Judge dismisses killer's bid for relief

John Horonzy imprisoned 15 years to life for murder

 By Andrea Jackson
 Times-News writer

A Twin Falls judge this week dismissed convicted killer John Horonzy's efforts to get out from a possible life prison sentence for strangling Rosemarie Murphy to death in 1997.

Horonzy killed Murphy in jealousy because he believed she was intimately involved with another man, according to Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs.

Horonzy

He hopped a bus to Minnesota the day before local authorities found Murphy's petite body near the former Sands Motel more than a decade ago. Horonzy kept her rose-embroidered jacket with him, Loebs said.

The prosecutor on Monday asked Judge Randy Stoker to dismiss Horonzy's request for relief from a 15-years-to-life prison sentence.

Horonzy pleaded guilty to second-degree murder in 2008, but he filed for post-conviction relief this year, asking for his admission to be purged and replaced with a trial.

Blaine school levy vote today

Times-News

Voters in the Blaine County School District will cast ballots today on whether to pass a 10-year, $59.8 million plant facility levy.

The levy will collect money for infrastructure needs over a 10-year period beginning in 2010. It would replace the existing levy, which expires next year. The plant facilities levy requires 55 percent voter approval, under a state law that provides a sliding scale for school districts' levy rates based on market value.

If approved, a property owner in Blaine County would pay 51 cents per $1,000 of assessed property value. Someone whose home is worth $400,000 would pay $150 per year after the homeowner's exemption is taken into account.

Polls will be open from noon to 9 p.m. Thursday, at Bellevue, Carey, Hailey, Hemingway and Woodside elementary schools.

GLASS HALF FULL

UPPER SNAKE RESERVOIR STORAGE HITS 10-YEAR HIGH, BUT WARMER OCEAN MAY MEAN DRY WINTER

 By Nate Poppino
 Times-News writer

Reservoirs in the upper Snake River are holding more water going into this winter than at any other time in the past 10 years, good news for the water users who've dealt with a mostly dry decade.

Two of the system's three largest reservoirs were more than half full on Sunday, according to provisional data maintained by the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation. Water levels in American Falls and Palisades reservoirs were close to their average levels and each held nearly twice the water they did at this time last year. Jackson Lake — on par with last year's levels — held one and a half times its average amount.

The Upper Snake overall is 57 percent full. That doesn't set any records, but it is a significant improvement and a good omen for next year, said Mike Beus with Reclamation's Burley office.

"We're pleasantly full, and have enough carryover to have good stream flows through the winter," Beus said. "It's almost certain to refill storage next spring, even if we have severely deficient snowpack."

In fact, the main thing that Beus now thinks could derail a good year would be his agency misestimating its flood control measures in the spring. Full reservoirs and a reasonable snowpack can still lead to a year like 2007, he said, when water users asked for water before the snow finished melting, but after Reclamation had made room for the snowmelt in the reservoirs.

Forecasters already say the snowpack may not be great. A currently weak El Niño effect — basically, warmer water in the equatorial regions of the Pacific Ocean — is expected to strengthen and bring a warmer, drier winter to the Pacific Northwest, said Jay Breidenbach with the National Weather Service. That'll build on existing conditions: The U.S. National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration announced last month that worldwide ocean temperatures hit a new record high this summer, based on records dating back to 1880.

All of the Magic Valley's canal companies and irrigation districts have shut down for the season, Beus said, though the North Side Canal Co. started up again to carry mitigation water for two groundwater districts.

Cassia schools to begin testing for nicotine

 By Laurie Welch
 Times-News writer

BURLEY — Cassia County will become a test bed for measuring tobacco abuse among school athletes, possibly becoming Idaho's first school district to implement nicotine testing on athletes as policy.

The Cassia County School Board decided Tuesday that it will incorporate non-punitive nicotine screening of half of the athletes undergoing district-mandated random alcohol and drug testing.

The effort will gather data the board will use to decide whether to implement nicotine screening among student athletes, including cheer and dance team members.

Cassia County School

District Attorney Doug Whipple said if the school board implements a nicotine testing policy, it will be the first school district in the state to employ such a policy.

"We are on the cutting edge of this," Whipple said.

Whipple said in order to justify the policy the board needs to determine whether tobacco use among student athletes is a significant local problem and whether testing is an appropriate way to address it.

Cassia County School District Superintendent Gaylen Smyer said Wednesday that prior to the beginning of the winter sports season all student athletes will undergo drug and

T.F. sets new parking policy

Vehicles left in county parking lots could be towed

 By Andrea Jackson
 Times-News writer

Twin Falls County commissioners are clamping down on parking at the courthouse, jail and county building.

Vehicles left longer than five days in public parking lots near those buildings will be towed at the owner's expense, according to a new policy signed Monday.

The new rules apply to two parking lots as well as other lots owned or operated by the county that aren't specified in the new policy.

The policy, signed Monday by commissioners, addresses two public parking lots that are used by staff and visitors. One is located behind the courthouse and the other is across the street from the jail.

"It is the intent of this policy to maximize the number of on-site parking spaces for public and employee use and to

Water

District No. 2 is also expected to carry out recharge work this fall. Neither is expected to draw enough from the system to substantially change the current outlook, Beus said.

"It's not causing us to change our operations," he said.

Of course, water in the Snake isn't going to help irrigators in other regions — including the Salmon Falls and Big Wood basins, lately victims of lingering drought effects. But Reclamation's recent data show the Little Wood Reservoir also holds more water than average right now and much more than it retained last year. The boost, Beus said, came thanks to June rains that kept demand low and left more water for later.

"June was really a boon to them," he said, noting that the Little and Big Wood rivers usually share similar conditions but do have different demands placed on them.

Horonzy claims in court records that he had ineffective public defenders who didn't investigate other possible suspects or conflicting evidence. The judge was unconvinced.

"In light of Horonzy's candid admissions that he killed the victim, it is not clear what such investigation would reveal," Stoker wrote in his decision filed Monday. "Here Horonzy makes a claim that is totally contrary to his previous sworn statements of guilty made at the change of plea hearing."

Horonzy pleaded to a lesser charge of second-degree murder, after facing an original charge in the first degree.

"He cannot now take a contrary position in order to challenge his conviction," Stoker wrote in the ruling. "...This court finds that the material facts in this case are undisputed and that Horonzy has not shown grounds for relief as a matter of law."

Lincoln Co. Historical Society eyes Masonic Building for museum

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — The Lincoln County Historical Society told county commissioners Monday it would like to turn Shoshone's historic Masonic Building into a museum.

Commissioners responded by telling the historical society to submit a plan.

The county-owned Masonic Building is currently the home of the Lincoln County Recreation District's gymnasium and offices. The recreation district moved the gym in June from a small storefront space on South Rail Street into the Masonic Building on West B Street, across the street from the Lincoln County Courthouse.

"They have until May," Commission Chairman Jerry Nance said of the current lease with the recreation district. "They don't have any plans to move unless they can find another place."

Regardless, Nance said the commission would review a proposal from the historical society.

As for the possibility of both a gym and the museum occupying the Masonic Hall, it is unlikely due to space constraints.

"It would have to be one or the other," Nance said.

Lisa Cresswell represented the historical society at the meeting. The group wants to acquire a building of its own, which would include a museum, she said.

"Mainly were looking for a potential location," Cresswell said, adding that the historical society is considering other possible, unspecified locations in Shoshone.

Cresswell said the historical society approached the county because the recreation district has a one-year lease that will expire in June.

"They (commission) asked the historical society to present them with a plan for a museum," Cresswell said.

Currently the historical society has space inside the Whistle Stop Antiques Mall. Attempts were unsuccessful to reach the recreation district's Activities Coordinator Jamie Shetler.

City service bills top candidates' concerns in Buhl

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — With just five people seeking office in Buhl, the race for mayor and two council seats will likely be close.

Facing off for mayor are incumbent Charles Sheridan and Tom McCauley. Incumbent council members Regie Finney and Dick VanZante are opposed by Tecopa Gleason for two, two-year terms. Annual mayor pay is $8,200 and council members are paid $4,400 a year.

Sheridan is pastor of the Buhl Church of the Nazarene and wishes to be seated to the four-year mayoral post so he can see the major water and sewer projects to completion.

He said the infrastructure projects are now "well enough under way that hopefully the city is in a position to focus on some other issues."

"We've spent so much time working on those projects and we continue investing time into finding alternative funding sources in hopes of lowering the overall bond repayment so that maybe the monthly bill can be lowered," Sheridan said. "I haven't been as accessible to the public as I'd like to have been."

Sheridan

McCauley

Finney

VanZante

Gleason

McCauley, who manages privately owned hydroelectric plants, is running to improve communication between City Hall and residents.

He would also like to see residents' monthly city utility bills reduced by broadening the user base through business and residential development, thus lowering each user's burden.

"We need to encourage more tourist travel to or through Buhl. Then we need to display our hometown charm and opportunities for prospective new members of our community who can enjoy our good schools, our incredible amenities, and our small-town attributes where a person can be part of a community," he said.

He said increasing Buhl's population would help businesses thrive.

Even though Gleason, 18, still lives with his parents he said he has a lot to offer Buhl. He is the manager of Snake River Antiques and also works at Don's Thriftway.

"The community has done so much for my family and I want to give back," said Gleason.

His father, Rick Gleason, is an officer with the Buhl Police Department but the younger Gleason said he's confident in remaining an independent leader.

"I have time to give and want to help figure out solutions for the city. We need more businesses and we need to find a way to promote business," Gleason said.

Finney has served nearly eight years on the council. He's been there since the federal mandates to upgrade the city water and sewer infrastructure came down and he'd like to see the projects completed.

Finney owns and operates his own siding business.

"I'll keep striving and trying to find every darn way to get government money to pay for these federal mandates," Finney said. "I've been fighting for the city since the beginning."

Other issues, like keeping private property cleaned up, are also on Finney's radar.

"We got those new trash cans last year and that really helped in getting some of the stuff cleaned up," Finney said. "We're working on those and will continue to, we're on the right path."

VanZante, retired after spending 32 years with the Idaho Tax Commission, believes Buhl is on the right path as well but said he'd like to see more citizen involvement.

"I like to be involved and I care about the citizens of Buhl," he said. "I want to make Buhl a better place and hopefully bring about more cooperation and communication between the city, residents and other organizations in town."

While VanZante said the city budget is extremely tight he would like to see pay increases for employees at the library.

"We've got some great ladies working over there at basically minimum wage," he said. "They do a great job, we're very fortunate to have them."

He said everyone is concerned about city utility rates but the council's hands are tied.

"There is no magic silver bullet and there is no free lunch," he said. "The bonds to complete these projects passed with overwhelming support and we've got to pay it back."

If elected VanZante, like all of Buhl's candidates, promises to keep turning every stone available to bring in additional funding.

Jerome graduation will remain at College of Southern Idaho

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

JEROME — School trustees decided Tuesday that the Jerome High School class of 2010 graduation ceremony will be held at the College of Southern Idaho, ending a five-month debate that has driven a wedge between members of the senior class.

Until recently, school trustees and administrators didn't know whether the majority of the seniors wanted to graduate at the high school or at CSI. The annual commencement was moved to CSI several years ago to provide adequate accommodations in the event of rain, and access to a better sound system.

The board's uncertainty originated when two distinct groups of students came before them with opposite views. On May 26, several students and parents presented a petition with 130 signatures and spoke in favor of relocating graduation back to JHS. Then on June 23, another group of the current senior class disputed what their peers told trustees. The latter group said it wanted the commencement to remain at CSI and that at least half of the petition signers had recanted their positions.

The controversy turned into a shouting match between the then juniors during a class meeting at school in May. JHS Principal Eric Anderson settled the dilemma by putting it to a secret ballot vote of the senior class. Tuesday, he presented the election results to trustees.

Anderson said about 95 percent of the senior class voted and about 80 percent voted to keep this year's graduation on May 27 at CSI.

"We wanted the kids to vote without any parental influence," he said. "To us, that was an overwhelming majority."

"It was pretty resounding. The students made their decision," said board

Chairperson Linda Hadam. In other business, the board discussed extending its supplemental levy. Idaho code allows the supplemental schools levy to roll over each year unless school trustees vote not to authorize it.

In answer to an estimated $151 million state budget shortfall from declining state revenue and deeper state funding cuts looming for K-12 education, the board discussed reauthorizing the supplemental levy for two years rather than one. Trustees will revisit the issue in about two months.

Sweetwater development in Hailey faces foreclosure

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

HAILEY — One of the largest developments in Hailey could soon be bank-owned if the city doesn't accede to changes in its agreement with the developer.

That was Sweetwater representative Jim Laski's promise to the Hailey City Council on Monday night.

"The project has ceased operations for a year now, due to the economic conditions," Laski said. "I'm here with a last-ditch effort to keep Sweetwater alive."

Among the changes Laski is seeking to the planned-unit development agreement between Sweetwater and the city are extensions in the timeline of the phasing, a shift in when the developer would pay the city certain fees, and waivers of other costs the development owes the city.

Though Laski had asked the city to waive some community housing requirements in a letter to the city dated Sept. 29, on Monday he revised that request. He argued that due to the real estate bubble, the Sweetwater units will sell at what amounts to the same price as designated workforce housing. Laski asked that a property already donated to the city be allowed to meet $1.7 million of Sweetwater's $4 million community housing in lieu fees.

He also asked that four units required to be priced at workforce levels be allowed to be sold one at a time after half the existing units are sold; that will give the developer the ability to recoup some costs before selling those subsidized units.

None of the units that have already been built — 49 are complete and another 22 are unfinished shells — can be sold until the plat is recorded, and issues Laski attributes to the economic downturn have prevented the recording of plats so far. This has led to an entire subdivision of empty units that greet visitors to Hailey.

"We have sought to balance the city's need for revenue and Sweetwater's need to dramatically reduce cost in order to make the project feasible, all in light of current economic conditions," Laski wrote to the city.

Because of the changes Laski made to his proposal on Monday night, the council asked him to send the altered proposal in writing. Laski noted that the trustee sale that could spell foreclosure for Sweetwater is set for a month from now, and he asked that the council keep the developer's offer at the top of its agenda.

In other business, the council heard from Copper Ranch developer Jeff Smith, who returned to show the council photos of the cleaned-up construction site of the development, which is also facing economic challenges. In exchange for cleaning up what neighbors had called an eyesore, Smith received extensions on his building permit.

"Jeff has kept his promise," said Mayor Rick Davis, who agreed with the council to award the extensions.

Hailey rodeo grounds plan firms up

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Plans for rebuilding the Hailey Rodeo Grounds and adding an ice rink are nearing completion, but one nearby business owner wants to rein them in — at least for a bit.

Brent Nelson, the owner of the fast-food drive-through Snow Bunny, on the edge of the city's property, said the design of the entry area will hurt his business. He spoke at a public hearing before the Hailey City Council on Monday, at which the latest version of the plans were presented.

"For the city of Hailey, it's potentially awesome," Nelson said, lauding the idea of the improvements.

However, he said the 125-foot landscaped and curbed entry lane to the park would deter casual diners who turn into his restaurant on impulse as they travel by. He also said school buses returning from sporting events, which often stop by for a snack, would have a difficult time making the turns and parking. The Snow Bunny relies on these busloads of teens for much of its business, he said.

"This will probably impede our ability to do our business greatly," Nelson said. "All I'm trying to do is survive."

Council members said it was unfortunate Nelson had not been brought into the design process earlier, and asked the architect to work with the business to figure out a solution that will minimally impact it.

"We can work with the Snow Bunny and make it work," said Councilman Fritz Haemmerle. "Other than the bike path, I've never seen anything so exciting as this. We need to continue our rodeo tradition, and the way to do it is with this facility."

The plans include a 3,500-seat arena that can be used for rodeo as well as other events, with 105 parking spots on site, and a large ice rink for the Sawtooth Rangers hockey team.

After concerns about parking trailers and rigs for rodeo participants were brought up at the last meeting, the city worked out a deal with Hailey Elementary School to use part of the school's property, as well as an alley between the rodeo grounds and the school, for parking for these events.

"That was a big step, getting past that point," said architect Nick Latham of Ketchum-based Ruscitto/Latham/Blanton. He said now that the plans are nearly finalized, the next step is finding funding; he declined to provide a ballpark cost to the council.

"I can't wait for cost so we can move forward on this thing," Haemmerle said.

Law & Disorder...

... in Cassia County

From Sept. 29 police reports:

Trespass:
Two Declo men reported that three other men driving on private property stopped to watch a herd of elk and then, according to the report, "started chasing the herd in their pickup" before stopping in a hay field to watch the elk herd.

None of the suspects spoke English and were all identified by their Mexico driver's licenses. The owner of the field pressed trespassing charges against the men for driving over his hay.

Racing:
A 17-year-old Burley male was cited for racing on Overland Avenue. "I asked (him) if he knew why I had stopped him. He shook his head and said it was because he was racing. I asked him why he was racing; he said he didn't know why," Deputy Ty Cahoon's report reads.

Violation of protection order:
A Burley woman, 44, told police that her husband, 51, violated a no-contact order after she found some of his clothes in the laundry room. "She stated that (he) had picked up all of his things on Wednesday or Thursday. She feels that (he) had been in the house since then, dropping off his dirty laundry," Deputy Robert Nay's report reads. The woman added that nobody had been in that area of the house and that "him going into the house is the only way that the dirty clothes would get into the house."

Health district to announce school vaccinations Friday

Following recent swine-flu vaccination clinics in the Murtaugh and Minidoka County school districts, the South Central Public Health District is expected to conduct two more clinics Saturday at undisclosed schools in the area.

According to spokeswoman Amy Lierman, the health district will announce the time and place of each clinic on Friday.

The clinics, which will be closed to the general public, have been coordinated with school districts to focus on people in high-risk priority groups.

Amid the vaccine shortage that prompted President Obama to declare a national emergency, district director Rene LeBlanc said the availability of clinics throughout the eight counties the district serves will depend on how many doses arrive in the next shipment from the federal government, which, he said, is expected Friday.

A free clinic for high-risk groups is scheduled from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. today at the health district offices in Twin Falls, Jerome, Rupert, Gooding, Burley and Bellevue.

The vaccinations require appointments. For more information: 208-737-1137.

Jerome teen dies after Saturday one-car wreck

A 19-year-old man died Tuesday after sustaining serious injuries in a wreck Saturday along 200 South Road near 25 North Road in Jerome County, according to Idaho State Police.

Allen Larson was a passenger in the 1995 Saturn SL driven by Irwin Adams, also 19, of Jerome. Adams lost control of the car while headed south, went off the road and rolled at about 6:46 p.m. on Saturday, said ISP Corp. Sean Walker.

Irwin wasn't seriously injured and was treated at St. Benedicts Family Medical Center in Jerome, said Walker.

No one has been charged with a crime, though that could change in three to four weeks after the crash reconstruction is completed, said Walker.

Alcohol is not believed to be a factor, he said, but speed is.

The limit is 50 mph, Walker said, and though police have yet to determine exactly how fast Adams was driving, it was at "a high rate."

Health and Welfare to close benefits programs Monday

The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare will convert to a new computer system on Monday and will close its welfare-benefits offices for the day.

The programs that will be unavailable include food stamps, Medicaid eligibility, cash assistance and child-care assistance.

All other department programs will remain open.

Regularly scheduled benefit payments will not be interrupted, according to a press release issued by department spokesman Tom Shanahan, adding that the new computer system is part of a three-year effort toward improving the "benefit programs' eligibility determination systems and processes."

