Oust trial set for Sept. 2011

Farmers stand to collect more than $200M

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

U.S. District Court Judge B. Lynn Winmill has set a tentative trial date for more than 100 southern Idaho farmers to prove their damages in the Oust mass lawsuit.

A court order filed by Winmill on Oct. 22 provided a timeline for the rest of the proceedings and set a tentative date of Sept. 19, 2011, for 114 remaining parties to prove their losses in a single trial. The trial is expected to last six months.

In 1999 and again in October 2000, BLM contractors sprayed the herbicide Oust to control invasive weeds before reseeding rangeland scorched by wildfires. Winds scattered the soil sterilizer on more than 100,000 acres of farmland, with much of the crop damage occurring in Minidoka County and neighboring counties.

The court in August found the Bureau of Land Management and herbicide manufacturer E.I. DuPont de Nemours and Co. negligent after hearing four sample cases of the mass lawsuit filed by a coalition of farmers, who sustained crop loss from 2001 to 2004.

The district court jury found DuPont 60 percent to blame and said the company was responsible for selling a product that was defective, unreasonably dangerous and lacking adequate warnings. The jury assigned BLM 40 percent of fault, saying it was negligent in its decision to apply Oust on public land.

The four sample farmers were awarded more than $17.5 million, said Peter Houtsma, an attorney with Holland and Hart of Boise, in an earlier statement to the Times-News. He said the total damages could exceed $200 million.

In the court order, Winmill said because the case has been in court for six years, he is setting the timeline for the damages phase even though appeals by BLM and DuPont are still being processed.

Winmill expects a decision from the U.S. Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit around August 2011. The farmers' trial date to prove their losses will be tentative until that ruling comes in.

With bond's passage, Blaine school district takes aim at funding

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Blaine County school officials had little time Friday to savor the success of passing a $58.9 million levy that will provide for more Promethean learning boards and a new school, if necessary.

They were already regrouping to see what they had to do to fulfill the terms of a $4 million matching federal grant that will help the school district heat its schools with geothermal heat.

The district received the grant on Thursday, the same day voters approved the levy that contained money to allow the district to match that grant.

"The Department of Energy grant has certain timelines — we have to have the money set in 18 months. So we need to begin figuring out what we need to do," said Mike

Three-vehicle crash kills three, injures five in Blaine County

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Three people died Friday in a three-vehicle collision on Idaho Highway 75 in Blaine County, south of the Timmerman Junction with U.S. Highway 20.

Emergency responders were called to the scene at 12:40 p.m. Friday, and five people with injuries, including a Jerome High School football coach, were transported to hospitals.

"It's my understanding that the three fatalities were all in one vehicle," said Capt. Ron Taylor with Wood River Fire and Rescue.

The victims' identities were not released Friday. Blaine County coroner Russ Mikel said the victims were one male and two females. The male and one female were adults, with a younger female who appeared to be in her teens or early twenties, Mikel said.

St. Luke's restricts visitors in bid to beat swine flu

By Damon Hunzeker
Times-News writer

Both St. Luke's Magic Valley and Wood River medical centers have implemented visitation restrictions in order to prevent the spread of the H1N1 virus, including a ban, with few exceptions, on children — one of the high-risk groups for swine flu.

In the Twin Falls facility, effective immediately, only two visitors per patient will be allowed, and all must be older than 18.

The Neonatal Intensive Care Unit will admit only parents and legal guardians of babies. The Labor and Delivery/Obstetrics units will allow spouses, labor support, legal guardians, and grandparents — but still only two at a time.

In Ketchum, visitors must be at least 18, except in the Mother-Baby Unit, where siblings of the baby, but no other children, can visit.

Spokeswoman Tonia Bruess said additional restrictions may be placed on siblings, depending on the number of illnesses in the area.

"The changes will definitely, we think, be in effect until the end of the year," she said. "We've kind of peaked with this wave of swine flu, but that doesn't mean another wave won't come. It's only October."

Bruess said the changes are precautionary and that no specific incident prompted the restrictions.

"We're trying to be sensitive to family members. We just don't want people to show up with their whole families and have to be turned away," she said. "We don't want to police anyone ... but in certain situations, we'll turn people away. It's on a case-by-case basis."

Bruess further recommends that visitors wash their hands before and after entering a patient's room, stay away if they're suffering from flu-like symptoms, and wear a mask if they've been around people with flu-like symptoms.

Boise's old state pen has a knack for fright

By Anna Webb
The Idaho Statesman

BOISE — Considering the grim stuff that went on there for decades, spirits must stand elbow to elbow at the Old Pen.

The Travel Channel's show "Ghost Adventurers" let the world in on Boise's spooky wonders when its team came to town last year to film an episode at the Old Pen.

The prison, a satisfyingly sinister hulk of sandstone and chilly, graffiti-covered cell blocks at the far end of Warm Springs Avenue still makes the top of Marie Cuff's list of haunted places that deserve more investigating.

That's saying a lot, since, as director of the local office of the International Paranormal Reporting Group, Cuff can rattle off the names of America's haunted sites like she's reciting the alphabet.

She and her team of investigators, armed with cameras, energy sensing devices and digital recorders, have documented the Old Pen before.

Cuff had a memorable brush with some kind of presence in a cell — a ticklish stroke through her hair as she leaned in to read a smudge of graffiti on a wall.

The words, "Ooh, pretty," popped into her head as she felt the touch — perhaps one channeled from a beauty-starved spirit doing hard time?

Team member Caleb Johnson admits that paranormal investigation often consists of "sitting and listening in the dark, hearing nothing and seeing nothing."

Verdict eludes jury in Osterhoudt trial

Times-News

The jury couldn't reach a verdict Friday in the trial of Franklin Osterhoudt, 43, accused in Twin Falls of incest, rape and five counts of lewd conduct with a child.

A new trial date has not been set, said Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs.

Osterhoudt allegedly victimized a child family member and stood last week for a four-day trial, after he was arrested this year on a 2007 warrant in Nogales, Ariz.

He remains lodged at the Twin Falls County Jail, Loebs said.

Osterhoudt's son, Franklin Osterhoudt, 20, was also accused of rape in a separate case, but last week pleaded guilty to injury to a child after allegedly having sex with a 15-year-old girl.

Both Osterhoudts are from Buhl, according to court records.

Prosecutors dismiss pipe-bomb charge

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

Twin Falls County prosecutors on Friday dismissed charges against a local man accused of having a 9-inch pipe bomb at his home in July.

Ricardo M. Moreno, 24, of Twin Falls, allegedly had the bomb lying on a shelf, next to his bed on July 23. He lived alone in a one-room building on Wiseman Street, according to court records.

Police found the alleged "destructive device" during a court compliance search on July 23 by probation and parole, according to court records.

Moreno was charged locally with felony possession of a destructive device, but Twin Falls County Magistrate Judge Howard Smyser dismissed the case on Friday during a preliminary hearing.

At the hearing, lawyers said that Moreno had been picked up from the Twin Falls County Jail and taken away by federal authorities, but did not say why.

According to online court records, though, a Ricardo Marion Moreno was indicted on Oct. 14 by a federal grand jury in Boise for alleged unlawful possession of a firearm.

According to the federal indictment, Moreno on July 12, was allegedly "an unlawful user of marijuana and methamphetamine" and possessed a .38 caliber, Hi-Point semi-automatic pistol that was shipped and transported in interstate and foreign commerce. The Bureau of Alcohol Tobacco Firearms and Explosives handled the federal case, court records show.

The state bomb charge could be re-filed, though Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs said that is unlikely. He said the case was dismissed locally at the request of federal authorities, which are all cooperating.

Twin Falls County court records don't determine whether Moreno planned to detonate the alleged pipe bomb. Loebs said he was unaware of a plan to use the bomb, and unsure how it came into Moreno's possession.

The alleged pipe bomb was "built in such a way that it would send shrapnel flying, in the residence of Moreno," according to the Twin Falls County court records. "The device had a welded or melted end and an obvious fuse coming out of the other end (and) the interior was later determined to be made of metal, which has a great potential to create and propel shrapnel when the device is set off."

Moreno had in the past been charged with driving crimes, drug possession and carrying a concealed weapon, according to online Twin Falls County court records.

Moreno, who did not list employment in local court records, is scheduled to appear for a detention hearing on Monday at the United States Courthouse in Boise. He is being held without bond by the United States Marshall Service and faces up to 10 years in prison, online federal court records show.

Law & Disorder... ... in Cassia County

From Sept. 27 police reports: Assault with a knife, etc.: Police responded to Oakley High School, on the principal's request, to talk to a 14-year-old boy about, as the report reads, "bringing cigarettes to school and threatening to kill his step dad," along with calling his parents "white trash losers," the report reads. The previous night, he was reportedly told to go to his room and tried to escape several times but was continually sent back by his stepfather. Then, according to the report, the boy and his stepfather kicked each other until the juvenile, who allegedly tried to leave through a window, "picked up a piece of glass and held it out as to stab Greg (his stepfather) and told him he wanted to kill him."

The juvenile then, according to the report, placed the glass against his throat and "threatened to cut himself." This went on for "two to three hours," his stepfather and mother told Deputy Brice Nelson

The incident began, the boy's mother said, the previous night when he "asked for something more then (sic) what everyone else was eating." She reportedly told him that his stepdad was in charge of how much the suspect was allowed to eat, whereupon, according to the report, he called his stepdad a "low life piece of (expletive)." After that, the teen allegedly took cigarettes and a lighter to school and was grounded but first "put one foot in and out of his door."

When his stepdad stood in front of the door, the juvenile allegedly called him names and threatened to stab him when he went to sleep, which, according to the report, went on for an additional two hours.

When questioned, the suspect explained that he "was having a hard time because Greg is mean to him."

The boy was cited for assault and tobacco possession.

Chatterton, district finance director.

Blaine County voters passed the 10-year plant facilities levy Thursday with 59 percent approval. Fifty-five percent approval was needed for passage.

Twenty-seven percent — or 3,220 voters — of the county's registered voters took to the polls.

The margin of victory was slightly larger than that of the last levy, which passed with 58 percent approval 10 years ago.

Woodside Elementary voters led the way, casting 71 percent of 205 votes in favor of the levy. Sixty-seven percent of the 461 voters who voted absentee voted in favor of the levy.

"We'd like to thank the citizens of Blaine County who have continued to instill trust in the district to do right for the students," said Chatterton. "A lot of effort went into this to make sure we could address our strategic plan in a way everyone will benefit."

A steady stream of voters churned through both Hemingway Elementary School in Ketchum and Hailey Elementary School throughout Thursday.

Ketchum resident Theresa Castellano-Wood braved 30-degree temperatures to pass out pamphlets urging voters to vote "Yes" as they turned into the Hemingway parking lot.

"Our schools are the best thing this valley has to offer — they're even better than the mountain," she said, gesturing to Sun Valley ski resort. "And I believe we need to keep making them better, that we need to keep investing in our kids."

Julie Dahlgren, chair of the board of trustees, said she was thrilled that the school district won't have to ask taxpayers for similar levy money again for the next 10 years.

"And our taxpayers won't have to pay higher interest rates as they would have if we'd had to borrow money because the levy didn't pass," she said.

Dahlgren said she's excited about the push to make the schools green.

"Overall the schools represent the community and this is the way the community's headed," she said. "And I imagine some of the first dollars — $2 million — might go to security, as well. The need to ensure our students' safety is a message we heard loud and clear."

The new levy will cost the average homeowner with a $419,000 home $158 a year in taxes — about $13 a month.

Crash

"We're trying to identify them right now," he said, adding that authorities are canvassing neighbors in the area.

The cause of the accident was unclear Friday and is still under investigation, said Curtis Miller, patrol lieutenant with the Blaine County Sheriff's Department.

Miller said the accident involved a car, SUV and flatbed truck.

The highway was closed in both directions for 2½ hours following the accident.

Vehicles that were involved in the crash had extensive front-end damage, officials said.

Bob Roberts, the defensive backs coach for Jerome High's football team and owner of Gold's Gym in Twin Falls, suffered a broken shoulder and rib injuries in the accident, according to his colleagues.

Gary Krumm, the school's head football coach, said Roberts was sent by air ambulance to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center in Twin Falls.

"Our prayers are with the Roberts," Krumm said.

Roberts was listed in good condition at the hospital on Friday.

Hailey and Ketchum fire departments also responded to the crash scene.

Old Pen

Fellow investigators Shane Anderson and Kelly Winn said that their ghost-detecting equipment helps their clients locate more out-of-whack electrical wiring than spirits. The team, which does not charge for its services, is booked months in advance.

They're their own harshest jury when it comes to hauntings, real or imagined, they said.

Sometimes Hollywood gets in the way of serious study.

Cuff and her team said that TV programs on ghostly topics can make the paranormal easier for people to talk about — but they also can play up the drama.

The scenery-chewing ghost hunters on the Travel Channel ran through the Boise Foothills, apparently terrorized by snakes, then spent the night on Death Row, hollering out for Raymond Snowden, the last man hanged at the Old Pen in 1957.

Oddly enough, Cuff said, she and the team have never picked up any trace of spirit energies in the "death house," or in the "drop room" below, where Snowden dangled.

Still, team members agree the Old Pen has lots more information to offer.

For example, paranormal investigators have never studied the old hospital ward, where Harry Orchard — who confessed to assassinating Gov. Frank Steunenberg in 1905 — died, along with victims of the 1918 Spanish Flu and many others.

Between 1870, when the Old Pen opened as a territorial prison, and 1973, when it closed, the place housed more than 13,000 inmates.

"That's 13,000 stories," said Amber Beierle, interpretive specialist at the site.

Amid the countless tales, 10 executions, and documented deaths — a man "shived" on the basketball court in the 1950s; a prisoner, Gee Gin, who cut his own throat not once, but twice, before dying in the late 1800s. Who knows what ghosts still walk the grounds?

One may be Douglas Van Vlack, subject of one of the Old Pen's darker tales, Beierle said. He was to be hanged in 1937 for killing his estranged wife and two police officers.

During his last visit with his mother, as the story goes, she leaned over and whispered in his ear, "You can choose the way you die." Van Vlack heeded his mother's words. He jumped from the rafters of his cell block the night before his execution.

Cassia Co. schools crack down on cyber-bullying

CHEERS: To the Cassia County School District for its enlightened new policy on sexual harassment and cyber-bullying.

The new rules proscribe bullying someone over sexual orientation and crack down on “sexting,” the transmission of sexually explicit messages or photos electronically — primarily between cell phones.

Students and staff at Cassia County schools who engage in these behaviors could find themselves expelled from school or fired.

The new policy includes guidelines that define cyber-bullying as the use of any electronic communications device to convey a message in any format — including audio, video, text, graphics or photographs — that intimidates, harasses or intends to harm another individual.

It also explicitly protects any student or staff member who reports bullying from retaliation.

Harassment has taken on a whole new dimension with the proliferation of electronic communication devices. Good for the Cassia schools for getting out ahead of the curve; other south-central Idaho districts should follow suit.

JEERS: The Twin Falls City Council formally renamed the Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course this week, ending a five-month-long process that at one point included a contest to rebrand the links.

There were 63 entries, but “Twin Falls Golf Club” wasn’t one of them. Golf Advisory Board members in September recommended the name, fearing that some other golf course would end up using “Twin Falls” in its name.

This whole endeavor was a lot more complicated than it needed to be, and we’re not sure the marketing appeal of “Twin Falls Golf Club” is that much greater than “Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course.”

