A DOGGONE GOOD DEAL

Twin Falls County Sheriff's Deputy Doug Gaskill, right, speaks with Raymond Bradshaw outside his home in Twin Falls as Bradshaw's dog, Shilo, peeks through the window. Bradshaw called about a neighbor's dog that was at large. Gaskill is not a regular animal control officer but was called to stand in for the unit.

T.F. staff recommends renewal of animal-control contract; council will vote tonight

 By Nate Poppino
 Times-News writer

Twin Falls city staff has concluded the city will be better off financially if it renews an animal-control contract with Twin Falls County rather than do the work itself.

In a staff report prepared for today's 5 p.m. City Council meeting, Twin Falls Police Lt. Craig Stotts wrote that the council should approve the $114,000 agreement because it is a better deal for the city.

The Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office has provided animal-control services for both entities since 2000 under a contract that's supposed to be renewed annually. But the bill has risen several times in the past decade, and Mayor Lance Clow's concerns about the cost helped prevent the contract from being signed for the last fiscal year.

Stotts' review found that after first-year expenses such as equipment, the city would have to budget just shy of $120,000 for its own animal-control program. But taking on the work would bring other indirect costs, he found, including another $44,375 for a new city dispatcher. Balancing the vacation and sick days for two animal-control workers may also require more police overtime, said Assistant City Manager Travis Rothweiler.

"There is, in our opinion, a larger benefit than" just the nearly $6,000, Rothweiler said.

The new contract would actually be a slight savings to the city, which paid $120,000 to the county last year through an extension clause that kept the agreement in place. County commissioners approved the $114,000 figure for the 2009-10 fiscal year at a meeting early this month, after the sheriff's office weeded out some redundant costs. The fiscal year began Oct. 1.

Twin Falls police determined in 2007 that the city provides roughly 80 percent of calls for animal-control services.

Sheriff Tom Carter was happy to hear about the staff recommendation, said spokeswoman Lori Stewart.

"(He) is pleased with the contract and felt that it was equitable for all involved," Stewart said.

The city has been very happy with the county's performance, Rothweiler said. But officials felt it important to ensure the cost was justified, he said. Similar reviews have been or will be done on other arrangements, including the recent review of golf pro Mike Hamblin's contract.

"It's one of those things that, I think it's OK we build relationships, but it's also OK to make sure that the cost of the service and the level of service is still meeting the expectations of our citizens," he said.

Three vie for Ketchum mayor

Leadership style, city revitalization top debates

 By Ariel Hansen
 Times-News writer

KETCHUM — Ketchum Mayor Randy Hall, who withstood a recall petition this term, is facing two challengers in the Nov. 3 election. Phyllis Shafran and Mickey Garcia say Hall has not led the city in an accountable, friendly way.

Garcia, 66, would like to see Ketchum move toward a council-manager form of government, saying it has worked elsewhere in the valley and is more professional and less political than the existing council-mayor form.

"It doesn't rely on what the mayor does and doesn't know, it doesn't rely on the mayor's big ego," said Garcia, a Vietnam veteran, retired forest service worker and frequent attendee at Ketchum City Council meetings. He has lived in the valley for about 25 years.

Garcia would also reduce the mayor's annual salary from $36,720 to about $17,000. Council members make $20,400, and both mayor and council members also

FDA: Swine flu scams lurk on Web

 By Marilyn Marchione

Air "sterilizers." A photon machine. Supplement pills to boost the immune system. Protective shampoos and face masks. Even fake Tamiflu.

These and other products making bogus claims to prevent or treat swine flu are flooding the Internet as scam artists prey on the public's fears while the vaccine is delayed and real Tamiflu is rationed.

Every problem, it would seem, is a sales opportunity. Some of the products appear to have been pitched for other emergencies, such as one called "Quake Kare" and masks and purifiers sold during the SARS scare.

Federal officials have sent warning letters to promoters of more than 140 swine flu-related products, including well-known alternative medicine advocate Dr. Andrew Weil for his "Immune Support Formula."

Consumer Reports also has warned subscribers to be wary.

"It's harmful, disappointing, frustrating to see folks take advantage of the public like this," said Dr. John Santa, who evaluates health claims for Consumer Reports.

Fraudulent products emerged shortly after swine flu did last spring — about 10 a day, said Alyson Saben, head of a swine flu consumer fraud team formed by the Food and Drug Administration. The pace slowed over the summer as the flu abated, but "it's picked up" in recent weeks, she said. "We are seeing new sites pop up."

Most worrisome: sites that claim to sell Tamiflu without a prescription. The FDA bought and tested five such products. One

Health insurer profits not so fat

Answer: They're all more profitable than the health insurance industry.

In the health care debate, Democrats and their allies have gone after insurance companies as rapacious profiteers making "immoral" and "obscene" returns while "the bodies pile up."

Ambulances start charging extra for obese patients

 By Heather Hollingsworth
 Associated Press writer

TOPEKA, Kan. — The memory still bothers Ken Keller: A panicked ambulance crew had a critically ill patient, but the man weighed more than 1,000 pounds and could not fit inside the vehicle. And the stretcher wasn't sturdy enough to hold him.

The crew offered an idea to Keller, who was then an investigator with the Kansas Board of Emergency Medical Services. Could they use a forklift to load the man — bed and all — onto a flatbed truck? Keller agreed: There was no other choice.

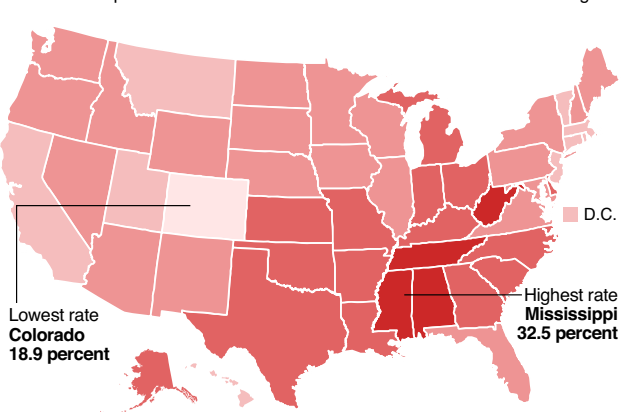

"I'm sure it was terribly embarrassing to be in his own bed, riding on the back of a flatbed with straps tying him down, going to the hospital, and then have a forklift at the hospital unload him," Keller said.

As the nation battles the obesity crisis, ambulance crews are trying to improve how they transport extremely heavy patients, who become significantly more difficult to move as they surpass 350 pounds. And caring for such patients is expensive, requiring costly equipment and extra workers, so some ambulance companies have started charging higher fees for especially overweight people.

The move to modify ambulances is just the latest effort to accommodate plus-sized patients. Some hospitals already offer specially designed beds, wheelchairs, walkers and even commodes.

Ketchum

Continued from Main 1 receive medical, dental and vision insurance, long-term disability insurance, worker's comp, a PERSI retirement plan and the option to contribute to a 401K.

Shafran, 72, a longtime money manager and book-keeper in Ketchum, said she feels council meetings aren't inviting enough to citizens. She said citizens are often shut down, except when it isn't politically expedient. "People got to talk (during a recent public comment period) and not stopped, and we thought, it must be election time," she said.

She also worries that the way the city's Urban Renewal District is being managed is inappropriate, especially the allocation of the URA's receipts. "I would not stick it into the general fund like they have been doing, because what they're basically doing is robbing Peter to pay Paul," she said.

Hall, 50, an emergency room paramedic who has held public office for 12 years, said he has a long history of managing the city through crises, including the Big Wood River flood, the Castle Rock Fire, the economic downturn and the closure of First Bank of Idaho. He points to the city's high fund balances and liquidity today as signs of proper leadership.

"We were really one of the only resort cities that made the proper course corrections throughout the year, not waiting until it was too late," he said.

All three candidates recognize the importance of the proposed River Run hotel and complex, up for annexation into the city by Sun Valley Co.

Hall cites his years of working with the company and his shepherding of projects at Thunder Springs, Warm Springs and the YMCA as an indicator he will be similarly successful with River Run. "Now is not the time to switch horses," he said.

Shafran points to Sun Valley Co.'s history of high-quality, well-funded, quickly built projects, and say she expects the same from River Run. "What (Sun Valley Co. owner Earl) Holding has done has helped the whole community," Shafran said.

Revitalizing Ketchum and making it attractive to all generations — visitors as well as residents — is a primary goal of all three candidates.

"Ketchum is basically dying and we need jobs and housing for young people who are not making the money that a lot of these old geezers that are retired here are," Garcia said. He said some locals fall into acronymic mindsets, however. "CAVE: citizens against virtually everything; BANANA: build absolutely nothing anywhere near anything; NIMBY: not in my backyard."

Hotels are important for revitalization, all three said, as well as affordable housing, and Shafran and Hall said regional transportation, including a replacement airport, is another issue they hope to address.

Ariel Hansen may be reached at ahansen@magicvalley.com or 208-788-3475.

Obese

Continued from Main 1 providers, Medicaid and Medicare, or patients themselves to begin paying the added costs, which are cutting into their razor-thin profit margins.

In the past, ambulance companies often absorbed the extra expense of serving the obese. Now they are adding charges similar to those already imposed on intensive-care patients, people requiring multiple medications and patients on ventilators.

"In order for these systems to survive and continue to provide their service, there has to be some way to recover those costs," said Jim Buell, a director at the American Ambulance Association. Transporting extremely heavy people costs about 2½ times as much as normal-weight patients. It takes more time to move them and requires three to four times more crew members, who often must use expensive specialty equipment, Buell said.

Keller, now an operations manager for the American Medical Response unit in Topeka, successfully petitioned the Shawnee County Commission last summer to raise ambulance fees from $629 to $1,172 for critical-care patients and people who are 500 pounds or heavier.

In Colorado Springs, Colo., and the Nebraska cities of Omaha and Lincoln, the fees are $1,421 for an extremely obese patient, compared with $758 for a typical patient.

Scams

contained powdered talc and generic Tylenol — no Tamiflu. Several others contained some Tamiflu but were not approved for sale in the U.S.

"We have no idea of the conditions under which they were manufactured. They could contain contaminated, counterfeit, impure or sub-potent or superpotent ingredients," Saben said.

Tamiflu and Relenza are the only drugs recommended for treating swine flu.

Rogue Web sites are not the only ones trying to cash in on flu fears. Makers of some well-established products are making claims that may be close to the line, the FDA says.

This week, the makers of Dial Soap, Kleenex, Clorox and other big brands launched a joint promotional campaign costing up to $1 million. The FDA is reviewing the campaign, which includes a video that says:

"Germs are tiny organisms that can cause disease.

According to the CDC, up to 80 percent of infectious diseases, like the flu, are spread by your hands. That's why frequent, proper handwashing is so important in preventing spread of the flu, other viruses and germs. An antibacterial soap like Dial Complete foaming hand wash kills 99.9 percent of germs."

Flu is caused by a virus, so killing bacteria is of uncertain benefit.

The campaign is "not being specific down to swine flu," said Scott Moffitt, an official with Dial Corp.'s parent company, Germany-based Henkel AG. He also contends the video is not misleading, even though the germ-killing claim follows a sentence about flu and other viruses.

