BOISE (AP) — Twenty percent of Idaho's 115 school districts have declared a financial emergency this year as they sought to tighten their financial belts after lawmakers in the 2009 Legislature reduced public education funding. A new state law required districts to declare an emergency before taking measures like cutting teacher pay, hours or contract length. Paul Headlee, the Idaho Legislature's budget analyst who covers public education, said Wednesday that districts have undertaken a vari-

From Sept. 22 police reports: Probation violation:

Police responded to the juvenile probation office about two males. both 15, who needed to be taken to the detention unit. While they were held at the sheriff's office, according to the report, a 66-yearold man, whose relationship to the suspects is unclear, approached Deputy Terry Higley and "advised that he had found a 12 pack of diet Mt. Dew in a drawer at home." He said "they don't drink Mountain Dew" and alleged that one of the suspects had stolen it and kept it in the drawer. The man brought the Mountain Dew into the sheriff's office, where one of the boys was questioned about it. He allegedly admitted stealing the pop after a detailed interrogation. The report reads:

"I asked (name withheld) about the pop and he didn't want to talk. I asked if he had taken the pop and he didn't answer. I asked if he had stolen it from a store and he shook his head no. I asked if he had taken

Times-News correspondent

BUHL – Susan Riddle will remain Buhl's grant administrator.

During Monday's City Council meeting Riddle's $104,000 contract was unanimously approved, giving the Twin Falls resident the go-ahead to purfunds for the city.

The contract is valid through the end of Buhl's two major infrastructure projects for $23 million: construction of an arsenic treatment facility and upgrading the sewer system.

"The contract is good for three years and maybe Mayor Charles Sheridan.

Riddle has worked for Buhl since 1993 and was instrumental in securing $1.1 million in Rural Development Grants and congressional appropriations for the arsenic project and $500,000 in block grants the for wastewater faculty absences are widespread in Idaho's largest school districts; hospital emergency rooms are full statewide; and we're not even halfway through October.

There's no doubt that folks are sick, but it's questionable that it's all from swine flu.

Only a small percentage of people with influenza are tested. Why? Because in most cases, H1N1 is no worse than a bad cold.

During the past week, 100 additional laboratoryconfirmed infections have been reported, with 27 hospitalizations.

Four people have died, but all had underlying chronic health problems - diabetes, heart disease or asthma.

Keep in mind that this is the beginning of cold and flu season. Not everybody who is sick has

That's a good thing, because delivery of swine flu vaccine has been glacially slow.

As of Wednesday, Idaho had been allocated 58,000 doses of H1N1 vaccine. The first batches are going to full-service hospitals, community health centers and the health districts. The first shots will be given in the next two weeks.

It will be well into November before most primary-care docs get their hands on vaccine.

What's worrying is that swine flu is just a couple of genetic mutations away from the far more deadly avian flu. Had the federal government taken this long to provide bird flu vaccine, thousands would be dead.

As it is, your best recourse is caution:

- Wash your hands.
- Use an antiviral disinfectant spray on computer keyboards, doorknobs and toilet handles.
- Cover your mouth when you cough and
- sneeze • And if you get sick, stay home until the fever subsides for at least 24 hours.

It's a pandemic, all right, but this isn't the 1919 Spanish flu. Simple precautions and commonsense self-care will work just fine for most folks.

Is the era of big government really fading? Again?

...WE WILL REFORM HEALTH CARE WITHOUT ADDING A DIME TO THE

DEFICIT. YES WE CAN!

n his State of the Union address a little over 13 years ago, President Bill Clinton proclaimed "the era of big government" was over. After a year of butting heads with the new Republican majority in Congress, Clinton signaled a willingness to change course and acknowledge the message voters had sent in the 1994 mid-term elections: time to trim the sails of Washington's ambitions.

Gary Andres

Yet when President Obama addressed his first joint session of Congress, many believed big government was back.

Economic turmoil, coupled with the new power trifecta in Washington -Democratic control of the House, Senate and presidency for the first time since 1993 — breathed new life into Leviathan's lungs. The lack of aggressive remedies in Washington, the new president complained, became an "excuse to transfer wealth to the wealthy." And during the Bush years, he asserted, "regulations were gutted for the sake of a quick profit."

The Democrats' resurgence coupled with economic distress meant nothing was safe from Washington's reach. Banks, energy companies, health care, the automobile industry and even CEO pay, to name a few, would now come under the control of White House czars and activist lawmakers in Congress. "Move fast," Democratic operatives warned. A good crisis is a terrible thing to waste.

It took about two years for the curtain to fall on Clinton's era of big government. Obama's may have Voter cynicism about the consequences of Washington on steroids is cies, a majority said "large banks" (62 percent) and "Wall Street investment companies" (54 percent). Only 10 percent responded "my family/myself."

Some say these data suggest the government should do even more. "Politically," The New York Times wrote, "the poll does a nice job of capturing one of the central challenges for the White House and Democrats in Congress. Voters do not think elected officials have done enough to mitigate the damage from the recession."

This assessment misses the point. It's not that they haven't done enough. They've done too much - or at least the wrong things. Independent voters, who supported Obama in 2008, are the best indicators here. The NBC/Wall Street ed direction. Given the financial meltdown and charges that regulators were asleep at the switch, you might expect voters to support more rather than less government intervention. Surprisingly, American attitudes, especially among swing voters, have shifted towards less intervention. Last September 38 percent of independents responded that there was too much regulation of business and industry. One year later, those numbers have risen to 50 percent.

