Family settles suit against T.F. police in teen’s death

By Andrea Jackson

Times-News writer

Idaho Counties Risk Management Program is paying for brochures and school resource officer training on the topic of teen suicide, since settling a lawsuit with the family of Josh Barnes, an 18-year-old who killed himself with a gun during a 2007 raid by Twin Falls police.

The settlement was announced Friday by the attorney for Barnes’ family, Laird Stone.

Barnes’ parents filed suit in federal court in August 2008 against the Twin Falls Police Department, which was defended through ICRMP. The suit alleged that police violated policies and Barnes’ rights during the raid at the R.V. Barn on Feb. 7, 2007. Police had an arrest warrant for Barnes on a charge of aggravated battery, but he did not come out alive.

In the lawsuit, the family argued there was no justification for the raid, and that SWAT officers forced an entry into their business where Josh Barnes was alone and held no hostages.

Under the settlement, ICRMP paid $300 to print 500 brochures titled “help prevent teenage suicide” that the city’s four school recourse officers will disperse to Twin Falls students, according to Stone and the city’s lawyer through ICRMP, James Davis, in Boise.

Fort Hood suspect said methodical goodbyes

By Mike Baker and Brett J. Blackledge

Associated Press writers

FORT HOOD, Texas — As if going off to war, Maj. Nidal Malik Hasan cleaned out his apartment, gave leftover frozen broccoli to one neighbor and called another to thank him for his friendship — common courtesies and routines of the departing soldier. Instead, authorities say, he went on the killing spree that left 13 people dead.

Investigators examined Hasan’s computer, his home and his garbage Friday to learn what motivated the suspect, who lay in a coma, shot four times in the frantic bloodletting. Hospital officials said some of the wounded had extremely serious injuries and might not survive.

The 39-year-old Army psychiatrist emerged as a study in contradictions: a polite man who stewed with discontent, a counselor who needed to be counseled himself, a professional healer now suspected of cutting down the fellow soldiers he was sworn to help.

Relatives said he felt harassed because of his Muslim faith but did not embrace extremism. Others were not so sure. A recent classmate said Hasan once gave a jarring presentation to students in which he argued the war on terrorism was a

What budget woes?

Strong firearm and ammo sales help bottom line at Idaho F&G

By Nate Poppino

Times-News writer

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game is in reasonable financial shape this fall, officials say — thanks to a distinct budgeting formula and, to a certain extent, America’s love of guns.

Unlike most state agencies, Fish and Game relies mostly on a mix of licenses, tag sales and federal grants for its budget rather than money from the state’s general fund.

Sales of elk and deer tags aren’t what they were last year, and about 25 vacant positions are being held open, Fish and Game Administrative Chief Jim Lau said this week. But the federal grants that help pay for the agency’s habitat work have gone up because people are buying more weapons and supplies.

Federal excise taxes on firearms, ammunition and archery supplies are distributed through grants by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service — similar taxes also exist for fishing equipment, motorboat and small engine fuels and related items. The hunting taxes pay for wildlife restoration and hunter education, while the fishing taxes go to restoration projects for sport fish.

Idaho’s slice of fishing funds only rose slightly this year, Lau said, from $6.8 million to nearly $6.95 million. But strong firearm and ammunition sales pushed the wildlife funds from $5.9 million to almost $6.5 million.

“Every bit helps,” Lau said.

The Washington Post reported this week that excise-tax receipts are on pace to set a record this year, with revenue from guns up 42 percent and from ammunition up 49 percent. Though demand for weapons appears to be slackening, gun owners have bought about 12 billion rounds of ammunition in the past year — up from the usual 7 billion to 10 billion.

Former ITD head sues over termination

By John Miller

Associated Press writer

BOISE — The former head of the Idaho Transportation Department filed a lawsuit Friday against the agency, saying she was fired in a political power play to help Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter and his big campaign donors.

The lawsuit in 4th District Court claims Pamela Lowe was fired by the Transportation Department board after refusing to bow to threats by governor’s aides not to interfere with a contract originally worth $50 million. The contract benefited URS Corp. and CH2M Hill.

Lowe says Jeff Malmen, the governor’s former chief of staff, and Darrell Manning, chairman of the Idaho Transportation Board, grew upset after she told the state Legislature in 2007 she would renegotiate the contract so as much of the work as possible was done by the highway agency’s own employees.

“Ms. Lowe was repeatedly warned and harassed by the governor’s staff and Mr. Manning about taking work away” from the companies, according to her lawsuit. “Ms. Lowe was not deterred by these threats.”

The two engineering companies have given the governor at least $22,000 combined since 2005.

After she refused to resign, Lowe was fired in July. The board cited concerns over “improving customer service, economy of operations, accountability and our relations with the Legislature.”

Burley motorcyclist collides with fuel truck; condition still not known

By Laurie Welch

Times-News writer

BURLEY — A Burley man riding a motorcycle was injured Friday when he crashed into a petroleum transport truck he was trying to pass east of Burley.

Cassia County Undersheriff George Warrell said Michael Hoopes, 32, was riding his black 1998 Honda motorcycle westbound on Idaho Highway 81 at 421 East between Declo and Burley when he crashed at 8:54 a.m. into the rear-main wheels of a fuel transport truck that was turning into Tesoro Petroleum.

Hoopes was transported to Cassia Regional Medical Center, but his condition is unknown.

The truck, a 2002 Peterbilt owned by Bowen Petroleum and driven by Steven Randall of Burley, was pulling a trailer.

Carol Cole, who lives across the street from where the collision occurred, said she was on her computer when the crash occurred.

“I heard it,” said Cole. “I thought the pup had fallen off the truck then I heard the motorcycle rider yelling.”

ICRMP will also fund an unspecified amount of training for resource officers concerning teen suicide issues. ICRMP is also making a $2,500 donation to the American Legion Baseball scholarship fund in the name of Barnes, "to keep his good memory alive," said Stone, who has served on the State Board of Education.

Stone and Davis agreed a sum of money is not part of this settlement.

Lawyers for the city's insurer, ICRMP, claimed in court records that the government doesn't have a duty under the U.S. Constitution to protect someone from committing suicide.

A federal judge still needs to sign an order to officially dismiss the matter, which lawyers expect to happen soon.

But the case has reached its end, without winners or losers, according to Stone and Davis.

"It was settled in a very good fashion," said Stone, adding that the settlement is "beneficial to the community." The Barnes family requested Stone speak for them, he said.

Each side will pay its own attorney fees, according to a stipulation for dismissal filed Thursday in federal court. Twin Falls police declined Friday to comment on the settlement, referring calls to Davis.

State wildlife officials may wish more of those rounds were used to hunt. Last year, Lau said, elk and deer tags were sold out. But officials said last month tag revenue was down as much as 9 percent, about $1 million, largely due to low nonresident sales months after legislators approved fee increases just for that segment of hunters.

Those revenues are now making a comeback, Lau said, but still may not quite reach last year's levels. License revenue is also down. But fishing sales in general have stayed steady, he said, and the roughly 24,000 wolf tags sold in the state's first wolf hunt haven't hurt.

war against Islam, and "made himself a lightning rod for things" when he felt his religious beliefs were challenged.

Investigators were trying to piece together how and why Hasan allegedly gunned down his comrades in the worst case of violence on a military base in the U.S. The rampage unfolded at a center where some 300 unarmed soldiers were lined up for vaccines and eye tests.

Soldiers reported that the gunman shouted "Allahu Akbar!" — an Arabic phrase for "God is great!" — before opening fire Thursday, said Lt. Gen. Robert Cone, the post commander. He said officials had not confirmed Hasan made the comment.

Hasan's family said in a statement Friday that his alleged actions were deplorable and don't reflect how the family was reared.

"Our family is filled with grief for the victims and their families involved in yesterday's tragedy," said Nader Hasan, a cousin who lives in northern Virginia. "We are mortified with what has unfolded and there is no justification, whatsoever, for what happened. We are all asking why this happened, and the answer is that we simply do not know."

The 30 wounded were dispersed among hospitals in central Texas. W. Roy Smythe, chairman of surgery at Scott and White Memorial Hospital, said several patients were still at "significant risk" of losing their lives. Army briefers told lawmakers in Washington eight other people were treated at a hospital for stress and trauma.

At a news conference late Friday, Army Col. John Rossi, deputy commander at Fort Hood, said 23 people remained hospitalized, about half still in intensive care. He praised the soldiers' quick actions during and after the shooting barrage, which he said saved lives.

Rossi said that the assailant fired more than 100 rounds and that his weapons were not military arms, but "privately owned weapons ... purchased locally." Law enforcement sources in Washington, speaking on condition of anonymity, said records indicate Hasan in recent months bought the FN 5.7 pistol at a store called "Guns Galore" in Killeen, Texas.

The dead included a pregnant woman who was preparing to return home, a man who quit a furniture company job to join the military about a year ago, a newlywed who had served in Iraq and a woman who had vowed to take on Osama bin Laden after the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

In a vigil Friday night, husbands wrapped their arms around their wives, babies cried and old men in wheelchairs bowed their heads as several hundred people gathered at a stadium on the sprawling Army post, the country's largest. It was the first gathering of the community since the killings.

"Remember to keep breathing ... keep going," Chaplain Douglas Carver told the crowd, many wearing fatigues and black berets.

Earlier, 13 flag-draped coffins departed for Dover Air Force Base and the military's mortuary based in Delaware, Rossi said. Officials said the result of autopsies on the victims will be made available to the appropriate federal and military agencies that are probing Thursday's shooting. They will determine if any of the victims might have been hit by friendly fire, something Rossi all but dismissed.

Motorcycle

The Cole family provided blankets for Hoopes until medical crews arrived.

Cole, who has lived across from Tesoro for eight years, said the truck drivers who pull in and out of the facility always drive carefully but the motorists who drive on the 55 mph highway are not always careful when passing the trucks.

"We also have kids out here all the time on motorcycles and it's just not safe," Cole said.

Warrell said the truck had pulled out of the east end of the fueling station and was re-entering the western entrance when Hoopes tried to pass it and crashed.

Warrell said Hoopes told officers he saw the blinker flashing on the truck but thought the driver had not turned it off after pulling out of the facility. When Hoopes went to pass the vehicle he crashed into the truck's rear-main tires, wedging the motorcycle underneath.

Firing

Lowe succeeded in trimming the contract but claims she was fired this year before she could take virtually all the work back from the companies.

She is seeking back pay, reinstatement or compensation in lieu of that, and attorney's fees, according to her lawsuit. No amount is specified.

Jon Hanian, Otter's spokesman, said, "because this is in litigation, we are unable to comment."

Malmen, now a lobbyist for the Idaho Power Co., didn't immediately respond to a request for comment.

Manning, who previously has said there wasn't a connection between the contract and Lowe's firing, was out of town and couldn't be reached, the transportation department said.

By law, the Idaho Transportation Board can remove its director for "inefficiency, neglect of duty, malfeasance and nonfeasance in office."

But Lowe contends she had received satisfactory performance reviews.

Her lawsuit also contends that a bill introduced in the 2009 state Legislature by state Sen. John McGee, R-Caldwell, was meant "to punish her for cutting CIP's contract." It would have given Otter the power to fire the highway department director.

In a telephone interview, Lowe said agency board members told her they feared McGee's bill would undermine their authority so they relented to pressure to force her out. The board hires the director.

McGee said Friday that he had "a different experience" of what happened but said he can't comment because of the lawsuit.

When he introduced his bill in March, McGee said he was dissatisfied with Lowe's performance. Some lawmakers also said they didn't trust her agency, citing that as one reason for voting against bills like Otter's proposed $61 million gas tax hike in the 2009 session.

Lowe initially lodged a tort claim against Idaho in August, a notification that she was considering a lawsuit. She hasn't heard from the state since then, she said, and filed this new lawsuit Friday to meet a statutory deadline for whistleblower complaints. More claims, including for gender discrimination, will be added to the lawsuit next week, said Erika Birch, Lowe's attorney.

Semi truck catches fire near Almo, but contained quickly

Times-News

A semi caught fire Friday afternoon between Almo and Elba while hauling rocks, but the blaze was quickly extinguished by firefighters. The driver, uninjured, was the only occupant.

“It was a pretty quick call,” said Katie Santini, of the ACE Fire Department. “We were dispatched for a semi with a trailer hauling rocks from a quarry in Almo. “The back of the trailer was not salvageable, but the truck was saved.”

Santini said she didn’t know specifically what caused the fire but attributed it to “break problems.”

“It sounds like the breaks were hot coming off the hill, and the next thing you know, there was a fire,” she said.

The blaze took about 15 to 20 minutes to extinguish, and nobody was in any danger.

“It was a very remote area on Elba/Almo Road,” Santini said. “The biggest problem was getting the truck out of the road for passing traffic.”

Four firefighters responded to the scene. “ACE” is an acronym for “Almo Conner Elba.”

“We’re a pretty tiny department, all volunteer,” Santini said.

Law & Disorder... ...in Cassia County

From Oct. 3 police reports:
Abandoned vehicle:
Police responded to an area near Declo regarding a cow hit by a car.

“Dispatch advised that there was a cow hit approximately in the same area last week,” Deputy Eric Nebeker’s report reads. When he arrived at the scene, nobody was with the car.

“I tagged the vehicle for impound and also dragged the cow farther off the road to avoid further complaints,” the report continues. When police returned two days later, the car was still there. No further information about the cow.

From Oct. 4 police reports:

Vandalism:

William Stirling Teeter, 50, of Burley, who was sentenced to a year of probation Oct. 30 for exhibiting a deadly weapon in June after pulling a semi-automatic pistol on a 13-year-old neighborhood kid whose ball rolled into Teeter’s yard as he was mowing his lawn, reported that “the neighbor boys hit his car with a basketball.” According to the report, his Ford Focus had three dents in it.

“I asked Sterling (sic) how he knew the boys did it with a basketball. Sterling (sic) stated he just knew and would bet his life on it,” Deputy Chris Weber’s report reads. “I asked Sterling (sic) if he saw them do it. He stated he did not. I told Sterling (sic) without him seeing it happen or without video it would not hold up in court.”

Filer schools ask taxpayers how to spend bond surplus

District has $2.2 million for upgrades

By John E. Swayze
Times-News correspondent

FILER — Members of the Filer School Board need help deciding what to do with excess bond funds.

In May 2008, voters gave the district approval for a $15.6 million bond levy to construct an intermediate school and classroom expansions at the high school, along with roof and parking lot upgrades at the elementary and middle schools.

