us. But the more backup-type guys we can get in the better it is for us, better for them, better for the program. When you go into a game thinking the backups are all getting in, then it doesn't go like you think ... people start to panic and press, and it gets worse."

Petersen referred to Doug Martin's touchdown, with 38 seconds remaining, a "meaningless" score. The

UI gets 2 named as top players in WAC

BOISE (AP) — An Idaho safety and the Vandals' kicker are among this week's top players in the Western Athletic Conference.

The conference on Monday picked Vandal safety Shiloh Keo as the top defensive player for his performance in Saturday's 31-29 victory over Colorado State. The conference also tapped Idaho kicker Trey Farquhar as the special teams player of the week. Keo had 15 tackles, including 12 solo, and an interception against the Rams Saturday night. His interception came in the final minute, sealing the victory and helping the Vandals improve to 4-1. Farquhar, a freshman, was good on all four extra-point attempts and added a 47-yard field goal in the closing moments of the first half, putting Idaho down only 20-10. The kick ties for the second longest of the season so far among WAC kickers.

RIVAL DRAW

Burley, Minico play to 0-0 tie under the lights

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Much like the weather Monday evening, the Burley and Minico offenses went dreadfully cold as the cross-river soccer rivals ended their regular seasons with a 0-0 draw at Burley High School's Skaggs Events Center.

With the District IV Great Basin Conference tournament beginning Thursday, the rivals might get another crack at each other. Burley (7-4-4, 4-4-2, 14 pts.) has the No. 3 seed locked up and will host the No. 6 seed, which most likely will be Minico (3-8-5, 1-5-3, 6 pts.). The bracket will be solidified today.

"I don't think we played very well today as a team," said Burley senior Karch Hinckley. "(Minico) came out and really pressured us. They played like they wanted to win, and we played like we thought we were going to (easily) beat them."

The match felt like a playoff atmosphere with an energetic crowd representing each school. Hinckley said the Spartans fed off their fans' energy.

"They brought a crowd and got behind them," Hinckley said. "We were lucky to get a draw. I thought they could have scored on us once or twice. They had their opportunities, and we had our opportunities."

For Minico, Monday's draw was much improved from its 4-0 home loss to Burley on Sept. 14.

"It's like a victory for us, zero-zero at their home," said Minico senior Jorge Carrillo. "We played as a team, finally!"

RYAN HOWE/Times-News

Carrillo added that while he's content with the tie, he felt the Spartans let too many scoring chances slip by.

"Anytime you play Burley, it doesn't matter if it's soccer, baseball. It's going to be a tough game," said Minico coach Armando Tapia.

"After so many losses, this is like a win for us. The guys are excited. It was a pretty even game."

After the game, Burley coach Wes Nyblade said with a sigh, "Well, we survived." The Bobcats have battled injury and illness, but Nyblade said his squad will be ready for Thursday.

"(Minico) played some really good defense, and we didn't generate too many chances," Nyblade said.

Former Bruin basketball player makes NCAA D-III team

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

The backup gets back to the hardwood in less than two weeks when Brad Davis officially begins his college basketball career.

Davis, a Twin Falls High School graduate, will play with Northland College, an NCAA Division III program in Ashland, Wis. The Lumberjacks play in the Upper Midwest Athletic Conference (UMAC).

As a high school senior, Davis was a member of the 2008-09 Bruins team, which won the Region Four-Five-Six tournament title and the Class 5A state third-place trophy. Although he was not a starter, his role was an important one as the backup for Jon Pulsifer, the team leader in points and rebounds that season. Now could be his time to shine, according to Bruins head coach Matt Harr.

"Brad was a kid that was a late bloomer," Harr said. "Some kids peak in high school, and some kids peak after. He went through some adversity with injuries. His better years will be in college."

The fact that the Bruins never lost twice in a row last season is just as important an accomplishment as those conference and state trophies. Davis called it a highlight of his senior season and a feat that he wants to help his new team accomplish.

Once Davis decided on extending his playing career, he and Harr put together a recruiting package. Northland head coach Rob Robinson saw something he liked in Davis and invited him for a visit.

"I met (teammates) in May," Davis said. "They were really welcoming. We're like brothers. We all come from a similar background from smaller farming communities."