Growing doubts about Washington's ability to solve the nation's health care problems are another indication. Polls released in the last week indicate support for the government's capacity to address this critical issue has reached a new low. Journal survey regularly asks: Americans don't deny the

The prospects of bigger other worries. One poll also Washington tries to expand cions about wrongdoing by public officials goes up as well.

Taken together these indicators suggest deep and growing unease with the size, scope and direction of government in Washington - especially among swing voters. Obama's saturation media coverage, reminding people he and the Democrats in Congress are in charge and unchecked is part of the reason. Deeply divisive and highly partisan congressional leaders like Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., are another.

Change in Washington may require an intervening election next November. Yet many Americans already are calling for the end of big government ... again.

Idaho State belongs in NCAA Division

ecently the Times-News published an editorial calling Idaho State University "arguably the weakest Division I athletic program in the country." This assumption was based on very limited facts, mostly because of the poor record in recent years by the ISU football team, but it would have taken just a few minutes to realize that ISU competes very well in the Big Sky Conference and nation-

Idaho State has been tremendously successful in many sports in recent years. For example:

- Women's basketball has won Big Sky Conference titles in 2006 and 2007, and they advanced to the NCAA Tournament or the NIT four times in the past six.
- Women's soccer has won four Big Sky titles in the last eight years, and advanced to the second round of the 2006 NCAA College Cup
- Track and field won three Big Sky titles in the last five seasons, and they have had national qualifiers in indoor and outdoor track in nearly every season in the 2000s. • Idaho State men's bas- ketball has won 25 conference games in the last three years, the best three-year stretch since 1976-78, and ISU has not finished below .500 in conference play under Joe O'Brien. Last year, ISU defeated No. 3 Utah, ISU's highest RPI ranked win Idaho State athletes have ever. The basketball team has been very competitive despite playing non-conference schedules ranked in the top 25 in the nation the last three years.

- ISU football has had just three winning seasons in the last 10 years, but the team has sent 14 players to NFL camps, and six of those players have seen action in a regular season NFL game. The last two Super Bowls had former ISU Bengals represented on the rosters (Matt Gutierrez with New England and Pago Togafau with Arizona). The Bengals also had 2003's National Player of the Year in Jared Allen, who in 2008 became the highest-paid defensive player in NFL history, and Jared has generously donated both his time and resources back to Idaho State.

- Idaho State softball won 20 games in 2009 in just their third year, and will start play in the Pacific Coast Softball Conference in 2010.
- Over the last five years, spent thousands of hours participating in community events through the P.A.W.S. program (Proud Athletes Working and Serving).

In recent months, private funding and donations have allowed for ISU football to refurbish the entire locker room, to add a high definition video board in Holt Arena, and an electronic display board outside of Holt Arena. Construction will start this winter on Miller Ranch Stadium for softball. Improvements to other ISU athletic facilities are due to be announced in the upcoming months, all through private donations.

There is much more I could say, but I am limited to just 600 words.

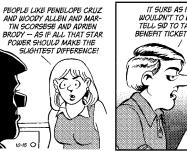

While it is true that the Idaho State football team has struggled for the past four years, the football team has had to also deal with budget holdbacks and playing five guarantee games against FBS teams in the last three years, including games with Oregon State, Arizona State, Oklahoma and Boise State, in order to help raise funds for the entire department. However, to state that the entire ISU athletic department is out of its league is just not accurate, as the facts clearly show.

Here's what Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

... what local control?

Post Register, Idaho Falls

As in many resort communities, affordable housing in Sun Valley is difficult to find.

Schoolteachers, firefighters, police officers and nearly everybody working in the service sector either commutes from distant, affordable towns or throws their hands up and moves.

But the working people of Blaine County are doubly cursed. In Jackson, Wyo., and Aspen, Colo., for instance, locals have the freedom to solve their own problems.

The Teton County Housing Authority helps Jackson's working families buy homes below exorbitant market values. In Aspen, developers must set aside 60 percent of their units for affordable housing.

This is possible because the Wyoming and Colorado legislatures do more than just pay lip service to local control. They decided their residents should actually be allowed to practice it.

Not in Idaho. Just ask the folks in Blaine

A few years ago, Rexburg didn't have enough money to fix some very bad roads. So, Mayor Shawn Larsen proposed a system of localoption taxation for university towns. That would help places such as Rexburg and Moscow collect a little money from students, but only if the community itself

· by a two-thirds majority approved such a measure. The result?

Larsen couldn't even get the House Revenue and Taxation Committee to give him a hearing.

Unfortunately, nearly every Idaho community can tell a similar story ...

The Great State of Ada is becoming more than just an insulting slogan.

Reversing this trend means doing the unusual for eastern Idaho: helping our friends in Sun Valley ...

... more tax dollars for Micron Lewiston Tribune

When is Boisebased Micron Technology going to break its addiction to the state government fix?

Every year seemingly brings another concession from the people of this state.

Micron asks and the Legislature caps its property tax bill, a dangerous precedent that could mean higher property taxes for homeowners.

Or exempts some of its purchases from sales taxes. Or considers eventually cutting taxes paid on equipment. None of which has kept the company from slashing its Idaho work force in half. to about 5,000 people, or investing its money in plants in other states or other countries.

Now Idaho is handing over another $5 million to encourage the company's pursuit of energy-efficient light-emitting diode light bulbs. It's part of the federal stimulus package administered through the state Office of Energy Resources.