This community has trouble renaming public property. In 2003, the City Council was set to rechristen downtown streets with the names of Twin Falls pioneers, but backed out at the last minute and opted to name them after neighboring cities and towns instead. In 1996, the city and Twin Falls County briefly transformed Joslin Field into “Idaho’s South Central Airport: Gateway to the Great Rift and Sun Valley.”

The Great Rift is a hard-to-reach, 62-mile-long volcanic scar in the desert 100 miles east of Twin Falls. Public ridicule quickly sank that idea.

It may be the Twin Falls Golf Club now, but it will long be “Muni” to local residents.

CHEERS: To Idaho Sen. Mike Crapo, for keeping up the pressure on the federal government to scuttle a rule change that endangers Idaho water rights.

In June, the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works passed the Clean Water Restoration Act, which would dramatically expand federal jurisdiction under the current Clean Water Act by allowing government regulation of virtually all interstate and intrastate waters and their tributaries. Crapo, a second-term Republican, placed a “hold” on the bill, indicating his willingness to filibuster this legislation if the bill makes it to the Senate floor.

Then earlier this month, the Environmental Protection Agency released “The Clean Water Act Enforcement Action Plan,” which claims that states are falling behind in meeting the requirements of the Clean Water Act. It proposes increased federal oversight and enforcement of the law at the state level, and many states are now concerned the EPA is laying the groundwork to revoke the authority of some states to enforce the Clean Water Act. Crapo argues that stripping states of their power tramples private property rights and threatens their economies.

He’s right: Without control over its own water resources, Idaho can’t do business.

Fab Five glad to have Mini-Cassia support

America’s Got Talent — what an adventure. As I have reflected on events that have kept us busy, I have drifted to the wonderful people of the Mini-Cassia area. What amazing support and encouragement. So many people have helped with our children, with words of encouragement, signs across many local businesses cheering the Fab Five on, articles in the paper and many more measures of support.

As sisters, we had decided that no matter what happened, we had won because we had made the journey together and we could feel love and support from our home towns. My heart has been touched by so many and I can only say that I am so lucky and blessed to live in a great community that gets behind its locals and supports them.

I want to thank those wonderful people of Mini-Cassia. I hope we were able to bring some fun and joy to each of your homes. Thank you all.

Asleep at the wheel: Pilots battling boredom

I started flying small airplanes when I was 18, and after I got out of the service, I used my GI Bill money to adorn my pilot’s license with a Lear Jet rating. Most of the training consisted of takeoffs and landings at Bakersfield, Calif.; we never climbed above 10,000 feet or went very fast. But at the end of the course we made a real flight — to Las Vegas and back — and I finally got to climb to something like a jet’s cruising altitude and experience something like a jet’s speed.

The cockpit of a Lear Jet — these were old Model 24s, the jet equivalent of a ’55 Chevy — was a tight place, with a steeply slanted windshield grazing your forehead, a tall instrument panel in front of you and a console projecting back between the seats. You couldn’t move around much. And there was nothing to do. The airplane flew itself, holding heading, speed and altitude with greater precision than any human could. The sound of the aft-mounted engines resembled that of a distant vacuum cleaner. The Mojave Desert crept by almost imperceptibly, too remote to be interesting except to geologists.

This was what it was be a jet pilot! Immobility, inaction and silence. It was almost like being one of those victims of locked-in syndrome who are fully aware but cannot move or speak.

So I have no trouble imagining that the two pilots of Northwest Airlines Flight 188 — whose licenses were revoked Tuesday by the FAA — could have been sleeping when they overshot the Minneapolis airport by 150 miles. I don’t know whether they were — alternative explanations are still coming in — but if so, it wouldn’t be that surprising.

Airline flying, with its time-zone shifts and irregular schedules, poses obvious fatigue risks. And besides the fatigue, there’s the monotony. Crews intermittently receive instructions from the ground — mostly just to change radio frequencies as they move from one air traffic sector to another — while computers do the bulk of the work. One of the problems of cockpit automation, in fact, is finding ways to keep uninvolved pilots aware of where they are and what the airplane is doing as it traverses the experiential void between takeoff and landing.

We may never know for certain what happened, because the cockpit voice recorder preserves only the most recent 30 minutes. But I have to admit that I find the laptop explanation a bit hard to believe. I’m sure the merging of the Northwest and Delta seniority lists is fascinating, but still. When I’m on an instrument flight plan, I start to feel uneasy if I haven’t talked with a controller in 20 minutes or so.

These guys were in their own world for more than an hour — what were they thinking? But then, they’ve logged a lot more hours of suspended animation than I have.

Luckily, the possibilities of cockpit automation are not yet exhausted. The folks at Boeing, knowing the soporific potential of hours spent in chairs monitoring a completely reliable computer, have equipped their 777 with a system that makes increasingly irritating wake-up noises in the cockpit if it fails to detect signs of life.

Airbus should take a look at that. And maybe it could hire Microsoft to spruce up the flight management software with a few of those “blue screens of death” that used to pop up on Windows systems when they crashed. That would keep a crew on its toes.

Gov't: Stimulus saved or created 650K jobs

By Matt Apuzzo and Brett J. Blackledge
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — About 650,000 jobs have been saved or created under President Barack Obama's economic stimulus plan, the White House said Friday, saying the president's goal of 3.5 million jobs by the end of next year is on track.

New job numbers from businesses, contractors, state and local governments, nonprofit groups and universities were scheduled to be released publicly later Friday. White House economic adviser Jared Bernstein said the figures will show that, when adding in jobs linked to $288 billion in tax cuts, the stimulus plan has created or saved more than 1 million jobs.

Government recovery plans — everything from the $787 billion stimulus to tax credits for buying new homes to government deals on new cars — are credited with helping the economy grow again after a record four straight losing quarters.

But the job market has yet to show signs of recovery, putting pressure on the White House to show that the stimulus was worth its hefty price tag. The economy has shed millions of jobs since Obama signed the stimulus in February, giving Republicans ammunition to say the government is spending too much for too little effect.

The White House says the report bolsters its case that the economy would have been far worse without the stimulus — a package of government spending, tax cuts, state aide and social programs.

Friday's data will have its

Gas prices chugging skyward as holidays near

By Chris Kahn
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Americans are paying more for gasoline than they did last year as the holidays approached — billions of dollars that could go to books, clothes and Barbie dolls instead being spent at the pump.

Gas averaged nearly $2.70 a gallon Friday, the highest of the year — adding bad news to an already fragile economy and making it even less likely that people will spend their way out of the recession.

From last November to January, the average price was $1.86. Even if prices average $2.50 per gallon during the same period this year, Americans will pay an extra $26.6 billion for gas, said Tom Kloza, chief oil analyst at Oil Price Information Service.

Americans didn't have much going for them financially in late 2008, but they did have this: Gas prices plunged by 93 cents per gallon between Oct. 30 and the end of the year. It was like a generous energy tax break, just in time for the holidays.

Thanks mostly to the weak dollar, that's no longer the case. And when a gallon of gas runs from $2.50 to $3, people begin to notice, energy experts say.

People make a "clear emotional connection" between the price of gas and how much they spend on other things, said Wendy Liebmann, who monitors shopping habits through her company WSL Strategic Retail.

"It nibbles out of our paycheck, and there's nothing we can do about it," Liebmann said. "We've got to get the kids to school. We've got to get to work if we're lucky enough to have a job."

As gas prices soared from 2006 to 2008, people became increasingly tightfisted, a survey by WSL found. When gas peaked above

Democrats want to curb banks' overdraft fees

By Anne Flaherty
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Senior congressional Democrats say legislation is still needed to limit how lenders charge customers who overspend on their accounts, even though some big banks have already curbed high-fee overdraft programs.

Rep. Barney Frank, the chairman of the House Financial Services Committee, on Friday joined Senate Banking Committee Chairman Chris Dodd, D-Conn., in calling for legislation that would require banks to ask customers whether they want overdraft protection.

"Don't do favors for people without asking them," said Frank, D-Mass., at a hearing on a House overdraft bill introduced by New York Democratic Rep. Carolyn Maloney.

Most banks automatically allow customers to overdraft their accounts, then charge them $25 to $35 per infraction. Banks say that customers want the protection, rather than being denied a purchase at the cash register.

In recent weeks, several major U.S. banks, including Bank of America Corp., JPMorgan Chase & Co. and Wells Fargo & Co., have said that they will allow customers to "opt out" of their overdraft programs.

WORLD'S LARGEST CRUISE SHIP, OASIS OF THE SEAS, LAUNCHES

Royal Caribbean's Oasis of the Seas departs a shipyard in Finland on Friday. The ship began its maiden voyage to Florida with an amphitheater, basketball courts and an ice rink on board. The 16-deck Oasis of the Seas spans 1,200 feet from bow to stern. Its 2,700 cabins can accommodate 6,300 passengers and 2,100 crew members. Commissioned by Royal Caribbean International, the ship cost $1.5 billion and took two and a half years to build at the STX Finland Oy shipyard in Turku, southwestern Finland. The Oasis of the Seas is due to make its U.S. debut on Nov. 20, when it will be unveiled on ABC's 'Good Morning America' show at its home port, Port Everglades in Florida.

Consumer spending falls in Sept., incomes flat

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Consumer spending plunged in September by the largest amount in nine months, reflecting the end of the government's Cash for Clunkers auto sales program. Incomes, the fuel for future spending, were flat.

While the government reported that the overall economy grew in the July-September period, signaling the end of the worst recession in seven decades, the weakness in spending and incomes as the quarter ended underscores the fragility of the recovery.

On Wall Street, investors pulled back and stocks erased all the previous day's big gains. The Dow Jones industrial average dropped about 250 points in Friday trading, and broader indexes also plunged. The biggest declines were among banks, energy and materials companies.

Economists worry that the recovery could falter in coming months if households cut back on spending to cope with rising unemployment, heavy debt loads and tight credit conditions.

"With incomes so soft, increased spending will be a struggle," Ian Shepherdson, chief U.S. economist at High Frequency Economics, wrote in a note to clients.

The Commerce Department said Friday that spending dropped 0.5 percent in September, the first decline in five months. Personal incomes were unchanged as workers contend with rising unemployment. Wages and salaries fell 0.2 percent, erasing a 0.2 percent gain in August.

A second report showed that wages and benefits including health care rose just 1.5 percent for the 12 months ending in September. That's the smallest increase for the Labor Department's Employment Cost Index on records that date to 1982.

The concern is that much of third-quarter economic growth stemmed from temporary government programs such as the clunkers sales incentives that ended in August.

The government said Thursday the gross domestic product, the broadest measure of economic health, expanded at an annual rate of 3.5 percent in the third quarter, the first increase after a record four straight declines. A 3.4 percent rise in consumer spending, which accounts for 70 percent of total economic activity, powered the gain.

And consumers appear willing to pay a little more for Colgate toothpaste, Kellogg's Frosted Flakes and Gillette Fusion shavers, according to earnings released Thursday. Procter & Gamble Co., Colgate-Palmolive Co. and Kellogg Co. all gave upbeat reports and even stronger outlooks for next year.

However, some economists believe that consumer spending will slow sharply in the current

Prosecutors: Madoff accountant to enter plea

By Larry Neumeister
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Disgraced financier Bernard Madoff's long-time auditor is expected to plead guilty next week in a cooperation deal, federal prosecutors told a judge Friday.

Prosecutors said in a letter to U.S. District Judge Alvin K. Hellerstein that accountant David Friebling was expected to plead guilty at a conference on Tuesday.

In the letter, signed by Assistant U.S. Attorney Lisa A. Baroni, prosecutors said they wanted to notify the court so that it could provide notice to victims of Madoff's multi-billion-dollar fraud that the plea hearing will take place.

They said Friebling will enter the plea to revised charges that accuse him of securities fraud, investment adviser fraud, making false filings with the Securities and Exchange Commission and obstructing or impeding the administration of the Internal Revenue laws.

The charges carry a potential prison term of up to 108 years in prison, though substantial cooperation with prosecutors can result in leniency.

Friebling's lawyer, Andrew McCutcheon Lankler, said: "We don't have a comment. We've never commented on this case and we're not about to start now."

Friebling, 49, was Madoff's auditor from 1991 to 2008, roughly the amount of time that Madoff admitted he carried out his fraud when he pleaded guilty to fraud charges in March. The 71-year-old Madoff is serving a 150-year sentence at a prison in North Carolina.

Despite the more than $65 billion in private investments that Madoff claimed he oversaw for thousands of investors, Friebling seemed to be a small-time auditor with a tiny office in suburban New City, N.Y. Authorities say he appeared to have rubber stamped Madoff's records.

Authorities say if Friebling had done his job, they would have known years earlier that Madoff was carrying out history's greatest Ponzi scheme by paying money to some investors with the proceeds he received from other investors.

quarter, lowering GDP growth to perhaps 1.5 percent. Analysts said the risk of a double-dip recession cannot be ruled out over the next year.

The 0.5 percent drop in consumer spending in September followed a 1.4 percent surge in August which was propelled by the big jump in car sales that month as consumers rushed to take advantage of the clunkers' incentives.

Last month's drop in spending resulted in a boost in the savings rate to 3.3 percent of after-tax incomes, up from 2.8 percent in August. Many analysts believe households will keep striving to increase savings in the months ahead to replenish nest eggs that were crushed by last year's stock market crash. That also would hold back spending in the months ahead, weakening the recovery.

The Obama administration is being encouraged to extend some of the elements of the $787 billion economic stimulus package that Congress passed in February to jump-start the economy, but the White House has been cautious in endorsing various proposals being advanced by Democratic lawmakers for fear of pushing the federal budget deficit even higher. The deficit hit an all-time high of $1.42 trillion for the budget year ending Sept. 30.

But inflation remains in check. An inflation gauge tied to consumer spending edged up just 0.1 percent in September, after a 0.3 percent August rise. Excluding food and energy, the gauge rose 1.3 percent over the past year, well within the Federal Reserve's comfort zone.

Fed officials meet next week and economists believe they will again keep a key interest rate at a record low in an effort to support the economy given that inflation is not a threat.

Pakistanis confront Clinton over drone attacks

Visit shows strain between U.S., Pakistan

By Robert Burns
Associated Press writer

ISLAMABAD — U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton faced sharp rebukes from Pakistani audiences Friday, including one woman who accused the U.S. of conducting “executions without trial” in aerial drone strikes. Slapping back, Clinton questioned Pakistan’s commitment to fighting terrorists.

“Somebody, somewhere in Pakistan must know where these people are,”

U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton speaks during an interview broadcast live in Islamabad, Pakistan, on Friday. One member of the audience said the drone attacks amount to ‘executions without trial’ for those killed.

Clinton said in an exchange almost as blunt as her exasperated comments a day earlier that Pakistani officials lacked the will to target al-Qaida. Her stormy three-day visit, rocked at the start by a terrorist blast in Peshawar that killed 105 Pakistanis, revealed clear signs of strain between the two nations despite months of public insistence that they were on the same wavelength in the war on terror.

By speaking bluntly about the Pakistanis’ failure to find and eliminate top al-Qaida leaders — eight years after they were run out of Afghanistan — Clinton appeared to be trying to prod the Pakistanis to go beyond their current military campaign against internal militants in South Waziristan.

Pakistan’s army recently launched a major offensive in the border area to clear out Pakistani Taliban elements from hideouts there. But two earlier army efforts made little progress there — leaving questions about the military’s resolve to tackle al-Qaida head-on.