One product that drew a warning letter from the FDA is the Photon Genie, a gadget that delivers "energy waves." Its Web site claimed it "helps strengthen the immune system, and a strong immune system is KEY to preventing swine flu symptoms and KEY to treating swine flu."

The site has since removed the swine flu claim but "other claims remain," Saben said.

The group behind the Web site, the Skilling Institute of Phoenix, "is not marketing, and will not market in the future, any product that is intended to diagnose, mitigate, prevent, treat or cure the H1N1 flu virus," its director, Warren Starnes, wrote in an e-mail.

Some products the FDA warned about contain silver, such as "Swine Flu...Gone," made by Secrets of Eden.

"Spray 'Swine Flu ...Gone' with ionic silver on your hands and on any surface where these germs may exist and kill the virus," its site had claimed.

Secrets of Eden sells supplements and oils with a biblical flair, said its general manager, Rick Strawcutter, a former pastor in Adrian, Mich. The staff "got a little carried away" on marketing for one product and "drew the ire of the FDA," he said.

"It was not worth contesting," so he ordered a stop to it, Strawcutter said.

The federal Agency for Toxic Substances and Disease Registry says silver "may cause harmful health effects," depending on the amount and type of exposure.

Dr. Andrew Weil's site had this problem language, the FDA's warning letter said: "...during the flu season, I suggest taking a daily antioxidant, multivitamin-mineral supplement, as well as astragalus, a well-known immune-boosting herb that can help ward off colds and flu. You might also consider ... the Weil Immune Support Formula which contains both astragalus and immune-supportive polypore mushrooms."

Weil issued a statement saying the content "was primarily educational" about how to avoid the flu, and that he had directed his Web site team to remove and review it for compliance with federal rules.

Insurance

or take a point or two. That's anemic compared with other forms of insurance and a broad array of industries, even some beleaguered ones.

Profits barely exceeded 2 percent of revenues in the latest annual measure. This partly explains why the credit ratings of some of the largest insurers were downgraded to negative from stable heading into this year, as investors were warned of a stagnant if not shrinking market for private plans.

Insurers are an expedient target for leaders who want a government-run plan in the marketplace. Such a public option would force private insurers to trim profits and restrain premiums to compete, the argument goes. This would "keep insurance companies honest," says President Obama.

The debate is loaded with intimations that insurers are less than straight, when they are not flatly accused of malfeasance.

They may not have helped their case by commissioning a report that looked primarily ly at the elements of health care legislation that might drive consumer costs up while ignoring elements aimed at bringing costs down. Few in the debate seem interested in a true balance sheet.

But in pillorying insurers over profits, the critics are on shaky ground. A look at some claims, and the numbers:

THE CLAIMS:

• "I'm very pleased that (Democratic leaders) will be talking, too, about the immoral profits being made by the insurance industry and how those profits have increased in the Bush years." House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., who also welcomed the attention being drawn to insurers' "obscene profits."

• "Keeping the status quo may be what the insurance industry wants their premiums have more than doubled in the last decade and their profits have skyrocketed." Maryland Rep. Chris Van Hollen, member of the Democratic leadership.

• "Health insurance companies are willing to let the bodies pile up as long as their profits are safe." A MoveOn.org ad.

THE NUMBERS:

Health insurers posted a 2.2 percent profit margin last year, placing them 35th on the Fortune 500 list of top industries. As is typical, other health sectors did much better — drugs and medical products and services were both in the top 10. The railroads brought in a 12.6 percent profit margin. Leading the list: network and other communications equipment, at 20.4 percent.

HealthSpring, the best performer in the health insurance industry, posted 5.4 percent. That's a less profitable margin than was achieved by the makers of Tupperware, Clorox bleach and Molson and Coors beers.

The star among the health insurance companies did, however, nose out Jack in the Box restaurants, which only achieved a 4 percent margin. UnitedHealth Group, reporting third quarter results last week, saw fortunes improve. It managed a 5 percent profit margin on an 8 percent growth in revenue.

Van Hollen is right that premiums have more than doubled in a decade, according to a Kaiser Family Foundation study that found a 131 percent increase. But were the Bush years golden ones for health insurers?

Not judging by profit margins, profit growth or returns to shareholders. The industry's overall profits grew only 8.8 percent from 2003 to 2008, and its margins year to year, from 2005 forward, never cracked 8 percent.

The latest annual profit margins of a selection of products, services and industries: Tupperware Brands, 7.5 percent; Yahoo, 5.9 percent; Hershey, 6.1 percent; Clorox, 8.7 percent; Molson Coors Brewing, 8.1 percent; construction and farm machinery, 5 percent; Yum Brands (think KFC, Pizza Hut, Taco Bell), 8.5 percent.

Dangerous inmates escape E. Idaho jail

AMERICAN FALLS (AP) — Power County Sheriff Jim Jeffries says two inmates considered violent and dangerous escaped from the Power County Jail in American Falls in eastern Idaho Sunday morning. Jeffries says Gilberto Delgado and Rodolfo Ortega took jail keys from a guard and escaped between 9 a.m. and 10 a.m. Delgado is described as 6 feet tall and 200 pounds with black hair and brown eyes. He was last seen wearing Levis and a black long sleeve shirt. Ortega is 5-foot-3 and 170 pounds with black hair and brown eyes. He was last seen wearing a white shirt, blue pants and white shoes. Jeffries says the two men should not be approached, but anyone who sees them should call 911.

ISU faculty board backs suspended professor

POCATELLO (AP) — An Idaho State University Faculty Appeals Board has determined there isn't enough evidence to fire an engineering professor who was suspended for what university administrators say is unprofessional and insubordinate behavior. The board voted 4-1 to back Habib Sadid and on Friday sent a letter to ISU President Arthur Vailas, who has the final say on whether Sadid, who is on administrative leave, remains employed. "In particular, irregularities in the preparation of annual evaluations and the absence of periodic performance reviews, both of which are required by the State Board of Education, caught the majority's decision," board members wrote in a copy of the letter obtained by the Idaho State Journal. "After years of satisfactory evaluations, the short interval to termination without opportunity for remediation was troubling to the majority, particularly in light of the fact that the recommendation to terminate was based on a claimed long-term pattern of behavior," the letter said. Provost Gary Olson said Vailas has three days after he receives the board's report to make a decision. Olson said Vailas was traveling and is expected back at the school on Tuesday. "I know that President Vailas will make every effort to study the evidence and to consider all the facts, including the recommendation of the board," Olson told the newspaper. "(Vailas) ultimately will make a decision that is in the best interest of the entire university." Sadid is contesting his August suspension and is seeking reinstatement, contending his history of speaking his mind about problems at the school led to the suspension. Idaho State officials argue free speech rights do not allow him to make slanderous statements.

Officials: Sexual misconduct is problem among Utah teachers

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — State education officials say sexual misconduct by teachers is the No. 1 reason Utah educators are forced to surrender their licenses. Records show Utah has nearly 20,000 licensed educators. Since 1992, the State Board of Education has suspended or revoked 313 teacher licenses — 208 of them for sexual misconduct. That number excludes 10 cases still being investigated by the Utah Professional Practices Advisory Commission. The behaviors range from inappropriate touching and downloading pornography on a school computer to full-blown molestation. "I talk about it every chance I get, at trainings, lectures and an education law class I teach," said Carol Lear, the state's top education lawyer. "The whole cell phone thing, texting and social networking. The landscape has just become increasingly complicated and sophisticated." In 2005, a survey by The Associated Press ranked Utah 16th in the nation for teacher sex offenses based on disciplinary records from 2001 to 2005 in 50 states and the District of Columbia. At that time, 52.7 percent of Utah teachers who lost their licenses surrendered them for sexual misconduct — twice the national rate, the AP found. Neither police nor education officials can say what accounts for Utah's disproportionate rate. Lear speculates it's because the state disciplines wrongdoers more rigorously than others. All Utah teachers undergo a national criminal background check when hired and again every five years when licenses must be renewed. State rules require teachers to report suspected child abuse and "inappropriate" communication with students is forbidden. The state also has a zero tolerance policy for sex offenses, including those plea bargained to lesser charges or subject to a diversion agreement. Lear is working on a computerized ethics test to be administered every time a teacher comes up for license renewal. She would also like to create a video of real-life scenarios that illustrate red, yellow and green light behaviors.

Law & Disorder... in Cassia County

From Sept. 27 police reports: Assault with a knife, et cetera: Police responded to Oakley High School, on the principal's request, to talk to a 14-year-old boy about, as the report reads, "bringing cigarettes to school and threatening to kill his stepdad" — also calling his parents "white trash losers," the report reads. The previous night, he was reportedly told to go to his room and tried to escape several times but was continually sent back by his stepdad. Then, according to the report, the boy and his stepdad kicked each other until the juvenile, who allegedly tried to leave through the window, "picked up a piece of glass and held it out as to stab Greg (his stepdad) and told him he wanted to kill him." The juvenile then, according to the report, placed the glass against his stepdad's throat and "threatened to cut himself." This went on for "two to three hours," his stepdad and mother told Deputy Brice Nelson. The incident began, the boy's mother said, the previous night when he "asked for something more than (sic) what everyone else was eating." She reportedly told him that his stepdad was in charge of how much the suspect was allowed to eat, whereupon, according to the report, he called his stepdad a "low life piece of (expletive)." After that, while the cause-and-effect isn't clear, the teen allegedly took cigarettes and a lighter to school and was grounded but first "put one foot in and out of his door." When his stepdad stood in front of the door, the juvenile allegedly called him names and threatened to stab him when he went to sleep — which, according to the report, went on for an additional two hours. When questioned, the suspect explained that he "was having a hard time because Greg is mean to him." He wrote a statement about how he obtained the lighter and cigarettes, as well as the subsequent events, which reads: "I stole them from my mom; I only tuck (sic) the purple lighter ... I had 2 Marlboro (sic). My dad took my toy and threw it on the ground. Then he pushed me in my room and then I push (sic) him and he picked my (sic) up and throw (sic) me on my bed. I even threatened to kill him and me, but I was not going to with glass." The boy was cited for assault and tobacco possession. — Damon Hunzeker

David Heitman, CSI Student

"I decided to go back to college after raising my family and being out of school for 35 years. Choosing to go to CSI was probably one of the easiest decisions I've ever made. With their staff being so vested in providing top quality education and their professors being so helpful, I was able to easily transition through my college classes and earn my degree. When I heard the CSI motto say "stay near, go far, succeed," that worked for me."

Study: Warmed NW forests may yield less timber

By Jeff Barnard
Associated Press writer

GRANTS PASS, Ore. — A new study suggests warming temperatures predicted over the next century could boost tree growth on Northwest forests, but less so at lower elevations where most of the timber is and temperatures are already warm.

Researchers from Oregon State University and the U.S. Forest Service calculated an increase in forest growth rates in Oregon and Washington of between 2 percent and 12 percent by the end of the century, when climate models predict temperatures to be between 0.9 degrees and 6.7 degrees higher than they are now.