That's money the state might need later to shore up the consortium the University of Idaho and its sister schools have formed with the Idaho National Laboratory ... For two years the state has kept that operation, the Center for Advanced Energy Studies, operating on a year-to-year basis. The ongoing commitment is verbal ... With state budgets even tighter next year, where will that money come from?

But to Micron, $5 million is a pittance. The company likes to boast it's sitting on $1.5 billion in reserves ...

If highly efficient light bulbs are a good business prospect, you'd think a nimble corporate machine like Micron Technology would be on that in a hurry. It certainly shouldn't need $5 million from the taxpayers to pursue its enlightened self-interests business.

Nor does this money produce a light bulb or a light bulb plant. It merely goes toward light bulb research and development.

So let's hope the state attached at least some conditions. For instance, say the R&D yields a lucrative product and more profits for Micron. Could the company at least plow some of those earnings back into Idaho's depleted economic development and higher education efforts?

And whatever manufacturing jobs this project generates, you would hope the taxpayer gets something in return.

Such as jobs that pay a living wage. In Idaho.

The Idaho Mining Association paid the costs, which totaled $2,543. In an interview with the Associated Press, Jack Lyman of the mining association called the arrangement a "unique circumstance."

We hope so. The state's plane shouldn't be available for hire by special-interest groups that have money and an issue they'd like to discuss with elected officials. The state's property should be used for state

That's the way it usually works. An Idaho Transportation Department rule allows only state agencies to hire out the plane.

Lt. Gov. Brad Little's office arranged to use the plane to fly from Boise to the southeast Idaho mining sites. But Little is a parttime state official with a modest $400-a-month travel budget, so the mining association offered to cover the expenses.

That saves the taxpayers a little money. As a result, some might say there's no problem here.

But there is a problem, subtle but nonetheless important. Appearances matter. And the Sept. 11 tour sends a hopelessly muddled signal.

The tour looks a little bit like state business, and an appropriate use of a state plane – a fact-finding expedition to learn more about the health of a significant Idaho industry. We wouldn't have a problem with that. Even when the economy is down and budgets are tight, elected officials and agency heads need the kind of insight they can glean only from being on the ground. The mine tour also looks a little bit like a lobbying effort bankrolled by special interests - an effort to curry support for proposals such as Monsanto Co?s Blackfoot Bridge mine ...

Let's not let this become a habit ...

The latest "inaccurate statements" to make the news are things said by Treasury Department and Federal Reserve officials a year ago.

You may recall that, as the world's economies shriveled last Oct. 14, Treasury Secretary Henry Paulson called in the heads of the nine biggest banks and told them he was giving them $25 billion each on a take-it-or-else basis. Then he and Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke went out and said the banks were in fine shape and accepted the government money only "for the good of the economy."

Now Neil Barofsky, who has the delicious title of special inspector general for the Troubled Asset Relief Program, says the parts about the banks all being "healthy" were bunk. The banks didn't lend the tax money when they got it. Two of them, Citigroup and Bank of America Corp., soon needed more "new capital" just to

States raise limits on creditors, debtors squirm

By Emery P. Dalesio Associated Press writer

> WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. - With many Americans in dire financial straits, states are cracking down to make sure aggressive debt collectors target only people who legitimately owe them money.

National consumer credit laws already prohibit collection agencies from harassing, deceptive, or unfair practices like telling neighbors or family about what is owed, or calling before 8 a.m. or late at night. Since the recession started, at least a half-dozen states have adopted additional limits, like imposing statutes of limitation on collections and adding opportunities to punish abusive practices in court. Other states may follow suit.

Lawmakers are increasingly focusing on outfits that buy bad debt from credit card companies and other lenders for pennies on the dollar and profit when they collect more than they paid.

Debtors – some agree they owe money, others say they've already paid or are disputing their bills - have reported being bombarded with calls and subjected to foul language and

Small businesses have big leverage with landlords requires debt buyers filing collection lawsuits to produce documents proving they're the ones owed the money.

hile small businesses are still struggling in this weak economy, many are catching a break when it comes to negotiating with landlords.

The weakness in the commercial real estate market comes in part from high vacancy rates in many parts of the country. And many landlords are increasingly willing to cut a deal with renters so they can keep their buildings occupied.

"The balance of power in negotiating a lease or renegotiating a lease in some areas is now with the tenant," said Janet Portman, an attorney and co-author of "Negotiate The Best Lease for Your Business." "If the market is awash with space, then you can assume the competition will be tight for rents and you're going to have some real clout."

Even companies whose leases aren't up for renewal can get better terms, Portman said. She noted that in many states, a commercial tenant breaking a lease ends up responsible only for the months that a property is vacant. So a business that breaks its lease record," she said. and moves to a much cheaper space can end up saving money. That's likely to make many landlords willing to lower rents or agree to other terms to avoid losing money.

But Portman also said owners need to be careful about properties where landlords may be too eager to lower their standards to get tenants. A building that is filled with struggling companies that ultimately can't pay their rent is going to turn into a ghost town and be a less desirable location of the remaining ten-

Portman also warned that small businesses that are struggling probably won't be able to cut a better deal.

"Even a landlord who's desperate to rent isn't going to take a chance on a tenant who's got a bad track

Owners who are searching for space learn to develop a strategy, especially when they're dealing with landlords who still think they can get the rents they want.

Matthew Higbee's law firm, Higbee & Associates, is renting space while it waits for sales prices to stabilize in Orange County, Calif.