Filer residents are now being asked to fill out a questionnaire to help determine how approximately $2.2 million in remaining bond money should be spent.

“The economy brought in project bids that were significantly lower than what was budgeted,” district superintendent John Graham said. “We started e-mailing questionnaires to parents last week. And we’re going around to the senior citizens and groups like Kiwanis to get community input.”

The goal is to collect feedback by Wednesday’s 7 p.m. school board meeting in the Filer Elementary School library. Results will be prioritized, with time allowed for remaining projects to go out for bid.

Among the project options under consideration is $170,000 for repairs to the high school sprinkler system and campus landscaping for an estimated $100,000.

Paving the middle school’s east parking lot for $150,000 and installing $600,000 in air conditioning at Filer Elementary School are also being considered.

Possible athletic facility improvements include building a second softball field for $40,000; $85,000 for a high school baseball field; $50,000 in various improvements, including sod replacement and a sprinkler system on the football field.

Another suggestion is the possibility of using what’s left to reduce the district’s levy rate and property taxes.

This would lead to savings of about $30 per year for each $100,000 in assessed value.

One drawback to having the construction projects come in under budget, especially for a district expecting to receive between $500,000 and $800,000 less in state funding for the 2010-11 school year, is that none of the money can be saved for future repairs or applied toward immediate school expenses such as text books, teaching supplies or staffing.

Anticipating this shortfall, along with an additional $100,000 reduction in funds to pay monthly bills, the board is also asking if patrons would support a levy to help the district compensate for budget cuts in these areas.

“We would be fine for the next four or five years if we could use the bond money for these things but we can’t,” Graham said. “Filer is one of the few districts in the Magic Valley that doesn’t have a supplemental or plant facility levy, but if decreased funding continues I believe we will have to ask for a supplemental.”

Filer School Board Chairwoman Shirley Gailey said public involvement plays a vital role in maintaining a quality school system but participation in discussions on these issues has been limited or nonexistent.

“I have not had anyone contact me to say keep the money, give it back, spend the money or do this,” she said.

“The apathy in this community is sad, and this (questionnaire) is our last-ditch effort to get people to call or come forward and comment.”

Copies of the questionnaire are available from the Filer School District office at 700 Stevens St. or by e-mailing requests to the district superintendent at j.graham@filer.k12.id.us.

Two coalition members missing in Afghanistan

KABUL (AP) — Two American soldiers disappeared in western Afghanistan after a routine resupply mission, and more than 25 NATO and Afghan security forces members were wounded during the search mission for them, the alliance said Friday.

Officials indicated it was unlikely the two missing had been taken captive.

NATO forces headquarters in Afghanistan said the two paratroopers from the 4th Brigade Combat Team, 82nd Airborne Division, went missing on Wednesday.

During the search operation to locate them, more than 25 NATO and Afghan national security forces members were wounded, said Lt. Col. Todd Breasseale, a NATO spokesman.

“Initial reports indicate they were wounded due to insurgent activity,” Breasseale said.

He could not say how many of the wounded were Afghan and how many were NATO, nor was the nationality of the NATO soldiers released.

The wounded were being treated in a coalition forces facility in Afghanistan, the alliance said in a statement.

Local police said the two were Americans who were swept away by a river in the western province of Badghis.

NATO did not specify where the incident took place, or provide any details of the mission.

BRITAIN WARNS AGAINST CORRUPTION

Prime Minister Gordon Brown warned Afghanistan's government on Friday to take action against corruption, saying he would not risk more British lives there unless it reforms.

Brown said in a speech that success in Afghanistan is vital to Britain's security — but declared that if the Afghan government does not mend its ways it will forfeit the world's support.

“I am not prepared to put the lives of British men and women in harm's way for a government that does not stand up against corruption,” he said.

anonymity due to command policy, indicated that they did not suspect the case was similar to that of an American soldier who was captured by insurgents in eastern Afghanistan on June 30.

“We continue exhaustive search and rescue operations to locate our missing service members,” spokeswoman Navy Capt. Jane Campbell said in the NATO statement. “We are doing everything we can to find them.”

Western regional police Chief Gen. Ikram Uddin Yawar said two American soldiers were swept away by a river while trying to save two boxes that had fallen into the water while being airdropped during a resupply mission in the Bala Murghab district of Badghis province.

The deputy police chief of Badghis province, Abdul Jabar, said a helicopter had airdropped food parcels at a coalition base, but that strong winds had blown one box into the river and that two soldiers had been swept away by strong currents while trying to recoup the parcel. He said Afghan police had been helping coalition forces in the search Thursday and Friday but had been unable to find the two soldiers.

NATO could not confirm whether the missing paratroopers had been swept away by a river, and said it could release no further details.

The soldier who disappeared on June 30 near Afghanistan's border with Pakistan has still not been found. He was shown as a Taliban captive in a propaganda video in July. U.S. military officials have said little about the search for 23-year-old Pfc. Bowe R. Bergdahl, of Hailey, for safety reasons, and it is unclear whether he is being held in Afghanistan or Pakistan.

Separately Friday, NATO said two American service members were killed Thursday by a roadside bomb in southern Afghanistan. The statement gave no further details.

10 percent jobless is Obama's new world

By Jim Kuhnhenn
Associated Press writer

Analysis

President Obama

WASHINGTON — For months he had warned it was coming but that didn't ease the political shockwaves for President Obama when unemployment topped 10 percent.

A year after his election Obama finds it increasingly difficult to blame the sour economy on George W. Bush or offer reassurances that jobless Americans will soon find work.

Never mind that the economy itself grew in the last quarter, that the recession by most accounts is over and that the number of jobs lost in October was less than one-third the number of job losses at the start of his presidency.

At 10.2 percent, the October unemployment climbed to chart-topping heights unseen in more than a quarter century. The bottom line is that more than 15 million Americans are out of work and 3.5 million lost their jobs while Obama was president. Expected or not, this is Obama's new reality.

“I won't let up until the Americans who want to find work can find work, and until all Americans can earn enough to raise their families and keep their businesses open,” the president declared Friday.

That's a hopeful promise but not very realistic.

And it shows that, for the time being, action to tackle record budget deficits will simply have to wait.

Obama, appearing at the White House Rose Garden on Friday three hours after the jobless numbers were made public, said his administration was looking at additional spending for roads and bridges and energy efficient buildings. Additional tax cuts for businesses and steps to increase credit for small businesses were also on the bill.

The new unemployment rate also came on the same day Obama signed a $24 billion bill to extend jobless benefits and spur homebuying.

In a sign of Democratic thinking, Rep. Carolyn Maloney, who heads Congress's Joint Economic committee, said Democrats would consider new aid to states, an “infrastructure bank” to increase construction jobs and small business tax credits.

“I think we're witnessing a political renaissance about concerns about jobs,” Lawrence Mishel, president of the labor-leaning Economic Policy Institute, said approvingly. “It will put the deficit concerns into their appropriate context.”

What all this amounts to is another stimulus for the economy. Though don't look for Democrats to call it that; Democrats have a tough enough time debating the merits of the $787 billion stimulus Congress passed earlier this year.

In rhetoric and in deed, Obama is being forced to address an unemployment picture his economic team had long ago expected to avoid.

Many economists predict the jobless rate will rise again, peaking at 10.5 percent sometime next year before employment makes a turnaround in the spring.

Such lingering discomfort can have economic and political consequences.

Consumer spending likely won't increase rapidly. Foreclosures will continue to rise, hitting not just subprime borrowers, but prime mortgage holders as well. Commercial real estate lending, already teetering, could plunge in the face of rising vacancy and loan delinquency rates.

Politically, Democrats are staring at some damage — and the fear of unemployment — themselves. Exit polls Tuesday in the New Jersey and Virginia GOP victories showed that the economy was the top issue in the minds of voters. And national public opinion surveys show that a majority of the public doesn't believe Obama's economic policies are working.

Couple that with traditional losses by the president's party during midterm elections and Democrats have cause to worry about their own fate.

The unemployment number masks the fact that job losses slowed compared to past months — the work force went down by 190,000 in October compared to 219,000 in September. What's more, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said job losses in August and September had been overstated by 91,000.

In addition, the economy grew by 3.5 percent in the third quarter. And Christina Romer, a top Obama economic adviser, noted an increase in temporary service jobs. “That's often the first sign of firms kind of dipping their toe back into hiring people,” she said in an interview with The Associated Press.

But since the start of the recession in December 2007, 7.3 million Americans have lost their jobs and key sectors — construction, manufacturing and retail trade — are still seeing significant declines.

Ten months into the job, Obama did not even try to lay the blame for the economy at Bush's feet, as he has in the past. His only criticism was implied.

“When we first came into office, our immediate goal was to stop the free fall that caused our economy to shrink at an alarming rate,” he said. “We've succeeded in achieving that goal, as our economy grew last quarter for the first time in a year!”

But Obama has already taken ownership of the economy.

Republicans, he noted wryly during a July speech in Michigan, were eager to blame him for the economy.

“That's fine,” he added, “Give it to me!”

Four months later, it would be hard to give it back.

G-20 officials to wrestle over economic imbalances

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — The world's top financial officials on Friday sought a blueprint for securing future global growth and worked to break a deadlock over who bears the cost of fighting climate change.

Even as the world emerges hesitantly from recession, finance ministers and central bankers from the Group of 20 leading rich and developing countries meeting in Scotland are likely to agree that it is too early to pull the plug on economic stimulus measures.

While Britain remains officially in recession, the United States, Germany, and Japan have all recorded renewed growth and the 16-country euro zone is expected to do the same when figures are released next week.

British Treasury chief Alistair Darling, the host of the gathering, urged the group to maintain the collective approach forged in more dire circumstances at summits in London in April and in Pittsburgh in September, arguing that sustainable growth would only come from agreed action to increase trade and boost productivity.

Some countries are more eager to begin sketching out exit strategies to unwind the recent massive government spending, low interest rates and expansion of the money supply that are supporting the world economy. And the European Central Bank broadly hinted Thursday that it will soon begin cutting back some of its emergency lending to banks, ramped up during the finance crisis.

—Britain Prime Minister Gordon Brown, warning Afghanistan's government to take action against corruption

Once-profligate T.F. has become water-wise

CHEERS: To the city of Twin Falls and its residents for a remarkable turn for the better in water conservation. The community's one-day water usage topped out at 25.4 million gallons last summer. In 2001, it was 33 million gallons. Monthly totals are also down. This October, the city went through 285.5 million gallons of water. In October 2008, the city's usage was 353 million gallons. City officials credit water efficiency efforts such as the 2004 ordinance that restricts times and days for lawn watering. That law limits watering to three days a week before 10 a.m. and after 5 p.m., which avoids the hottest part of summer days. Additionally, the city in 1999 adopted an ordinance requiring new subdivisions to use alternative water sources for landscaping needs, such as through a canal or pond system. Conservation, along with the city's recent acquisition of additional supply from Pristine Springs, bodes well for the community's ability to handle growth — and for its economic future. JEERS: If you're sick, stay home. Even if it means you have to take final tests. Some Twin Falls School District stakeholders are upset about the district's longstanding policy of allowing kids who miss fewer than four days to skip finals. It punishes those who, quite sensibly, stay home when they have the swine flu, some parents and students argue. We disagree. A final exam isn't a sanction; it's a part of life. And any student interested in going on to college had better get used to finals. The policy is in place to encourage attendance, and so far it's worked. Flu isn't a reason to change. CHEERS: To members of the Idaho Legislature's health care task force, for agreeing that the state would be foolish and premature to try to opt out of federal health care reforms or, following Arizona's lead, change the state's constitution to try to keep reforms out. "I am told that there are legislators that are considering it," said Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, the task force co-chairman. "I think we heard pretty clearly that it's, A, premature, and B, may not be the most effective way of us stating our opinion of whatever the health care reform may be." Meeting in Boise on Wednesday, the task force, which includes senators and representatives from both parties, invited insurers, underwriters, representatives of doctors and hospitals, the AARP and more to give presentations on whether Idaho should opt out of national reforms or change its constitution, and what reforms would help the state. None of the presenters favored either move. Nor would a majority of Idahoans, if the only purpose of opting out is to make a political point.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Parents, be on the lookout for bullying

I'm the mom of a handsome, young son who attends a local elementary school. In the past few months, I have started to notice changes in his personality. Last year he had a lot of friends and looked forward to going to school each day. He missed only a few days of school due to illness, although he would've still went to school if allowed.

This year he has begun to have stomachaches, fear of attending school, shed tears, anxiety and new fears over not wanting to go to school. He says he doesn't have many friends and has become more and more secluded. I would drop him off at school and watch through the fence, wondering why my sweet, outgoing, friendly and happy son was standing alone; it broke my heart.

Come to find out he was being terrorized by a bully. I knew bullies existed but never until now realized how much impact they can have on an innocent victim. It is proven that three-quarters of all kids are bullied or teased. Each and every parent needs to take this very seriously and not brush it off as "boys will be boys." There are a lot of underlying causes of bullying; for example, lack of warmth and affection at home, inconsistent discipline, a child receiving very little monitoring and perhaps not being a model student at school. Whatever the reason behind this inappropriate behavior, a bully's actions are not acceptable.

It is our responsibility as parents to teach our children right from wrong and how to be respectable of others' feelings. My son's school has very little tolerance for bullies, and when they became aware of the situation they promptly took action. It is sad that some children don't blink an eye when they hurt another child! It is our responsibility to watch out and protect the innocent.

Some what-ifs for the Obama administration

What if Obama attacked the debt as hard as he attacks his critics? What if the White House attacked the Taliban like they attack Fox News? What if this administration targeted bin Ladin, al-Qaida and drug cartels with the same ferocity as it does with rich chief executive officers, insurance companies and the CIA? What if this government put the same effort into protecting our borders as they do pandering to those who illegally cross it? What if Congress strained to reduce medical cost as fervently as creating the taxes to pay for it?

Well, with Obama's intelligence and enthusiasm, I could only guess that the debt would be cut in half and the Taliban would be asking for foreign aid instead of killing our troops. Bin Ladin would be second string power forward for the Gitmo Bay Bombers basketball squad and al-Qaida would be a footnote in Wikipedia. Cartels would be relocating below the equator by the thousands and our border would be a secured highway of commerce with immigration laws that actually mean something instead of a lawless autobahn of criminal activity and human smuggling. We surely would have medical care we could afford by now; instead, we face mediocre care guaranteed to tax us to death.