Clinton’s tough talk on Pakistan’s apparent inability to root out al-Qaida also appeared to be aimed at reminding the country’s civilian and military leaders that the assault on Pakistani Taliban elements in South Waziristan would not be finished unless al-Qaida too was targeted. She noted explicitly that the Taliban militants there are “in league with” the terror group that fomented the Sept. 11 attacks.

“After South Waziristan is finished, the Pakistanis will have to go on to try to root out other terrorist groups, or we’re going to be back facing the same threats,” she warned.

During the visit and talks with Pakistani leaders, Clinton found herself repeatedly on the defensive from ordinary Pakistanis brimming with resentment toward U.S. foreign policy.

During a live broadcast of an interview before a predominantly female audience of several hundred, Clinton struggled to avoid describing the classified U.S. effort to target terrorists, and still try to explain the efforts of American foreign policy.

One woman asked Clinton how she would define terrorism.

“Is it the killing of people in drone attacks?” the woman asked. Then she asked if Clinton considered both the U.S. missile strikes and militant bombings like the one that killed more than 100 civilians in the city of Peshawar earlier in the week as acts of terrorism.

“No, I do not,” Clinton replied.

Cemetery guards on alert to prevent grave thefts

By Patrick Walters
Associated Press writer

PHILADELPHIA — It’s that time of year when even cemetery guards are more easily spooked, on alert for signs of one of the oldest, most ghoulish and most persistent of crimes: grave robberies.

Mostly, it’s kids doing pranks or thieves looking for valuables, metals or marble. Occasionally, it’s the work of occultists looking for ritual objects. But while such grave thefts remain rare, the potential for holiday trickery always puts cemetery officials on high alert.

“It’s more of a preventative thing,” said Bob Fells, general counsel for the International Cemetery Cremation and Funeral Association. “People are going to say, ‘Well, didn’t you take any steps, since it is Halloween?’”

Guards keep a closer eye on their rounds, and security workers are extra vigilant when monitoring motion sensors and cameras. There’s no definitive evidence that thefts go up around Halloween, but the extra effort is not without reason.

Back in June, police in Philadelphia arrested two teenagers for stealing remains from a 15-foot underground crypt, possibly to be sold for use in an occult ritual. That same month, two other teens were accused of stealing a human skull from a tomb in Hernando County, Fla.

And also in Florida, detectives exhumed the remains of a woman in a St. Petersburg cemetery Thursday to determine whether a skull found in a former gravedigger’s bedroom was hers. It was.

It isn’t always as extreme as body parts, though.

In recent years, thieves have started going after bronze artifacts as the price of the metal has skyrocketed, Fells said. In response, some cemeteries have made changes, including hiring private security and started locking up more often. In some areas, police started conducting more frequent patrols.

Dan Rohling, a crematory operator and funeral director in California, said vigilance is always higher this time of year. The theft of valuables and body parts from graves and grave sites, he said, is the work of “morons” who just aren’t thinking.

“They know not what they do, and God knows why they do it,” Rohling said, adding that grave robberies remain a persistent but rare problem. “It hasn’t really gone up. It hasn’t really gone down. You have the same underlying group of morons out there.”

“(The grave theft problem) hasn’t really gone up. It hasn’t really gone down. You have the same underlying group of morons out there.”

The crime itself dates at least back to thefts from Egyptian tombs.

Hundred of years later, in the 19th century, there was a spike as medical experts found use for studying the human body. Because organ donation programs hadn’t been developed, doctors ended up having to steal bodies for research.

Colin Dickey, a Los Angeles-based writer who last month published a book called “Cranioklepty: Grave Robbing and the Search for Genius,” said medical schools had trouble finding bodies legitimately at that time. People who stole bodies for medical schools became known as “resurrectionists.”

“People recognized the scientific need but couldn’t sort of get over the religious problem with it,” Dickey said.

Today, thefts and damaged gravestones can largely be attributed to marauding teens or occultists. Police have speculated on the value of selling human skulls. But Dickey doubts that as a major cause, saying he once saw one on sale at an antique store for just $350 — not a lot of money, considering all the effort involved.

Many lawmakers scrutinized, leaked report indicates

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dozens of lawmakers have drawn scrutiny from their ethics monitor this year for everything from financial dealings to travel and campaign donations, according to a leaked account showing an active House panel secretly at work.

Seven of the lawmakers — four not previously known — serve on a defense appropriations subcommittee that divvies up money for Pentagon contractors.

Most of the names and investigative subjects, mentioned in a summary of the ethics committee’s work last July, were known. But the summary — obtained by The Washington Post — shows the widespread scope of preliminary reviews and investigations the panel can have before it at any one time.

If anything, the document rebuts arguments of some watchdog groups that members of the Committee on Standards of Official Conduct — the ethics committee — do little to investigate their colleagues.

The document shows the scrutiny involved some 30 members last summer, but it lumps together lawmakers who are subjects of a complete investigation with subpoenapowers with those who may simply have asked for a ruling on a proposed trip to be financed by a private sponsor. Full investigations by an investigative subcommittee are announced publicly.

Committee Chairman Zoe Lofgren, D-Calif., and ranking Republican Jo Bonner of Alabama, went further than usual on June 11 by announcing they were examining the conduct of some lawmakers on the defense panel even though no investigative panel was formed.

Members of the House Appropriations Committee’s defense subcommittee had steered targeted appropriations called earmarks to clients of a now-defunct lobbying firm — PMA — and received contributions from the firm and its clients.

The names of defense subcommittee chairman John Murtha, D-Pa., and Democratic members Jim Moran of Virginia and Peter Visclosky of Indiana had previously surfaced in connection with the inquiry.

The document adds the names of Norm Dicks, D-Wash.; Marcy Kaptur, D-Ohio; ranking subcommittee Republican C.W. Bill Young of Florida and Todd Tiahrt, R-Kan.

All four have received campaign contributions from PMA’s political action committee and employees. Donation figures compiled by the nonpartisan Center for Responsive Politics show that PMA’s PAC and employees together were the single biggest source of political money to Dicks in each election cycle from 2003 through 2008 when donations are analyzed by the givers’ employers. Dicks received roughly $89,500 from them during that period.

Year after Obama's romp, GOP set for comeback

RICHMOND — A year after Barack Obama handed the Republicans their first presidential defeat in Virginia in 44 years with a pledge to restore jobs, the Democrats appear to have squandered the party’s advances.

Polls predict a strong Republican victory in Tuesday’s gubernatorial election. They also show how powerful the issue of jobs and the economy remains — and how quickly the Democrats lost ownership of it.

The elections for governor in Virginia and New Jersey are seen by some as the first voter verdicts on Obama’s presidency and a possible sign of trouble for the Democrats’ large majorities in Congress.

In Virginia, recent polls show Republican Bob McDonnell leading by 11 to 18 percentage points over Democrat R. Creigh Deeds.

“We learned from what Obama did last year, and the party and Bob McDonnell took those principles as far as connecting with people and turning out the vote, and now it’s all working,” said Wendell S. Walker, a 57-year-old GOP campaign volunteer in Lynchburg.

Retailers suspend business with fruit grower

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. — Wal-Mart and two other top retailers said Friday they are suspending business with a large southwestern Michigan blueberry grower after investigators found children as young as 6 working in the grower’s fields.

Wal-Mart, Kroger and Meijer said pending further information, they have stopped buying products from Adkin Blue Ribbon Blueberry Co. near South Haven, about 85 miles northeast of Chicago.

Adkin general manager Tony Marr said the company has a strictly enforced written policy prohibiting young children from working in its fields. All adult employees must sign copies of the policy, and the farm keeps the signed copies on file, he said.

“We certainly don’t condone or promote child labor here in any way,” Marr said.

The company has eight full-time employees and hires about 350 seasonal workers each year to harvest and process the blueberries grown on its 640 acres.

Admiral concerned over China's military

A U.S. Navy admiral expressed new concern Friday over China’s military buildup and urged Beijing to be clearer about its intentions.

With China’s military growing at an “unprecedented rate,” the U.S. wants to ensure that expansion doesn’t destabilize the region, Rear Adm. Kevin Donegan told reporters on a visit to the Chinese territory of Hong Kong.

Donegan referred to China’s expanded weaponry. His remarks echoed the concerns of other U.S. military leaders who have said the growth in China’s military spending — up almost 15 percent in the 2009 budget — raises questions about how Beijing plans on deploying its new power.

“When we see a military growing at that rate, we’re interested in transparency and the understanding of the uses of that military,” said Donegan, commander of the USS George Washington aircraft carrier strike group, a key part of the U.S. Pacific Fleet.

Donegan’s comments come as a top Chinese general visits the United States on a mission to strengthen trust between the two militaries and dispel U.S. concerns about the growth of the People’s Liberation Army.

Xu Caihou, the PLA’s second-highest ranking officer, told President Barack Obama on Wednesday that ties between the two countries’ militaries play “an important role in enhancing strategic mutual trust and deepening their pragmatic cooperation,” according to Chinese media reports.

Ski town could push marijuana legalization

BRECKENRIDGE — Voters in this Rocky Mountain resort town will decide next week whether to legalize pot for all adults at a time when the movement to allow medical marijuana is gaining steam around the country.

A measure before Breckenridge voters in Tuesday’s municipal election would legalize possession of up to 1 ounce of marijuana along with bongs, pipes and other pot paraphernalia. Supporters of the measure say it would inch the whole state closer to full legalization.

Other cities around the country have taken similar action in recent years, including a measure in Denver that decriminalized possession.

Local ordinances to allow some recreational marijuana use have passed in Seattle, San Francisco and other cities, though in all those places the law is considered symbolic because it conflicts with state and federal laws. Alaska allows possession of up to 4 ounces of marijuana in one’s home, and advocates in California want to ask voters in next year’s election to legalize pot.

Advocates say the Breckenridge proposal goes further than others because it allows paraphernalia as well. “I don’t think there’s anywhere else in the country that has legalized paraphernalia,” said Bruce Mirken, a spokesman for the Washington-based Marijuana Policy Project.

California searchers seek survivors after midair crash

SAN DIEGO (AP) — The nighttime collision of a Coast Guard aircraft on a rescue mission and a Marine helicopter left nine people feared dead at sea Friday as investigators tried to solve the mystery of how the air-crews failed to see each other in a heavily used military training area.

Military aircraft and ships searched the ocean off Southern California for any sign of the victims while investigators gathered recordings of air traffic controllers and pilot communications. The search covered 644 square miles of ocean but focused on a debris field 50 miles off the San Diego coast.

The crash involved a Coast Guard C-130 with a seven-member crew and a Marine Corps AH-1W Super Cobra with two aboard as it flew in formation near the Navy's San Clemente Island, a site with training ranges for amphibious, air, surface and undersea warfare. It was not known whether the pilots were aware of each other before the 7:10 p.m. Thursday collision.

"A tragic event," Pentagon spokesman Bryan Whitman said. "The search is still on, but it's likely taken the lives of nine individuals."

The identities of the crew members were not immediately known. The C-130 crew had survival gear aboard the aircraft, including exposure suits that could have allowed them to survive in the water for hours, Petty Officer Henry Dunphy said.

The Sacramento-based C-130 crew was looking for a man on 12-foot motorized skiff who was reported missing after leaving Avalon Harbor on Santa Catalina Island to reach a friend on a disabled yacht that had gone adrift off Catalina in high winds Tuesday, authorities said.

The Marine helicopter was flying from Camp Pendleton near San Diego to San Clemente Island, said Maj. Jay Delarosa, a spokesman for Marine Corps Air Station Miramar in San Diego.

Two Super Cobras, a type of attack helicopter, were escorting two big CH-53E Super Stallion transport helicopters carrying Marines to the island, Delarosa said. He did not know how many Marines were aboard the transports.

After the collision, the other three helicopters returned to base, he said.

The accident occurred in airspace uncontrolled by the FAA and inside a so-called military warning area, which is at times open to civilian aircraft and at times closed for military use, said Federal Aviation Administration spokesman Ian Gregor. He added that he did not know the status of the airspace at the time.

Minutes before the collision, the FAA told the C-130 pilot to begin communicating with military controllers at Naval Air Station North Island in San Diego Bay, but it was not known if the pilot did so, Gregor said.

FAA controllers never communicated with the Cobra pilots, Gregor said.

Capt. Tom Farris, commander of the Coast Guard's San Diego sector, said it is not unusual to have a high volume of military traffic working in training areas.

School sued for punishing teens over pix

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Two sophomore girls have sued their school district after they were punished for posting sexually suggestive photos on MySpace during their summer vacation.

The American Civil Liberties Union, in a federal lawsuit filed last week on behalf of the girls, argues that Churubusco High School violated the girls' free speech rights when it banned them from extracurricular activities for a joke that didn't involve the school. They say the district humiliated the girls by requiring them to apologize to an all-male coaches' board and undergo counseling.

Some child advocates argue that schools should play a role in monitoring students' behavior, especially when dealing with minors. And the U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that students can be disciplined for activities that happen outside of school, so long as the school can prove the activities were disruptive or posed a danger and that it was foreseeable the activities would find their way to campus.

But some legal experts say that in this digital era, schools must accept that students will engage in some questionable behavior in cyberspace and during off hours.

"From the standpoint of young people, there's no real distinction between online life and offline life," said John Palfrey, a Harvard University law professor and co-director of the Berkman Center for Internet and Society. "It's just life."

In the Indiana case, the ACLU argues that the district and Churubusco Principal Austin Couch went too far in banning the two sophomores from fall sports, requiring them to apologize to the all-male coaches' board and undergo counseling after the photographs were circulated at school.

The lawsuit, filed in U.S. District Court in Fort Wayne, names Couch, the high school and the district as defendants and seeks unspecified damages. No hearing has been scheduled.

Erik Weber, an attorney for the Smith-Green school district, said Couch was enforcing the north-east Indiana school's athletic code, which allows the principal to bar from school activities any student-athlete whose behavior in or out of school "creates a disruptive influence on the discipline, good order, moral or educational environment at Churubusco High School."

Pact may restore Honduras leader to power

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras (AP) — Ousted President Manuel Zelaya said Friday that a U.S.-brokered pact will restore him to power in about a week, ending Honduras' isolation four months after soldiers flew the leftist leader into exile in his pajamas.

The agreement is a U.S. foreign policy victory but casts doubt on Latin America's ability to work out its own problems without Washington's help. In the four months since the coup, talks repeatedly broke down as the government of President Barack Obama tried to let Latin American governments take the lead.

In the end, the top U.S.

envoy for the Americas flew in Wednesday and won a deal the following night — just a month before presidential elections the U.S. and other countries warned would not be recognized if held under the government that took power in the June 28 coup.

The power-sharing agreement calls for Congress to decide whether to reinstate Zelaya and allow him to serve the remaining three months of his term.

And while it imposed no deadline, Zelaya told The Associated Press on Friday he expects a decision in "more or less a week." Meanwhile, he said, he will remain at the Brazilian Embassy in Tegucigalpa, where he took refuge after slipping back into the country on Sept. 21.

"I'm not going anywhere," he said.

Assistant U.S. Secretary of State Thomas Shannon said the two sides finally made concessions after realizing the warning that the November election would not be recognized was serious.

"There was no more space for them to dither," Shannon said.

Vandals aim to bounce back against Bulldogs

By Nicholas K. Geranios
Associated Press writer

Idaho coach Robb Akey has had some time to digest his team's 70-45 loss at Nevada last weekend and reached some conclusions about the Vandals' first Western Athletic Conference defeat.

"Ouch,' would by my first comment," Akey said this week.