Benefit applications will be available at each office or from the department Web site at healthandwelfare.idaho.gov. Applications can be mailed or dropped off at any of the offices.

Idaho Power to hold public meeting on transmission project

Idaho Power Co. and Rocky Mountain Power have scheduled more community meetings about the proposed Gateway West transmission project, including one Nov. 9 in Twin Falls.

The 1,150-mile project would stretch 230- and 500-kilovolt transmission lines across private and public land in southern Idaho and Wyoming. It's a complex undertaking, and the U.S. Bureau of Land Management announced this summer it would delay a study of the project for a few months to evaluate alternate routes developed by citizens groups and county governments.

The new round of meetings will focus on conceptual routes proposed in each area and run from 4 to 7 p.m. each day. The Twin Falls meeting will be at the Red Lion Hotel Canyon Springs, 1357 Blue Lakes Blvd. N.

IDWR seeks help to identify abandoned wells

The Idaho Department of Water Resources is asking for the public's help in identifying improperly abandoned wells. Wells that have not been properly abandoned can be deadly hazards to animals and humans and can contaminate Idaho's ground water.

Many domestic wells are only six inches in diameter, but some irrigation wells can be as large as 16 to 24 inches in diameter — large enough for an adult to fall into if not properly decommissioned.

Earlier this month, a hunting dog fell 270 feet into the bottom of an abandoned well in the South Hills near Twin Falls, nearly killing the dog.

Improperly abandoned wells also can provide a direct pathway for contaminants to enter underground aquifers that are used to provide drinking water.

Once an underground aquifer is contaminated it is nearly impossible to remediate.

IDWR can assist property owners to properly decommission unused wells. Property owners and the public are asked to contact IDWR's ground water protection section, at 208-287-4800, to either report or seek advice on how to properly decommission an unused well.

T.F. schools request attendance adjustment to maintain state funds

By Damon Hunzeker
Times-News writer

A Twin Falls teen was confirmed last week to be the first person in southern Idaho to die from swine flu, but unlike other school districts in the area, Twin Falls attendance has gone up recently.

During Wednesday night's school board meeting at Canyon Ridge High School, Superintendent Wiley Dobbs said that although attendance has increased since last week by about three percent it's still down from the average.

The board unanimously approved a resolution to send a letter to the state department of education requesting an adjustment to the district's average daily attendance rate during the swine-flu outbreak.

If approved, the attendance rate from the past three years — rather than the current rate — will be used to calculate and maintain funding from the education department. Funds are apportioned, in part, based on attendance. The district typically averages about 95 percent daily attendance, Dobbs said. Since Oct. 19 until Tuesday, daily attendance has increased from 90.87 percent to 93.74 percent.

"We're keeping a keen eye on attendance because of what's been called the H1N1 or swine-flu outbreak, but we've fared well compared to other districts," Dobbs said.

He credited the district's relatively high attendance to preemptive measures such as providing hand sanitizer in classrooms, cleaning the rooms every night and teaching elementary kids to cough and sneeze into their sleeves.

"You never know for sure, but I think that's paid off for us ... We do stand to lose some money, though," Dobbs said, referring to the requested attendance appeal. "I think this will be common around the state, and the state department of education will have to make a ruling on it."

Mountain Rides to launch Hailey bus route in February

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

HAILEY — It'll soon be a lot easier to get around Hailey without a car. Mountain Rides, the Wood River Valley's public transportation system, will launch a Hailey circulator bus in February.

"I never thought I'd see this day when I was in office," said Hailey Mayor Rick Davis after a presentation by Mountain Rides executive director Jason Miller to the Hailey City Council on Monday. Davis lauded the organization's leveraging of local option tax money to get additional federal funds to pay for new buses. "(This is your) LOT dollars at work."

The federal funding, which is not stimulus money, will cover 60 percent of the operating costs of the new route.

This is estimated at about $80,000 for the first six months, February through September. Miller said Mountain Rides has about three fiscal years worth of that federal funding administered from the Idaho Transportation Department for the route.

A new circulator bus in Hailey has been identified in a transportation plan for the whole valley as one of five top priorities for the county. The inclusion of the route in that plan made it possible to apply for federal grants, Miller said.

It has not yet been decided whether the route will be loops throughout the city or a hub-and-spoke route out from the center of town. Both options have advantages, Miller said, and Mountain Rides is in discussions with anticipated frequent user groups, including seniors, to determine which will be chosen.

Either way, the buses are expected to run 10 to 11 hours a day on weekdays, and will hit each stop at least once every hour.

A new bus has been ordered, Miller said, but will not arrive until April. It cost $210,000, which was funded completely by federal stimulus. To launch the route in February, Mountain Rides will use older buses.

Mountain Rides has proven to be popular in the valley, with as many as 2,600 riders a month in Hailey during recent counts, Miller said. Currently, the system includes two routes: the Valley route, which runs from Bellevue to Sun Valley; and the Town route, which runs from Warm Springs to Elkhorn, through Ketchum and Sun Valley.

Chestnut tree sapling from Anne Frank house Idaho-bound

BOISE (AP) — A human rights memorial in Idaho's capital city is due to receive a sapling grafted from the chestnut tree that grew outside the secret annex in Amsterdam where Holocaust victim Anne Frank hid from the Nazis.

The 3-foot-tall sapling is expected to arrive in Boise soon and will go to a city tree nursery for a two-year quarantine before it's planted at the Anne Frank Human Rights Memorial, located just south of downtown along the Boise River.

The Anne Frank Museum in Amsterdam, in cooperation with the Anne Frank Center USA in New York, took applications from dozens of U.S. institutions interested in getting a sapling from the 150-year-old chestnut tree.

In all, 11 U.S. places are getting them, including the White House, the World Trade Center site in New York, and Central High School in Little Rock, Ark., where forced racial integration was carried out in 1957. One sapling also will go to Seattle's Volunteer Park, not far from the location of a fatal 2006 shooting at the Jewish Federation of Greater Seattle.

Boise's Anne Frank memorial was dedicated in 2002, after thousands of donations to help build it and schoolchildren across Idaho collected coins to fund a $42,000 sculpture of Frank.

"This isn't over until I'm standing with President Obama and he's signing a bill into law that delivers what Nevadans are demanding — real health insurance reform."
 — Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid after Democratic moderates balked at a government-run insurance option for millions of Americans

EDITORIAL

Shine, Culver, Ross will keep Jerome moving ahead

Big opportunities and even bigger challenges face Jerome in the next four years. The fastest-growing Magic Valley city — Jerome has 15 percent more people today than when the census was taken in 2000 — has adroitly made the transition from rural county seat to suburban community and light industrial center. Even in the toughest times — and they don't get much tougher than the past two years — Jerome has managed to keep the jobs coming in and protect its core industries.

City government has been a big part of that. Under the administration of Mayor Charles Correll, Jerome has been a model of small-town economic development, nimble and responsive to potential employees and accountable to taxpayers. We think Councilman John Shine, who has been a part of the effort, is a worthy successor to Correll as mayor.

We also believe Councilman Bob Culver, a retired Jerome public works director with a strong background in water issues, deserves a second term. And that Dale Ross, the master cheesemaker at Jerome Cheese Co. with some expertise in wastewater management, merits election over incumbent Chris Barber to the other council seat.

Shine, in three years on the council — he was appointed in 2006 and elected to a two-year term in 2007 — has demonstrated a solid grasp of economic development and an appreciation of the magnitude of fixing Jerome's troubled water system.

In August, the Jerome City Council approved a 74 percent increase in the base rate for residential water. The city is seriously behind the curve with maintaining its utility infrastructure, a problem that goes back generations as successive City Councils opted to keep residential rates low rather than spend big to retool the system.

And there are undoubtedly more increases to come. So if there's a single litmus test for the next generation of Jerome's leaders, it's water.

Shine contends that the city needs to run its enterprises, such as water, as a business. Revenue from fees, cost of operations and capital improvement should be reevaluated annually, he says, and Jerome should never again hold down rates for years and then implement sharp rate hikes.

Culver has a different philosophy, urging Jerome to seek grants as an alternative to rate increases. But if no grants are available, then he thinks a bond issue election — never a popular alternative among public officials — might be needed for water system upgrades.

Ross prefers a longer-term approach tied to economic development. Jerome should be selective about the businesses it recruits depending on how much water they will use and how much waste will be generated. "Dry industries need to be on the radar in the future," he said. "The 'wet' industries already in place will continue to carry a substantial portion of our wastewater cost."

All three approaches are solid, and they focus on confronting the problem rather than continuing to dodge it.

The stakes couldn't be higher for Jerome. Both the degree and type of economic growth — and hence the quality of life for Jerome residents — will depend on how well the city handles its water crisis.

And managing economic growth is what Jerome does best. Since Tupperware closed in 1987 and took 700 jobs out of the local economy, the community has been relentless in attracting business. During Correll's watch, the new Idaho Milk Products plants opened and the technology park east of town developed, and Shine and Culver were part of the effort to make Jerome one of the most business-friendly towns in Idaho.

Challenges notwithstanding, Jerome is on the right track. Electing Shine and Ross and reelecting Culver will keep it moving in the right direction.

Obama's misguided Fox hunt

One of the lessons most people carry away from the schoolyard is that picking an avoidable quarrel with somebody who really likes to fight generally is a losing proposition.

It's too bad nobody reminded the Obama administration of that before it launched into its ill-advised campaign against Fox News. First of all, even though the White House is right on the merits when it describes Fox News as operating mainly as a surrogate for the Republican Party, making an issue of that fact is a tactical mistake.

Fox News' core audience is a cadre of true believers whose regard for their network of choice simply will be vindicated by criticism from the administration. Glenn Beck — less a commentator than a candidate for a 72-hour psychiatric hold — and Sean Hannity — the sort of bully you can find at the end of every Irish bar — couldn't buy the kind of publicity the White House has handed them gratis.

So what's the point? According to a variety of reports this week, Obama's advisers are concerned by polls that show his personal approval numbers remaining high but disenchantment with his major policy initiatives growing. The president's aides apparently think one way to reverse the discrepancy is to go after and marginalize prominent critics, such as Rush Limbaugh, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and Fox News commentators. Without judging the wisdom of that strategy, it's interesting to recall that Franklin Roosevelt managed to get through a momentous presidency with virtually every newspaper editorial page in the country against him, although he did persuade Joseph P. Kennedy and Cardinal Francis Spellman to intervene with the Vatican to silence Father Charles Coughlin, the anti-Semitic, anti-New Deal, pro-fascist radio priest.

Tim Rutten

Essentially, Fox News is an inverted version of a conventional American news operation: long stretches of editorial comment, conservative and pro-Republican, interspersed with snippets of normative reporting. Roger Ailes, the former GOP political strategist who runs the operation for Rupert Murdoch, conceived that format as a way of delivering 24 hours of programming on the cheap. Even successful commentators don't cost all that much; producers and reporters are, at least relatively, expensive. Ailes lucked into a ratings success because Fox News was launched at about the same time America began slipping into its most fevered ideological divisions since the Civil War, a process Fox News has egged on.

Obama seems to think he can swim against that tide by persuading other news organizations to shun Fox News. "It's not really news," White House political chief David Axelrod said on ABC earlier this month. "... And the bigger thing is that other news organizations like yours ought not to treat them that way?" On CNN, White House Chief of Staff Rahm Emanuel insisted it's important "to not have the CNNs and the others in the world basically be led in following Fox."

That's way over the line. The White House is perfectly free to refuse to have its people go on Fox News shows, but it shouldn't tell other news organizations that they ought not to follow up on Fox News' reporting or that they ought to keep their journalists from appearing on Murdoch's networks. The White House, moreover, does its case no favors when it invites pro-Democratic commentators like MSNBC's Keith Olbermann and Rachel Maddow to private briefings with the president, even though their work is every bit as histrionic as Bill O'Reilly's.

One of the things lacking in the administration's anti-Fox News campaign is a sense of proportion. Murdoch's cable news operation may cast an outsized shadow inside the politically preoccupied Beltway, but in the rest of the country, it's at best a wispy presence. As the Project for Excellence in Journalism's Tom Rosenstiel pointed out recently, the network's star attraction, O'Reilly, "has around 3.5 million people watching each night, or about 1 percent of American adults. That would get you canceled on broadcast television. The three nightly (network) newscasts have about 20 million viewers."

A widely discussed media phenomenon in recent years has been the success — particularly among young viewers — of Comedy Central's nightly riffs on the news, "The Daily Show with Jon Stewart" and "The Colbert Report." In large part, the explanation for their popularity is that they forthrightly do what Fox News and, increasingly, MSNBC do covertly, which is treat information as entertainment, and growing numbers of Americans insist that they have a God-given right to be entertained, even by the news.

That suggests that the White House could come to terms with Fox News — if it simply learned to take a joke.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Some things are imaginable in Wendell politics

In reference to Theona Ritchie's letter titled "New candidates need more imagination," imagine this:

As a candidate for mayor in the city of Wendell, this is what I imagine.

Imagine a new mayor that does not look to the incumbent for leadership but instead looks to the community for a chance to show his own leadership. I imagine a Wendell where roads are repaired and maintained. I imagine all meetings being posted and open to the public according to the Idaho Open Meeting Laws. I imagine council meetings where anyone can voice a question, concern, or comment and then not be labeled a trouble maker.

I imagine a new mayor that supports local taxpaying businesses — you know, the ones that donate time and money to local charities and organizations. Can you imagine a mayor that would treat everyone as equal? I can.

How about local ordinances being enforced or no more tax-dollars funding personal projects — a stretch of the imagination? I don't think so. What about a person that grew up in this town, raised his family in this town, and now is enjoying watching his grandchildren grow up in this town — can you really imagine this person cares about this community and wants to give back? Definitely I can. What about Wendell being cleaned up and kept that way;

You guessed it; I can. Now imagine if only one-half of the above happened, wouldn't we all be better off? Just imagine if all of the above happened, plus more — unimaginable? Absolutely not. Would you have ever imagined that a new candidate could have such a wild imagination? Well, once again, I would imagine that it comes from a lifetime of love and support for this community many of us call home — Wendell. Oh yeah, I forgot one, can you imagine that two candidates' signs placed beside one another is really an issue? What? OK, I can't even imagine that.

Why jail plan makes sense for Jerome County

As with any vote, a lot of rumors have been passed around regarding the upcoming vote on the leasing of a new jail. As the chairman of your county commission, I want to make sure you hear straight from me about what we want to do to ensure community safety in Jerome County far into the future.

The Nov. 3 vote would give us the authority to enter into a 30-year lease-to-purchase of a new jail. It does not raise your taxes. The jail would be constructed and operated using our existing budget and the money generated from renting extra jail beds to neighboring counties. It's a very simple method of financing our own need for a new jail, serving the region's needs for additional jail space and doing it without impacting your pocketbook. We think it is the best financial option for Jerome County at this time.

READER COMMENT

I know some are concerned about being able to rent the extra jail beds to help offset our costs. The board of county commissioners will have signed occupancy permits in hand with neighboring counties or other government agencies before we proceed with the project.

The other concern I've heard is that we don't know what the jail will cost or how it will be designed. That is not accurate. The commissioners have worked for over a year with our sheriff and our consultants, Rocky Mountain Corrections, and have settled on a general jail design that is very staff efficient and very safe and secure. We know the exact size of the jail, we know the maximum cost of the jail construction, we know the operational costs of the jail, and we know what our lease payment will be — which will be a fixed payment for 30 years at one of the lowest interest rates in decades. The commissioners, your sheriff and our consultants have invested many hours, much thought and a lot of deliberation in determining a size, design and operational program for the new jail so we know it will work for our needs for the long term. We are confident we are going down the right path and this is the best solution for our county.

We see many benefits for our county in going this route:

1. Leasing a new jail is the least expensive route for us to take and does not cost our citizens any additional money.

2. This project will create many more jobs at a time when our economy has suffered.

3. This new jail will help significantly reduce the liability we currently have with the dilapidated facility we have now. A jail lawsuit could cost us millions of dollars. Your commissioners would rather solve the problem right — and for the long term.

4. Finally — the real crux of the issue: A new jail — that is affordable for us and for you — will help keep our county safe.

We cannot continue operating the way we currently are without a jail sufficient to meet the needs of our criminal justice system. We must provide the tools necessary to keep bad guys off the street and keep our county safe. The new jail will help us provide that safety for all of you for a long time into the future. That's the important piece of all this — and the piece that motivates us to ask for your authority to move forward.

Charlie Howell of Jerome, a Republican, is serving his second term on the Jerome County Commission.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Militant rhetoric is feeding the hate

Four Republican men became enraged as the election results came in — we now had a black president. Like the Klan, they went cruising for payback in Staten Island. Three black men were assaulted, two with metal pipes and a third put in a coma when the attackers rammed him with their car. Right-wing fanatic Jim Adkisson went to a "liberal" church and opened up with a shotgun, killing 60-year-old Greg McKendry and 61-year-old Linda Kreager; six wounded victims survived the attack.

Adkisson admitted his hatred for minorities and liberals. He told police all liberals should be killed because they're ruining the country. Police found brain-washing books by Bill O'Reilly, Michael Savage and Sean Hannity in his house. Since the Obama election, the rhetoric is getting more and more militant and psychotic. Water the Tree of Liberty with blood?

The president is an illegal alien. Concentration camps are ready to receive Obama haters. Czars roam the country with no accountability. Don't tread on me. Euthanize seniors. Secede from the Union. What's up with the call to revolt? I know what's up with their call to repeal hate crime laws. Bosnia, Rwanda, Armenia had one thing in common — genocide under cover of war/chaos. Imagine if a hundred psychotic rightwing patriots took over a town/county. Before the rebellion could be put down, mass murder could wipe out the local population of Latinos, gays and other undesirables.

Am I as crazy as the right-wing loons? Question. When was the last time an immigrant or gay was beaten/murdered compared to one of Obama's cars shooting a peasant? The scenario I predict is more plausible than the delusions the right subscribes to; just keep watching the news and listen to their hatred. The warning signs are there; the hate machine keeps feeding their paranoid delusions.

Schouten supporter speaks out

On Nov. 3, you will be asked to vote for someone to represent you on the Twin Falls City Council. I would like to suggest that you vote for Jim Schouten.

Jim is a local businessman I have known for 15 years. He feels his experiences in construction and in planning and zoning have given him the background to address important issues and the tools to deal with these issues. Jim is energetic and is tired of feasibility studies and would like to substitute action. I believe, with your support, he can undo some of the roadblocks that have hindered private development and improvements in Old Towne. He has cost-saving ideas for renovations instead of replacement of some of the cities aging properties and infrastructure.

Let's get some new blood in there, someone who is working in the community as well as active in the community. Remember the old adage: "If you want something done, give it to somebody who is busy." Vote for Jim and don't waste that vote.

Lanting has ideas for Twin Falls improvement

My name is Greg Lanting and I'm running for re-election for Twin Falls City Council. For the past month, I've had the privilege of campaigning door to door. I've had numerous conversations with local citizens and would like to share some of their ideas for making Twin Falls a great place to live and raise a family.

A gentleman suggested an innovative way for cleaning up residences that are public eyesores. His suggestion was utilizing the city's water meter readers as a first line of defense. If meter readers noticed an unsightly area while reading meters, they would be responsible for posting city code on the property. If the area was not cleaned up by the next meter reading, the property would then be turned in for negligence.