I don't care what's on the Fox opinion program, Mr. President, and I suggest you do the same and focus on the task at hand. Fox isn't the reason why your polls are sagging, nor is it the color of your skin, though I do question its obvious thinness at times. You're spoon-feeding Fox's ratings while the NBC peacock eats out of your other hand. What media opposition is next on the hit list? Internet bloggers, maybe Facebook or Twitter people? How about opinion letters to the editors?

America's health care system the world's best? No way

The moment of truth for health care is at hand, and the distortion that perhaps gets the most traction is this: We have the greatest health care system in the world.

Nicholas Kristof

Sure, it has flaws, but it saves lives in ways that other countries can only dream of. Abroad, people sit on waiting lists for months, so why should we squander billions of dollars to mess with a system that is the envy of the world? As Sen. Richard Shelby of Alabama puts it, President Obama's plans amount to "the first step in destroying the best health care system the world has ever known."

That self-aggrandizing delusion may be the single greatest myth in the health care debate.

The United States ranks 31st in life expectancy (tied with Kuwait and Chile), according to the latest World Health Organization figures. We rank 37th in infant mortality (partly because of many premature births) and 34th in maternal mortality. A child in the United States 1 1/2 times as likely to die by age 5 as in Singapore or Sweden, and an American woman is 11 times as likely to die in childbirth as a woman in Ireland.

Canadians live longer than Americans do after kidney transplants and after dialysis, and that may be typical of cross-border differences. One review examined 10 studies of how the American and Canadian systems dealt with various medical issues. The United States did better in two, Canada did better in five and in three they were similar or it was difficult to determine.

Yet another study, cited in a recent report by the

"An African-American in New Orleans has a shorter life expectancy than the average person in Vietnam or Honduras."

Robert Wood Johnson Foundation and the Urban Institute, looked at how well 19 developed countries succeeded in avoiding "preventable deaths," like those where a disease could be cured or forestalled. What Shelby called "the best health care system" ranked in last place.

The figures are even worse for members of minority groups. An African-American in New Orleans has a shorter life expectancy than the average person in Vietnam or Honduras.

I regularly receive heart-breaking e-mail messages from readers simultaneously combating the predations of disease and insurers. One correspondent, Linda, told me how she had been diagnosed earlier this year with abdominal and bladder cancer — leading to battles with her insurance company.

"I will never forget standing outside the chemo treatment room knowing that the medication needed to save my life was only a few feet away, but that because I had private insurance it wasn't available to me," Linda wrote. "I read a comment from someone saying that they didn't want a faceless government bureaucrat deciding if they would or would not get treatment. Well, a faceless bureaucrat from my private insurance made the decision that I wouldn't get treatment and that I wasn't worth saving."

It's true that Americans have shorter waits to see medical specialists than in most countries, although Americans do because our insurance companies evict people from hospitals as soon as they can stagger out of bed.

For example, in the United States, 90 percent of hernia surgery is performed on an outpatient basis. In Britain, only 40 percent is, according to a report by the McKinsey Global Institute.

Likewise, Americans take 10 percent fewer drugs than citizens in other countries — but pay 118 percent more per pill that they do take, McKinsey said.

Opponents of reform assert that the wretched statistics in the United States are simply a consequence of unhealthy lifestyles and a diverse population with pockets of poverty. It's true that America suffers more from obesity than other countries. But McKinsey found that overall, the disease burden in Europe is higher than in the United States, probably because Americans smoke less and because the American population is younger.

Moreover, there is one American health statistic that is strikingly above average: life expectancy for Americans who have already reached the age of 65. At that point, they can expect to live longer than the average in industrialized countries. That's because Americans above age 65 actually have universal health care coverage: Medicare. Suddenly, a diverse population with pockets of poverty is no longer such a drawback.

Spenders in congress ignore deepening government waste

To get a handle on how out of control federal spending has become, consider this: It surged to $30,000 per household in 2009. That's up from $21,000 (adjusted for inflation) in the 1980s and '90s. Yet rather than cut back, Congress plans to spend even more.

Lawmakers want an additional 11 percent domestic discretionary spending hike in 2010, as well as an expensive new health care entitlement. In the absence of spending restraint, closing these budget deficits would require permanent tax increases exceeding $8,000 per household.

This is absurd. Instead, Congress should reform Social Security and Medicare, eliminate out-dated programs, and take back unspent stimulus and financial bailout funds. They could at least build budgetary credibility with the American people by cutting indefensible government waste, such as the following examples:

- Washington spends $92 billion annually on corporate welfare (not even counting recent corporate bailouts) versus $71 billion on homeland security.
- The federal government made at least $72 billion in payment errors in 2008.
- Washington spends $25 billion annually maintaining unused or vacant federal properties.
- Government auditors spent the last five years examining all federal programs and found no evidence that 22 percent of them — costing taxpayers a total of $123 billion annually — help the populations they serve.
- The Congressional Budget Office published a "Budget Options" series identifying more than $100 billion in potential spending cuts. It went largely ignored.
- Government auditors examining wasteful duplication counted 342 economic development programs; 130 programs serving the disabled; 130 programs serving at-risk youth; and 90 early childhood development programs.
- Washington will spend

Brian Riedl

$2.6 million training Chinese prostitutes to drink more responsibly on the job.

- The Securities and Exchange Commission spent $3.9 million rearranging desks and offices at its Washington headquarters.

- The Pentagon spent $998,798 shipping two 19-cent washers from South Carolina to Texas, and $293,451 sending an 89-cent washer from South Carolina to Florida.

- A government audit classified nearly half of all purchases on government credit cards as improper, fraudulent or embezzled. Examples of taxpayer-funded purchases include gambling, mortgage payments, liquor, lingerie, iPods, Xboxes, jewelry, Internet dating services and Hawaiian vacations.

- Health care fraud is estimated to cost taxpayers more than $60 billion annually.

- A government audit found that 95 Pentagon weapons systems suffered from a combined $295 billion in cost overruns.

- The refusal of many federal employees to fly coach costs taxpayers $146 million annually in flight upgrades.

- Washington spent $126 million in 2009 to enhance the Kennedy family legacy in Massachusetts. Additionally, Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass., diverted $20 million from the 2010 defense budget to subsidize a new Edward M. Kennedy Institute.

- The federal government owns more than 50,000 vacant homes.

- The Federal Communications Commission spent $350,000 to sponsor NASCAR driver David Gilliland.

- Taxpayers are funding paintings of high-ranking government officials at a cost of up to $50,000 apiece.

- Members of Congress have spent hundreds of thousands of taxpayer dollars supplying their offices with popcorn machines, plasma televisions, DVD equipment, ionic air fresheners, camcorders and signature machines — plus $24,730 leasing a Lexus, $1,434 on a digital camera, and $84,000 on personalized calendars.

- Washington has spent $3 billion re-sanding beaches — even as this new sand washes back into the ocean.

- Last year's 10,160 ear-marks included $200,000 for a tattoo-removal program in Mission Hills, Calif.; $190,000 for the Buffalo Bill Historical Center in Cody, Wyo.; and $75,000 for the Totally Teen Zone in Albany, Ga.

President Obama and Congress have no right to demand higher taxes from the American people until they first clean up this wasteful spending. And taxpayers should ask themselves whether it is wise to entrust wasteful Washington with more power over their health care.

Everyone else is tightening their belts. Now it's Congress' turn.

T.F. justified in taking hard look at animal control cost

The recent editorial concerning the animal control contract by the Times-News stated "The county's fees have increased sevenfold since 2000, while the city's population grew 20 percent. The council is justified in giving the contract a hard look." This is essentially true. What is lost in that comparison is that the contract signed in 2007 at $30,000 was presented for renewal at $120,000 in 2009. That is when questions arose about the amount and justification. To be fair, this was an increase that was set in motion by the prior sheriff and not Sheriff Carter. However, it still demands accountability. And, I believe your final note in your editorial sums it up, "As long, of course, as that scrutiny doesn't end up costing the taxpayers more."

The editorial does rely upon prior Times-News reports that in themselves lack completeness and accuracy. First, the statement that in the editorial "The mayor contends there should be a day rate, meaning the city would be charged only for days when an animal is picked up in the city" is not true. I do not even know what that means or where that concept surfaced. I have said there are basic fixed costs with any operation, whether an animal control officer is called out for service or not. Even Maytag paid the repairman and his basic costs while he sat waiting for a call. It is those costs that should be shared equally and fairly. As to the calls themselves, not all calls are equal. For example, the city has a much smaller geographic territory to cover and thus the time required to respond to a call in the city is much less than the cost of a call to Rogerson.

We have a responsibility to question expenses and quality of service. In this case, we do not question the quality of service, as the sheriff's department's animal control staff is doing a fine job. We are trying to be diligent in our analysis of the costs, something I would think the citizens of Twin Falls would expect. The council needs to review the cost accounting used to arrive at the recommended amount. If the council erred, I would say we should have tabled the contract for further study.

Sheriff Carter has graciously agreed to provide the time for the council to gain a full understanding of the dramatic increase in the cost. We also appreciate that he had reduced the amount from $120,000 to $114,000 after his initial analysis. We need to evaluate the costs and the distribution to assure that all residents of the county are treated fairly.

Lance Clow is mayor of Twin Falls.

Sowell neighbors: Suspected serial killer seemed harmless

By Meghan Barr and John Seewer
Associated Press writers

CLEVELAND — The man who lived in the house of rotting corpses never gave people a reason to wonder what he was really doing behind closed doors.

Anthony Sowell was the guy who liked to sit on his front steps drinking King Cobra Malt Liquor for $1.50 a bottle, sometimes in the company of a woman. He was the guy who hung around the corner convenience store bumming change off his neighbors. He was the guy who scrounged around sidewalks and backyards for empty cans and scrap metal to sell.

The suspected serial killer seemed so harmless that when he invited neighbors over for a barbecue in his driveway, they came. So benign that when he beckoned women inside his house that smelled of death, they apparently went willingly.

“If it’s up to the people in the neighborhood, he probably never would have got caught,” said 52-year-old LaBaron Simpson. “Because he didn’t cause no problems around here.”

The house where the authorities say 50-year-old Sowell lived among the reeking corpses of 10 women and the paper-wrapped skull of another was silent on Friday, and investigators say they have no plans to resume searching for additional remains. The ex-Marine, who served 15 years in prison for attempted rape, is being held without bail on five aggravated murder charges.

So far only four victims have been identified, including 43-year-old Nancy Cobbs, of Cleveland, whose name was released Friday. Others already identified are Tonia Carmichael, 52, of Warrensville Heights; Telacia Fortson, 31, of Cleveland; and Tishana Culver, 31, also of Cleveland. The city corner’s office is combing through DNA samples from the families of missing women to identify more remains.

Unbeknownst to most neighbors, Sowell was a registered sex offender who checked in with authorities from time to time and fooled people into believing he was just another guy trying to scrape out a living.

The only distinguishing physical characteristic about Sowell, who is about 5-foot-11 and weighed 160 pounds, is a scar under his left eye.

He smelled pretty bad, but then a lot of hard-up folks in this rough Cleveland neighborhood smell less than clean, people say. And even when a terrible, rotting stench wafted down the street and past his house, people didn’t think Sowell was the source. Instead, they pointed fingers at the sausage shop next door.

“Nobody could imagine that this man was capable of doing what he was doing,” said Fawcett Bess, owner of Bess Chicken & Pizza, a restaurant across the street from Sowell’s house. “He always showed respect to you — ‘good morning’ and ‘good evening’ and that kind of thing.”

early years is hazy, and no record of his birth could be found.

Court papers show he claims he fathered a child in 1978 with a woman who was not identified. He also said he was married in 1981 and divorced in 1985, but did not name his ex-wife.

In January 1978, when he was 19, Sowell joined the Marines, where he became a rifle sharpshooter and won two good conduct medals during stints in Cherry Point, N.C., Okinawa, Japan, and Camp Pendleton, Calif. In 1985, having risen to the rank of corporal, Sowell left the service.

A few years later, back home in Cleveland, he committed his first known attack.

Records of that 1989 assault show Sowell took a 21-year-old woman to his Page Avenue home, pushed her down on the bed and started to choke her. When she tried to scream, he said: “You can scream all you want, nobody is home.”

He sexually assaulted the woman twice, gagged her, threatened to kill her and tied her up with a necktie, the report said.

Because of the viciousness of the crime, the parole board repeatedly denied him early release. In a parole hearing, he owned up to a drinking problem and said he’d been drinking the day of the assault.

The prison system gave Sowell excellent grades, however, for his attitude, initiative and dependability at his kitchen job. “Works well w/all staff & where ever needed,” according to a July 22, 2003, inmate evaluation report sent to the parole board.

Upon his release in 2005, Sowell moved into the Imperial Avenue home owned by his father Thomas — who had died two years earlier — and Thomas’ wife, Segerna.

Neighbors say Segerna Sowell was often sick, and some believe she moved into a nursing home. Though others had wondered if she was among the dead, police Lt. Tom Stacho confirmed Friday that Segerna Sowell “is alive and well in Cleveland.”

Despite Sowell’s quiet presence in the neighborhood, he was known to behave strangely at times.

Obama calls holdouts on health care revamp

By David Espo
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Amid intense lobbying by the Obama administration, House Democratic leaders struggled Friday for the final votes needed to pass sweeping health care legislation, offering fresh concessions to abortion opponents and working to ease concerns among Hispanic holdouts.

“We’re very close” to having enough votes to prevail, said Majority Leader Steny Hoyer of Maryland, although he added a scheduled vote today could slip by a day or two and sought to pin the blame on possible Republican delaying tactics.

“Nice try, Rep. Hoyer, but you can’t blame Republicans when the fact is you just don’t have the votes,” shot back Antonia Ferrier, spokeswoman for the GOP leader, Rep. John Boehner of Ohio.

Hours later, Democrats were still trying to get them.

Speaker Nancy Pelosi presided over meetings well after dark with Democratic abortion foes, whose votes were critical to the bill’s fate, then with supporters of abortion rights, who are among the health legislation’s biggest advocates in the House.

It was not clear precisely what concessions were under discussion. In general, the issue in dispute was the availability of abortion services in insurance policies to be sold in a proposed new federally run insurance exchange, and also in a new government coverage option included in the bill.

In a struggle that combined the fate of President Barack Obama’s top domestic priority and a 2010 campaign issue, bipartisanship was not an option.

GOP leaders boasted that all 177 House Republicans stood ready to oppose the $1.2 trillion bill, which would create a new federally supervised insurance marketplace where the uninsured could purchase coverage.