His second comment?

"We're going to come storming back," Akey vowed, recalling the Vandals won five straight after their first loss at Washington.

The Vandals (6-2, 3-1 WAC) host Louisiana Tech (3-4, 2-2) today (3 p.m., MDT), continuing the quest for their first bowl game since 1998. Three of their remaining four games are in the Kibbie Dome.

Idaho already has four more wins than last season, the biggest turnaround in the nation so far.

Louisiana Tech is coming off a 23-21 loss at Utah State. Coach Derek Dooley praised his team for coming back from a 23-7 deficit. That included a 100-yard kickoff return by Phillip Livas Jr.,

The Broncos (7-0, 2-0 WAC) fair better than the Spartans in every team statistic. The Spartans have the worst defense in the WAC, giving up 259.83 rushing yards and 33 points per game.

Turnovers sink Buhl in playoff loss

BUHL — It wasn't just the concession-stand burgers that went up in smoke Friday.

Weiser ran the football 51 times for 191 yards and advanced into the quarterfinals of the Class 3A state playoffs with a 28-7 win over previously-undefeated and third-ranked Buhl.

The Wolverines (6-3), third place in the Snake River Valley Conference during the regular season, used the veer offense to great effect, gashing the Buhl defense and then shifting to throw when the Indians committed too fiercely to the run.

"Our offensive line just stuck it to them all night long," said Weiser halfback Darin Thomas, who carried 11 times for 86 yards and a back-breaking 26-yard touchdown

Bruins cruise into quarters, get Nampa — again

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

The Bruin football team took care of one rematch Friday, only to discover that it has another in seven days.

Twin Falls defeated the Burley Bobcats 57-27 at Bruin Stadium to take care of the Great 8 portion of the Class 4A state playoffs and advance to the quarter-final round.

The Bruins will host Nampa, which defeated them 28-14 in the season opener, next Friday.

The Bruin offense got to work early by scoring 38 unanswered points in the first half. The opening quarter started off as the Jayson Welker show when he claimed a 65-yard rushing TD and a 24-yard TD reception from quarterback T.J. Ellis.

"It starts with the line," Welker said. "Without them, there's no time for T.J. to throw and no holes for me to find."

Josh Settlemoir rushed for a pair of touchdowns during the half, and Jon Pulsifer hauled in a TD pass from Ellis as well. Kicker Dustin Hegstrom connected on a 40-yards field goal when a second-quarter drive stalled near the red zone. He also converted on 6 of 8 PATs.

The Bruin offense accumulated more than 450 yards, with more than 300 on the ground. During the second half, Brett Hardman had two rushing TDs and Mark Christensen had one. Ellis completed 8 of 15 for almost 150 yards, while backup Eric Harr threw for at least 30 more.

"We communicated really well," Twin Falls lineman Brett Kohring said. "It's something we struggled with against Minico."

The Bobcats headed into the locker room staring at another shutout — they lost to Twin Falls 45-0 on Oct. 9 — but the offense put some drives together against the Bruin backups during the latter half.

Hornets crush Wolves for conference title

Castleford quarter-back Nick Howard is chased down by Oakley defender Paxton Robinson Friday night in Oakley.

RYAN HOWE/
Times-News

By Ryan Howe

OAKLEY — For the third consecutive year in the Snake River Conference, there's Oakley, and then there's everybody else.

The Hornets proved Friday night that they are once again head and shoulders above their league foes by stomping previously unbeaten Castleford 48-20.

"Tonight was all emotion," said Oakley senior Paxton Robinson. "We came in pumped up and ready to play Oakley football."

Oakley (9-0, 8-0 SRC) capped its third straight undefeated regular season and third conference title.

The Hornets will host the No. 2 seed from District III next weekend for the first round of the Class 1A Division I state playoffs, with game date and time to be determined.

Castleford, which posted just seven wins in the past two seasons, finished second in the Snake River Conference and earned a state playoff berth for the first time in five years. The Wolves will travel to play the No. 1 seed from District III next week. If both teams win in the first round, the Wolves and Hornets would meet again in the semifinals in two weeks.

"We showed up to play, but they showed up to play harder," said Castleford's Kale Weekes.

"We had a couple key turnovers and missed opportunities by everybody on the team, and they came through on each one."

Oakley sputtered on its first two drives but eventually went up 34-0 before Castleford got on the board. The Hornet offense established the run early, which led to play-action passes that hurt the Wolves in the first half.

"We were very confident coming into the game," said Oakley lineman Jake Sagers. "We knew we had to play out of our minds."

HAGERMAN BEATS RIMROCK TO STAY ALIVE; SHOSHONE OUT

Hagerman volleyball coach Carrie Chizum said it's "do or die" for the Pirates in Lewiston this morning with a must-win match against Tri-Valley in the Class 1A Division I state tournament.

"It is coming down to each and every game," she said.

Hagerman started out on a rough road Friday, losing to Genesee 27-25, 26-24, 25-17. They then took three sets from Rimrock, 25-20, 25-22, 25-20 to stay alive.

Against Genesee, Amanda Regnier had 14 kills and Kyla Coates had 16 assists.

In the Rimrock game, Sabrina Goolsby had 11 kills. "We're just trying to lessen our errors and keep our game clean, and that's how we're going to win our next one," Chizum said.

The Pirates play again at 10 a.m., MDT.

Shoshone went two-and-out against Troy (25-23, 25-7, 28-18) and later Lapwai (25-19, 27-29, 19-25, 25-19, 15-12).

DIETRICH FACES REGULAR SEASON RIVALS

The Dietrich Blue Devils, Camas County Mushers and Carey Panthers can't seem to get enough of each other.

The Mushers emerged from a hard-fought five-set match with Dietrich Friday night, winning 19-25, 18-25, 25-14, 25-19, 15-12.

Now the Blue Devils play Carey today at 10 a.m., and Dietrich coach Traci Perron expects to play Camas as well today.

"We drive nine hours to play Camas and Carey. What are the odds?" Perron asked.

"Well have to win all the way back around to play Camas again," she said with optimism, hinting that it would happen.

Perron credited Yoshira McDaniel for having a good game.

Before the Dietrich-Camas match, Dietrich defeated Clark County 25-21, 25-11, 25-21, and Camas topped Garden Valley 25-20, 15-25, 26-16, 26-24.

Clark Fork defeated Carey 25-2, 24-26, 25-16, 25-20 in the opening round. The Panthers' elimination match results against Nez Perce were not available as of 11:20 p.m.

to round out the scoring. He also caught a 12-yard scoring pass to draw first blood.

"We had a great week of practice, and we knew that in the playoffs anything could happen. We got a lot of momentum, and we knew if we could keep up the intensity we'd be OK."

Buhl (8-1) managed just 210 yards of total offense and was blanked outside of scoring on its first drive of the game when quarterback Cader Owen plunged in from a yard out.

While Buhl answered the first time it trailed all season with Owen's score, the Indians couldn't get accustomed to playing from behind.

"They just hit us in the mouth from the very beginning," said Buhl tight end Jack Hamilton, who caught six passes for 50 yards. "They came to play, and we didn't. That pretty much says it all."

It was a disappointing night for the Indians, in which they had to abandon their bread-and-butter: running the football. They ran just 18 times on the night for 73 yards. Buhl turned the ball over four times in the second half — the third-quarter kickoff and three picks from Owen, who threw for 145 yards.

Weiser advances to play South Fremont next week in the state quarterfinals. Buhl has to settle for reclaiming the Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference championship with an unbeaten regular season.

Bruins

Burley quarterback Jake Mills, who passed for more than 350 yards, hit three different receivers for four scores, including two to senior Christian Winnmill. On the ground, the Bobcats were held to less than 50 yards.

While the Bruins march on, the Bobcats are done at 2-7, and today is the start of work for the 2010 season.

Winnmill said he enjoyed his time as a Bobcat football player, and his message to the returning underclassmen is "play with no regrets and do all you can."

"We definitely got a little better as a team," Burley head coach Eugene Kramer said. "We have to get them to believe that they can achieve. We're starting to turn the corner. We've done it off the field. The team GPA is up, and we've only had one personal foul all year. Now we have to do it on the field."

The Bruins (5-4) begin their preparations to face the Bulldogs, who were acknowledged as a physically tough team by Welker and Kohring.

"We expect the same," Welker said. "We'll get to see how tough we are up front, and it should be a good, hard-fought battle."

Now we go into the playoffs oh-and-oh. We've got to keep our heads together and not get complacent."

Oakley quarterback Brady Manning and tight end Hunter Wadsworth hooked up five times for 120 yards and three touchdowns. Rhyann Greenwell, Junior Tellez, Stephan Ortiz and Robinson each had rushing touchdowns.

"I'm proud of the kids for being able to execute things we've worked on," said

Oakley coach Tim Behunin. "We're focusing on not individual stats, it's about how the team does as a whole, spread the ball around and work as a team on defense and be there for each other."

After leading 18-0 at halftime, Oakley got two quick scores to open the second half.

Castleford didn't roll over, however. Howard had pressure in his face all night but was able to toss three touchdown

Hillcrest ends Minico's season

By Zach Kyle
Post Register

The Hillcrest Knights took their first step toward defending their championship by shutting out the Minico Spartans 46-0 to open the Class 4A state playoffs Friday at Thunder Stadium.

Hillcrest (8-1) took control and never let up, scoring touchdowns on its first six drives and rolling up 395 rushing yards.

Wing backs Jordan Speirs and Devin Droghei, gashed the Minico defense for 12 runs of 10 or more yards. Speirs finished with 150 yards on 20 carries with four touchdowns, and Droghei ran 18 times for 145 yards and a score.

“Tonight we stepped into a buzz saw,” said Minico assistant coach Jerry Diehl. “They just kept coming at us. They don’t make many mistakes.”

Minico ends the season at 4-6 and 3-2 in the Great Basin Conference.

Minico’s season ends with a 4-6 record. Minico coach Tim Perrigot said Hillcrest is hard to prepare for.

“You can try to simulate as much as you want in practice, but you just can’t replicate that speed,”

Perrigot said. “Those two backs are special.”

Hillcrest coach Darin Owens was pleased his team kept up its intensity after taking a 28-0 lead into the half. The shutout was Hillcrest’s first of the season.

“I was more impressed with how our defense tonight,” Owens said. “Defense wins championships, and I think kids are stepping up and we’re starting to see that.”

Hillcrest caught a break on the last play in the first half. Minico receiver Coltin Johnson caught a ball behind the Hillcrest defense and streaked to the end zone, but Brent Johnson recovered and got just enough of Coltin Johnson to knock him out at the 1-yard line.

The clock clicked to 0:00, retiring the first half and Minico’s best scoring opportunity.

The Hillcrest defense laid down the hammer in the third quarter when Ben Eaton laid a vicious blind side sack on Miller. The ball squirted loose, and Jake Belnap picked it up and ran 60 yards to the house.

Perrigot, for one, isn’t betting against Hillcrest in the weeks to come.

“They are very physical, explosive and difficult to stop,” Perrigot said. “What makes it even worse is their defense finds a way to keep you out of the end zone. It’s a great team. They should make another run.”

NORTH GEM 44, DIETRICH 16

The Dietrich defense allowed only 80 rushing yards but gave up 380 yards through the air as the Cowboys beat the Blue Devils 44-16 in Sawtooth Conference action.

“We just made too many mental mistakes on our pass coverage,” said Dietrich coach Doug Astle. “And you just can’t do that against a good team like North Gem.”

Dietrich (4-5, 4-4) finished in fourth place in the conference and will travel to Mackey next Friday for a 4 p.m. playoff game with the Miners.

MACKAY 82, MURTAUGH 32

Murtaugh seniors Derrick Bates and Manny Pacheco gave big efforts in their final outings, but the Red Devils fell 82-32 to Mackay, Class 1A Division I’s No. 1 ranked team.

“Unfortunately, we lost one of our biggest weapons on the second play of the game when Humberto Pacheco was injured on a tackle,” said Anderson. “Derrick was running for his life the entire game and still was able to complete some perfect passes throwing for 250 yards. And Manny had over 350 total yards.

“The boys all played an amazing game. We had a great season and had as many wins this year as in the last eight years. We were one game from going to playoffs.”

Pacheco had a hand in all the scoring for Murtaugh (4-5, 3-5). He caught passes of 60 and 75 yards from Bates and threw an 80-yard touchdown pass to Bates. He also scored on an 85-yard fumble recovery and ran the ball in for a TD from 70 yards.

A box score was unavailable.

The Trojans will travel to the Kibbie Dome in Moscow next week for their first-round playoff game with defending state champ Prairie.

Jerome comes up short against Pocatello

By Dan Angell
Idaho State Journal

Pocatello’s Wes Howard didn’t want his high school career to end. Neither did Gus Callen or Cameron Stauffer of Jerome. But on this night, only Howard would get his wish.

The big senior’s four rushing touchdowns matched the four receiving touchdowns Callen hauled in from Stauffer, and the Indians held on against the Tigers, 35-33, to advance to the Class 4A state quarterfinals. Callen’s final score brought Jerome within two points in the final minute, but the Tigers couldn’t recover the ensuing onside kick.

“We’re ecstatic right now to be moving on,” Pocatello coach Tom Harrison said. “Jerome gave us a good battle, and our kids fought. I was real happy with the way we executed on offense. We went back to some of our-old fashioned ways of running the football.”

Howard and Jeron Batts combined to rush for 228 yards, allowing the Indians (3-6) to play to their strength.

“Our offensive line was firing off the ball and doing a great job,” Howard said. “Our running backs just ran hard and kept them on their heels. We did a pretty good job executing on offense from all the running backs.”

Jerome coach Gary Krumm said that his defense made the wrong decision in how to tackle Howard.

“That 35 is a horse,” Krumm said. “Our kids, I thought they would adjust. They were trying to tackle him around his upper torso. You’re not going to get that kid down up there. You’ve got to get down around his ankles and knees. We didn’t do a very good job right there.”

Where the Tigers were doing a good job was with their passing attack. With the run having been established, Stauffer was finding gaping holes in the Indians’ secondary, and usually finding Callen open. Callen caught 12 balls for 208 yards, six in each half.

“The O-line protected well,” Stauffer said. “The pass opened up because they let us run the ball. The O-line dominated with the run, and that opens up the pass every single time. You have to give up something to try to take care of the run, and we tried to take advantage of it.”

That the Tigers took advantage of that didn’t surprise Krumm, who called Callen an all-state receiver.

“They’re special, and unfortunately, they’re gone now,” Krumm said. “Gus is better than people think. He’s sneaky fast and he’s got the best hands I’ve ever had in a receiver. We were just too late.”

In Krumm’s eyes, the reason they were too late happened in the first quarter. After the Tigers (5-4) scored their first touchdown, kicker Roman Vazquez pushed the extra point wide left, leaving Pocatello with a 7-6 lead. After missing a 2-point conversion on its next score, the Tigers were left with a two-possession game the rest of the way and could never get any closer.

“Some people won’t look back to it, but our missed extra point put us in a hole that we never quite got out of,” Krumm said. “That was a big play. It might have been a different game.”

Pocatello now faces Hillcrest, which stomped the Indians a few weeks ago.

Bulldogs struggle in playoff defeat

By John Derr
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — The Kimberly Bulldogs struggled to move the ball. The Payette Pirates did not.

The result: a 36-3 home loss for the Bulldogs as Payette rolled up 500 yards of offense and advanced to the quarterfinals of the Class 3A state playoffs.