Two citizens suggested ideas that other cities have implemented to revitalize their downtowns. One woman shared how Missoula had held a community fundraiser to install a carousel downtown. Weekly events are now planned around the carousel. Another citizen discussed the benefits of murals on downtown buildings. Citizens volunteer their talents, and murals are marketed as a point of interest to draw people downtown.

A widowed woman caused me to consider the effects that rising property taxes, water costs and sewer rates have on individuals. She shared that if costs continue to rise, she would lose her home. As a councilman, I need to be aware of how my vote affects others.

These and other door-to-door encounters have helped shape my agenda for the next four years. If elected, I pledge to continue going door to door each month to listen to the concerns and ideas of the citizens of Twin Falls. This will help me continue to be your voice on the Twin Falls City Council.

I would appreciate your vote on Nov. 3.

Garner outlines reasons for running

My name is Steve Garner. I have lived in Twin Falls since 1974. Although I am not a native Idahoan, my grandchildren are fifth-generation Magic Valley residents through my wife's family. I am a factory-trained Volkswagen-Porsche technician and have owned a repair shop on Main Avenue for more than 33 years.

I know most of the downtown business owners and operators. I believe I have a good understanding of the difficulties and problems that face my neighbors in service and retail stores.

I served on the Business Improvement District board as secretary for six years (1993 to 1999). I believe this gave me considerable knowledge of the workings of city government and how to get things done. I was on the landscaping committee during this time.

The face of downtowns across America is changing or has already changed. Unfortunately, business has passed over many of my friends and neighbors. It is hard to compete with the malls, big-box stores and the Internet, especially in the peak retail season of Christmas when rain, snow and ice become an issue, as does finding a parking space. It becomes easier to have another cup of coffee and shop online with the world literally at one's fingertips and delivered next-day air.

For a business to survive in today's downtown market, it has to be a "specialty store," a one-of-a-kind and only located downtown. That is just the way it is.

So what can we do to face these challenges? We can fix our downtown infrastructure: repair our sprinkler system so we can plant trees and perennials and not have to worry about them dying; repair and maintain the fountain so it is an attractive fixture; prune and spray the trees; and repair broken and lifted sidewalks making it easier and safer for people to get around.

I want to make our downtown as green and lush as possible. I want our downtown to be the envy of other towns. This will attract new businesses and shoppers to our city center.

We don't need to build a new city, we just need to take care of the one we have, and wouldn't that be more fiscally responsible? Let's not let our downtown continue to slide into a low-rent district. I realize that the city council makes decisions that encompass the whole of Twin Falls, not just downtown, but remember the same people making decisions for downtown are making the decisions for your neighborhood. This is why I am running for city council.

Wanted: Details about water system costs

This letter is submitted in response to the city of Kimberly's "water system improvement" bond election in the amount of $5.6 million scheduled for Tuesday, Nov. 3.

The bond proposal includes construction and installation improvements to the city's domestic water system, consisting of installation of water meters, standby generators and water storage tanks, development of a well and well house, control system, distribution system improvements and other related improvements including engineering and legal services. How is the $5.6 million accounted for among the various components listed or is this just a "Christmas" wish list from the city officials?

Mayor Overacre states that until the meters are installed and some usage data gathered a final rate structure will not be known. My dad taught me never to "buy a pig in a poke." It appears to me that our mayor and City Council expect the voters of Kimberly to approve a long-term debt without the benefit of knowing how that debt will affect their household budgets. The Notice of Special Revenue Bond Election published in the Times-News on Sept. 22 states that the bond will be "payable solely out of and derived from rates and charges for the use of and the services rendered by, and all other income, earnings, and revenues of, the domestic water system."

I, for one, am not at all comfortable in agreeing to pay for a service when I have no idea what my share of the final cost will be. How about you? I urge all voters in the city of Kimberly to read carefully the bond request and make sure you know exactly what it is you are approving and how much your share of the cost will be.

Key Democrats dig in their heels on raising debt limit

WASHINGTON — When I wrote a few days ago about the growing nervousness of moderate Senate Democrats over the approaching vote to raise the federal debt limit, I had no idea how quickly evidence of that shift in the political winds would appear.

I quoted Sen. Evan Bayh of Indiana, who earlier this month initiated a letter to Democratic Majority Leader Harry Reid saying that he and nine co-signers would have a hard time voting to boost the debt limit, as the White House needs them to do to protect the nation's fiscal credibility, unless a tangible step were taken at the same time to pledge serious action to reduce future deficits.

The 10 asked Reid to support a proposal for a bipartisan commission whose report would trigger a vote in both the House and Senate on a set of specific ways to cut those deficits. Both Reid and President Obama told Bayh to cool his jets and wait until next year.

But on Wednesday of last week, a floor vote made it clear this issue may not wait. Reid tried to get the Senate to ratify a scheme for dodging a $247 billion hole in financing the health care bill, and was thwarted when Bayh and his allies, plus three more Democrats, and all 40 Republicans, voted it down, 53-47.

David Broder

The "doc fix" rejected last week is something that Congress has been willing to do each year in order to avoid scheduled reductions in payments to doctors for treating their Medicare patients. But if that $247 billion were added to the estimated 10-year cost of the pending health care legislation, it would bust the $900 billion ceiling Obama has set.

Reid's solution: Pass the "doc fix" as separate legislation and get it out of the way before the health bills hit the floor. This is exactly the kind of sleight-of-hand Congress routinely performs to conceal the spending that has produced the record $1.4 trillion deficit.

It's not limited to Democrats. When Republicans were in control they refused to raise taxes to pay for either the wars in Afghanistan and Iraq or the costs of the new Medicare prescription drug benefit.

Economic recovery is job one. But budgetary responsibility is job two, and we can't afford to delay further starting on it.

David Broder is a columnist for The Washington Post.

Drug smugglers endlessly creative along border

By Jacques Billeaud
Associated Press writer

SAN MIGUEL, Ariz. — A pickup truck in Mexico pulls up to the 5-foot vehicle barriers that make up part of the multibillion-dollar border fence. A retractable ramp is extended from the truck, forming a bridge up and over the barriers.

Then, a second pickup — this one loaded with a ton of marijuana — rolls over the bridge and into the U.S.

With gadgetry such as custom-built ramps as well as ultralight planes, false doors and good old-fashioned duct tape, smugglers have demonstrated unbounded creativity when it comes to sneaking drugs across the Mexican border. And the U.S. government acknowledges there is only so much it can do to stop the flow.

"We have to keep it at a manageable level so society can continue to operate," said Elizabeth Kempshall, agent in charge of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration's office in Arizona. "Are we going to get rid of 100 percent of all drug trafficking? Probably not. But I can make it as difficult and as costly as possible for these drug traffickers to get this dope into the United States."

The government has spent $2.4 billion to build more than 600 miles of border fences since fiscal 2005, increased the ranks of the Border Patrol from 12,000 agents in 2006 to 20,000, and funded U.S. Customs and Border Protection with $8.1 billion in 2008.

Over the past year, seizures of marijuana, heroin and methamphetamine rose sharply, while the amount of intercepted cocaine increased modestly. By far, the biggest seizures were of marijuana. A record 2.4 million pounds of pot was confiscated, a 50 percent increase over last year.

Nevertheless, enough drugs make it into this country to supply 20 million users, according to government estimates.

"The most frightening part is that when you finally catch on to something, you think, 'Wow, how many times did they get away with that one?'" said T.J. Bonner, president of the National Border Patrol Council, a union representing 17,000 agents.

Getting that truck across the border with the custom-made ramp took between two and four minutes. But drug agents didn't actually see it happen; the smugglers had rewired some ground sensors so that their vehicles wouldn't trip them, investigators said.

Investigators later seized a smuggler's cell phone and found it contained a video of the ramp as it was being used.

Drugs are also brought to by teams of backpackers, on horseback, hidden in gas tanks and boxes of vegetables, duct-taped to the thighs of pedestrians, floated in crates through sewers and dropped to the ground from ultralights that fly just above the tree line.

Once agents get wise to a trick, smugglers adjust it or move on to the next scheme. When agents get control of a section of border, smugglers switch to a more vulnerable spot.

IDAHO State confirms 3 deaths related to swine flu

BOISE — State health officials are reporting three more deaths in Idaho related to the swine flu.

The state Department of Health and Welfare says the deaths include a male teenager and a woman in her 40s from south-central Idaho. The third was a northern Idaho man in his 50s.

Idaho has now confirmed 10 deaths related to the swine flu.

Health officials did not say whether the three suffered from other medical problems, which has been the case with four of the seven other deaths confirmed in Idaho since Sept. 1.

The Idaho Statesman reports that the deaths include two men and a woman from Canyon County, a woman from Latah County, a teenager from Bannock County, a Bonneville County man in his 60s and another man in his 40s from Bingham County.

Mine company eyes exploratory drilling

POCATELLO — A Canadian company is seeking permission to conduct some exploratory drilling in phosphate reserves located in two roadless areas in southeastern Idaho.

The proposal by Canadian fertilizer company Agrium Inc. calls for drilling 158 holes on about 52 acres 17 miles northeast of Soda Springs. Officials tell the Idaho State Journal the company is trying to determine the viability of future mining projects in the area.

The U.S. Bureau of Land Management and the U.S. Forest Service are taking public comment on the plan through Nov. 2 for the so-called Husky 1 and North Dry Ridge Phosphate Exploration Project.

Officials say much of the exploratory drilling would be done on existing mining leases.

Agrium is the same company proposing to expand mining operations at the existing Rasmussen Ridge Mine east of Soda Springs.

Crews rescue teen from Caldwell grain elevator

CALDWELL — Authorities say a Caldwell teen suffered a broken ankle and possibly spinal injuries after falling an estimated 20 feet in an abandoned grain mill.

Caldwell firefighters rescued the 13-year-old Tuesday night after she and friend entered the mill that was destroyed by fire in May 2008.

Battalion Chief Danny Hartwig says the girl climbed about 20 feet from the mill's second level, which is about 60 feet above the ground. Officials say she was on a concrete platform on the third floor when she slipped and fell back down to the second floor.

Crews used ropes to hoist a basket up to help her down.

Boise police lift lockdown of schools amid search

BOISE — Three eastern Boise schools are no longer on lockdown, but police are still searching for a man who is possibly suicidal and may be walking through neighborhoods with a knife.

The schools that were temporarily shut down Wednesday included Timberline High School, White Pine Elementary and Liberty Elementary.

Authorities say a family member told police the man, who is in his mid-20s, may be struggling with a medical condition and suicidal.

The family member told police the man may be armed with a knife.

WASHINGTON Teen arrested in death threat he says was joke

SPOKANE — A 16-year-old boy who police say walked into a classroom with his hands extended as if claspng a pistol and told a teacher he had been hired to kill her soon found himself in handcuffs and his school in lockdown.

Spokane County sheriff's spokesman Sgt. Dave Reagan says the Mead High School junior later told deputies his action was meant to be a joke.

Investigators said the teacher ran from the classroom after the boy confronted her at about 8:40 a.m. Wednesday and he walked out after her. A dozen deputies hit their emergency lights and sirens and raced to the school after the threat was reported to 911.

The Spokesman-Review says Deputy David Trautman got the boy's description from students who remained in the classroom, located him in a hallway, handcuffed and searched him. No weapon was found. The teen has been booked into Spokane County juvenile detention for investigation of harassment-threat to kill.

Media prof sues WSU over free speech

PULLMAN — A Washington State University journalism professor is suing some administrators in federal court for violating his free speech rights.

The lawsuit by David Demers contended that some WSU administrators punished him for proposing a plan in 2007 to improve the Edward R. Murrow College of Communication, which he called one of the poorest funded of its size in the nation.

WSU spokesman James Tinney said the university would defend its actions.

Demers also contends he was punished with poor performance reviews for writing a book that questions the commitment of universities to the free-speech rights of faculty and students. He wants the court to expunge the annual reviews, make appropriate salary adjustments, pay attorney fees and assess damages.

Sales tax continues decline in first quarter

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

Retail sales in Idaho continued their free fall during the first quarter of 2010 in nearly every county, suggesting the state has yet to hit bottom in one of the worst recessions in history.

Total sales in Idaho declined by more than $300 million compared to last year, according to the Idaho State Tax Commission.

Idaho's fiscal year begins in July — meaning that September 30 marks the end of the first quarter.

The decline in total sales is cutting into sales tax revenue that the state desperately needs to fund road repairs and a myriad of other projects.

Idaho collected about $100 million less in taxable sales in September compared to last year.

Taxable sales fell more than $5 million in Twin Falls. Jerome County reported a decline of more than $1 million, and Cassia County saw a loss of $500,000.

Twin Falls County	down $5 million
Jerome County	down $1 million
Cassia County	down $500,000
State	down $300 million

Taxable sales do not include sales from manufacturers, processors and distributors.

Saul Cohen, tax policy specialist for the commission, said the 2010 fiscal year is not off to a good start.

"We were obviously seeing the effects of the recession last year, and it looks as if it's carrying over into this year," he said.

In fiscal year 2009, Idaho saw sales tax decline by nearly 64 percent to $3.16 billion.

Twin Falls, Cassia and Jerome counties account for about 4.7 percent of total sales tax in Idaho.

The report showed that the agricultural industry in Idaho reported a slight increase in sales tax receipts, while all other industries reported losses.

Costco to accept food stamps nationwide

The Associated Press

PORTLAND, Ore. — Costco Wholesale Corp. said Wednesday that it will start accepting food stamps at its warehouse clubs nationwide after testing them at stores in New York.

It's a big about-face for a retailer that has catered to bargain-hunting but affluent shoppers, and it's a sign of the grim reality facing retailers and their customers. The number of Americans relying on government food subsidies to eat recently hit a record 36 million.

Costco, which is based in Issaquah, Wash., began accepting food stamps at two stores in Brooklyn and Queens in May under political pressure from officials who worked with the company on opening a club in a redevelopment area in Manhattan.

The company quickly expanded to all six of its stores in New York state.

Company officials said they had doubted many customers would use food stamps but it turned out new members said they were joining precisely because the company accepted the assistance program.

"We recognize these are tough times and more people are food-stamp-eligible," Costco Chief Financial Officer Richard Galanti said Wednesday.

Costco said it hopes to accept food stamps at half of its 407 stores in the U.S. and Puerto Rico by Thanksgiving and at the remainder as soon as it wins regulatory approval in each state.

While most major grocery chains have accepted the food subsidy for years, more retailers have been accepting food stamps as the process has eased and the number of people using them has soared.

Most users no longer receive stamps, but instead carry the value on a card that can be swiped at checkout much like a bank debit card.

Idaho start-up wins federal funding

M2M Communications receives $2.1 million

Times-News staff

M2M Communications in Boise was awarded a $2.1 million grant from the U.S. Department of Energy, part of a $3.4 billion federal investment to modernize the nation's power grid. The awards were announced today.

M2M, which makes web-to-wireless monitoring and control solutions, works primarily with electric utilities to reduce their peak load through control of irrigation pumps. The company will use the funds to install smart grid-compatible irrigation load control systems in California's Central Valley to reduce peak electric demand in the state.

In August, M2M was named the fifth fastest-growing company in Idaho by Inc. Magazine.

M2M was the only private firm in Idaho, and one of just four private companies nationwide, to win one of the competitive grants. A total of 100 grants will be awarded, primarily to utility companies.

Idaho Power will receive $47 million to modernize its electric transmission and distribution infrastructure, including deploying a smart meter network for all 475,000 customers. It also will implement an outage management system and irrigation load control program that will reduce peak and overall energy use and improve system reliability.

"We heartily congratulate M2M Communications for receiving one of the 100 awards granted nationally," said Don Dietrich, Director of the Idaho Department of Commerce.

M2M received assistance in applying for the grant through the Department of Commerce.

Treasury, GMAC in talks for 3rd round of U.S. taxpayer aid

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — GMAC, the former lending arm of General Motors Co., is in talks with the Treasury Department for a third injection of taxpayer aid, a further sign of the U.S. government's entrenchment in the U.S. auto industry.

The Treasury Department mandated earlier this year that GMAC Financial Services raise an additional $11.5 billion in capital after undergoing a "stress test" along with 18 other banks. While other banks deemed undercapitalized have been able to raise funds from private investors, GMAC has been forced to go back to the government.

GMAC is a crucial player in the U.S. auto industry, providing wholesale financing to many General Motors and Chrysler dealerships to pay for the vehicles on their lots. The company also operates a mortgage lending unit — Residential Capital — which has been pummeled by the housing market downturn. It also runs an insurance unit and an online banking unit called Ally Bank.

A Treasury Department spokesman confirmed that it was in talks with GMAC about a third helping of aid. The government already owns a 35 percent stake in GMAC after providing $12.5 billion to the lender. It also owns a majority-stake in GM and a smaller stake in Chrysler.

The Treasury spokesman declined to comment on whether the government's ownership stakes in GM and Chrysler make it more willing to again help prop up GMAC. But Kirk Ludtke, a senior vice president of CRT Capital Group LLC in Stamford, Connecticut, who follows GMAC, said the automakers can't succeed without GMAC.

"We continue to believe that a viable GMAC is critical to the success of GM and Chrysler," Ludtke said.

Citing people familiar with the matter, The Wall Street Journal first reported late Tuesday that the U.S. government could hand over another $2.8 billion to $5.6 billion to Detroit-based GMAC. The latest capital infusion would be in the form of preferred stock, the paper said. The government's stake could rise if the new preferred shares were ever converted into common stock.

A GMAC spokeswoman declined to comment.

Of the 19 banks that underwent the government's stress tests, 10 were determined to be undercapitalized. GMAC is the only one of those unable to raise all of its necessary capital from investors.

Treasury's move would make GMAC the only U.S. company to receive three rounds of bailout aid.

iPhone v Droid

iPhone challenger goes on sale Nov. 6

By Barbara Ortutay

NEW YORK — Verizon Wireless will start selling its answer to the iPhone — the Droid — for $200 next week as the company taps into the growing appetite for smart phones that go far beyond making calls.

The Droid could help Verizon retain its status as the nation's largest wireless carrier and contribute to a turnaround of its manufacturer, Motorola Inc.,

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Idaho students share in $112M debt settlement

BOISE - Three dozen former Idaho students from a bankrupt helicopter training school will share in a $112 million debt-relief settlement with lender Student Loan Xpress.

Nationwide, about 2,300 people will benefit.

The Idaho students' share of the 12-state pact will be $1.5 million, making up 75 percent of the total amount they borrowed from Student Loan Xpress to finance classes at Silver State Helicopters.

Eligible students will automatically get this benefit unless they "opt-out" of a pending federal class action case.

Silver State operated 34 flight schools, including a location in Boise.

By 2008, it had discontinued operations, but many students were left owing Student Loan Xpress a substantial amount of debt for training and certifications they'd paid for but never received, according to the Idaho attorney general's office.

Swine flu closes hundreds of schools nationwide

By Don Babwin
Associated Press writer

CHICAGO — The number of students staying home sick with the flu is multiplying nationwide and normally quiet school nurses' offices suddenly look like big city emergency rooms, packed with students too ill to finish the day.

The federal government has urged schools to close because of the swine flu only as a last resort. But schools are closing by the dozens as officials say they are being hit so hard and so fast by the H1N1 virus that they feel shutting down for a few days is the only feasible option.