Davis earned an academic scholarship, and he plans to major in business.

Humble Lockett already leading at CSI

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

Katreese "Kiki" Lockett is a bit modest when it comes to her basketball abilities.

Ask her about her strengths on the court, and she'll reply: "I really don't think I have any. I think I can improve on everything."

The truth: the CSI freshman point guard possesses an abundance of hoops prowess. And it starts with her self-professed title of "gym rat."

"Her work ethic in the game of basketball is second to none," said CSI men's basketball coach Randy Rogers. "I've never seen anybody that loves to work and get better by working than her."

Rogers also counts foot speed, body control, physical play and defensive ability among Lockett's strengths. Plus, "she's maybe the best ball handler I've ever seen," Rogers added, pointing to the fact Lockett teaches her teammates when the practice focus shifts to dribbling drills.

Three years removed from her senior season at Sinagua High School in Flagstaff, Ariz., Lockett may finally get to show those skills in a regular-season college game. She signed with Georgetown University in Washington, D.C., after a stellar prep career but suffered ligament damage to her ankle in the preseason, and the Hoyas didn't show much patience with the setback.

"You know how that kind final four plays the Broncos ran on offense were all rushes.

"We're not going to be one of those teams, if we are in control of the game, to just go out and try to score a bunch of points for that purpose," Petersen said. "We will not do that."

The Broncos surely weren't trying to run up the score against the Aggies: they struggled to score at all. Part of the struggle originated in a mass of penalties against the No. 6 Broncos, who now average 7.4 penalties per game. Only Nevada is penalized more among Western Athletic Conference teams.

"We are talking about it, charting it, going after the culprits," Petersen said. "It's right back to where we've always been. That's something we definitely want to change."

The running game against the Aggies was another gremlin for Petersen.

"We just never really got into a good rhythm," Petersen said. "We just didn't have those big chunk runs. When you rip off a 70-yard run the stats are skewed in some ways. We just didn't get any of those, and that's what changed it."

Doug Martin struggled to get free on short yardage runs (2.4 ypc), but he and Jeremy Avery still combined for 111 yards on 31 rushes.

"We were close," Petersen said. "If we take care of those 1- or 2-yard runs that we have to do, I think the game changes. But that's football, and a lot of times it doesn't change."

The Broncos don't play again until Oct. 14 at Tulsa, so they will get some much-needed rest as the alternate practice days. In total, the team will get two extra practices in preparation for the Golden Hurricane. Ten days later, the team travels to Hawaii. Essentially, the team gets to half-bye weeks.

"I think a bye, depending on where it is in your season ... can be a good thing," Petersen said. "That two-week break without playing, you can lose a little rhythm in there. I think 10 days on either side is not bad, especially when you have to travel."

The Broncos don't play another home game until Halloween. Petersen hopes to hit the recruiting trail in the time off.

Notes: BSU defensive back Jamar Taylor has yet to play this season. Petersen said the team plans to redshirt the sophomore. He had a slight tear of the meniscus tendon and had arthroscopic surgery.

Kyle Wilson should be back before the Tulsa game. He hurt his shoulder in a drill last week. He should practice today.

Lockett

of goes when you get to a big program," said Lockett.

After only one semester at Georgetown, she was looking for a new college home. She nearly landed at CSI but chose to sign with Labette Community College in Parsons, Kan.

Once again, things didn't pan out. "The coach kind of sold me a dream, but once I got there she didn't really keep her half of the deal," said Lockett.

After two stops and no regular-season appearances, Lockett landed at CSI last January and completed the 2008-09 season as a red-shirt.

For Lockett, it appears the third college is the charm.

"I'm very excited I'm here," she said. "I love CSI. This is my home."

Lockett is currently sidelined by a heel injury but should soon be back on the court and looking to fill the enormous shoes left by last season's point guard and NJCAA assist leader, Martina Holloway.

"I don't think anyone will ever be able to replace her," Lockett said of Holloway, now at Louisiana Tech. "I've never seen anyone have court vision like her, and the way she could pass was outstanding."

But Lockett and fellow freshmen Felicity Jones and Daidra Brown provide a talented trio at the point. While Lockett won't talk about herself, she's quick to praise her backcourt mates, calling them "wonderful players and wonderful teammates."