Kimberly coach Kirby Bright said his team had to win the battle up front to advance.

That didn’t happen.

The Pirates mixed it up with run and pass while the Bulldogs entered the red zone three times, but managed just three points.

“We shot ourselves in the foot. (The Pirates) are a good team and physical,” said Bright, who should have a solid core of experienced players returning next year. “They had good speed and good playmakers.”

Payette converted a pair of third-and-longs in scoring on its opening possession. Travis Blackwell, who led the Pirates with a combined 205 yards, took it the final 2.

After a three-and-out on their first possession, the Bulldogs found some success. Ethan Richmond rushed for 18 yards while Nick Dame connected with Tyler Wadsworth for a couple big gains. The drive stalled deep in Payette territory, but Dame nailed the 26-yard field goal to put Kimberly on the board.

It would be the Bulldogs’ only points of the game.

Kimberly, the No. 2 seed from the Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference, looked to take the lead at the half as Marcos Eccles recovered a fumble on a punt return, but Kimberly gave it right back on an interception.

Then came the heart-breaker.

With just 10 seconds left on the clock, the Pirates ran a screen to perfection, taking advantage of the hard-charging Bulldog defense. Damian Reynolds took the short pass and went untouched for 70 yards to put Payette up 16-3 at the half.

Kimberly came out of the locker room inspired, moving yet again into the red zone. Dame and Wadsworth hooked up again for 13 yards while Richmond tallied 14 more. But two tackles behind the line of scrimmage shut the drive down.

It took just two plays for Payette to respond. Damian Reynolds gained 50 yards while Blackwell took it the final 35 in pushing the advantage to 22-3.

The Pirates added another score late in the third to put the game out of reach.

Marquee matchup as Oregon hosts USC

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — Hollywood couldn't have scripted it better: Halloween night, the din of Autzen Stadium, crisp fall temperatures and No. 10 Oregon versus No. 4 USC in arguably the Pac-10's biggest game of the season.

"It's going to be crazy," Ducks quarterback Jeremiah Masoli said. "It's going to be one of those Autzen nights times 100."

Oregon (6-1, 4-0) sits alone atop the conference standings with no league losses, threatening the hold the Trojans (6-1, 3-1) have had on the Pac-10 title for the past seven years.

The Ducks have won six straight games since an embarrassing 19-8 loss at Boise State in the opener, a game that got uglier when running back LeGarrette Blount punched a Broncos defensive end as he was leaving the field.

Blount was suspended for the season and Oregon

No. 4 USC at
No. 10 Oregon
6 p.m., ABC

moved on without him. Perhaps their biggest win thus far was a 42-3 victory over then-No. 6 California back on Sept. 26 — at, where else? Autzen.

Afterward, Cal offensive lineman Mike Tepper said the noise made a difference. At Oregon, fans infamously add to the decibels with incessant duck calls. Then there's the fact that the stands butt up close to the playing field.

Two years ago, USC visited Autzen and left with a 24-17 loss.

Quarterback Mark Sanchez, making his third start, was rattled and threw a pair of critical interceptions.

"The wins and losses are what matter, because so many things can change in football. You have to be focused on the final result."

— USC linebacker Chris Galippo

Current USC quarterback Matt Barkley brushed the acoustics aside this week, exclaiming: "I feed off that energy, I feed off that noise. I love it."

Indeed, Southern California's freshman starter has held his own on the road against opponents like Notre Dame and Ohio State, known for enthusiastic fans. He currently leads the Pac-10 in both pass efficiency and passing yards per game, with an average of 256.7. He's thrown for seven touchdowns.

"You gotta think of him as a veteran, like he's the best quarterback in the world," Oregon cornerback Talmadge Jackson said. "You can't think about him as a freshman."

Barkley and the Trojans will have to deal with much more than noise. They'll be facing a Ducks team that has steadily improved on both sides of the ball since that season-opening loss on Boise State's blue turf.

Masoli has recently answered critics who claimed he was too one-dimensional and too dependent on his rushing ability. He's passed for 905 yards and five touchdowns, with just two interceptions. Still known more for his scrambling, however, he's rushed for 272 yards and seven TDS.

Freshman running back LaMichael James, who replaced Blount, is averaging 105 yards a game.

Oregon is ranked atop the Pac-10 in pass defense and has allowed only five touchdown passes. The unit has allowed just three touchdowns to its Pac-10 opponents this season — all after the Ducks have had leads well in hand. The D also has twice as many sacks (22-11) as their opponents, along with 11 interceptions.

In contrast, USC's defense has struggled of late. The Trojans allowed Oregon State 329 passing yards last week in the Trojan's 43-36 victory. Notre Dame had 285 yards the week before.

But USC still held those opponents at bay. The Trojans' only loss was the 16-13 upset by conference foe Washington on Sept. 19.

"We know how to finish when it matters," said linebacker Chris Galippo. "We'd rather win a million games by giving up 36 points than giving up three and lose. The wins and losses are what matter, because so many things can change in football. You have to be focused on the final result."

Last season the Trojans routed Oregon 44-10 at Memorial Coliseum. At the time, USC was coming off a stunning loss at Oregon State that knocked the team off the top of the AP Poll.

Oregon would like its shot at besting the Trojans this year. Ducks fans would, too. They are snapping up "Fright Night" T-shirts, featuring a duck and crossbones. A Web site advertised two tickets on the 50-yard line for $1,000.

"SC has won the Pac-10, I think, the last seven years," said Oregon linebacker Casey Matthews. "To beat them this week would definitely be huge."

ISU hopes to honor Benavides with effort at Montana State

By Mark Liptak
Times-News correspondent

POCATELLO — The focus of the Idaho State Bengals is divided today. On one hand, the Bengals (0-8, 0-5 Big Sky Conference) aim to snap a 20-game road losing streak as they visit league foe Montana State. But ISU's players will also be thinking about freshman teammate Andrew Benavides.

Benavides suffered a ruptured disk in his neck and spinal cord swelling after being tackled in the loss at Northern Arizona last week. He reported some feeling below the waist and doctors believe he'll be able to resume a normal life. Playing football again is another matter that only time will answer. ISU head coach John Zamberlin and the players are trying to remain positive.

"These guys are my kids," he said. "It's doubly hard when it's one of your guys, especially somebody that you brought in and you were in his living room and you sat down with his parents and talked about things."

Benavides was hurt when he landed on his head after being tackled at the end of a 73-yard kick return.

Zamberlin admitted it might be tough for some players to return to football with all the issues surrounding Benavides, but he added that it could give his team motivation when facing the Bobcats (4-3, 2-2).

"He's one of our fallen warriors, so we need to step up and honor him and go out and play hard," said Zamberlin. "That's what he would do and that's what he would expect us to do."

Zamberlin said Montana State's will present a challenge in today's 1:30 p.m. kickoff on Altitude.

"They're really difficult to run against. If you are going to get to them you probably have to do it through the air," he said. "They allowed over 500 yards of offense in their loss to Eastern Washington, but not a lot of that came on the ground."

Montana State has two straight conference losses and is fighting to keep its FCS playoff hopes alive. Bobcat quarterback Cody Kempt said his team's mentality must change.

"I think we've got to start playing with a chip on our shoulder," said Kempt. "We've got to start playing angry. These next four games we have to win out, and definitely (there's a) lot of frustration, a lot of anger built up inside. We just have to come out every week and play like it's a championship game. These next four weeks have to be the championship game for us. They're must-win games."

The Bobcats played their game at Eastern Washington with eight starters missing because of the flu. All are expected to suit up today against ISU.

leads the team with 50 tackles and two interceptions.

"Their secondary in general is really aggressive," Petersen said. "They'll get up in guys' faces and make plays. They're not going to back down."

The Broncos will use their ever-deepening receiving corps to attack the Spartans. Kellen Moore has connected with 14 different receivers on the season, led by wide receivers Titus Young and Austin Pettis.

"I think they got a good system," Moore said of SJSU. "They'll play some zone, play some man, be aggressive in it."

The Spartans do well in the red zone, when they get there. They lead the nation in red zone percentage (11 TD, 2 FG), but offensive drives have only reached the that prime territory 13 times in six games. Those opportunities may lessen against the Broncos this afternoon. BSU has only let opposing offenses into the red zone 11 times this season and only allowed six touchdowns and one field goal.

The Bronco offense has struggled in the red zone as well, mainly due to penalties and fumbled snaps along the goal line, mistakes that frustrate Petersen. "It kills it," Petersen said. "We don't have enough plays as it is. The margin of error changes down there."

The Broncos somehow managed to cover all six of their fumbles last week against Hawaii and the defense forced the Warriors to commit six turnovers. BSU leads the WAC in turnover differential while the Spartans rank second. BSU went through a two-game stretch where they didn't force any turnovers.

"Just because we start talking to the kids about some concept or idea ... it doesn't mean it's going to get done right then and there," Petersen said. "Sometimes it just takes longer. A lot of times turnovers come in bunches."

Quarterback Jordan La Secle and receiver Kevin Jurovich lead the Spartan attack. Jurovich was injured last season, but leads the team with 6.17 receptions per game.

"(Jurovich) has some pretty good hands," BSU safety Jeron Johnson said. "I've seen some plays on film where he made catches that you don't think he'll make. He just shows strong hands"

The vast majority of the BSU roster is from California, so when they play teams from the Sunshine State, they meet former high school teammates and opponents.

"It's always fun to play those teams from California," Jason Robinson said. "I get up for every game, but there's something about playing a team from California that gives you added incentive."

Today's game, the first at home in nearly a month, is also the first afternoon game this season for the Broncos. That creates a change in preparation times. The players said they just have to wake up and get going earlier.

Idaho

that was the first in the WAC this year.

The Bulldogs have been giving up lots of yards on the ground this year, which Dooley credited to his squad playing some strong running teams that wore defenders down.

"We've got to play better up front," he said.

Louisiana Tech has lost all four of its road games, and will be playing without punter and receiver Adrian Linwood, who has left the program.

But they feature running back Daniel Porter, who has posted consecutive 1,000-yard seasons.

Idaho has an excellent running attack of its own behind De'Maundray Woolridge, Deonte Jackson and Princeton McCarty.

Idaho trailed 21-0 at Nevada and cut that to 28-24 at halftime. But they had no answer for Wolf Pack quarterback Colin Kaepernick, who made two long runs for touchdowns in the second half. He ended up running for four touchdowns and threw for two more in the game. He ran for 238 yards on 15 carries as Nevada finished with 484 rushing yards.

Idaho quarterback Nathan Enderle passed for 342 yards and four touchdowns, including a pair of 73-yard strikes to Maurice Shaw.

"I learned our guys are still going to compete," Akey said of the loss.

THIS WEEK'S OTHER BIG GAMES

UNLV (3-5, 1-3 MOUNTAIN WEST) AT
NO. 8 TCU (7-0, 3-0)
2 P.M. (VERSUS)

Line: TCU by 35.
Series record: TCU leads 6-1.
Last meeting: 2008, TCU 44-14.

What's at Stake
For TCU to keep its BCS buster dream alive, the Horned Frogs have to keep winning — and do so convincingly. TCU jumped to sixth and ahead of Boise State in the latest BCS standings after a 38-7 victory at BYU last weekend. Boise State is also heavily favored in its game this week against San Jose State. A loss means UNLV can't have a winning season.

Key Matchup
TCU's defensive front vs. UNLV QB Omar Clayton. The Frogs defensive line will put pressure on Clayton, an injury-prone though impressive passer with a 63-percent completion rate for 1,663 yards and 10 touchdowns in his seven games. DE Jerry Hughes has nine of TCU's 26 sacks.
Notes: TCU has won 11 consecutive home games, winning by an average margin of 44-9. ... The Frogs have allowed 28 yards rushing per game and 1.1 yards per carry in three home games this year. ... Frogs sophomore WR Antoine Hicks has touched the ball on 16 plays this season. He's scored six touchdowns (three receiving, three rushing).

NO. 3 TEXAS (7-0, 4-0 BIG 12) VS.
NO. 13 OKLAHOMA STATE (6-1, 3-0)
6 P.M. (ESPN2)

Line: Texas by 9½.
Series Record: Texas leads 21-2.
Last meeting: 2008, Texas 28-24.

What's at Stake
Oklahoma State can control of the Big 12 South race and throw a wrench in Texas' national championship hopes with an upset. In a division dominated by Texas and Oklahoma, the Cowboys have never played for the Big 12 championship. The Longhorns are trying to avoid a road letdown against a divisional foe on Halloween weekend for the second straight year.

Key Matchup
Texas pass rusher Sergio Kindle vs. Oklahoma State LT Russell Okung. The Longhorns' most disruptive linebacker/defensive end will face a challenge this week against Okung, an NFL prospect who shut out NCAA sacks leader Von Miller of Texas A&M earlier this season.

NO. 1 FLORIDA (7-0, 5-0 SEC) VS.
GEORGIA (4-3, 3-2)
1:30 P.M. (CBS)

Line: Florida by 15½.
Series Record: Debatable. Florida says Georgia leads 46-38-2. Georgia says it's 47-38-2, preferring to count a 52-0 win in 1904, two years before the Gators officially began playing.
Last meeting: 2008, Florida 49-10.

What's at Stake
Florida's 17-game winning streak, No. 1 ranking and coach Urban Meyer's nearly flawless record against the program's three main rivals. Meyer is 12-1 against Tennessee, Georgia and Florida State, with the only loss coming against the Bulldogs in 2007.

Key Matchup
Florida CBs Joe Haden and Janoris Jenkins vs. Georgia WR A.J. Green. Haden and Jenkins held LSU's Terrance Tolliver and Brandon LaFell to a combined six catches for 58 yards three weeks ago. Now, they get the SEC's leading receiver. Green has 41 catches for 682 yards and six TDs.

WYOMING (4-3, 2-1 MOUNTAIN WEST) AT
NO. 19 UTAH (6-1, 3-0)
6 P.M. (THE MTLN)

Line: Utah by 17.
Series Record: Utah leads 49-31-1.
Last Meeting: 2008, Utah 40-7.

What's at Stake
Utah wants to keep up with TCU for the Mountain West lead. The Horned Frogs and Utes are both 3-0 in league play and on course for a first-place battle Nov. 14 at TCU. The Cowboys have had a week off to recover from a 10-0 loss at Air Force.

Key Matchup
Utah's defense vs. Wyoming's offense. Utah leads the league in pass efficiency defense and is third in total defense. The Cowboys are eighth in passing and total offense.
Notes: Utah has won 20 of its last 21 games. ... The Utes have beaten the Cowboys in eight of the last nine meetings, losing 31-15 in Laramie three years ago. ... The Utes plan to wear their black uniforms for the first time since beating TCU 13-10 last Nov. 6. ... Wyoming coach Dave Christensen and Utah coach Kyle Whittingham were assistants at Idaho State in the early 1990s.

Millsap, Jazz top Clippers

SALT LAKE CITY — Paul Millsap scored 17 of his 23 of his points in the second half, and the Utah Jazz used a 15-0 run spanning the third and fourth quarters to beat the Los Angeles Clippers, 111-98 on Friday night.

Carlos Boozer had 20 points, 12 rebounds and seven assists, and Deron Williams finished with 21 points and nine assists for Utah, which held the Clippers to 38 points in the second half.

Ronnie Brewer added 17 points as the Jazz avoided their first 0-2 start since 2002.

Eric Gordon scored 22, and Baron Davis and Chris Kaman added 21 points apiece for the Clippers, who fell to 0-3.