Consumers would have the option of picking a government-run plan, the most hotly contested item in the legislation and the basis for the Republican claim that Democrats were planning a government takeover of the insurance industry.

Democrats said their bill was designed to spread coverage to millions who lack it, ban insurance industry practices such as denying coverage on the basis of pre-existing medical conditions and restrain the growth of health care spending nationally. The Congressional Budget Office said that if enacted, the measure would extend coverage to 96 percent of all eligible Americans within 10 years.

Obama arranged to visit the Capitol complex on today to make one final pitch to fellow Democrats for the measure. He and others in his administration spent part of the day lobbying intensely for its passage.

Rep. Jason Altmire, a second-term Democrat from western Pennsylvania, said he received calls during the day from the president, White House Chief of Staff Rahm Emanuel, Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius and Education Secretary Arne Duncan. Their message was “this is a historic moment. You don’t want to end up with nothing,” he said.

Altmire added his callers emphasized the legislation would change once it left the House, but if it’s defeated now the drive to enact changes would be over for the foreseeable future. He said he remained undecided on his vote.

Jurors convict man in ‘fat defense’ trial

HACKENSACK, N.J. (AP) — A jury convicted a Florida man Friday of murdering his former son-in-law, rejecting the man’s defense that he was too fat to have run up and down a flight of stairs to commit the crime and make a quick getaway.

Edward Ates looked down and shook his head in court as he was found guilty of murder and weapons counts for killing Paul Duncsak, who was shot six times at his home in Ramsey, about 25 miles northwest of New York.

Ates

Some of Duncsak’s family members cried softly after the verdict was read. Ate’s wife, Dottie, sobbed in the gallery as he was handcuffed and led away by court deputies.

“It doesn’t bring him back, but at least he won’t get away with it,” said Duncsak’s sister-in-law, Barbara Duncsak. “It’s satisfying. It was a long time coming.”

Ates had argued he didn’t have the energy to accurately shoot Duncsak from a perch on the staircase at Duncsak’s home in August 2006. He was 62 years old, 5-feet-8 and 285 pounds at the time of the murder.

Assistant Bergen County Prosecutor Wayne Mello termed Ates’ defense “nonsense” and credited dogged work by investigators, particularly Det. Sgt. Russ Christiana, that built a circumstantial case around cell phone records and computer forensics.

HEROES

Soldiers hold a candlelight vigil at Fort Hood, Texas, Friday. Authorities said Maj. Nidal Malik Hasan shot and killed 13 people on Thursday.

Without them, bloodbath could have been worse

By Allen G. Breed and Jeff Carlton
Associated Press Writers

FORT HOOD, Texas — Pfc. Marquest Smith, on his way to Afghanistan in January, was completing routine paperwork about a bee-sting allergy when the sounds erupted.

A loud, popping noise. Moans. The sudden, urgent shout of “Gun!”

Smith poked his head over the cubicle’s partition and saw an extraordinary sight: An Army officer with two guns, firing into the crowded room.

The 21-year-old Fort Worth native quickly grabbed the civilian worker who’d been helping with his paperwork and forced her under the desk. He lay low for several minutes, waiting for the shooter to run out of ammunition and wishing he, too, had a gun.

After the shooter stopped to reload, Smith made a run for it. Pushing two other soldiers in front of him, he made it out of the Soldier Readiness Processing center — only to plunge into the building twice more to help the wounded.

Smith had survived the worst mass shooting on an American military base, a rampage of more than 100 shots that left 13 dead and 30 wounded, including the alleged shooter, Army psychiatrist Maj. Nidal Malik Hasan.

It could have been much worse, but for the heroics of Smith and others — like the 19-year-old private who ignored her own wounds, and the diminutive civilian police officer whose gunfire helped take down Hasan.

“Unfortunately over the past eight years, our Army has been no stranger to tragedy,” said a somber Gen. George Casey, Army chief of staff. “But we are an Army that draws strength from adversity. And hearing the stories of courage and heroism that I heard today makes me proud to be the leader of this great Army.”

Home of the 1st Cavalry and 1st Army Division West, Fort Hood has seen more than its share of deployments and casualties in the past eight years.

As a psychiatrist, Hasan, 39, had listened to soldiers’ tales of horror. Now, the American-born Muslim was facing imminent deployment to Afghanistan. In recent days, Hasan had been saying goodbye to friends. He had given away many of his possessions, including copies of the Holy Quran.

At 2:37 a.m. Thursday and again around 5, Hasan called neighbor Willie Bell. Bell could normally hear Hasan’s morning prayers through the thin apartment walls, but Hasan skipped the ritual Thursday.

Bell didn’t pick up either time, but Hasan left a message.

“Nice knowing you, old friend,” Hasan said. “I’m going to miss you.”

About an hour later, surveillance cameras at a 7-Eleven across from the base captured images of a smiling Hasan, dressed in a long white garment and white kufi prayer cap, buying his usual breakfast — coffee and a hash brown.

At the processing center on the southern edge of the 100,000-acre base, soldiers returning from overseas mingled with colleagues filling out forms and undergoing medical tests in preparation for deployment.

Around 1:30 p.m., witnesses say a man later identified as Hasan jumped up on a desk and shouted the words “Allahu Akbar!” — Arabic for “God is great!” He was armed with two pistols, one a semiautomatic capable of firing up to 20 rounds without reloading.

Packed into cubicles with 5-foot-high dividers, the 300 unarmed soldiers were sitting ducks. Those who weren’t hit by direct fire were struck by rounds ricocheting off the desks and tile floor.

When he decided that Hasan wasn’t close to being out of ammo, Smith made a dash for the door. He’d made it outside when he heard cries from within.

“I don’t want to die.”
“This really hurts.”

Smith rushed back inside and found two wounded. He grabbed them by their collars and dragged them outside.

His second time through the door, he ran into the shooter, whose back was to him. Smith turned and fled, bullets whizzing by his head and hitting the walls as he rushed outside.

Around this time, Fort Hood Police Sgt. Kimberly Munley got the call of “shots fired.” The SRP isn’t on Munley’s beat; she was in the area because her vehicle was in the shop.

Munley, 34, was on the scene within three minutes.

Just over 5 feet tall, Munley is an advanced firearms instructor and civilian member of Fort Hood’s special reaction team. She had trained on “active shooter” scenarios after the April 2007 mass shooting at Virginia Tech University. She didn’t wait for backup.

As Munley approached the squat, rectangular building, a soldier emerged from a door with a gunman in pursuit. The officer fired, and the uniformed shooter wheeled and charged.

Another officer, Senior Sgt. Mark Todd, also responded to the sound of gunfire. He arrived to find Hasan “just standing there, hiding behind a telephone pole.”

“He just looked like he was calm and he was just pointing, it was almost like he was pointing his finger at me,” Todd told CNN in an interview late Friday. “But then I seen the weapon. ... I just know I seen the weapon and muzzle flashes and then that’s when we returned the fire.”

Munley was hit at least three times in the exchange — twice through the left leg and once in her right wrist. Hasan was hit four times. It’s not clear whose bullets hit the suspect, but from the first shots to the last, authorities say the whole incident lasted less than 10 minutes.

Pfc. Jeffrey Pearsall, 21, from Houston, was waiting outside in the parking lot for Smith. He was talking to his brother on a cell phone when a group of soldiers ran out the door and a window shattered.

It was only then that he heard the gunshots.

He pulled his pickup truck forward, then hopped out and helped the wounded into the bed. He loaded as many as he could and sped off to the base hospital.

Next door, at the Howze Theater, Spc. Elliot Valdez was filming a graduation ceremony for soldiers who’d completed correspondence courses. Several proud scholars were posing for a group shot when Valdez heard a pounding at the side door.

The door burst open and the theater filled with shouts of “Medic!” and “Stay in the building!” A combat videographer who returned from a 15-month Iraq tour in January, some of it in the notorious Sadr City slums, Valdez ran out into the sunlight.

Crouching as he continued to roll tape, Valdez could see windows broken by fleeing victims. He saw a soldier in his Class A dress uniform with a gunshot in his back. Soldiers in flowing black graduation robes and purple sashes rushed to help.

Pfc. Amber Bahr, 19, of Random Lake, Wis., tore up her blouse and used it as a tourniquet on a wounded comrade. It was only later that she realized she’d been shot in the back, the bullet exiting her abdomen.

Sgt. Andrew Hagerman, a military police officer, was patrolling a housing area when word of shootings crackled over his radio.

As he arrived at the processing center, bloodied soldiers, some shirtless, were already treating each other on the grass outside, ripping pant legs off and tying off wounds. Munley — with whom Hagerman had exchanged small talk on patrols — was being loaded into an ambulance.

Hasan lay on the ground, his two handguns beside him, as medical personnel struggled to remove his handcuffs to treat his wounds.

Hagerman entered the building, took a deep breath and asked himself: “What do I need to do?”

He picked his way around the room’s edges, careful not to step in pools of blood or to kick any spent shell casings. He had seen death during his two tours in Iraq, but nothing that compared with this.

In the confusion, Army Reserve Spc. Grant Moxon, 23, lost his cell phone. He borrowed a comrade’s

GUN BOUGHT LEGALLY

WASHINGTON (AP) — A 5.7-millimeter pistol used in the Fort Hood shooting was purchased legally by suspect Nidal Hasan at a Texas gun shop, law enforcement officials said Friday. The officials spoke on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to discuss the case. Records indicate Hasan bought the FN 5.7 at store called “Guns Galore” in Killeen, Texas, in recent months and that gun was used in the attack that left 13 people dead, one of the officials said. The pistol has been dubbed a “cop killer” by those who have tried to stop its use.

Army officials said Hasan also was carrying another handgun. One of the law enforcement officials said that gun was an older model Smith & Wesson .357-caliber revolver, but the official added there’s nothing so far to indicate the second weapon was fired. The official said the revolver was so old, investigators doubt it could be traced to a specific purchase.

phone to send a text to his family in Lodi, Wis.

The message stated simply: “Grant. I was shot in the leg. I’ll be OK.”

Sgt. Howard Appleby, 31, was at the hospital for his regular meeting with a psychiatrist. Appleby, who was born in Jamaica and grew up in New York City, sustained a traumatic brain injury and has post-traumatic stress disorder from a roadside bomb blast during a tour in Iraq.

His appointment canceled, Appleby found himself pulling the dead and wounded from ambulances. In combat, he was used to one or two casualties a day. “This,” he thought, “is crazy.”

Lt. Col. Larry Masullo, an emergency room physician from Farmingdale, N.Y., was heading into a monthly meeting to review new doctors’ credentials when he heard of the shootings.

“Yeah, OK,” he said. “Multiple gunshot wounds. Is this a drill?”

In the next hour and a half, he would treat nearly two dozen soldiers.

For several hours, authorities feared there were several gunmen. By the end of the day, it was clear Hasan had acted alone, they said.

Hasan, hooked up to a ventilator, was moved Friday to a military hospital in San Antonio. The woman who stopped him, Munley, awaited surgery Friday to remove the bullets from her leg. Her husband was flying in from Fort Bragg, N.C.

Her boss, Chuck Medley, was thankful. “If an officer had to be close by to respond,” he said, “Kim Munley is someone we’d want to be there.”

Marquest Smith says some of the people he helped made it. But he knows others did not.

Afterward, Smith noticed a hole in heel of his right combat boot. A bullet had entered the boot, but he had somehow escaped injury — at least the physical kind.

After the adrenaline wore off, Smith was overwhelmed by a sense of betrayal, because this assailant who spilled so much blood was a soldier.

“We’re supposed to be a family,” he said.

Shooter kills 2 in Orlando

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — A man so broke that he said he didn’t have the money to visit his son 30 minutes away opened fire Friday at the engineering firm that fired him two years ago, killing one person and wounding five, authorities said.

As officers led a handcuffed Jason Rodriguez into a police station, a reporter asked the divorced 40-year-old why he had attacked his former colleagues.

Rodriguez

“Because they left me to rot,” said Rodriguez, who recently told a bankruptcy judge he was making less than $30,000 a year at a Subway sandwich shop and owed nearly $90,000.

The shooting on the eighth floor of an office tower paralyzed downtown Orlando for three hours. Police tracked Rodriguez to his mother’s home, spotted him through a window and ordered him to come out.

He surrendered peacefully and was in custody Friday evening. Police said he apologized as officers handcuffed him.

“I’m just going through a tough time right now. I’m sorry,” officers quoted him as saying.

Police say he will be charged with first-degree murder and other crimes. Officials said he could make an initial court appearance Saturday.

All the victims worked at the firm of Reynolds, Smith and Hills, where Rodriguez was an entry-level engineer for 11 months before he was let go in June 2007, the company said.

Witnesses told police they recognized Rodriguez when he entered the company’s eighth-floor lobby. They said he pulled a handgun from a holster under his shirt and shot an employee standing next to the receptionist’s desk, killing him.

Homes in Mexico flooded

VILLAHERMOSA, Mexico (AP) — A week of torrential rain has flooded the homes of more than 200,000 people along Mexico’s Gulf coast, officials said Friday. Residents in some towns complained that no help had arrived.

The flooding in eastern Tabasco state has worsened as rains persist and more rivers overflow their banks. Three people drowned earlier in the week while trying to flee a torrent of water in a drainage canal.

People “are in a desperate situation,” Tabasco Gov. Andres Granier said, but he added that many were ignoring pleas to move to shelters for fear their homes would be looted.

The floods affect more than a dozen towns.

Santos Perez Jimenez said no help had arrived in his rural community of Luis Cabrera.

“We’re trying to get our things out as best we can,” Perez Jimenez said. “We’ve radioed for help several times but they have not paid attention to us.”

An estimated 20,000 people were in 100 shelters set up by the state. Others, however, set up makeshift tents on dry land near their soaked homes, fearing looting.

Berlin inaugurates repainted Wall section

By Geir Moulson
Associated Press writer

BERLIN — The Berlin Wall's longest remaining stretch has been restored to its state of nearly two decades ago after artists repainted the colorful murals they created in the aftermath of the notorious barrier's opening.

Berlin on Friday inaugurated the restored section of the concrete wall, which is known as the East Side Gallery and snakes along the bank of the Spree river for three quarters of a mile.

A popular tourist attraction, it boasts famous imagines such as a boxy East German Trabant car that appears to burst through the wall; and a fraternal communist kiss between Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev and his East German counterpart, Erich Honecker.

