College of Southern Idaho cheerleader Justin Brunk, 19, is overcome with emotion Tuesday morning as he and teammates gather for a silent moment before the funeral of Sean Carey. Carey died Oct. 21 in an accident on Interstate 84 in Jerome. Police say he likely fell asleep at the wheel on his way home.

Hundreds attend funeral for CSI cheerleader Sean Carey, 19

The cultural hall at Jerome's LDS stake center overflowed Tuesday during the funeral for College of Southern Idaho cheerleader Sean K. Carey, 19.

Police suspect the graduate of Jerome High School fell asleep at the wheel on Oct. 21, causing him to overturn a Jeep Wrangler along Interstate 84 in Jerome. The belted Carey died at the scene as a result of his injuries, according to Idaho State Police.

The funeral was filled with faith and flowers and attended by hundreds.

There, Carey's mother, Laurie Brown Carey, asked mourners to "pay it forward" in honor of her son.

Carey was a freshman at CSI and it was his first year on the team, which is slated today to have its first practice since Carey's death last week, according to CSI Dean of Students Graydon Stanley.

Health district to hold priority flu clinics

By Damon Hunzeker
Times-News writer

South Central Public Health District announced Tuesday that it will provide swine flu vaccination clinics for two of the high-risk priority groups: pregnant women and children with documented care plans related to chronic health conditions.

District Director Rene LeBlanc explained Monday what the health conditions entail.

"That would include people with pulmonary, renal, cardiac issues," he said, "and also cancer — pre-existing conditions."

The free clinic is scheduled from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. Thursday, at the health district offices in Twin Falls, Jerome, Rupert, Gooding, Burley and Bellevue. The district office vaccinations require appointments,

Twin Falls P&Z recommends against zip line

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

The developers behind a proposed zip line in the Snake River Canyon failed to win over the city of Twin Falls' Planning and Zoning Commission on Tuesday night.

Citing the effects on the scenic canyon area, commission members voted 4-2 against recommending the Twin Falls City Council approve an amendment to a planned unit development that would allow the zip line to connect to two parts of the southern rim. Commissioners Jim Schouten and Wayne Bohrn supported the proposal, while Commissioner Bonnie Lezamiz abstained to let her husband speak against the zip line.

Times-News audience still growing

The Times-News said Tuesday that its total audience is growing, even as major metropolitan newspapers report steep declines in readership.

According to the Audit Bureau of Circulations, from April to September 2009 the Times-News' average weekday circulation was down 1 percent; Sunday circulation was down 2 percent.

However, Publisher Brad Hurd said the slight decline reflects elimination of duplicated Sunday subscriptions after last year's merger of the South Idaho Press and

Kimberly shares rate estimates for water bond

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — Residents could see summer water bills of around $100 a month if they back a proposed Kimberly revenue bond next week.

But the cost of upgrading and repairing the city's system seemed worth it to some residents attending an open house Tuesday afternoon.

The Idaho Department of Environmental Quality is offering the city a $6.6 million loan using federal stimulus money and state drinking-water funds. Of the 30-year loan, $1 million would be immediately forgiven; the rest would only carry a 1 percent interest rate.

The money would help Kimberly install water meters at all residences and businesses, finish a new well started at City

Pat's Picks

Three things to do today

Pat Marcantonio

● Warren Miller is at it again with his movie "Dynasty," which features a winter tour of cool places around the world. It shows at 6 and 9 p.m. at the Sun Valley Opera House in Sun Valley Village. Tickets are $18.

● While in that direction, the Company of Fools presents "The Syringa Tree" for Girlfriends' Night Out at 7 p.m. at Liberty Theatre, 110 N. Main St., Ketchum. Tickets, which are $15, include post-show champagne and dark chocolate. The one-woman show spans four generations in South Africa.

● Follow the yellow brick road, or a paved street for that matter, to a showing of the "Wizard of Oz" for kids. It's in commemoration of the 70th anniversary of the movie and includes treats and prizes at 4 p.m. at the Burley Public Library, 1300 Miller Ave. It's free, but kids under age 8 must come with an adult.

Park and otherwise upgrade and replace aging parts of the city's water infrastructure.

To get the money, though, officials have to convince at least half the city's voters to pass the bond. Residents at a Sept. 23 open house said the city's rate projections were too ambiguous. So officials and engineers came up with several estimated rate breakdowns that they shared with the public on Tuesday.

Rate possibilities largely focused on a base rate of 5,000 gallons and $6 or $8 a month. Average monthly water bills ranged from roughly $40 in the winter to nearly $100 in summer months.

Rate calculations only included 70 percent of gross pumping — the rest was ascribed to system losses, non-metered pumps and conservation savings from installing the meters. Though officials said last month that 1,070 residences and 40 businesses are on the city's system, the equivalent of 1,200 homes was used for the estimates.

The final rates would be set at a future date by the City Council if the bond passes, said Tracy Ahrens with J-U-B Engineers.

But Tuesday's presentation should give voters a reasonable idea of what could be approved.

The few city residents who showed up in the first hours of the open house seemed generally to support the bond. Metering should encourage people to conserve more, said Tammy Mack. And Lee Attebury Sr. said that voting down the bond now would just lead to the city asking for more money later.

"After you find out what they're talking about, it makes sense and you might as well go for it," Attebury said.

The open house was another step in the city's public outreach efforts, partly prompted by complaints that last year's utility-rate increase wasn't talked about enough ahead of time.

Officials budgeted about $23,000 for "public involvement/awareness," said City Administrator Polly Hulsey, part of more than $75,000 also going for studies and design work.

All but the public-outreach funds were required by DEQ, Hulsey said, and the costs could get folded into the bond if it's approved. If voters reject the offer, the studies still produced information useful for any future opportunities, she said.

and because of a reduction in free copies used in the Newspaper in Education school program.

Home delivery subscriptions — the newspaper's core readership — increased slightly, Hurd said.

"Given the tough economy, I'm pleased to see that the Times-News print audience has stayed relatively flat," Hurd said. "I'm particularly gratified with our online growth, which shows nearly a 20 percent increase in unique visitors over the prior year."

The number of people who visited the Times-News Web site, Magicvalley.com, increased 19.9 percent from April to September, according to Omniture, an online reporting service.

Audit figures released Monday show that 30.4 million Americans now buy a newspaper Monday through Saturday, and about 40 million do so on Sunday. In 1940, 41.1 million Americans bought a daily newspaper, according to the Newspaper Association of America.

However, those figures come from the 379 largest of the nation's roughly 1,500 daily papers. On average, major metropolitan papers reported a 10.6 percent decrease in daily readership; 7.4 percent on Sunday.

Almost without exception, papers reporting continued healthy circulation are small and mid-size newspapers such as the Times-News that tend to focus on highly local news.

These papers also tend to have a lock on local advertising markets.

"While the big papers get the national coverage, smaller markets are faring much better," Hurd said. "Our total audience is greater than it has ever been, a fact that's been lost in much of the recent newspaper bashing."

The Washington Post contributed to this report.

Valley Flight Simulation LLC's proposal to stretch the 3,558-foot powered zip line from Canyon Crest Dining and Event Center to a nearby part of the rim.

City staff had listed several concerns in a report for the P&Z, including a dispute over who owns the land proposed for the staging platform. Noise from riders might also be a concern, staff wrote, and the ride could scare away birds that live around the Perrine Coulee waterfall; those birds may also be a safety hazard for riders. The LLC should give the city a $20,000 bond to guarantee the line can be removed in the future, the report suggested.

In a presentation hampered by technical troubles, LLC spokeswoman Jody Tatum addressed a number of the concerns — the LLC is willing to put a policy in place banning undue screaming and yelling, she said, and a research group is preparing a report on wildlife and natural-resources issues at the site.

But opponents, largely nearby homeowners, still weren't sold on the idea. Though P&Z Chairman Carl Younkin asked speakers to keep their comments to just a couple of minutes, the first speaker — John Lezamiz — took 15 minutes to lay out numerous objections. The zip-line's anchor site is also the subject of a property dispute, he said, and would end up on his land. Drivers rubber-necking along Canyon Springs Road would be a safety hazard. And as to the sound issue, he said, people who wait at Canyon Crest's bar for their ride and then kick it up to 90 miles per hour will cause problems.

"With all respect to the applicant, putting up a sign that says 'please be quiet' won't solve the issue," he said.

Few speakers supported the proposal. Canyon Crest owner Dan Willie, who stated he doesn't have an interest in the line, nevertheless lauded the tourism dollars it could bring. City resident Rusty Satterwhite compared the economic possibilities for the city to the benefits Sun Valley and Park City, Utah, receive from ski lifts.

Dennis Huntting, who announced early this month that his company is looking to put a multivector zip line at Bogus Basin Ski Resort, read a statement alleging that Magic Valley Flight Simulation may be infringing on at least one patent — a claim the LLC and its attorney rejects.

Tatum said the evening held lessons for the group as it prepares to go before the Twin Falls City Council sometime in the next few weeks. Members just learned of a third property issue, she said; backup sites are being looked into should the Canyon Crest site not work out.

which can be scheduled by calling 737-1137.

The availability of free vaccinations depends upon how soon or if the national shortage ends, which prompted President Obama to declare a national emergency last week.

"As soon as we receive the limited amounts of vaccine, we are getting it to the people who need the most protection. But we want to encourage everyone that does not fall into one of the CDC (Centers for Disease Control and Prevention) priority groups to let those more at risk get the vaccine first," LeBlanc said.

Most flu symptoms dissipate with rest and plenty of fluids, but if you're unable to recover naturally, the health district recommends scheduling an appointment with a doctor before, as the press release reads, "walking into a waiting room with a contagious illness."

The health district also has two undisclosed Magic Valley school districts scheduled for vaccines this week.

Julie Wright-Leggett, gathered at CSI's gymnasium for a moment of solidarity and to remember Carey. Wright-Leggett told team members to be strong.

"I think Sean was an example of showing you what each one of you means to each one of us," she said.

A routine in Carey's honor will be shared at an upcoming sporting event, said Stanley.

"They'll use cheer as therapy to get through this," said Stanley. "They're going to be that much better, as a way to honor Sean."

Counseling through the college continues to be available for students struggling with Carey's death, he said, estimating that 400 people attended Tuesday's funeral. "We're pretty confident they (students) are going to work through this in a healthy way."

According to Carey's mom, her heavenly father picked up her son, and then the crash happened. "Sean wasn't killed in a wreck," she said.

Aside from cheer, Carey was also an assistant organist for the church and a talented singer and viola player. He also ran cross-country in high school where he worked to beat his personal bests, according to family and church officials speaking at the funeral.

For him, the race was about "improving his time, every time, not about winning," said Carey's uncle, Mark Brown. "He was trying to finish the race."

Buhl man admits to injuring child; had faced rape charges

Times-News

Accused of raping a 15-year-old girl in June, Franklin Osterhoudt pleaded guilty Monday in a Twin Falls courtroom to one count of injury to a child.

Osterhoudt, 20, of Buhl, wrote in court papers filed Monday that he "had sex with R.B. who is under the age of legal consent (18)."

Originally charged with two counts of rape, prosecutors will drop one count against Osterhoudt. The other will be reduced to felony injury to a child, according to the plea agreement that Osterhoudt signed Monday.

Osterhoudt faces up to 10 years in prison, records show.

In the same courthouse, a trial began Tuesday for Osterhoudt's father, Franklin Ward Osterhoudt.

The father is accused of rape, incest and five counts of lewd conduct with a child under 16.

The older case involves child family victims and is scheduled to last through Friday. The elder Osterhoudt was arrested this year in Arizona on a 2007 warrant out of Twin Falls.

In other court news, a sentencing hearing was postponed Monday for a woman accused of stealing money from a vulnerable adult.

Cindy Laws was charged in March with felony abuse or neglect of a vulnerable adult for allegedly stealing about $6,156 from a 93-year-old whom she was assigned by the Twin Falls County Board of Community Guardians to protect. Laws entered an Alford plea, which means that she didn't plead guilty but acknowledged there was enough evidence to convict her.

Her sentencing date has yet to be reset.

Family of Jerome man missing since Oct. 14 searching for answers

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

JEROME — The son of a Jerome man missing since a boating accident Oct. 14 fondly remembers his dad while pondering how the accident happened in a place where his father had fished for more than a decade.

Ray Dean Leavitt, 64, was fishing with family and friends in the Snake River in Hells Canyon along the Idaho-Oregon border when Leavitt and Tom Blair, 50, of Twin Falls, were thrown into the water after their boat struck a rock.

Brian Leavitt, of Houston, Texas, said his father has fished in Hells Canyon for 10 to 15 years and it is common for boats to strike rocks and for people to be thrown into the water. The younger Leavitt was in a second boat with his brother near where his father was lost at the time the accident happened.

Leavitt said his father and Blair both came up and looked at each other. Blair swam to the boat but his father went under and did not resurface.

"The whole thing is startling and a mystery. He didn't get back in the boat. It's kind of crazy for everyone to understand," he said. "We've probably passed that spot 100 times."

"It's such a darn hard thing, mentally," he said. "He was a fabulous father. Everyone loved him because he had such a wonderful outlook on life."

He said his family plans a celebration of his father's life for family and friends in Jerome in the near future.

Leavitt said his family plans to have a collection at the celebration of life for the Idaho County Search and Rescue team, which searched for about 10 days.

Idaho County Sheriff's Chief Deputy Jim Gorges told the Times-News that search efforts were suspended late last week.

Gorges said water in the area of the accident is about 60 feet deep in places. He said he believes that Ray Leavitt will eventually resurface.

Brian Leavitt said the family hopes he is found for closure for his family.

Ray Leavitt was married 45 years and had two grown sons. He was a Jerome businessman and was active in the Jerome and other civic organization Chamber of Commerce.

We can make no predictions about their future. But one thing is certain: We'll be there.

Heyburn man killed by semi truck on I-84

Times-News

A Heyburn man was killed early Tuesday morning along Interstate 84 when he was struck by a semi truck after walking in a lane of traffic.

Ricky T. Swensen, 44, was killed near milepost 176 in Jerome County around 4 a.m., according to Idaho State Police, after driving on westbound I-84 and stopping for vehicular problems. Swensen left his vehicle and walked into the westbound lane, according to an ISP press release, when he was struck by a semi pulling three trailers.

Swensen was thrown onto the north side of the interstate. He was later pronounced dead at the scene.

The semi was driven by Richard F. Gebhard, 64, of Meridian, who was wearing his seat belt and not injured in the collision. Alcohol is not believed to be a factor in the crash, ISP reported.

The incident is under investigation by Trooper Chris Pohanka with assistance from Sgt. Kevin Haight, Master Kevin Winn, Trooper James Kilton and the Jerome County Sheriff's Office.

Twin Falls County reviewing bids for parks, weeds buildings

Times-News

Twin Falls County officials are currently reviewing contractor bids to build two new storage buildings, possibly for as little as $86,500.

The structures, planned for in the county's capital-improvement budget, would provide motorized-equipment storage for the Parks and Waterways Department and chemical storage for the Weed Bureau. They would be located at 450 Sixth Ave. W. in Twin Falls, replacing an older building taken down earlier this year, said County Commissioner Terry Kramer.

The county plans to pay for the work out of the $1.5-million capital fund and did not set aside a specific amount for the buildings, Kramer said. Opened on Monday, the seven bids for the project ranged from $86,465 to roughly $220,000.

"So we're going to have to analyze this and make sure we've got apples and apples," Kramer said.

Parks and Waterways Director Rick Novacek is reviewing the bids, Kramer said, and officials will announce their selected contractor on Nov. 3.

Other projects paid for out of the capital fund include the current renovation of the county courthouse parking-lot steps.

New striping on Idaho 75 in Bellevue will narrow lanes

Times-News

BELLEVUE — New striping will narrow the lanes of Idaho Highway 75 through the city of Bellevue beginning this week, weather permitting, the Idaho Transportation Department announced.

The new striping is expected to be completed and in place by today.

The faded lines of the former lanes will temporarily remain, but it is anticipated the worn former lane lines will be completely obliterated in about two weeks.

Drivers are asked to watch for the new lane markers and remain within those new lanes.

The shift of lane markers is being completed at the request of the city of Bellevue to assist in speed-reduction efforts within the city limits.

Crews are expected to be performing the restriping work this afternoon if weather permits. The restriping may be delayed if weather conditions are not ideal.

Woodside fire station to go to Hailey P&Z

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Residents of Hailey's Woodside neighborhood will likely be hearing more fire sirens next year — not due to more fires there, but because the Hailey Fire Department will build a new station.

The station, which will be at the end of Countryside Boulevard where it connects with Woodside Boulevard, is expected to cost about $2 million. Much of the funding for the station is expected to come from federal stimulus money, said Hailey Fire Chief Mike Chapman on Monday night, although those grants can't be applied for until the city's planning and zoning department approves the plans.

Tom Zabala of Boise-based ZGA Architects, the firm that designed a fire station in Jerome, as well as others in the region, presented the plans to the Hailey City Council on Monday in advance of the P&Z's review.

"You've got a real unique treasure in your firefighting community," Zabala said, acknowledging that many of the city's volunteer firefighters have a long record of service. He also gave a nod to the 20-year service award given earlier that evening to firefighter Vaughn Palmer.

Zabala noted that the city's existing firehouse is quite old and also could use renovation. "They're doing yeoman's duty over there, and (the Woodside fire station) will be long overdue."

Chapman reminded the council that the Woodside station is an addition to, not a replacement for, the existing station. It will have 9,400 square feet, including living quarters for firefighters, meeting rooms, office space and equipment bays.

He said it's designed for a 50-year lifespan, and to transition the department from largely volunteer as it is today to a fully professional department.

Once approved, the station will take between 11 and 16 months to build, Chapman said, though the completion date will depend on the planning timeline and the weather.

How I became a threat to national security

Like many Idaho guys, I carry a pocketknife — which is the source of recurring nightmares. You know those bad dreams in which you go to work with no clothes on? My particular nightmare involves inadvertently packing a pocketknife through a Transportation Safety Administration checkpoint, being discovered and thus shutting down the entire domestic airline network.

Because years ago, something similar actually happened to my pocketknife — and to me.

At the end of my junior year in college, my roommate Mark and I boxed up our belongings and put them in storage, then boarded the same plane at the San Francisco airport — I was headed for Pocatello, Mark to Denver — on a flight through Salt Lake City.

While we were putting our stuff in cardboard boxes earlier, I had lent Mark my knife — a spring-assisted Swiss-made model — to cut packing tape. He stuffed the knife into his pocket, forgot about it and walked on the airplane.

This was long before the age of elaborate airport security, and nobody would have been the wiser had Mark not bent over to pick his keys off the floor of the aisle of the plane.

The knife fell out of his pocket and landed at the feet of a flight attendant.

Now this was during the golden age of hijacking when scowflaws were diverting airliners left, right and sideways. During an 11-day period in early September 1970, six hijackings were reported worldwide among the 80 for the year. And on Nov. 24, 1971, D.B. Cooper, commandeered a flight from Portland, Ore., to Seattle, took $200,000 of Northwest Orient Airlines' money and parachuted into history, never to be seen again.

DON'T ASK ME

So Mark quickly found himself pinned on the floor and shortly hauled away by the biggest security guys I've ever seen.