The greatest increases are likely at higher elevations, where temperatures are cold and growth rates have been low.

The lowest increases in growth, and even decreases, would be at lower elevations, where temperatures are already warm and growth rates have been high.

most accurate and what policy changes are made as a result,” co-author Darius Adams, a professor of forest economics at OSU, said in a statement. “And there are dramatic differences in forest regions and elevations.”

Maps in the study showed the lowest growth rates in southwestern Oregon’s Klamath Mountains and the east side of the Cascade Range, where temperatures are warm and rain is limited. The highest growth rates showed in the Olympic Mountains and Northern Cascades of Washington and the Blue Mountains of Oregon.

The study focused on predicted changes in temperature, and did not take into account factors such as changes in the amount of carbon dioxide in the atmosphere and wildfire, said lead author Gregory Latta, a forest economist at Oregon State.

Researchers plan to expand the study to coastal Alaska.

The authors noted that legislation to control global warming includes a role for forests as an important means of storing carbon to limit the growth of greenhouse gases.

Bill Gates sways gov't $

By Libby Quaid

WASHINGTON — The real secretary of education, the joke goes, is Bill Gates.

The Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation has been the biggest player by far in the school reform movement, spending around $200 million a year on grants to elementary and secondary education.

Now the foundation is taking unprecedented steps to influence education policy, spending millions to influence how the federal government distributes $5 billion in grants to overhaul public schools.

The federal dollars are unprecedented, too.

President Obama persuaded Congress to give him the money as part of the economic stimulus so he could try new ideas to fix an education system that most agree is failing. The foundation is offering $250,000 apiece to help states apply, so long as they agree with the foundation’s approach.

Obama and the Gates Foundation share some goals that not everyone embraces: paying teachers based on student test scores, among other measures of achievement; charter schools that operate independently of local school boards; and a set of common academic standards adopted by every state.

Some argue that a private foundation like Gates shouldn’t partner with the government.

“When you team up with the government, you compromise your ability to be critical of the government, and sometimes you compromise your ability to do controversial and maybe unpopular things with your money,” said Chester E. Finn Jr., president of the Thomas B. Fordham Institute, an education think tank. The institute, is among the many that have received money from the Gates Foundation.

Another concern is that as a private foundation, Gates doesn’t have to disclose the details of its spending like the government does.

The big teachers’ unions dispute some of the goals shared by Obama and the foundation. They say student achievement is much more than a score on a standardized test and that it’s a mistake to rely so heavily on charter schools.

“Despite growing evidence to the contrary, it appears the administration has decided that charter schools are the only answer to what ails America’s public schools,” the National Education Association, the largest teachers’ union, said in comments about the grant competition submitted to the Education Department.

The NEA added: “We should not continue the unhealthy focus on standardized tests as the primary evidence of student success.”

The American Federation of Teachers submitted similar comments. Together the unions have 4.6 million members.

1 in 5 kids get little vitamin D, study says

By Lindsey Tanner
Associated Press writer

CHICAGO — At least one in five U.S. children aged 1 to 11 don’t get enough vitamin D and could be at risk for a variety of health problems including weak bones, the most recent national analysis suggests.

By a looser measure, almost 90 percent of black children that age and 80 percent of Hispanic kids could be vitamin D deficient — “astounding numbers” that should serve as a call to action, said Dr. Jonathan Mansbach, lead author of the new analysis and a researcher at Harvard Medical School and Children’s Hospital in Boston.

The findings add to mounting evidence about vitamin D deficiency in children, teens and adults, a concern because of recent studies suggesting the vitamin might help prevent serious diseases, including infections, diabetes and even some cancers.

While hard evidence showing that low levels of vitamin D lead to disease or that high levels prevent it is lacking, it’s a burgeoning area of research.

Exactly how much vitamin D children and adults should get, and defining when they are deficient, is under debate. Doctors use different definitions, and many are waiting for guidance expected in an Institute of Medicine report on vitamin D due next year. The institute is a government advisory group that sets dietary standards.

The new analysis, released online today by the journal Pediatrics, is the first assessment of varying vitamin D levels in children aged 1 through 11.

Previous studies in the journal this year found low levels were prevalent in U.S. teens, and also showed kids with low levels had higher blood pressure and cholesterol levels, and were more likely to be overweight.

The new analysis uses data from a 2001-06 government health survey of nearly 3,000 children. They had blood tests measuring vitamin D levels.

Using the American Academy of Pediatrics’ cutoff for healthy vitamin D levels, 6.4 million children — about 20 percent of kids that age — have blood levels that are too low.

Tired from a tough hike? Rescuers fear Yuppie 911

By Tracie Cone
Associated Press writer

FRESNO, Calif. — Last month two men and their teenage sons tackled one of the world’s most unforgiving summertime hikes: the Grand Canyon’s parched and searing Royal Arch Loop. Along with bedrolls and freeze-dried food, the inexperienced backpackers carried a personal locator beacon — just in case.

In the span of three days, the group pushed the panic button three times, mobilizing helicopters for dangerous, lifesaving rescues inside the steep canyon walls.

What was that emergency? The water they had found to quench their thirst “tasted salty.”

If they had not been toting the device that works like Onstar for hikers, “we would have never attempted this hike,” one of them said after the third rescue crew forced them to board their chopper. It’s a growing problem facing the men and women who risk their lives when they believe others are in danger of losing theirs.

Technology has made calling for help instantaneous even in the most remote places. Because would-be adventurers can send GPS coordinates to rescuers with the touch of a button, some are exploring terrain they do not have the experience, knowledge or endurance to tackle.

Rescue officials are deciding whether to start keeping statistics on the problem, but the incidents have become so frequent that the head of California’s Search and Rescue operation has a name for the devices: Yuppie 911.

“Now you can go into the back country and take a risk you might not normally have taken,” says Matt Scharper, who coordinates a rescue every day in a state with wilderness so rugged even crashed planes can take decades to find. “With the Yuppie 911, you send a message to a satellite and the government pulls your butt out of something you shouldn’t have been in in the first place.”

From the Sierra to the Cascades, Rockies and beyond, hikers are arming themselves with increasingly affordable technology intended to get them out of life-threatening situations.

While daring rescues are one result, very often the beacons go off unintentionally when the button is pushed in someone’s backpack, or they are activated unnecessarily, as in the case of a woman who was frightened by a thunderstorm.

“There’s controversy over these devices in the first place because it removes the self-sufficiency that’s required in the back country,” Scharper says. “But we are a society of services, and every service you need you can get by calling.”

Yankees advance to World Series

By Mike Fitzpatrick
 Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Alex Rodriguez, welcome to the World Series. The New York Yankees are back in baseball's big event.

The sport's top spenders finally cashed in with their first pennant in six years Sunday night, beating the Los Angeles Angels 5-2 in Game 6 of the AL championship series behind the savvy pitching of that old October pro, Andy Pettitte.

Next up, New York hosts defending champion Philadelphia in the World Series opener Wednesday night. Cliff Lee is expected to face ALCS MVP CC Sabathia in an enticing pitching matchup between former Cleveland teammates — and the past two AL Cy Young Award winners.

"I couldn't be more excited," Rodriguez said. "I feel like a 10-year-old kid."

Ridiculed in the past for his October flops, Rodriguez played a huge role in helping his team advance through the playoffs, batting .438 with five home runs and 12 RBIs. The slugger earned his first trip to the World Series during a 16-year career in which he's accomplished almost everything else.

Pettitte set a postseason record for wins, Johnny Damon hit a two-run single and Mariano Rivera closed it out in familiar fashion with a six-out save as the Yankees won their 40th American League crown by vanquishing the Angels, a longtime nemesis.

Now, the Yankees go for their record 27th title — when manager Joe Girardi was hired two years ago, he took jersey No. 27 with that in mind.

"We're just trying to enjoy this, man," Derek Jeter said. "Hopefully, we can play one more great series."

Not a bad way for Jeter and crew to finish up the first season at the team's new $1.5 billion ballpark

For manager Mike Scioscia and his sloppy Angels, it was their latest playoff failure during a decade of consistent regular-season success. Since winning their only championship in

No. 6 Boise State batters WAC foe Hawaii 54-9

By Jaymes Song
 Associated Press writer

HONOLULU — Kellen Moore came to work and wasn't in the mood for relaxation.

Moore threw a career-best five touchdown passes and No. 6 Boise State forced turnover after turnover in a dominating 54-9 victory over Hawaii on Saturday night to remain unbeaten and in the BCS race.

"We're really proud of how we came out here. It's a totally different environment than we are used to," Moore said. "If you relax too much, you get into the vacation atmosphere. I think we focused well."

The Broncos (7-0, 2-0 Western Athletic Conference) looked confident and sharp, building a 44-0 lead by the third quarter behind their stifling defense. For the night, the Broncos forced six turnovers that led to 30 points.

"Tons of credit to our defense," Boise State coach Chris Petersen said. "If we play that way on defense, we will be hard to stop."

Jeron Johnson intercepted two passes and recovered a fumble on Hawaii's opening drive that ignited Boise State's scoring performance.

"You get one, you want to get another one," Johnson said. "You get two, you want to get another. That's how it was all night. We just kept fighting, trying to get the ball."

Boise State, which didn't have a single take-away in its two previous games, had everything working in its way, from trick plays to fourth-down conversions.

Moore, who leads the nation in passing efficiency, was 18 of 30 for 223 yards. Four of his scoring throws came in the first half. He has thrown 21 TD passes with just two interceptions on the season.

Despite the big lead, Moore played the entire game. Petersen said backup Mike Coughlin got dinged up his only play, an 8-yard run, so he was forced to play Moore the whole game.

TCU passes Boise State in BCS standings

NEW YORK (AP) — TCU has passed Boise State in the Bowl Championship Series standings, putting the unbeaten Horned Frogs in position to be this season's BCS buster.

Florida, Alabama and Texas held onto the top three spots in the standings released Sunday night, keeping control of their chances to reach the national championship game.

Unbeaten Iowa moved up two spots to fourth place after beating Michigan State 15-13 with a last-play touchdown pass by Ricky Stanzi.

Fifth-place USC and sixth-place TCU also moved up two spots.

Boise State dropped from fourth to seventh. The big swing between undefeated Broncos and Horned Frogs came after TCU won 38-7 at BYU (6-2) and Boise State won 54-9 at Hawaii (2-5).

Cardinals' defense beats back Giants, 24-17

By Barry Wilner
 Associated Press writer

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The Arizona Cardinals conquered their House of Horrors, thanks to an opportunistic defense and big plays by their veterans.

Arizona erased some bad memories in its last regular-season visit to Giants Stadium, forcing four turnovers and bewildering Eli Manning with its blitzes in a 24-17 victory Sunday night.

The Cardinals finished 3-15 at the Meadowlands, but this win lifted the defending NFC champions into first place in the West Division at 4-2 with their third straight win.

Kurt Warner, who was 6-2 as a starter with the Giants in 2004, threw one TD pass and got plenty of help from star receiver Larry Fitzgerald and a staunch defense led by safety Adrian Wilson.