"We looked at properties, and at the end of the day, we decided we might save money by renting, and buying commercial real estate in two years, when prices are lower," he said.

Higbee said landlords in the area didn't seem very willing to negotiate, and many he dealt with were trying to hold out for higher rents. His firm ended up renting 3,700 square feet for $1.10 a square foot after turning down demands for as high as $1.95. "They hurt themselves by not taking less," he said. "Now they're getting noth-

TODAY ON WALL STREET

On Wednesday, the Dow rose 144.80, or 1.5 percent, to 10,015.86, its biggest gain since Aug. 21 and highest close since Oct. 3 last year.

Broader indexes also climbed to 2009 highs. The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 18.83, or 1.8 percent, to 1,092.02. The index, the basis of many mutual funds, is up 61.4 percent from a 12-year low in March.

The Nasdaq composite index rose 32.34, or 1.5 percent, to 2,172.23. It's up 71.2 percent since March.

So where does the market go from here? Some market watchers see 10,000 as an illusion because there are still lingering threats to an economic recovery - rising unemployment, weak consumer spending and a battered housing market.

The investors who have driven stocks higher since March are the pros: hedge funds and institutions whose furious selling hastened the collapse of the market in the first place.

And red flags are showing up in the technical charts that professional investors use as they make their trading decisions. The Dow sits about 18 percent above its average of the past 200 days.

Watchdog: Treasury, Fed failed in AIG oversight

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner is "ultimately responsible" for regulators' failure to rein in massive bonus payments at American International Group because he led the agencies that provided AIG's lifelines, according to a bailout watchdog.

Geithner was president of the Federal Reserve Bank of New York before taking over at Treasury in January. He has said he did not learn until March about the $1.75 billion in bonuses and other compensation promised to AIG employees. But Geithner's subordinates at the New York Fed learned of the payments in November, according to Neil Barofsky, the special inspector general for the $700 billion financial bailout.

Even if no one told Geithner about the payments, "this is a failure of communication and a failure of management," Barofsky told the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform on Wednesday. Geithner has been "the head of an organization that was involved in the bailout of since September, he added.

Hits and misses for trail-runner shoes ew Balance, a ubiquitous brand in fitness and sports, has built a shoe for approximately .001 percent of the market. Its new shoe, the MT100, was "designed for the most dedicated ultra-trail runners," as the company puts it.

After three weeks of testing this lithe shoe, I have discovered that despite my calendar of more than a dozen footraces a year, I may not fit in New Balance's "most dedicated" class.

THE GEAR JUNKIE Stephen Regenold

New this month, the MT100 and women's WT100 are among the lightest-weight footwear ever created to conquer a trail. They weigh a scant seven ounces per foot in a men's size nine — almost half as heavy as shoes other companies might market as light.

But the minimal build comes with minimal support. The uppers are made of mesh and foam. There is almost no midsole. Your feet are separated from the ground by a low-profile treaded sole and a thin forefoot plate.

The MT100s have a fast, bare-bones design that keeps you forward on your feet for maximum speed. Elite runners might crank a long run off in a shoe like the MT100. Average runners should consider a 10K in them, but nothing more.

In my test runs so far, the MT100s have had hits and misses. On the trail, the MT100s do feel fast. Each foot fall is light. But the airy feeling is compromised by the MT100s' stiff sole.

Hold a MT100 in your hand and try and torque its sole. It takes noticeable pressure to flex the forefoot. Plus, there is almost zero lateral flex.

On soft terrain, including grass and dirt trails, New Balance's unforgiving out sole bites in for grip and serves as a fine platform for sprinting. It is a race-oriented feel that promotes a fast, staccato stride.

On hard-pack trails and pavement, I found the MT100s to be painful.

There is almost no support. Further, the stiff sole hinders natural foot-flex biomechanics, creating a sharp foot-fall with almost no anatomical absorption.

At $75, the New Balance MT100s are a specialized shoe that a serious runner might consider keeping in a quiver for the right venue. I will use them on sprints where speed trumps comfort and support.

Ultra-race stallions might lace them up for long runs. For the rest of us, the feathery shoe will prove too pared-back in all but our "most dedicated" of moments.

Stephen Regenold writes about outdoors gear at www.gearjunkie.com.

The reservoir is stocked with rainbow trout by the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, but the water is quite low this time of year, so now's not the best time to cast your lines.

Maybe I'll visit the site again in the spring when the water is higher. Hopefully then, like I was told by some Web sites, there'll actually be waterfowl and other birds.

The five-mile trip on the dirt road that leads to Thorn Creek Reservoir is best traveled with a four-wheel drive, though other vehicles can make the trip as long as you go slow and watch for ruts. Your car will likely be dirty, like this one, after making the trip.

Prepare for the unexpected when in the outdoors

s a transplanted New Englander accustomed to fall's cool months, I remember being unnerved when I first experienced a warm fall afternoon mutate into a fullblown mountain blizzard. I've come to understand that remote places that appear so inviting in afternoon's warm sunshine take on an entirely different character with evening's darkness and crunching cold — unless you are prepared. Years ago I questioned several wilderness instructors from the National Outdoor Leadership School in Lander, Wyo. Based on their recommendations and my personal preferences, I put together a survival rucksack that, with seasonal modifications, has accompanied me on every outing since then.

What follows is a list of items I like to have along should I find myself spending an unexpected evening or two in the woods. All these items are relatively inexpensive, easily obtained, and compact.