Then, in a small security office, he tried to explain what had happened. And when I volunteered that the knife belonged to me, I got to join him.

After an hour or so, it was pretty clear that we were not Black September terrorists, but Mark made the mistake of admitting that his father, a retired Navy officer, had once been stationed in Guantanamo ... you know, in Cuba, where lots of hijackers wanted to go in those days.

Then followed a long discussion about whether a spring-assisted knife was really a switchblade, and therefore illegal under California and federal law.

The security folks finally let us go after a couple of hours, but confiscated my knife. Our flight had left, so we spent the night on the plastic chairs in the airport and caught another plane the next morning.

Then last week I read that the U.S. House of Representatives had approved a conference report setting appropriations for the Department of Homeland Security. The final bill included language inserted by Rep. Walt Minnick, D-Idaho, preventing spring-assisted knives from being classified as switchblades.

Leaving just one question, as far as I'm concerned:

When will Secretary of Homeland Security Janet Napolitano give my knife back?

Economy tops issues at Jerome forum

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

JEROME — City Council candidates fielded a long series of questions, many related to Jerome's economy, during a candidates forum Monday night.

Incumbent council members Chris Barber and Robert Culver are facing challenges from Senate Dale Eskridge, Dale Ross and Larry Webb.

Several questions related to the decline of downtown Jerome and the condition of some commercial buildings along Main Street. All candidates agreed that the central business district is not what it once was.

Responses varied on ideas to attract new business.

Webb said he favors beautifying the city and getting rid of junk cars. Barber said a lot has been done to attract business and Jerome is becoming more of a service economy.

Culver referred to businesses that are no longer in Jerome and said more specialty shops are likely downtown. He said he supports cleaning up the city.

Eskridge supports cleaning up the city and attracting small shops. He said a large call center such as the one Dell will soon close in Twin Falls is possible in Jerome.

Ross said quality of life should be improved and the city made more presentable.

All candidates said they favored the city doing business with Jerome companies first, followed by Magic Valley businesses and then Idaho companies.

On the recent council decision rejecting a bid process for garbage collection, which retains PSI Environmental Systems as the city's garbage hauler, opinions varied.

Barber, who had voted for a bidding process, and Webb both said they favored going to bid. Culver, who voted against a bidding process, and Ross said they wanted to preserve the current rate PSI provides. Eskridge said the city should have at least sought proposals from haulers.

On relations between the city and its growing Latino community, candidates said people in Jerome should work together to help Latinos be a part of the community. Barber and Culver said and more can be done to improve relations.

Responses varied to a question of whether the candidates support Jerome County's proposed new jail.

"Our county jail is dilapidated. It's old," Barber said, adding that he doesn't think there is sufficient information on the jail proposal that will appear on the ballot Nov. 3.

Culver said a new jail is needed but he also wants more information.

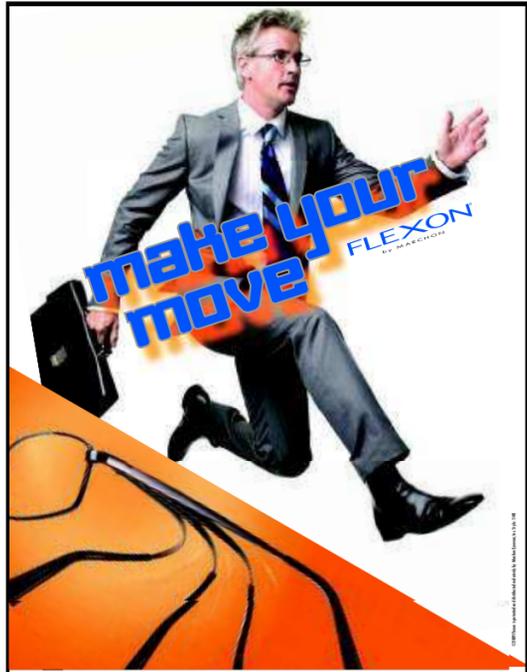

Eskridge said he is in favor of it but said he doesn't like the lease-purchase proposal. He said he would like to see a privately owned jail in Jerome County.

Ross said the jail is needed. "If we don't go this route we're going to be paying one way or another," he said.

Webb also supports the jail. "We cannot afford not to have this jail. It's outdated. The ACLU is going to close us down," he said.

Also on the Jerome city ballot on Nov. 3 are mayoral candidates Councilman John Shine, Mike Dahmer, John Andoe and write-in candidate Homer West, 77. Current Mayor Charles Correll is not seeking another term.

Send Dexter, Dean, Anderson and Hansen back to Burley City Hall

Burley works. The city is well, and honestly, run. It has an economic development enterprise that's the envy of its neighbors, a government that's proactive and accessible, and managers who are capable and efficient.

That's no accident. Burleyites, by and large, have sent the right people to City Hall for the past decade.

They should do so again Nov. 3. We think Mayor Jon Anderson deserves re-election; so do incumbent Councilmen Dennis Dexter and Gordon Hansen.

The third City Council seat should go to Don Dean, who served on the council from 2003-07.

This is the core of the leadership group that set Burley on the path toward unprecedented job growth and solved the city's most pressing problem with construction of a new wastewater treatment plant.

The quietly authoritative Anderson sets the tone, but he presides over a divided council — and that may be Burley's biggest problem. Since Jay Lenkersdorfer and Vaughn Egan were elected two years ago, the council has wasted time on personality conflicts and arguments over issues that don't matter much to the average citizen.

Council members have more important work to do — economic development; fixing deteriorating streets, curbs and gutters; finding a new site for the airport; maintaining city services with less revenue. That's why voters sent them to City Hall in the first place.

We're also concerned that the council may be a vote away from eliminating the city administrator position held by Mark Mitton. That would be a mistake, in our view, hurting everything from economic development to the day-to-day operations of city departments.

Many mid-size Idaho cities — Blackfoot, Kuna, Ammon, Chubbuck, Mountain Home, Sandpoint — are facing challenges that Burley has managed to overcome or avoid altogether through wise public-policy decisions. It just makes sense to keep that leadership in place.

WHO'S RUNNING?

- Incumbent Burley Mayor Jon Anderson, 64, is being challenged by business owner Robert Greenman, 65. Anderson is a credit union manager.
- Seven candidates are running for three seats on the Burley City Council, including incumbents Dennis Dexter, 55; Gordon Hansen, 43, and Steve McGill, 46. The challengers are Don Dean, 71, an electric utility accounts manager; Randy Golay, 54, a contractor; Casey Andersen, 54, a self-employed auto restorer; and Brian Tibbets, 33. Dexter is the social services director of a long-term care facility. Hansen is a business owner and McGill is a self-employed home inspector.
- Polls will be open from 8 a.m. until 8 p.m. on Nov. 3.

Wanted: a cyber czar, and quickly

In May, President Barack Obama completed his long-awaited "cyber-space policy review," concluding that cyberspace is a strategic asset that must be safeguarded from attack as a national security priority. He recalled how hackers had gotten into his own campaign servers, and he worried that crucial infrastructure, public and private, was vulnerable to hackers, cyber terrorists and even other governments.

James Zirin

The president promised to appoint a permanent "cyber czar" who would coordinate the work of federal agencies charged with protecting us. But since "acting cyber-security czar" Melissa Hathaway resigned in August, the post has been unfilled.

Why? Part of the reason may be the nature of the job. The cyber czar would have to coordinate with agencies that engage in constant turf wars, including the CIA, the FBI, the Department of Defense, the National Security Agency and others. That is a daunting task for an outsider — even a "czar" appointed by the president.

But the need is great. In August, Twitter was the victim of an attack emanating from Eastern Europe that took down the social network for most of a day. Facebook and LiveJournal were also affected. In 2007, Chinese hackers penetrated American electricity grids. About the same time, unidentified hackers broke into a Pentagon network and briefly brought it down.

Defense Secretary Robert M. Gates has said government computers are "under attack all the time — every day."

The weapons in the hackers' arsenal are easily obtained. International cyber arms dealers regularly sell "malware" and "botnet" programs through online auctions similar to priceline.com or eBay. Malware, in case you aren't a geek, is short for "malicious software," designed to do damage to a computer system. According to a Hoover Institution Policy Review released earlier this year, a botnet is a network of thousands of software robots that run autonomously on compromised, or "zombie," computers. These computers spawn malware under the command of a "bot herder," who can control the group remotely. Because effective cyber attacks involve not just one malicious computer but thousands of computers at a time, with new ones constantly joining the fray, cyber sallies are all the more difficult to deflect.

In the spring of 2007, after the government of Estonia moved a monument to the Red Army from the center of its capital to the outskirts of town, it became the victim of a monthlong cyber attack that the New York Times said "came close to shutting down the country's digital infrastructure." Through the use of botnets, your computer may have been used against Estonia without you even knowing it.

A significant issue is that the government uses the same networking, the same Internet protocols and the same operating systems as the private sector, making cyber security a universal problem as opposed to a governmental problem. Hackers may find a greater payload in targeting critical infrastructure such as power grids, financial or communication networks or air traffic control systems than in attacking the CIA or the Pentagon.

An attack by an adversary nation, much less a cyber extortionist or terrorist, is not so far-fetched. In March 2007, the Department of Energy's Idaho National Laboratory conducted an experiment to determine whether a power plant could be compromised by hacking alone. The researchers were able to cause a generator to shake, smoke and shut down with a few keystrokes. The same year, then-Deputy Undersecretary of Defense Richard P. Lawless told a House committee that "Chinese capabilities in this area have evolved from defending networks from attack to offensive operations against adversary networks."

Strengthening our software systems will require a deft hand. Security technologist and author Bruce Schneier points out a problem he calls the "equities issue." The good guys and the bad guys all use Windows, Oracle, e-mail and Skype. If we alert the manufacturer and patch vulnerability in the system, are we making it tougher on ourselves when our own government wants to go after the bad guys?

So why hasn't the president appointed a new cyber czar to monitor and, if indicated, secure the electronic highway from attack? His staff said he is looking for just the right person, and that takes time. The problem is that we don't have much time.

James Zirin is a New York lawyer and member of the Council on Foreign Relations. He wrote this for the Los Angeles Times.

Enron's Skilling tries to blame the dead guy

Unlike many of his decisions as an executive, Jeff Skilling's decision to spend more money on lawyers than any defendant in history appears to be paying off.

Last week, the Supreme Court decided to review Skilling's conviction. Up to now, it appeared the failed Enron executive had spent something close to $50 million on a defense that did little more than land him in jail for 24 years.

Skilling's attorney, Dan Petrocelli, may have lost at the trial court level, but he scored a victory by getting the case heard on the arcane legal issue known as "honest services."

There's a touch of irony in the decision. Little about Skilling's reign at Enron involved honesty.

This is what good white-collar defense lawyers do. They dissect the language syllable by syllable until it's divorced from reality.

So when the Supremes review "honest services" they won't simply pull out their copy of Webster's and find that honest means truthful. They won't accept that services, in the context of a chief executive, reflects his fiduciary duty to shareholders and employees that he won't lie to them, distort numbers, hide debt or encourage and reward behavior that will lead to the destruction his company.

In this legal Wonderland, Skilling may succeed in his claim that, essentially, he was providing honest services by deceiving shareholders because it made the company's stock price go up.

In all likelihood, the concepts of duty, responsibility and accountability that most of us recognize as inherent to the title of chief executive won't even enter the debate.

The arguments may overturn some of Skilling's convictions, and it may get him a new trial. A new trial would indeed be, to use Petrocelli's term, a "game-changer" because this time Skilling can employ a strategy he couldn't before: blame the dead guy.

Without Ken Lay sharing the defense table, Skilling can simply argue that any crimes at Enron were perpetrated on Lay's watch. Skilling, after all, bailed on Enron before it sank. It was Lay in the corner office when the ship went down.

Though his defense team will argue otherwise, it's unlikely an honest services ruling will overturn all 19 counts on which Skilling was convicted. Most likely, he will still serve more jail time and he will still be a felon.

It's not the job of Supremes, though, to decide Skilling's guilt. They are weighing the issue of whether this obtuse legal phrasing of "honest services" is being used too broadly, whether prosecutors see it as a sort of legal crescent wrench, that can be adjusted to any case in putting the screws to defendants.

Clearly, even appeals courts can't agree on how the doctrine should be applied. The 5th Circuit, after all, didn't even agree with itself, upholding the use of the honest services argument in Skilling's case but rejecting it in another Enron-related appeal.

Meanwhile, from his prison cell in Colorado, Skilling weeps tears of joy at the chance to try, once again, to revise history, as if clicking his heels and repeating "there were no crimes at Enron" will magically transport him from reality into the legal Land of Oz.

For Skilling, the path is lined not with gold but the millions showered on top-notch legal talent that after years of setbacks has finally found a loophole big enough to squeeze their client through.

In that, he's actually accomplished the exact opposite of what he did at Enron. There, he championed decisions that paid off in the short-term but had disastrous long-term consequences.

Far from being his worst decision, it's now clear that if Skilling had been as adept as an executive as he is at hiring lawyers, he'd still be running Enron.

In all my years there, I have seen a lot of information on earthquakes but I have never seen such a comprehensive handbook on earthquakes as I just received in my Sunday edition of the Times News, Falls, Idaho, Times-News.

This handbook should be read by everyone and should be kept with a disaster supply kit and readily available just in case we do experience a "big one."

My compliments to all those involved in putting together such an informational and complete handbook of information on an event that Idahoans have experienced and will again someday.

Farm background makes Lanting a perfect choice

Our son, Greg Lanting, is running for re-election on the Twin Falls City Council. Since Greg was raised on a farm in the Hollister area, he developed many values and qualities that we feel would make him a good choice for city councilman.

He worked on the farm driving tractor, stacking hay and helping with the harvest. This helped to develop a good work ethic. Greg learned the value of a reliable source of water, which is why he voted for the purchase of Pristine Springs, and he believes in water conservation.

His 4-H beef projects over the years taught him how to be responsible for the caring and feeding of animals and the management of a long-term project. With the monies he received from the sale of these animals, he helped finance his college education. Greg worked his way through college and taught in secondary school. While teaching, Greg continued to work for his master's degree in administration. Greg became a middle school principal in Filer, and this vocation taught him to work with a staff and how to work on a budget.

As a young man, Greg was a member of the Boy Scouts of America. He attained the rank of Eagle Scout. These experiences taught him how to set goals and work to achieve them.

His other experiences include 10 years in the Idaho National Guard and eight years on the Twin Falls City Planning and Zoning Commission. Love of country and civic duty are part of his qualities.

We, his parents, know that, because of his background, he is well qualified to serve another four years on the city council. Thank you; a vote for Greg Lanting is appreciated.

More than a thousand voters can't be wrong

My honorable City Council opponent claims this election has no issues. More than a thousand voters we've contacted door-knocking tell different stories; here are their priorities:

City Hall must tighten its belt. Government can't be immune from the giant recession forcing us to live leaner. No more $100,000 no-bid consulting contracts to study downtown — we already know private investors create jobs.

Urban Renewal spent $5.5 million since 1994 to clear buildings and construct parking lots downtown, but where are the new jobs? The Business Improvement District doesn't have a strategic plan and charges higher assessments without justification. The council must coordinate the URA and BID to control public expenditures while encouraging property owners to renovate upstairs Main Street buildings into apartments.

Replace Dell with purpose, not desperation. The company promised us the stars but broke our hearts. Call centers are here today — you know the rest. Is the city prepared if a large business using public water and waste treatment moves away?

The council was silent when the sheriff offered space for the police. Let's begin merging law enforcement operations, improving safety while saving dollars. Wake up, council; there are other ways to combine operations, similar to the city/county airport.

Five years ago, the council invested nearly a million dollars purchasing Auger Falls to provide access for fishing and hiking. That bottomland is still inaccessible; liberate Auger Falls or sell it!

A handful of people are running for one council seat, while two incumbents don't have to lift a finger. If we abolish designated seats and return to open council elections, all candidates will work to gain the public trust and each vote will count the same.

I'm walking door-to-door, listening to people. Vote for a healthy Twin Falls tomorrow.

Please vote yes for new Jerome Justice Facility

It is time that Jerome County needs new jail facilities. The current jail is more than 30 years old and does not meet current state standards. The jail is at capacity and the county currently houses between 10 and 12 prisoners in other jails per day at a cost of between $45 and $50 per day. In addition, the jail is in need of major repair or restoration, which would be cost-prohibitive and not gain any beds. We also need to think of the safety of the officers who work there, the prisoners who are housed and, most importantly, the citizens of Jerome County for their safety and well-being.

The proposed facility is a 165-bed jail in which Jerome County will now be able to house all the prisoners at the facility. The county will be saving the outside housing and transportation costs by not housing inmates out of county. The county will also be able to rent beds to neighboring counties who have already expressed interest in renting beds from Jerome County.

By voting yes, you are granting the Jerome County commissioners the authority to enter into the long-term lease with an option to buy a new jail facility. A vote yes does not give the commissioners authority to levy

Talkington committed to better quality of life

I am writing this letter of endorsement for Chris Talkington as he seeks a seat on our Twin Falls City Council.

Chris will provide a strong and experienced voice for urban renewal in our city if elected. He has served on the city council previously and was involved when Dell Computer Systems moved into our area. He knows what the community has lost as this business leaves Twin Falls and would seek to recruit replacement companies to bring financial stability and stimulus to Twin Falls.

Chris Talkington knows that renewal and growth do not always necessitate raising property taxes. In his last term with the council, there were no tax increases even as the community of Twin Falls benefited from new growth during his term. He is still committed to improving the quality of life in our area without burdening taxpayers.

Chris has influential ties with the downtown Twin Falls Business Improvement District. He feels that if the BID receives strong leadership from the city council, our beautiful downtown area will become a more inviting place for residents to shop and dine as they enjoy the historical flavor of Twin Falls. He is excited to visit with downtown business owners to discuss the possibility of creating residential apartments in the upper floors of their business, a unique living arrangement for individuals who enjoy an urban residence in a revitalized downtown setting.

Chris knows that the health, safety and quality of life Twin Falls residents can be enhanced with an improved bicycle path system throughout the city. Cyclists must have safe options as they commute to work and ride for recreation.

Chris Talkington is a native-born resident of Twin Falls who enjoys the beauty and the vibrancy of our city beside the canyon. Voting Chris onto our city council ensures that Twin Falls residents have an advocate and partner in city government.

McCauley a good leader, works well with people

I've had the opportunity to know and work with Tom McCauley for the past 20-plus years in numerous capacities.

Tom is a very deliberate, logical-thinking person, organized, considerate to other people's values, a good learner, and unselfish with his time. Everyone finds Tom energetic, approachable, a good leader that works well with all people. Understanding and educating himself on all issues is very important to Tom; he finds citizen input and thoughts on issues important in the decision-making process.

Tom's community efforts on the Buhl Planning and Zoning Commission, volunteerism and involvement in youth activities over the years speak for themselves. Over the years, many youth in the Buhl community have been touched by Tom's advice and encouragement. Tom has also been involved with the educational system in Buhl and has always stepped in where needed. He believes it is important to have a cooperative relationship between the city and school district.