Rogers said each of the three guards has different strengths. Jones is a great shooter, while Brown is a solid defender.

"I'd like to see all three of them on the floor together," said Rogers. "I think defensively we could cause problems. If we put them out there with Shauneice (Samms) and Maddy (Plunkett), if she gets healthy, that's not a bad five."

It all starts at the point. With Lockett running the show and leading the way in attitude and effort, the ball appears to be in good hands.

He'd like to work in advertising for professional or college athletic programs or a sports-based business.

In the spring, Davis will hit the diamond for the Lumberjacks baseball team, either at third base or in the outfield. Although he didn't play in high school, Davis said got a lot of help during the summer from former classmate Brodie Hall.

Basketball comes first, and it starts with a Midnight Madness practice and meet-and-greet at the stroke of midnight on Oct. 15.

cage and wrapping up dead fish.

Tip 7: Dance. Nothing warms the booty like jumping around, cheering your team, and yes, dancing. Last Friday, the Raft River cheerleaders obviously missed the weather report and dressed in their sparkly skirts for the Oakley-Raft River rivalry football game. Fortunately, they brought along music and were able to bust a move to today's current hit music, such as "Chicken Dance" and "The Hokey Poky" (because at the end of the day, isn't that what it's all about?). They even busted out songs from "Footloose." I honestly believe nothing gets a team more pumped up to play football than Kenny Loggins.

"It's a tradition around here," Davis said. "We hit the floor, and the community comes out. We'll scrimmage, have a 3-point shooting contest and wrap it up by meeting the fans."

Davis, expecting to play center and a bit of forward, could see his first college minutes on Nov. 17, when the Lumberjacks host Finlandia University of Hancock, Mich.

With Halloween less than four weeks away, we can look forward to high school dance teams performing "Thriller" at halftime. Federal law requires every dance team in America to paint their faces, get an 80s-style hairdo with a gallon of hairspray, slash holes in their clothing, drape toilet paper around them like mummies and do a "Thriller" routine. Last year I set a personal record by witnessing four halftime "Thrillers." Accounting for the King of Pop's death in June, I expect to surpass that mark in the coming weeks.

Favre takes it to his former team as Vikes top G.B.

By Dave Campbell

Associated Press writer

MINNEAPOLIS — Brett Favre proved to the Green Bay Packers he has plenty of fire left inside and in his right arm.

Favre's first game against his former team was all fun for the Minnesota Vikings and all frustration for the Packers, as the graying quarterback connected for three touchdown passes and 271 yards in a 30-23 victory on Monday night.

Favre went 24 for 31, without a turnover. He did an awkward body bump with kicker Ryan Longwell, also a former Packer, and stayed poised in the pocket all night.

"Lot of fun. It was a big win for us," Favre said. "We did what we had to do."

The Vikings (4-0) sacked Favre's replacement, Aaron Rodgers, eight times. Jared Allen was credited with 4 1/2 of them, a career high, including a safety in the fourth quarter that stretched the lead to 16. Rodgers had his first two turnovers of the season, and Favre turned both of them into vintage touchdown passes in the first half.

Favre hugged Rodgers, Donald Driver and several other Packers once the game was over. Rodgers tried to engineer the kind of drive his predecessor is famous for, but he came up short.

Favre also had plenty of time to throw throughout the game.

Rodgers had the exact opposite experience. He finished 26 for 37 for a career-high 384 yards, many of them in desperation down the stretch, and two touchdowns passes.

Rodgers's receivers let him down, too, though. On fourth-and-goal at the 1 in the third quarter, Rodgers found tight end Donald Lee open in the end zone. But the ball bounced off Lee's chest and onto the turf, as Rodgers snapped his head back with his hands on the sides of his helmet.

Pink wristbands, cleats and sideline caps for breast cancer awareness gave the game a different look, but nothing altered the color scheme as much as Favre in purple. This was his sixth game with Minnesota, counting the preseason, but the sight of the guy who led Green Bay to a Super Bowl trophy and took only one losing record in 16 years there wearing the rival team's jersey was still strange.