"There was nothing else we could do," said Michael Frechette, the superintendent of Connecticut's Middletown Public Schools where a middle school closed for the rest of the week after 120 students stayed home sick Monday and another 25 were sent home by noon. "The only way to stop that transmittal was to keep the kids home for the rest of the week."

At least 351 schools were closed last week alone — affecting 126,000 students in 19 states, according to the U.S. Education Department. So far this school year, about 600 schools have temporarily shut their doors.

The number of closures this year appears on target to surpass the roughly 700 schools closed last spring when the swine flu outbreak first hit.

"This is scary," said Kathryn Marchuk, a nurse whose son attends St. Charles East High School outside Chicago, which closed for three days last week after about 800 of its 2,200 students called in absent. "So many people are sick. It's just everywhere."

Many school officials said they were afraid the virus would spread faster if they stayed open.

"Students are in such close proximity (to each other) and Teachers Emily Kleinschmidt, left, and Jenny Zoller spray disinfectant on toys in Zoller's kindergarten room Oct. 21 during the school-wide cleanup at Imagine Schools on Broadway, in Fort Wayne, Ind. The charter school, with about 430 students, closed due to a high number of kids absent with H1N1 symptoms.

they're in two or three classrooms a day at two or three different desks," said Donna Lovell, director of pupil personnel for Berea Community Schools in Kentucky, which closed for four days last week after 20 percent of its students called in sick. "It's an incubator situation?"

Whether it is all effective is debatable, with some experts saying that closing schools merely spreads the number of cases over a longer time.

But school officials like Frechette disagree, saying students who get sick this week while they're at home cannot infect nearly as many people as they can walking the hallways of schools.

"Nobody's at school so they're not infecting each other," he said. Besides, he said, "kids are dying (and) it's just four days."

With such a surge of sick students, many schools are also scrambling to come up with ways to keep kids on top of their studies.

The U.S. Education Department recommended districts and schools provide ill students with remote learning opportunities such as take-home assignments or posting homework and class lessons on the Internet.

Though some schools are doing that — including Keigwin Middle School in Middletown, Conn., where assignments are posted on its Web site and students are asked to read 20 minutes a day — others say assigning sick students homework is a wasted effort.

"If you want to make a kid really hate school ... the most effective thing you could do is to make them do their homework and school work when they have a fever and are not feeling well," said Nancy Kalish, an education writer who co-authored a book, "The Case Against Homework."

Jim Blaney, a spokesman for the district that includes St. Charles East High, said that although parents or healthy students could come to the school to pick up books, the days the school was closed were not the time to push ahead with lesson plans.

"We wanted the kids to get healthy, stay home, rest," he said.

Though there is no way to know how many children actually had swine flu, the deaths so far of roughly 1,000 people in the U.S. — some of them children, including a 14-year-old in Ohio and another in Illinois this month — have cast a shadow on school districts.

"We're a small community where everybody pretty much knows everybody," said Jon Hussman, a principal in Culdesac, Idaho, a town of fewer than 500 residents. "(And) when you have the possibility of death in that community, that's something you want to avoid!"

Idaho braces for schools requesting flu waivers

BOISE (AP) — The state Department of Education expects a number of school districts to request waivers preventing declines in student attendance because of the flu from hurting their state funding.

In Idaho, public school funding for the first half of the academic year is based on the average daily attendance of students during the first seven weeks.

Earlier this month, school districts across the state reported a substantial number of students missing classes amid the swine flu outbreak.

Requests for waivers to avoid funding impacts due to significant student absence are rare and there is typically one a year because of a snow day or some other unusual event, department spokeswoman Melissa McGrath said.

This year, however, there has already been one request from the South Lemhi School District in eastern Idaho and many other school districts are planning to seek waivers to offset student absences.

"We've been getting a lot of calls asking about it," McGrath told the Spokesman-Review. "We know that there have been more absent than usual at this time of year because of H1N1."

The boards that govern Idaho school districts can avoid impacts to state funding by passing a resolution, which is then sent to the state Department of Education with information on which schools were affected and on which dates.

Jerry Keane, superintendent of public schools in Post Falls, said his district will apply for a waiver.

"Pretty much any superintendent that I've talked to has indicated that they're planning to do it," Keane said.

The Coeur d'Alene School District also plans to request a waiver from the state to offset student absences earlier this month, superintendent Hazel Bauman said.

"We had a couple schools that had up to 25 and 30 percent absentee," she said.

Student attendance within the district has since picked up and

Bauman said she is "cautiously optimistic that at least for now, we're seeing a respite."

Dems prepare to unveil health bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Democrats reached agreement Wednesday on key elements of a health care bill that would vastly alter America's medical landscape, requiring virtually universal sign-ups and establishing a new government-run insurance option for millions.

House Speaker Nancy Pelosi planned a formal announcement Thursday morning in front of the Capitol. Lawmakers said the legislation could be up for a vote on the House floor next week.

The rollout will cap months of arduous negotiations to bridge differences between liberal and moderate Democrats and blend health care overhaul bills passed by three separate committees over the summer. The developments in the House came as Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., tried to round up support among moderate Democrats for his bill, which includes a modified government insurance option that states could opt out of. Reid met Wednesday with Arkansas Sen. Blanche Lincoln, who faces a potentially tough re-election next year.

The final product in the House, reflecting many of President Obama's priorities, includes new requirements for employers to offer insurance to their workers or face penalties, fines on Americans who don't purchase coverage and subsidies to help lower-income people do so.

Obama inks defense bill with hate crimes provision

WASHINGTON (AP) — Trumpeting a victory against careless spending, President Obama on Wednesday signed a defense bill that kills some costly weapons projects and expands war efforts. In a major civil rights change, the law also makes it a federal hate crime to assault people based on sexual orientation.

The $680 billion bill authorizes spending but doesn't provide any actual dollars. Rather, it sets guidance that is typically followed by congressional committees that decide appropriations. Obama hailed it as a step toward ending needless military spending that he called "an affront to the American people and to our troops."

Still, the president did not win every fiscal fight. He acknowledged he was putting his name to a bill that still had waste.

The measure expands current hate crimes law to include violence based on gender, sexual orientation, gender identity or disability. To assure its passage after years of frustrated efforts, Democratic supporters attached the measure to the must-pass defense policy bill over the steep objections of many Republicans.

The White House put most of its focus on what the bill does contain: project after project that Obama billed as unneeded. The bill terminates production of the F-22 fighter jet program, which has its origins in the Cold War era and, its critics maintain, is poorly suited for anti-insurgent battles in Iraq and Afghanistan.

Obama and Defense Secretary Robert Gates targeted certain projects for elimination, putting them at odds with some lawmakers. The same spending items deemed unnecessary or outdated by Pentagon officials can mean lost jobs and political fallout for lawmakers back in their home districts.

"When Secretary Gates and I first proposed going after some of these wasteful projects, there were a lot of people who didn't think it was possible, who were certain we were going to lose, who were certain that we were going to get steamrolled," Obama said. "Today, we have proven them wrong."

In another of several examples, the legislation terminates the replacement helicopter program for the president's own fleet. That program is six years behind schedule and estimated costs have doubled to more than $13 billion.

Yet the legislation still contains an effort by lawmakers to continue development — over the president's strong objections — of a costly alternative engine for the F-35 Joint Strike Fighter, the Air Force's fighter of the future. A vague White House veto threat about that never came to fruition.

"There's still more fights that we need to win," Obama said. "Changing the culture in Washington will take time and sustained effort."

Obama signed the bill in the East Room, adding some fanfare to draw attention to his message of fiscal responsibility and support for the military.

He spoke more personally about the new civil rights protections. A priority of the late Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., that had been on the congressional agenda for a decade, the measure is named for Matthew Shepard, the gay Wyoming college student murdered 11 years ago.

Obama acknowledged Shepard's mom, Judy, and remembered that he had told her this day would come. He also gave a nod to Kennedy's family. Going forward, Obama promised, people will be protected from violence based on "what they look like, who they love, how they pray or why they are."

The expansion has long been sought by civil rights and gay rights groups. Conservatives have opposed it, arguing that it creates a special class of victims. They also have been concerned that it could silence clergymen or others opposed to homosexuality on religious or philosophical grounds.

Autumn storm dumps snow on Rockies, plains; more forecast

By Kristen Wyatt
 Associated Press writer

DENVER — A storm bringing the first heavy snows of autumn to a large portion of the Rockies and western plains crippled parts of Colorado and Wyoming Wednesday, forcing road closures and sending students home from school as more than 2 feet piled up with much more expected.

The slow-moving system socked Denver commuters with treacherous driving conditions — a strong punch for residents who were sporting short sleeves just a couple of weeks ago. Visibility fell below a quarter-mile in many areas, and forecasters warned the storm would linger.

Western Nebraskans were already taking action as snow fell. Chadron State College closed its main campus and satellite locations through Thursday, and other schools in the area also shut down. Forecasters said 8 inches of snow had fallen in Whiteclay, near the northern border with South Dakota.

The storm was expected to be the biggest snowmaker to hit Colorado's Front Range in October since 1997, said Byron Louis, a National Weather Service meteorologist in Boulder, Colo.

Up to 18 inches of snow was forecast in Denver and as much as 4 feet was possible in the Colorado mountains. Cheyenne was expected to get at least 14 inches before the storm moves off.

The National Weather Service predicted similar amounts for a wide area of Nebraska and Colorado plains. The storm also brought snow to northern Utah's Wasatch Front.

The storm was even more unusual in parts of western Colorado. In Grand Junction, where about 2 inches fell, it was the heaviest snowfall this early in the season since 1995, said National Weather Service hydrologist Bryon Lawrence. Cold Creek in the southwest had recorded 28 inches by midafternoon.

Some schools in Colorado and Wyoming closed preemptively, including those in a Cheyenne district. And Colorado State University in Fort Collins sent students and staff home around midafternoon. A Colorado Springs homeless shelter decided to allow people who have been kicked out for breaking rules to return because of the weather.

Wyoming state government shut down its offices in the Cheyenne area due to weather early in the afternoon.

Most of the roughly 70 accidents in Wyoming happened on Interstate 80 before the Wyoming Department of Transportation closed the highway between Cheyenne and Laramie early in the day. Nine crashes caused injuries but no one was killed.

"People are just not slowing down enough," department spokesman Bruce Burrows said.

The National Weather Service in Wyoming warned whiteout condition would last through this morning.

Heavy snow was blamed for a multicar pileup on U.S. Highway 6 in Denver, and the weather closed two northern Colorado highways near Wyoming. Colorado's interstate highways remained open, with some closures on mountain passes.

Denver International Airport reported some delays and asked fliers to call first to avoid being stranded at the airport. Some airlines told travelers they would waive or reduce fees for changing flight tickets because of the storm.

Meanwhile, wind was a concern in some prairie areas of Wyoming.

"When we start getting those wind gusts on Thursday — gusts up to 40 mph — it's going to create some blowing and drifting snow and that's going to cause some problems," said Dan Deal, with the Weather Service in Cheyenne. Drifts several feet deep and wind chills as low as 10 degrees were forecast.

Feds: Leader of radical Islam group killed in raid

By Ed White
 Associated Press Writer

DETROIT — Federal authorities on Wednesday arrested several members of a radical Sunni Islam group in the U.S., killing one of its leaders at a shootout in a Michigan warehouse, the U.S. attorney's office said.

Agents were trying to arrest Luqman Ameen Abdullah, 53, at a Dearborn warehouse on charges that included conspiracy to sell stolen goods and illegal possession and sale of firearms. Authorities also conducted raids elsewhere to try to round up 10 followers named in a federal complaint.

No one was charged with terrorism. But Abdullah was "advocating and encouraging his followers to commit violent acts against the United States," FBI agent Gary Leone said in an affidavit filed with the 43-page criminal complaint unsealed Wednesday.

FBI spokeswoman Sandra Berchtold said Abdullah refused to surrender, fired a weapon and was killed by gunfire from agents.

In the complaint, the FBI said Abdullah, also known as Christopher Thomas, was an imam, or prayer leader, of a radical group named Ummah whose primary mission is to establish an Islamic state within the United States.

He told them it was their "duty to oppose the FBI and the government and it does not matter if they die," Leone said.

Abdullah regularly preached anti-government rhetoric and was trained, along with his followers, in the use of firearms, martial arts and swords, the agent said.

Leone said members of the national group mostly are black and some converted to Islam while in prisons across the United States.

"Abdullah preaches that every Muslim should have a weapon, and should not be scared to use their weapon when needed," Leone wrote.

Seven of the 10 people charged with Abdullah were in custody, including a state prison inmate, the U.S. attorney's office said. Three were still at large. Another man not named in the complaint also was arrested.

No estimate when Bay Bridge will open

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The San Francisco-Oakland Bay Bridge, closed after 5,000 pounds of metal broke off during rush hour earlier this week, won't reopen to traffic in time for Thursday morning's commute, a California Department of Transportation spokesman said Wednesday.

The bridge, one of the region's major transportation arteries, has been out of commission since Tuesday evening, when metal rods and a cable fell into traffic, leaving one motorist with minor injuries.

The accident resurrected fears about the safety of a span that millions watching the 1989 World Series broadcast saw had failed during a major earthquake.

Tuesday's terrifying scene stirred anger over the constant delays and soaring costs of the still-unfinished new eastern span of the Bay Bridge, which has become the largest public works project in California history.

"I thought I was going into the Bay," said Andrea Nelson, a marketing consultant and personal coach who saw the crossbar and two rods fall and bounce on the road ahead of her as she headed into San Francisco for dinner. She swerved and her car spun out as she ran over the rods, which gashed her tires.

"I have lost so much confidence in the experts, the millions of dollars that are being spent to reconstruct and build a new bridge," she said. "I just find it shocking and unacceptable."

Construction crews worked through Tuesday night fighting winds that gusted to 35 mph as they brought in heavy machinery to try to move the metal and make repairs. On Wednesday, the strong winds continued to hamper efforts to repair the bridge that carries about 280,000 cars each day.

Ney told reporters Wednesday evening he didn't know when traffic would again be allowed on the bridge.

The catalyst for a replacement span was the 1989 Loma Prieta earthquake, which caused a 50-foot section of the bridge's upper deck to collapse onto the deck below, causing another section to give way. It took state officials until 1997 to decide it would be cheaper over the long run to build a new span than retrofit the existing one.

The cost initially put forth for replacing the bridge was $1.3 billion with a 2004 completion; that has grown to $7.2 billion with a 2013 opening. Meantime, the existing eastern span was outfitted with giant shock absorbers and other fortifications meant to help it withstand a quake.

The pieces that failed were parts of major repairs done last month after state inspectors discovered a crack in an "eyebar," an important structural beam. The rods that broke were holding a saddle-like cap that had been installed to strengthen the cracked eyebar.

Caltrans engineers were trying to figure out why the recent repairs — which were supposed to last until the new bridge opened in 2013 — failed in less than two months.

Ney said earlier Wednesday the strong winds likely played a role in the failure, which heightened concerns by some experts about the integrity of the repair and the bridge's safety in an earthquake. Scientists in 2008 said there is a 63 percent probability of a quake similar to the 6.9-magnitude Loma Prieta temblor in the Bay area over the next 30 years.

Abolhassan Astaneh-Asl, a civil engineering professor at the University of California, Berkeley who studied the effects of the 1989 earthquake on the bridge, called the repair last month a "Band-Aid" that jeopardized public safety to get the bridge open quickly.

Drivers, a dirty shield, and lesson learned

My motorcycle fell apart on me recently.

Well, not really fell apart. But a side shield flew off while I was riding, caused by a loose screw. When I backtracked to pick it off the road where it had landed, I noticed a long, dark scratch across the shield. I cringed.

Then I cringed again once I learned that drivers really don't watch out for motorcyclists.

A RIDER'S NOTEBOOK Andrew Weeks

It happened like this: I checked my mirrors and saw that the road behind me was clear of traffic. As the corner approached where I wanted to turn, I checked my mirrors again, and there it was — a pickup barreling toward me, appearing without the least hesitation of slowing down, even though I had by this time slowed quite a bit.

Where had it come from?

I veered to the shoulder, and the pickup flew by.

Then I cursed, calling the driver names I can't put into print.

Sorry, but that's the way it is with me. I don't have much patience for idiot drivers. And, admittedly, some of them are motorcyclists themselves.

But not this time. This time it was all the pickup, which flew past so quickly I couldn't tell if the driver was a man or a woman.

Not that gender matters. You're either a safe, cautious driver or you are not.

And that means on the road and off the highway.

I knew a guy once who used to ride his motocross bike on dirt trails like a banshee on a Halloween haunt. He was reckless, to say the least. And he'd rarely wear a helmet.

He thought he was invincible, that nothing would ever happen to him, because, well, he was too cool for accidents.

Until he had one. Not a major one, but one serious enough to wake him to the realities of life. I saw him wear his helmet after that — sometimes anyway, which, I guess, is better than not at all.

Time moved on, and so did he. I think he moved to Korea. Whether he took his bike with him or not, I do not know. My guess is he did not.

Wherever he's at I hope the lesson he learned as a teenager has stayed with him; I hope he's not reckless anymore.

As for me, I used to be a crazy fool thinking other drivers paid attention to bikers while on the road.

I'm not a crazy fool anymore. Not in that sense, anyway. Now I know better.

And, thankfully, all I have to show for it is a scratched side shield.

That doesn't mean I've never taken a spill or two. I remember back when ...

Ah, never mind. I'll leave that for another time.

THE SAND RAIL REVISITED

Hagerman man's homemade sand rails gaining a following

By Andrew Weeks
TIMES-NEWS WRITER

Some children learn to walk quicker than others. Jason Bishop learned to ride.

At 39, the Hagerman resident says he's been around off-road vehicles almost since the day he was born.

"My dad was really into it (off-roading)," Bishop says. The machines were Baja buggies, and his dad would take his family into the mountains of Southern California to trail ride. The experiences laid the foundation that Bishop would build upon later in life.

Today Bishop and his wife, Nichole, own their own business — Idaho Sand Rails — and promotes the off-road niche in the Gem State.

Sand rails are not dune buggies, though they are similar. Dune buggies can be street licensed; sand rails cannot.

"Idaho is really kind of oblivious to what a sand rail is," says Bishop, referring to the machines that he builds out of his home garage. "The state won't even recognize them to give me a green sticker."

That will change come January, according to Jeff

Cook, outdoor recreation analyst for the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation. Legislation passed in July states that come 2010, specialty off-highway vehicles such as sand rails, which before were not classified in state code, will require registration.

"It's a very broad category that should take care of sand rails, rock crawlers, and other types of vehicles used exclusively for operation off road," Cook said.

That's good news for Bishop and other riders, such as Tim Varin of Gooding.

Riding is a family affair for former T.F. man

Brett Madron, formerly of Twin Falls, says riding dirt bikes has affected his life in many ways, including helping him become successful as an adult. Though he's accomplished a lot, his most memorable experience has been teaching his wife and daughter how to ride and enjoying the recreation sport as a family.

Even before Brett Madron was given a Yamaha 60 as a gift for his birthday at age 7, his love for all things wheels was set.

Madron, who grew up in Twin Falls, didn't know then that his life would be defined by motorsports.

He's general manager of ProMoto Billet/Fastway Performance in Nampa, and the company's latest project bikes — similar to what audiences see on "American Chopper," used bikes tricked out and polished up then tested for performance — is featured in the November issue of Dirt Rider Magazine. The glossy spread is a dream come true for Madron, a nod to the little boy who grew up on the back of a bike.