Business experiences have required Tom to understand state and federal permitting processes, giving him the unique ability to communicate with agency personnel on many issues. As a private business person, he understands budgeting and where spending should occur to get the best value for the dollar spent while reducing the debt burden. He understands that the tax base needs broadened by encouraging business and residential development.

As a past elected city official, I feel these attributes are what the mayor for the city of Buhl should possess. Not often do voters in small communities have someone with this background seeking public office. I encourage you to have a conversation with Tom on his "new direction" for Buhl. Please help support Tom McCauley by voting Nov. 3.

IDAHO Ex-prison guard gets prison in sex case

BOISE — A former state prison guard has been sentenced to one to three years in prison for having sexual contact with a female inmate.

District Judge Ronald Wilper sentenced Timothy R. Gilligan, of Boise, on Tuesday.

The 28-year-old Gilligan was a wide receiver for the Boise State football team between 2000 and 2003 and also played in the Canadian Football League.

He was originally charged with two counts of having sexual contact with a female inmate in 2007 but pleaded guilty to burglary — a crime technically committed when someone enters a building with the intent to commit a felony.

Gilligan admitted to Wilper earlier this year that he twice entered the Idaho Maximum Security Institution with the intent of having sexual contact with a female inmate.

Idaho could end Dworshak park lease

BOISE — The Department of Parks and Recreation may terminate its lease of Dworshak State Park with the federal government amid a state budget crisis, leaving the north-central Idaho recreation area's future in doubt.

Additionally, Idaho's other 29 state parks could face similarly painful austerity measures in coming months, said Nancy Merrill, Parks and Recreation director.

Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter has ordered her agency to slash even more from its fiscal year 2010 budget that was already 30 percent less than last year's original spending plan to help close Idaho's projected deficit of $151 million. State legislators have suggested more cuts may be coming when the 2010 session convenes in January, Merrill said Tuesday.

"If we don't have manpower to clean restrooms, pick up trash or take care of incidents that occur in the parks, it makes it difficult to run them in the manner we need to for public health and safety," she told The Associated Press.

Dworshak includes three units along the western shore of the Clearwater River's Dworshak Reservoir: Freeman Creek Campground, Three Meadows Group Camp, and Big Eddy Lodge and Marina. The park territory is public land overseen by the federal U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, but it's been leased and managed by Idaho for years.

In September, the state Parks and Recreation Board voted to save $455,000 by reorganizing staff, transferring the park back to the corps and canceling a project intended to protect moored boats from wind-driven waves.

Merrill met Monday in Orofino with the representatives from the Corps of Engineers, local governments, Idaho's congressional delegation and economic leaders to discuss ways to maintain the site until the end of the fiscal year on June 30 — and to find a long-term funding solution.

Donor gives $1M to Hospice of N. Idaho

COEUR D'ALENE — The executive director of Hospice of North Idaho says the organization has received a $1 million anonymous donation.

Paul Weil says the family that donated the money was appreciative of the care the hospice group had provided them in the past. The hospice organization is hoping to raise $3 million in a capital campaign to build an eight-unit inpatient facility for terminally ill patients and their families. The Coeur d'Alene Press reports that counting the $1 million donation, the organization is two-thirds of the way to its goal.

Jon Hippler, chair of the hospice fundraising committee, says the donation is one of the largest ever made in Kootenai County.

Agency reaches deal to help threatened ground squirrel

BOISE — Federal wildlife officials say they have reached a habitat protection agreement with landowners in central Idaho to help the threatened north Idaho ground squirrel.

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service announced the deal Tuesday, reached with Hixon Properties, which operates a working ranch in Adams County. The deal covers more than 7,000 acres for 10 years.

The squirrel is listed as threatened under the federal Endangered Species Act and is currently found only in Adams and Valley counties. Its habitat includes forest meadow-grasslands and ponderosa pine and fir forest. Under the deal, Hixon Properties has committed to work with the agency to improve habitat, minimize the impact of other land uses and allow research and monitoring.

In return, the landowners get a permit allowing limited incidental taking of the species.

ALASKA Palin paid $1.25M for new book by time she left office

ANCHORAGE — Former GOP vice presidential candidate Sarah Palin reported Tuesday that she has received at least $1.25 million for her hugely anticipated upcoming memoir "Going Rogue."

A disclosure statement released Tuesday discusses Palin's finances from Jan. 1 to July 27, when she resigned as Alaska governor. Palin says she received the money from publisher HarperCollins for the book.

The document only provides a partial picture of the book deal because it doesn't cover the three months she has been out of office. Palin doesn't elaborate on her book compensation, describing the $1.25 million figure only as a "retainer" that appears to be a reference to her lucrative advance.

Her personal spokeswoman, Meghan Stapleton, declined to provide more details of the book deal.

"The Governor has complied with Alaska disclosure law by her filing," she said in an e-mail Tuesday. "Now, as a private citizen, her business dealings, including her publishing agreement, are confidential."

It's likely Palin will make more money when it's all said and done. "Going Rogue" catapulted to No. 1 on Amazon.com and Barnes & Noble.com after HarperCollins announced in late September it had moved up the release date of 1.5 million copies from spring to Nov. 17.

Palin will appear on "The Oprah Winfrey Show" the day before the release of her book, which is currently listed at No. 6 on Amazon.com and No. 11 on Barnes & Noble.com.

Palin has mostly been out of the public eye while working with the ghostwriter of her memoir.

Since resigning, she's made only a few public appearances including a September speech before investors in Hong Kong. She also attended the welcome-home ceremony in Fairbanks for soldiers, including her son Track, and appeared at a gun rights event in Anchorage. She's maintained a larger presence on Facebook, posting occasional messages to almost 950,000 fans, the latest posted Monday night announcing her support of conservative candidates in New Jersey and Virginia.

In the disclosure filed with the Alaska Public Offices Commission, Palin also reported collecting $73,000 as governor in 2009 as well as $6,370.80 in per diem during her final months in office. Her annual salary as governor was $125,000.

Jerome proposes design standards for downtown

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

The city of Jerome is preparing a new city code that will require downtown property owners to have city approval before making changes to their buildings and signs.

Micah Austin, assistant to the city administrator, said the code is commonly used in small communities to protect the value of older buildings.

He cited McCall and Ketchum as a few examples.

If passed by the city council, the code would require property owners to bring some form of design plan before the city planning and zoning committee for review.

The volunteer committee would have the authority to approve or deny requests.

"The purpose of the design and review process is to ensure that buildings follow the theme of Jerome," Austin said. "Currently, we have little or no standards for building design and improvements."

WANT TO BE HEARD?

For more information, or to comment on the city of Jerome's proposed building design code, call Micah Austin at 208-324-8189, ext. 101, or go to <http://cityofjerome.blogspot.com/>

Austin said there will be no cost or fees associated with the design and review process.

Two business owners contacted by the Times-News said they support the proposal, saying downtown Jerome looks run down because of shoddy work on storefronts and temporary signs.

They asked not to be identified because they feared offending neighboring businesses.

If approved, the code will be applied to commercial and residential properties within the business district on Main Street and Lincoln Street.

Austin said the proposal is being reviewed by the city attorney, who will send it to the planning and zoning committee for review.

There will be a public comment period before it is voted on by the city council.

"We don't want this to be a unilateral decision," Austin said. "We want to people to make comments and suggestions because it affects them."

Gas prices jump as refineries cut back

Times-News staff and wire reports

Gasoline prices slowed their decline in Idaho, despite a nearly 10 cent increase nationwide, as oil companies continued to reduce the amount of fuel that they are refining.

The average price of a gallon of regular gasoline in Idaho fell by just 2 cents to $2.62 — south-central Idaho reported an average price of $2.56 per gallon.

Nationally, prices rose 10 cents to an average of $2.67 a gallon.

Oil industry analyst Patrick DeHaan said refineries have cut way back in an effort to raise prices and a time when they claim their profit margins are very low.

Refiners typically cut back production in the fall, said DeHaan, senior petroleum analyst for gasbuddy.com, but oil companies are processing less oil now than at any time since September 2008, when Hurricane Ike knocked out several facilities in the Gulf of Mexico.

"Demand has remained the same, but the supply is dropping," he said Monday. "Two weeks ago, Americans used 220 million more gallons of gasoline than was produced that week. Last week, consumption was 96 million gallon more than what was produced. That has the bulls running and prices rising."

Meanwhile crude oil futures for December delivery were down $1.82, or 2.26 percent, to $78.68 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Phil Flynn, an energy analyst with PFGBest in Chicago, said that there were a number of factors in the drop, including some profit-taking after oil last week broke out of a several weeks' long trading range of $65 a barrel to $75 a barrel.

"There were more concerns about the economy today and the dollar got a bit of a boost against foreign currencies. When the dollar is stronger, investors are less likely to flee it and go into commodities like oil," Flynn said.

A matter of size

SBA proposes revision to expand assistance for small businesses

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

The U.S. Small Business Administration is proposing to increase the size definitions in three commercial sectors.

If adopted the changes will expand eligibility to more small businesses, helping them gain access to SBA's financial assistance, contracting and other programs.

The proposed increases would affect 71 different types of businesses — two-thirds of them in retail trade sectors. The rest are in accommodations and food services, and other services.

SBA Administrator Karen Mills said the administration recognizes that existing size standards have been affected by changes in industry structure, market conditions and business models.

Some business were excluded from SBA assistance programs because their annual payroll and sales surpassed the definition of "small business."

Mills said the SBA will conduct a review its small business size standards to ensure that existing size standards are based on current economic data.

"This review and proposed changes will help make these critical programs available to more small businesses," she said.

The SBA has not changed size standards since 1984 — with the exception of a few

A MAN, A PLAN AND A PETITION

ASHLEY SMITH/Times-News

An unidentified man braves the wind while walking in downtown Twin Falls. Some business and property owners are petitioning the city to disband the Historic Downtown Business Improvement District, which promotes downtown businesses.

Business owner wants to disband T.F. business improvement district

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

Scott Featherstone is tired of paying $2,000 each year to host parades and celebrations that benefit other businesses.

The owner of the Trail Creek Brewery building said the Historic Downtown Business Improvement District has been taxing him for services he never receives.

Now, he said, it's time to shut it down.

Earlier this month, Featherstone began petitioning downtown property owners to sign legal notices that would disband the business improvement district.

City officials say business owners sometimes threaten to take action against the organization, but this is the first time someone has created a legal petition.

"It seems like we hear the complaints every time we send out assessments in September," said Mitch Humble, Twin Falls community development director. "But this is the farthest I've seen it go toward disbanding the BID."

The business improvement district, which is funded by property assessments, promotes downtown businesses through events and other promotions.

According to the most recent financial report, the improvement district billed downtown property owners more than $145,400 from January to September 2009.

Featherstone said he pays more than $2,000 per year in assessments.

ECONOMIC REPORTS

WORSENING JOB PICTURE FUELS SLIDE IN CONFIDENCE

CHICAGO (AP) — The Consumer Confidence Index, released by The Conference Board, sank unexpectedly to 47.7 in October — its second-lowest reading since May. Forecasters predicted a higher reading of 53.1. A reading above 90 means the economy is on solid footing. Above 100 signals strong growth. The index has seesawed since reaching a historic low of 25.3 in February and climbed to 53.4 in September. The figures showed that shoppers have a grim outlook for the future, The Conference Board said, expecting a worsening business climate, fewer jobs and lower salaries. That's particularly bad news for retailers who depend on the holiday shopping season for a hefty share of their annual revenue. Economists expect holiday sales to be at best flat from a year ago, which saw the biggest declines since at least 1967 when the Commerce Department started collecting the data.

HOME PRICES RISE IN MOST MAJOR CITIES

NEW YORK (AP) — The Standard & Poor's/Case-Shiller home price index, which studies real estate transactions in 20 major cities, showed home prices rose in August, the third straight monthly increase and a sign that a housing recovery might be taking hold. The measure showed the home price index climbed 1 percent from July to a seasonally adjusted reading of 144.5. While prices are down 11.4 percent from August a year ago, the annual declines have slowed since February. Prices are at levels not seen since August 2003 and have fallen almost 30 percent from the peak in May 2006. The latest index shows a widespread turnaround with prices rising month-over-month in 15 metro areas since June.

OIL RISES ABOVE $79 AMID DOLLAR VOLATILITY

NEW YORK (AP) — Crude oil prices rebounded Tuesday after three straight days of declines, offsetting an unexpected slump in consumer confidence. Benchmark crude for December delivery rose 78 cents to settle at $79.46 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. Crude jumped to a 12-month high at $82 a barrel last week as the dollar weakened amid concerns that massive global stimulus spending will eventually spark inflation. An Energy Department report due Wednesday will likely show that U.S. stockpiles of crude oil rose last week, but supplies of gasoline and distillate fuel, a category that includes heating oil and diesel, declined, according to analysts.

Trouble on the tracks? Railroads face a crossroads next year

By Samantha Bomkamp
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Fewer shipments of everything from cars to clothing are rolling across the country compared with a year ago, although the railroads say shipping volume seems to have stabilized from earlier points this year. For the moment, the country's biggest rails, including Union Pacific Corp. and Burlington Northern Santa Fe Corp., say they will still be able to make gains by improving efficiency on their lines to offset some of the shipping volume shortfall. Lower costs for fuel and labor are also keeping results from being a lot worse.

But next year will be challenging. Union Pacific chairman and CEO Jim Young said Thursday that the economy will "limp along" until unemployment starts to improve. And Burlington Northern CEO Matt Rose said in a conference call with analysts that consumers are going to be the driver of any improvement in the economy, but no one is buying yet.

That's part of the reason that Burlington Northern issued a fourth-quarter earnings forecast well below Wall Street's expectations. The railroad, based in Fort Worth, Texas, now thinks it will earn between $1.10 and $1.20 per share for the period. Analysts predicted $1.36 per share.

Burlington reported a 30 percent drop in third-quarter profit, while revenue fell 27 percent to $3.6 billion. Union Pacific said its profit was off 26 percent, while revenue fell 24 percent.

Another problem for the railroads in the coming year will be how much coal is needed to make electricity. Coal demand has fallen off sharply because of the mild summer, a number of industrial plant shutdowns, and more consumers turning off the lights to save money. Executives at both Union Pacific and Burlington Northern said they expect coal shipments to remain weak for some time. And last week the country's No. 3 railroad, CSX Corp., also said it doesn't expect coal demand to get better in 2010.

When CSX reported third-quarter results, it said it believed the worst of the recession is over, but its third-quarter earnings fell 23 percent from a year ago. CSX's chief rival Norfolk Southern Corp. will report third-quarter results next week.

The signal for major economic improvement will come from retail sales, the rails say.

When asked if he had any closing comments for analysts in Thursday's conference call, Burlington Northern CEO Matt Rose put it simply.

"Everybody go out and buy some stuff at Walmart, Home Depot, Target and Lowe's."

Railroads struggle to get on track

Consumers still aren't buying. Assembly lines are still slow. And oil prices are going up.

Industry Spotlight
For all these reasons, America's railroads can't predict when the economic engines will hum again. All they're saying is, for now, it's not getting worse.

The nation's railroads say shipping volume seems to have stabilized, although there are still fewer shipments of everything from cars to clothing compared with a year ago. One of the country's biggest rails, Union Pacific, said the number of rail carloads it carried fell 15 percent in the third quarter. Union Pacific and rival Burlington Northern Santa Fe say they will be able to boost their results by improving efficiency to offset some of the shipping volume shortfall.

But, railroad executives say next year will be challenging. Rail shipments won't pick up until unemployment declines and consumers start spending again.

Agriculture futures trade lower on the CBOT

CHICAGO (AP) — Agriculture futures fell Tuesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat for December delivery dropped 23.75 cents to $5.0325 a bushel, while December corn lost 7.25 cents to $3.7075 a bushel and oats for December delivery fell 3.5 cents to $2.44 a bushel. November soybeans slid 13 cents to $9.735 a bushel.

Meanwhile, beef futures traded lower and pork futures advanced on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

December live cattle edged down 0.05 cent to 87.1 cents a pound; November feeder cattle slipped 0.02 cent to 95.85 cents a pound; December lean hogs gained 1.97 cents to 55.42 cents a pound; and February pork bellies rose 1.28 cents to 90.25 cents a pound.

FAA revokes licenses of wayward Northwest pilots

By Joan Lowy
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The Federal Aviation Administration on Tuesday revoked the licenses of the two Northwest Airlines pilots who overshot their Minneapolis destination by 150 miles.

The pilots — Timothy Cheney of Gig Harbor, Wash., the captain, and Richard Cole of Salem, Ore., the first officer — told safety investigators they were working on their personal laptop computers and lost track of time and place.

The pilots, who were out of communications with air traffic controllers for 91 minutes, violated numerous federal safety regulations in the incident last Wednesday night, the FAA said in a statement. The violations included failing to comply with air traffic control instructions and clearances and operating carelessly and recklessly, the agency said.

"You engaged in conduct that put your passengers and your crew in serious jeopardy," FAA regional counsel Eddie Thomas said in a letter to Cheney. Northwest Flight 188 was not in communications with controllers or the airline dispatchers "while you were on a frolic of your own. ... This is a total dereliction and disregard for your duties."

A similar letter was sent to Cole.

The pilots said they were brought back to awareness when a flight attendant contacted them on the aircraft's intercom. By then, they were over Wisconsin at 37,000 feet. They turned the Airbus A320 with its 144 passengers around and landed safely in Minneapolis.

The revocations of the pilots' commercial licenses are effective immediately, FAA said.

The pilots have 10 days to appeal the emergency revocations to the National Transportation Safety Board. If that fails, they can apply for a new certificate after one year.

The pilots' union at Delta Air Lines, which acquired Northwest last year, declined to comment on the revocations. The union had cautioned against a rush to judgment. The pilots told investigators who interviewed them on Sunday that they had no previous accidents or safety incidents.

Delta spokesman Anthony Black said in a statement: "The pilots in command of Northwest Flight 188 remain suspended until the conclusion of the investigations into this incident."

Phone messages left at the homes of the pilots were not immediately returned Tuesday.

Opposition fuels Reid's push to line up health care votes

By Janet Hook and Noam N. Levey
Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Faced with opposition Tuesday from Senators Olympia Snowe, R-Maine, and Joe Lieberman, I-Conn., over inclusion of a government-run insurance program in the Senate health care bill, Democratic Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., intensified negotiations with a handful of Democrats whose support is crucial to passing the legislation.

Reid's announcement Monday that he would include a government insurance option in the bill, but allow states to opt out if they chose, thrilled liberal allies and Democrats in the House, where support for the so-called "public option" runs strong.

But it became clear Tuesday that even the "opt out" version of the public option faced a tough sell in the Senate. In addition to Snowe's and Lieberman's opposition, many moderates refused to make a commitment.

As a result, outsized influence is falling to Democrats on the fence. They are being courted with possible concessions not just in broad policies — such as ways to reduce the impact on the budget deficit — but in provisions affecting home-state industries.

Reid needs 60 votes to prevent Republicans from using parliamentary tactics to keep the bill from coming to the floor and brought to a final vote. Reid needs all 58 Democrats and the two independents who caucus with the Democrats, or he needs some Republican defectors.

A senior Democrat said there were about 10 Democratic senators whose support had yet to be nailed down.