This was a highly anticipated and heavily hyped game. Everybody in the stadium stood all the way through the Vikings' first possession, instead of sitting after the first few snaps like usual. Cameras flashed constantly.

Bruin boys battle to tie with Wood River

Times-News

The Bruins held a one-goal lead by halftime, but they were denied a victory on senior night at Bruin Stadium.

The Twin Falls boys soccer team (4-9-4, 1-5-4 Great Basin Conference, 7 pts.) had to settle for a 1-1 tie Monday as the Wood River Wolverines scored a second-half goal to knot things up.

"It was senior night, and that always brings out the best," said Twin Falls coach Jose Morales. "All four of our seniors played, and it was a senior, Tanner Newey, who scored our goal."

Hector Lopez scored on a free kick for the Wolverines (11-1-3, 7-1-2 GBC, 23 pts.).

"It was a very good game for both teams," said Wood River coach Luis Monjaras. "We had some sick guys, and the new kids stepped up. We had our chances. I was very impressed with the Twin Falls defense."

COMMUNITY SCHOOL 2, BUHL 2

The Community School and Buhl boys soccer teams also tied Monday in conference play.

The Indians and Cutthroats tied 2-2 in a match played in three inches of snow.

"It was a tough game with the snow on the ground," said Buhl coach Bill Fields. "The Community School played a good solid game even with playing one man down. Roy Verduzco did an outstanding job on defense for us."

Wyatt Bunce and Tanner Flanigan scored for the Cutthroats (3-7-4, 2-5-4 High Desert Soccer Conference, 10 pts.). Daniel Soria scored off an assist from Armondo Arroyo, and Juan Hernandez scored for Buhl (2-7-2, 2-6-2, 8 pts.).

"Zach Lindahl was our man of the game," said

Another game, another tie.

The Community School and Buhl girls soccer teams met in a High Desert Soccer Conference match and battled to a 3-3 deadlock.

"It was pretty much a mess," said Community School coach Kelly Feldman. "They were shoveling (snow) off the lines when we pulled in. The ball just didn't really go anywhere. It was just a matter of who could push the ball through."

Gabi Perenchio and Ella Marks gave the Community School a 2-1 lead at the half, and Nellie Brown scored the tying goal late in the game off an assist by Erica Eshman.

Community School (9-4-2, 8-1-2, 25 pts.) hosts Declo on Wednesday.

MINICO 2, BURLEY 1

Madison Roemer scored two goals as the Minico girls soccer team defeated Burley 2-1 in a Great Basin Conference match.

After a scoreless first half, Roemer scored her first of two goals on an assist by Vicki Vega. Burley tied the game on a breakaway goal by Megan Grahams, Roemer then scored the game winner right before the final whistle.

"The girls played very well for the cold conditions," said Minico coach Dennis Haynes. "Madison really came through when she needed to. Overall, it was a good game by both teams."

Goalie Melinda Martinez recorded seven saves for Minico (6-8-2, 4-5-1, 13 pts.).

Volleyball

CASTLEFORD 3, GLENNS FERRY 0

The Castleford volleyball team swept Glens Ferry 25-23, 25-13, 26-24 Monday.

Jessica Welch led the Wolves with 11 kills, while Allison Rodgers added nine. Setters Lisa Canuto assisted 10 times, and Kendra Flores assisted eight times. Karli Bower earned 20 points for the Wolves. For the Pilots, Rebecca Woody blocked four times and had seven kills, Chelsea Woody had seven kills and eight digs on defense, and Sydney Sterling assisted 27 times. Karli McHone recorded seven kills and served three aces.

The Pilots (0-12, 0-2 Canyon Conference) host Declo tonight. The Wolves (7-4, 5-1 Snake River Conference South) travel to Fort Hall Thursday to play Sho-Ban.

WENDELL, VALLEY, CAREY ALL SPLIT

The Carey, Wendell and Valley volleyball teams each picked up a win and a loss in a tri-match in Hazelton.

Wendell dropped Carey, 25-18, 32-30, Carey defeated Valley, 25-18, 25-19, and Valley beat Wendell, 21-25, 25-17, 16-14.

Cheyanna Nelson led the Vikings with 11 kills, and Taylor Rogers had seven. Elizabeth Shawver and Kindra Black combined for 46 service points with each putting down 23 points.