Makeshift shelter

Adequate shelter becomes your No. 1 priority should you be required to spend a night in the field.

Sitting in the bottom of my pack is a compact stainless-steel Wyoming Saw. With interchangeable blades, it is no great trick to construct a sheltering framework and floor of branches and boughs, as well as produce an unlimited supply of firewood.

A plastic emergency blanket lines the pack's side. Depending on weather conditions, this heat-reflective fabric can be used as a ground cloth or secured by its grommets as an overhead cover.

Weighing only two ounces, a tightly-packed aluminum-style rainsuit stands ready to guard against hypothermia. One of these suits saved me from freezing while temporarily stranded far from the cabin during an early October elk hunt in Wyoming's Wind River Range.

Since you'll want to maintain a fire for warmth, cooking, and companionship - and possibly as a signal to rescuers — I don't skimp here. A magnesium metal match and striker will quickly get the flames licking, even when the match is soaked. For backup, I carry a waterproof plastic container filled with wooden matches and a film canister of cotton balls soaked in Vaseline, which are great fire starters.

Tucked into a fold of the blanket is a 50-foot coil of nylon parachute cord, useful for shelter construction, dragging and hanging animal quarters and a number of other uses.

First aid kit

Contained in a resealable plastic bag are aspirin/Tylenol tablets, Pepto-Bismol tablets, tweezers and needles. assorted bandages, and small tubes of antibiotic cream and burn gel.

Rounding out my improvised clinic are three large gauze compresses, a triangular bandage, a roll of adhesive tape, several safety pins and an Ace bandage.

Maintenance

Charged with fresh triple-A batteries, the Mini-Mag flashlight really shines when the sun goes down. Compact and rugged, these flashlights are available in a variety of lens, conventional and LED bulbs for different lighting conditions.

Another inexpensive marvel is the 18-hour chemical hand/foot/body warmer packs. They take up precious little space, are inexpensive and provide warmth when temperatures slip into the skinny numbers.

Nestled inside an aluminum cooking kit are sustenance foods: deer jerky, chocolate/energy bars, packages of condensed soup, and trail mix. For water, I pack a Boda Bag. A plastic water filtration straw is on board.

With a little forethought and preparation, you'll be well-equipped to enjoy the Gem State in all its many moods.

Good shooting!

Michigan day care snafu prompts discussion of Jerome ordinance

By John Plestina Times-News writer

IEROME – When does grandma become a day care provider needing a license? She might not if she lives in Jerome but she might if she lives in Barry County, Mich.

The Jerome County Commission on Tuesday discussed possible changes to an existing county ordinance regulating day cares with the intention of simplifying the permitting process, protecting the rights of people to look after grandchildren and preventing problems like one in Michigan that received national media coverage.

The Associated Press recently reported on a Michigan state agency accusing a mother of operating an unlicensed day care because she allowed three of her neighbors' children to wait for a school bus at her home, which is a designated school bus stop.

The discussion before Jerome County commissioners mirrors a legal debate in Michigan over a law in that state that regulates licensed day care providers and led to the accusation against that parent.

County Planning and Administrator Art Brown said there is local concern, including a telephone call he has received from a woman who looks after seven grandchildren, who she receives state money for care of, but is not a licensed day care provider.

'Our ordinance says if you take care of five or more kids" you have to be licensed as a day-care provider in Jerome County, he said.

The existing county ordinance defines a home day care as care on a regular basis by a person not related to those being cared for, and a day care center as providing care for five or more children.

Idaho Code defines day care as providing compensated care for children not related by blood or marriage. It defines a family day care home as a care facility for six or fewer children and a day care center as providing care for 13 or more children. A state statute specifically states that the law regulating day care licensing does not apply to occasional care of the children of neighbors, relatives or friends.

"The way the economy is, they take the kids to grandma and they don't have to pay a day care," Brown said.

Brown also said he would like to see the current day care hearing process eliminated in favor of administrative decisions.

Brown and Deputy Prosecutor Mike Seib are drafting an ordinance for future consideration by the commission.

While there are numerous recommendations, county legislation could eliminate problems for grandparents and mirror a state standard of 13 children to be considered a day care center where a special use permit might become necessary.

While state law supersedes the county's ordinance, a county ordinance can be more restrictive.

Rev. Moon marries 45,000 in global mass wedding

Associated Press writer

ASAN, South Korea - It was his wedding day, but Choi In-seok admitted to a twinge of nervousness Wednesday about spending the rest of his life with the woman hand-picked for him by the Unification Church.

The 34-year-old English teacher was among 45,000 people worldwide who took part in a mass wedding that was the largest in a decade – and quite possibly the last for the church's controversial founder, the Rev. Sun Myung Moon.

Moon, who turns 90 in January, has turned day-today leadership of the Unification Church over to three sons and a daughter. But the self-proclaimed "Messiah" returned to the altar Wednesday to bless tens of thousands of newlyweds in a special ceremony that also honored his 50th wedding anniversary.

In Moon's church, marriage and family are core to spirituality. Since the early years of his religious leadership, he has paired off couples who believe he is blessed with divine insight.

As the mass weddings grew in scale, so did the thewife Han Hak-ja donning high priest-style white gowns and towering caps and marrying off tens of thousands in stadiums and arenas as protesters shouted wore white wedding dresses

And not everyone was happy Wednesday.

One bride in South Korea sat forlornly in a lawn chair with a black jacket thrown over her white wedding dress, tears streaming down her face.