Among them is Indiana Sen. Evan Bayh, who says he is worried about the fiscal impact of the bill. Reid has made him more amendable by promising to significantly modify a proposed 10-year, $40 billion excise tax on manufacturers of medical devices, a major Indiana industry.

Sen. Ben Nelson, D-Neb., a former state insurance commissioner, is adamantly opposed to a provision that would impose new antitrust requirements on the health insurance industry, one of his big campaign contributors.

Boston police: Psychiatric patient stabs doc, is shot dead

By Bob Salsberg
Associated Press writer

BOSTON — A man stabbed a doctor while being treated at a psychiatric office at a Boston medical building Tuesday and was fatally shot by an off-duty security guard who saw the attack, police said.

The attack took place in the afternoon at a high-rise affiliated with Massachusetts General Hospital.

The female doctor, identified by hospital officials as Dr. Astrid Desrosiers, was in serious, but stable condition. Police said the suspect died of the gunshot wounds. He was identified as Jay Carciro, 37, of Reading.

"During the course of the stabbing incident an off-duty security officer who was armed interceded. He produced a weapon and ordered the suspect to drop the knife. And when the suspect did not comply, he shot the suspect," said Boston Police Commissioner Ed Davis.

The security guard was not affiliated with the hospital and just happened to be on the fifth-floor of the building where the attack occurred, according to Bonnie Michelman, the hospital's security director.

"Certainly heroic, we are happy he was here," said Michelman.

Boston emergency workers aid Dr. Astrid Desrosiers, who was stabbed in a medical building affiliated with the Mass. General Hospital in Boston, Tuesday. According to Boston Police, an unidentified man stabbed Desrosiers while being treated at a psychiatric ward in the building. The suspect was fatally shot by an off-duty security guard who saw the attack, police said. AP photo

The victim also works as an instructor in psychiatry at Harvard Medical School and is affiliated with the Haitian Mental Health Program. Public records show the 49-year-old Desrosiers was licensed to practice in the Massachusetts 16 years ago.

Desrosiers is a graduate of the State University of Haiti's School of Medicine and Pharmacy and the Harvard University School of Public Health. Her major research interests include the role of psychosocial factors in the treatment of mood disorders, health disparities and the impact of multicultural issues on patient care.

"A caring and dedicated professional, Dr. Desrosiers has spent her career providing extraordinary care and treatment to patients who are among the most vulnerable and those with the most severe psychiatric disorders," Massachusetts General Hospital said in a statement. "Her commitment, compassion and courage are an inspiration to all of us. The entire MGH family is pulling together for her speedy recovery."

Carciro's sister-in-law, Lisa Carciro, said the family was devastated by the news and would not make public comments. Carciro and his brother, John, did not have home phones listed.

Police temporarily locked down the Staniford Street building, telling employees and patients they could not leave. Nearby streets were shut down for about an hour. They were let back in when authorities determined the danger had passed.

David Schoenfeld, a biostatistician who works in another suite of offices on the fifth floor, where the attack took place, said he heard a commotion and found the suspect lying on the floor.

"Two nurses rushed in and administered as much first aid as they could until the ambulances arrived a couple of minutes later," Schoenfeld said.

Schoenfeld said he did not see the doctor who had been stabbed.

The attack took place at the Massachusetts General Hospital Bipolar Clinic & Research Program, in a building near the main hospital. The program provides clinical care, conducts research and educates the community about bipolar disorder, according to its Web site.

The building is in a largely commercial area that includes businesses with treatment specialties and several medical groups associated with Massachusetts General.

"There wasn't too much panic or confusion in the building," said Arthur Frigault of Waltham, who was with his wife for an ophthalmology appointment on the sixth floor.

Frigault, who did not hear the shots, went to the lobby but was not allowed to leave as police entered the building. He later saw a man and a woman taken, on stretchers, from the building. He said the woman was "all bloodied up."

CDC says U.S. swine flu vaccine outlook improving

By Mike Stobbe
Associated Press writer

ATLANTA — More than 22 million doses of swine flu vaccine are available now, and most Americans should soon find it easier to get their dose, U.S. health officials said Tuesday.

"We're beginning to get to significant increases in the availability," said Dr. Thomas Frieden, director of the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, at a briefing.

Last week there were just 14 million doses on hand, despite initial predictions that as many as 120 million would be ready by mid-October. The government later slashed that estimate to 45 million. The slow supply trickle has frustrated Americans, who have stood in line for hours in some parts of the country.

The shortage has probably increased demand, Frieden said.

"It's quite likely that too little vaccine is one of the things that's making people more interested in getting

ON THE WEB:

CDC swine flu update:
www.cdc.gov/h1n1flu/update.htm

vaccinated, frankly. When we have shortages, we see an increase in demand," he said.

The vaccine is grown in eggs in a reliable but slow process, and smaller amounts of it were being produced per egg than expected. There were other snags, too, but health officials say manufacturers have overcome most of those and are making the vaccine more speedily.

Over time, the government expects to have as many as 225 million doses of the new vaccine if needed.

CDC officials estimate that the swine flu virus, first identified in April, has killed at least 1,000 Americans and caused at least mild illness in many millions of others.

The pandemic started in a frightening burst of cases in certain parts of the country, including New York, Boston and parts of the Southwest. Illnesses diminished somewhat in the summer and then began increasing across the country as schools reopened roughly two months ago.

Swine flu cases are waning in Georgia and some parts of the country lately, but still increasing in others. Health officials say it's hard to predict what will happen in the next few months.

Jackson delivers on 'This Is It,' early fans say

LOS ANGELES (AP) — "Michael Jackson's This Is It" has debuted to enthusiastic applause from fans attending the premiere of the film chronicling the concerts that might have been.

"This Is It" played like a concert at Tuesday evening's Los Angeles premiere, the celebrity audience applauding after each number.

The film shows Jackson confidently keeping pace with dancers half his age, doing his moonwalk and other signature moves on such hits as "Thriller," "Billie Jean" and "Beat It."

Director and longtime Jackson collaborator Kenny Ortega introduced the film to the Nokia Theatre audience, calling it the "last sacred documentation of our leader and our friend."

Showings of "This Is It" began simultaneously in 99 territories around the world Tuesday and Wednesday.

Obama putting $3.4B toward a 'smart' power grid

By Charles Babington Associated Press writer

ARCADIA, Fla. — President Obama made a pitch for renewable energy Tuesday, announcing $3.4 billion in government support for 100 projects aimed at modernizing the nation's power grid.

Touring a field of solar energy panels in west-central Florida, the president urged greater use of several technologies to make America's power transmission system more efficient and better suited to the digital age. The projects include installing "smart" electric meters in homes, automating utility substations, and installing thousands of new digital transformers and grid sensors.

"There's something big happening in America in terms of creating a clean-energy economy," Obama said, although he added there is much more to be done.

He likened the effort to the ambitious development of the national highway system 50 years ago. He said modernization would lead to a "smarter, stronger and more secure electric grid."

Under muggy skies, Obama toured the DeSoto Next Generation Solar Energy Center, which is designed to generate enough energy for about 3,000 residential customers of the utility FPL. It is the nation's largest photovoltaic electricity facility.

Obama said a modern grid could give consumers better control over their electricity usage and costs, and spur development of renewable energy sources such as wind and solar.

The $3.4 billion in grants from the government's January economic stimulus program will be matched by $4.7 billion in private investments. The smallest grant will be $400,000 and the largest $200 million.

"We have a very antiquated (electric grid) system in our country," Carol Browner, assistant to the president for energy and climate change, told reporters. "The current system is outdated, it's dilapidated."

Matt Rogers, the Energy Department official involved in the program, said the 100 projects were selected from 400 proposed. The money will be distributed over the next two months and the work is expected to be done over the next one to three years, he said.

Even as Obama pitched more efficient and renewable energy use, his trip to Arcadia made it clear that old habits and dependencies die hard. He arrived in a motorcade of gas-guzzling SUVs. While waiting for the Idaho Power, Avista to get energy grants

BOISE (AP) — Idaho Power Co. and Avista Corp. are in line to get millions in federal dollars to modernize transmission lines, make the power grid more efficient and create new jobs to do it.

The Obama administration is making about $3.4 billion available in government support for 100 projects nationwide aimed at modernizing the power grid. Officials say a more modern grid is critical to goals of giving consumers better control over electricity usage and costs. Officials say Idaho Power will get $47 million to upgrade transmission lines and its distribution network and integrate so-called "smart meter" technology for customers.

Avista is getting $20 million for similar projects.

U.S. Rep. Walt Minnick, D-Idaho, says the investments will help improve the utility infrastructure and prepare Idaho to be a leader in the new energy economy.

air conditioning for occupants escaping a hot Florida sun.

Alarming weight gain seen in kids on psychiatric drugs

CHICAGO (AP) — Children on widely used psychiatric drugs can quickly gain an alarming amount of weight; many pack on nearly 20 pounds and become obese within just 11 weeks, a study found.

"Sometimes this stuff just happens like an explosion. You can actually see them grow between appointments," said Dr. Christopher Varley, a psychiatrist with Seattle Children's Hospital who called the study "sobering."

Weight gain is a known possible side effect of the anti-psychotic drugs which are prescribed for bipolar disorder and schizophrenia, but also increasingly for autism, attention deficit disorders and other behavior problems.

Tasting Tour

Sample the vintages at region's seven wineries

THE TOUR

1. Cold Springs Winery
2. Carmela Vineyards
3. Thousand Springs Winery
4. Snyder Winery
5. Holesinsky Organic Vineyard and Winery
6. Hegy's South Hills Vineyard and Winery
7. Frenchman's Gulch

He's sampled wines in France and regularly tours Washington's Yakima Valley wineries.

He takes visiting friends to tasting rooms in Glenns Ferry and Caldwell.

But Robert Myrland didn't know a couple of the wineries closest to his Twin Falls home even existed. And he's the kind of guy who wants to know.

"This is on par with anything I've seen in the Yakima Valley," Myrland said, sampling wines with five friends at Buhl's Snyder Winery on Friday night.

There might be other foodies caught off guard by south-central Idaho's winery expansion in the past five years.

"Idaho makes fabulous wines, and yet there is no history," said Dr. Paul Monahan, owner of Hagerman's Thousand Springs Winery. So people go back to the wines they know — from other states.

The remedy? Tasting, Monahan said.

All seven of south-central Idaho's wineries have tasting rooms open to anyone. So make it an all-day adventure: Choose a few wineries and a driver. Leave time to wander the vines or chat with the vintners. Ask for the stories behind the wineries' quirky labels. And come home with new wines to love.

So far, it's a pleasure attracting more Treasure Valley residents than locals.

"I get a lot of Boise people, and some Sun Valley," Buhl winery co-owner Claudia Snyder said. She sees a small but increasing number of Magic Valley folks taking tasting tours.

At Hammett's Cold Springs Winery, too, visitors out for a "three-winery day" are more likely to come from Boise than from Twin Falls, co-owner Bill Ringert said. At Carmela Vineyards in Glenns Ferry, taste touring is mostly by out-of-state travelers, bar manager Domonique Sykes said.

That could change.

Early this year, Buhl winemaker James Holesinsky was a tad dejected: "Unfortunately, we almost have to beg people to come for wine tastings," he said then.

But his 2008 rose took double gold at the Idaho Wine Festival and Competition this spring. That got attention, he said. This summer, about 10 people came for tasting each weekend.

"Now people are intrigued," Holesinsky said Friday, pointing to wine racks that needed restocking.

THE WINERIES

(in no particular order, continued on Food 4-5)

Stories by Virginia Hutchins • Photos by Ashley Smith

Claudia Snyder pours one of her winery's seven wines.

SNYDER WINERY

When to go: Winter tasting hours are 1 p.m. to restaurant closing (9:30 p.m. or later) on Fridays and Saturdays, and 1 to 5 p.m. on Sundays. Or by appointment, 543-6938. Regular hours expand in early May.

You'll need appointments for wine-making tours and reservations for the restaurant at Snyder Winery, formerly called Blue Rock, but you can just drop in for a tasting during restaurant hours. The tasting room and grounds are spacious; bring as many friends as you want.

Find it: You'll find this unexpected little gem at 4060 N. 1200 E., in farm country west of Buhl. Restaurant tables on a window-enclosed deck surround a sophisticated tasting room. It's outfitted with leather barrel chairs grouped around a piano and fireplace, on a rug-warmed floor of glowing wood. Definitely a place to linger.

What you'll pay: It's $5 for three tastes of about an ounce each.

In your glass: Snyder Winery has seven wines to choose from, all made on site from its own or other Idaho grapes: riesling, chardonnay, white syrah, merlot, cabernet sauvignon, syrah and a Big Wood River Red blend of syrah, cabernet sauvignon and cabernet franc. Claudia Snyder is co-owner and co-winemaker with her husband; she or a restaurant server will handle the wine talk.

Pretzels and crackers are free, or you can order an hors d'oeuvre platter from the restaurant.

The experience: Start your visit during daylight, because this winery's grounds are gorgeous. Think ponds, fountains, bridges, benches, lamps, lawns, streams, stone walkways, pretty pots, lavish flower beds, a rose garden. The newest addition is a pavilion sheltering patio tables.

James Holesinsky in his tasting room at Holesinsky Organic Vineyard and Winery north of Buhl.

HOLESINSKY ORGANIC VINEYARD AND WINERY

When to go: Tastings are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays year-round, and by appointment; 543-6940 or 420-9887, holesinsky.com. Holesinsky's tasting room can accommodate about 10 people.

Find it: To reach 4477-A Valley Steppe Drive, north of Buhl, watch for the vineyard's big sign on Clear Lakes Road.

You'll find a low but welcoming building of stucco and brick studded with barrel ends. Inside is a sleek tasting room designed and lighted like a tiny art gallery. You'll stand at a bar of stained concrete. Outside, a weeping willow towers over a new wooden deck, a fountain plays in a pond, and a stream intersects the rolling, boulder-strewn lawn.

What you'll pay: A $10 tasting fee includes mementos, cheese and crackers; you keep the wine glass. Or for $20, get a tasting in which hors d'oeuvres are paired with individual wines.

In your glass: You'll taste eight wines — syrah, merlot, riesling, chardonnay, rose, port, a red blend and an ice wine — and talk with owner and winemaker James Holesinsky. This year, he's making a sparkling muscat that he calls Idaho's first, and four different syrahs. "This area has really high potential for syrah," he said.

The experience: Make your visit by early November, and you can watch the end of harvest and crush. If you miss that, you can still tour a newly built underground wine cellar and wander the canyon-rim site with its year-round waterfalls.

Holesinsky is taking reservations for private wine classes, in which wines are paired with hors d'oeuvres; for a Nov. 7 catered harvest party; and for monthly winemaker's dinners with guest chefs.

Snyder Winery, formerly called Blue Rock, is west of Buhl. A fireplace and piano in the tasting room add to the ambiance.

Snyder Winery's restaurant seating surrounds the tasting room and offers a fantastic view of the valley.

The Holesinsky winery's grounds and facilities have been developing quickly in the past few years.

Hot and comforting dinner in 40 minutes

By Bonnie S. Benwick
The Washington Post

When football games fill the weekend TV schedule and grocery checkout lanes are clogged with orders of beer and chips, it feels good to make a pot of chili.

This one's relatively quick and employs the technique of flavoring and cooking the meat separately, then adding it as a substantial topping, as it were.

Serve with baked flour tortilla triangles or warm corn bread and a dark, full-bodied, malty beer, such as a doppelbock from Troegs Brewing Co. in Harrisburg, Pa.

Adapted from "The Everything Soup, Stew & Chili Cookbook," by Belinda Hulin (Adams Media, 2009).

SIRLOIN AND BLACK BEAN CHILI

4 servings

1 1/2 pounds sirloin steak (can be in 2 or 3 pieces)

4 to 6 teaspoons chili powder

1 teaspoon ground cumin

1 teaspoon kosher salt

1 tablespoon unsalted butter

1 medium sweet onion

1 medium green bell pepper

2 medium cloves garlic

1 small jalapeno pepper

5 or 6 ripe tomatoes

3 1/2 to 4 cups canned black beans (from two 15-ounce cans), preferably Eden brand

1 tablespoon olive oil

1/2 cup water

Leaves from 6 to 8 stems cilantro

Trim off and discard any excess fat from the steak.

Combine 1 teaspoon of the chili powder, 1/2 teaspoon of the cumin and 1/2 teaspoon of the salt in a small bowl; rub the mixture into both sides of the steak.

Melt the butter in a large skillet over high heat (and turn on your exhaust fan). Sear the steak for 2 minutes on each side, then reduce the heat to medium and cook for 6 to 8 minutes. Transfer to a plate.

Meanwhile, cut the onion and bell pepper into small dice. Mince the garlic and jalapeno pepper, discarding the jalapeno stem and seeds. Cut the tomatoes into 1/2- to 3/4-inch pieces; seed, if desired. Drain and rinse the black beans.

Add the oil to the same skillet that was used to cook the steak; heat over high heat. Add the diced onion, garlic and peppers; cook for 3 minutes, stirring constantly, then add the tomatoes and cook for 5 minutes, stirring occasionally, until they begin to release their juices. Add the water and return to a boil, then reduce the heat to medium and add the remaining 3 to 5 teaspoons of chili powder (to taste), the remaining 1/2 teaspoon of cumin and the drained beans; mix well.

While the chili is cooking, coarsely chop the cilantro.

Cook the chili for 15 to 17 minutes, until it has darkened and the vegetables have softened. Then place the large pieces of cooked steak in the chili (to warm the meat through). Cook undisturbed for 3 minutes, then turn off the heat. Transfer the steak to a cutting board. Cut into thin slices.

Add the cilantro to the chili; taste, and adjust the seasoning as needed, adding the remaining salt if desired. Divide among individual bowls; fan slices of steak over each portion. Serve hot.

A new fruit for a pork pairing

By Bonnie S. Benwick
The Washington Post

Pork is often paired with apples in the fall, but I like what plums and a bit of vinegar can do for simply prepared pork chops.

Serve with spaetzle, egg noodles, rice salad or green beans. Wine columnist Dave McIntyre suggests pouring a full-bodied Riesling such as Poet's Leap or Eroica from Washington state, Dr. Konstantin from New York or Anton Bauer 2008 from Austria.

PORK AND PLUMS

4 servings

1 tablespoon canola oil

3 or 4 (1 1/2 pounds) boneless center-cut pork chops (trimmed of excess fat), 1 1/4 to 1 1/2 inches thick

Kosher salt

Freshly ground black pepper

4 medium shallots

6 firm black plums (about 1 3/4 pounds)

1/3 cup apple cider vinegar or sauvignon blanc vinegar

1 or 2 tablespoons turbinado sugar (may substitute raw sugar or 1 tablespoon light brown sugar)

Leaves from 2 sprigs thyme

Water (optional)

Leaves from 2 stems flat-leaf parsley, for garnish (optional)

Line a medium roasting pan with aluminum foil. Preheat the oven to 375 degrees.

Heat a large skillet over medium-high heat. Add the oil and swirl to coat the bottom of the skillet.

Use paper towels to pat the chops dry, then lightly season both sides with salt and pepper. Add to the skillet and cook for 5 minutes or until lightly browned on the bottom, then turn them over and cook for 1 or 2 minutes. Use tongs to transfer the chops to the roasting pan in the oven; keep the skillet over medium-high heat. It should take about 20 minutes for the chops to finish cooking in the oven; their internal temperature should register 150 to 155 degrees on an instant-read thermometer. Transfer to a cutting board.