"We started out slow against Carey and just didn't get it done," said Valley coach Julian Escobedo. "Our match against Wendell was a dog fight. In the second set, we got the momentum that carried us through the third set. The girls really stuck with it."

Valley (5-14, 1-1 Canyon Conference) hosts Kimberly Wednesday.

TWIN FALLS CHRISTIAN 3, CHANCE 0

Freshman Hanna Glaze led the Twin Falls Christian volleyball team to a 25-9, 25-19, 25-18 win over Chance of Boise. Glaze recorded 16 kills and six blocks for the Warriors, and senior Jessica Irvin had 11 assists.

"Hanna stepped up and was explosive at the net," said Twin Falls Christian coach Becky Johnson. "And our libero, Lauren Paz gave out a lot of good target passes."

The Warriors (7-2) host the Hansen junior varsity squad on Wednesday.

HANSEN 3, MURTAUGH 0

The Hansen volleyball team dropped the Red Devils 25-12, 25-22, 27-25 in a battle of nonconference rivals.

"The girls were hitting a lot better tonight," said Hansen coach Kimberly Vandenbark. "We had a lot of good sets, and the girls are working well as a team."

No stats were available. Hansen travels to Oakley tonight.

Cards, Angels primed for playoff runs

By Ben Walker

Associated Press writer

Start with big boppers Albert Pujols, Alex Rodriguez, Manny Ramirez and Ryan Howard. Throw in aces Josh Beckett and John Lackey. Spice it up with wild card Troy Tulowitzki.

If this October seems more ripe than ever, there's a reason: It is.

No newcomers, no impostors in these baseball playoffs. Everywhere you look, there's a Derek Jeter, David Ortiz or Joe Torre. Every team except one finished at least 20 games over .500, most anyone capable of making a run to the World Series.

Here's how it will come out, beginning with Tuesday's tiebreaker for the AL Central title:

DETROIT TIGERS AT MINNESOTA TWINS

Figure on 20-year-old rookie Rick Porcello pitching well for the Tigers. For a while, anyway. Joe Mauer and the Twins faced him four times this season, including twice in late September, and will catch up to him. Scott Baker will get enough support from the Twins hitters and the bullpen to advance.

MINNESOTA TWINS AT NEW YORK YANKEES

Biggest mismatch of the first round. CC Sabathia, A-Rod, Jeter and Mariano Rivera are set up perfectly to face a tired team at Yankee Stadium. No one in the AL Central features the power arms needed to stop New York. Yankees sweep in 3.

BOSTON RED SOX AT LOS ANGELES ANGELS

Boston has long been the Angels' bugaboo in the playoffs. That ends here. They are deep at the plate and on the mound, setting a team record for runs and adding Scott Kazmir. The Angels seem to be on a mission, carrying on after the death of rookie pitcher Nick Adenhardt. The Red Sox are beatable — not having Beckett at his best hurts. Angels in 4.

ST. LOUIS CARDINALS AT LOS ANGELES DODGERS

A home run derby between Pujols and Ramirez? That might be the Dodgers' best chance. LA lefties Randy Wolf and Clayton Kershaw won't be able to get past Pujols — and if they pitch around him, Matt Holliday will make them pay. Chris Carpenter and Adam Wainwright put St. Louis in a commanding position on the mound. Cardinals in 4.

COLORADO ROCKIES AT PHILADELPHIA PHILLIES

In 2007, the streaking, wild-card Rockies swept the Phillies. This round, Howard & Co. get even. The World Series champions boast an AL-style scary lineup, boosted by Raul Ibanez and Jayson Werth. Lefties Cliff Lee and Cole Hamels will shut down Tulowitzki and the middle of Colorado's order. Phillies in 4.

AL CHAMPIONSHIP SERIES: ANGELS AT YANKEES

No team in baseball, not even Boston, bedevils the Yankees like the Angels. Manager Mike Scioscia understands how important it is to put pressure on New York — that means running aggressively on the bases, bunting, putting the ball in play. The Angels will expose the Yankees' weaknesses on the defensive side. Lackey and Kazmir often give New York trouble, and this might be where Sabathia and Jittery A.J. Burnett unravel. Angels in 6.