CELTICS 118, BULLS 90

BOSTON — Paul Pierce scored 20 of his 22 points in the third quarter, and the Boston Celtics rolled to a 118-90 victory over the Chicago Bulls on Friday night in the teams' first matchup since last spring's thrilling seven-game play-off series.

Ray Allen had 20 points for Boston and Kevin Garnett, who missed the final 25 games of the regular season and the playoffs with strained ligaments in his right knee, added 16. Rajon Rondo had 16 assists and eight rebounds as the Celtics improved to 3-0.

CAVALIERS 104, TIMBERWOLVES 87

MINNEAPOLIS — LeBron James scored 24 points and had nine rebounds and six assists to avoid his first 0-3 start in five years.

Mo Williams added 20 points for Cleveland and Daniel Gibson drained three 3-pointers during a 3-minute stretch of the fourth quarter.

MAGIC 95, NETS 85

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Vince Carter returned to New Jersey and scored 16 points before leaving the game against his former teammates in the second quarter with a sprained left ankle.

All-Star center Dwight Howard more than made up for Carter's absence with 20 points, 22 rebounds and four blocks as the Magic won their second straight and handed the Nets their second straight loss.

THUNDER 91, PISTONS 83

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Kevin Durant scored 11 of his 25 points in the fourth quarter to lead Oklahoma City.

The franchise is 2-0 for the first time since the 2003-04 season when it was in Seattle.

HEAT 96, PACERS 83

INDIANAPOLIS — Jermaine O'Neal had 22 points and 12 rebounds against his former team, leading Miami past Indiana.

The Pacers traded O'Neal before the 2008-09 season as they focused on rebuilding with younger players. He was animated throughout the game, drawing a technical foul for hanging on the rim after a dunk and later smiling when Pacers fans booed him.

HAWKS 100, WIZARDS 89

ATLANTA — Josh Smith scored 20 points and reached a blocked shots milestone, and Atlanta held off Gilbert Arenas and Washington.

Arenas had 23 points and Brendan Haywood added 19 for Washington.

BOBCATS 102, KNICKS 100, 20T

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — D.J. Augustin made two free throws with 2.5 seconds left in the second overtime and Charlotte recovered from blowing an 18-point, fourth-quarter lead.

Stunned after New York's comeback, the Bobcats persevered to win an ugly game between teams coming off blowout losses in their openers.

GRIZZLIES 115, RAPTORS 107

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Zach Randolph scored 30 points to lead Memphis to its first victory of the season.

Marc Gasol added 19 points for Memphis, which lost by 22 to the Pistons in the opener Wednesday night. O.J. Mayo had 18 points, and Rudy Gay finished with 17 points and nine rebounds.

HORNETS 97, KINGS 92

NEW ORLEANS — Chris Paul scored 31 points and Emeka Okafor capped another strong performance by blocking Kevin Martin's tying 3-point attempt in the final seconds.

Okafor, who missed the entire preseason with a sprained toe, finished with 11 points, 13 rebounds and four blocks for his second straight double-double with New Orleans.

76ERS 99, BUCKS 86

PHILADELPHIA — Andre Iguodala scored 19 points, Elton Brand had 17 and the Philadelphia 76ers bounced back from a dismal opener.

Michael Redd and 20-year-old rookie guard Brandon Jennings led the Bucks with 17 points each.

Bats look to break out as Series shifts to Philly

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Derek Jeter almost seems to delight in the way this World Series is playing out.

Forget all those power hitters. Pitching is priceless.

"I told you," he said with a smile.

Without any offense from Alex Rodriguez, Jeter and the New York Yankees totaled four runs in the first two games and still eked out a split at home. Now, the Series shifts to Philadelphia for Game 3 on Saturday night, with Cole Hamels set to start for the Phillies against fellow lefty Andy Pettitte.

Three wins from a second consecutive championship, Philadelphia could wrap it up at home. Chase Utley, Jimmy Rollins and crew can't wait to play before their fervent fans in the second-ever World Series game on Halloween.

"We're back in our own ballpark. It's going to be hostile. It's going to be loud," Shane Victorino said.

Nothing new, according to the Yankees.

"Because of the team we are, we get booed and yelled at everywhere we go," Johnny Damon said. "Even coming off the train."

Citizens Bank Park is approximately 108 miles from Yankee Stadium, with all those New Jersey Turnpike tolls in between. Both teams zipped down on the train in a little more than an hour — the Phillies after their 3-1 loss Thursday night, the Yankees on Friday afternoon.

During batting practice, as one slugger after another sent balls ricocheting around Philadelphia's cozy ballpark, it was hard to fathom how Cliff Lee and A.J. Burnett looked so dominant on the mound the previous two nights.

"I can't say enough about our advanced scouting and our reports. They're right on," Phillies manager Charlie Manuel said.

Sooner or later, though, some of these big bats are bound to break loose.

Mark Teixeira's only hit in seven at-bats is a solo homer. Phillies bopper Ryan Howard is hitting .222 with six strikeouts. A monster in the playoffs,

Game 3
Yankees at Phillies
5:30 p.m., FOX

Rodriguez is 0 for 8 in his first World Series, also with six strikeouts.

"I feel pretty good. I mean, it's only been eight at-bats, but I felt like I've had a lot of good swings," he said. "I fouled a couple of pitches off that I should have put in play."

A-Rod was mostly an October bust before this year, but Jeter insisted he's not worried.

"No, the guy's been killing the ball for three weeks," Jeter said. "It's kind of hard to sit here and overanalyze things. If pitchers make their pitches, they're going to get you out."

Damon said the rest of the Yankees need to pick up the slack for Rodriguez. But with offense at a premium, they'll be missing a dangerous bat during the next three games.

Because World Series rules do not allow a designated hitter in the National League park, New York must decide whether to put Hideki Matsui in the outfield or on the bench.

"As productive as he's been for us this year, you don't want to lose his bat," manager Joe Girardi said.

Matsui hit a go-ahead homer off Pedro Martinez in Game 2 and it might seem tempting to start him in right field in place of slumping Nick Swisher. Slowed by knee surgeries, however, Matsui hasn't played the outfield since June 15, 2008, at Houston. He appeared in right field only three times that year, all in April.

Matsui was stationed in right during batting practice and jogged after a few fungos, but it was hardly an intense workout.

"I don't see any major issues," he said through a translator. "At this point, the way I feel, I think it should be fine. I mean, again, you really have to try and then see how it feels."

Kim reaches semis at World Match Play

CASARES, Spain — Anthony Kim advanced to the Volvo World Match Play Championship semifinals Friday despite losing to Scott Strange by three holes in his final round-round match at Finca Cortesin.

Strange needed to beat Kim by at least four holes to advance and was 4-up going to the par-5 18th, but Kim took the hole after hitting his second shot within 4 feet. Strange put his third shot into a bunker before conceding the hole.

Kim will face undefeated Robert Allenby in the semifinals. Allenby beat Oliver Wilson by three holes to set up a Presidents Cup rematch, where Kim won easily. Kim made bigger headlines then after being called a loose cannon by Allenby for reportedly being spotted drunk only hours before teeing off.

Angel Cabrera will face

Ross Fisher in the other semifinal. Cabrera beat Simon Dyson by seven holes, and Fisher edged Jeev Milkha Singh by a hole.

VIKING CLASSIC DELAYED AGAIN

MADISON, Miss. — PGA Tour officials postponed the Viking Classic until at least Sunday and will evaluate the course Saturday before making a decision on when or if the Fall Series tournament will be held.

Heavy rain this week has left standing water and tracts of mud all over the course. Officials said in a late afternoon news conference that they didn't want to speculate on what could be done with the tournament. Earlier in the day, though, they said possibilities include postponing the full event until next week or weekend, shortening it to 36 holes and starting it midweek, or outright cancellation.

COOK TAKES LEAD AT CHARLES SCHWAB CUP CHAMPIONSHIP

SONOMA, Calif. — John Cook shot a tournament-record 10-under 62 to take a three-stroke lead over Tom Watson and Phil Blackmar after the second round of the Champions Tour's season-ending Charles Schwab Cup Championship.

Cook, the Administaff Small Business Classic winner two weeks ago in Texas, had 10 birdies and needed just 23 putts to match his career-best round and reach 14 under.

Watson, the surprising runner-up at the British Open, hit every green in regulation and shot a 64. Blackmar, who shared the first-round lead with Jeff Sluman, had five birdies on the back nine for a 67.

CHOPRA LEADS SINGAPORE OPEN

SINGAPORE — Sweden's

Daniel Chopra shot a 6-under 65 for a share of the lead with England's Ian Poulter and Taiwan's Chan Yih-shin in the rainy Singapore Open.

Phil Mickelson was 1 under after four holes in the second round. Padraig Harrington (69) was 1 over and Geoff Ogilvy (74) 2 over.

TWO TIED ATOP KOLON CHAMPIONSHIP

INCHEON, South Korea — Anna Grzebień and Meaghan Francella shot 6-under 66s in wet conditions to share the lead in the LPGA Tour's Hana Bank KOLON Championship.

South Korean star Jiyai Shin was a stroke back along with Bo-Kyung Kim, Jimin Kang, Vicky Hurst, Catriona Matthew and Pat Hurst, who aced the par-3 12th for her first hole-in-one on tour. Top-ranked Lorena Ochoa opened with a 72.

Busch crew chief Addington confused by firing

TALLADEGA, Ala. — Kyle Busch celebrated 12 wins with crew chief Steve Addington, including a comeback victory last year at Talladega Superspeedway.

It seemed like a lifetime ago, though, on Friday as Addington prepared for his final weekend with Busch. He'll call Sunday's race at Talladega and then hand the job over to Dave Rogers in a firing that admittedly left Addington "pretty confused."

"Do I agree with it? No," Addington said. "But it is what it is, and I felt like we had a good run."

Busch said the decision was made by team owner Joe Gibbs and president J.D. Gibbs, and it was based on lack of consistency this season.

"It seems like we're either feast or famine — we're either going to win the race or finish 30th," Busch said. "Some of that's my fault, some of that's just not having the right stuff for me, and Joe and J.D. felt like we needed to try something new to get something of a more consistent basis and championship-caliber."

Addington and Busch charged out of the gate at the start of the 2008 season. Busch moved to Joe Gibbs Racing after his firing from Hendrick Motorsports, and Addington got the job of trying to rein in NASCAR's wild child.

He made it look easy with immediate results. They almost won the season-opening Daytona 500, and did get their first win together three weeks later with a victory at Atlanta.

ALLMENDINGER GIVEN BREATH TEST BEFORE PRACTICE

TALLADEGA, Ala. — NASCAR driver A.J. Allmendinger was required to take a breath test before Friday's practice at Talladega Superspeedway following his arrest on a drunken driving charge.

Allmendinger was arrested by Mooresville (N.C.) police early Thursday morning. He was placed on probation by NASCAR through the end of the season and said he had no problem when series officials asked him to take the test.

"I know what I've done," Allmendinger said. "I respect the punishment and everything that I have to do to gain the trust back of NASCAR and everybody that's out there racing with me."

Mooresville police said Allmendinger, who drives the No. 44 Dodge for Richard Petty Motorsports, failed a field sobriety test after being pulled over shortly after leaving a bar.

Allmendinger registered 0.08 on the breath test, the police report said. Under North Carolina law, that means his license will be automatically suspended for 30 days.

As October ends, think fire safety

To all my friends in the fire departments, I just want you all to know that I didn't forget about you this month. In fact, you might say I've saved the best for last — the last day of the month, that is.

For those of you who didn't know, October was fire safety month. I'm going to share a few requests that firefighters have asked me to share for years.

With the end of daylight saving time and the clocks falling back an hour tonight, it's a great time to remember to change the batteries in your smoke detectors. Then change them again when you wind your clocks forward in the spring.

Speaking of smoke detectors, it's a great idea to replace any detector that's been in place for more than 10 years. Basic new alarms are inexpensive, and if you're interested in technology, it's a good excuse to upgrade to something cool.

It'd also be a great time to buy a fire extinguisher if you don't have one. Having an extinguisher on hand could save the day — and the rest of your house. They're also a lot cheaper than you might think, and certainly cheaper than losing your home or something more dear to you.

POLICEMAN DAN

I've also been asked to tell you that if you're planning to burn anything this winter, make sure you call to make sure you can burn and to prevent false fire calls from neighbors who don't know you're conducting a legal burn.

Finally, my firefighter friends want you to know that you must yield to their trucks, just like any other emergency vehicle with its lights flashing. If you fail to do so, you could be cited.

While you're yielding at the scene of a fire, remember to stay away from areas where firefighters are. They need all the room they can get to unroll hoses and do their jobs. It helps if they're not dodging your vehicle at the same time.

If you remember some of these tips, you might be someone who helps keep fires to a minimum.

Q: My question is about non-alcoholic beer. Do the same rules apply for drinking and driving and open containers? Can a passenger be in possession of one?

A: First off, this isn't absolute law — it's my interpretation, and another officer in a different jurisdiction might see things differently.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am 80 years old. My doctor doesn't seem too concerned that I've been diagnosed with diverticulosis involving the entire colon. How concerned should I be? Can this become worse? worry about most? Should I see a spine doctor in case I eventually get worse? Or should I concentrate on my diverticulosis? I'm afraid to exercise and have been very careful.

DEAR READER: Diverticular disease is a condition of the digestive tract characterized by small pouches that protrude through the muscular wall of the large intestine. When a number of pouches are present, the condition is known as diverticulosis. When inflammation occurs, the condition is known as diverticulitis.

Diverticulosis is rather common and occurs frequently with advancing age. The condition is observed more often in women than in men.

Causes may include a weakening in the wall of the colon, chronic constipation, the repeated use of laxatives and enemas, and a low-fiber diet.

Because of a lack of symptoms, the condition often goes undiagnosed. In fact, it may be discovered only during the course of a barium enema X-ray. When symptoms do occur, they often present in the lower left side of the abdomen. They can occur on the right and have been confused with appendicitis. Nausea, vomiting, bloating, pain and alternating constipation and diarrhea have been reported.

France’s Jacques Chirac ordered to stand trial

PARIS (AP) — A French judge ordered former President Jacques Chirac to stand trial on embezzlement charges predating his presidency — a case that could mark the first time a former leader of modern France is forced to defend himself in court.

Chirac is to be tried for embezzlement and breach of trust in a corruption case dating back to his tenure as mayor of Paris, a judicial official said Friday, speaking on condition of anonymity because the case is ongoing. A prosecutor can still appeal the judge's decision, and if so, the ensuing judicial deliberations could last months.

Still, the judge's bold pursuit of Chirac, who lost his presidential immunity when his 12-year presidency ended in 2007, stunned many observers. Judges chased Chirac unsuccessfully in various corruption scandals for years, and prosecutors had requested that this particular case be dropped.

Many French politicians fretted openly Friday about how the case would affect France's reputation abroad. It's just one of several current scandals alleging dirty dealings in the conservative political establishment that Chirac headed for years. One of Chirac's former prime ministers, Dominique de Villepin, is on trial, accused of orchestrating a smear campaign against Chirac's successor, Nicolas Sarkozy. Villepin denies the charges.

And in a court verdict just this week, Charles Pasqua, an influential former interior minister, was sentenced to a year in prison for influence peddling connected to arms trafficking to Angola. He plans to appeal.

As for Chirac, the fact he is being investigated is already a humiliating coda to his four-decade-long political career.