The painted wall "is a document that allows future generations to picture for themselves ... what the wall meant," Mayor Klaus Wowereit said at an inauguration ceremony.

The section was transformed into an open-air gallery months after communist East Germany opened its borders on Nov. 9, 1989. Much of the rest of the wall was quickly ripped down.

The East Side Gallery survived but was an increasingly sad sight in recent years, with crumbling concrete and peeling paint. Over the past year, Tourists pass a painting on a segment of the reopened East Side Gallery in Berlin, Germany, Friday. The 105 wall paintings of the former Berlin Wall were restored for the 20th anniversary of the fall of the Wall next week. The same artists from 21 countries who created the paintings in 1990 repainted their pictures in the world's longest open-air art gallery after replacement of the concrete surface of the Wall.

nearly 90 artists from around the world gathered again to repaint their original creations.

The artists "have conveyed a second time their genuine euphoria from 1990," said Kani Alavi, who heads the East Side Gallery Artists' Association and was a driving force behind the restoration.

"Twenty years after the fall of the wall, the East Side Gallery stands for democracy and human rights," he said.

"Every (artist) had his own perceptions on the fall of the wall," Wowereit said. "I think this international nature, these different points of view and this variety are a secret of the success of this great open-air exhibition."

Berlin's city government helped fund the restoration costs of more than $3 million.

Honduras leadership in limbo as accord dissolves

TEGUCIGALPA, Honduras — They can't both be right. Ousted Honduran President Manuel Zelaya says a deal that could have returned him to power is defunct. Roberto Micheletti, who took power after a coup, says the same deal has been successfully accomplished.

The Obama Administration, caught in the middle of a power struggle in this tiny Central American nation, was urgently pressing Friday for the survival of an accord it hailed as "a historic victory for democracy."

"No, it's not dead, but maybe sleeping for the time being," said State Department press spokesman Fred Lash.

A senior State Department official said the stakes are high and time is short.

"If the parties let this fall apart you're going to see problems with international recognition of the elections," the official said, insisting on speaking anonymously due to the sensitive nature of the discussions.

Micheletti's backers hope a clean vote for a new president will force the world to accept that politics has returned to normal in Honduras. Zelaya's backers accuse the coup-installed officials of trying to delay his return to power — at least until the election.

Honduras, one of the poorest nations in the hemisphere, plunged into political crisis four months ago when Zelaya was forced out of bed in his pajamas and flown to Costa Rica. He sneaked back into his country on September 21, and has been holed up in the Brazilian Embassy ever since under threat of arrest.

With a presidential election just three weeks away, the U.S. and the rest of the international community — which cut off most foreign aid and diplomatic ties after the coup — are urgently seeking a resolution.

Miss England gives up crown after fracas reports

LONDON (AP) — The reigning Miss England has relinquished her crown after being accused of a fight in a bar.

Pageant organizers say Rachel Christie has also withdrawn from next month's Miss World competition in South Africa.

They said in a statement that the 21-year-old heptathlete will now focus on clearing her name and training for the 2012 Olympics.

British newspapers reported that Christie got into a dustup with another beauty queen — Miss Manchester Sara Beverley Jones — in a nightclub earlier this week.

Greater Manchester Police said Friday that a 21-year-old woman was arrested on suspicion of assault after an altercation at the city's Mansion nightclub on Monday. She was released on bail pending further enquiries.

the Bruins emerging victorious — a 28-21 decision to send Twin Falls back to the state semifinal round.

"This was tough," said Bruin defender Cannon Sims Clark, "but we wanted to win."

Although Bostrom, the Bulldogs' top offensive threat with more than 2,000 rushing yards following the game, ran over the Bruin defense for 280 yards and three touchdowns

(two of which came on carries of 50 and 76 yards), Twin Falls was able to perform when it mattered most: the fourth quarter.

The Bruins had just scored to regain the lead with barely 2:30 to go and had pinned Nampa back to its 19-yard line following the kick-off. Clark sacked quarterback

A CLOSE CALL

No. 5 BSU hangs on for win at La. Tech

RUSTON, La. — Early in the fourth quarter, there was nervous pacing along Boise State's sideline.

With an opportunity to show a national television audience why they should once again become a BCS buster, a close game on the road was not what the fifth-ranked Broncos had in mind. They looked anxious, but they weren't rattled.

"We know we are going to have people's best shots," Boise State quarterback Kellen Moore said. "It's kind of fun playing in tight games I think. Throw in a little pressure and it just shows the resiliency of this team."

Moore threw for 354 yards and three touchdowns, and Boise State remained unbeaten and in contention for a BCS bid with a 45-35 victory over Louisiana Tech on Friday night.

Tech had pulled within 30-28 early in the fourth quarter on Dennis Morris' leaping catch in the corner of the end zone. The Broncos defense buckled down long enough after that for Boise State to pull away with touchdowns on consecutive drives, first on Moore's 12-yard pass to Austin Pettis and then on Jeremy Avery's 44-yard touchdown run.

"We made more plays than they did tonight when it mattered and we were able to finish it out," Moore said.

for 110 yards, including a 40-yard touchdown for Boise State (9-0, 4-0 Western Athletic Conference).

Boise State has scored no fewer than 45 points in each of its four WAC games this season.

Still, the Broncos could have used a more dominant victory in their quest to prove they are more deserving than unbeaten and sixth-ranked TCU for a Bowl Championship Series bid.

"That's how it always is when we play," Boise State coach Chris Peterson said. "It's never good enough, but it's good enough for us. We are going to try to do better next week and just go from there."

Trailing 27-7 at halftime, Tech (3-6, 2-4) made a game of it in the third quarter, starting with Josh Victorian's first career touchdown on Moore's third interception of the season. It was an ill-advised throw under pressure that hung in the air for Victorian, who

CSI spikers hit title match

Eagles eliminate North Idaho with semifinal win

SALT LAKE CITY — The College of Southern Idaho made sure the NJCAA Division 1 Volleyball Championships will go on without the No. 1-ranked team in the nation.

Sixth-ranked CSI put together its best match of the season at the right time, eliminating No. 1 North Idaho 25-22, 25-21, 25-22 Friday evening to advance to Saturday's Region 18 Tournament championship match and keep alive its hopes of qualifying for the national tournament.

Contrary to the way the previous three matches went, all North Idaho wins, CSI (27-5) grinded through the opening parts of the first two sets, then took each with a sustained push at the end. The team credited it to tireless work from the coaching staff, which scouted North Idaho (27-6) to the point where it seemed the Golden Eagles knew the Cardinals better than the Cardinals knew themselves.

"We've trained so hard just focusing on what they do," said CSI sophomore Jessica Peacock, who shook off a first-set ankle injury to finish with a match-high

The only thing CSI did consistently in the early going was turn the ball over. The Trappers, meanwhile, started hot behind the play of sophomore forward Casper Hesseldal, who scored 10 of his team's first 12 points.

CSI trailed 7-0, 14-2 and 29-10 before rallying to trail 44-33 at halftime.

Byago Diouf hit a pair of 3-pointers in the spurt, while Carrick Felix had a 3-point play to give CSI its first lead of the game at 56-54.

"We settled in," said Gosar. "We still didn't play great, but we played together and made some things happen."

Vandals hope to slow nation's top rusher

Idaho defense will be tested by Fresno State's Matthews

By Nicholas K. Geranios
Associated Press writer

The nation's leading rusher comes to the Kibbie Dome on Saturday when Fresno State plays Idaho in an 8:30 p.m. contest televised nationally by ESPN.

Ryan Mathews is averaging 164 yards per game, and will pose a major challenge for a porous Idaho rush defense.

Idaho coach Robb Akey said the problem is basically a matter of vision.

"We've got to do a better job with our eyes getting to where we belong," Akey said of his defense.

The Vandals hope to limit Mathews' big gains, and come up with a few big plays of their own as they seek their eighth win of the season.

Idaho (7-2, 4-1 WAC) is enjoying the nation's biggest turnaround, and has already won five more games than last year. Fresno State (5-3, 4-1) has won four straight games after a slow start that included losses to Top 10 squads Boise State and Cincinnati.

The teams are tied for third in the WAC, after Nevada and No. 5 Boise State, and the game will be watched by a representative of the New Mexico Bowl.

Idaho has not beaten Fresno State since 1967, and never since joining the WAC in 2005.

Declo tops Malad in 2OT quarterfinal

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

POCATELLO — The No. 1-ranked and undefeated Declo Hornets escaped with a 40-34 double overtime win over Malad in the Class 2A state quarterfinals at Holt Arena late Friday night.

Both teams scored in the first overtime, Declo’s coming on a pass from Jeremy Jenkins to Brandon Petersen. But both teams missed their extra points, forcing a second OT. Tyler Briggs ran in from 3 yards out for the Hornets, while Malad’s last-gasp pass on fourth-and-goal was broken up by Logan Knopp to seal the win.

Malad scored the tying touchdown with 59 seconds remaining in regulation on a fourth-and-goal play from the 12-yard line.

Declo had control early, riding its workhorse running backs Briggs and Larsen Webb, while Jenkins completed 8 of 15 passes for 97 yards and accounted for three touchdowns.

Malad put up a good fight, led by its 1,000-yard rusher Caleb Bennett and 1,000-yard passer Kaden Goddard. The 28 points in regulation were the most scored on Declo this season.

The Hornets successfully moved the chains in the first half with hard-nosed running by Briggs and three pass hook-ups from Jeremy Jenkins to Logan Knopp.

Meanwhile, Malad was hindered by four first-half holding penalties. Still, the Dragons managed a pair of first-half touchdowns and trailed the Hornets by a slim 20-14 score at halftime.

play went for 58 yards and set up the Dragons’ first score as Jordan Hansen caught a 19-yard touchdown pass from Kaden Goddard.

Declo answered right back on its first possession. The Hornets drove 66 yards in seven plays, capped by Larsen Webb’s 28-yard burst up the middle for a score.

Soon after, a Goddard pass was tipped and Declo’s Jenkins tracked it down for the interception. Ten plays later, Jenkins ran a quarterback sweep to the right side, reached for the pylon and scored to put Declo up 14-7.

After Declo turned it over on downs, Malad got the ball at Declo’s 46 yard line, setting up the Dragons’ next scoring drive. Goddard ran it in from 18 yards out to knot the score 14-14.

The Hornets extended their lead to 28-14 in the third quarter when Knopp made a fingertip catch at his shoestrings for a 35-yard touchdown from Jenkins.

Hayden Wright for the second time —linebacker Zak Slotten met Wright behind the line earlier in the game — during the half and cost the Bulldogs 5 more yards. A false-start penalty on the next play pushed Nampa back further, and before the Bulldogs knew it, it was fourth down. A first-down pass put them on the 31-yard line with 90 seconds left.

Abandoning the running game for lack of time, Wright took to the air four times and four times came up with an incomplete pass, ending any hope for a comeback. Wright finished 5 of 11 for a mere 29 yards.

“I just had to be quick and fast,” Clark said of the sacks. “Quick and fast and keep the pads low.”

Meanwhile, Bruin quarterback T.J. Ellis was able to remain upright for the most part thanks to his offensive line. The junior signal-caller went 13-for-21 for 150 yards, one touchdown and one pick and was not brought down behind the line of scrimmage even once. He called the line’s performance “impressive.”

Lineman Clayton Rushing said communication was key.

“(Nampa) was tough,” he said. “It was hard work, but we kept talking. A lot. Picking up blitzes ... talking got us through.”

Ellis did have a scare halfway through the second quarter as he threw what would have been his second pick of the night as the Bruins drove deep into Nampa territory. Although Nampa’s Josh Seward came down with the ball, the play was overturned on a roughing-the-passer penalty. The Bruins resumed the drive with a first down inside the red zone and scored less than 30 seconds later to make it 20-7.

The Bruins will next host the Blackfoot Broncos, who defeated Bishop Kelly of Boise 27-14. McNew said the team must continue the string of progressive, up-tempo practices as it prepares to make a run

Raft River no match for Prairie

Times-News

Prairie showed why it’s favored to repeat as Class 1A Division I champs. The Pirates built a 40-0 lead on Raft River Friday night at the Kibbie Dome before taking a 40-8 win.

The Trojans played Prairie closer than most have this season, taking the Pirates to a full four quarters, but they managed only one touchdown, coming on H.D. Tuckett’s 7-yard run in the fourth quarter.

“Overall, I was impressed with how the kids came out and took on (Prairie),” Raft River coach Randy Spaeth said. “I’m really proud of this group. They battled a lot of adversity, an injury plague, lots of little things all year long. But nothing really rattled these kids. They never quit, and that shows a lot about their character.”

The Pirates (10-0) have now won 22 straight and advance to next week’s semifinals, while the Trojans cap their season at 7-3.

MACKAY 56, DIETRICH 8
Dietrich’s playoff opener at Mackey started well enough. The Blue Devils took an early lead on an 87-yard touchdown pass from Alex Heimerdinger to Andru Howard.

But that was the last of the good news for Dietrich. Four second-quarter turnovers by the Blue Devils helped Mackey roll up 36 points in the period and build a 50-8 lead. Mackay (10-0) concluded the game in the third quarter, scoring again to invoke the mercy rule.

“Mackey kicked out butts,” said Dietrich coach Doug Astle, who pointed to the turnovers as the key. “That obviously led to our demise,” he said.

Mackay quarterback Kole Krosch ran for three scores and threw for three more.

Dietrich finishes the season at 4-6, while Mackay takes a perfect record into the state semifinals.

raced down the sideline and cut inside Moore to cap a 75-yard return.

“Throwing that stupid pick, I think that really gave them some momentum that they were able to build on and take advantage of,” Moore said. “I think that certainly kept them in the game and it is definitely something that I shouldn’t have done.”

Moore responded by leading a 15-play drive to set up Kyle Brotzman’s third field goal, then Tech’s offense suddenly came to life. The Bulldogs got their first first down in two quarters on the way to a 73-yard scoring drive capped by Ross Jenkins’ 9-yard keeper around the right end to make it 30-21.

Tech’s Matt Nelson then caught the Broncos by surprise with an onside kick that he recovered himself. Shortly after, Jenkins found Morris over the middle for 36 yards to the Boise State 12, setting up Jenkins’ third-down pass to Morris, who leaped to catch the ball over defensive back Kyle Wilson’s head to pull Tech within 30-28.

“It looked like the game was going to get away from us, but I was really proud at how well we did in the second half.” Louisiana Tech coach Derek Dooley said. “We didn’t make the plays at the end of the game we needed to win, but if we keep fighting the way we’ve been fighting, we’ll play out of it eventually.”