"I came here against my will," she said. "I'm too young to get married. I don't understand why I have to do something like this." She refused to give her name or age, saying only that she was a student.

Choi In-seok, the English teacher, tied the knot Wednesday with kindergarten teacher Kim Shin-ah.

"I'm so happy," he said. "Today's wedding doesn't only mean our happiness but also our entire families' happiness."

DEAR DR. GOTT: In 2003, my body ached all over. My physician examined me, closely monitoring the new high-blood-pressure meds she had prescribed. No cause was found, so I was diagnosed with arthritis and was sent to physical therapy. It didn't help, and I begged for a wheelchair.

One day, I accompanied a friend to her holistic doctor. He saw me limping around his health-food store and invited me to talk about my pain. He suggested that I get a comprehensive blood allergy test, which my doc-

She had a special twinkle in her eye for the ones she loved. That twinkle was when she fell in love with one of the classmates, Joe Berriochoa. Joe, after returning from World War II, married Joan at St. Peter's Catholic Church in the summer of 1945. It was said by Ramona Berriochoa, Joe's mother, "Joan will be very good for him." Truer words were never spoken.

As a very young couple, they made their home in Shoshone, where they owned and operated the Farmers Market grocery store nearly 40 years. Joan worked as the store bookkeeper while Joe took care of the day-to-day operations. Together, they raised a family of six children, including twins.

full of service to others, she still had time for her favorite hobbies, including sewing, making crafts, quilting and playing bridge. Joan was one of the very first members of the Tyro Bridge Club still ongoing in Shoshone.

Joan's most favorite times and greatest joys were going to the ball games of her children and grandchildren. She was, without a doubt, their biggest fan and attempted never to miss a game. Although she never played sports herself, she knew what it took to be a winner and would tell us so. Instead, she spent retained so many lifelong her time visiting, caring for and doing things with her aging mother, sisters and grown children. The remainder of her time was spent never more prevalent than traveling with friends and visiting many areas of the country.

Joan possessed dignity and grace throughout her life. Her honor and integrity were unmatched. She was like an elegant flower always in bloom. She was dainty and delicate but could be stronger than a team of horses if she needed to be.

Joan is survived by five of her children, Jon Berriochoa, Carla (Bob) Weaver, Paul Berriochoa, Brenda (Rick) Dolphus and Barbara Astle; 14 grandchildren, Michael, Marc, Kysa, Josh, Suzanne, Aaron, Jake, Daniel, John, Austin, Demi, Brock, Kyli and Taylor; six great-grandchildren, Christopher, Hailey, Although Joan's life was Riley, Tanner, Brayden and Spencer; two of her sisters, Iris (Tom) Sharpe and Marilyn (Kermit) Thompson.

Even before the fingerprint discovery, Vezzosi said several experts agreed with his conclusion, which was based on "historical, artistic, stylistic (and) aesthetic" considerations.

Based on its style, the portrait has been dated to 1485-1490, placing it at a time when Leonardo (1452-1519) was living in Milan.

Canadian-born art collector Peter Silverman bought "La Bella Principessa" – or "The Beautiful Princess" at the gallery in New York on behalf of an anonymous Swiss collector in 2007 for about $19,000. New York art dealer Kate Ganz had owned it for about nine years after buying it at auction for a similar price. One London art dealer now says it could be worth more than $150 million.

If experts are correct, it will be the first major work by Leonardo to be identified in 100 years.

Ganz still doesn't believe it is a Leonardo.

By Nada Bakri The Washington Post

BAGHDAD, Iraq Armed men killed at least eight people and wounded nine Wednesday during a robbery of three jewelry stores in Baghdad, a brazen, daylight crime that residents blamed on security forces. Sectarian violence has fallen sharply in the past year in Baghdad and other areas across Iraq, but robberies and killings remain common. Many in the capital say that the country's sprawling security forces, numbering in the hundreds of thousands, often play at least a tacit role in the incidents.

In Wednesday's robberies, witnesses said two dark blue minibuses carrying 12 to 15 men arrived in a Shiite neighborhood at 2 p.m. and parked a block away from the market where the jewelry stores are located. The assailants walked the rest of the way, each dressed in black pants and a arrested for failing to protect white shirt, witnesses said.

shot the owner in the head with a gun equipped with a silencer and robbed the place. They then looted two more stores, killing the owners. Along the way, they killed five other people, including a woman and her

8-month-old baby. Before leaving, tossed hand grenades into the market and shot at cars parked nearby to ensure they were not followed.

A checkpoint is located a few miles away, and many residents said soldiers there had allowed the assailants to pass unhindered.

"The policemen at the checkpoint know me, but they search me and search my car every time I leave and come back," said Mohamad Salman, a 35-year-old butcher whose store was near one of the jewelers. "It was an organized crime, and they were getting help from the police. They weren't even hiding their faces."

Interior Ministry officials said in a statement that six soldiers and an officer were the area, in northwestern

MOSCOW - Mike Iupati wants to clear up one misconception right away: Back home in American Samoa, most people aren't huge.

Quite the opposite, actually. They do hard, physical labor. They don't have an unending buffet line of food.

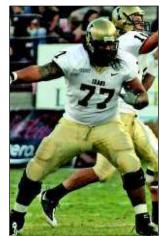

But when Samoans come to America, something happens. Iupati has seen it over and over again.

"They tend to eat all (the food they can)," he says. "It's like heaven to them."