While the chops are in the oven, peel and cut the shallots into very thin slices. Rinse and cut the plums in half; pit them, then cut the halves into 1/4-inch slices.

Add the shallots to the skillet and reduce the heat to medium; cook for 3 minutes, stirring occasionally, then add the plums. Cook for 10 to 12 minutes, stirring occasionally, until they have softened and taken on a rosy color. Add the vinegar and the sugar to taste, stirring to incorporate until the sugar has dissolved. Taste and season lightly with salt and pepper. Turn off the heat; mince the thyme leaves, add to the fruit and stir to combine.

At this point, the fruit can be pureed using an immersion (stick) blender or a little water can be added to make the fruit saucier.

Cut the pork chops into 1/2-inch slices and divide equally among individual plates. Spoon equal amounts of the plums next to the meat. Mince the parsley and garnish each serving, if desired. Serve warm.

Per serving: 435 calories, 34 g protein, 31 g carbohydrates, 20 g fat, 6 g saturated fat, 88 mg cholesterol, 713 mg sodium, 3 g dietary fiber, 23 g sugar.

Why a coupon's fine print may be your new best friend

Last week we discussed how to handle confused cashiers who may try to incorrectly limit our coupon usage. The key to eliminating most cashier confusion is to familiarize yourself with the store's coupon policy. And while it's true that most cashiers are familiar with what kinds of coupons the store will accept, there are also times when a cashier may mistakenly inform you that the store cannot take your coupons.

COUPON QUEEN
Jill Cataldo

In my coupon classes, I've taught more than 6,000 people, so I've heard more than my share of stories of cashier confusion. One common theme has to do with interpreting the fine print.

If you pick up any manufacturer coupon, either from the newspaper or the Internet, chances are it contains the wording "Limit one coupon per purchase." These five little words can often be the source of confusion.

To understand why, consider this distinction: Each item we buy is a purchase. Each group of items that we take to the checkout lane and pay for at the same time is a transaction. So, "one coupon per purchase" effectively means "one coupon per item purchased." (In fact, many coupons now contain this updated wording.)

So, if I purchase 15 items, I can use 15 coupons — one for each item I'm buying (and I often do!). But cashier confusion frequently arises when a shopper uses several like coupons to buy several like items.

For example, if I'm buying two bottles of juice and I have two $1 juice coupons, occasionally a cashier may say, "I don't think you can use both of these coupons, because they're one per purchase." The easiest response? With a smile, ask, "How many bottles am I purchasing?" If you're purchasing two, you can use a coupon on each.

Coupons that state "Limit one coupon per transaction" are typically store-issued coupons. This wording is commonly seen on coupons like "$5 off a $50 purchase" or a store's coupon for a deeply discounted item. The store may be offering you a coupon for a special loss leader, like a dozen eggs for 49 cents, but it only wants to allow you to purchase one of that item per transaction.

Soured yogurt relationship prompts lawsuits

By Holly Ramer
Associated Press writer

CONCORD, N.H. — As a growing number of manufacturers compete to meet consumer demand for thick, tangy Greek-style yogurt, it's not only the yogurt that's getting strained.

For most of the last decade, a Greek dairy company dominated the U.S. market for the yogurt, which is produced by straining out the liquid whey from conventional yogurt. But as the product caught on, competitors cropped up, including New Hampshire-based Stonyfield Farm, the country's largest organic yogurt company.

Now that competition is playing out in federal court. It's hardly the stuff of Greek tragedy, but as one judge put it: "This case involves a dispute among yogurt manufacturers over a relationship gone sour."

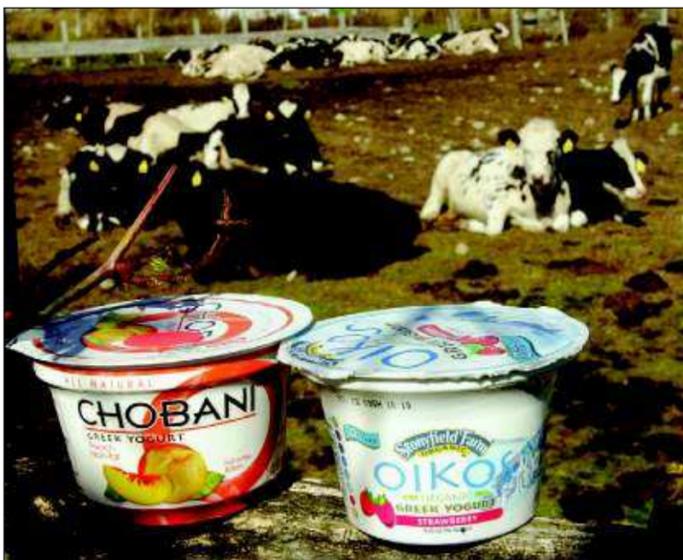

When Stonyfield launched its Greek-style yogurt, "Oikos," in 2007, the market was mostly cornered by the Greek company Fage.

So Stonyfield teamed up with Agro-Farma Inc., whose Turkish-born owner, Hamdi Ulukaya, already owned a feta cheese company and was looking into producing Greek-style yogurt.

But in late 2008, Oikos disappeared from grocery store shelves for a month. On its Web site, Stonyfield blamed a glitch as it increased production.

Court documents tell another story. Stonyfield claims Agro-Farma delivered a bad batch of yogurt, then illegally terminated their relationship. In a countersuit, Agro-Farma, which now produces its own Greek-style yogurt called Chobani, claims Stonyfield stole its yogurt-making secrets and handed them to another manufacturer.

The fierce competition is no surprise given yogurt's status as "the food of the decade," said Harry Balzar, vice president of consumer research firm NPD Group. The number of Americans who eat yogurt regularly has increased 75 percent during the last decade, he said.

"For the last 10 years, nothing has increased as much as yogurt," he said. "It's a category that's growing at breakfast, lunch, supper. It's a main dish, it's a side dish, it's a dessert. When we look back on this period in history 200 years from now, an archaeologist finds a little cup of yogurt, they may not know it, but they've stumbled upon what probably is the most identifiable trend associated with eating in America today."

"Smarter" yogurts — those touting probiotic properties and active live cultures — paved the way for the popularity of Greek-style yogurt, said Phil Lempert, a grocery industry analyst and editor of the Supermarket Guru Web

Competing Greek yogurts, Agro-Farma's Chobani, left, and Stonyfield Farm's Oikos, are set up at a dairy farm in Washington, N.H. The two companies are snarled in dueling lawsuits.

"We're finally as consumers understanding the benefits of yogurt," he said. "Now people are starting to say, 'Oh! Yogurt isn't supposed to taste like sugar or artificial sweeteners. It's supposed to taste like yogurt.' And once they've taken that step, it's a small step to go to Greek yogurt."

Susan Donnelly, 35, of Boston, has been a fan of Fage's Greek-style yogurt for about two years and eats it several times a week.

"I used to eat Stonyfield french Vanilla all the time, but when I tried the Greek I started to eat it more," she said. "I like that it's high protein. I like the texture of it better than other yogurts. It's thicker, creamier."

The lawsuit is scheduled for trial in August.

Taking the measure of Old Bay Seasoning

By Jane Black
The Washington Post

What would you do if you suddenly found yourself without a can of Old Bay? There are people out there who worry about this.

"Unless you like to get strip-searched, it is best to have your Old Bay can in your checked baggage," warns Deborah Fedorchak Liberatore, who, for the record, has never been strip-searched for carrying Old Bay. "Pack a small stash in your carry-on baggage, just in case your luggage gets lost."

Liberatore, 57, of Floyd, Va., has other helpful hints, too, most of which she has posted to Old Bay's Facebook fan page. Some are practical: Old Bay is for more than just crabs. Try it in salsa, on fried green tomatoes or in a stir-fry. Others are less so: Did you know you can dress up your Old Bay can? Liberatore has posted pictures of Mr. Old Bay Head, with two lemons for his eyes and a tomato nose and a lemon peel mouth; the Old Bay bride, with a doily veil, and the Parisian Old Bay, with a tiny beret fixed at a jaunty angle.

Along with Liberatore, the seafood spice has amassed 44,785 fans on Facebook, and counting. Michael Harms, a 34-year-old Baltimore transplant to San Francisco, has a 4-by-6-inch tattoo of the Old Bay can on his calf. Charlie Phillips composed an ode to the spice sung to the tune of "On Top of Old Smokey." Probably only bacon inspires fiercer loyalty. And bacon, it has been noted, tastes pretty good sprinkled with a little Old Bay.

Only a select group of foods can claim the cult status of Old Bay. As the spice celebrates its 70th anniversary, the retro-, primary-colored can is a visual icon as familiar to many as Campbell Soup. The seasoning, once used for crabs and shrimp in the Chesapeake Bay, is now available in all 50 states and used on french fries, pizza and popcorn and more.

Old Bay Seasoning was the invention of Gustav Brunn, a German Jew who emigrated to Baltimore in 1938. An experienced spice merchant, Brunn soon landed a job at McCormick & Co., which wanted him to develop blends for meat-packers who were making products including sausages and hot dogs. It was a short gig: Two days after being hired, he was let go because he was Jewish, says his son Ralph, now 84. (McCormick spokeswoman Laurie Harrsen says the company has no records of Brunn's firing and points to its "longstanding commitment to diversity.")

If it weren't for the firing,

WHEN THE SPICE IS RIGHT

Here are some of the many ways Old Bay Seasoning has inspired culinary creativity:

SPRINKLE IT ON

- popcorn
- french fries
- corn on the cob
- scrambled eggs
- the cheese in a grilled cheese sandwich
- deviled eggs

BAKE IT/TOAST IT ON

- pumpkin seeds
- pita chips
- chicken wings

ADD IT TO

- fresh salsa (sweet onion, white wine vinegar, peaches, yellow tomatoes and a pinch of Old Bay)
- chicken, egg or potato salad
- fried-chicken seasoning
- marinade for chicken or shrimp

- bloody mary mix (combine vodka, tomato juice, Old Bay and a squeeze of lemon)
- butter for grilled tuna steaks or chicken (blend 1/2 teaspoon Old Bay into 2 tablespoons of softened unsalted butter)
- vegetarian "crab cakes" (combine grated/drained zucchini, egg, flour and a pinch of Old Bay)
- ground beef for hamburgers
- mayonnaise (for a spread or dip)
- pasta salad (saute shrimp in garlic, olive oil and Old Bay; add to cooked bowties)
- sweet potato soup
- Baltimore Coleslaw
- Crab Pretzel

Sources: Twitter: Old Bay.com; Rachel Rappaport; recipes at Coconutlime.blogspot.com

Old Bay might never have come into being. In September 1939, Brunn rented a second-floor office and opened the Baltimore Spice Co. across from the city's wholesale fish market. Seafood merchants would come in and buy a few pounds of black pepper, red pepper and celery seed, Ralph remembers: "He was curious what concoctions they were making. With his background and experience, he thought maybe he could improve on it."

Brunn's blend was originally named Delicious Brand Shrimp and Crab Seasoning. After the war, he renamed it Old Bay, the nickname of the Baltimore Steam Packet Co., which ran ships from Baltimore to Norfolk.

The predominant ingredients were no secret: red and black pepper, salt, celery seed and dry mustard. But Gustav added minor quantities of more than half a dozen other spices, including ginger, laurel and bay leaf, so that his blend would be difficult to replicate. "They had no relation to the main flavors," said Ralph Brunn. "But they combined and created a background that rounded out the flavor. He didn't anticipate that."

Old Bay gained a following, but it was purely a local one. Baltimore Spice made most of its money devising custom blends for meat and snack companies; one of Brunn's customers was Planters dry-roasted peanuts. When Brunn sold the company in 1985, Old Bay made up just 2 to 3 percent of sales. The company changed hands several times. In 1990, Old Bay ended up, ironically, in the hands of McCormick, and, more specifically, 31-year-old New York salesman Steve Giegerich.

Nineteen years later, Giegerich is still what he calls "the Pied Piper for brand." During baseball season, you'll find him at Orioles games dressed in an Old Bay hat and T-shirt, handing out samples. "You have to put it in their mouths. No matter how good your product is, unless they taste it, you're never going to convince them to eat it."

Giegerich put Old Bay in the mouths of customers around the country. He gave free samples to seafood sellers at grocery stores. He packaged them in with the Sunday newspaper supplement. He insisted that Old Bay was for more than just crabs. "They don't have crabs everywhere," he said. "So we repositioned it for shrimp, corn on the cob and french fries."

Today, McCormick sells 50 million ounces of Old Bay annually, up 30 percent over the last decade. The company has also added nearly a dozen new products to the Old Bay line including low-sodium Old Bay, Old Bay with garlic and herbs, Old Bay with lemon and herbs and Old Bay Rub.

Carmela Vineyards in Glenns Ferry offers 18 wines in its tasting room.

The lovely Carmela Vineyards is a popular place for weddings, but its wine tasting room has a commercial feeling.

CARMELA VINEYARDS

When to go: Tastings are seven days a week, year-round: 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Mondays through Saturdays, and 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. Sundays. Large groups are fine here.

Find it: 1289 W. Madison St. in Glenns Ferry; 366-2313, carmelavineyards.com. You'll stand at the front counter inside a gift shop selling grape-themed T-shirts, candles in wine glasses, Oregon Trail memorabilia and the like.

What you'll pay: Five tastes of about an ounce each will cost $5 if you don't buy a bottle of wine, but they're free if you do.

In your glass: Most of Carmela's wines are reds, but it lists some sweets and whites, too. Carmela makes all of its wines from Idaho grapes — its own and grapes from small southern Idaho vineyards. The newest release is a merlot-brandy-and-vanilla port dubbed Passport. You'll choose five wines from the list of 18 — probably three reds, a white and sweet — and get crackers with your wine.

An employee will handle the wine talk. "All of our people are usually real knowledgeable about the wines," front desk hostess Connie Crawshaw said.

The experience: Behind the tree-lined entrance you'll find the most developed and tourist-friendly of south-central Idaho's wineries — and the least personal.

It's a wedding-worthy setting: Landscaped grounds and thirty acres of vineyards (labeled by variety) surround the winery on a slope overlooking the Snake River. A stone chateau houses a restaurant, bar and gift shop, with golf, cabins and an RV park also on the grounds.

If you want to tour the wine-making cellars, come between noon and 5 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays, or make an appointment.

COLD SPRINGS WINERY

When to go: The tasting room is open year-round from noon to 5 p.m. on Saturdays and Sundays, and at other times by appointment; 366-7993. Eight or 10 tasters is all Cold Springs can handle well without special arrangements, co-owner Bill Ringert said; "It's hard to talk to 15 people at the same time."

Ringert and his wife live on site, and winemaker Jamie Martin and the vineyard manager are often there, so you have a good chance of catching them for a tasting without an appointment.

Find it: Take exit 112 from Interstate 84 to reach 7853 W. Ringert Lane in Hammett; coldspringswinery.com. After a greeting by friendly dogs, you'll stand at the tasting room's granite-topped counter, surrounded by photographs of southern Idaho geology.

The room is pretty, but more like an office than anything else; on a warm day, you might opt for the sunflower-lined patio instead. The desert setting has Snake River Canyon rim rock on all sides, and with expanses of sagebrush next to the 33 acres of vines.

What you'll pay: Tastings are free, except for groups of 30 people or more.

In your glass: Cold Springs' reds are merlot, syrah, pinot noir and cabernet sauvignon; tempranillo grapes are planted but not in production yet.

You can find Cold Springs Winery just off Interstate 84 near Hammett. Owners Bill Ringert, left, and his wife, Bing, talk with winemaker Jamie Martin in the tasting room.

Whites are chardonnay, riesling, viognier and pinot gris. Most popular at the moment is the Hot Rod Red blend of merlot, syrah and cabernet franc. You can taste at least five varieties, occasionally with crackers.

"During the middle of the week, it's limited to what we have open," Ringert said. "On Saturday and Sunday, we always anticipate that several groups will come through, so we pretty much pour tastings of the entire spread."

The experience: Take the 30-second walk from the tasting room into the winery operation, to hear an explanation of the wine-making process. Here it's on a larger scale — and with more impressive equipment — than at many of south-central Idaho's other wineries.

Cold Springs constructed a huge new wine cellar last winter; landscaping around it is yet to come.

FRENCHMAN'S GULCH

When to go: Tastings are 3 to 6 p.m. Wednesdays to Saturdays, or by appointment. In November, however, those hours might shrink to just Saturdays.

After Sun Valley's summer tourist rush and before the height of ski season, the tasting room has been staffed for days on end when nobody showed up.

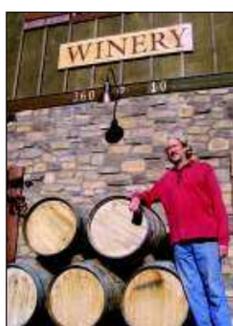

"We sit here and we sit here and we sit here, and nobody comes," said Steve "Mac" McCarthy, winemaker and owner. "We keep being optimistic, but it's a very tough issue."

So it's best to call first (726-0118) on Wednesdays through Fridays in November; frenchmansgulch.com.

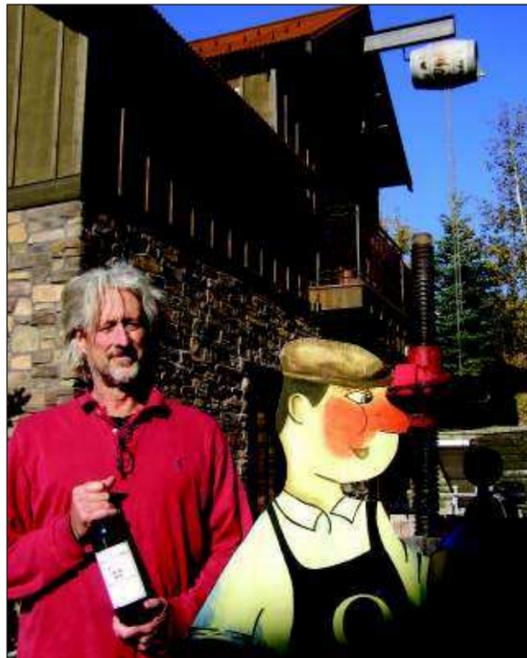

Find it: 360 Ninth St. E., No. 10, in Ketchum; look for the cask hanging from the roof. Inside the charming two-story tasting house — which can handle up to 24 people — you can sit at a table or couch "or stand at the counter and listen to the rap," McCarthy said.

What you'll pay: Tasting is free, because 99 percent of tasters buy bottles. "If that changes, we're going to have to start charging," McCarthy said.

In your glass: Frenchman's Gulch will pour four or five wines; it has an unoaked chardonnay, a merlot, a cabernet sauvignon, a syrah and a red blend, and sometimes a rose. McCarthy or his knowledgeable assistant winemaker will

When to go: Tastings are by appointment, year-round; 837-4557, thousandsspringswinery.com.

Find it: 18854 U.S. Highway 30 (that's halfway between mile markers 189 and 188) near Hagerman. You'll find the big tasting room and its distinctive spruce-wood bar inside the winery, amid two riverside acres of vines nourished by drip irrigation and fish emulsion fertilizer.