When Brotzman missed his second field goal of the game on the Broncos’ next drive, the crowd was going wild, and it appeared the Bulldogs just might upset the highest-ranked team ever to play at Joe Aillet Stadium.

Instead, Boise State put its figurative foot down, forcing a quick punt. Then Moore floated a pass down the sideline to Kyle Efaw for his second 40-yard completion of the game, setting up his scoring pass to Pettis to make it 38-28.

Soon after, Tech failed to convert a fourth-and-6 on its own 44, setting up Avery’s game-clinching run that made it 45-28 with 4:52 to go. Tech managed one more touchdown after that.

Jenkins finished 10 of 19 for 114 yards and one interception. Daniel Porter rushed for 92 yards and a score for Tech.

Moore’s three TD passes gave him 27 on the season, eclipsing the 25 he had last year as a freshman.

Pettis finished with nine catches for 105 yards. Richie Brockel had a 2-yard TD catch in the first half and Doug Martin scored on 2-yard run for the Broncos.

ISU hopes for Montana upset

By Mark Liptak
Times-News Correspondent

POCATELLO — On paper, this is the biggest mismatch of the Big Sky Conference season. No. 2-ranked Montana comes to Holt Arena today to face winless Idaho State at 3:30 p.m.

The Grizzlies (8-0, 5-0 Big Sky) are looking to claim at least a share of their 12th consecutive Big Sky championship, while the Bengals (0-9, 0-6) are looking for their first win in an upset that would be of biblical proportions.

It may be the ultimate David vs. Goliath scenario, but in this case the little guy doesn't even have a sling-shot. Add to it the fact that Goliath will have an estimated 2,000 or so of his fans on hand and it could be a very long afternoon for head coach John Zamberlin and his battered ISU team.

Swirling about this game are reports that Montana is now giving serious consideration to leaving the Big Sky Conference as soon as August 2011 (when an NCAA mandate blocking any moves up to a higher division expires), and this could be the final time the Griz make an appearance in southeastern Idaho.

Injuries and a lack of talent and depth at key positions have hindered the Bengals. Zamberlin said he and his staff must address those things in recruiting.

"We've got to get some speed in our backfield and our linebacking corps is going to be very thin due to graduations," he said. "So we've got to replace that area."

As far as the immediate task of trying to slow down the nation's second ranked team in the Football Championship Subdivision, Zamberlin talked about doing the basics.

"To beat them we've got to eliminate giving up big plays, we've got to be sound against the run and we've got to pressure their quarterback," he said.

It also wouldn't hurt to be able to run the football effectively, something ISU simply has not been able to do save for some rare exceptions.

How bad has ISU's run game been? Historically bad.

The Bengals have gained a total of 276 yards and one touchdown via the ground this season. The school's futility mark for rushing came in a 0-11 1988 campaign with two rushing scores and 547 yards.

"Our running game has been sputtering because of all the injuries to our offensive line as well as our running backs," said Zamberlin.

The Bengals may not have one fully healthy running back available today and the offense is ranked among the worst in the country.

The ISU defense has actually played well for long stretches before getting worn down by simply being on the field too much. But Zamberlin said his defensive players don't harbor any animosity toward their offensive teammates.

"I think they're doing a good job of not pointing fingers at one another," he said. "I'm proud of them for not doing that. It would be human nature to do so, but this group of young men has hung together despite everything."

Utah hosts winless New Mexico on way to TCU

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Before Utah can worry about playing for first place in the Mountain West Conference, the 17th-ranked Utes have to avoid a stumble against the team alone in last.

The Utes host winless New Mexico on Saturday, one week before Utah's showdown at unbeaten TCU.

"Regardless of who we're playing this week, we've got things we've got to fix," Utah coach Kyle Whittingham said. "This team has done a great job for a long time now of not overlooking anybody."

That may be especially difficult this week for the Utes (7-1, 4-0). The Lobos (0-8, 0-4) are trying to avoid their first winless season since going 0-11 in 1987.

"It's more fixing what's wrong with us," Whittingham said. "We've got to focus on our deficiencies."

Utah has been struggling to finish drives and last week Whittingham decided it was time for a drastic change. Whittingham replaced starting quarterback Terrance Cain with freshman Jordan Wynn, who in his college debut rallied the Utes to a 22-10 win.

Wynn finished 9-for-14 for 82 yards and although his statistics weren't as good as Cain's, he did get Utah in the end zone and may have taken over the starting job with just a month left in the season.

Whittingham wouldn't say who will start at quarterback Saturday, saying he didn't want to give the Lobos a chance to prepare for the dual threat Cain or Wynn, who is more of a drop-back passer whom Whittingham has compared to former Ute Alex Smith.

"It doesn't do us any good to tip our hand for New Mexico," Whittingham said. "These two guys have different skill sets. As a former defensive coordinator, you certainly would prepare differently for one than you would the other."

New Mexico coach Mike Locksley said he was as concerned with Utah's defense as he was with the offense, whoever the quarterback is. The Utes held the Cowboys to 201 yards of offense, including just 51 rushing yards while keeping the game close enough for Wynn to lead the comeback.

"Utah offers us a tough challenge," Locksley said. "They have probably the best defense I've seen and the thing that stands out about Utah's defense is their athleticism."

Utah is allowing fewer than 300 yards per game and New Mexico ranks dead last in the Mountain West in total offense at 306 yards.

The Utes have exactly one week to get their offense back on track before next weekend's trip to No. 6 TCU. The Utes have been running the ball well during their five-game winning streak and can set a school record on Saturday if running back Eddie Wide rushes for 100 yards for the sixth straight game.

Utah wants to get its quarterback situation resolved this weekend.

Wynn was hoping to get his first start Saturday and not have to come in midway through like he did in his first real game since he was a senior last fall at Oceanside High School in southern California.

He said he had to settle down some nerves when he entered the game last week, but was poised enough to complete his first four passes while leading the Utes to a field goal.

"I've always had butterflies. In high school I got them every game. I've grown used to it," Wynn said. "I wouldn't say I'm nervous, I'm just really, really excited to get out there."

The Lobos have lost 12 straight, tying the second-longest streak in school history. The longest is 21 in a row, set from 1967-1969.

The Lobos and Utes have split the last four meetings, including Utah's 13-10 win last year in Albuquerque.

Locksley returned last week for New Mexico's 23-20 loss to San Diego State after serving a 10-day suspension for his role in an altercation with assistant coach J.B. Gerald, who claims his lip was split when Locksley hit him during a heated argument on Sept. 20.

Mendenhall: BYU hasn't reached full potential yet

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Despite beating Oklahoma and being ranked in the Top 25 most of the season, Brigham Young coach Bronco Mendenhall believes his team has yet to reach its potential.

"I would love to have this team reach their potential as any team that I coach," Mendenhall said. "I'd like to see progress and growth happen in all areas."

No. 25 BYU (6-2, 3-1 Mountain West) faces an improved Wyoming (4-4, 2-2) on Saturday in Laramie. The Cougars are coming off a bye week and a disappointing 38-7 home loss to No. 6 TCU on Oct. 24.

Mendenhall talked to his team during the off week about recommitting themselves for the remaining four games of the season. It starts with the Cowboys, a team that's rebuilding under first-year head coach Dave Christensen.

"I just asked them to acknowledge the time frame remaining with the work to be done," Mendenhall said. "And they've responded very well in terms of practice and just how they're supporting each other and playing hard."

Defense is one area where Mendenhall believes his team can play better.

The Cougars were gashed by TCU for 412 yards total offense, including a 75-yard touchdown pass.

"And when you give up a one-play drive, whether it be in a pass play or a long run, etc., those things change momentum very quickly," Mendenhall said.

Mendenhall said he believes better execution and concentration are the answer.

Against Wyoming, BYU

faces a team that has improved under Christensen and is playing with "grit and determination," Mendenhall said.

Wyoming's new no-huddle spread offense has been inconsistent this season, scoring 30 versus UNLV and 37 against New Mexico but being shut out against Air Force and Colorado.

Christensen recognizes that his offense struggles against good defenses.

"We've obviously got to do a better job of moving the football and scoring points offensively," he said.

Christensen is still trying to find the right players for his scheme although he has settled on a starting quarterback in Austyn Carta-Samuels. The true freshman has performed admirably despite dropped balls from receivers, a sputtering running attack and poor pass blocking.

"What we really need to do is we need to get the 10 guys in the surrounding cast to perform at a higher level," Christensen said.

However, thanks to a stingy veteran defense, Wyoming has proved more competitive this year. Last week against No. 16 Utah, the Cowboys led 10-9 midway through the fourth quarter at Salt Lake City before losing 22-10.

"I think as a football program we've competed well in every single game with the exception of maybe the second half of the Texas game," Christensen said. The Cowboys led Texas 10-6 with 1:32 remaining in the first half but ended up losing 41-10 earlier this season.

for 327 yards in the comeback win.

Akey was unhappy his team fell behind 34-21 in the fourth quarter, and said they will need a much stronger effort against Fresno State if they want to remain undefeated at home.

"This will be a very physical ballgame," Akey said.

Fresno State also had to rally to beat Utah State last week. The Bulldogs trailed 27-17 at halftime, but shut out Utah State in the second half for a 31-27 win.

"They gave us a lot of problems," Fresno State coach Pat Hill said. "We played very well to win the game in the end."

Mathews ran for 185 yards and two touchdowns against Utah State, including the game-winner.

One more win would make the Bulldogs bowl eligible for the 10th time in the last 11 seasons.

THIS WEEK'S OTHER BIG GAMES

NO. 3 ALABAMA (8-0, 5-0 SEC) VS. NO. 9 LSU (7-1, 5-1), 1:30 P.M. (CBS)

Line: Alabama by 7½.
Series record: Alabama leads 44-23-5.
Last meeting: 2008, Alabama 27-21 OT.

What's At Stake

The SEC West. Alabama can lock up a share of the division title and a second straight SEC championship game matchup with Florida. LSU gains control of the West with an upset. Both teams are trying to stay in the national title hunt.

Key Matchup

Which defense breaks first. Both offenses face similar challenges against stingy defenses that are particularly formidable against the run. Both teams force lots of turnovers while committing relatively few. LSU and Alabama also have deep threats at receiver, provided the QBs can get it to them. But the Crimson Tide is fifth nationally in scoring defense, and the Tigers are only two spots behind.

NO. 11 PENN STATE (8-1, 4-1 BIG TEN) VS NO. 15 OHIO STATE (7-2, 4-1) 1:30 P.M. (ABC)

Line: Penn State by 3½.
Series record: Tied 12-12.
Last meeting: 2008, Penn State 13-6.

What's At Stake

Bragging rights aside, both teams could use a signature win to improve their resumes for a BCS bowl berth. Ohio State hosts Iowa next week, but this will be Penn State's last chance to play a ranked foe with Indiana and Michigan State left on its schedule. The winner also solidifies a hold on second place in the Big Ten and be in position to move up should the unbeaten Hawkeyes falter.

Key Matchup

Ohio State QB Terrelle Pryor vs. Penn State front seven. Pryor, a western Pennsylvania native, may be taking heat from the Beaver Stadium fans and the Nittany Lions' Big Ten-best defense. DEs Jack Crawford and Jerome Hayes and the standout linebacking corps may have their hands full trying to contain dual-threat Pryor.

NO. 19 NOTRE DAME (6-2) VS NAVY (6-3) 12:30 P.M. (NBC)

Line: Notre Dame by 11.
Series Record: Notre Dame leads 71-10-1.
Last Meeting: 2008, Notre Dame 27-21 OT.

What's at Stake

Notre Dame, which saw its 43-game winning streak against Navy end two seasons ago in South Bend, needs to keep winning to keep its hopes alive for a BCS berth. Navy needs another win to become bowl eligible for a seventh straight season and earn a berth in the Texas Bowl.

Key Matchup

Navy QB Ricky Dobbs vs. Notre Dame line. Dobbs missed the game against Wake Forest two weeks ago with a cracked bone in his right knee and got in for seven plays against Temple. Navy's second-leading rusher with 595 yards, who leads the nation with 16 rushing touchdowns, is ready to go against the Irish. Notre Dame's line has been steadily improving as the Irish coaches have been mixing in more players to try to keep the linemen fresh.

LeBron, Cavs whip Knicks

NEW YORK — LeBron James scored 33 points in his only visit to Madison Square Garden this season, leading the Cleveland Cavaliers to a 100-91 victory over the New York Knicks on Friday night.

One night after managing just 42 second-half points in an ugly home loss to Chicago, the Cavaliers rang up 40 in the first quarter, leaving New York fans with little left to do besides cheer for the Yankees in attendance and enjoy another mesmerizing performance by James.

He added nine assists and eight rebounds, but fell just shy of passing Kobe Bryant as the active scoring leader at the Garden. James improved his average to 30.4 points, with Bryant averaging 30.5 in 11 visits, according to STATS LLC

James had scored 50 or more in two of his last three visits, joining Michael Jordan as the only visiting players with multiple 50-point games at the current building.

SUNS 110, CELTICS 103

BOSTON — Jason Richardson bounced back from his worst game of the season to score 34 points with 10 rebounds, and the Phoenix Suns rebounded from their only defeat.

Kevin Garnett had a season-high 26 points for Boston — the most he's scored since missing the end of the 2008-09 season and the playoffs with strained ligaments in his right knee.

Steve Nash had 16 points with 12 assists for Phoenix, shaking loose to hit a 3-pointer with 51 seconds left after Boston closed an 11-point fourth-quarter gap to four points. Amare Stoudemire added 22 points, while Richardson finished 6 for 7 from 3-point range.

ROCKETS 105, THUNDER 94

HOUSTON — Trevor Ariza and Carl Landry scored 21 points apiece and the Houston Rockets extended their winning streak over the Oklahoma City franchise to 11 games by beating the Thunder 105-94 Friday night.

Luis Scola added 19 points and 10 rebounds for the Rockets.

Russell Westbrook scored 33 points and Kevin Durant added 27, but they were the only players in double figures for the Thunder, who've lost nine straight games in Houston.

Rookie Chase Budinger scored 16 and Aaron Brooks added 11 points for the Rockets, who finished with 26 assists. Houston made 6 of 16 3-pointers.

MAGIC 110, PISTONS 103

ORLANDO, Fla. — Dwight Howard had 22 points and 12 rebounds to help the Orlando Magic hold off Charlie Villanueva and Detroit.