Arizona Cardinals wide receiver Larry Fitzgerald (11) runs away from New York Giants defender C.C. Brown (41) Sunday during the third quarter of their game in East Rutherford, N.J.

"Tonight," Warner said, "we definitely fed off our defense."

Wilson had an interception and a fumble recovery, Antrel Rolle picked off Manning to clinch it, and less-heralded Cardinals Jason Wright, Tim Hightower and rookie Beanie Wells found the end zone.

The Giants (5-2) lost their second straight and were let down by, of all people, their normally solid punter. Jeff Feagles struggled, helping give the Cardinals a solid edge in field position for much of the prime-time matchup.

Feagles said he used the wrong kicking angles trying to keep the ball away from returner Steve Breaston.

Wilson, Rolle and Dominique Rodgers-Cromartie, who left late in the third quarter with an ankle injury — X-rays were negative — in the Arizona secondary benefited from the confusion the defense caused for Manning, who was 19 for 37 and threw three interceptions.

"We played team defense," Rodgers-Cromartie said. "Everybody stepped up. When we had interception opportunities, we made them."

And they made the Giants look puzzled on offense.

"They are constantly moving around and flipping safeties and they did a good job with that," center Shaun O'Hara said. "Sometimes we caught them and sometimes they caught us."

Rodgers-Cromartie was the featured character in two noteworthy first-half plays that both wound up in the end zone. He ran stride for stride with Domenik Hixon, then leaped to wrestle the ball away from the receiver in Arizona's end zone in the first quarter.

He went from hero to villain in the second period on a bizarre play. In man coverage against Mario Manningham, Rodgers-Cromartie used another acrobatic leap. But he deflected the ball with his left hand about 15 yards downfield, where Hakeem Nicks caught it in stride and sped to his fourth touchdown in as many games. That 62-yarder put New York ahead 14-7.

Quickly, the Cardinals got some points back. Anquan Boldin, questionable for the prime-time game with an ankle injury, beat Bruce Johnson for a 44-yard catch-and-run to the New York 19. Neil Rackers' 30-yard field goal ended the first-half scoring.

Hamlin dominates at end to win at Martinsville

By Hank Kurz Jr.
 Associated Press writer

MARTINSVILLE, Va. — Denny Hamlin turned a dominant car into a winner at Martinsville Speedway, passing Jimmie Johnson with 138 laps to go Sunday and holding off the Chase leader on a series of late restarts.

Helped by a long green-flag run that established him as the dominant car, Hamlin pulled away after a restart with 52 laps to go, ending Johnson's remarkable run of five trips to Victory Lane in the last six races at the shortest circuit in NASCAR's Sprint Cup Series.

Hamlin easily pulled away again on another restart with 12 laps to go, and again when a late crash by Scott Speed forced a two-lap sprint to the finish of the 501-lap event.

"The last run or two at the end, the 11 had their stuff right," Johnson said of Hamlin's Joe Gibbs Racing team. "I was just a little too loose to do anything with them."

Hamlin's second career victory on the 0.526-mile oval kept the Virginia racer as the only driver besides Johnson to win on the paper clip-shaped track in the last seven races. Hamlin won the spring race last year, and was leading when Johnson nudged him aside with 15 laps to go earlier this year. But Hamlin needed no such tactics to avenge that defeat.

He led three times for a race-high 206 laps, while Johnson led 164 circuits.

Johnson, seeking his record fourth consecutive series title, held on for second and padded his lead in the series standings with four races to go. Mark Martin remained second in the standings, but his deficit went from 90 points to 118 when he finished eighth.

Juan Pablo Montoya was third, followed by Kyle Busch, who passed Jeff Gordon on the final lap. Gordon, a four-time series champion, remained third in points, 150 behind Johnson.

Hamlin, who seemingly dominates just as often as Johnson at Martinsville, but without the finishes to show for it, showed he had Johnson's number when he passed him on lap 363.

He then pulled steadily away, deftly moving around lapped traffic and opening a lead of more than 4 seconds during a long green-flag run. With just over 70 laps to go, radio chatter indicated that the teams were fast approaching pit stops under green, a Martinsville rarity.

The stops started among drivers not in contention, and then Montoya and Johnson headed in, with Hamlin stopping two laps later.

Steelers pick off Vikings

PITTSBURGH — LaMarr Woodley returned Brett Favre's fumble 77 yards for a touchdown and Keyaron Fox ran back an interception 82 yards for another score during the closing minutes, and the Pittsburgh Steelers turned three major defensive stands into a 27-17 victory on Sunday to hand the Minnesota Vikings their first loss.

Two goal-line stands helped turned the anticipated quarterback showdown between Favre and Ben Roethlisberger into a defensive duel. And the Super Bowl champion Steelers (5-2) are tough to beat in any game that's decided by defense.

The Vikings (6-1) had a first down inside the Steelers 1 during the third quarter but settled for a field goal.

SAINTS 46, DOLPHINS 34

MIAMI — The unbeaten Saints overcame an early 21-point deficit, mounting touchdown drives of 82, 79 and 60 yards on successive possessions in the second half to overtake the Dolphins.

NFL passing leader Drew Brees had his worst day of the season, with three interceptions and five sacks. But he scored twice, the second time on a 2-yard keeper with 8:35 left to give the Saints their first lead.

PATRIOTS 35, BUCCANEERS 7

WEMBLEY, England — Tom Brady threw three touchdown passes and had more than 300 yards as the Patriots (5-2) beat the winless Tampa Bay Buccaneers at Wembley Stadium in the NFL's third regular-season game at the iconic London venue.

For the Bucs, who gave up a home game to play in London, the new surroundings didn't help. They fell to 0-7 and saw their losing streak extended to 11 games overall.

COWBOYS 37, FALCONS 21

ARLINGTON, Texas — Tony Romo returned to his swashbuckling style, keeping drives alive by improvising and turning one near-disaster into a touchdown, and Miles Austin proved his breakout game was no fluke by coming up with big play after big play.

With Romo and Austin bringing the offense to life and the defense giving up little more than long drives at the start of each half, the Cowboys (4-2) roared out of their bye with their most impressive win of the season and first against a team with a winning record.

BENGALS 45, BEARS 10

CINCINNATI — Carson Palmer threw five touchdowns passes — four of them in a dominant first half — and Cedric Benson ran for a career-high 189 yards and a touchdown against the team that let him go.

The Bengals improved to 5-2 for the first time since 2005, when a fast-strike offense got them to the playoffs. There was a strong resemblance in the first half, when Cincinnati scored on all five possessions and went up 31-0. It tied for the third-most points the Bears (3-3) have allowed in an opening half.

TEXANS 24, 49ERS 21

HOUSTON — Steve Slaton scored two touchdowns and the Texans built a big lead then held on for the win.

The Texans led 21-0 at halftime then withstood a rally led by backup quarterback Alex Smith. Eugene Wilson's interception on fourth down halted a last-gasp drive by the 49ers (3-3).

San Francisco benched Shaun Hill after a terrible first half, and Smith threw three touchdowns to Vernon Davis to close the gap.

JETS 38, RAIDERS 0

OAKLAND, Calif. — Mark Sanchez shook off the worst start of his young career by running for one touchdown and throwing for another, fellow rookie Shonn Greene ran for 144 yards and two scores and the Jets snapped a three-game losing streak.

It was a low-pressure day for Sanchez, who started two of his first three drives for the Jets (4-3) at the Oakland 4 after turnovers by JaMarcus Russell. Russell was benched in the first half.

PACKERS 31, BROWNS 3

CLEVELAND — Aaron Rodgers threw three touchdown passes, Ryan Grant rushed for 148 yards and Green Bay warmed up for Brett Favre's first visit back to Lambeau Field next week with a laugh against the Cleveland Browns, who got over the flu but can't shake other problems.

It would have been understandable if the Packers (4-2) had overlooked an inferior opponent with their eyes on Favre's hyped return to Wisconsin with the Minnesota Vikings. But Rodgers and his teammates took care of business against the Browns (1-6), who have scored just four offensive touchdowns and 72 points all season.

CHARGERS 37, CHIEFS 7

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Philip Rivers threw three touchdowns passes and LaDainian Tomlinson rushed for 71 yards.

Rivers was 18 for 30 for 268 yards and three TDs as the Chargers won their third in a row in Kansas City for the first time since 1981.

BILLS 20, PANTHERS 9

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Jairus Byrd had two more interceptions, Ryan Fitzpatrick didn't make a big mistake in his first start at quarterback and the Bills took advantage of Carolina's miscues.

Buffalo won despite being outgained 425-167. Carolina led in first downs 20-9 and held the ball for nearly 35 minutes. But Jake Delhomme was intercepted three times and the Panthers (2-4) saw their two-game winning streak snapped.

COLTS 42, RAMS 6

ST. LOUIS — Peyton Manning was 23 for 34 for 235 yards — ending his run of 300-yard games at five — and three touchdown passes and the defense got its first score of the year on rookie Jacob Lacey's 35-yard interception return.

Looking fresh coming off their bye, the Colts won their 15th straight regular-season game and set a franchise record with their eighth straight road victory.

Titus Young had eight catches for 115 yards and three TDs, including a 48-yarder in the third quarter. After the catch, Young flashed the hang loose "shaka" sign in front of the cheering Broncos fans, which quickly drew a flag and caught the ire of his coaches.

Meanwhile, the year continued to get uglier for the injured-plagued Warriors (2-5, 0-4), who have lost five straight for the first time since 1998. The 45-point loss was Hawaii's worst since losing by 46 to top-ranked Southern California to open the 2005 season.

Pettitte left to a standing ovation with one on and one out in the seventh and tipped his cap to the sellout crowd

Idaho has a health insurance crisis of its own brewing

Idaho taxpayers' stake in the national debate over health insurance reform is about to get a lot more direct.

Sometime next year — probably while the Legislature is in session — the state Catastrophic Health Fund, which helps counties cover medical costs for indigents, will run out of money.

And you'll probably have to make up the difference.

The board that oversees the CAT Fund just submitted a request to the budget-writing Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee for $8 million more for the current fiscal year, but even that may not be enough. Because of the economy, the fund is being tapped at an accelerating rate and has nearly burned through the $19.7 million appropriation it received from the Legislature.

That's on top of a request for $30 million for next year, and every dime of it will be general fund money — meaning there will be less for public schools, higher education, corrections and health and welfare.

If the Legislature doesn't appropriate the money, then providers — hospitals and doctors — would have three choices: Write off the bills, potentially transferring the cost onto other paying customers; negotiate with the state for some lesser amount, or sue the state to recover the money.

Counties often bear the largest share of indigent claims because they're on the hook for the first $11,000 in medical bills, a figure that legislators increased by 10 percent last year. It's the counties that make the initial decision about who can pay and who can't.

That money comes from property taxes, and in fiscal year 2007 counties spent about $18 million to cover the medical expenses of folks who lack insurance but don't qualify for welfare programs such as Medicaid.

To curb rising costs, the Legislature ordered the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare to review medical claims to see if procedures are necessary and to determine whether people applying for indigent help could instead enroll in Medicaid. Roughly 70 percent of Medicaid claims are paid by the federal government, while 100 percent of CAT fund claims are state paid.