BBC: Pirates want $7 million ransom for British couple

By Mohamed Olad Hassan
Associated Press writer

MOGADISHU, Somalia — The BBC said Friday that Somali pirates called the broadcaster to demand $7 million for the release of a British couple whose yacht was hijacked off the coast of Africa.

The British broadcaster cited an unidentified caller as saying the size of the ransom was justified because NATO forces in the area had arrested Somali fishermen and destroyed their equipment.

“If they do not harm us, we will not harm them,” the BBC quoted the caller as saying. “We only need a little amount of $7 million.”

Paul and Rachel Chandler were headed to Tanzania in their boat, the Lynn Rival, when a distress signal was sent Oct. 23. The British navy found their empty yacht on Thursday, and both have been in sporadic contact with the British media since.

Rachel Chandler told her brother, Stephen Collett, in a telephone call broadcast by ITV News on Friday that the couple were “bearing up.”

“They tell us that we’re safe and we shouldn’t worry and that if we want anything they will provide it in terms of food and water and everything like that,” she said, according to a transcript. “They are very hospitable people so don’t worry ... Physically we’re fine, physically we’re healthy.”

Earlier Friday, a Somali pirate claiming to speak on behalf of the group holding the couple said they planned to move them to another hijacked ship with other hostages anchored off the eastern coast of Somalia.

Abdinor, who identified himself only by his first name, said the Chandlers were healthy and his group took them to rest on land Thursday night at the coastal town of Harardhere.

He said at the time they had not yet made a ransom demand.

The BBC reported that the pirates discussed for several hours how much money to ask for in return for the pair.

Leah Mickleborough, the couple's niece, said the family had been unaware of the ransom request before they saw it on the BBC.

“We had no idea what the figure would be. We have seen the report on the BBC and we will look into it,” she said.

Britain's Foreign Office said it was aware of the report but did not immediately provide any further details.

But this is an interesting one. I had to go all the way to federal code to define what an alcoholic beverage is. U.S. Code (26-5052, to be exact) defines an alcoholic beverage as containing one-half of 1 percent (.005 percent) or more alcohol by volume.

So, how much alcohol does a non-alcoholic beer contain? According to a study performed in Connecticut — results from which you can view at <http://www.brewery.org/library/AIClbinger.html> — each of the non-alcoholic beers tested contained .005 percent or more alcohol by volume.

If you could find a non-alcoholic beer with less than that .005 percent alcohol content, I'd say you, or your passenger, would be in the clear. If the alcohol content is higher, the beer would be considered an alcoholic beverage.

Because there's no such thing as a truly non-alcoholic beer, anyone under 21 can't legally purchase beer labeled as non-alcoholic. A minor found with a non-alcoholic beer could be charged with possession or consumption of an alcoholic beverage.

One more reminder: Tuesday might not be the big presidential election, but it's still important to get out and vote. It's about the only free thing left in this country, so spend your vote wisely.

for medical treatment with the exception of the modification to a high-fiber diet. Speak with your primary-care physician or gastroenterologist regarding ways you can bring your diverticulosis under control.

Spinal stenosis is a narrowing of one or more areas of the spine. The condition can cause pain and numbness, cramping, and even difficulties with bladder and bowel function. Mild symptoms can often be helped with over-the-counter pain relievers, physical therapy or a brace. More severe cases might require surgery.

There are two ways that disc herniation occurs. The first is when the disc simply slips out of place. This puts pressure on the nerves and spinal cord. The second is when there is a tear in the cartilage on the outer portion of the spinal disc. This allows the inner fluid to seep out, putting pressure on spinal nerves. Regardless of the cause, this condition can cause pain, discomfort and limited range of motion. Mild symptoms can be controlled by rest, over-the-counter pain medication, muscle relaxants, hydrotherapy and decreased activity. More severe cases will likely be controlled by prescription medication and more aggressive therapy.

If you haven't had an exacerbation of symptoms for seven years, I would consider you quite stable. Speak with your physician regarding a possible exercise regimen so you can remain as active as possible. While you should remain cautious and not overdo, you can put your fears on the back burner and enjoy life.

DEAR DR. GOTT: One of my cats developed a fine raw line down the back of each hind leg. The vet said it was ringworm, but nothing he tried worked.

From the age of about 3 or 4 to 14, I spent every summer at a lake in the company of an old Chippewa chief. I remembered him boiling black-walnut hulls for the treatment of worms and parasites, including ringworm. Fortunately, a tincture of black walnut can be purchased at most health-food stores now. I bought some and “painted” it onto each area of the cats legs. She howled. I'm sure the alcohol it contained burned the raw skin, but within a minute or two, she was no longer trying to chew her legs. After that, the application didn't seem to bother her, and within a few days, the sore was almost completely healed.

Since then, I have told many friends who have used it on their cats, dogs and even children. The vet was amazed and now tells all his clients about this instead of trying medication first. Each bottle costs about $10 and lasts for about a year in the fridge.

DEAR READER: I have printed your letter for the benefit of my readers. As with any alternative-medicine treatment, I recommend informing your physician prior to use for monitoring. Thanks for writing.

FAITH AND PHANTOMS

Some use religion and ghost hunting to answer questions about afterlife

Grainy footage of translucent figures and static-filled recordings of bodiless voices or the Sunday-morning sermon delivered to pews full of folks and a Bible: some people are choosing to explore both options when it comes to the question of what happens to us after we die.

Dena Montoya is such a person. She is the Twin Falls director of International Paranormal Reporting Group, formerly known as Idaho Spirit Seekers. As a “family member” of The Atlantic Paranormal Society, the focus of the SyFy channel’s reality-show “Ghost Hunters,” the organization takes a scientific approach in its attempt to document concrete evidence of unexplained phenomena.

Montoya was baptized as a Lutheran and faith in God plays a part in her life and the lives of her family. Her venture into the paranormal field doesn’t put her at odds with her beliefs. It reaffirms them.

“It’s written in the Bible that when Jesus comes back and we all get taken up, we’ll be up there with Him in spirit,” she said. “The possibility of if I die tomorrow, why wouldn’t I hang out and wait? Or check in on my kids or my grandkids? Friends and family? There’s a possibility that it could happen, and we’re here to try to prove that possibility.”

IPRG founder Marie Cuff said that the group features investigators and other team members from all walks of faith, from Catholic to Pagan to The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

“It’s always been a subject that depends on personal beliefs,” she said.

As reality-TV programs such as “Ghost Hunters” or Discovery Channel’s “Ghost Lab” continue to grow in popularity, concepts of the afterlife are moving into the realm of tangible documentation and other

Pope says faith and reason are complementary

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Benedict XVI said Friday that faith and science are both necessary for the full understanding of mankind and its place in the universe.

The pope met with astronomers from around the world as part of events marking the U.N.-designated International Year of Astronomy and celebrating the 400th anniversary of Galileo’s first celestial observations by telescope.

The Catholic Church has long battled accusations that it was hostile to science, a contention fueled by the church’s denunciation of Galileo’s theory as dangerous to the faith.

In 1992, Pope John Paul II declared that the church’s ruling against Galileo was an error resulting from “tragic mutual incomprehension.” Since then, the church has worked to rehabilitate Galileo.

Benedict praised the “ongoing dialogue and reflection on the complementarity of faith and reason in the service of an integral understanding of man and his place in the universe.” The theme is central to his thought.

The pope said that our age, with its potential for great scientific discoveries, demands “the careful observation, critical judgment, patience and discipline which are essential to the modern scientific method.”

At the same time, he said, true knowledge is more than just “calculation and experiment,” and “invites us to lift our gaze to the higher realm of the spirit.”

Galileo was tried as a heretic in 1633 and forced to recant. He was sentenced to life imprisonment, later changed to house arrest. The Vatican Museums is hosting an exhibit that features rudimentary telescopes, celestial globes and original manuscripts by Galileo, part of the church’s rehabilitating efforts.

Ketchum teenager helps make wishes come true for orphan kids

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Emily Gillespie doesn’t sweat the little things — like not being able to drive the family car any time she wants, anymore.

Not after her three-week stint in August working with orphans in Tanzania.

Gillespie, a 15-year-old Community School sophomore, volunteered with Make a Difference after helping with a garage sale to raise funds for the organization. The organization was founded by Hailey native Theresa Grant who shucked a six-figure job in San Francisco to put in practice her Christian beliefs about taking care of the less fortunate among us.

Normally, Make a Difference doesn’t take volunteers younger than 18, but Grant made an exception in Gillespie’s case.

A couple months later, Gillespie found herself watching women carry water three miles from the community well to their homes built of clay mud.

“They’d have a three-gallon jug in each hand, a baby on their back, a toddler on their side,” Gillespie recalled. And many of the children I saw there seemed to have diarrhea because of washing in the river.”

Many of the two dozen students she came face to face with had lost one or both parents to HIV or AIDS. A couple had seen their parents murdered.

If not for the school, some would have been selling nuts by the side of the road to take care of crippled grandparents. But instead they walked as many as several miles from their home to attend school, which is their only hope of escaping poverty.

“Everything about school is the best to them,” Gillespie said. “It’s not like here where we go to school and it’s boring — we just want it to be out so we have fun with our friends. It’s the opposite there. There they are very excited because they learn things that nobody else in their household knows. And they’re with friends.”

Gillespie drank bottled water to avoid the stomach ailments her hosts were prone to. But she did try the food, including ugali, a tasteless paste made of corn and flour that had the consistency of Play-doh.

“We ate it with our hand, pairing it with sauce or fish,” she said.

She learned to live without cell phone 24/7 — or even land-line phones, for that matter. She also learned a little Whachagonnabe?

Around this time of year, youngsters all over America start using strange new words with frightening regularity — words like trickertreat, whachagonnabe and, this year at least, Transformer.

I'm not exactly sure what a Transformer is (ask your nearest 11-year-old — but be prepared for a long explanation that will include other strange words like Optimus Prime, Megatron and Scorponoc, and ultimately won't make any sense at all). But I think I can explain the other two. Loosely interpreted, trickertreat means "give me candy or I'll soap your windows." When we took our daughter AmyJo out to grovel for candy on her first Halloween, she put more teeth — and perhaps more truth — into the holiday with her own version of the word: trickerbite. I think that says it all.

Whachagonnabe, on the other hand, usually gives the youngster a chance to use another of those weird seasonal words: eyemgonnabe. The conversation usually goes something like this:

"So, whachagonnabe?"
"Eyemgonnabe Megatron. Whachagonnabe?"
"Eyemgonnabe Scorponoc."

It's like a whole new language. And it's only spoken in October. By kids.

Last October, however, one of those words took on new meaning for a young friend of mine. Zack is in his 20s, and is one of my favorite people in the world. He's fun and lively, with a quick wit and a terrific personality. He has the soul of an artist and the heart of a romance novelist packaged in the body of a defensive lineman. If you see him coming toward you, you're not sure if he's going to sing to you, embrace you or sack you.

Like many of his generation, Zack has been struggling to find himself and his place in the world. He's been raised well by a wonderful mother and, deep in his heart, he knows the kind of person he can and should be. But there are just so many options out there — not all of them positive.

Late last year, Zack was trying to make some adjustments in his life. He had been hanging with a rough crowd, and he could feel himself sliding into negative patterns. He looked at the direction he was heading, and he didn't like the answer to the question: "Whachagonnabe?"

So he decided to change directions — and friends. He didn't go to the places they went. He didn't do the things they did. And he started noticing some positive changes. For the first time in a long time, he was feeling good about himself and his possibilities for the future.

One night his old friends showed up at the spook alley at which he was working. Part of him wanted to greet them — they had been, after all, his friends. But another part of him knew that seeing them would lead to talking to them, which would lead to spending time with them, which would lead him right back to where he was before: nowhere, and sliding down fast.

So he summoned every ounce of courage he had — and he ran. Right there, in the darkness of the spook alley, he ran away and hid from his friends. To tell the truth, he felt a little foolish about it. He'd never run from anything in his life. He just didn't know what else to do.

As it turns out, it may have been one of the best decisions Zack ever made. Just as there are times in our lives when we need to make a stand, there are also times when there is nothing to be gained by standing. We need to learn to pick our battles — and our retreats. Because the fact is, sometimes the bravest thing you can do is run and hide.

Especially if you care about — you know — whachagonnabe.

Calendar pokes fun at Mormon mom stereotype

By Jennifer Dobner
Associated Press writer

SALT LAKE CITY — The latest installment of a calendar series that pokes fun at Mormon stereotypes is putting a twist on motherhood.

The "Hot Mormon Muffins: A Taste of Motherhood" calendar features 12 mothers who claim membership in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in vintage pinup picture poses. Each month also has a muffin recipe.

It's a companion piece to "Men on a Mission," the three-year series of calendars that featured 12 male church missionaries who doffed their signature white shirts.

Last year, a dustup over the calendar ultimately cost its creator, Las Vegas entrepreneur Chad Hardy, his membership in the church and his diploma from the church-owned Brigham Young University.

Hardy said the projects are designed to shake up stereotypes that paint Mormons in general as stuffy or hyper-conservative and mothers in particular as homemakers from another era.

"For Mormons, the most holy calling next to missionary work is motherhood," said Hardy. "But they're not all the subservient housewives that people think they are."

Church spokeswoman Kim Farah declined to comment on the calendar Monday.

On paper, Miss May and cover model Tami Roberts seems like she might fit the stereotype.

A lifetime Mormon, the 35-year-old woman from Idaho Falls has been married 17 years to a Mormon man and has three daughters, ages 11, 9 and 4. The family attends church, and Roberts said she's raising her kids with Mormon values.

"I also want them to be open, accepting of other people, know that everybody is not the same and that it's OK to make your own choices," said Roberts, who works as a restaurant server and confessed to having a few tattoos, generally considered taboo among Mormons.

Roberts said her turn as a calendar model was an accident. Last year, she read news reports about Hardy and his disciplinary problems with the church and BYU.

"That made me mad, I did not agree with that," said Roberts, who applied for the job on a whim after she heard a women's version of the calendar was in the works.

She said the $15.95 calendar's pinup poses and slightly revealing outfits aren't in keeping with the message of modesty promoted by the church, but she's not ashamed of the pictures.

"The pictures are tasteful, and it's fun. I don't see why people can't have a sense of humor," she said. "I just don't think it's a big deal."

The women featured in the calendar range in age from 26 to 53. Some have as many as four children. Several are stay-at-home moms, while others are students, real estate agents, cosmetologists and dance instructors. One is a former Miss Utah and another is a breast cancer survivor, according to biographies on the calendar Web site.

Hardy and a business partner created the first "Men on a Mission" calendar for 2008. The 2009 version drew the attention of the church, and Hardy was excommunicated in July 2008 after a church court.

Swahili, such as "Jambo" for "Hello," "Ndixo" for "Yes," and "Tafadhali" for "Please." "It's crazy different," she said. "It has a lot of d's and w's, which makes it hard for the students there to speak English."

Gillespie helped teach the cooks in the Make a Difference orphanage to steam vegetables, rather than boil everything in a heavy curry coconut sauce.

She typed essays for the teachers. She bought textbooks and paper for the students, along with treats like lollipops. She taught the 15- and 16-year-olds to write in journals. She taught the kids about film and video work, using her own video camera. And she fielded unending questions about life in America.

"They had never heard of skiing so I drew a picture of what it was like on the chalkboard," said Gillespie, an avid skier and volleyball player. "They were also fascinated with the skyscrapers. They couldn't believe it when I pointed to a picture of New York City and said I was there two weeks earlier," said Gillespie, whose own family sought haven in Sun Valley after the terrorist attack on 9-11 rocked their New York City home.