Villanueva scored 22 of his 28 points in the fourth quarter, but it wasn't enough to get past the defending Eastern Conference champs, who led by 19 early and never trailed at all.

BUCKS 87, TIMBERWOLVES 72

MINNEAPOLIS — Andrew Bogut bested Al Jefferson inside with 17 points and 10 rebounds, Luke Ridnour had 16 points off the bench and Milwaukee used a second-half surge to top Minnesota.

Rookie Brandon Jennings had his first clunker for the Bucks, putting up nine points on 4 for 16 shooting, but his backup Ridnour helped counter a career-high 20 points by Timberwolves rookie Jonny Flynn.

HEAT 96, NUGGETS 88

MIAMI — Dwyane Wade scored 22 points, Jermaine O'Neal added 18 and Miami dealt Denver its first loss of the season.

Mario Chalmers scored 16 points, Quentin Richardson added 13 and Udonis Haslem finished with 11 points and 10 rebounds for the Heat, who are 5-1 for only the third time in their 22 seasons and beat Denver for the first time since Dec. 17, 2004.

Crowds roar, confetti falls as NYC fetes Yankees

NEW YORK (AP) — Crowds roared, church bells rang and streams of paper rained down on Broadway as the New York Yankees celebrated their 27th championship Friday in a way only this city can, with a parade up the Canyon of Heroes.

The players, joined by a few celebrity fans and Yankees of the past, drank it all in as they rode on floats and double-decker buses through Manhattan's financial district.

It has been years since the city used actual ticker-tape to celebrate its World Series wins, but the experience was still authentic to the many thousands who crammed the sidewalks along the three-quarter-mile parade route near Wall Street.

"I love it!" said city sanitation worker John Freeman, as he raked up confetti and toilet paper rolls thrown from skyscrapers.

Whole families skipped work and school to be there. Players recorded the crowd with their cameras as they rode to a second celebration at City Hall, where the mayor presented the team with keys to the city.

Shortstop Derek Jeter carried the trophy, hoisting it high above his head while the crowd screamed and "We are the Champions" blasted on loudspeakers.

"It's been too long, hasn't it?" he told the crowd, a reference to the team's eight-year absence from the top of the sport. "It feels good to be back."

Fans and players brimming with classic New York confidence let it be known that they didn't plan to relinquish their title anytime soon.

The crowd at City Hall chanted "28." Manager Joe Girardi said he had already talked on the phone with George Steinbrenner about not letting up next year.

"He told me this morning... the only thing greater than this celebration is doing it two years in a row," Girardi said. "So he asked me to remind everyone, pitchers and catchers report in 96 days. Be ready to defend it."

Brooklyn native Jay-Z capped the celebration with a performance of his song "Empire State of Mind."

Yankees fans may be used to winning, but that didn't make the day any less special for the multitudes along the parade route — especially children living a championship for the first time.

"This is an experience of a lifetime," said Nicole Orrico, who let her fifth-grade daughter, Koranda, skip school to attend. "You have to mix life with learning."

Manny Ramirez decides to stay with L.A. Dodgers

NEW YORK (AP) — Manny Ramirez decided to stay with the Los Angeles Dodgers on Friday, and baseball's trade market sprang to life with a pair of swaps two days after the World Series.

Rather than become a free agent, Ramirez exercised his $20 million option, part of a deal the outfielder agreed to with the Dodgers last March that included a $25 million salary for 2009.

Among 16 Dodgers potentially eligible for free agency, Ramirez hit .290 with 19 homers and 63 RBIs this year, his season stained by a 50-game suspension for violating baseball's drug policy.

The Chicago White Sox acquired Mark Teahen from the Kansas City Royals for infielders Josh Fields and Chris Getz and cash, and Minnesota obtained shortstop J.J. Hardy from Milwaukee for outfielder Carlos Gomez, one of the players the Mets sent to the Twins in the Johan Santana deal.

Two pitchers were blocked from becoming eligible for free agency when teams exercised their 2010 options. Cliff Lee, who beat the Yankees twice in the World Series, gets a $9 million salary from Philadelphia next year. Brandon Webb, the 2006 NL Cy Young Award winner, receives $8.5 million from Arizona rather than a $2 million buyout.

Reliever J.J. Putz's $9.1 million option was declined by the Mets, who will pay a $1 million buyout.

Washington declined a $10 million option and chose to pay a $1 million buyout to outfielder Austin Kearns, who was bothered by a thumb injury and hit just .195.

Colorado turned down options on catcher Yorvit Torrealba ($4 million) and left-hander Alan Embree ($3 million). Torrealba gets a $500,000 buyout, and Embree $250,000.

The Chicago White Sox declined a $12 million mutual option on right fielder Jermaine Dye. The 2005 World Series MVP gets a $950,000 buyout and immediately filed for free agency.

"Money is tight all over the world and certainly on the South Side," Chicago general manager

Ken Williams said. "We're going to spend whatever we have available, but it's not much."

Milwaukee declined a $3.7 million option on right-hander David Weathers, who gets a $400,000 buyout.

The Angels' Vladimir Guerrero, Chone Figgins and Kelvim Escobar were among 39 players who filed Friday, raising the total of free agents to 118. Also filing were three members of the NL champion Philadelphia Phillies: Pedro Martinez, Brett Myers and Miguel Cairo.

About 65 additional players are potentially eligible to file by the Nov. 19 deadline. Free agents can start negotiating money with all teams the following day.

16 kills. "We weren't surprised by any of their changes, because we could not have possibly been any more prepared."

Elisa Brochado had 14 kills for CSI, while Torrey Hulsey, who committed to West Virginia on Thursday, had 12. Barbara Alcantara dished out 42 assists and had 10 digs.

North Idaho couldn't find a way to get its block established, something it did in all three wins. The Cardinals finished with seven blocks to CSI's six but didn't do enough to put that seed of doubt in the Golden Eagles' minds.

Marketa Hanzlova led North Idaho with nine kills, followed by eight each from Callie Johns and Tina Strahinic, the latter of whom carried the team in the early goings as Johns and Hanzlova warmed up.

"We're trying to get as many of our guns firing at once because that makes us that much tougher," said North Idaho coach Chris Kosty. "In our conference, it's always a battle between us, CSI and Salt Lake (Community College), and on a given day any of us can beat the other. Obviously that happened tonight. They did a great job of getting that last big push when it mattered."

Hulsey didn't have a match that stuffed the stat columns, but almost all of her kills came at the most important times. The faith Alcantara showed to set her big middle the ball at the key moments rubbed off on the Sutter, Calif., sophomore.

"My team was keeping me pumped up, and that just made me want to do even better for them," said Hulsey. "I didn't think we had it won at any point because we had been two sets up on them in the past. We were just thinking of it as we had to win that (set). But we weren't going to let ourselves lose to them again."

CSI will face top-seeded host Salt Lake Community College in today's Region 18 title match. The Bruins (26-7) rallied for a four-set win over Snow College in Friday's late match. Today's winner automatically qualifies for the national tournament in Council Bluffs, Iowa, while the loser hosts ninth-ranked Eastern Arizona on Tuesday for a trip to the tournament.

Susi Walmsley's 15 points led WWCC.

CSI takes on tournament host Sheridan College at 3 p.m. today. The game will be broadcast live on 1450 AM KEZJ.

ACTION for the MISSING

Nineteen-year-old Max Bailey in 1950.

Photos by COREEN HART/For the Times-News

Geneva Tadlock, center, is surrounded by family members in Rupert at the Sept. 19 memorial service for her brother, Max Bailey, who is missing in action since a November 1950 Korean War battle.

Family of area veteran seeks connection 59 years later

By Coreen Hart
Times-News correspondent

HAZELTON — When Geneva Tadlock accepted a neatly folded American flag in remembrance of her brother on Sept. 19, she also accepted closure after 59 years of waiting.

At Rupert's POW-MIA Day, U.S. Army Cpl. Max Bailey was finally given his last rites with full military honors. And Tadlock finally felt that her brother would have some peace.

For a family of the Hazelton soldier missing in action, the overwhelming uncertainties were the worst part. Was Bailey dead or alive? Did he suffer?

And there the painful hypotheticals — what if he'd stayed home, gotten married? Every day since November 1950, Tadlock and her family have carried the weight of those uncertainties.

To Tadlock, Max is still the jaunty 19-year-old little brother who joined the Army during the Korean War without telling his parents. Lynn and Myrtle Bailey were against it, Tadlock said, but all Max's friends were going. He didn't have grand ambitions of military leadership — he just wanted to get out and see the world.

Tadlock said he was a little spoiled, and he did whatever he wanted. It was his undoing.

"When we got the telegram in the mailbox, my folks just kind of clung to each other,"

Tamera Ahrendsen put together what she calls 'Max's Book' to remember her uncle, U.S. Army Cpl. Max Bailey, who went missing and was presumed killed in the Korean War. For several years she has gathered what information she could find to help her discover Bailey's fate.

Tadlock said. "They had had so much death in their lives. But they accepted it.

"My dad had had an experience once before, when a fellow he knew passed away. He felt like something was smothering him. It happened again with Max, so he kind of knew."

Lynn Bailey had lost many family members, and he and Myrtle lost several infants before raising their seven living children.

Max's niece, Joly Madewell, can understand how it must have been.

"When my son turned that age where he could go, it just ripped my heart out," she said. "It has been such a big heartache for my mom all these years."

Max's mother had a dream on the day the family believes Max was killed.

"He always used to come in the door and yell, 'Mom, I'm home.' That night she heard him say it, just as clear as if he was there," Tadlock said.

Of course, Max was in Korea, fighting through the bloody Chosin Reservoir battle when he disappeared into the fog of war.

"We spent those years just wondering," Tadlock said. "You don't know if you should pray for him or what."

She relished the military

Keep original registration with vehicle

Q: I've heard it's suggested to not leave identifying documents in your car, in case someone breaks in. But Idaho law requires owners pulled over to provide their vehicle's registration and proof of insurance.

I've always carried those documents in my wallet, but Idaho's registration form is rather large. I've found out how to reduce its size on my computer and print a smaller copy. If I was stopped, could I be cited for providing that smaller copy instead of the original?

A: That depends on the officer. Is that answer good enough?

No? Well let's delve into this question a little more.

According to Idaho code 49-427, the registration card issued for a vehicle, "shall, while the vehicle is being operated upon a highway, be in the possession of the operator or chauffeur or carried in the vehicle and be subject to inspection by any peace officer."

So technically, you need to have the original on hand. The officer could use his or her discretion, but I'd advise to err on the side of caution and keep the original in the vehicle.

Registration forms don't carry a lot of information, other than your address, that a thief might be interested in anyway.

If that doesn't put your mind at ease, carry your papers with personal information with you when you leave your vehicle. Just remember to put them back when you're driving again.

Q: I've been pulled over many times for no reason. Officers have told me I threw out a cigarette or some lame excuse like that. Is it against the law for officers to pull innocent people over and lie about the reason?

You might guess I'm not happy with law enforcement and won't ever help them if asked.

POLICEMAN DAN

A: Reader, I had to trim your entire question and statement, as I didn't feel it appropriate.

While I don't personally know how you've been treated by law enforcement officials, I can say that officers don't stop people for simply doing nothing.

They're busy enough dealing with an overabundance of traffic violators. And being pulled over for throwing out a lit cigarette is warranted, as littering burning material is a crime — not an excuse to pester you.

I will say that if one officer has constantly stopped you, your complaint might be founded and should be relayed to that officer's superiors.

Finally, I'll add that failing to assist an officer when asked for help is a crime that could lead to arrest. That law's under Idaho code 18-707, which applies to you if you're a male 18 or older.

Eliminate OTC remedies and let nature take its course

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have had a problem with severe constipation for many years. I have taken different laxatives and have been on milk of magnesia for a long time. I took a large dose of it last night and the night before, to no avail. I use Fleet enemas and suppositories, and strain with all my might to get any kind of action.

ASK DR. GOTT

Dr. Peter Gott

I have approached my primary-care physician and others and get no answers at all. I will say I am desperate with the terrible problem and am hoping you can give me help. I'm physically active and seem to be in good health otherwise.

DEAR READER: Constipation is a persistent decrease in the frequency and ease of bowel movements. On a temporary basis, this is nothing to worry about. Long term, it should be investigated.

You do not indicate how often you actually have a bowel movement. Every person has a slightly different pattern. For some, it's once a day, three times a day or even once every three days. Do you include adequate fiber and sufficient fluids in your diet? Or is your diet high in animal fats and refined sugars? Have you had your thyroid gland checked? A sluggish thyroid can cause chronic constipation.

The habitual use of laxatives can be dangerous. As with addictive drugs, doses of laxatives over time must be increased in order to produce the effect needed. Eventually, the intestines can become unresponsive to the drugs altogether, and cease to become effective.

Constipation can be a symptom of a more serious problem, such as medication interactions, hormonal disturbances, thyroid disorders and more. It can also lead to hemorrhoids from straining and fissures caused by hard stool stretching the sphincter muscle. With that in mind,

N.M. city prepares for salt cavern collapse

By Susan Montoya Bryan
Associated Press writer

CARLSBAD, N.M. — The bright yellow signs on U.S. 285 are the first indication that things aren't right in Carlsbad.

"US 285 south subject to sinkhole 1,000 feet ahead," motorists are warned.

But there is little other evidence that in southeastern New Mexico's oil country, a giant cavern sits beneath the earth, ready to swallow part of the highway and possibly a church, several businesses and a trailer park.

The cavern was formed over three decades as oil field service companies pumped fresh water into a salt layer more than 400 feet below the surface and extracted several million barrels of brine to help with drilling. State regulators flagged it as a potential danger after concluding that it was similar to two wells northwest of Carlsbad that collapsed without warning last year.

Over the past few decades, communities in Texas, Kansas, Michigan, Canada and Europe learned of similar underground danger only after cracks appeared and the ground began to sink. Regulators are trying to determine how to prevent future collapses by better managing a practice that's used throughout the world.

Most brine wells operate far from homes and businesses, but Carlsbad's is unique because it is in a population center — and could prove potentially disastrous.

"It would be a mess. It would be like a bomb going off in the middle of town," said Jim Griswold, a hydrologist with the New Mexico Oil Conservation Division.

The city council and the Eddy County Commission declared a state of emergency

In this photo taken Oct. 29, New Mexico Oil Conservation Division hydrologist Jim Griswold tours a July 2008 brine well collapse near Artesia, N.M. Deep concentric cracks have formed around the sinkhole as the ground continues to shift.