So imagine Iupati's reaction the first day he arrived in the U.S., as a 6-foot, 200pound 14-year-old, when his family took him to Burger King. He already couldn't fathom how large everything in Southern California seemed, but this was the France, who formed the National Association of Stock Car Racing in 1947, was the first inductee announced Wednesday in a ceremony that followed a lengthy voting session at the Charlotte Convention Center.

Richard Petty, the seven-time Cup champion and NASCAR's all-time wins leader, was the second inductee revealed by current NASCAR chairman Brian France, who from an independent accounting firm.

Next up was Bill France Ir., son of the NASCAR founder who spent nearly 30 years at the helm of America's top motorsports series.

The final two nods instead went to Dale Earnhardt, NASCAR's other seven-time champion, and Junior Johnson, a former driver and car owner whose early days of running moonshine through backroads of North Carolina stands as a symbol of NASCAR's start.

Bornstein's header gives US 2-2 tie

WASHINGTON - Jonathan Bornstein headed in a corner kick in the fifth minute of ly abusing game officials and failing to leave stoppage time, giving the United States a 2-2 tie against Costa Rica on Wednesday night that put Honduras in next year's World Cup.

Bryan Ruiz scored twice in a four minutespan midway through the first half, but Michael Bradley cut the U.S. deficit in the 72nd minute. With the United States playing a man short following an injury to Oguchi Onyewu and Costa Rica less just 20 seconds or so from qualifying, Bornstein headed in Robbie Rogers' corner kick from about 7 yards.

At the end, U.S. players held up a banner with the number "9" of teammate Charlie Davies, who was seriously injured in a car coach about rookie Hasheem Thabeet's time crash Tuesday and is unlikely to play in next

Bobcats' Brown fined $60,000

CHARLOTTE, N.C. - Larry Brown became the first major target in the NBA's zero-tolerance policy toward criticizing its replacement referees.

The Bobcats coach was hit with $60,000 received the five envelopes one at a time in fines on Wednesday and the Charlotte organization was fined another $60,000 after Brown's ejection from an exhibition

> Memphis Grizzlies coach Lionel Hollins was also fined $25,000 for criticism after a game Monday, as the league attempts to protect its inexperienced officials while it locks out its regular referees in a labor dis-> college and pro-am leagues, whistled Brown for two technical fouls at different times in Monday's game in Atlanta. After the second technical, with 3:23 left in the third quarter, Brown lingered on the court instead of heading to the locker room. Scott called for security, but Brown then left on his own.

Limbaugh dropped from group seeking to buy Rams

Conservative radio talk show host Rush Limbaugh has been dropped from a group seeking to buy the St. Louis Rams.

Limbaugh was to be a limited partner in a bid led by St. Louis Blues chairman Checketts, Checketts said in a statement Wednesday that Limbaugh's participation had complicated the effort. The group will move forward without him.

Checketts said he will have no further comment on the bid process. Limbaugh did not immediately respond to an e-mail sent late Wednesday seeking comment on Checketts' decision.

Limbaugh said on his radio show earlier Wednesday that he had been inundated with emails from listeners who supported him in the bid.

"This is not about the NFL, it's not about the St. Louis Rams, it's not about me," Limbaugh said. "This is about the ongoing effort by the left in this country, wherever you find them, in the media, the Democrat Party, or wherever, to destroy conservatism, to prevent the mainstreaming not physically meet with or of anyone who is prominent as a conservative.

"Therefore, this is about the future of the United States of America and what kind of country we're going to have."

Limbaugh's bid ran into opposition from within the image-conscious NFL on Tuesday when Colts owner Albert Haynesworth last received a medical report hoods. Jim Irsay said he would vote winter. against the radio personality. Commissioner Roger this for two to three years Goodell said the commentator's "divisive" comments enough to make sure we've would not be tolerated from any NFL insider.

AMENDED NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING Date: October 22, 2009

Time: 9:00 a.m. Place: Albion Fire Protection District Building Corner of Main & Market Streets (Across from D.L. Evans Bank) Albion, Idaho

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that a Public Hearing will be held before the Albion Highway District Board of Commissioners upon the following matter(s):

THE DETERMINATION OF THE LEGAL STATUS AND PROPOSED VALIDATION OF 1250 EAST ROAD FROM THE 1000 SOUTH COORDINATE THENCE SOUTH UNTIL THE ROAD REACHES PUBLIC LANDS (also known as the "Old Howell Canyon Road") which is within the boundaries of the Albion Highway District, Cassia County, Idaho and over and/or abutting real property located in Sections 16, 17, 20 and 21 of Range 25 East of the Boise Meridian. After entering into public lands, the road continues in a southernly direction in Sections 20, 29, 31 and 32 of Range 25 East of the Boise Meridian until it meets the "CCC Road" (also known as the "Old Pomerelle

This proceeding was initiated by the Albion Highway District Board of Commissioners, pursuant to Idaho Code Title 40, Chapter 2, including, but not limited to, Section 40-203A. Commissioners will hear evidence in order to determine the legal status of the above-road, including any evidence of prior creation, validation or abandonment, and due to doubt which exists, by omission or defect, as to the legal establishment or evidence of establishment of the above road as a highway or public right of way, the Albion Highway District Commissioners shall consider all information relating to these proceedings and accept testimony from persons having an interest in the matter. Any person interested in these proceedings may submit evidence in advance of the October 22, 2009 public hearing.