NL CHAMPIONSHIP SERIES: CARDINALS AT PHILLIES

Tasty series, starring Pujols and Howard side-by-side. Carpenter and Wainwright give St. Louis the edge early on. Ryan Franklin, getting his first featured twirl, is better than whoever closes for the Phillies. Cardinals went 1-4 vs. Philadelphia this season and gave up a lot of runs, but their arms are locked in now. Cardinals in 6.

WORLD SERIES: CARDINALS AT ANGELS

Smart, deep teams with a lot of momentum match up. So who will be this year's Mr. November? Could be Vladimir Guerrero, still waiting to produce the signature hit of an outstanding career. Scioscia showed in the 2002 World Series against the Giants that he would walk Barry Bonds every time in a big spot — once Pujols takes a stroll, that'll leave it up to Holliday, and he's primed to deliver. Nice, tight series. Cardinals in 6.

Napa police forward Raiders probe to DA's office

ALAMEDA, Calif. — The Napa police have finished their investigation into allegations that Oakland Raiders coach Tom Cable assaulted one of his assistants and forwarded the case to county prosecutors.

Napa County District Attorney Gary Lieberstein on Monday said in a recorded message left on his media line that his office is reviewing the report.

"We are taking this very seriously," Lieberstein said, adding that there is no timetable on when the review will be completed.

Lieberstein also said previous reports of "an imminent arrest" in the case originated from neither his office nor the Napa Police.

Police Commander Andy Lewis said police would have no comment on the specifics of the case.

Raiders defensive assistant Randy Hanson was hospitalized with a broken bone in his face following the Aug. 5 attack that he told police was initiated by a member of the Raiders coaching staff at the team's training camp hotel in Napa.

Hanson initially did not tell police who his assailant was. His attorney, John McGuinn, told NFL.com last week that Hanson told police that Cable was the coach who attacked him. McGuinn did not return a call seeking comment.

Seahawks' Hasselbeck may play Sunday

RENTON, Wash. — The Seahawks expect Matt

Hasselbeck to return to practice this week, with the hope their quarterback will play on Sunday against Jacksonville. Coach Jim Mora said Monday he expects his three-time Pro Bowl passer to test his broken rib when his 1-3 team returns to practice on Wednesday. Hasselbeck was hurt on a dive for the goal line on Sept. 20 at San Francisco. He hasn't practiced or played since.

Man accused of filming Andrews released on bond

CHICAGO — An Illinois insurance executive accused of secretly making nude videos of ESPN reporter Erin Andrews apparently uploaded videos of other unsuspecting nude women to the Internet, a federal prosecutor said Monday.

Michael D. Barrett, 47, of Westmont, was released on $4,500 bond but was ordered to wear an ankle monitoring bracelet, to adhere to a strict curfew and not to use the Internet. He is due in U.S. District Court in Los Angeles on Oct. 23 to face federal charges of interstate stalking.

Barrett is accused of making the videos by modifying peepholes in hotel room doors, using a hacksaw and a cell phone camera, and then trying to sell them to Los Angeles-based celebrity gossip site TMZ.

BYU receiver out with hamstring strain

PROVO, Utah — BYU receiver McKay Jacobson is out four to six weeks with a strained hamstring. Coach Bronco Mendenhall said Monday that Jacobson strained the left hamstring while stretching before the 18th-ranked Cougars' win over Utah State on Friday.

Mendenhall says an MRI showed the strain high up on the muscle and the injury could take a while to heal. Jacobson had 11 catches for 280 yards and three touchdowns in BYU's first four games.

Huskies try to get past loss to Irish

SEATTLE — When the season started, Washington coach Steve Sarkisian instituted a "24-hour rule" that win or lose, his coaches and players would have moved on within a day of the game ending.

Saturday's 37-30 overtime loss at Notre Dame pushed the limits of that rule for Washington coaches and players alike.

Quarterback Jake Locker was so emotional he chose not to talk to the media after the loss for fear of saying something he might later have to explain.

At least one Husky was still peeved on Monday. Asked about a couple of disputed calls, running back Chris Polk said the referees played a role in Washington's loss.