"To me that first bike was empowerment as a kid, and the experience stayed with me my whole life," Madron said. "But really, riding was the family atmosphere I grew up in. On the weekends my entire family would head out and we camped and rode in the hills."

Madron, 44, said he was defined by motorcycles. Although he played classic sports, such as football and baseball, he didn't wear those sports jerseys to school like other boys. He arrived in motorcycle jerseys and talked about his favorite riders.

Riding as a family led to closer bonds with his parents, Ben and Laura Madron of Twin Falls. It's a tradition he's kept with his own family. He taught his wife Bekki and daughter Brittaney to ride, and notes that sharing the sport has been a blessing.

Fall chinook harvest season closes Sat.

Salmon fishing in Idaho will be over for the year when the fall Chinook harvest season on the Snake River ends Saturday.

The season opened Sept. 1 on the Snake River between Lewiston and Hells Canyon Dam. As of Oct. 18, anglers had caught 105 marked adult and 514 jack fall Chinook in the Snake River, for a total of 619 fish. Hatchery-origin fish are marked with a clipped adipose fin.

This year more than 15,000 adult fall Chinook and more than 40,000 jacks crossed Lower Granite Dam, most of them returning to the Snake River upstream of Lewiston. The adult return is lower than the pre-season forecast, but the jack return is the largest ever counted at Lower Granite Dam.

The fall Chinook run in the Snake River was protected as a threatened species under the Endangered Species Act in 1992.

Drive on to cut ATV injuries, deaths

By Joe Macaluso
The (Baton Rouge) Advocate

BATON ROUGE, La. — It wasn't too long ago when Karen Ahmad answered a telephone call that changed her life, at least her professional life.

As an intensive care nurse at the Our Lady of the Lake Children's Hospital, Ahmad said she'd seen more than her share of pain in children, but, she said, there was more than alarm on the other end of the line.

"The nurse manager in the emergency room called and said that in the previous three weeks there were six children critically injured in ATV accidents. She asked me to look into it," Ahmad said.

"Stunned" and "shocked" were the two words that came next.

"No one realized how much risk this activity posed for children," she said. "This wasn't on anybody's radar screen."

And, she added, that when the final statistics are out for 2008, she expects to see similar numbers from previous years — about 1,500 children will have been in emergency rooms across the state to seek treatment after riding ATVs.

Yes, there are fatalities among that number.

Ahmad and Todd Tarifa, who heads the ATV Safety Awareness Program for Louisiana 4-H, said the state has taken giant steps in the last four years to try to reduce ATV injuries in children and adults.

"We're coming up on a time of the year, especially this time of year, when kids are on four-wheelers," Tarifa said. "From cane field harvesting to hunting season and time at hunting camps, we know ATV use increases.

"And we're going to see children on 350s and above (ATVs with 350cc engines and larger) and that's almost giving them (children) a death sentence, especially if they are unsupervised," Tarifa said.

Fellow 4-H instructor David Bolt said the first thing parents should do is have an age-appropriate ATV for the child.

"We know it's a financial decision in many cases, and we know there's not a whole lot of instruction that goes on (for a child)," Bolt said. "You have to take a test and pass it to get driver's license. In many cases, children get on an ATV as soon as they can get on one and they take off.

"While it's in the name of having fun, it's the most dangerous activity as far as a moving vehicle as we have in Louisiana."

Ahmad said the more than 1,500 hours she's spent researching children, their injuries and the fatalities has led her to several conclusions.

"The politically correct thing is to cite from the American Academy of Pediatricians and to recommend no child under 16 ride on or operate an all-terrain vehicle," she said. "What I learned was that position has not served us well, and we needed to take another approach than saying no children on ATVs."

She said cautionary words likely will not deter the more than 20,000 youngsters who will ride ATVs this year. Some, she said, are riding the even more dangerous three-wheeled ATVs.

Ahmad said her research turned up four recommendations for safer ATV use, including:

- No children on adult-sized vehicles.

VIDEO AIMS TO INSTRUCT HUNTERS ABOUT TRAIL USE

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

If you're confused about trail etiquette, you are not alone.

But thanks to a new video available on YouTube that discusses that very topic, you can become a walking — er, riding — encyclopedia in no time.

The 6.5-minute video also answers the sometimes challenging question of where to ride and details the importance of staying on trails.

The video, produced jointly by the Stay on Trails campaign and state agencies including the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, is marketed to hunters who use ATVs but can be informative to a broader off-road audience as well. Much of the information will best educate novice riders and hunters, though the video can also serve as a refresher course for long-time trail users.

"There's always some confusion about the OHV hunting rules," said Mike Keckler, communications director for Fish and Game. "We hope the video will help equip hunters with knowledge (about trail usage) before they go out to hunt."

Before hunters head outdoors it's important that they do their homework to find out what trails are open and those that are not, he said. There are some ATV restrictions that apply to hunters, but not general ATV users. Hunters need to know what those restrictions are, Keckler said.

Stay on Trails aims to create a video twice a year as part of its campaign, according to Steve Stuebner, a spokesman for Drake Cooper, the company that developed the trails video.

The fall video usually is directed in some way to hunting. Another video will be available by the end of the year that will deal with registration issues, Stuebner said.

The current video is available on YouTube, and may be accessed through the Stay on Trails or Fish and Game Web sites.

Fish managers plan to stock Boise River with steelhead

BOISE — State fisheries managers plan to stock 300 or more hatchery steelhead in the Boise River between Glenwood Bridge and Barber Park today.

Anglers aiming to catch one of these fish that range in size from 4 pounds to 10 pounds need a valid Idaho fishing license, plus a $12.75 steelhead permit, good for 40 fish.

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game says the fish to be released later this week are among A-run hatchery steelhead that this year returned to the Idaho Power Co.-owned Oxbow Hatchery fish trap below Hell's Canyon Dam on the Snake River.

Dams on the Snake River block steelhead from returning to the Boise River on their own.

Idaho Power's annual efforts to augment endangered wild steelhead runs with hatchery-raised fish from the Oxbow Hatchery are part of its agreements to make up for the negative effects of its electricity-producing dams on wildlife.

Zion NP to reduce shuttle service

ZION NATIONAL PARK, Utah — Mandatory shuttle service in Zion National Park has ended for the season but weekend visitors are still urged to use the shuttles on a voluntary basis.

The park shifted to shuttle-only traffic for March-to-November visitors nine years ago to alleviate congestion and to benefit the environment.

With regular service shut down for the year, park officials will run volunteer shuttle service on Saturdays and Sundays until Nov. 29. The shuttles will operate from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. along Zion Canyon Scenic Drive. There is no charge for riding the shuttles.

Visitors can drive along the main road but are asked to park only in designated places.

Off-road vehicle gets recall

The Associated Press

About 3,900 off-road utility vehicles, made in the U.S. by Bad Boy Enterprises LLC, of Natchez, Miss., have been recalled because they can accelerate without warning, posing a risk of injury to the user and bystanders.

The company has received 32 reports of unexpected acceleration, including reports of injuries such as a

The recall involves Bad Boy Buggy Standard model off-road utility vehicles. Affected models have serial numbers between 85004828 and 95010404. They were sold by authorized dealers nationwide from June 2007 through July 2009.

U.S. gov't eyes off-road recreational vehicles

By Jennifer C. Kerr
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — After scores of deaths, the U.S. government is taking a closer look at off-road recreational vehicles, known as ROVs.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission voted recently to write mandatory rules to regulate the four-wheel vehicles, after more than 100 deaths since 2003. Riders have suffered dozens of injuries, too — some leading to amputations.

ROVs, also called side-by-sides, are two-passenger motorized vehicles designed for drivers 16 years and older. They resemble a cross between a rugged-looking golf cart and a miniature-Jeep, and have a roll cage — metal bars framing the cab.

The industry proposed voluntary regulations for side-by-sides, but commission staffers said they fell short. Agency staff have expressed concern about the vehicles and rollover risks.

The commission will solicit comments from industry, consumer advocates and others as it writes the rules. This is the beginning of a process that could take many months, even years.

ROVs first appeared on the market in the late 1990s. Since 2003, CPSC says 116 people have died, including young children, and more than 150 have been injured. Injuries have involved crushing fractures to legs, feet and arms and some riders have lost limbs.

Safety advocates say the commission's vote puts the industry on notice.

"This is an instance where the industry has not been responding quickly and effectively enough to the well-documented hazards caused by these products," said Rachel Weintraub, director of product safety and senior counsel for the Consumer Federation of America.

ROV makers, however, insist the vehicles are safe.

"We know the vehicles are safe when used responsibly," the Recreational Off-Highway Vehicle Association said in a statement. "We must emphasize the importance of consumers making the right choices when driving an ROV."

Former agency chief, Nancy Nord, first directed CPSC staff to investigate the vehicles and deaths a year ago.

family and friends to ride the backcountry north of Gooding. "There's miles and miles of BLM roads there that are fairly nice to ride. You get to see some interesting country."

Varin formerly rode Baja buggies but sold his when he bought a sand rail, which, he claims, are more versatile.

And with five-point harnesses and a roll cage,

Bishop adds, they're fairly safe.

"There's always a danger element involved, of course," Bishop says, but noting they're heavy-duty machines. And, beside being fun to drive, they can be educational.

"It's a fun family sport, and gives parents the opportunity to teach their kids responsibility before they start driving," he says. "Adults can sit with them, and supervise them, and help teach them driving ethics before they go to driving school."

Bishop's been frustrated that the state hasn't recognize sand rails — because they're a cross between a utility vehicle and a car, he says — but like other enthusiasts, it hasn't stopped him from riding.

"We just go for it anyway," he says.

Bishop and his wife also have helped form the Idaho Sand & Desert Association, an off-road club geared toward the riding niche. They want more people, including lawmakers, to become better educated about the machines.

"There's no criteria. If you've got a four-wheel drive come along and ride with us," Bishop says of the club. "It's been a little slow, but successful. There's a lot of interest."

As for Varin, he plans to try out his machine in the snow this winter, something he hasn't previously done, he says.

Staying warm with these winter-based layers

I'm not sure exactly when humble "long underwear" became "next-to-skin technical base layers." But somewhere over the past decade designers in the outdoors industry switched up the nomenclature and cut words like "skivvies" and "long johns" out of the conversation.

It was an apt decision, however, and not just a marketing ploy.

Indeed, the tight-fitting tops and tights outdoors people wear against their skin have seen serious innovation in recent years. Here are three new and impressive base-layer tops I have been testing lately.

GoLite DriMove BL-2

Longsleeve Zip: It may sound improbable, but this top employs a fabric that has volcanic minerals embedded in its threads.

Called Cocona Minerale, the natural lava rock ingredient is touted to increase wicking, protect from UV sunrays, and add odor control. In my tests, the Longsleeve Zip worked alone as a top for hiking and trail running on cool days, breathing well for hours at a time outside.

The fabric, which has a heavy, textured weave, dries relatively fast once soaked with sweat. Layered under a fleece top and a shell jacket, the Longsleeve Zip has functioned for me as a great foundational piece to aid in comfort, warmth and breathability.

tics heretofore found only on polar bears.

The company cites its fabric as having hollow fibers that mimic bear fur and help retain heat as well as move moisture when you sweat. In my test, the Stripe Crew Graphic top proved to be breathable and warm enough to be worn alone on a cool autumn hike. Or the polypropylene-based top can be a part of a cold-weather kit when worn under an insulating top and a jacket. It comes in several funky styles, including a camouflage motif. According to the company, the modified "bear fur" technology maintains optimum body temperature for "all-day comfort." Indeed, in my tests across a spectrum of temperatures, the Stripe Crew did not disappoint. $45, www.hellyhansen.com.

Mammut Alpine Underwear:

The Zip Longsleeve, a piece from Mammut's "alpine underwear" line, employs polyester and merino wool in a body-mapped pattern that insulates in critical areas and breathes and wicks moisture in other spots.

The back is a thin fabric made to better handle sweat. A turtle-neck zips high and provides a double-thick fabric for warmth. The top's arms are a crisscrossing pattern of seams and swaths that mimic anatomical movement. The fabric has antimicrobial features to avoid odor buildup, letting you go several days between washings.

As a bonus, the svelte lines and cuts on this top double for style points — Mammut's alpine underwear can be worn alone with no issue in public for an edgy, technical look. $80, www.mammut.ch.

Halloween is rooted in ancient sun watching traditions

Halloween, as it happens, is an astronomical holiday. It originates in the ancient Celtic celebration of Samhain (pronounced "sow-in"), an observance of summer's end and the start of the "dark half" of the year.

SKYWATCH

Chris Anderson

Ancient sky watchers could easily tell when solstices occurred: When the sun rises at its most northerly spot on the horizon, it's the summer solstice. Its most southerly sunrise marks the winter solstice. Seen from the same location throughout the year, the solstice sunrise position would correspond to the same feature along the horizon, like a mountain or valley.

The equinoxes are only a little harder to determine by observing the sky. If you've already marked the rising positions of the solstice suns, the equinox sun rises at a point halfway between, namely due east. (The equinoxes are also the days when the sun rises at a right angle from due north.)

Halloween is one of four "cross-quarter days," midway points between equinoxes and solstices (the other well-known cross-quarter holidays being Groundhog Day and May Day.) The actual halfway point between the autumnal equinox and winter solstice is around Nov. 6, but Samhain arrived on the last day of October centuries before the Gregorian calendar, and shifted away from its original date before the observance of leap days stopped the steady shift of dates with respect to the seasons.

Because the sun doesn't move at a steady pace along the horizon throughout the year, it will not rise half way between its equinox and solstice sunrise points on the cross-quarter days.

Determining them requires a counting system capable of counting the length of the seasons and dividing that number in two, which in turn requires a method of representing numbers with numeric symbols, a more sophisticated scheme than simply marking sunrise horizon positions. Thus, we know that Halloween's earliest observance followed the invention of writing.

After graduating from Twin Falls High School in the early 1980s, he earned a degree in drafting from the College of Southern Idaho and later an engineering degree from the University of Idaho. He uses his skills now at ProMoto, a company offering an extensive line of billet aluminum performance motorcycle products.

"He always liked a challenge," said his mother Laura Madron, who recalled how Evel Kniesel stopped to talk to Brett when he came to Twin Falls in 1974 for his famous attempt to jump the Snake River Canyon.

"We live out by the canyon rim and Brett was stopped by Evel and asked if he could jump and pop wheelies," she said. "He was so excited."

Ben Madron said he is proud of his son's involvement in political issues.

Brett Madron's love for dirt bikes began as a boy growing up in Twin Falls. He's currently featured in the November issue of Dirt Rider Magazine.

"Brett was on a committee that worked with Congressman (Mike) Simpson in saving some trails in what would become wilderness land in the White Cloud Mountains," Ben said. "As part of the Idaho Trail Machines, Brett helped a law get passed requiring kids to wear helmets."

The younger Madron says it was the relationships he developed while growing up on the trail that prompted his involvement into sometimes controversial issues.

"We were around people who, if they saw you doing something you shouldn't be, would grab you by the nape of the neck and tell you what you are doing today effects us all," Madron said. "That stuck with me. It was an honor growing up as a trail rider and having good mentors and role models that shaped my beliefs in responsible access."

Education is key and Madron said he'll continue being a champion for respecting the land and other trail users.

"I have a right to access public lands as much as other users, whether they access that land by foot or on horseback. But those other users deserve respect to their access as well. We have to respect each other," he said. "We have to treat the ability to recreate on public lands as a privilege and respect all users."

The future no doubt holds more challenges related to public land access, but it also holds opportunity for Madron.

"I want to teach my future grandkids how to ride and pass on the love of the sport," he said. "I've done a lot but what I'm most proud of is teaching my wife and daughter to ride and our enjoying the sport as a family."

Jerome Chamber honors three residents

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

JEROME — Three long-time Jerome residents were honored earlier this month at the Jerome Chamber of Commerce Citizen of the Year and Lifetime Achievement Awards Luncheon.

The Citizen of the Year is Sherri Mitchell and the Lifetime Achievement Award was presented to Jack and Betty Hyder.

Mayor Charles Correll presented each with a key to the city of Jerome at the luncheon.

The annual awards recognize both chamber members and nonmembers who serve the community.

“It was a shock. There were many, many people who deserved it,” Betty Hyder said of the award for lifetime achievement.

Mitchell had a similar reaction.

“I was shocked,” she said.

Did she expect the award before Chamber Director Dawn Tipton notified her of the honor this past summer?

“No, absolutely no,” Mitchell said of the surprise. “I’m not very good as the center of attention.”

Mitchell and the Hydys rode in the Jerome County Fair parade in August, which was the first public notification of the awards.

Jerome Co. to crack down on road wear from trucks, pivots

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

JEROME — Jerome County Commissioners on Monday requested that a notice go out to county residents and property owners warning that overweight agricultural trucks on county roadways and irrigation sprinklers spraying onto public highways are illegal.

“We’re going to kill two birds with one stone. If you drive an overweight vehicle or you get water on the road you are going to be sited,” said Jerome County Planning and Zoning Administrator Art Brown.

He said concerns are both for health and safety and repairs to roads at taxpayer expense.

Brown said he expects the enforcement program to save the county money over time.

“I’m going to work in cooperation with the sheriff’s office,” said County Code Enforcement Officer Bob Wright. “I’ll identify the property and take samples and take them to Magic Valley Lab.”

He said the Jerome County Prosecutor’s Office would address complaints.

Concerns about irrigation sprinklers spraying onto roadways include the presence of liquid animal waste in some instances.

“We’re working with the Department of Agriculture,” Wright said.

Brown requested that people witnessing violations contact the sheriff’s office at 644-2770 or code enforcement at 644-2713.

Jerome County Commission amends CAFO expansion

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

JEROME — The Jerome County Commission approved a site plan change Tuesday that amends a Confined Animal Feeding Operation approval from last April.

Six months ago, the commission approved an expansion from 365 to 1,160 animal units for Aardema Dairy No. 7, in the northern part of Jerome County, near 700 North Road and U.S. Highway 93. The owner has since decided to change the boundary of the operation.

There are no increases in the maximum number of allowed animal units.

Following a public hearing with no opposition, the commission approved the application with conditions for gravel roadway approaches and that the applicant enters into a lease agreement to store water at an off-site water bank.

“During construction of some of the ponds, the applicant decided to make some changes,” said engineer Matt Thompson, of AGtec, of Twin Falls, who represented Aardema at a public hearing Tuesday.

Leroy Lewis, of Jerome County Highway District, asked for the condition requiring gravel on roadway approaches to the property.

Fabric made of almost anything but cotton causes skin rash

DEAR DR. GOTT: You recently published a letter from someone who wrote about a skin rash. The person had tried various creams, lotions and had been to several dermatologists for treatment and medication, with little or no help.

I am an 83-year-old male. About 20 years ago, I had this same problem. My wife suggested that I stop wearing clothes that had polyester, wool or acrylic. I began wearing only cotton underclothes, shirts, sweaters, etc. The rash cleared up within weeks, and I have not had it since. If I do wear a sweater and sit in a chair covered with polyester for any length of time, I can feel the itching coming on.

I enjoy your column very much and read it every morning. I have found many helpful tidbits of information and now sleep with soap under my sheets every night to prevent my leg cramps.

DEAR READER: This is yet another cause of skin rash that is commonly overlooked. Most physicians think of detergents and soaps but not the actual fabrics as being skin irritants.