Once home to Black Angus, the winery is a converted barn, and its cooling unit is a former chicken coop. Now heavy timbers frame the entrance, and the tasting room is outfitted with antique doors, cabinets of local wood, classy metal fixtures, panels of art glass and rugs on a rough floor of stained concrete. The result is a destination that would be at home in anybody's wine country.

What you'll pay: Tastings are free for now.

In your glass: Thousand Springs has four varietals hand bottled and corked on site, from its own hand-picked grapes and other local grapes: rose, chardonnay, syrah and merlot. Taste as many as you want. Almost always, visitors talk to Dr. Paul Monahan, owner and winemaker. No food here.

The experience: "If they're interested, we do a little tour of the winery and show them how everything works," Monahan said. Watch for Hungarian oak barrels, a pretty paver patio near a cattail-lined koi pond, an orchard, and a backdrop of Snake River Canyon rock.

Dr. Paul Monahan, Thousand Springs Winery owner and winemaker.

Thousand Springs Winery is in a former barn on Dr. Paul Monahan's property near Hagerman. Now a sophisticated tasting room, this spot used to house cattle. Thousand Springs Winery produces four wines from its own vines and from grapes bought from other local farmers.

HEGY'S SOUTH HILLS VINEYARD AND WINERY

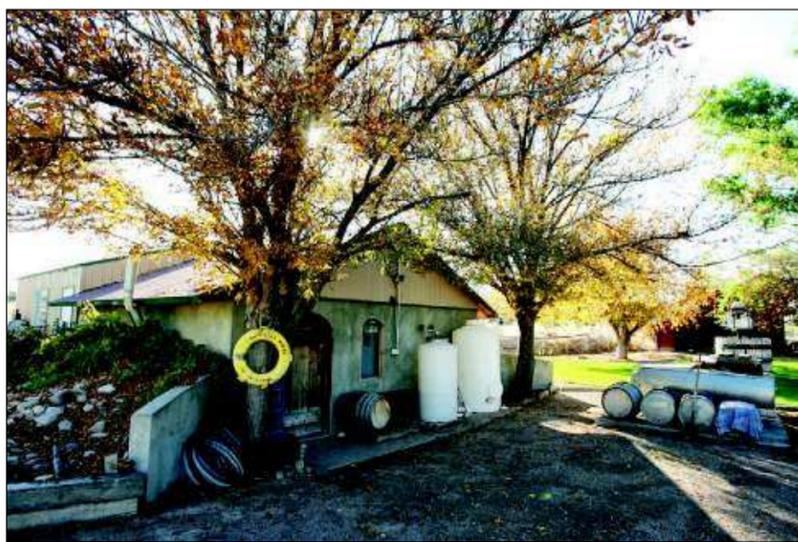

When to go: Put this one on your list for spring. Hegy's offers tastings by appointment until the end of October, then closes for the winter and reopens for tastings in early March. Call 599-0074.

Find it: 3099 E. 3400 N. in Twin Falls; that's exactly four miles south of Kimberly Road on Eastland Drive, on the southwest corner. Among farm fields.

The backyard concrete winery has a small bar for tastings, and a pair of upholstered chairs. It's a friendly room — a little like your buddy's garage — and far from pretentious. You might find it cluttered with "cheap wine" kitsch and piles of cases. Don't bring along too many friends on cold days; there's room for about 10 inside the building at once.

What you'll pay: Tasting is free.

In your glass: For retail sale, Hegy's specializes in riesling, so there's just one wine to taste. And there's no food involved. But you'll get personal attention from Frank Hegy, the owner and winemaker.

The Hegy's winery specializes in riesling.

The experience: The 20-year-old operation is small but you can see it all, including the century-old, 2-ton Italian basket press. Hegy and his helpers do everything from an acre of vine cultivation — that's supplemented by purchased grapes and juice — through labeling, bottling and corking on site.

Clara E. Sullivan

Clara E. Sullivan, 85, of Twin Falls, left this earth to be with God on Saturday evening, Oct. 24, 2009, at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls.

Clara was born Dec. 21, 1923, in Pawtucket, R.I., the daughter of Charles and Beatrice Frelove Wallace. She grew up in Pawtucket and graduated from high school in her home town. Clara worked for the Coats and Clark Lace Mill in Pawtucket for many years until the mill closed in the 1950s. On Aug. 5, 1941, Clara married William "Bill" Sullivan in Rehoboth, Mass. They moved to Manhattan Beach, Calif., where they both worked for McDonnell Douglas Aircraft for many years.

Clara hired on as a chip girl at the Normandy Club in Gardena, Calif., progressing to the position of floor manager for the employer. She retired after 37 years with them and, in 2006, they moved from California to Idaho to be closer to family.

Clara enjoyed playing bingo with her two sisters, Alice and Betty, where you could always spot "the girls" as they often wore matching outfits which she loved shopping for. Her love was her family and spending time with them. Clara and Bill were devoted members of St. Edward the Confessor

Catholic Church.

Clara is survived by her husband, William "Bill" Sullivan of Twin Falls; three children, Bobbie Sullivan of Boise; Bill (Susan) of Bandon, Ore., and Debbie (Tim) Mikesell of Twin Falls; as well as her twin sister, Alice Thibaudeau of Redondo Beach, Calif. She is also survived by her nine grandchildren, 12 great-grandchildren and four great-great-grandchildren. She was preceded in death by her daughter, Donna Sullivan; two brothers, Raymond Wallace and Russell Wallace; and two sisters, Barbara Lubera and Betty Conger.

A celebration of Clara's life will be held as a memorial Mass at 11 a.m. Friday, Oct. 30, at St. Edward the Confessor Catholic Church, with Father Camillo Garcia officiating. At her request, there will be no public viewing.

In Clara's honor and memory, give of yourself in service to those in need.

Services are under the direction of Reynolds Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls.

Afghan National Army soldiers prepare to go on patrol Tuesday in the Pech Valley in Afghanistan's Kunar province.

October deadliest month for U.S. in Afghan war

By Todd Pittman and Heidi Vogt
Associated Press writers

KABUL — Roadside bombs — the biggest killer of U.S. soldiers — claimed eight more American lives Tuesday, driving the U.S. death toll to a record level for the third time in four months as President Barack Obama nears a decision on a new strategy for the troubled war.

The homemade bombs, also called improvised explosive devices or IEDs, are responsible for between 70 percent and 80 percent of the casualties among U.S. and coalition forces in Afghanistan and have become a weapon of "strategic influence," said Lt. Gen. Thomas Metz in Washington.

The attacks Tuesday followed one of the deadliest days for the U.S. military operation in Afghanistan — grim milestones likely to fuel the debate in the United States over whether the conflict is worth the sacrifice.

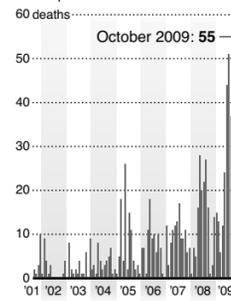

Obama has nearly finished gathering information on whether to send tens of thousands more American forces to quell the deepening insurgency, White House press secretary Robert Gibbs said. A meeting Friday with the Joint Chiefs of Staff will be among the last events in the decision-making process, Gibbs said.

Both attacks Tuesday took place in the southern province of Kandahar, said Capt. Adam Weece, a spokesman for American forces in the south. The region bordering the Pakistan frontier has long been an insurgent stronghold and was the birthplace of the Taliban in the 1990s.

Death toll mounts

At least 830 members of the U.S. military have died in and around Afghanistan since the war began more than eight years ago.

The Americans were patrolling in armored vehicles when a bomb ripped through one of them, killing seven service members and an Afghan civilian, U.S. forces spokesman Lt. Col. Todd Vician said.

The eighth American died in a separate bombing elsewhere in the south, also while patrolling in a military vehicle, Vician said.

The number of effective IED attacks in Afghanistan has grown from 19 in September 2007 to 106 last month.

"It's a weapon system that the enemy has figured out has strategic impact," said Metz, who leads the U.S. military organization tasked with defeating improvised explosive devices. "It really hampers our ability to execute a counterinsurgency doctrine."

Iran backs uranium plan outline, but seeks changes

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iran accepted the general framework of a draft U.N. nuclear deal Tuesday, but said it would seek "important changes" that could test the willingness of world powers to make concessions in exchange for a pact to rein in Tehran's ability to make atomic warheads.

It was unclear how far Iran would push for those changes. Already, Iran has raised a potential roadblock: It wants a step-by-step approach to send low-enriched uranium stockpile out of the country rather than the big single shipment called for under U.N. provisions.

Western powers say it's critical for Iran to send out at least 70 percent of its uranium store in one load to eliminate — at least temporarily — its options to make a nuclear weapon. A significantly lower amount or gradual shipments by Iran could jeopardize a key part of the proposal, which was reached after talks last week that included the United States.

For now, Iran has signaled that it agrees to the plan's basic premise: sending its low-enriched uranium to Russia for further processing. The announcement marked a major step for Iran, which has been reluctant to give up full control of the nuclear enrichment cycle.

As administration mulls strategy, troops already outnumber Taliban 12-1

By Slobodan Lekic
Associated Press writer

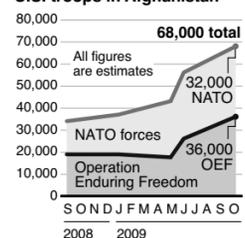

BRUSSELS — There are already more than 100,000 international troops in Afghanistan working with 200,000 Afghan security forces and police. It adds up to a 12-1 numerical advantage over Taliban rebels, but it hasn't led to anything close to victory.

Now, the top U.S. and NATO commander in Afghanistan is asking for tens of thousands more troops to stem the escalating insurgency, raising the question of how many more combat forces it would take to succeed.

The commander, Gen. Stanley McChrystal, says the extra forces are needed to implement a new strategy that focuses on protecting civilians and depriving the militants of popular support in a country where tribal militias may be Taliban today and farmers tomorrow.

The White House said Tuesday that President Barack Obama has nearly finished gathering information and advice on how to proceed in Afghanistan, where bombings killed eight more American troops. With October now the deadliest month for U.S. forces in the war, many experts question the need for more troops.

"The U.S. and its allies already have ample numbers and firepower to annihilate the Taliban, if only the Taliban would cooperate by standing still and allowing us to bomb them to smithereens," said Andrew Bacevich, a professor of international relations and history at Boston University, and one-time platoon leader in Vietnam.

"But the insurgents are conducting the war in ways that do not play to (allied) strengths."

The Taliban rebels are estimated to number no more than 25,000. Ljubomir

Stojadinovic, a military analyst and guerrilla warfare expert from Serbia, said that although McChrystal's reinforcements would lift the ratio to 20-1 or more, they would prove counterproductive.

"It's impossible to regain the initiative by introducing more foreign forces, which will only breed more resentment and more recruits for the enemy," he said. "The Soviets tried the exact same thing in Afghanistan in the 1980s with disastrous results."

McChrystal's defenders say the U.S. has learned from Soviets' mistakes. At his instruction, NATO troops are increasingly abandoning heavy-handed tactics.

"In the end this (conflict) cannot be solved by military means alone, and in that sense a precise figure of Taliban fighters is not the point," said NATO spokesman James Appathurai.

The U.S. says it's already adjusting its strategy to shift the focus from hunting down and killing Taliban fighters to protecting civilians — in some cases allowing insurgent units to remain untouched if they are not deemed an imminent threat.

Arthur William Hayes

RUPERT — Arthur William Hayes was born in Rupert, Idaho, on Sept. 10, 1924, to Ruby and Clarence Hayes. He died in Austin, Texas, on Monday, Oct. 26, 2009.

of 54 years, Mickie; one sister, Clara Kellog of Las Vegas, Nev.; son, Lance and wife, LeeAnn of Austin, Texas; grandchildren, Chelsea (Carson) Carothers of Pocatello and Eric and Sydney Hayes of Austin, Texas; and great-granddaughter, Averie Carothers of Pocatello. He is also survived by nieces, Pat Aslett of Jerome and Diane Henley of Wendell; and one nephew, Billy Mehrer of Las Vegas, Nev. Art was preceded in death by his father; mother; and older sister, Gladys McDonald.

Art grew up in Rupert, attending schools there and working to provide added income for his mother and sisters. He worked in the Bremerton, Wash., shipyards in early World War II. In 1943, he enlisted in the Navy and served in the Pacific until the end of the war. Upon his return to Rupert, he was employed by Chester B. Brown Bean Company for a number of years. In 1955, he married Mickie Hunter and adopted her son, Lance. In 1966, he and Mickie moved to Palisades, Idaho, where he worked as a hydroelectric operator for the Bureau of Power and Water Resources. In 1985, he and Mickie retired to Yuma, Ariz., where they resided until 2005, when they relocated to Austin, Texas, to be closer to their children and grandchildren.

Although Art lived in a number of places, he was most at home in Idaho, where he enjoyed fishing, hunting and some favored entertainment spots. He was a quiet man who put more stock in action than words. There weren't many things that he couldn't fix and, in the words of family and friends, "he had the patience of a saint."

A memorial service and interment at the Rupert Cemetery will be held at a later date.

Art is survived by his wife

Ashdyn McKenzie Powell

JEROME — Ashdyn McKenzie Powell passed away suddenly Saturday evening, Oct. 24, 2009.

Powell of Twin Falls, Idaho; her adoring sisters and brothers, Jillian, Christian, Téa, Rachel, Jordyn and Bryson; heart-broken grandparents, Jeff and Teana Phillips of Twin Falls and Joel Housdan of Blue Eye, Mo. (maternal), Pamela Houston-Powell of Twin Falls, and Dave and Debbie Powell of Idaho Falls (paternal); great-grandparents, Carol and Patsy Housdan of Russellville, Ark. (maternal); and many other grieving aunts, uncles, cousins, extended family and friends.

She was born May 15, 2009, in Jerome, Idaho, at St. Benedicts Family Medical Center to an incredibly happy family who, upon meeting her, immediately knew she was the perfect addition to our circle of love. Ashdyn was a bundle of love, joy and happiness, only to be taken much too soon from this world and our lives. This sweet, sweet baby who was full of life and love completed our family in so many ways we never knew were possible. Words cannot describe how much her beautiful life meant to us and what she meant to everyone who knew her. She was cherished beyond measure. The quality of her existence during her five short months on this earth far exceeds the quantity of time she spent with us. While a huge gaping hole of sadness and grief is left in our hearts and souls, we know she is at peace and will wait for us to join her on the other side of the veil.

Ashdyn is survived by her most loving and devoted parents, Brandt and Crystal

A visitation will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 28, at Farnsworth Mortuary, 1343 S. Lincoln in Jerome. A service the next day, Thursday, Oct. 29, will begin with a visitation at 11 a.m., followed by a memorial service at noon, which will be held at Northridge Fellowship Church, 456 Golf Course Road in Jerome. Interment will follow at Sunset Memorial Park on Kimberly Road in Twin Falls, where Ashdyn will be laid to rest near a babbling brook and where reflection on her memory may bring peace once again to our hearts.

Donna Lucile Whistler

prepare dinners for church activities.

She is survived by one son and daughter-in-law, Jim and Kathy Whistler of San Diego, Calif.; one daughter Jane Joosten of Paul, Idaho; three grandchildren, Mike Whistler of Santa Fe, N.M., Geoff Joosten of Issaquah Wash., and Becky and Randy Estes of Yoncalla, Ore.; and one sister, Alberta Edmundson of Denver, Colo. She was preceded in death by her husband, Olen Whistler, her parents, Edd and Opal Lightner; one son, John Whistler; and her son-in-law Robert Joosten.

She was born June 8, 1922, in Lafontaine, Kan., the daughter of Edd and Opal (Starns) Lightner. She spent her early years in southeastern Kansas. She became a member of the First Christian Church in Independence in March of 1936 and has remained a faithful member. She attended school in Independence and graduated from Independence Junior College in 1942. She taught school and worked as a stenographer for the Air Force for several years. After World War II, she worked as a secretary for Arco Oil Company and an insurance firm. She married Olen J Whistler on Sept. 14, 1945. They homesteaded a farm northwest of Paul in 1958 and farmed actively until 1981.

She was a Cub Scout den mother and a 4-H leader as her children were growing up. She was active in the Homesteaders Association. Lucile was a member of the Kasota Sagehens and the 57 Desert Dozen Clubs. She is also a member of E-Dah-ho Chapter 77 Order of the Eastern Star, Daughter of the Nile and Amaranth. She was a member of CWF and worked many hours helping

The funeral will be conducted at 11 a.m. Friday, Oct. 30, at the Rupert First Christian/Praise Chapel, Eighth and Christian Way in Rupert, with Pastor Tom McSweeney officiating. Burial will be in the Paul Cemetery. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Thursday, Oct. 29, at the Hansen Mortuary, 710 Sixth St. in Rupert, and one hour prior to the service Friday at the church (www.hansen-mortuary.com).

The family suggests donations be made to the Christian Women's Fellowship or to the Order of the Eastern Star Scholarship Fund.

We would like to extend a special thanks to the staff at Parke View for the loving care provide to our mother and grandmother.

Stephen L. Morris

BURLEY — Stephen L. Morris, 65, passed away at home in Burley, Idaho, on Monday, Oct. 19, 2009, after a brave battle with cancer.

He was born Dec. 2, 1943, in Bakersfield, Calif., to William and Katherine Morris. Stephen served his country in the United States Coast Guard from 1961 to 1964.

He is survived by his wife, Sharon Crumrine Trueblood Morris; his mother, Katherine DeRossett; his children, Stacie Morris, Bobby (Mary Kay) Morris, Kevin Morris, Sara Morris, Becky Morris, Amanda (Rob) Cope and Stevie Morris; his brother, Bruce Morris; his sisters, Linda and Maureen. He was preceded in death by his father, William Morris.

Stephen entertained us with his great sense of humor. We will remember him with laughter and fond memories. His love will live forever in our hearts.

A celebration of Stephen's life will be held at 11 a.m. Thursday, Oct. 29, at the Burley LDS Stake Center, 2050 Normal Ave. in Burley.

Kathryn Orchard VanOrman

BOISE — Kathryn Orchard VanOrman, 96, passed away Sunday, Oct. 25, 2009, in Boise.

Kathryn was born in Montpelier, Idaho, to Joseph and Catherine Orchard.

She had three sisters and four brothers. She attended school in Montpelier and graduated from Montpelier High School.

After graduation, Kathryn worked for the telephone company as a telephone operator in Montpelier. She married her high school sweetheart, John VanOrman, in the Salt Lake City LDS Temple on Feb. 12, 1935. They were married for 57 years when her husband passed away. They lived in Montpelier, Salt Lake City, Pocatello, Boise and Grand Junction, Colo., before settling in Jerome, where their three children were raised.

Kathryn was always active in PTA, often worked at polling stations during elections and could always be found at blood drives either donating blood or working as a volunteer. Kathryn took a great deal of pride in having a clean and organized home and a beautiful yard with a garden and gorgeous roses.

Her family has always been the most important think to her. She supported them in their sports, 4-H, school and church activities. Kathryn was an active member of the LDS Church and held numerous positions in Sunday school, Relief Society and Primary. Even in her later years, she reminisced of fun times she had playing softball with her Primary boys.