In the future there will be better oversight and review of the utilization, treatments and bills, but the savings will be incremental.

In the meantime, Idaho will be hard pressed to keep up with rising costs and increasing demand.

Would national health care reform help? Probably. More than 250,000 Idahoans lack health insurance.

But it won't solve Idaho's CAT Fund problem. Poor people don't buy health insurance, and even under health-care reform legislation probably wouldn't.

"I anticipate 15 (percent) of the population still refusing to buy coverage," JFAC Co-Chairman Sen. Dean Cameron, a Rupert Republican who owns an insurance and investment agency, told the Post Register of Idaho Falls. "Incidentally, that is essentially the same percentage who refuse to purchase auto insurance even though it is mandated by law."

For the moment, the key is better management, he said.

"The CAT Fund board needs to be extremely cautious in the claims they agree to pay." We couldn't agree more.

Our view:

Rescuing the financially beleaguered state Catastrophic Health Fund may mean less money for schools, corrections and health and welfare.

What do you think?

We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

The banks are not all right

It was the best of times, it was the worst of times. OK, maybe not literally the worst, but definitely bad. And the contrast between the immense good fortune of a few and the continuing suffering of all too many boded ill for the future.

I'm talking, of course, about the state of the banks.

Paul Krugman

The lucky few garnered most of the headlines, as many reacted with fury to the spectacle of Goldman Sachs making record profits and paying huge bonuses even as the rest of America, the victim of a slump made on Wall Street, continues to bleed jobs.

But it's not a simple case of flourishing banks versus ailing workers: banks that are actually in the business of lending, as opposed to trading, are still in trouble. Most notably, Citigroup and Bank of America, which silenced talk of nationalization earlier this year by claiming that they had returned to profitability, are now — you guessed it — back to reporting losses.

Ask the people at Goldman, and they'll tell you that it's nobody's business but their own how much they earn. But as one critic recently put it: "There is no financial institution that exists today that is not the direct or indirect beneficiary of trillions of dollars of taxpayer support for the financial system." Indeed: Goldman has made a lot of money in its trading operations, but it was only able to stay in that game thanks to policies that put vast amounts of public money at risk, from the bailout of AIG to the guarantees extended to many of Goldman's bonds.

So who was this thundering bank critic? None other than Lawrence Summers, the Obama administration's chief economist — and one of the architects of the administration's bank policy, which up until now has been to go easy on financial institutions and hope that they mend themselves.

Why the change in tone? Administration officials are furious at the way the financial industry, just months after receiving a gigantic taxpayer bailout, is lobbying fiercely against serious reform. But you have to wonder what they expected to happen. They followed a softly, softly policy, providing aid with few strings, back when all of Wall Street was on the ropes; this left them with very little leverage over firms like Goldman that are now, once again, making a lot of money.

But there's an even bigger problem: While the wheel-dealer side of the financial industry, aka trading operations, is highly profitable again, the part of banking that really matters — lending, which fuels investment and job creation — is not. Key banks remain financially weak, and their weakness is hurting the economy as a whole.

You may recall that earlier this year there was a big debate about how to get the banks lending again. Some analysts, myself included, argued that at least some major banks needed a large injection of capital from taxpayers, and that the only way to do this was to temporarily nationalize the most troubled banks. The debate faded out, however, after Citigroup and Bank of America, the banking system's weakest links, announced surprise profits. All was well, we were told, now that the banks were profitable again.

But a funny thing happened on the way back to a sound banking system: Last week both Citi and B of A announced losses in the third quarter. What happened?

Part of the answer is that those earlier profits were in part a figment of the accountants' imaginations. More broadly, however, we're looking at payback from the real economy. In the first phase of the crisis, Main Street was punished for Wall Street's misdeeds; now broad economic distress, especially persistent high unemployment, is leading to big losses on mortgage loans and credit cards.

And here's the thing: The continuing weakness of many banks is helping to perpetuate that economic distress. Banks remain reluctant to lend, and tight credit, especially for small businesses, stands in the way of the strong recovery we need.

So now what? Summers still insists that the administration did the right thing: More government provision of capital, he says, would not "have been an availing strategy for solving problems." Whatever. In any case, as a political matter the moment for radical action on banks has clearly passed.

The main thing for the time being is probably to do as much as possible to support job growth. With luck, this will produce a virtuous circle in which an improving economy strengthens the banks, which then become more willing to lend.

Beyond that, we desperately need to pass effective financial reform. For if we don't, bankers will soon be taking even bigger risks than they did in the run-up to this crisis. After all, the lesson from the last few months has been very clear: When bankers gamble with other people's money, it's heads they win, tails the rest of us lose.

Lanting willing to listen to Twin Falls citizens

I would like to urge the voters of Twin Falls to vote for my brother, Greg Lanting, in the upcoming city elections on Nov. 3.

Greg is willing to listen to the citizens of Twin Falls; as he did in the last campaign, he is going door to door so that he can give these citizens an opportunity to voice their concerns.

He takes the responsibilities as your councilman seriously and his attendance record at council meetings over the last three years is evidence of this. He has lived in the city of Twin Falls for the last 35 years and in southern Idaho all of his life so he is aware of issues and problems that face the city.

Growing up on a farm on the Salmon Tract in southern Twin Falls County, Greg learned the importance of a steady water source and its value as a resource.

The present city council, of which Greg is a member, has secured a long-term water supply for the city of Twin Falls and is always looking for ways to conserve water so that the citizens of Twin Falls will have a continual water source for now and into the future.

Although my brother, Greg, has a progressive vision for the city of Twin Falls, he also wants to preserve the natural beauty of the Snake River Canyon.

Voters of Twin Falls, make your voices count in the next election and make Greg Lanting your choice for city councilman.

Stop throwing money away on downtown T.F.

I think Twin Falls should hire another out-of-state company and fund a feasibility study on historical downtown to find out if all the feasibility studies funded so far were feasible.

In an effort to bring more shoppers to historical downtown, here's an idea: Permit free parking on Saturday and then double the parking meter fees for Monday through Friday.

What, you think that's a stupid idea? But it's, it's — well, OK, I guess you're right. It is pretty stupid.

Do parking meters bring more shoppers to downtown? If so, then let's install parking meters at the high schools. Wouldn't that encourage more students to attend classes?

Why does the city keep throwing money away on historical downtown? The definition of historical in my dictionary is "belonging to history." All across the country, malls have replaced downtowns and box stores are replacing malls. It's called evolution.

Trying to revitalize downtown has been a waste of time.

They keep throwing good money after bad and they're still at Square 1. The three major problems are location, location and location.

Twin Falls' politicians appear to be mimicking some of our state politicians who don't seem to care about the people. They have their own agendas: (1) Waste taxpayer dollars, (2) Cut jobs, (3) Get re-elected and (4) Back to 1.

There's an election coming up. It's time to clean house and put a stop to this nonsense. Let's relegate the useless incumbents to historical status.

Barbara Dell Robertson Hake

GOODING — Barbara was born to Howard M. and Myrtle Irene Hitchcock Robertson on Nov. 30, 1928, at Hood River, Ore.

Barbara lost her mother, Myrtle when she was 3 years old. Her father remarried to Vivian Sawyer and she became Barbara's mother and friend.

Barbara married her high school sweetheart, Harold Robert Hake on June 20, 1947, at the age of 18. She and Harold started their life together in Fall Creek, Ore. They had two children, Nancy Ellen and Gary Robert.

Harold and Barbara moved their family to Gooding, Idaho, in 1963 where Harold pastored the Gooding First Christian Church for 28 years. This year they celebrated their 62nd wedding anniversary.

Barbara enjoyed playing guitar with the Gospel group and the Old Time Fiddlers. She loved growing flowers and gardening. Mostly, she enjoyed spending time with her family and friends. Christmas Eve at Grandmas, as well as Thanksgiving, is a family tradition.

Barbara is survived by her husband, Harold Robert Hake of Gooding; her sister, Beverly Robertson of Eugene, Ore.; brother, Delbert Robertson of Grants Pass, Ore.; her son, Gary Robert Hake of Eugene, Ore.; seven grandchildren, seven great-grandchildren; and many nieces and nephews.

Barbara was preceded in death by her father, Howard M. Robertson and mother, Myrtle Irene Hitchcock Robertson, and her daughter, Nancy Ellen Hake Harms.

Barbara Dell Robertson Hake. Wife, mother, grandmother, great-grandmother, aunt, friend... you are already missed.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. on Thursday, Oct. 29, at the Gooding First Christian Church. Burial will follow at the Elmwood Cemetery in Gooding.

Viewing for family and friends will be from 4-7 p.m. on Wednesday, Oct. 28, at Demaray Funeral Service — Gooding Chapel.

Eva Thelma Bowen Smith

Eva Thelma Bowen Smith was born Aug. 12, 1913, in the town of Pleasant Green, now Magna, Utah, to Culbert and Mary Jean Allen Bowen. She departed peacefully from this life the evening of Oct. 23, 2009, surrounded by her children.

Thelma grew up in Salt Lake City and, after graduating from LDS High School, worked for the U.S. Forest Service in Ogden and Challis, Idaho, before she was called to serve in the California LDS Mission. While serving there in El Centro, she met her future husband, Alan. After returning to Salt Lake from her mission, she worked in the Improvement Era Office, all the while corresponding with Alan. On Nov. 15, 1943, Alan and Thelma were married in the Salt Lake LDS Temple. They resided in Salt Lake and then Ogden before moving to Twin Falls in the fall of 1950.

The greatest joys of Thelma's life were her family and her LDS faith. She loved being in her kitchen, and her bread and dinner rolls were famous all over Twin Falls. She served faithfully in her LDS callings, which included many years as secretary to Relief Society presidencies, Sunday school teacher and Primary teacher which she loved. She also enjoyed the many years she spent in the Daughters of the Utah Pioneers, Twin Falls Chapter.

When her youngest child started school, Thelma went to work for the Twin Falls School District, where she worked as a secretary for 16 years, much to the chagrin of her children because Mom could keep track of their every move at school. After her husband passed away in 1974, Thelma filled her years attending institute classes at the College of Southern Idaho, visiting her children and grandchildren wherever they lived in the world, and accepting a church calling to work in the Boise LDS Temple, as well as working tirelessly in the yard of her home. She loved her beautiful yard and rose garden.

Thelma is survived by her children, Jean Ann Smith, Karen (Neal) Christensen, Darrell (Cheryl) Smith, Connie Smith, Lynette (Jim) Williams and Alana Hadfield; 14 grandchildren and 27 great-grandchildren.

She was preceded in death by her husband, R. Alan Smith; a son, David Alan Smith; a grandson, David Hyrum Smith; and a great-grandson, Mason Williams.

The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 29, at Lindquist's Ogden Mortuary, 3408 Washington Blvd. Friends may call from 12:45 to 1:45 p.m. Thursday at the mortuary. Interment at Salt Lake City Cemetery.

A memorial service will be held at 4 p.m. Friday, Oct. 30, at the Maurice Street LDS Chapel in Twin Falls.