Wool is a natural material that is known for causing itchy skin and rashes owing to its coarse nature. Both polyester and acrylic fabrics are synthetic and are relatively smooth on the skin. Cotton is both natural and easy on the skin. In fact, cotton has made a huge comeback, as more and more people are interested in easy-to-care-for, comfortable, sturdy fabrics.

Thanks for writing to share your story. I hope it will help others suffering from persistent skin rashes that fail to respond to treatment. I’m also glad the soap reduced your leg cramps.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I need a hearing aid. The cost is a big factor. I have often wondered why there are never any used ones offered by the hearing-aid sellers. There must be many that could be made available at a big savings. In an age of relatively inexpensive electronics, hearing aids have not come down in price. Could it be that the manufacturers have this under control?

DEAR READER: Hearing aids have not come down in price because each device is custom-made. Every person's ear canal is shaped differently. To ensure proper fit and function, the hearing aid must be shaped to fit comfortably yet snugly. If it were one size fits all, many people would find that the aids are too big or too small, causing discomfort and dislodging.

If you have health insurance and can show medical necessity, part, if not all, may be covered; however, many insurance companies will not cover the costs. I suggest you seek out a place that will work with you to find an affordable hearing aid and set up a payment plan.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Recently, you printed a letter about using nail hardener to remove moles. I have many seborrheic keratoses that itch, bleed and are extremely annoying. I have a skin check every year.

DEAR READER: The nail-hardener remedy is beneficial for the removal of skin tags. I have received only one letter stating that it was used successfully to remove moles. However, I have heard from several readers about using mentholated chest rub to remove a seborrheic keratosis.

To provide related information, I am sending you copies of my Health Reports "Compelling Home Remedies" and "More Compelling Home Remedies." Other readers who would like copies should send a self-

Wolf 716, shown before she was killed in September, was part of Yellowstone's closely watched Cottonwood Creek pack. Four of the pack's 10 wolves are thought to be dead.

Wolf hunt is stalked by controversy

By Kim Murphy
Los Angeles Times

GARDINER, Mont. — Wolf 527 was a survivor. She lived through a rival pack's crippling 12-day siege of her den. When another pair of wolves laid down stakes in her territory, she killed the mother and picked off the pups while the invader's mate howled nearby in frustration and fury.

She was not a charmer. But successful wolves are not known for their geniality. As the alpha female of the Cottonwood Creek pack, she also was equipped with a radio collar so wildlife biologists could track her movements, making her one of Yellowstone National Park's best-known wolves.

Then she ventured outside the park boundaries.

Wolf 527 was killed Oct. 3 by a hunter on Buffalo Plateau north of Yellowstone, less than three weeks into Montana's backcountry elk season. Wolves often stalk elk outside the park and are attracted by entrails the hunters leave behind. But this year, the elk season coincided with the opening of the state's first wolf hunt in modern times.

"She was a genius wolf in her tactics," said Laurie Lyman, a former San Diego County teacher who has spent the past five years tracking the recovery of the endangered gray wolves that were reintroduced into Yellowstone in 1995. "Her strategies were just unbelievable. She knew how to survive anything, but she didn't know how to survive a man with a gun."

Park officials believe that of the nine gray wolves shot during those first weeks, four of the Cottonwood pack of 10 — including 527's mate, the alpha male, and her daughter — died, effectively ending research into one of the park's most important study groups.

"Whether the pack exists anymore or not, to us the pack is gone," said Doug Smith, the biologist in charge of the Yellowstone reintroduction program that helped bring wolves back from the brink of extinction in the Northern Rockies. Cottonwood "was a key pack on the northern range," he said, giving researchers a window into the existence of animals that had little or no interaction with humans.

State wildlife officials, caught off guard by the ease with which the wolves were cut down, called off the backcountry hunt along a section of Yellowstone's northern boundary for the rest of the year.

An additional four wolves were shot in southern Montana after the general hunt started Sunday. The quota for that part of the state was 12 wolves.

Hunting will remain open through Nov. 29 in northern and western Montana, where 10 wolves out of the state's overall quota of 75 have been shot. Wildlife officials have held out the option of extending the hunt through Dec. 31 if the quota isn't met.

State officials are allowing hunters this year to take up to 220 in Idaho. Federal protections remain in Wyoming.

"We've got quite a number of other border packs.

So people need to decide how hunting's going to occur on the park boundaries," Smith said. "Whose wolves are they? Are they national wolves? Montana wolves? And we have to decide what is the value of our research on wolf populations that are not affected by people?"

Conservationists fear that allowing the wolves to be targeted just four months after they were removed from the endangered species list could damage the recovery process. They have argued for delaying a hunt until at least 2,000 wolves have gained a foothold in the region. About 1,600 are now in the three-state region.

Yet nearby residents are concerned about what they consider a predator that under federal protection has broadened its territory and become shockingly adept at killing.

"Those wolves they're talking about in Yellowstone are all over the place out here. They're traveling everywhere," said Ryan Counts, a hunting guide and team-rope rodeo rider from the town of Pray, who shot Wolf 527. "They're just decimating our elk herd and everything else. They're bothering cows all the time."

In Dillon, 180 miles northwest of Yellowstone, a rancher in late August found the carcasses of 122 purebred adult sheep strewn in bloody heaps in his pasture. It was the worst livestock predation in memory — an example of the ability of wolves to kill for the pure pleasure of it — and wildlife officials authorized the killing of the entire pack.

Here in the Paradise Valley, which winds through snow-dusted peaks on either side of the Yellowstone River, many blame wolves for the destruction of the northern Yellowstone elk herd, whose numbers are down 60 percent since the predators were reintroduced to the park from Canada.

Federal biologists say bears, drought and hunters are partly to blame for the decline, but it's hard to find anyone in these small towns who doesn't blame wolves.

"We're starting to see the wildlife just disappear," said Randy Petrich, a rancher and big-game outfitter. "If all these people who are for the wolves only knew what was out here now. It's dead. It's beautiful country, but there's nothing living in it. No deer. No elk. I think it's going to be a brutal winter."

Wolf 527 and her daughter, 716, originated from two of the best-known packs in Yellowstone's Lamar Valley, the scene of numerous documentaries. For years, the movements of the Lamar packs have been monitored by biologists equipped with radio tracking devices and powerful spotting telescopes.

"They sold this wolf hunt in Montana and Idaho as controlling the predation on cattle and what-not. Well, these wolves aren't touching cattle. They're feeding on elk. They're doing what they're supposed to do," said Tom Murphy, a wildlife photographer who has been documenting the Yellowstone wolves.

Coyotes kill woman on hike in Canadian park

By Rob Gillies
Associated Press writer

TORONTO — Two coyotes attacked a promising young musician as she was hiking alone in a national park in eastern Canada, and authorities said she died Wednesday of her injuries.

The victim was identified as Taylor Mitchell, 19, a singer-songwriter from Toronto who was touring her new album on the East Coast. She was hiking solo on a trail in Cape Breton Highlands National Park in Nova Scotia on Tuesday when the attack occurred. She was airlifted to a Halifax hospital in critical condition and died Wednesday morning, authorities said.

Coyotes, which also are known as prairie wolves, are found from Central America to the United States and Canada.

Wildlife biologist Bob Bancroft said coyote attacks are extremely rare because the animals are usually shy.

Bancroft, a retired biologist with Nova Scotia's Department of Natural Resources, said it's possible the coyotes thought Mitchell was a deer or other prey.

"It's very unusual and is not likely to be repeated," Bancroft said. "We shouldn't assume that coyotes are suddenly going to become the big bad wolf."

Royal Canadian Mounted Police spokeswoman Brigdit Leger said other hikers heard Mitchell's screams for help on Tuesday and called emergency police dispatchers.

Mitchell

Police who were in the area reached the scene quickly and shot one of the animals, apparently wounding it. But the wounded animal and a companion coyote managed to get away.

Paul Maynard of Emergency Health Services said Mitchell already was in critical condition when paramedics arrived on the scene and had multiple bite wounds over her entire body.

"She was losing a considerable amount of blood from the wounds," he said.

An official with Parks Canada said they blocked the entrance to the trail where Mitchell was attacked and were trying to find the animals to determine what prompted such an unusual attack.

"There's been some reports of aggressive animals, so it's not unknown," said Helene Robichaud, the park's superintendent. "But we certainly never have had anything so dramatic and tragic."

Mitchell was an up-and-coming folk and country musician who was nominated for a 2009 Canadian Folk Music Award in the Young Performer of the Year category.

Car bomb kills 105 in crowded Pakistan market

By Riaz Khan and Robert Burns
Associated Press writers

PESHAWAR, Pakistan — Suspected militants exploded a car bomb in a market crowded with women and children Wednesday, killing 105 people and turning shops selling wedding dresses, toys and jewelry into a mass of burning debris and bodies.

The attack in the northwestern city of Peshawar was Pakistan's deadliest since 2007 and came as U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton visited the country to offer support for its fight against a strengthening al-Qaida and Taliban-led insurgency based along the Afghan border.

Clinton was three hours' drive away in the capital meeting Pakistani government leaders when the bomb went off in Peshawar. Her trip was not announced in advance in Pakistan for security reasons.

The bomb was directed squarely at civilians, unlike many previous blasts that have targeted security forces or government or Western interests.

While no one claimed responsibility, the bomb appeared aimed at undercutting public and political support for an ongoing army offensive against militants close to the frontier and showing that the government was unable to keep its people safe.

The shaky, U.S.-backed government said the bombing — the latest in a series this month — had strengthened its resolve to press ahead with the assault in the South Waziristan border region, a militant stronghold and a global training and operations hub for al-Qaida.

At least 60 of the dead were women and children. Most security analysts said the attack could backfire on the insurgents and lead more people to inform on them.

Guest house horror

Afghan police officers rescue a wounded German U.N. staffer from a U.N. guest house during a gun battle in Kabul, Afghanistan, Wednesday.

U.N. workers scramble over roofs during Kabul attack

By Robert H. Reid and Heidi Vogt
Associated Press writers

KABUL — There was no way out for Miles Robertson, working in Afghanistan as a U.N. elections adviser. He was awakened by gunfire and feared he and his wife would be taken hostage.

First, the lanky Australian started to step onto the balcony of the guest house where he and dozens of other U.N. staffers were staying, but shots drove him back inside. Finally, the room filling with smoke and fearing he and his wife would not survive, they placed moist towels over their faces, climbed out a window and scrambled over the roof until they could jump to safety.

Taliban militants wearing suicide vests and armed with guns and grenades had attacked the three-story residential hotel at dawn Wednesday in what their spokesman said was a bid to derail the Nov. 7 runoff election.

After a two-hour battle, 11 people were dead — including five U.N. staff members and the three attackers. One of the dead was American, the U.S. Embassy said.

The visibly shaken chief of the United Nations' mission in Afghanistan, Kai Eide, told reporters the attack "will not deter the U.N. from continuing all its work" in the country.

"We will not be deterred from this noble mission," U.N. Secretary-General Ban Ki-moon said in New York.

But the attacks underscored the risks facing U.N. and Afghan officials in organizing a runoff election following the fraud-marred first-round vote

Aug. 20, and the massive challenge for the U.S.-led military force in curbing the determined Taliban insurgency.

They also showed how vulnerable foreigners are in Afghanistan, even in Kabul, which has been relatively secure after eight years of war.

The attack began shortly before 6 a.m. when three gunmen wearing green police uniforms broke into the guest house, home to the largest concentration of U.N. staffers working on the election. The crackle of gunfire echoed across the city and explosions set fire to the building, filling the lobby and the upper floors with thick smoke.

"I was praying when suddenly I heard loud gunfire, then return fire," said Agha Mohammad Osman who lives nearby. "We ran inside our homes to remain safe. The gunfire hit the door and then the attackers got inside the guest house. Foreign guests inside were crying out for help, but we could not help them."

As gunfire and grenade blasts rocked the building, Robertson quickly bolted the door and hid his wife in the closet, hoping the Taliban would believe the room was vacant.

Fire broke out in the room next door, and smoke billowed into their hiding place.

"We realized that there was no way for us to go out under the stairs or any way for us to come outside," Robertson said. "I opened the window and stepped out to the landing out front, and had a volley of shots fired at me."

He ducked back into the bedroom, but it had filled with smoke. He worried about dying of smoke inhalation.

"I went bathroom, wet a towel and kept it over the face of my wife and myself as we crouched beside the window," he said.

Outside, "there was a lot of indistinguishable yelling and calling," Robertson said.

He and his wife climbed out a window as the fire raged and ran over the roofs of neighboring houses to a friend's home nearby.

Meanwhile, John Christopher "Chris" Turner of Kansas City, Mo., who works for a trucking company on contract to the U.S. military, said he grabbed an AK-47 rifle and scammed through the guest house's upper floors, pounding on doors to alert his fellow residents.

Turner said he assembled about 25 terrified guests and along with a Nepalese man poured gunfire at the attackers as they led the group into the laundry room. They locked themselves inside as U.N. guards returned fire, he said.

"I carry an AK-47 and I kept firing it to keep the attackers away from the group I was guarding," Turner said, describing how he shot from the entrance of the laundry room. The group later jumped over a back wall to take refuge in a house behind the guest house, he said.

Turner called his father in suburban Kansas City after the attack, 82-year-old Lionel Turner told The Associated Press.

"He said he was burned a little, but that he wasn't hurt," the father said. "He's got more guts than a Missouri mule."

Mysterious letter in a bottle captivates British public

By Raphael G. Satter
Associated Press writer

LONDON — A mysterious missive apparently written by a French-speaking woman to her married lover has washed onto a British beach and into the imagination of the U.K. media.

The three pages of passionate writing and a lock of brown hair were found in a beer bottle half buried on a beach in Cornwall, in southwest England, over the weekend. Now the unknown author's message of heartache has been broadcast across British radio and the Internet.

Local coast guard official Martin Leslie said he was out with his family on Saturday when he found the Heineken bottle, whose top was sealed with red candle wax.

He said he became concerned when he made out vague references to love and death in the letter and contacted French authorities.

"I had to assume this was a possible suicide," he told the AP in a telephone interview arranged by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency.

But French officials identified the message as a romantic letter addressed to a married man, he said. He said he believed the author could not tell her lover how she felt "so she threw it into the sea."

"I assume it was because he was married," he added.

Excerpts from the unsigned message were broadcast on the BBC's "Six O'Clock News" and the story was a popular item on its Web site.

"Thank you for having given me back this crazy, new shot of life," the author wrote, according to a translation broadcast by the BBC. "These magic moments are pure secret."

There was no immediate way to know where the letter came from or whether it was genuine, but Leslie said he believed the bottle originated from the coast of northern France. He said it was dated Sept. 25 of this year.

Leslie added that he was willing to make the letter public because it didn't seem to have any identifying information on it.

"There's no name on it, no address and that," he said. "I don't want to break up a marriage."

Panel says $11 million air safety study unreliable

By Rita Beamish
Associated Press writer

An $11 million air safety study sponsored by NASA that asked pilots to reveal mishaps and problems they encountered was so riddled with flaws that it could not provide useful insights about U.S. flight safety, according to a new review by a national scientific panel.

The research project ran for nearly four years and involved telephone interviews that lasted about 30 minutes with 29,000 pilots. But it was so flawed in its design and how it was run that its results were useless for measuring safety problems or trends, according to a report released Wednesday by the National Research Council.

The report is the latest critique of the now-defunct program. The project became known publicly two years ago when The Associated Press disclosed that NASA wouldn't provide the results despite a Freedom of Information Act request. NASA told AP that disclosing its sensitive findings could harm airline profits and public confidence in the carriers.

When Congress demanded an explanation and expressed interest in continuing the project, NASA's then-administrator, Michael Griffin, said the survey did not meet the space agency's scientific and research standards and would not be resurrected.

The pilot interviews were conducted from 2001 to 2004.

NASA asked the National Research Council to evaluate the project's methodology and analyze what the pilots said. However, the panel declined to analyze the results themselves, citing the difficulty in working with the censored data that NASA turned over.

NASA has said it censored parts of the data to protect commercial secrets and the anonymity of pilots. Their names were never included, but NASA officials worried someone could scrutinize information about plane types, flights and locations to identify pilots.

"We would have liked to have had the opportunity to see the entire data set," said Clinton V. Oster, Jr., co-chairman of the National Research panel who is associate dean at Indiana University's School of Public and Environmental Affairs. "We'll never know what might have happened if we had."

But Oster said the research project's flaws extended beyond the censored data.

"The extent and magnitude of these problems raises concerns about the accuracy and reliability of the data," the new report said.

NASA's new moon rocket makes first test flight

By Marcia Dunn
Associated Press writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — NASA's newest rocket successfully completed a brief test flight Wednesday, the first step in a back-to-the-moon program that could yet be shelved by the White House.

The 327-foot Ares I-X rocket resembled a giant white pencil as it shot into the sky, delayed a day by poor weather.

Nearly twice the height of the spaceship it's supposed to replace — the shuttle — the skinny experimental rocket carried no passengers or payload, only throwaway ballast and hundreds of sensors. The flight cost $445 million.

NASA said the flight was a tremendous success, based on early indications.

"Oh, man. Well, how impressive is that?" said Jeff Hanley, manager of NASA's space frontier program, known as Constellation. "You've accomplished a great step forward for exploration," he told launch controllers.

It was the first time in nearly 30 years that a new rocket took off from Kennedy Space Center. Columbia made the maiden voyage for the shuttle fleet back in 1981.

Liftoff, in fact, occurred 48 years and one day after the first launch of a Saturn rocket, a precursor to what carried astronauts to the moon during the Apollo program. The Saturn V moon rockets were the tallest ever built, an impressive 363 feet.

Wednesday's launch, three years in the making, represented the first step in NASA's effort to return astronauts to the moon. The White House, though, is re-evaluating the human space-flight program and may dump the Ares I in favor of another type of rocket and possibly another destination.

The test flight attracted a large crowd.

The prototype moon rocket took off through a few clouds from a former shuttle launch pad at 11:30 a.m., 3½ hours late because of bad weather. Launch controllers had to retest the rocket systems after more than 150 lightning strikes were reported around the pad overnight. Then they had to wait out interfering rain clouds, the same kind that thwarted Tuesday's try.

The ballistic flight did not come close to reaching space and, as expected, lasted a mere two minutes. That's how long it took for the first-stage solid-fuel booster to burn out and separate from the mock upper stage 25 miles up. But it will take months to analyze all the data from the approximately 725 pressure, strain and acceleration sensors.

Parachutes popped open and dropped the booster into the Atlantic, where recovery ships waited.

The upper portion of the rocket — all fake parts — were hurtled to an estimated altitude of 28 miles and then fell uncontrolled into the ocean. Those pieces were never meant to be retrieved.

It was all over in six minutes. "Think about what we just did. Our first flight test and the only thing we're waiting on was weather," launch director Ed Mango told his team.

Welcome to Little League Lite

Fans of the Jerome, Minico, Burley, Kimberly or Wendell football programs, cover your eyes. You may not like where this is headed.

A couple of years ago I asked a SCIC football coach why District IV declined the opportunity to share a pre-bracketed rotating fourth seed with District VI in the Class 3A ranks. His reply: It's pointless to send the fourth-place team to get killed by Shelley every other year.