The past three years, Kathryn has been living in an assisted living facility in Boise. Here, she loved to play Bingo, take part in activities, and participate in holiday programs. She always was friendly and encouraging to those around her. She especially looked forward to the visits from her grandchildren and great-grandchildren who seemed to add an extra spark to her life.

Even when she was not feeling well, you could hear her say, "Kathryn, you got to get up and get going. You can't stay in this bed all day." She was such a wonderful example to her family. She will be greatly missed by all who knew her.

Kathryn is survived by her son, Lowell (Sue) VanOrman of Jerome; daughter, Sally (Clancy) Phillips of Boise; four grandsons; two granddaughters; 10 great-grandchildren; and one great-great-granddaughter. She was preceded in death by her parents; siblings; her husband, John; and her daughter and son-in-law, Norene and Chuck Andrus; and granddaughter, Kate Howard.

The funeral will be conducted at 1 p.m. Friday, Oct. 30, at the Jerome LDS 1st Ward Chapel, 825 E. Ave. B in Jerome, with a visitation beginning at noon. Interment will follow in the Jerome Cemetery. Arrangements are under the care of Farnsworth Mortuary of Jerome.

Vernon Casper Hall

FILER — Vernon Casper Hall, loving husband and father, passed away Monday, Oct. 26, 2009, at his home in Filer, Idaho. God gave his family a wonderful gift and now it is time for that gift to carry on with his Lord and Savior.

Vernon was born April 17, 1924, in Sarles, N.D. He is the eighth child of William Houston and Maude Elizabeth (Martz) Hall.

He is preceded in death by four brothers, Delbert, Harold, Galen and Gilbert Hall; three sisters, Edna Hallenberger, Opal Slabaugh and Alice Aitken; and one grandson, Michael Higley. He is survived by his wife, Beverlee (Kennison) Hall of Filer; and his children, Kippi (Noal) Rawson of Tillamook, Ore., Roseanne (Clayne) Higley of Shoshone, Randy (Robyn) Hall of Twin Falls, Marla (Jose) Jasso of Filer and Lori (Jim) Schouten of Twin Falls. He is also survived by two sisters, Doralan Conarty of Sandy, Ore., and Beverly Reed of Twin Falls; and by 14 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren.

The Hall family left North Dakota in the summer of 1933 and moved to Idaho, first to Hansen for a year and then north of Jerome. Vernon attended school in Jerome, and graduated in the spring of 1943. He joined the Merchant Marines and served his country during World War II. After leaving the service, he worked as a sheepherder and later returned to farming. In 1953, he met and married Beverlee Kennison. They farmed, ran a dairy, and raised their family north of Shoshone for several years.

He then went to work for the USDA at the Kimberly Research Center for 20 years. When he retired from the research center, they worked as a team at the 4-H camp as cooks for seven years. After retirement from the U.S. Extension farm, they traveled together over all of the western states and most of the central states. After 10 years as traveling gypsies, they purchased a home in Florence, Ariz., and then they returned to Idaho to be close to family due to Vernon's declining health.

Vernon loved horses, fishing, traveling and his family. He was known for his teasing and love of life. One of his proudest moments was when he gave his life to Jesus and that love of the Lord has carried him through many times. He will be missed by many, most especially by his wife of 56 years and his children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren. Vernon never cared much for death and funerals. He would want his legacy to be that his death is just another step in his walk with the Lord.

Celebrate his memory, remember those wonderful times you spent with him, and know that he is throwing a fishing line in one of God's beautiful lakes in heaven.

A memorial service will be held at 2 p.m. Friday, Oct. 30, at White Mortuary. A potluck will be held after the service Beverlee's home in Filer. Memorial contributions may be made to Vernon's choice of charity, the Salvation Army.

The family would like to thank First Choice Hospice for its care and kindness shown to them and Vernon.

Carolyn P. McKinney

GOODING — Carolyn P. McKinney, 92, of Gooding, died Monday, Oct. 26, 2009, at the Gooding County Memorial Hospital in Gooding.

She was born in Shelbyville, Ill., and was raised in the Treasure Valley. She graduated from Boise High School in 1935 and worked as a dental hygienist for Dr. Weaver in Boise. She married Joseph R. McKinney in 1938 and moved to Gooding in 1942. Joe worked for the Mountain States Telephone Company and retired in 1968. Joe and Carolyn raised registered Black Angus and loved the farm.

She was preceded in death by her husband, Joe; her brother, Homer Stivison; and a sister, Verna Simmons of Boise. She is survived by her daughters, Dona (Leo) Guarrochena of Gooding and Carol (Gary) Bradshaw of Fairfield; and her son, Joe (Rose) McKinney of Nampa. She is also survived by grandchildren, Becky, Butch, Polly Jo (Steve), Willie (Monica), Rex (Cyndi), Carrie (John), Monica (Mark), Lisa (Curtis) and Amy (Dairld); 19 great-grandchildren and four great-great-grandchildren.

She was the best! Mom loved her cats and gardening. The family faithfully encouraged her to watch the Boise-Denver Broncos!

Rosary will be recited at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 28, at St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church in Gooding. Mass of Christian Burial will be held at 11 a.m. Thursday, Oct. 29, at St. Elizabeth's Catholic Church. Funeral arrangements are under the direction of Demaray Funeral Service, Gooding Chapel.

Dale R. Romans

Dale R. Romans, 86, of Twin Falls, passed away Tuesday, Oct. 20, 2009, at Desert View Care Center in Buhl.

Dale was born Feb. 14, 1923, in Twin Falls, to Charles and Martina (Nelsen) Romans. Dale enjoyed hunting, fishing, hiking; and he loved to work on old cars. Dale served in the U.S. Marine Corps during World War II, serving in Iwo Jima and Cypan.

Dale is survived by his loving wife of 61 years, Ethel Romans; three sons, Charles Romans of Buhl, Steve Romans and Scott Romans of Homer, Alaska; one daughter, Chris Mensinger of Hagerman; one brother, Gerald Romans; and three sisters, Erma Arbuckle, Mary Mohr and Alice Prescott. Dale is also survived by four granddaughters, three grandsons, and one great-granddaughter. Dale is preceded in death by his parents; five brothers; two sisters; one son, Garland Romans; and an infant daughter, Stella May Romans.

Cremation is under the direction of White Mortuary "Chapel by the Park." A family gathering will take place at a later date.

TURNAROUND TURNAROUND

Long overdue, area squads earn state VB tourney berths

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

Volleyball is a lot more fun when you're winning.

"Last year and the year before I'd cry on the way home (from matches)," said Minico senior setter Hayli Worthington. "I haven't cried yet this year."

After posting a disappointing 4-9 record in 2008, the Minico volleyball team hasn't had much to be upset about lately. The Spartans turned it around and are headed to the Class 4A state tournament for just the second time in over a decade.

"We savor everything we get now," said Minico senior Breonna Phillips. "We don't take anything for granted. When we win, we get so happy about it."

Minico is 12-6 overall, with four of those losses to Great Basin Conference champ Twin Falls. The Spartans hadn't posted a winning record in volleyball since 2004, the last year it went to state. Prior to that, they had an eight-year state tourney absence.

"I attribute a lot of the success to the maturity of the girls and to their dedication and willingness in the offseason to pursue volleyball through camps and club teams," said Minico coach Kris Christensen.

The players say they feel a stronger sense of accountability this year.

"We always knew we had the talent to do it, it was just up to us to do it," Worthington said.

With six seniors leading the way, the Spartans are more confident and aggressive on the court. An adapted defensive scheme has also helped.

"We're playing to win now," Phillips said. "We set the tempo of the game, not wait for the other team to."

Minico isn't the only team in the Magic Valley to turn around its volleyball fortunes this season. Twin Falls and Declo are also returning to their respective state tournaments after long droughts.

Like Minico, Twin Falls struggled in 2008, finishing 0-10 in the ultra-competitive Class 5A Region Four-Five-Six. After moving to Class 4A this season, he Bruins made a complete flip-flop, going undefeated in league play.

"Changing regions was a big deal to us," said Twin Falls coach B.J. Price. "It helped immensely because

Coming Thursday

A look at the 10 area teams headed to state tournament play.

now I think we have more experience, more touches on the ball and as you can see, it helps a lot."

The last time Twin Falls went to state in volleyball was 1997. Last time it brought home hardware was 1983.

"(The players) are mindful of that," Price said. "We sit them down in the gym and tell them to look up. We say, 'There are cross country and basketball banners. Why can't we bring something home that says volleyball on it?' They've bought into that. It's something they really want."

Class 2A Declo makes its first state tournament appearance since 1989.

"It's been a long time coming," said Mckensey Murray, one of four Declo seniors. "I'm really happy our team has got it together in the end."

The Hornets, however, didn't always have it together this season as personal differences kept them from playing as a team. Their internal struggles culminated in a meltdown the week prior to the Canyon Conference tournament.

"As Seinfeld would say, we had an 'airing of grievances,'" said Declo coach Krissy Darrington. "After that, they've all come together and have been a completely different team. They all proved that (state) was what they wanted. I'm so excited for them."

Despite a losing record heading into its conference tourney, Declo pulled it together and beat out Valley and Glens Ferry for the state berth.

"It's a big deal, especially because this has been an up-and-down season with our team," said Declo senior Brittni Duncan. "I don't think anybody expected it of us. It's really cool to show the community that we can do it and we've worked hard."

Only an elite eight teams in each classification earn state tournament trips. To be counted among them is one thing. To play like you belong there is another.

"We're going to show everyone that Minico is not a fluke this year," Worthington said. "We've worked hard and we have the skills, we're not just lucky. We deserve to go to state."

CSI men unranked, women 8th in NJCAA preseason poll

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

Surprise.

That was the reaction of both College of Southern Idaho men's basketball coach Steve Gosar and women's coach Randy Rogers when they saw their respective NJCAA preseason polls. But the surprise was for very different reasons.

The Golden Eagle men are unranked in the poll. The CSI women are ranked eighth.

It's the first time the CSI men have been unranked in the preseason since the 1998-99 season.

"Our guys need to use it as motivation," said Gosar, whose team went 22-9 last year.

The CSI men started last season ranked eighth, but fell out of the poll on Jan. 27 and did not return.

"It seems like the only people that think we're going to have a good year are the guys in gold and black and the people of Twin Falls," said Gosar. "It's kind of an 'us against the world' thing."

After losing four of five starters from last year's 26-4 squad, Rogers was surprised to find his team in the top 10.

"Potentially we could be there, but right now we're not," he said.

Kaiserman finally gets his chance at BSU

By Dustin Lapray
Times-News correspondent

BOISE — Before Boise State's blowout of Hawaii last week, Matt Kaiserman was a relative unknown on the roster.

The redshirt freshman hadn't played in a game since November of 2006 at Skyview High School in Nampa. He grayshirted in 2007 and redshirted in 2008. Just when he became eligible to play in 2009, a concussion sidelined him for half of the season.

"It's been a long road," Kaiserman said. "To sit out two years was incredibly tough. Then on top of that to come down with the injury and sit out another half a season, it was a challenge. But the reward is so much greater. It feels fantastic."

With Doug Martin sidelined with a minor injury, Kaiserman took the stage at Hawaii. He rushed 23 times for 122 yards and a touchdown, erasing doubts of his possible effectiveness.

"I didn't expect it, but what it allowed me to do was really get into a rhythm and get comfortable out there," Kaiserman said. "Ultimately that led to a lot of success on the field."

In the fourth quarter, the Broncos gave Kaiserman an entire drive of carries. For one player to get that many touches on a single drive is almost unheard of at Boise State, where rotations and personnel packages rule. Kaiserman capped the drive with his first career touchdown.

"I wasn't sure what my conditioning level was," Kaiserman said. "I was glad I was able to stick it through that drive. I was very intent on getting (the touchdown), but at the end of the day, to be able to perform and run with the style of running I was capable of doing up to that point. That touchdown, as good as it felt, was just a cap on a good night."

Kaiserman said he started getting compared to former Bronco tailback Brock Forsey from the day he stepped foot on the BSU campus. Forsey

Jardine ready for big season at USU

Times-News

Twin Falls High School graduate Brady Jardine and the Utah State University men's basketball team are ready for a return trip to the NCAA Tournament.

The Aggies open play Friday in Logan, Utah, against Northwest Nazarene University (Nampa). They will face Boise State in Boise on Feb. 11.

ior at Twin Falls, Jardine embarked on a two-year LDS mission. Upon his return to basketball in 2008, his new team won the Western Athletic Conference regular-season championship and the tournament title in March.

Times-News writer

Bradley Guire caught up with Jardine via telephone for a brief Q&A on his progression as a Division I player. Here's what Jardine had to say:

Times-News: How have you grown or changed as a player now that you have a year of college experience?

Brady Jardine: Last year, it was an up-and-down thing. I was coming off a mission and hadn't played in a few years. I got to work during the offseason, and I'm excited to contribute more. The system is so complex. Now it's nice to understand things and not feel so lost. Last year at this point, I felt like a lost little boy. Now I can spend some time and fine tune things.

T-N: The Aggies finished 17-0 in home games last year. What are the expectations this year?

Jardine: We haven't lost a game at home in two years.

Shoshone races past Sho-Ban

Times-News

Shoshone capped its football season Tuesday with a 62-14 road win over Sho-Ban in Fort Hall. Skye Axelson turned his three carries into 147 yards and two touchdowns, while Justin Santana ran three times for 109 and two scores. He also caught touchdown passes of 42 and 30 yards from Josh Olsen.

The Indians (2-7) invoked the mercy rule on Axelson's 97-yard score midway through the fourth quarter.

Andrew Sortor, Shane Walsh and Caleb Aoi added scoring runs for Shoshone, with Aoi's covering 82 yards.

"We were able to play our young kids a lot so it was a good night to end off on," said Shoshone coach Mark Sant.

Coming into the Hawaii game, even the coaches weren't sure how he would perform.

"He was a really pleasant surprise," BSU coach Chris Petersen said. "That's why we recruited him. We thought he'd run like that. I don't even think Matt really knew. He'd been out so long."

After the game, Kaiserman said his phone almost froze because of the mass of text messages he received. His Facebook page flooded with salutations from friends and family.

This Saturday against San Jose State (1 p.m., KTVB) he gets to play in front of all the people who stood by him through this 3-year ordeal. He may never get 23 carries in a game again, but he proved he can carry the load.

Celtics corral Cavaliers

CLEVELAND — The reunited Big Three — and Rasheed — are one up on the Big Two.

Paul Pierce scored 23 points, Ray Allen 16 and Kevin Garnett 13 in his first regular-season game since last March as the Boston Celtics beat Cleveland 95-89 on Tuesday night in the NBA season opener, spoiling the hyped debut of the Cavaliers with LeBron James and Shaquille O'Neal.

Pierce made two crucial jumpers and two free throws in the final 1:03 to pace the Celtics, whose drive to a second straight title was derailed when Garnett injured his knee late last season. Rasheed Wallace, added as a free agent during the offseason, had 12 points.

James scored 38 and O'Neal added 10 points and 10 rebounds for the Cavaliers, who won their first 23 home games last season but are already 0-1 on their floor. Boston's road win also snapped a 16-game winning streak at home in games between the Celtics and Cavaliers.

Because of the 14-time All-Star O'Neal's addition, the Cavaliers have gotten the bulk of the preseason attention and are a trendy pick to win their first NBA title.

The Celtics may have other plans.

Garnett looked fully recovered from surgery to repair his right knee. Allen stroked a couple 3s, and Pierce was his cold-blooded best down the stretch. After James missed a 3-pointer that would have brought Cleveland within one, Pierce stuck a 15-footer to make it 89-83.

Cleveland turned it over when newly acquired Anthony Parker couldn't handle a pass from James, and Pierce made the Cavs pay again with a second dagger from the outside.

Pierce had 11 rebounds, Garnett 10 and Rajon Rondo added 10 assists for Boston.

James was in MVP form, but this wasn't the debut the Cavs envisioned. Their offense sputtered as coach Mike Brown feared, and their defense didn't do a good job on the perimeter and was missing one of its key components, guard Delonte West, who was inactive for the game and whose future seems uncertain in Cleveland.

WIZARDS 102, MAVERICKS 91

DALLAS — Gilbert Arenas had 29 points and nine assists, helping stake the Washington Wizards to an early lead over the revamped Dallas Mavericks and keeping them ahead throughout the final three quarters on their way to a 102-91 victory Tuesday night.

Arenas shot 10 of 21 and made 8-of-9 free throws for his most points since Nov. 14, 2007. He played only 13 games that season, then had a total of 26 points in two games last season, all because of knee problems. He's feeling so good now that he's not even wearing a brace.

Dirk Nowitzki scored 34 points, but was only 10 of 25. He was 12 of 13 from the foul line — all in the first half. Shawn Marion had 16 points, seven rebounds and three blocks in his Dallas debut.

Rollins picks Phils in 5 games, Yankees scoff

NEW YORK (AP) — Jimmy Rollins has done pretty well making predictions. His latest is sure to rile up New York Yankees fans.

"Of course we're going to win," he said on "The Jay Leno Show" on Monday night, two days before Game 1 of the World Series. "If we're nice we'll let it go six (games), but I'm thinking five. Close it out at home."

The Yankees were not moved by Rollins' boast, dismissing the Philadelphia shortstop's comment Tuesday.

"He's been Nostradamus, that's what I heard," Yankees catcher Jorge Posada said. "He's been (making) a lot of good predictions, so we've got to take that away from him."

Earlier this season, Rollins forecast the Yankees and Phillies would meet in the Fall Classic this year.

"He predicted we'd play them in the World Series about seven years ago, too," Yankees shortstop Derek Jeter said. "You make enough predictions, I guess you'd be right most of the time, right?"

Most of the time. Try all of the time, so far. Rollins got into the soothsaying business before the 2007 season when he exclaimed the Phillies, not the Mets, were the team to beat in the NL East. He backed it up with an MVP season as Philadelphia surged into first as New York collapsed.

And last year, Rollins said the Phillies would win 100 games. They got 92 of them in the regular season and 11 more in the playoffs en route to the World Series title.

Rollins' teammates are used to his swagger, and are not bothered by the bulletin board fodder.

"That's just Jimmy," Phillies slugger Ryan Howard said. "He loves that spotlight. He loves putting that type of — I guess I don't want to say pressure — but just putting that kind of attention on himself and on our team. Obviously, with those comments, you know here in Yankee Stadium, you know they're going to be all over him. And you know what? He wants that. He relishes that moment."

Then why didn't he go further a call for a sweep? "I think it would be very tough to take four. You figure one game they're going to find a way to win," Rollins said during Tuesday's media session. "That's the way it is."

Teammate Chase Utley has his own plans for Rollins if he's right again.

"I think if this one sticks I think I'll take him to Vegas with me," Utley said.

Tar Heels ready to start the Post-Hansbrough era

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — For the past four years, Roy Williams had the security of knowing Tyler Hansbrough would be there to take a big shot or grab the rebound that would start North Carolina's transition attack.

And now? "I keep looking for him," Williams said. "Where's Waldo? Where's Tyler?"