Send condolences to the family at www.lindquist-mortuary.com.

Iraqi security forces inspect the site of a massive bomb attack at the Ministry of Justice in Baghdad, Iraq, Sunday. Iraq police say that a pair of powerful explosions rocked downtown Baghdad.

147 KILLED IN BAGHDAD BOMBINGS

By Rebecca Santana
Associated Press writer

BAGHDAD — A pair of suicide car bombings Sunday devastated the heart of Iraq's capital, killing at least 147 people in the country's deadliest attack in more than two years. The bombs targeted two government buildings and called into question Iraq's ability to protect its people as U.S. forces withdraw.

The bombings show that insurgents still have the ability to launch horrific attacks even as violence has dropped dramatically in Iraq. Many fear such attacks will only increase as Iraq prepares for crucial January elections.

The dead included 35 employees at the Ministry of Justice and at least 25 staff members of the Baghdad Provincial Council, said police and medical officials speaking on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to speak to the media. At least 721 people were wounded, including three American contractors.

The street where the blasts occurred had just been reopened to vehicle traffic six months ago. Shortly after, blast walls were repositioned to allow traffic closer to the government buildings. Such changes were touted by Iraq's Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki as a sign that safety was returning to the city.

The Iraqi leader walked among the mangled and blackened cars, which lay in front of blast walls that had been decorated with peaceful street scenes of Iraq. At the Justice Ministry, windows and walls on both sides of the street were blown away, and blood pooled with water from burst pipes.

Al-Maliki has staked his political reputation and reelection bid on his ability to bring peace to the country and pledged to punish those responsible, who he said wanted to "spread chaos in the country, undermine the political process and prevent the holding of parliamentary elections." But the Sunday attacks seemed designed to paint the Iraqi leader as incapable of providing security to the beleaguered city, undermining much of his political support.

UN inspectors visit once-secret Iranian site

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — U.N. inspectors entered a once-secret uranium enrichment facility with bunker-like construction and heavy military protection that raised Western suspicions about the extent and intent of Iran's nuclear program.

The visit Sunday by the four-member International Atomic Energy Agency team, reported by state media, was the first independent look inside the planned nuclear fuel lab, a former ammunition dump burrowed into the treeless hills south of Tehran and only publicly disclosed last month. The inspectors are expected to study plant blueprints, interview workers and take soil samples before wrapping up the three-day mission. No results from the inspection are expected until the team leaves the country, but some Iranian officials hailed the visit as an example that their nuclear program was open to international scrutiny.

"IAEA inspectors' visit to Fordo shows that Iran's nuclear activities are transparent and peaceful," the official IRNA news agency quoted lawmaker Hasan Ebrahimi as saying.

Another test of Iran's cooperation is fast approaching, however. Iran has promised to respond this week to a U.N.-brokered deal to process its nuclear fuel abroad — a plan designed to ease Western fears about Iran's potential ability to produce weapons-grade material.

The current inspection of Iran's second enrichment site came about a month after Tehran disclosed its existence in a letter to the IAEA, the U.N.'s nuclear watchdog. The notification to the U.N. agency came just days before President Barack Obama and other Western leaders claimed Iran has been hiding the facility from the world for years.

After Iran's disclosure, U.N. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon told Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad that "the burden of proof is on Iran" to convince the international community its nuclear program is peaceful.

Iran says that by reporting the existence of the site voluntarily, it "pre-empted a conspiracy" by the United States and its allies who were hoping to present the site as evidence that Iran was developing its nuclear program in secret.

But the IAEA says Tehran should have reported it before it started construction. And the new facility, about 20 miles north of the holy city of Qom, immediately raised suspicions about the aim of the nuclear program — which Iran claims is only for peaceful research and energy production. The site is reached by tunnels and is protected by military installations including missile silos and anti-aircraft batteries, Iranian officials said last month.

Composer Andrew Lloyd Webber diagnosed with cancer

LONDON (AP) — Composer Andrew Lloyd Webber has been diagnosed with prostate cancer, his spokeswoman said Sunday.

The 61-year-old Lloyd Webber's condition is in its early stages, a statement from his publicists said.

"Andrew is now undergoing treatment and expects to be fully back at work before the end of the year," the statement said.

Lloyd Webber recently announced plans for a sequel to his phenomenally successful musical "Phantom of the Opera." Called "Love Never Dies," it is scheduled to open in London in March and follow on Broadway in November. Rehearsals begin in the new year.

At a media event for the new musical earlier this month, Lloyd Webber said that while the story picks up where "Phantom" left off, he doesn't regard it as a sequel — "it's a standalone piece."

Afghans protest rumored Quran desecration by U.S. troops, burn Obama effigy

By Laura King
Los Angeles Times

KABUL — Hundreds of angry protesters in Afghanistan's capital burned an effigy of President Obama on Sunday, acting on rumors that American troops had desecrated the Quran.

U.S. military officials denied that any copies of the Muslim holy book had been mishandled and accused the Taliban of spreading falsehoods to incite hatred against Western forces.

But the protest — reminiscent of similar demonstrations in Iraq and elsewhere in the Muslim world in recent years — showed how easily passions involving religious sensitivities can be stirred up even with a dearth of evidence.

The incident also pointed to a strong undercurrent of anti-American sentiment at a politically fraught time in Afghanistan, less than two

Ski conditioning, Vamps style

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Jazz fans attending Sun Valley's Swing 'n' Dixie Jazz Jamboree this month had front-row seats to watch T-shirt-clad women hauling rocks up and down Dollar Mountain.

It wasn't a chain gang. Rather, a bevy of women intent on getting ready for ski season.

The ringleader was Muffy Ritz, a two-time winner of the prestigious American Birkebeiner ski race who continues to best other women her age in Masters World Cup races. She heads up the Vamps, a winter-long Nordic ski program for more than a hundred women each year in Sun Valley.

When the women decided they couldn't wait for the first snowflake to fall to prepare for the season, she began offering nine weeks of ski conditioning directed at Nordic skiers but useful for downhill skiers.

"It gets me excited for skiing. I like the hill bounding. And the games take your mind off the fact that you're dying.

You're with all your friends and you're having fun, so you don't think about how hard you're working," said Brenda Spackman, who owns a Ketchum hair salon.

Ritz combines games and other creative camaraderie-building exercises that don't require a gym.

One week she has the gang scouring Dollar Mountain for pumpkins bearing letters or words that spell out a message like "Happy Halloween."

Another week she puts them through a circuit-training course with 12 to 14 stations of push-ups, jump rope, wall sitting, lunges, balancing on one leg, squats and crunches.

They shuffle laterally, moving sideways. They skip. They run figure-eight patterns around cones. They hop from side to side. They hop forward and backward. And they end it with a soccer-like game in which they throw the ball instead of kicking it.

Always, there are incentives for extracurricular activities, such as hiking a certain hill a certain number of times or participating in local fun runs.

"It's amazing how things we used to do as kids, like jumping rope or playing hopscotch, can help," said Vamps coach E.J. Harphan.

"Hopscotch, for instance, uses explosive power and then forces you to have some balance as you lean over to pick up your piece. And skipping: I tried that the other day, and it was tiring. I don't remember being that tired skipping around the playground as a kid."

On a recent afternoon, Ritz instructed each woman to grab a small

3 agencies to assess problems with Lasik

By Melissa Healy
Los Angeles Times

Three federal agencies — the Food and Drug Administration, the Defense Department and the National Eye Institute — announced this month that they are launching a three-year effort to gauge how many, and which, patients suffer troubling symptoms after undergoing the vision correction procedure called Lasik.

At the same time, the FDA issued letters reminding 17 walk-in surgical centers performing Lasik surgery of their obligation to report poor outcomes and patients' surgery-related medical complaints. The letters were issued after the FDA conducted a spate of inspections of Lasik facilities and found many had no system for collecting and transmitting to the FDA data on patients' reports of post-surgical "adverse events." More inspections are to come, the FDA said.

It has been almost two decades since the laser-assisted in situ keratomileusis procedure was first used in the U.S., and between 1.1 million and 1.4 million patients a year now undergo the surgery to correct vision defects.

Aggressive marketing has made Lasik a $2 billion industry, one that has come under criticism for overselling the surgery's benefits and underplaying its risks.

In May, the FDA circulated a letter to eye-care providers calling attention to "deceptive or misleading health care advertising claims" and outlining the limits of allowable claims that may be made for Lasik.

But while Lasik has many ardent admirers among the more than 12 million in the U.S. who have had it, between 2 percent and 5 percent of patients getting the surgery — as many as 75,000 a year — are thought to have lasting post-operative problems that include painful dry-eye, poorer vision, halos, glare and even blindness.

The FDA calls these "quality of life" problems and has acknowledged that it has recorded no more than a small fraction of such problems during the Lasik industry's period of explosive growth. (In the 10 years leading to an early 2008 hearing on Lasik, the agency said it had received only 140 reports of post-Lasik eye problems.)

In the first phase of the FDA-led effort to measure Lasik's effects, the agency is drafting a Web-based survey of patients who have undergone the procedure.

In its second phase, the Defense Department will gauge how many active-duty military patients suffered post-surgical eye problems, and whether certain populations of patients fared worse.

Phase 3, which will end in 2012, is to study a general patient population across the country to determine how many, and who, suffer problems from the surgery.

Good for the oceans, good for you

By Juliet Eilperin
The Washington Post

Many savvy consumers are familiar with the color codes that marine conservationists bestow on fish and shellfish, depending on how they're faring in the environment: red for avoid, yellow for consume sparingly and green for eat without guilt.

Now, super green has arrived. Last week the influential Monterey Bay Aquarium released a new set of rankings that identifies fish that are not only fished sustainably but are also rich in long-chain omega-3 fatty acids, a key dietary component in reducing the risk of heart disease. Farmed mussels and oysters make the list, along with line- or pole-caught albacore tuna, wild-caught Alaskan salmon and Pacific sardines.

Julie Packard, the aquarium's executive director, said she and her colleagues have learned that seafood choices are often the easiest way to get Americans thinking about broader ocean-policy questions.

"We need some new tools and new approaches" to managing oceans, Packard said. "We found a great entry point was to get people focused on what's on their plate."

The well-publicized risk of mercury contamination, which is higher in top predators such as tuna and swordfish and poses the greatest risk to pregnant women, nursing mothers and children younger than 6, has prompted many consumers to reassess how many fish they should eat.

Assistance dogs have an expanding list of services

By Janice Podsada
The Hartford Courant

Some of the service dogs Lu and Dale Picard train — and it takes months to train them — are taught to bug you.

The Torrington, Conn., couple, founders of the non-profit East Coast Assistance Dogs, Inc. (www.ecad1.org), have been training assistance dogs since 1995 to aid people with physical disabilities. Recently, they've begun training dogs to assist veterans — soldiers home from Iraq and Afghanistan — with traumatic brain injuries or post-traumatic stress disorder.

Their Labrador retrievers and golden retrievers are there to calm the brain-injured, keep them "in the moment" even remind them to take their medications when an alarm sounds, "and bug them until they do," said Lu Picard, who's working with the James J. Peters Veterans Administration Medical Center in New York.