Instead, a 1-7 Teton team

came to undefeated Kimberly in 2007. As expected, it wasn't much of a contest. Teton had no business being in the play-offs that year. The same could be said in any year for any number of teams that qualify. In fact, District IV could be one of this year's biggest offenders.

I somewhat understand Jerome's and Kimberly's advancement. They both finished second in their conference and had winning records. While pre-bracketing to guarantee playoff spots to non-district champions is ridiculous, in my opinion, there is something to be said for finishing second.

Phils top Yanks in WS opener

By Ben Walker
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Look out for Cliff Lee, Chase Utley and this New Red Machine. Lee outdueled CC Sabathia, Utley homered twice and the Philadelphia Phillies kept rolling through October, beating the New York Yankees 6-1 on a misty Wednesday night in the World Series opener.

The defending champion Phillies shut down Alex Rodriguez & Co. in the first Series game at the new billion-dollar Yankee Stadium.

Up north: XC runners head to Worley for state

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

High school cross country runners across southern Idaho will begin a few-hundred-mile trek to Worley this weekend to compete for championships decided by three miles and possibly a fraction of a second.

The 2009 Idaho Cross Country Championship begins Saturday at Circling Raven Golf Course, and runners from 16 area high schools will represent District IV.

One factor that runners will have zero control over is the weather in north Idaho. Rain showers are forecasted for Saturday with a high of 51 degrees and a low of 35, according to Weather.com. The course is mostly flat with some rolling hills, but runners won't have as good a grip on the ground. Part of the course path covers a wooden bridge, so spiked shoes are not allowed.

The Twin Falls High School teams will face new challenges as they race against new competition following the move to Class 4A.

Coach Marty Grindstaff said his runners perform well in big meets, and it doesn't get much bigger than state. The boys are looking to follow up on their 2008 Class 5A team

CHAMPIONSHIP

What to watch for as 10 area volleyball teams compete at state tourneys

CLASS 4A

At Post Falls High School Twin Falls: The Bruins have a favorable first-round matchup against a familiar foe — they beat Century 2-1 in match play earlier this season. "We know what they're going to do, we know who their good players are and who they're going to set," said coach B.J. Price. But we don't assume anything. They might bring a better game."

Minico: The Spartans open with Kuna, a team they split with at a Boise tournament earlier this season. Although its Minico's first state tourney appearance in five years, the Spartans are a senior-laden group that doesn't get rattled.

Outlook: Sandpoint and Bonneville have combined to win eight of the last nine Class 4A titles. The perennial powers are potential semifinal opponents for Twin Falls and Minico.

CLASS 3A

At Coeur d'Alene High School Kimberly: The Bulldogs did well to finish third a season ago, after going two-and-out in each of the prior two seasons. This year they look to turn the corner and threaten Sugar-Salem's strangle-hold on the title. Kimberly opens up against Shelley.

Filer: The Wildcats had to go the play-in route for the second straight year, where they beat Weiser for the second straight year to get to state. For coach Ed Richards, getting there was the key, as Filer has already bagged victories against contenders Snake River and Kimberly this year. "If we can play consistent, solid volleyball, we can play with anyone," he said. Filer opens against St. Maries, runner-up in the last two seasons.

Outlook: No District IV team has reached the 3A championship round since Gooding did it in 2004, and the district has never produced a 3A volleyball champion, though Filer has two 2A titles from the 1990s to go with a Class B title from 1978. Sugar-Salem has won the last three 3A titles, and is the big favorite for a four-peat.

CLASS 2A

At Lakeland High School Declo: Making its first state tourney showing since 1989, Declo is battle-tested, having survived back-to-back five-set matches to win the Canyon Conference last week. The Hornets face West Jefferson in the first round, a team they split with at a West Jefferson tournament in September.

Outlook: After an up and down season, Declo will need to be "up" this weekend as it faces much tougher competition than what they saw in the Canyon Conference. According to Declo coach Krissy Darrington, the Hornets "have an on-off switch. When they're on, you can't stop them." Defending state champ Parma looms in the second round.

CLASS 1A DIV. 1

At Lewis-Clark State College Hagerman: The Pirates won the last unified 1A title in 2007, and placed third in the inaugural 1A Division I a season ago. But Hagerman has lost most of the key cogs from those two trophy runs. The Pirates, who placed third in their own division before doing likewise at the district tournament, will have to recapture the state tournament magic to make a run. They start with Genesee, a team they beat last year at state.

Shoshone: After stumbling in the district tournament, the Indians rallied to second place and an automatic state berth. The trio of Taylor Astle, Shelby Bozutto and Kelcie Hutchins leads the Indians, who get solid play from their other starters and reserve players. Shoshone begins against 17-4 Troy.

Outlook: Shoshone has a huge advantage over the rest of the field: The Indians are the only team to hang a loss on Challis this season. Still, the Vikings are heavy favorites.

CLASS 1A DIV. II

At Lewiston High School Dietrich: The Blue Devils took full advantage of hosting the Northside Conference Tournament, beating top-seeded Camas County and No. 3 Carey en route to the title. Dietrich finished third in the state tournament a season ago, behind Richfield and Garden Valley.

Camas County: The Musers breezed through the regular season but took a big hit at a bad time when setter Erica Phantharasen went down with appendicitis the week of the district tournament. Her health will go a long way in determining Camas County's fate.

Carey: The Panthers have been steady, if unspectacular this season, but did enough to clinch a state tournament berth.

Outlook: The defending champion is in the field, but don't be surprised if the title comes to District IV. Dietrich and Camas County are both talented enough to pull it off, with Carey lurking under the radar.

Carey caps regular season with rout of rival Richfield

Times-News

Dillon Simpson rushed for two touchdowns, recorded two interceptions and had seven tackles as Carey capped its regular season with a 56-6 home win over Richfield on Friday.

Gonzalo Zarate rushed six times for 126 yards and three touchdowns, including the final one late in the third quarter, which ended the game on the mercy rule.

"We had a good defensive effort against some quick kids from Richfield," said Carey coach Lane Kirkland. "Our offense executed extremely well. We looked really fast and got off the ball well."

Trevor Peck caught on of Caleb Cenarrusa's two touchdown passes and led Carey with eight tackles. Tyler Chavez added seven touchdowns.

Carey (8-1, 7-1 Northside Conference) will host a first-round playoff game Nov. 7, against either North Gem or Dietrich.

Richfield (4-5, 3-5) got its lone touchdown on a pass from Michael Lezamiz to Tucker Smith. The loss eliminated the Tigers from postseason contention.

championship with this year's 4A title, and the girls want to bring home some hardware as well.

"I anticipate we'll bring home two trophies," Grindstaff said, "but I don't know what color they'll be."

On the boys side, teams from District IV include the Bruins, Jerome and Wood River.

"It's less competition but still the same level of talent," Twin Falls runner Alex Schenk said, referring to the number of runners. He listed Bishop Kelly of Boise and Hillcrest as teams to watch.

"B.K. ... we've only raced them once, so we don't know if that was their best. We've faced Hillcrest enough to know that they won't pull out any miracles."

- Twin Falls runner Alex Schenk

The champion from District IV, Wood River's Chase Caulkins, told the Times-News following the state qualifier last week that he's close to peaking and knows who to watch for.

"There's one kid from Bishop Kelly who's pretty good," he said. "Then (Erik) Harris and Schenk from Twin. But otherwise, that's about it. I should do pretty good."

Caulkins finished sixth in the 2008 championship race. Harris placed 11th in the 5A race last year, while teammate Schenk came in 28th.

Dunia Emmanuel, the lone qualifier from Canyon Ridge High School, placed 21st a year ago when he raced as a Bruin.

On the girls side, teams from Twin Falls, Jerome and Wood River qualified at last week's district meet, and two runners who finished in the 2008 top 10 are back. Mackenzie Chojnacky of Jerome, who placed third, and Amanda Ward, who was 10th in 5A, are back. Add into the mix Jerome runner Mikesell Clegg, who finished in the top 20. In addition to these girls, Bishop Kelly and Hillcrest are both also in contention for some medals. "We'll definitely have our hands full," Ward said. Gooding runner Mike McHan won't settle for second place in Class 3A. He's already won that medal, and now he wants to win it all. "I'm hoping that if I can run a smart race, maybe I'll pull off a win," he said.

District IV will send teams from Gooding, Kimberly and Buhl, which includes two runners who finished in the top ten last year: Filer's Bryce Beard (sixth) and Kimberly's Clay Stout (seventh). Teams to look out for are Sugar-Salem, Teton and Kimberly, according to McHan.

The Gooding and Kimberly girls teams also qualified. The Senators had a strong showing at the district race, as four runners placed in the top five, including Ashley Bullers, the district champ, and Caitlin Pickens, who placed ninth at state last year. The Kimberly girls team placed second last year.

Declo's Davis Jones booked a return trip to state in the 2A ranks, and the district champ could improve on his top 20 finish from '08. The Hornets boys and girls teams both qualified to race, as did the Oakley boys and Valley girls. Sasha Kent of Richfield, who won the girls district title, is also a state returnee. She placed in the top 20 last year as well.

CSI volleyball getting back to early-season goals

By David Bashore

Times-News writer

The College of Southern Idaho volleyball team has it all to do again.

That's just the way the Golden Eagles want it.

After spending the last six weeks hovering in the Top 3 of the national polls, including three nonconsecutive weeks at No. 1, CSI found itself sixth in this week's final poll after a shocking loss at Eastern Utah on Friday.

But the team and coaches took the news in stride, finding a way to stir motivation from it instead of despair.

"It's going to be nice," said CSI head coach Heidi Cartisser, noting her team plays better with a chip on its shoulder, like it has a point to prove. "Sometimes when you're on top you just kind of look around, and you're on top. It's better to be able to keep improving, keep building."

Or building, renovating and rebuilding, in CSI's case.

The goals haven't changed from the beginning of the season, nor has the confidence wavered — CSI has beaten three of the top four-ranked teams in the nation this season. The CEU loss, which didn't really affect CSI's standing as far as hosting rights for the Region 18 Tournament goes, allowed the team to get back to the basics.

"We don't really have to prove anything to ourselves," said freshman middle Alyssa Everett. "We've had big wins against Salt Lake (Community College), (North Idaho College) and Blinn (Texas). We just needed to refocus and get back to doing what we need to in order to win each game. It's just a bump in the road."

Everett and Cartisser agreed the bump's arrival was better-timed than last season, when it happened in the regional tournament in a semifinal loss to North Idaho.

Practice tempo didn't change much, nor did the tone. A few meetings here, a little extra work, but the mood is still positive. And with everything to play for in the regular-season's final week, that's a good thing for Cartisser and her crew.

"We still have a lot to work for, and a lot to accomplish," Cartisser said. "And a short time to do it all in."

CSI closes the regular season with a 7 p.m. home match today with Snow College, before hosting Salt Lake on Saturday (3 p.m.).

Most eyes might be fixed on Coeur d'Alene tonight, where the North Idaho-Salt Lake winner clinches the top seed and hosting rights for the Region 18 Tournament, but CSI's focus is on the Badgers, and the Badgers only.

"We know we have to take

Mont. jury awards $850,

Gay Culverhouse, former president of the Tampa Bay Buccaneers, right, accompanied by NFL Players Association Executive Director DeMaurice Smith, center, and NFL Commissioner Roger Goodell, testifies on Capitol Hill in Washington, Wednesday before the House Judiciary Committee hearing on legal issues relating to football head injuries.

Goodell defends NFL to Congress about concussions

WASHINGTON — NFL commissioner Roger Goodell did not acknowledge a connection between head injuries on the football field and later brain diseases while defending the league's policies on concussions before Congress on Wednesday.

That frustrated several members of the House Judiciary Committee, including the committee chairman, Michigan Democrat John Conyers, when Goodell told him the NFL isn't waiting for that debate to play out and is taking steps to make the game safer.

"I just asked you a simple question. What is the answer?" persisted Conyers.

Goodell replied by saying a medical expert could give a better answer than he could. But some House members complained later that Dr. Ira Casson, chairman of the NFL's committee on concussions, had not testified.

Rep. Linda Sanchez, D-Calif., gave Casson some exposure anyway, playing a clip of a TV interview in which he denied evidence of a link between multiple head injuries in NFL players with brain disorders such as dementia and Alzheimer's.

Sanchez said that reminded her of tobacco companies denying a link between smoking and health damage in the 1990s.

Goodell testified alongside new NFL Players Association leader DeMaurice Smith, who said the union "has not done its best in this area. We will do better." Both men did agree to turn over players' medical records to the committee.

SEAHAWKS PLACE JONES ON IR

RENTON, Wash. — Never one to bask in attention, Walter Jones sat down in front of prying eyes and ears. And he sighed.

"Oh, man," the Seahawks' six-time All-Pro left tackle said.

His pain in detailing the end to his season and perhaps his illustrious career is nothing compared to the aching he feels inside from his surgically repaired knee when he walks or even sits, let alone tries to practice.

The 35-year-old finally went on Seattle's injured reserve list Wednesday. It ends months of trying to return from the two surgeries the nine-time Pro Bowl selection has had on his left knee since he last played last Thanksgiving.

Yet instead of retiring with riches and nothing left to prove, the pre-eminent left tackle of his time wants to trudge through many more months of rehabilitation and perhaps a third surgery to attempt a return in 2010.

RAMS GET LINEBACKER VOBORA BACK FROM SUSPENSION

ST. LOUIS — St. Louis Rams linebacker David Vobora took the majority of snaps with the first string Wednesday in his first practice since a four-game suspension for violating the NFL's substance abuse policy.

The second-year player from Idaho said Wednesday he did nothing wrong and plans to file a lawsuit over the matter.

"The system is difficult because I made every move I possibly could to check on certain supplements, got it checked out a number of times through the NFL hotline, and they told me there was nothing that could possibly trigger positive tests," Vobora said.

COOLEY HAS ANKLE SURGERY, OUT A MONTH

WASHINGTON — The Washington Redskins say tight end Chris Cooley could return to action in a month after having an operation on his broken right ankle.

Cooley's surgery was Wednesday, two days after he was injured in the first half of Washington's 27-17 loss to the Philadelphia Eagles.

The Redskins originally feared the two-time Pro Bowl player could be sidelined for two months and might have to go on injured reserve, missing the rest of the season.

After Wednesday's operation, though, he is expected to miss four weeks, barring any setbacks.

Cooley, who has never missed a game since the Redskins drafted him in the third round in 2004, has 29 catches for 332 yards and two touchdowns this season.

CHIEFS SUSPEND RB LARRY JOHNSON

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The Kansas City Chiefs have suspended running back Larry Johnson until Nov. 9.

The club is on its bye week so Johnson will miss one game, at Jacksonville on Nov. 8.

The three-sentence news release issued Wednesday night said only that Johnson, who turns 30 in a few weeks, was suspended for conduct detrimental to the club.

Johnson used a gay slur twice within a 24-hour period Sunday night and Monday, first on his Twitter account and then again Monday morning after telling reporters he was not talking.

The Chiefs said they would have no further comment on Johnson's status "at this time."

ESPNU to broadcast BSU-Idaho game

BOISE — ESPNU will televise the Nov. 14 football game between No. 7 Boise State and Idaho. The game will kickoff at 1:30 p.m. (MST), slightly later than the original 1 p.m. start. The game was originally slated to air on KTVB.

ESPNU is available on DirecTV (Channel 614) and Dish Network (Channel 141). The addition of the Idaho game means BSU will get seven regular-season games broadcast nationally for the third time in school history.

After Saturday's 1 p.m. game with San Jose State (KTVB), the Broncos (8-0) will have three Friday night games broadcast on ESPN2, including at Louisiana Tech on Nov. 6, at Utah State on Nov. 20 and home to Nevada on Nov. 27.

Idaho is 6-2 entering Saturday's home game against Louisiana Tech.

PROSECUTORS: WITNESSES ID'D UCONN STABBING SUSPECT

VERNON, Conn. — Several witnesses identified the man charged with fatally stabbing a University of Connecticut football player as the killer, prosecutors said Wednesday.

Two people arrested in the stabbing of 20-year-old Jasper Howard were arraigned in Rockville Superior Court on Wednesday. John William Lomax III, 21, is charged with murder while his friend and co-worker, 20-year-old Hakim Muhammad, is charged with conspiracy to commit assault.

Police have not discussed a motive and the investigators' affidavits and arrest warrants are sealed.

But prosecutor Matthew Gedansky on Wednesday argued for a high bond, saying that several witnesses reported seeing Lomax and Muhammad involved in a minor altercation with others outside a university-sanctioned dance early Oct. 18. He said the two went back to Lomax's car and returned "in a rage" with knives, and escalated the violence. Several witnesses also identified Lomax as the person who stabbed Howard, he said.

REPORT: BRYANT UNDECIDED ON NFL DRAFT

OKLAHOMA CITY — All-America receiver Dez Bryant says he hasn't decided yet whether he'll enter the NFL draft after the NCAA ruled that he will remain ineligible for the rest of his junior season at Oklahoma State.

Bryant said in an interview with ESPN on Wednesday that he is "just thinking about what's going on right now" as OSU appeals the NCAA's ruling.

Bryant has missed the last four games for the 13th-ranked Cowboys (6-1, 3-0 Big 12) after being declared ineligible by the school for lying to an NCAA investigator looking into Bryant's offseason meeting with former NFL player Deion Sanders.

The NCAA ruled on Tuesday that Bryant would be ineligible until next September.

Bryant told ESPN he's disappointed but respects the NCAA's decision.

CHICK-FIL-A BOWL, ACC AGREE TO 4-YEAR EXTENSION

ATLANTA — The Chick-fil-A Bowl and the Atlantic Coast Conference have agreed to a four-year extension that will keep the conference's first selection after the BCS coming to game at the Georgia Dome.

The bowl will have the first pick of Atlantic Coast Conference teams after the BCS selections through the 2013 season. The league has held that selection since 2006.

This year's Chick-fil-A Bowl will be played on Dec. 31.

The bowl game matches a Southeastern Conference team against an ACC team.

MICHIGAN DISMISSES CB CISSOKO

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Michigan cornerback Boubacar Cissoko has been kicked off the team after being suspended earlier this month.

Coach Rich Rodriguez late Tuesday released a one-sentence statement: "Boubacar Cissoko has been dismissed for a violation of team rules."

Rodriguez suspended Cissoko on Oct. 10, also citing a violation of team rules, some of which were related to academics. The sophomore missed the Iowa and Delaware State games but played briefly in Saturday's loss to Penn State.

Cissoko had 16 tackles, one interception and two pass breakups this season after playing in all 12 games last season.

The Wolverines (5-3, 1-3 Big Ten) play this week at Illinois (1-6, 0-5).

Big games Saturday could clear up conference races

The Associated Press

Much like politics, college football is essentially local.

Sure, Florida, Texas and Southern California will play huge rivalry games with national title implications Saturday. But more importantly, those three games will go a long way toward sorting out the conference races.

The top-ranked Gators face Georgia in Jacksonville, Fla., with a chance to clinch the Southeastern Conference's East Division, depending on what happens with South Carolina and Tennessee.

The Bulldogs are two games behind the Gators in the standings, so even with a win they'll need help to catch Florida. But this qualifies as the Bulldogs' last stand when it comes to winning an SEC title.

No. 3 Texas goes to Stillwater with a half-game lead in the Big 12 South over No. 13 Oklahoma State. With the Longhorns having already beaten Oklahoma and Texas Tech, a victory over the Cowboys would give them a relatively smooth road to the conference title game.