Gillespie's iPod was likewise a source of fascination for youngsters who don't even get to listen to much radio.

"Their music is sung by friends. To always have a source of music around was foreign to them," she said.

Gillespie's parents say they have noticed a difference in their daughter since her return.

"It was a little hard for us, putting her on the plane to go 30 hours across the world. But she definitely came back with her priorities in the right place," said Ellen Gillespie.

"I'm so proud of her," said James Gillespie. "We have a little family foundation and we encouraged our children to take advantage of it if they became passionate in something. But none of them had taken us up on it until now.

Now, Emily has that great experience — a real life-changing experience. She grew up over there. And I think she plans to stick with it."

In fact, Emily Gillespie plans to sell the jewelry the orphans make out of bones and beads to raise income for Make a Difference. She now has her eyes set on the Peace Corps after high school. And, yes, she plans on going back to Tanzania next summer.

Grant says she'll welcome her back.

"The children just loved her," she said. "I saw Emily grow a tremendous amount during her time with us in Tanzania. She left with a deep appreciation for all that she has been given and I truly believe she left realizing how fortunate she is. She now has a deep desire to make a difference in the lives of the children we help, as well as a better understanding of her own life.

MISSIONARIES

Christopher Murdoch returned

Christopher Dean Murdoch II will report his mission to the Philippines San Pablo Mission, at 10:45 a.m., Sunday, Nov. 8, at the Paul 1st Ward in the Paul Stake Center.

Christopher is the son of Fritz and Patti Murdoch of Paul, and a member of the Paul 1st Ward.

He plans to attend BYU-Idaho in January.

scientific theories. That strikes a balance for some. For them, the venture into the dark of night with a video camera and a flashlight could stand to reaffirm their faith that there is life after death.

Brian Vriesman, pastor at Twin Falls Reformed Church, falls on the other end of the spectrum.

"I would advise against it," he said. "As long as the reference is Scripture, you have to use that as a guideline."

For example, Hebrews 9:27 says, "And it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment." In other words, there is no room for spirits that were formerly human to languish behind on earth. So if something paranormal is going on inside the house, it's not "Cousin Eddie."

Vriesman said he has no recollection, through his three decades of service, of a church member broaching the topic with him.

Of interest on a broader level, "American Piety in the 21st Century," a two-part survey conducted by Baylor University's Institute for Studies of Religion.

One of the topics: the paranormal.

According to the survey's findings, 37.7 percent of those surveyed believe that a locale can be haunted, 21.5 percent claim to have visited or lived in a haunted location, and 19.9 percent believe that it's possible to communicate with the dead. (Elsewhere, the survey notes that 7.5 percent have used an Ouija board to contact a spirit.)

The Gallup Organization interviewed more than 1,700 people for the survey. The first part was published in 2006.

Perhaps the most interesting figure is ISR's find that "belief in the paranormal declines with increasing church attendance." However, it should be noted that the ISR's definition of "paranormal" also spans topics such as UFOs, astrology, mental telepathy, telekinesis, Bigfoot, the Loch Ness monster and the theory of Atlantis, just to name a few.

For now, faith and phantoms are coexisting notions with those who want to know what comes next. The only people in a position to give a rock-solid answer aren't coming back in person to tell us.

Robert W. Ring

BUHL — Robert W. (Bob) Ring passed away Wednesday, Oct. 28, 2009, at Woodland Retirement Estates in Buhl.

Bob was born in Buhl, Idaho, on March 31, 1922, the oldest of two children to Otto W. and Anna Mae Ring. He was raised on a farm west of Buhl known as Ring Corner, where his parents lived on one side of the road and his Uncle Russ Ring's family on the other side. He went to school at Lucerne Country School through the eighth grade and graduated from Buhl High School in 1941.

After school, he went to work for the Buhl Implement Co. as a mechanic. He enlisted in the U.S. Army in September 1942. He was a sergeant with the 609th Ordnance Base Armament Maintenance Battalion stationed near Bristol, England. He was a mechanic and a member of the Army Choral Group, which sang throughout England entertaining troops during World War II.

After the war, he returned home and purchased the ranch at the confluence of Salmon Falls Creek and the Snake River, known as the Salmon River Ranch. A year later on June 27, 1948, he married Elva June Lathrom and they moved to the ranch in 1950. Bob and June raised three boys on the ranch, Niel, Brent and Todd.

In the years after moving to the ranch, times were hard, so Bob did custom farm work along with farming and raising cattle. He was one of the original founders of the Pleasant Valley Cattle Association located south of Kimberly on the Idaho-Nevada line. Bob loved to farm but his real interest was caring for and raising cattle. He continued to raise cattle until 2005, when a fall forced him to retire. He continued to live on the ranch until just before his death. He was a member of the Buhl First Christian Church, having served as a deacon and an elder in the church.

Bob was preceded in death by his parents; son, Brent; and sister, Marjorie Butts. He is survived by his wife, June; sons, Niel (Rosanne) Ring and Todd Ring; and grandchildren, Leha, Kaila and Kassidy.

Donations in Bob's name may be made to the Intermountain Christian Camp, in care of the Buhl First Christian Church, 1005 Poplar St., Buhl, ID 83316.

A graveside service will be 11 a.m. Saturday, Oct. 31, at the West End Cemetery in Buhl.

Farmer Funeral Chapel in Buhl is charge of arrangements.

He enjoyed snow and water skiing, fishing, hunting, camping, bull riding and football. He liked going to the boat regatta and watching wrestling and NASCAR. Middle-schoolers charged in BB-gun shooting

AMMON — Two middle-school students are facing misdemeanor charges after police said they accidentally shot a third student with a BB-gun while pretending to be characters in 'Mission: Impossible' after school.

The Post Register reports that the two 14-year-old boys were both charged with misdemeanor possession of a weapon on school grounds. One is also charged with felony aggravated assault.

Bonneville County Sheriff's Deputy Elena Medrano says the teens were playing with air guns when a shot struck a 13-year-old who was practicing football nearby.

Medrano says the 13-year-old was hit in the thigh and was not seriously injured.

Bonneville Joint School District spokesman Guy Bliesner says the teens, who may be suspended, were likely unaware of the gravity of what they were doing.

Idaho youth dies in go-cart accident

PRESTON — A 13-year-old boy has died of injuries he sustained in a go-cart crash last week, and another go-cart driver has been charged in connection with the crash.

Police in the southeastern Idaho town of Preston say Andy Zapolski was driving a go-cart on a city street Oct. 23 when he was rear-ended by a go-cart driven by 39-year-old John E. Kautz. Police say Kautz was intoxicated at the time of the crash; he has been charged with felony vehicular manslaughter.

Zapolski was flown to Primary Children's Medical Center in Salt Lake City for treatment of severe head trauma; he died Monday.

Man found guilty of manslaughter in Blackfoot stabbing

BLACKFOOT — An eastern Idaho man accused of fatally stabbing another man in Blackfoot has been found guilty of voluntary manslaughter.

A jury deliberated for less than three hours Thursday before finding Courtney "C.J." Payan not guilty of second-degree murder but guilty of voluntary manslaughter in the May 25 death of Robert Padilla.

Payan's defense attorney told jurors that Payan acted out of self-defense during an encounter with someone twice his size. Prosecutors maintained that Padilla had no weapon and was stabbed during a melee.

Payan's sentencing is set for Dec. 7. He faces up to 15 years in prison.

A second man charged in the case, Epifanio Dearcos Sr., is set for trial Dec. 1. He is charged with felony aggravated battery.

Most roads closing for winter in Yellowstone Park

YELLOWSTONE NATIONAL PARK, Wyo. — Roads into the interior of Yellowstone National Park will close for the winter on Monday, limiting access to Old Faithful, Canyon, and Fishing Bridge until the snowpack is cleared from the roads in the spring.

The roads will reopen for guided snowmobile and snowcoach travel beginning Dec. 15.

Outside the park, US Highway 212 is closed east of Cooke City, ending travel for the season over the Beartooth Highway to Red Lodge and over the Chief Joseph Scenic Highway to Cody.

The road from Gardiner, Mont., through Mammoth Hot Springs to Cooke City, Mont., is open to wheeled vehicle travel all year.

Idaho Falls biggest stimulus winners

BOISE — The region surrounding Idaho Falls, with its energy laboratory and hazardous waste clean-up project, has been the biggest recipient of federal stimulus money.

According to the latest reporting figures, the ZIP code that includes the Idaho National Laboratory received more than $427 million, accounting for about a third of the state's total $1.2 billion share of the funding package meant to help dislodge the nation from deep recession.

Engineering companies CH2M Hill and URS Corp., partners in a venture that's removing waste from the laboratory site, received just over $412 million.

Friday's federal report indicates 2,103 Idaho jobs were created or saved by the spending, so far.

The report wasn't free of errors, however. For instance, it indicates Idaho's fourth, fifth and eighth congressional districts received nearly $3 million in funding, combined. But the state has just two congressional districts.

— The Associated Press

Idaho Maximum Security Institution is 20 years old

KUNA (AP) — The Idaho Maximum Security Institution, which houses 442 of the state's most dangerous offenders, became 20 years old on Thursday.

But the facility in southwest Idaho has two units sitting vacant because of budget restraints.

Idaho's state Department of Correction closed 72 beds at the Max, as it's called, and eliminated 16 jobs to save money.

Correction Department Director Brent Reinke said other money-saving moves such as furloughs are in the works for department employees but that those aren't sustainable for managing the state's inmate population.

Overall, the department has $28 million less in funding but is managing 500 more offenders in the state than it did a year ago.

When the Max opened in 1989, each cell was intended for just one person. Authorities started putting two inmates in cells as the prison population grew in the 1990s, then reversed that policy and is back to just one person per cell.

"With the offenders that we have and the violence we have, we've had to go down to more single cells," Pam Sonnen, chief of prisons for the Department of Correction, told The Spokesman-Review.

"We're getting younger and younger inmates," said Sgt. David Belz, who has worked at the Max for 11 years. "They have no respect for anybody. They're all involved in these gangs."

"That's a significant management issue," said Jeff Ray, spokesman for the Department of Correction. "You have to keep some of them apart."

Sonnen said the two empty cell blocks will have to start housing inmates again at some point.

But she said the state's prison population has been "relatively stable" the last few years.

"Thank goodness we don't have a huge population growth, because the state can't afford it right now."

PUBLISH: October 17, 24, 31 and November 7, 2009

DEAR ABBY: As a fire officer, I have seen far too many families fall victim to accidental home fires. It is devastating to find out that a life could have been saved if someone had only taken that simple step of replacing a dead battery in a smoke alarm. Nearly 96 percent of American homes have at least one smoke alarm. But did you know that 19 percent of American homes lack a working smoke alarm because the batteries are missing or dead?

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

For 22 years, the International Association of Fire Chiefs and Energizer have been committed to changing this statistic through the "Change Your Clock Change Your Battery" campaign. This partnership encourages families to change the battery in their smoke alarms when they set their clocks back an hour on Nov. 1. This message also serves as a reminder to communities nationwide to change the batteries in their carbon monoxide detectors.

As winter approaches, more people will begin using gas appliances to heat their homes and may find themselves at risk of carbon monoxide poisoning, called the "silent killer" because this gas is colorless, odorless and tasteless.

Thank you, Abby, for helping us spread this life-saving message to your readers.

—JEFFREY D. JOHNSON,
PRESIDENT, I.A.F.C.

DEAR JEFF: I'm glad to help, and I know my readers are grateful for your timely reminder. It may seem like a menial task, but safeguarding yourselves and your families is extremely important — so change those batteries this weekend!

DEAR ABBY: For the last two years I have been going out with a guy I'll call "Ricky." My problem is I don't love him anymore. A few weeks ago I told him I no longer wanted to be with him, and he started crying. He scared me when he said his life was in my hands.

Abby, I want to end it. Ricky suffocates me. He's depressed because his mom works and doesn't have time for him. His dad doesn't live with them, so Ricky feels he has only me to talk to. He wants to marry me, and I don't want to lie and say I will. It disturbs me that he still wants to be together even though he knows I'm not happy with him. He believes that if he's happy, I will be, too. Please tell me what do.

—TROUBLED

IN SALINAS, CALIF.

DEAR TROUBLED: I'm sure the news that you wanted to break up was painful for Ricky to hear — hence the tears — but saying his life is in your hands was a form of emotional blackmail. For your sake, please don't fall for it.

Ricky appears to be needy and immature. Call his mother, tell her that you are ending the relationship and that he isn't taking it well. She's in a better position to see he gets emotional and psychological support than you are.

IF OCTOBER 31 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Life is like those little nested dolls; you can keep on opening each one to find surprise after surprise tucked inside between now and the end of February. December is a great month for achieving business objectives and using good judgment with career, job or business plans. From December through February, true love is possible because the people you attract will be honest and trustworthy. Start any key initiative for business then, or commit to a relationship, and it is very likely to succeed.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Get romantic fires fired up with a special someone. Your "come-hither" glances might get an enthusiastic response.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You may be spellbound by someone's amorous advances. There is a chance you will be bothered by trick-or-treaters.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Whether you are bobbing for apples at a Halloween party or just window shopping at the mall, you could become the center of attention.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Don't be afraid to wear a conventional witch's peaked hat to a party. Honoring holiday traditions prove commitment to your community.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A special someone might have a tough time keeping his or her hands off of you. Buy lovely things while staying well within your budget.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): People from the past could prove their loyalty now. Well-established relationships could be the best place to spend your time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Get it while you can. Sensuous feelings and cozy moments could ensue if you feel secure in your relationship.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): There is no reason to hide your desires. You may play the part of a passionate plaything or act like an ardent artist of amore.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Black cats, witches and goblins might frighten you right into someone's protective and adoring arms. A serious romance awaits.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Flirt fabulously on the field of love. A seductive encounter may seem like the real thing, but be easily derailed by any criticism.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): There could be plenty of unusual sights and sounds tonight. But that certain someone "only has eyes for you." Keep your eyes open.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Go ahead and play make-believe this weekend. The magic carpet of your heart may whisk you away on a romantic journey.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"But far more numerous was the herd of such Who think too little and who talk too much."

— John Dryden

In the main final of the 1999 U.S. Women's Trials, Jill Meyers and Randi Montin had done very well to declare three no-trump from South. On a spade lead that fetched nine easy tricks.

However, in our featured room, Connie Goldberg reached four hearts on the lead of the spade four (third and fifth). Best defense in abstract might be to shift to a club in case partner's sole asset is the club king, but East cashed the second top spade. When West followed with the spade two to give count, East (correctly, I think) read this as having suit-preference overtones. She shifted to a top club, giving Goldberg a chance to read the position perfectly.

Declarer drew three rounds of trump as West pitched a club, then cashed two more rounds of clubs. In the five-card ending, South now knew that East had begun with only two diamonds. She led a diamond from dummy, intending to put in the seven if East played low; but East was faced with a different problem.

If she played the diamond jack, Goldberg would cover, and West would win and be endplayed to lead a low diamond. Now Restricted-Choice principles would tell declarer to put up the diamond nine. If, as happened at the table, East played her diamond eight, then Goldberg could win the diamond ace and return a low diamond. That let East win the diamond jack, but endplayed her to give a ruff and discard.

ANSWER: Jump to three no-trump to suggest a balanced hand with four hearts. Despite your excellent high cards, you have absolutely no slam interest, so you should focus on reaching the safest game. If partner has shape with his four trumps, he can bid on. If not, he will pass; then you would rate to be in the best spot.