Could an assistance dog help you, a child or someone you know?

Perhaps. The list of services canine companions provide is expanding. When properly trained, their intelligence, strength and sensitive noses have enabled thousands of people to work, attend school and live independently.

In the 1920s, Germans began training German shepherds to guide blinded soldiers. Now dogs of all sizes, shapes and breeds are being trained to help the deaf, open doors and turn on lights for the physically disabled, accompany autistic children, awaken people with sleep apnea, even sniff peanuts or other allergens. The list continues to grow, said Ed Eames, president of International Association of Assistance Dog Partners (www.iaadp.org).

"So many new things are going on," Eames said. In particular, "the dog's smelling capacity has opened up a whole new realm of possibilities." There are dogs that alert their diabetic owners when their blood sugar levels plummet and dogs that can alert their owners before a seizure occurs, Eames said.

But unlike a medical device, software program or an iPhone application, a dog requires care, feeding, grooming and attention. They're not an appropriate choice for everyone.

"The people we place dogs with have to have a support system to make sure the dog is cared for," said Jenny Barlos, client services director of Assistance Dogs of America, Inc., a nonprofit organization in Swanton, Ohio, that trains dogs to assist people with muscular dystrophy, cerebral palsy, rheumatoid arthritis and other mobility disorders.

"From a consumer point of view, people really need to do their homework. There are excellent programs, bad programs and everything in-between," said Robin Dickson, chief executive of Dogs for the Deaf of Central Point, Ore., a nonprofit that trains dogs to aid the hearing-impaired and autistic children.

Begin your search by contacting organizations accredited by Assistance Dogs International Inc., said Dickson, a member and one of the group's inspectors. On the other hand, some assistance-dog programs are so new, including those involving peanut-sniffing dogs, that they aren't accredited, Dickson said.

If you qualify for an assistance dog, be prepared to wait anywhere from months to years to receive a dog, depending on the organization. Private trainers can charge thousands of dollars for their animals, but nonprofit groups usually just charge a nominal application fee.

If you don't find a group that trains dogs to accommodate you, contact a reputable dog trainer and ask if they can train a dog to assist your need. It wasn't until the late 1970s, for example, that trainers recognized dogs could benefit the hearing-impaired and the physically disabled. In many cases, those programs grew out of a private individual's request, Dickson said.

Dogs for the Deaf trains dogs to alert their owners to common sounds around the house: telephone, doorbell, oven buzzers, smoke alarm and more, Dickson said.

"They're always on guard," Dickson said. One woman told me, "The sounds are all great, but the best thing my dog does is let me relax. I never had time to think because I was too busy trying to listen."

"We placed a hearing dog last year with a young deaf woman in Pennsylvania. A few months later, she called me up to say, 'It's the first time in my life that I've known when the ice cream truck is going by,'" Dickson said.

"Is that life-saving? No. But it's made her life more meaningful."

Seafood

does not calculate the relative health benefits and risks of eating a specific type of fish, but features species with high levels of omega-3 acids and relatively low contaminant levels.

Dariush Mozaffarian, an assistant professor of medicine and epidemiology at Harvard Medical School who consulted on the new seafood rankings, noted that eating an average of one serving of salmon a week provides enough omega-3 fatty acids to lower the risk of heart disease by 36 percent.

"That's the number-one killer of men and women in the U.S., and in most countries in the world," he said, adding that he is about to embark on a federally funded study examining whether there's a level of contaminants in seafood that would outweigh such health benefits.

The list is not the first consumer-oriented ranking to include human and ocean health in a single category. The nonprofit SeaWeb publishes a KidSafe Seafood guide that applies similar criteria and includes northern U.S. and Canadian shrimp and fresh tilapia (www.kidsafe-seafood.org/bestchoices.php).

"More often than not, old sayings have a ring of truth to them. So you can believe it when you hear that 'you are what you eat,'" said SeaWeb's president, Dawn M. Martin. "The toxins — such as mercury and PCBs — which find their way into our oceans can come back to haunt us. When we eat seafood, we are also ingesting those pollutants."

Although the average consumer might assume that it's better for the environment to buy wild-caught fish than their cultivated counterparts, that's not always the case. Farmed rainbow trout scored high on the list, along with farmed Arctic char and bay scallops. Shellfish farmed in the ocean actually filter plankton from seawater for food, leaving the ocean cleaner as a result, and unlike species such as salmon, they don't consume other fish. Both oysters and mussels are low in fat, and oysters are high in zinc.

Improvise that exercise

By Jeannine Stein
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — The current economic climate — not to mention fears of the H1N1 flu — might drive some fitness buffs to skip the gym for a while and stay home to sweat.

In that case, gear may be in order. We asked three personal trainers to recommend their favorite pieces of inexpensive exercise apparatus ($25 or less), plus workouts to go with them.

Some trainers went way below budget and offered up unconventional gear such as soup cans and water bottles. Such items not only are inexpensive but are easily obtained (of importance when traveling). One word of caution: Objects such as soup cans can be difficult to work with at first because they're not as evenly weighted as dumbbells and may be harder to grip. Move the weights slowly, and practice with them before starting to exercise.

Daniel Saltos

Assistant personal training manager at Crunch in West Hollywood

I use unconventional things like soup cans because a lot of my clients travel or they're stay-at-home moms and can't always get to the gym. This way they can exercise at home or on the road, and these exercises are also something people can do in conjunction with what they do at the gym. Also, there is a fun element to it.

If you have small hands, Campbell's soup cans are pretty small, and Progresso cans are larger. You can go down the soup aisle at the grocery store and find something that suits your needs. I like soup cans because the fluid moving inside adds a bit of instability that challenges your auxiliary muscle groups and your core a little more, unlike a dumbbell, which has a centered weight.

To do jumping jacks with the soup cans, start with your feet together and hold a can of soup in each hand at about shoulder level with arms bent. Jump into an inverted "V" position with the legs open, and press the arms up over the head with the elbows near the ears, as if doing a shoulder press. Don't swing the arms overhead. Jump back to the first position with feet together, and lower the arms to shoulder height. Repeat, and make this a timed exercise — start with 30 seconds and add more time as you get stronger. This is a good cardiovascular exercise that targets the leg muscles and also the upper body, including the shoulders, triceps and back.

A good full-body exercise is the squat-curl-press. Start with feet hip-width apart, toes pointed slightly outward. Hold a can of soup in each hand down by your side. Squat, and as you come up, do a bicep curl. Then press the arms up over the head into a shoulder press. Keep the knees slightly soft — you don't ever want to lock them. As you drop back down to a squat bring the arms down, do a reverse curl, and then place the arms down by your sides.

Do two to three sets of 12 to 15 reps. This targets the glutes, hamstrings, quadriceps and the core, as well as the biceps, shoulders and triceps. You can incorporate both of these exercises into a circuit, which will increase the heart rate.

Mike Donavanik

Trainer and owner of West Coast Strength & Conditioning in West Hollywood

I like the exercise ball because of the versatility it offers. You can literally work every muscle group on it.

One of my favorite exercises to do is a push-up, and there are many variations you can do. Start by planting your hands on the ground in a typical push-up position, with hands below the shoulders. Keep your dominant foot on the ground for support and bring the other leg on top of the ball. Once you're stable, bring the other leg onto the ball.

The more you roll your legs back onto the ball, the easier the push-up is going to be, so beginners can start with their thighs on the ball or adjust accordingly. Bend the arms and do a push-up, making sure the hips don't drop down, which will put an additional strain on the back. Do three sets of 20 to 25 reps. As you improve, you can roll forward, so you're not as supported by the ball. This targets the chest, shoulders, triceps, lats and core.

If these start to get easy, try a more advanced move: Put your hands between the top and the side of the ball, not directly on top, and your feet on the floor in push-up position, about shoulder-width apart. Instead of the legs trying to stabilize you, all the work is in the torso. If that move is too difficult, try placing the ball against a wall or in a corner which will make the ball more stable and give you foundation for doing the exercise correctly.

You can also use plastic water bottles to do strength training. I like the Smartwater bottles because they're thinner and cylindrical so the weight is more evenly distributed and they're easy to handle. If you fill one up with water it will weigh about 2.2 pounds, and if you fill it with sand it's about double that weight.

My favorite exercise to do with the water bottle is a wood chop. Stand with legs hip-width apart, and hold the water bottle like a baseball bat. Bend the legs and lean your body toward the left, bringing the water bottle down toward the feet and adding a little pivot in the right leg. Stand and twist toward the right, bringing the water bottle up over the head, pivoting on the left toe. Do three sets of 15 repetitions on each side. In this exercise, everything should come from the core.

David Van Daff

Trainer and senior director, business development for Bally Total Fitness, Chicago

A foam roll — a cylindrical piece of foam — is a tremendous tool for anyone, and most people should have one at home.

It can be used for myofascial release, or loosening and stretching the fascia, the connective tissue linking bones, muscle and organs. That type of exercise won't help you burn a ton of calories, but it will prepare you for exercise by getting you warmed up, improving flexibility and promoting injury prevention. People who run, for example, often deal with very stiff muscles, which can make running painful and difficult. If you run when your body isn't warmed up, you're putting your body at tremendous risk of injury. It's also good if you're sedentary, because if you're sitting all day you're not extending the muscles at all.

This exercise for the iliotibial band is especially good for runners or anyone who's not moving or stretching that much during the day. The iliotibial band goes from the outside of the pelvis over the hip and knee and helps keep the knee stable, but it gets very tight if you don't stretch it. Start by lying sideways on top of a foam roller placed horizontally underneath you, directly under your hip. Keep the bottom leg straight and the top leg bent, with the foot on the floor in front of the body (a modified side plank position). Bend the arm closest to the floor and rest on it, supporting your upper body. Place the other hand on the top hip.

Slowly roll the body over the foam roll. Don't allow the body to sag in the middle, and make sure the roll is under the side of the leg. Repeat for 10 repetitions.

If you have a pre-existing injury in this area, check with your doctor before trying this.

The topic: Breast cancer

Lifting weights does not seem to worsen swelling

THE QUESTION

Would it be wise for women who have had breast cancer to try weightlifting, given the concern that repetitive arm movements and lifting of heavy objects might exacerbate the arm and hand swelling, known as lymphedema, that often occurs after breast cancer treatment?

THIS STUDY

It randomly assigned 144 breast cancer survivors with lymphedema to participate in 90-minute weightlifting sessions twice a week or to continue their current exercise regimen, without weightlifting. Weightlifting involved bench presses and leg presses, with progressively increasing repetitions and weight, and participants wore a compression garment on the affected arm while exercising. After a year, arm swelling increased at virtually the same rate in both groups. However, symptom flare-ups were confirmed in 14 percent of the women who had been lifting weights, compared with 29 percent of the others. The weightlifting group also reported less-severe symptoms (such as heaviness, pain and difficulty writing, besides swelling) than the non-exercisers and greater improvements in upper- and lower-body strength.

WHO MAY BE AFFECTED?