Yes, No. 50 is gone, taking with him the determined style that made him the most decorated player in the program's history. So too are Ty Lawson and Wayne Ellington, who helped the Tar Heels win their second national championship in five seasons and reach consecutive Final Fours. Although North Carolina has lost a lot of flashy, big-name talent, there's still enough left behind — namely along a deep front line — to keep the Tar Heels among the elite.

It's a far less tenuous situation than the last time the Tar Heels (34-4) came off a title run. They lost their top seven scorers from that 2005 team, including four underclassmen who went on to become NBA first-round picks, and had to rely largely on an incoming freshman class that included Hansbrough, Danny Green, Bobby Frasor and Marcus Ginyard. The outside expectations were minimal, but that group surprised by winning 23 games, finishing second in the Atlantic Coast Conference and reaching the second round of the NCAA tournament.

This time, Williams has a lot more proven players to work with, starting with senior forward Deon Thompson (10.6 points) and Ginyard, the Tar Heels' versatile do-everything leader in their 2008 Final Four run who is back for a fifth season after sitting out most of last year with a foot injury.

Despite losing four starters, the Tar Heels are co-favorites with rival Duke in the ACC and are picked by many to be a Final Four contender again. "It's unbelievable to me, it really is," Williams said. "I told our kids it's probably because we made everybody look so bad in '06 that they won't get caught that way again. That part is a huge difference. We could beat the drum that, 'We're going to show them.'"

It all starts up front. Playing alongside the 6-foot-8 Thompson is 6-10 sophomore Ed Davis, who had 11 points and eight rebounds in the championship-game rout of Michigan State and was the team's top shot blocker. The team also returns 7-foot sophomore Tyler Zeller, who returned last season from a broken wrist that was initially expected to sideline him for the rest of the season.

Williams then brought in three McDonald's All-Americans, each standing 6-10, in freshmen John Henson, and David and Travis Wear — who are believed to be the first twins ever to play for the Tar Heels. Henson has been working in preseason as a 3-man, where his long arms and lanky 195-pound frame could create headaches for opponents all year.

"It's definitely something we'll have to use to our advantage, the fact we have these big guys that are still very skilled and very capable of handling the ball," Ginyard said. "It's going to be great to make those matchup problems for other teams. We'll have to look into that and trust that our big men are working hard to be able to do that for this team."

Things in the backcourt, however, aren't nearly so comfortable. Sophomore Larry Drew II inherits the unenviable task of following Lawson, who won the Bob Cousy Award as the nation's top point guard last year and ran Williams' fast-paced offense to perfection. Freshman Dexter Strickland should also see time at point, with Ginyard pitching in as well when needed.

Perhaps just as glaring is the fact that North Carolina must replace the outside shooting lost with the departures of Lawson, Ellington and Green, who combined to make 213 of the team's 264 3-point baskets last year. That could mean opportunity for junior Will Graves, the team's top returning outside shooter who is back from a midseason suspension for a breaking team rules.

Then there's the issue of whether anyone will be able to hit a shot in the clutch, something very few of these Tar Heels have been called on to do. And that could be where the Tar Heels most miss Hansbrough, Lawson and Ellington — an experienced trio who each hit a buzzer-beating winner in the past two seasons.

Regardless of who's back and who isn't, these Tar Heels are eager for a shot at defending their crown.

"Every team wants to be the best. That's what we're aiming for," Davis said. "We want the No. 1 ranking."

Report: Titans owner Adams wants Young starting against Jags

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Jeff Fisher has stayed away from a quarterback controversy all through the Tennessee Titans' dreadful start. Now, team owner Bud Adams reportedly wants a change.

Adams informed Fisher he wants Vince Young to start over Kerry Collins this weekend against Jacksonville, according to the Tennessean. The Nashville newspaper cited sources Tuesday that Adams apparently told Fisher his preference after the Titans lost to New England 59-0 on Oct. 18 and became more insistent during the bye week.

Fisher declined Monday to say who his starter will be Sunday for "competitive reasons." He had stuck with Collins throughout the 0-6 start as the best chance to win.

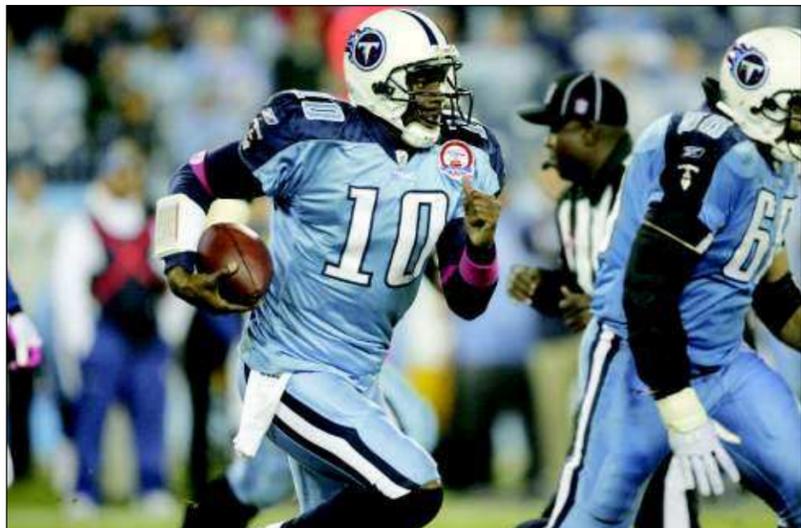

The Titans have been down this path before, as Young replaced Collins during a winless start in 2006. Young went on to win Offensive Rookie of the Year, helping Tennessee finish 8-8 after an 0-5 start.

EX-CON ACCUSED OF SHOOTING JAGUARS PLAYER ON TRIAL

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Former Jacksonville Jaguars offensive lineman Richard Collier tried to duck away from the rapid burst of bullets that left him paralyzed, he testified Tuesday at the trial of the man accused of shooting him.

Collier said he was sitting in the passenger seat of his sport utility vehicle talking and listening to music with recently cut teammate Kenny Pettway. The car was running and the back door was left open while a woman he met earlier that night went inside her apartment.

"There was a line of gunshots coming from behind me," said Collier, sitting in a wheelchair in front of the jury box. "I was telling Kenny to drive. I didn't know if I was getting hit or not, I couldn't feel it. Shots kept coming."

But he said Pettway panicked and didn't move the SUV. The next thing he remembered was being in an ambulance. He never saw the shooter. Neither did Pettway.

Prosecutor Bernie de la Rionda told jurors Tyrone Hartsfield was the person who shot Collier in a cowardly act of revenge in September 2008, while defense attorney Ann Finnell told jurors that the player had many enemies and police didn't investigate all of them.

DITKA CALLS FOR MORE ACTION ON HEAD INJURIES

CHICAGO — Mike Ditka has a message for the NFL and Congressional leaders: More action, not studies.

On the eve of a Congressional hearing on head injuries among NFL players, the Hall of Famer sent a loud and clear message toward Capitol Hill and the league during a news conference Tuesday to announce his Gridiron Greats Assistance Fund is expanding its medical program.

NFL commissioner Roger Goodell and Players Association executive director DeMaurice Smith are scheduled to testify before the House Judiciary Committee, along with former players and medical experts, and Ditka said he hopes they "come to a conclusion and quit financing these studies" so more ailing retirees can get the help they need.

The hearing in Washington comes in the wake of a preliminary study done at the University of Michigan for the NFL that indicates retired pro football players may have a higher rate than normal of Alzheimer's disease or other memory problems. Among the issues examined will be the lasting impact of head injuries, how to limit them and how to compensate players and their families.

CHIEFS RB JOHNSON APOLOGIZES FOR GAY SLURS

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Kansas City Chiefs running back Larry Johnson issued his second apology in 12 months Tuesday and was told to stay away from the team while the NFL and the Chiefs complete their investigation into his use of a gay slur.

As Johnson was releasing his apology, a national gay rights advocacy organization called on the league and the team to take disciplinary action against the two-time Pro Bowler.

The latest chapter in Johnson's stormy career began Sunday night when he questioned coach Todd Haley's football credentials on his Twitter account.

He used the slur during an exchange with one of his Twitter followers. A day later, he used it again as he brushed off reporters and told them he would not comment, according to the Kansas City Star, which recorded the comment.

Man charged with killing UConn football player

STORRS, Conn. — Police charged a 21-year-old man with murder Tuesday in the stabbing death of a University of Connecticut football player outside a school-sanctioned dance, where the suspect's lawyer says he was just trying to break up a fight.

John William Lomax III is scheduled to appear in court Wednesday on charges of murder and conspiracy to commit assault in the Oct. 18 death of Jasper Howard, police said. His bond was set at $2 million.

Police also arrested two other people in connection with the fight that led to Howard's death. Hakim Muhammad, 20, was charged with conspiracy to commit assault and Jamal Todd, 21, faces a felony charge of falsely reporting an incident and a misdemeanor charge of reckless endangerment for pulling a fire alarm that emptied the dance early that Sunday morning.

GATORS EXPECT TO HAVE 4 DEFENDERS BACK VS. GEORGIA

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Top-ranked Florida could have four key defenders, including linebacker Brandon Spikes, back against Georgia.

Spikes and defensive tackles Lawrence Marsh and Jaye Howard practiced Tuesday for the first time in more than a week, and coaches expect them to play Saturday against the Bulldogs.

Marsh has played just two games this season because of a high ankle sprain, and Howard missed the last two games because of a knee injury.

Spikes, the team's defensive captain, injured his groin Oct. 10 at LSU and played only a series the following week against Arkansas. He sat out Saturday's game at Mississippi State.

The Gators also could have backup defensive tackle Justin Trattou available.

Trattou ruptured his left biceps tendon against Arkansas and didn't play last weekend.

PUBLIC DISCIPLINE OF COLLEGE FB OFFICIALS IS RARE

NEW YORK — Against the backdrop of the Southeastern Conference and Pac-10 suspending officials who made high-profile mistakes, the national coordinator of college officials says he generally dislikes such public discipline.

But David Parry also understands the pressure that bad calls can create.

"There are circumstances where sometimes the conference is backed into a corner and the best way to put out the fire is to publicly acknowledge they took steps to discipline an official," Parry said Tuesday in a phone interview.

Officials are evaluated by their conferences every week and it is not uncommon for them to be penalized for poor performances, Parry said. But usually the punishment is doled out behind close doors and not announced to the media.

Postseason assignments are largely based on how officials grade-out during the regular season. The officials with the best grades get the best assignments — such as BCS games — and the worst might not work any postseason games.

NCAA LIFTS BAN ON PLAYOFFS FOR E. WASHINGTON

SPOKANE, Wash. — The Eastern Washington University football team will be eligible for postseason play after the NCAA on Tuesday reversed a ban it issued in February.

Athletic director Bill Chaves said the decision means the Eagles will be eligible for the Football Championship Subdivision playoffs, should they qualify.

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Concepts Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"When change itself can give no more,
Tis easy to be true."
— Charles Sedley

This week's deals all come from the 1999 U.S. trials to select the Women's Team for the Venice Cup in Bermuda.

A three-club opening from Beth Palmer, who, like her partner Lynn Deas, is one of the world's most frivolous pre-emptors, did not stop her opponents from reaching the spade game. Still, three no-trump would have been the best contract — and of course doubling four clubs would have been fairly lucrative as well.

On Palmer's club lead, South won cheaply and crossed to the spade queen, observing the fall of the nine. She then surprisingly ran the spade 10 — it would have been better to lead the spade 10 to the king at this point. Once the spade nine has appeared on the first round of trumps, you have time for the finesse later on, if necessary.

Palmer won her spade jack and had been given the opportunity to make a nice play. She made no mistake when she carefully shifted to the diamond 10, surrounding dummy's jack, and this was covered all around. Deas returned a diamond to the nine, queen and ace, and that now killed dummy's entry to the hearts. Declarer could lead a heart, but Deas would duck, cutting declarer's communications.

Now, whether declarer ruffed a club or played a second heart, she would finish one trick short. She had three losers in the minors to dispose of and, since Deas could ruff the fifth heart, only two places to put them.

ANSWER: It looks natural to bid diamonds and, if partner gives preference to two hearts, raise spades at your next turn. The problem with following that route is that you suggest extra values, since you have bid on over a weak call. It is far simpler to raise spades at once. (Your three trumps and ruffing value offer huge potential in spades.)

PUBLISH: October 28, 2009

DEAR ABBY: I attended a business-related function with my boss and some co-workers. I had way too much to drink and ended up having sex with my boss. (He offered me a ride to my car and took advantage of me.) If I had been sober, it would never have happened.

Since then, my boss continues to pursue me even though I have made it clear that it was a mistake and something I truly regret. I have no interest in this man. He is married, and it sickens me every time I think about it. I am too ashamed to discuss this with anyone, but my boss won't leave me alone. Please tell me what I should do.

- EMBARRASSED

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR EMBARRASSED: Your boss is acting like a sexual predator, and has from the beginning. If you haven't been documenting his harassment, begin to do so immediately. And if anyone has seen him put the moves on you, so much the better. You should also discuss this with an attorney, and because you are "embarrassed," make it a woman.

DEAR ABBY: My brother "Eric's" car was destroyed in a natural disaster four years ago. His insurance company paid for the loss, but he never replaced the car. For the next two years he borrowed one from another family member until she finally put a stop to it. For the last two years Eric has been using one of mine.

It started out as a temporary loan, but now he acts like I gave it to him. I still pay for its upkeep and insurance, because if I didn't, Eric wouldn't. I have offered to sell it to him for a reasonable price, but every time I mention it he comes up with an excuse.

I feel used. How do I tell my brother I want my car back without stepping on anyone's toes? We are a close family, and I'm afraid he'll hold a grudge if I tell him how I feel. He and his wife have full-time, well-paying jobs. My husband and I have two other vehicles, so I don't need the other one desperately. I just hate seeing it used and abused like this. Should I feel guilty about wanting my wheels back?

- USED UP
IN THE SOUTH

DEAR USED UP: No, you shouldn't - and your signature speaks volumes. Now pick up the phone and call your insurance agent. It is possible that because you are the legal owner of that vehicle, you could be responsible for any damage that your brother might cause while driving it.

You have been a wonderful and generous sister for having allowed him to use it for as long as he has. Because you're having trouble finding the words to tell Eric that you want him to stand on his own two feet and provide his own transportation, ask the relative who loaned him the last one to let you borrow her script.

DEAR ABBY: I am regularly invited out to eat by either of two friends, both of whom are very wealthy. I have noticed that neither one leaves a 15 percent tip. They usually leave 10 or 12 percent.

I feel uncomfortable when they don't leave a server what I consider to be the minimum appropriate tip. Would it be OK for me to add to the tip they are leaving? I don't want to offend them. Please advise.

- RED-FACED IN RICHMOND, CALIF.

DEAR RED-FACED: If you can find a way to do it discreetly, without embarrassing your host, I am sure your generosity would be appreciated by the server.

Twin Falls County, Idaho

NOTICE OF SPECIAL REVENUE BOND ELECTION

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that pursuant to Ordinance No. 575, adopted on September 8, 2009, of the City of Kimberly, of Twin Falls County, Idaho (the "City"), a Special Bond Election will be held in the City on between the hours of 8:00 o'clock A.M. and 8:00 o'clock P.M., for the purpose of voting upon the question and proposition of issuing water revenue bonds in a principal amount not to exceed $5,600,000 for the purpose of providing funds to pay the cost of construction and installation of improvements and betterments to the City's domestic water system, consisting generally of installation of water meters, stand-by generators, and water storage tanks, development of a well and well house, supervisory control and data acquisition (SCADA) system upgrade, distribution system improvements, and other related improvements, and related improvements, together with costs of engineering, legal, and other services incidental thereto, including the costs of issuance of revenue bonds therefore, pursuant to the provisions of said Ordinance.

The question to be submitted to the electors shall be by ballot reading substantially as follows:

SHALL THE CITY OF KIMBERLY BE AUTHORIZED TO INCUR AN INDEBTEDNESS AND TO ISSUE AND SELL ITS WATER REVENUE BONDS IN A PRINCIPAL AMOUNT NOT TO EXCEED $5,600,000 TO PAY THE COSTS OF IMPROVEMENTS AND BETTERMENTS TO THE DOMESTIC WATER SYSTEM OF THE CITY, THE BONDS TO MATURE OVER A PERIOD WHICH MAY BE LESS THAN BUT WHICH SHALL NOT EXCEED THIRTY (30) YEARS AND TO BE PAYABLE SOLELY FROM THE REVENUES OF THE DOMESTIC WATER SYSTEM, ALL AS MORE FULLY PROVIDED IN ORDINANCE NO. 575, ADOPTED ON SEPTEMBER 8, 2009?

The following information is required by Section 34 439, Idaho Code:

The interest rate anticipated on the proposed bonds is 1.0% per annum. The range of anticipated rates is from 1.0% to 4.0%. The City has existing indebtedness in the amount of $1,168,782. The total amount to be repaid over the life of the proposed bonds, principal and interest, based on the anticipated interest rate is estimated to be $6,510,000.

Qualified electors shall vote at the following polling place:

Council Meeting Room
120 Madison West
Kimberly, Idaho

Every person eighteen (18) years of age or older, who at the time of the specified bond election is a United States citizen who has been a legal and bona fide resident of the City for at least 30 days immediately preceding the date of the election, if properly registered as required by law, shall be qualified to vote at the special bond election.

Any qualified elector may apply to the City Clerk for an absentee ballot. The application must be in writing, must be signed personally by the applicant, and must contain the name of the elector, his/her home address, and the address to which the ballot shall be forwarded. An application for a mail-in absentee ballot must be received by the City Clerk not later than 5:00 p.m. on the sixth day before the election. An application for in-person absentee voting at the absent elector's polling place described in Section 50-448, Idaho Code, must be received by the City Clerk not later than 5:00 p.m. on the day before the election. Application for an absentee ballot may be made by using a facsimile machine. The City's facsimile number is (208) 423-4297.

The Twin Falls County Clerk is the Registrar of the City, and the place of registration is the Twin Falls County Courthouse, Twin Falls, Idaho. Persons may register on any business day during office hours, continuing until October 9, 2009. Persons may also register with the City Clerk at City Hall, Kimberly, Idaho, until October 9, 2009. Any elector who will complete his or her residence requirement or attain the requisite voting age during the period when the register of electors is closed may register prior to the closing of the register.

Any person who is eligible to vote may register on election day by appearing in person at the polling place established for the election, by completing a registration card, making an oath on the form prescribed by law, and providing proof of residence in the manner provided by Section 34-408A, Idaho Code, as amended.

No qualified elector who is duly registered as a voter, and who continues to reside at the same address or within the same precinct in which he or she is registered, shall be required to re-register.

If, at the special bond election, the majority of the qualified electors voting upon the ballot question assent to the issuance of revenue bonds for the purposes set forth in Ordinance No. 575, the water revenue bonds of the City of Kimberly will be issued for such purposes, which bonds, or so much thereof as may be necessary, will mature annually, or at such lesser interval as may be prescribed by the ordinance authorizing the issuance of the bonds, over a period which may be less than but which shall not exceed thirty (30) years, and will bear interest at such rate or rates as shall be prescribed in the ordinance authorizing the issuance of the bonds. The principal of and interest on the bonds will be payable solely out of and derived from rates and charges for the use of and the services rendered by, and all other income, earnings, and revenues of, the domestic water system.