A copy of a map of the road in question is on file with the Albion Highway District Clerk, Ron Screnson, and available for review and copying upon request. Any and all persons may register their comments, protests, affidavits, agreements, or other relevant documents on the issue of the validity or non-validity of the above-described road being considered. Written comments, affidavits, or protests to be considered as to the status of the above road as a public highway or public right-of-way by the Commissioners must be received in advance of the public hearing. Any such written submissions may be sent to the Office of the Albion Highway District at P.O. Box 71, Albion, Idaho 83311. The District's Clerk may be contacted at (208) 673-5376. Any person needing special accommodations to participate in the above-noticed hearing should contact the Albion Highway District Clerk or attorney seven (7) days prior to the meeting. Any evidence, questions or objections regarding the matter may be directed to Kelly Arthur Anthon, Esq., attorney for the Albion Highway District, P.O. Box 396, Rupert, Idaho (Telephone No. 436-4717). Questions or objections regarding hearing procedures may be directed to Steven A. Tuft, Esq., P.O. Box 759, Burley, Idaho 83318, who shall function as the Special Hearing Officer.

Dated this 14th day of September, 2009. Kelly Arthur Anthon

Gifts for grandchildren can be both fun and practical

DEAR ABBY: This is in response to "Where's the Fun in Upstate New York" (July 26), whose husband, "Hugh," insisted they buy their grandson a $100 savings bond for his first birthday when she wanted to splurge on toys and clothes. I understand her frustration.

together what to do, not tell the other what will be done. That said, I agree with Hugh issue. that $100 to $150 on gifts for a 1-year-old is excessive. The child's room will soon look like an overloaded toy store. I have seen this in our family. extended Christmas it took 2 1/2 hours to open all the gifts. Egads! We've become a nation of excess, and kids expect it.

Years ago, I approached the parents of our godchildren with the offer of savings bonds on holidays, which they gratefully accepted. Two of the "children" are now in college, and we're pleased we lifted a bit of the burden of the cost they'll face. I know it's not a "fun" gift, especially for the little ones, so we always include a token present for "now." I hope that couple can reach a let this drive a wedge.

- SENSIBLE IN IOWA DEAR SENSIBLE: The majority of those who wrote to comment on the letter from "Where's the Fun" were - like you - as concerned about the state of the woman's marriage as the gift issue. Read on:

of a controlling spouse. If Couples should decide Hugh is truly "wonderful in every way," then they should agree to disagree on this

She should spend what she wants, within reason, on gifts of her choice for their grandson's birthday. If he feels strongly about the savings bond, which is also a wonderful gift, then they should get that, too. Because they are financially comfortable, and this is the only area of disagreement, surely Hugh can compromise.

I am alarmed that he has already decided what they'll be giving the child for every birthday. Grandparents traditionally engage in a mixture of indulgent and practical gift-giving. She was not looking to buy a wildly overthe-top gift. Hugh needs to relax and be a partner, not a dictator. And by the way, "fun" is not a dirty word. It's similar agreement and not Baby's first birthday - lighten up! MELISSA

IN NEW YORK

DEAR ABBY: Some spouses suffer from "economic abuse" when one partner dominates financial decisions. I agree that a baby won't be impressed by pricey items, but this woman's gift choices are a form of self-expression. She should be allowed the joy of choosing presents and enjoying her grandbaby, especially since she contributes to household finances, but even if she didn't. Sometimes these gifts become treasured keepsakes passed through generations.

- GIVING MY TWO CENTS' WORTH IN ABILENE

DEAR ABBY: While the adults in my life did give me toys and material things for my birthdays and holidays, I am 26 now and I have little recollection of what they were. What I know now is that because of the generous gifts of savings bonds from those loved ones, my fiance and I were able to make a down payment on a beautiful home without being "house poor." Those bonds allowed us to make a major step forward in our lives and be comfortable and secure.

It means the world that the adults who loved me and are no longer with me are part of this house and my new life, even though they could not be at my wedding.

 SARAH IN HOUSTON DEAR ABBY: My husband and I decided early on that we'd open a joint bank account and place half of each of our earnings into it. I opened another account in my name only for the other half. That way, if we disagreed on something - such as a gift - I could buy it myself. It has worked well.

I do agree that for the child's first birthday, Hugh's idea is best. The child will appreciate it when he's older. DEBORAH IN MARIETTA

Thursday, Oct. 15, 2009 THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

"I'd rather fight than switch."

Advertisement for Tareytons

One of the hardest defenses to find against no-trump is to take a trick or two in one suit, switch to another suit, and then revert to Claudio Nunes, of the current Italian World Champions, at work.

Against no-trump they lead fourth highest from suits with no honors, and third or fifth from suits with honors. So on this deal Nunes, five-card suit headed by the ace was a possibility, but it was rather more likely that West held four small cards. On the other hand, from declarer's point of view, it was more likely that West held one of the spade honors and therefore that he held a five-card

the spade jack at trick one, declarer ducked. And he ducked again when East continued with the queen. But now East switched to a heart and declarer was sunk. If he won, the defenders would have two heart tricks to cash when West got in with the club king. If declarer ducked, West could win the queen and switch back to spades (knowing East had four spades from South's Stayman response). That set up the defenders' fifth trick to cash when West fourth-highest spade two, declarer should win his ace at trick one.

Now with the club king well placed, three no-trump should al-

ANSWER: This is more a question of partnership agreement than of right or wrong. But I believe that the best way to play when the opponents intervene over one no-trump is to use a double by opener or responder for takeout. So I would double here, suggesting four hearts and values.