"We don't want, like last year, to leave it up to a tiebreaker," Texas linebacker Roddrick Muckelroy said.

The Cowboys would take the lead in the division race with a victory, but they have plenty of heavy lifting to come with games against Texas Tech and Oklahoma in November.

No. 4 USC goes to No. 10 Oregon trailing the Ducks by a game in the Pac-10 race. The Trojans have won seven straight conference titles, but the streak would be in grave danger if they take a second Pac-10 loss.

Keeping an eye on that game will be Arizona, which is tied with the Trojans at 3-1 in the Pac-10 standings. The Wildcats still have both USC and Oregon on the schedule, so don't let anybody try to tell you this game will settle the Pac-10 title. But it is a big one.

BILL NO 544 ORDINANCE NO 1069

AN ORDINANCE OF THE MAYOR AND COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF JEROME AMENDING TITLE 2, CHAPTER 6 OF THE JEROME MUNICIPAL CODE BY PROVIDING FOR THE CITY ADMINISTRATOR TO REVIEW APPEALS OF DESIGNATED FORMS OF EMPLOYEE DISCIPLINE; DESIGNATING WHICH FORMS OF EMPLOYEE DISCIPLINE MAY BE APPEALED TO THE CITY ADMINISTRATOR AND WHICH FORMS MAY BE APPEALED TO THE CITY COUNCIL; PROVIDING FOR THE ABILITY OF THE CITY COUNCIL TO DESIGNATE A HEARING OFFICER TO HEAR APPEALS OF SOME FORMS OF EMPLOYEE DISCIPLINE AND TO MAKE RECOMMENDED DECISIONS THEREON TO THE CITY COUNCIL; ADOPTING REVISED RULES OF PROCEDURE FOR THE CONDUCT OF HEARINGS ON THE APPEAL OF MATTERS OF EMPLOYEE DISCIPLINE; PROVIDING FOR AN EFFECTIVE DATE.

WHEREAS, the City now provides for permitted forms of employee discipline to be administered by Department Heads; and WHEREAS, employees are presently entitled to appeal any designated form of employee discipline to the City Council and Mayor; and WHEREAS, certain forms of employee discipline do not merit a hearing before the City Council and Mayor and can be instead fairly and efficiently appealed to the City Administrator; and

WHEREAS, in the further interest of fairness and efficiency, the council desires the right to appoint a qualified Hearing Officer to conduct hearings on employees aggrieved by disciplinary actions; and WHEREAS, some current procedures for the conduct of appeals by employees aggrieved of employment actions are burdensome and/or inefficient and do not significantly contribute to the fairness of such hearings,

IT IS THEREFORE DEEMED by the Mayor and the City Council of Jerome, Idaho, as follows:

Section 1. Section 2.06.045 of the Jerome Municipal Code is amended by adding Section 2.06.045(B) as follows:

2.06.045 City Administrator's Role In Discipline:

~~B. The findings of the city administrator regarding allegations of employee wrongdoing made under this section shall be shared in writing with the department head.~~

~~B. The city administrator shall, in accordance with other provisions of this chapter, conduct a hearing on any employment action from which an employee aggrieved by such a decision appeals if the employment action appealed consists of either written reprimand or suspension with pay.~~

Section 2. Section 2.06.050 of the Jerome Municipal Code is amended by adding Section F as follows:

2.06.050 Employment Actions:

~~F. Prior to the implementation of any employment action by a department head, by the city administrator, or by the mayor and council, a written notice of intended discipline shall be delivered to the employee concerned in writing which shall concisely state the intended employment action and the factual basis for the intended employment action. An employee receiving a notice of intended action may, within three (3) business days of the receipt of such a notice, request a meeting with the department head or other person or body providing the notice of intended employment action, at which conference the employee may respond to the notice of intended employment action and explain his or her version of the facts. The conference shall be held within three (3) business days of the receipt of the request for such a meeting from an employee. The city clerk, city human resource officer and any other city employee deemed necessary by the person or body administering the discipline may be present at the conference. Within three (3) business days of the conclusion of the conference, the department head or body giving the notice of intended employment action shall give a subsequent notice, in writing, implementing the proposed employment action, modifying it, or withdrawing it. The time for filing an appeal provided hereinafter shall not commence to run in the case of a request for a conference by an employee pursuant to this chapter, until the conference has been held and the employee or body issuing the notice of intended employment action has sent the subsequent notice required by this section.~~

Today is Thursday, Oct. 29, the 302nd day of 2009. There are 63 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On Oct. 29, 1929 — known as "Black Tuesday" — Wall Street crashed, heralding the beginning of the Great Depression.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1618, Sir Walter Raleigh, the English courtier, military adventurer and poet, was executed in London.

In 1901, President William McKinley's assassin, Leon Czolgosz, was electrocuted.

In 1923, the Republic of Turkey was proclaimed.

In 1940, Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson drew the first number — 158 — in the lottery for America's first peacetime military draft.

In 1956, during the Suez Canal crisis, Israel invaded Egypt's Sinai Peninsula. "The Huntley-Brinkley Report" premiered as NBC's nightly TV newscast.

In 1966, the National Organization for Women was formally organized during a conference in Washington, D.C.

In 1967, Expo 67 in Montreal closed after six months.

In 1979, on the 50th anniversary of the great stock market crash, anti-nuclear protesters tried but failed to shut down the New York Stock Exchange.

In 1994, gunman Francisco Martin Duran fired more than two dozen shots from a semiautomatic rifle at the White House. (Duran was later convicted of trying to assassinate President Bill Clinton and was sentenced to 40 years in prison.)

In 1998, Sen. John Glenn, at age 77, roared back into space aboard the shuttle Discovery, retracing the trail he'd blazed for America's astronauts 36 years earlier.

Ten years ago: A panel of European Union scientists ruled that British beef was safe for export, rejecting French scientific arguments to continue a ban because of fears of mad cow disease. Some 3,000 people attended a memorial service in Orlando, Fla., for golfer Payne Stewart, who was killed along with five other people in the crash of their Learjet.

Five years ago: Osama bin Laden, in a videotaped statement, directly admitted for the first time that he'd ordered the Sept. 11th attacks and told America "the best way to avoid another Manhattan" was to stop threatening Muslims' security. Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat was flown to Paris for medical treatment. European Union leaders signed the EU's first constitution. Chief Justice William H. Rehnquist was sent home after a week in the hospital for treatment of thyroid cancer. Comedian Vaughn Meader, who'd gained fame satirizing President John F. Kennedy, died in Auburn, Maine, at age 68.

One year ago: A 6.4-magnitude earthquake in southwestern Pakistan killed at least 215 people. Nearly 50 hours after Game 5 started but was stopped by rain, the Philadelphia Phillies finished off the Tampa Bay Rays 4-3 in a three-inning sprint to win the World Series for the first time since 1980.

Notice of Realty Action – Proposed Disposal of Public Land; and Notice of Intent to Prepare a Management Framework Plan (MFP) Amendment and Associated Environmental Impact Statement for the Shoshone Field Office, Idaho

SUMMARY: In accordance with the Federal Land Policy and Management Act (FLPMA) (43 U.S.C. 1701), as amended; the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (NEPA) (42 U.S.C. 4321), as amended; and the Council on Environmental Quality (CEQ) regulations (40 CFR parts 1500-1508) the Department of Interior, Bureau of Land Management (BLM), in cooperation with the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) intends to prepare an environmental impact statement (EIS), and a MFP amendment, to consider the siting and construction of a replacement airport for the Friedman Memorial Airport (SUN). The EIS would include consideration of the potential disposal of public land in Blaine County, Idaho. The sponsor of the project, Friedman Memorial Airport Authority (Airport Authority), has applied to the FAA to construct and operate a replacement airport in Blaine County, Idaho. The FAA published a Notice of Intent to Prepare an EIS for a Replacement Airport near Hailey, Idaho in the Federal Register on November 1, 2007 (Vol. 72, No. 211, page 61945) in response to the Airport Authority's application. As a result of initial studies by FAA the Airport Authority has now submitted a proposal to the BLM to acquire approximately 2480 acres of public land by either sale or land exchange, including the State of Idaho, if the alternative site located wholly on public land in conjunction with the aforementioned project is determined by the FAA to be the preferred location for the replacement airport. The FAA has been identified as the lead agency with BLM cooperating. The EIS will analyze the potential environmental impacts of the construction and operation of a commercial aviation airport facility, associated utility and access rights-of-way, and protection easement interests; as well as, the consideration of the disposal of a parcel of public land totaling 2480 acres, either by sale at no less than the appraised fair market value or by land exchange. Disposal of this parcel would require amendment of the Bennett Hills/Timmerman Hills Management Framework Plan (MFP) prior to sale. A Notice of Realty Action associated to the aforementioned actions and published in the Federal Register segregated the following public lands in Blaine County, Idaho: Boise Meridian, T. 2 S., R. 18 E., Section 25: Entire Section; Sec. 26: Entire Section; Sec. 27: Entire Section; Sec. 34: N½N½; and Sec. 35: N½NW, E½ containing 2480 acres. Conveyance of the identified public land will be subject to valid existing rights and encumbrances of record, including but not limited to, rights-of-way for roads and public utilities. Conveyance of any mineral interests pursuant to Section 209 of the FLPMA will be analyzed during processing of the proposed disposal. Until completion of the sale, the BLM is no longer accepting land use applications affecting the identified public land, except applications for the amendment of previously-filed right-of-way applications or existing authorizations to increase the term of the grants in accordance with 43 CFR 2807.15 and 2886.15. The segregative effect will terminate upon issuance of a patent, publication in the Federal Register of a termination of the segregation, or 2 years after the associated Notice of Realty Action was first published in the Federal Register, unless extended by the BLM State Director in accordance with 43 CFR 2711.1-2(d) prior to the termination date.

COMMENTS: During the initial stages of project development the FAA and county conducted several public meetings. The results of those meetings will be incorporated into the BLM plan amendment process and additional public involvement will occur through the submission of written comments. While additional public meetings are not identified at this point, if additional meetings are scheduled a notice in the local newspapers will announce the date and time at least 15 days prior to any public meeting. Interested parties and the general public may submit in writing any comments, concerning the BLS's MFP amendment or the public land being considered for disposal, including notification of any encumbrances or other claims relating to the identified land, to Ms. Cayla Morgan with a copy sent to Ms. Lori A. Armstrong at the addresses listed below. In order to ensure consideration in the environmental analysis of the project, it would be most helpful if comments could be received by April 1, 2009. Comments must be in writing and should be postmarked or delivered by April 1, 2009. Comments transmitted via e-mail will not be accepted. Comments, including names and street addresses of respondents, will be available for public review at the BLM Shoshone Field Office during regular business hours, except holidays. Individual respondents may request confidentiality. Before including your address, phone number, e-mail address, or other personal identifying information in your comment, you should be aware that your entire comment, including your personal identifying information may be made publicly available at any time. While you can ask us in your comment to withhold your personal identifying information from public review, we cannot guarantee that we will be able to do so. If you wish to have your name or address withheld from public disclosure under the Freedom of Information Act, you must state this prominently at the beginning of your comments. Any determination by the FAA or BLM to release or withhold the names and/or addresses of those who comment will be made on a case-by-case basis. Such requests will be honored to the extent allowed by law. The FAA and BLM will make available for public review, in their entirety, all comments submitted by businesses or organizations, including comments by individuals in their capacity as an official or representative of a business or organization.

ADDRESSES: Since FAA is the lead agency for the EIS process all comments or requests for information regarding the proposed project should be addressed to Ms. Cayla Morgan, Federal Aviation Administration, Seattle Airports District Office, 1601 Lind Avenue, S.W. Suite 250, Renton, Washington 98057-3356, or telephone (425) 227-2653 with a copy sent to Ms. Lori A. Armstrong, Field Manager, Bureau of Land Management, 400 West F. Street, Shoshone, Idaho 83352.

NOTICE OF MITIGATION PLAN

Notice is hereby given that on October 6, 2009, the Idaho Ground Water Appropriators, Inc. ("IGWA"), c/o Randall C. Budge or Candice McHugh, Racine Olson Nye Budge & Bailey, 101 S. Capitol Blvd., Suite 208, Boise, ID 83702, submitted IGWA's Mitigation Plan for Conversions, Dry-Ups and Recharge ("plan or mitigation plan") to the Department of Water Resources ("Department").

The Department will process this plan pursuant to the Department's Conjunctive Management Rules (IDAPA 37, Title 03, Chapter 11).

The members of IGWA hold numerous ground water rights for domestic, municipal, commercial and industrial uses, and for irrigation in excess of 220,000 acres within Southern Idaho. Certain of these ground water rights have priority dates junior to the priority dates of certain water rights from spring sources that discharge to various reaches of the Snake River. The ground water and the springs are interconnected sources of water.

IGWA has proposed the mitigation plan to mitigate injury to earlier priority surface water rights that may result from depletions under later priority ground water rights. Pursuant to this plan, IGWA proposes to mitigate material injury by converting ground water irrigated acres to surface water; voluntarily drying up ground water irrigated acres through programs such as the Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program and the Agricultural Water Enhancement Program; and by early or late season recharge through canal conveyance systems or recharge sites.

The plan is intended to seek advanced approval of these mitigation activities to mitigate for existing or future water calls.

The Department has not determined the adequacy of the proposed plan. A complete copy of the proposed plan is available for review at either the Department's State Office in Boise, the Department's Regional Office in Twin Falls, or may be viewed online at the following website along with other related documents:

http://www.idwr.idaho.gov/News/WaterCalls/1000Spring%20Users%20Calls/ESPA_MitPlan.htm

Any protest against approval of the plan must be filed with the Department, together with a protest fee of $25.00 on or before November 9, 2009. The protest must include a certificate of service showing that a copy of the protest has been mailed to IGWA's counsel.

DEAR ABBY: On Aug. 10 you printed a letter from an aunt who was upset because her sister, the mother of a child with autism, doesn't have time to join in fundraising with her and the rest of the family. While I commend the writer and her family for raising money for autism research, that woman needs to cut her sister some slack.

Very few parents (thank goodness for them, though) have the emotional energy, not to mention time, to advocate for their child's special needs. I commend you for giving the writer of that letter the answer you did. I would challenge anyone who thinks he or she could "handle it" to walk a mile in our shoes. Our entire lives center around our children and their doctors' appointments, therapy, special schooling, adaptive equipment, etc. The last thing we need to hear is some self-righteous know-it-all putting us down for something we were hand-picked by God to do.

- SPECIAL-NEEDS MOM IN ALABAMA

DEAR MOM: I heard from the parents of many special-needs children who echoed your sentiments. And you're right - it does take a very special parent not to crack under the stress. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of two boys with special needs who are around his age, and I can assure you, that woman is already "very involved" in a way her sister cannot even begin to imagine. It is a labor of love that requires intense attention to their every action and potential need.

Perhaps "Raising Money" should spend an entire day being the primary caregiver for her nephew while trying to complete household responsibilities or work. I cannot tell you the number of times I have cried in my car out of sheer fatigue (I now carry tissue in the glove box).

The most charitable thing this aunt could do is to show up on her sister's doorstep with dinner, an offer to do the laundry, and a long, comforting hug.

- CINDY IN AUSTIN, TEXAS

DEAR CINDY: No one fully understands what a parent with a child with a disability goes through from day one. First there is the emotional aspect. We grieve. It's not the kind of grieving you do after a death. This is grieving that never ends. It cycles over and over. If you're not crying, you're angry. Some days you can accept and breathe; other days you just can't. Anything can set you back, and suddenly you're sobbing again.

Not only is there the day-to-day caring for the child - feeding, dressing, hygiene, to name a few - but also phone calls, meetings, doctor visits, therapies. When the kids are little, many of these things aren't too bad. But as they get older, larger, stronger, it breaks the caregiver's body and spirit.

There is also the problem of not being able to get needed services. In many states, once children are out of the school system and on the waiting list for adult services, they sit and languish at home with NO services until they qualify for accommodations. In some states that can be many years. And there's no portability of services between states, so if you must relocate, you go to the bottom of that state's waiting list.

Living with that, we often can't get or hold jobs. Day care is a huge problem for us and our kids. If that woman really wants to help, she should offer respite care and get involved with the waiting list issue, which is as important as research.

- SONJA IN COLORADO

DEAR SONJA: In this time of draconian cutbacks everywhere, I hope our politicians will direct their thinking away from divisive politics and being re-elected to what must be done to help our most vulnerable citizens.

IF OCTOBER 29 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Optimism and better luck in general will be yours in December – but especially notable in February. When you are more generous, tolerant and sincere, others will respond in kind. February is a great month to ask for favors or to stretch your wings by doing your part as a leader in the community or by working for a charity. You will be wiser than usual and your good judgment will help you make beneficial decisions that will improve many areas of your life. Between now and March celestial conditions are favorable for successfully starting any health regimen or making important plans.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Hold up a mirror and look closely. The image you see could easily be a bit distorted by too great a weight on your shoulders.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Find ways to demonstrate that you are down to earth and committed to home, family, and business success. Be a volunteer.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Show everyone that you mean what you say. The best way to win trust from others is to do exactly what you say you will.
CANCER (June 21-July 22): Exceed everyone's expectations. Actions can speak louder than words and may drown out controversy.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Apples never fall far from the tree. The things that irk you when dealing with family are probably attributes you possess in abundance.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Charm others by offering to discuss matters of deep concern. Any dispute will fall away like water from a duck's back.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Listen with all your senses and sensitivity. Be completely receptive to the ideas and thoughts of a significant other.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Boost your reputation by showing others that you are committed to helping them achieve their happiness or success.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You genuinely want to please others and share the best of every day. Go along with the herd only if it serves your purpose.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Playing social games is not your style. Some people might play by a different set of rules, but you can still apply the brakes.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You can touch the surface of many subjects without creating a ripple. Make important contacts while celestial breezes blow approval.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You can't fight city hall, so you will need to find ways to cooperate with others and achieve a satisfactory compromise.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"For everything you have missed, you have gained something else; and for everything you gain, you lose something."
— Ralph Waldo Emerson

This week's deals all come from the 1999 Women's Trials. The final match in the event decided who would be the second team for the United States in the World Championships taking place in Bermuda the following year. After trailing by 30 IMPs, the Allison team put together two huge final sets to win comfortably. Here is a deal from that match.

Beth Palmer reached four spades, facing the challenging opening lead of a heart. Since East had overcalled in that suit, the chances of the finesse succeeding were slim, and Palmer wanted to be in dummy at trick two to play trumps to best advantage.

So she went up with the heart ace, pitching a diamond from hand, and advanced the spade queen, covered all around. Next she led the diamond queen from hand, and East won the king and returned the suit to West's ace.

Now a club shift was essential, but West exited passively with a heart. Declarer ruffed high, drew the last trump by crossing to the spade nine, and stripped off the diamonds, ruffing high again.

Finally, Palmer passed the club 10 to East. When that player was in with the queen, she was endplayed. She could exit with a low heart, allowing declarer to pitch a club, or with a top heart, allowing declarer to ruff and cross to dummy's third trump to take the discard, or could lead a club into dummy's tenace. Any of these plays would let the contract through.

ANSWER: This sequence is a splinter, showing a singleton diamond and a slam-try. Your hand is as good as it could be, with no wasted values in diamonds and great trumps, so simply bid Blackwood, uncouth as that may appear from a balanced hand. If partner cannot make slam facing this hand, he did not have enough for his previous bidding!