Women who have been treated for breast cancer. Removal of lymph nodes as part of a lumpectomy or mastectomy can lead to lymphedema because fluid from the lymphatic system has fewer drainage outlets. Radiation and chemotherapy can also increase the risk. Swelling can occur immediately after treatment or not show up for years, if at all. Besides discomfort, lymphedema can inhibit use of the arm or hand.

CAVEATS

Severity of symptoms was based on the participants' reports. The study did not determine whether weightlifting might prevent lymphedema in survivors who had not developed it.

It's in the Aug. 13 issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

Avoiding shellfish

Special to The Washington Post

People who are allergic to shellfish need to watch out for both crustaceans and mollusks, though folks who are allergic to one kind of shellfish may not be allergic to those in the other group, according to the Food Allergy Initiative (www.faiusa.org). Some things to keep in mind:

- Crustaceans include shrimp, crab, crawfish and lobster. Mollusks include abalone, clam, cockle, mussel, oyster, octopus, scallop, snail and squid.

• Dishes and ingredients that may contain shellfish protein are bouillabaisse, fish stock, flavoring, seafood flavoring and surimi, a fish paste often used in imitation shellfish.

• When eating at restaurants or other people's homes, check with the chef to make sure your meal hasn't been cooked or prepared with the same utensils and cookware, on the same work surfaces or in the same oil as shellfish.

Conditioning

boulder off a rock pile on Dollar Mountain. Holding the rock in both hands, they moved it to the right, then to the left, bounding up the hill each time they moved the rock.

When everyone began struggling to catch their breath, they stood in place, holding the rocks out in front of them, then above their heads.

"This is team building. And misery loves company," Ritz said.

The women spent the next 40 minutes on cardiovascular exercise. They started off hill walking — walking determinedly up the hill, taking long bounding strides and pushing off their feet as they would if skiing. They used their ski poles as they walked, being sure to keep a 90-degree bend in their arms.

They circled a cone at the top and headed downhill, catching their breath on the way.

"It's like doing a cross-country race," Ritz told them. "You work hard going up a hill. Then you catch a breather as you head down the other side of that hill."

When they reached the bottom, they started uphill again, veering off on a different angle headed for a different cone. This time, they hilled bounded, turning up the intensity and the heavy breathing.

"It's like jumping over a creek. But instead of jumping one creek you're jumping creek after creek after creek," Ritz told them.

On another trip uphill, they made what Ritz calls "moose tracks." "It's bounding light," she said. "Don't come down as hard as you do with hill bounding. Lean into the hill and keep your back leg out straight as you do when you're skiing."

This workout is particularly suited to classic Nordic skiing, Ritz said. Next week, they'd do a workout more geared to skate skiing in which they bound from side to side.

"But you can't get as hard a skating workout as you can with classic," she added. "Bounding is the ultimate workout."

With eight minutes to go, the women began showing signs of exhaustion.

"Welcome to hell!" quipped Spackman, gulping air.

Ritz began running with the women as they approached the top to spur them on.

"Cydnia, you're so light — like a little deer," she called to one woman.

"Like a deer out of breath," Cydnia Rapp replied.

Sun Valley resident JoAnn Levy, who at 69 still manages to keep up with the younger women, says she likes the endurance she builds during preseason workouts.

"We work on our technique, too, which gives us a head start when we do put on our skis," she said. "And Muffy is like the pied piper. She's such a spark plug, such a motivating force."

Workouts like the Vamps' are popular because people don't get bored with them, said Kip Perkins, fitness director for Gold's Gym in Twin Falls.

"They're outside. They're more like everyday-life activities. And they're stuff you're not used to doing so they burn pretty good calories," he said.

The exercisers could follow it up in the gym where trainers could make sure they're moving correctly to avoid the risk of injury, he added. "And we have a number of classes, too, such as a boot camp for women and a cross-fit class, that get people ready for skiing."

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders
ARIES (March 21-April 19): If people rub you the wrong way you won't find a referee to decide who is at fault. Keep your eyes fixed on the goal.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The meek are likely to inherit the earth because they don't get angry when things don't go their way. Wait things out.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You must remain supple and flexible while still retaining your independence. Honor your promises and retain the support of others.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Honesty is the best policy. Even the most innocent little white lies have a way of creating trouble under these stars.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You might be called upon to jump a little higher to reach your goal. Don't jump into action without adequate forethought.

Today is Monday, Oct. 26, the 299th day of 2009. There are 66 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight: On Oct. 26, 1979, South Korean President Park Chung-hee was shot to death during a dinner party along with his chief bodyguard by the head of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency, Kim Jae-kyu, who was later executed.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date: In 1774, the First Continental Congress adjourned in Philadelphia.

In 1825, the Erie Canal opened in upstate New York, connecting Lake Erie and the Hudson River.

In 1881, the "Gunfight at the O.K. Corral" took place in Tombstone, Ariz., as Wyatt Earp, his two brothers and "Doc" Holliday confronted Ike Clanton's gang. Three members of Clanton's group were killed; Earp's brothers and Holliday were wounded.

In 1909, former Japanese Prime Minister Ito Hirobumi was assassinated during a visit to Harbin, China by Korean nationalist An Jung-geun, who was later hanged.

In 1942, Japanese planes badly damaged the aircraft carrier USS Hornet in the Battle of Santa Cruz Islands during World War II. (The Hornet sank early the next morning.)

In 1958, Pan American Airways flew its first Boeing 707 jetliner from New York to Paris in 8 hours, 41 minutes.

In 1967, the Shah of Iran crowned himself and his queen after 26 years on the Peacock Throne.

In 1972, national security adviser Henry Kissinger declared that "Peace is at hand" in Vietnam.

In 1984, "Baby Fae," a newborn with a severe heart defect, was given the heart of a baboon in an experimental transplant in Loma Linda, Calif. (Baby Fae lived 21 days with the animal heart.)

In 1994, Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin of Israel and Prime Minister Abdel Salam Majali of Jordan signed a peace treaty during a ceremony at the Israeli-Jordanian border attended by President Bill Clinton.

In 2001, President George W. Bush signed the USA Patriot Act, giving authorities unprecedented ability to search, seize, detain or eavesdrop in their pursuit of possible terrorists.

Ten years ago: The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention released a study which said the number of Americans considered obese had soared from about one in eight in 1991 to nearly one in five in 1998. The New York Yankees beat the Atlanta Braves, 6-5, to take a 3-0 lead in the World Series.

Five years ago: The FCC gave its approval to Cingular Wireless LLC's $41 billion acquisition of AT&T Wireless Services Inc. Israel's parliament approved Prime Minister Ariel Sharon's plan for withdrawing from the Gaza Strip and parts of the West Bank. The final vote count in the Afghan presidential election gave a resounding victory to interim leader Hamid Karzai. The Boston Red Sox won Game 3 of the World Series in St. Louis, defeating the Cardinals 4-1.

One year ago: U.S. military helicopters launched a rare attack on Syrian territory, killing eight people in a strike Damascus condemned as "serious aggression." Tony Hillerman, author of the acclaimed Navajo Tribal Police mystery novels, died in Albuquerque, N.M., at age 83. The Philadelphia Phillies romped over the Tampa Bay Rays 10-2 to move within one win of their first World Series championship since 1980.

EQUINE</

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"I tell you the past is a bucket of ashes."

— Carl Sandburg

This week's deals showcase the U.S. Women's Trials of 10 years ago. It may well be harder to win these trials than the actual world championships.

I thought the defender did very nicely in today's deal, giving declarer a chance to go wrong.

South ducked the diamond opening lead against three no-trump and won the diamond return. (Ducking might have been necessary on some lies of the cards, even if it made life more difficult here.) Now she led a spade to dummy's king, a heart to the ace, and a second spade. If dummy's spade queen scores, South gives up a spade and has nine easy tricks, but West threw a wrench into the works when she hopped up with the spade ace and returned a second heart.

Declarer can still survive if she wins in hand and cashes the hearts, then unblocks spades, and leads a club to the king and ace. West can cash two clubs, but the blockage in that suit means that West must give declarer the lead at the end to cash her diamond and spade winner. In fact, South won the heart in hand and cashed the spade, then played a club to the king without taking the heart winners in dummy. West took her club ace and queen, then exited with a heart to dummy. Declarer could not reach her spade and diamond winners in hand, so East had to collect her club jack at the end for one down.

ANSWER: The auction appears to be one where the opponents have nothing to spare, and the cards are not lying especially well. That being so, a spade lead through dummy will work well enough if declarer has no high spade in hand. Alternatively, a club may be the most passive lead. It may not establish anything, but it will probably not give too much away.

DEAR ABBY: My brother, "Luke," died young due to drug addiction. When our son, "Adam," misbehaves, my husband blames me. He says Adam is going to end up "just like Luke," and it will be my fault.

My mother bailed my brother out of his problems, but I have never done that with our son. I have told my husband numerous times how cruel it is to suggest Adam could end up like Luke, but he continues to say it and then "remind" me if it happens, it will be because of me.

DEAR ABBY Jeanne Phillips

My husband is a wonderful man in every other way, but he doesn't seem to realize how hurtful and unnecessary his cruel words are when he compares our son to my brother.

— SAD MOM IN TEXAS

DEAR SAD MOM: Wake up and smell the coffee. Your husband realizes exactly how cruel that comparison is, and has since the first time you expressed how deeply hurtful it was. I see nothing helpful or constructive about comparing your son to a boy who died too young and too soon. If it's said in front of Adam often, it could become a self-fulfilling prophecy. (Nothing like the power of suggestion.)

So stop feeling victimized and demand that your "wonderful" husband cut it out, because if something should happen, the fault will be HIS.

DEAR ABBY: I work at a school as an educational assistant. There are fewer than 100 kids in the entire high school, and I have gotten to know them all. When I go around the small neighborhoods trick-or-treating with my little ones, I see the high school kids in their costumes as well. They are well-behaved and having a good time.

Some of the teachers say the kids are too old to be trick-or-treating and they should "get a life." Well, their "life" is this small town, and I see nothing wrong with them participating in a good time along with the younger ones. They're not causing trouble. There is very little for them to do outside of school and sports, and Halloween is an opportunity for them to have fun.

What's your opinion? Are high school-age children too old to trick-or-treat?

— CONCERNED FOR THE KIDS

DEAR CONCERNED: I see nothing wrong with the high school kids dressing up and having a good time trick-or-treating on Halloween. The teachers who feel the kids are too old should be less critical. A positive — and age-appropriate — alternative would be for the school to arrange a party or a dance that evening. Considering the fact that it's a small town and the student body is small, it should be manageable.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I are Civil War re-enactors. (My husband is a cannon soldier and I am a nurse re-enactor.) We would greatly appreciate it if you would remind your readers that if they come to any of the re-enactments to please not talk to the participants while they are firing weapons in "battle" because it could distract them. Something could go wrong and they could be badly injured. Thank you, Abby.

— CIVIL WAR RE-ENACTOR

IN ELMIRA, N.Y.

DEAR RE-ENACTOR: I'm pleased to pass along your important reminder. It would be a shame if someone became a casualty of a war that ended in 1865. People who attend a war re-enactment should realize they are watching a performance, and not participating in "history."

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Concepts Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