Thursday, the first step to free state and federal funds that could be used to figure out a way to stabilize the cavern.

"The public's been warned," Carlsbad Mayor Bob Forrest said. "We've had a heads up, and for us as elected officials to sit here and do nothing is political suicide. We want to move forward."

The city of about 26,000 residents knows caverns well. It is home to Carlsbad Caverns National Park, a network of some of the largest natural caverns in North America, where tourists can see both delicate calcite formations and towering stalagmites.

But this man-made salt cavern has residents nervous.

Officials have set up a monitoring system that takes readings from tilt meters and pressure sensors every two seconds and averages them to determine whether there are changes drastic enough to trigger alarms. The alarms are expected to give authorities several hours to evacuate people in advance of a cave-in that could span anywhere from 200 to 500 feet, Griswold said.

I&W Trucking, the oil field service company that owns the site where the cavern is located, contends the state is overreacting because of the previous collapses on state land and criticized the Oil Conservation Division for not doing more tests to establish the size of the brine cavern before forcing it to plug the well.

I recommend you make an appointment with your primary-care physician, who hasn't listened to you thus far, to demand help, or request a referral to a gastroenterologist. Ask to be checked for the obvious possibilities mentioned. If nothing is found, your concerns should be put to rest at least.

While waiting for the appointment, bypass all the over-the-counter drugs you have. Instead, add fiber and plenty of fruits and vegetables to your diet, and increase the amount of fluids you consume daily.

Consider warm prune or apple juice with breakfast or try my colon cocktail (equal portions of bran, applesauce and prune juice, 1 to 2 tablespoons taken daily). Exercise regularly to the capability you feel comfortable with. Perhaps this translates to a walk around the block after work. Allow your body to get back on track without the aid of outside forces. You might be amazed at the results.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am a 78-year-old female. Eight months ago, I was diagnosed with atrial fibrillation and congestive heart failure. I was put on Coumadin, but take generic warfarin. Since the regimen began, I have itched all over, especially in body crevices. I have a number of lesions and, even as I write this, I have bandages on three areas of my torso trying to protect spots where the skin is raw from scratching because of the itch.

I went to a dermatologist, who gave me a sample of a white ointment and recommended I buy a small bar of soap for $10. This has helped little, if at all.

Before being put on the warfarin I never had any problems like this. The Coumadin clinic I go to for lab work and my doctors seem unconcerned. In fact, I asked my doctor about another treatment, and all I got was that Coumadin is what I need, period!

For information, I take medication to lower my blood pressure and Prilosec for heartburn from a hiatal hernia. None of my medications have been changed.

DEAR READER: Coumadin and its generic form of warfarin act as an anticoagulant to help reduce the formation of blood clots. The medication was prescribed because of your atrial fibrillation, a rapid and irregular heartbeat. This is important because most people with this condition are at higher risk of blood clots, which may lead to stroke.

Hives, rash and itch are side effects. You are likely experiencing an allergic reaction to the drug or a possible cross reaction from the hypertensive medication you are on. I believe your dermatologist is off base. Lotion will not make your problem go away. If your physician is unwilling to work with you, request a referral to another physician or cardiologist. Also, consider seeing an allergy specialist.

To provide related information, I am sending you copies of my Health Reports "Consumer Tips on Medicines" and "Allergies." Other readers who would like copies should send a self-addressed stamped No. 10 envelope and a check or money order for $2 for each report to Newsletter, P.O. Box 167, Wickliffe, OH 44092. CHRISTIANITY REVISITED

Ancient church origins discussed at lecture series

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

It's a little theology and a lot of history, and the combination makes for an insightful journey through Orthodox Christianity. On Wednesday, the second of a three-part lecture called "Journeys to the Ancient Church" was presented by Hieromonk Mark, pastor of St. Ignatius Orthodox Christian Church in Twin Falls. The series, which involves a lecture, videos and a question-and-answer period, discusses the origins and traditions of the first-century Christian church. The discussion Wednesday night was, "Which came first, the Bible or the church?" "Obviously, the Bible is a product of the church," said Father Mark, as he explained

Secular group gains ground on CSI campus

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

The Secular Student Alliance is a group providing neutral ground for young adults to gather, discuss and explore world views. The non-profit group has affiliates on college campuses countrywide.

The College of Southern Idaho's SSA is a new group, but growing, said co-advisor Brent Jensen.

"We're an outlet for people, nonbeliever, agnostics, secular humanists," he said. "It's like we're a denomination of non-believers that gather to tell our own stories of how we came to our worldview."

The SSA has about a dozen student members and the group is in the process of becoming a recognized club by the college.

In a valley filled with believers, group advisor Jerry Cox said the group gives an outlet to students who are skeptical.

"I grew up in Twin Falls; there was no outlet for doubts or unbeliefs. It's not OK to talk about home, church or school," Cox said. "This is a safe place for like-minded people."

The mission of the SSA, according to Secularstudents.org/csi, "is to organize, unite, educate, and serve students and student communities that promote the ideals of scientific and critical inquiry, democracy, secularism, and human based ethics. The bulk of our efforts go into starting and supporting high school and college groups that choose to affiliate with us."

Jensen's own journey into SSA started years ago. He was raised Roman Catholic but never believed in the Virgin Birth and "considered Jesus nothing more than a charismatic figure"

E. Idaho program tackles addiction with religion

By Joelyn Hanson
The Post-Register

IDAHO FALLS (AP) — Thomas Pence believes it was no coincidence he was arrested for DUI right down the street from Genesis House.

It was a sign from God, he said, that the facility's residential recovery program would change his life.

Though the 48-year-old has been living in the Fifth Street facility for barely six weeks, he's already seen a change.

"This is a tremendous opportunity for anyone with an addiction; it's truly a gift," Pence said.

Genesis House opened in May and is dedicated to helping men beat drug and alcohol addictions through religion.

There is room for eight men in the free yearlong program, which calls for residents to live a structured life, under the guidance of a house supervisor, that promotes sobriety and Christian growth and responsibility as defined in the Bible, said Ron Youderian, executive director of Genesis Ministries, which sponsors it.

"It's about allowing a person to change by the grace of God," he said.

Youderian and his wife, Mary, were inspired to open the facility through their work at City of Refuge, a shelter in downtown Idaho Falls that provides temporary help for homeless men.

Five men have taken part in the program at Genesis House, and two are enrolled in the program today, Youderian said.

Residents participate in numerous activities each day. They awake at 6 a.m., participate in devotions and Scripture study, exercise, attend motivational classes about becoming better men, study the Bible and more. The house also provides opportunities to learn skills such as computer programming and reading comprehension.

"We're striving for a guy to get connected and grow in a healthy Christian community,"

Its 'Mother' dead, doomsday sect's future in doubt

By Matthew Brown
Associated Press writer

BOZEMAN, Mont. — Members of a Montana-based sect whose influence expanded as it prepared for a nuclear holocaust that never came, now search for new directions after the death of Elizabeth Clare Prophet — "Mother" to her thousands of followers. The Church Universal and Triumphant still keeps its 750-person underground shelters stocked with food — "insurance," its leaders say, against possible dark days ahead. Yet with Prophet gone, it's uncertain the spiritual movement she embodied will prove as lasting as all the concrete and steel hidden beneath a Montana mountainside north of Yellowstone National Park. "You had a clear figurehead that became the focus of the organization, the object of adoration. When that's suddenly removed it throws people into a tailspin," said Robert Balch, a University of Montana sociologist specializing in cults and unconventional religions. In the waning days of Prophet's reign as the church's divinely chosen messenger, its focus shifted from civilization's end to the development of a New Age publishing juggernaut, producing hundreds of books and recordings drawn from Prophet's mystical declarations. After a decade-long decline caused by Alzheimer's disease, Prophet died last month at age 70 — setting off what Balch called a "crisis of succession" over who will take her place. As her followers convene at the church's sprawling Corwin Springs compound this weekend for a three-day memorial gathering, the struggle to lay claim to Prophet's legacy already has begun.

Within days of her death, former church member David Lewis announced he had channeled Prophet's spirit. Like Prophet, Lewis claims the ability to channel Jesus, Buddha and more obscure spiritual figures such as St. Germain and El Morya. Church leaders have denounced him. Since Prophet fell ill, at least 15 people have stepped forward claiming to be the next messenger, said Neroli Duffy, who sits on the church's 24-member council of elders. None has met

Gone to the dogs: L.A. church starts pet service

By Gillian Flaccus
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — When the Rev. Tom Eggebeen took over as interim pastor at Covenant Presbyterian Church three years ago, he looked around and knew it needed a jump start.

Most of his worshippers, though devoted, were in their 60s, attendance had bottomed out and the once-vibrant church was fading as a community touchstone in its bustling neighborhood.

So Eggebeen came up with a hair-raising idea: He would turn God's house into a doghouse by offering a 30-minute service complete with individual doggie beds, canine prayers and an offering of dog treats. He hopes it will reinvigorate the church's connection with the community, provide solace to elderly members and, possibly, attract new worshippers who are as crazy about God as they are about their four-legged friends.

Before the first Canines at Covenant service last Sunday, Eggebeen said many Christians love their pets as much as human family members and grieve just as deeply when they suffer — but churches have been slow to recognize that love as the work of God.

“The Bible says of God only two things in terms of an ‘is’: That God is light and God is love. And wherever there’s love, there’s God in some fashion,” said Eggebeen, himself a dog lover. “And when we love a dog and a dog loves us, that’s a part of God and God is a part of that. So we honor that.”

The weekly dog service at Covenant Presbyterian is part of a growing trend among churches nationwide to address the spirituality of pets and the deeply felt bonds that owners form with their animals.

Traditionally, conventional Christians believe that only humans have redeemable souls, said Laura Hobgood-Oster, a religion professor at Southwestern University in Georgetown, Texas.

But a growing number of congregations from Massachusetts to Texas to California are challenging that assertion with regular pet blessings and, increasingly, pet-centric services, said Hobgood-Oster, who studies the role of animals in Christian tradition.

She recently did a survey that found more than 500 blessings for animals at churches nationwide and has heard of a half-dozen congregations holding worship services like Eggebeen’s, including one in a Boston suburb called Woof ‘n Worship.

“It’s the changing family structure, where pets are really central and religious communities are starting to recognize that people need various kinds of rituals that include their pets,” she said. “More and more people in mainline Christianity are considering them to have some kind of soul.”

The pooches who showed up at Covenant Presbyterian on Sunday didn’t seem very interested in dogma.

Animals big and small, from pit bulls to miniature Dachshunds to bichon frises, piled into the church’s chapel to worship in an area specially outfitted for canine comfort with doggie beds, water bowls and a pile of irresistible biscuits in an offering bowl. There were a lot of humans too — about 30 — and three-quarters of them were new faces.

The service started amid a riot of tail-sniffing, barking, whining and playful roughhousing.

But as Eggebeen stepped to the front and the piano struck up the hymn “GoD and DoG,” one by one the pooches lay down, chins on paws, and listened. Eggebeen took prayer requests for Mr. Boobie (healing of the knees) and Hunter (had a stroke) and then called out the names of beloved pets past and present (Quiche, Tiger, Timmy, Baby Angel and Spunky) before launching into the Lord’s Prayer.

At the offering, ushers stepped over tangled leashes and yawning canines to collect donations and hand out doggie treats shaped like miniature bones in a rainbow of colors.

“We’re moving ahead,” Duffy said Thursday. “She didn’t necessarily think there would be another messenger.”

Prophet led the church since the 1973 death of her second husband, Mark Prophet, who founded the church’s parent organization, The Summit Lighthouse, in 1958.

The couple preached that one’s soul progresses through a series of earthly incarnations. His past lives were said to have included Aesop, Lancelot and Henry Wadsworth Longfellow. Hers included Nefertiti, Queen Guinevere of Camelot and Marie Antoinette.

Soon after her husband died and became an “ascended master,” Elizabeth Prophet began to channel his holy dictations. Over the next two decades she attracted an estimated 50,000 followers around the world.

Melding mysticism, Christianity and Eastern religions with strong doses of patriotism and self-sufficiency, she promised adher-ents a newfound path toward personal enlightenment.

Yet long before Elizabeth Prophet’s death, Balch and others who tracked her career saw her power base beginning to crumble.

The grip she held over her followers first began to loosen after her doomsday predictions went unrealized in 1990.

Prophet’s five children — including two daughters once groomed as heirs — have since abandoned the church. Others who claim to be the next messenger, including Lewis, are regarded as charlatans by her more fervent followers.

Church leaders contend that Prophet — the tie that binds the faith’s disparate religious and historical elements — lives on through 22,000 hours of video and audio recordings of her teachings.

Church president Valerie McBride would not reveal the size of the church’s membership except to say it was in “the thousands” and has spread recently across parts of South America and Russia.

RELIGION LETTER

Veneration of objects mark shallow faith

The Oct. 17 edition of the Times-News featured an article about the use of religious icons and the veneration of icons and other physical objects, and the belief that some objects are capable of producing “miracles.” Jesus said in John 4:18, “Unless you people see signs and wonders, you simply will not believe.”

He then pointed out that the nobleman, whose son was dying, believed Jesus’ word that his son was healed. The point is Christians believe in the uttered or written words of the Lord Jesus Christ and that is sufficient. To venerate objects is the mark of an immature or shallow faith. The old hymn says it perfectly, “Thy Word have I hid in my heart that I might not sin against thee.”

about the origins and editing of the Old and New testaments.

The Septuagint — the ancient Greek translation of the Jewish scriptures — is the text the New Testament apostles quoted from in their day.

This was just one piece of information provided at the lecture. There were many more.

Before the lecture began, Father Mark told the Times-News that the first century church was involved with temple worship and synagogue rituals — distinct differences between Orthodox Christianity and Protestantism.

Though the church has evolved over the centuries, he said, its core is the same. The differences are of maturity.

“It’s like a new baby and what that person becomes as an adult,” he said. “Some might not recognize him as an adult, but it’s the same person. They (the baby and adult) are identical in their core.”

Only 14 people attended Wednesday, but Father Mark says he’s not disappointed.

Neither are those who attended.

“It’s a good first start,” said Hilber Nelson, a member of the parish board that organized the series. The church plans to do more in the future, including developing a page on the church’s Web site about the lecture topics.

“The church, the temple, remains invisible in a lot of ways,” Nelson said of St. Ignatius. “Some people think it’s Greek, some think it’s Russian. ... This really helps to open the door and start a discussion.”

About half of those who attended the lectures so far have been nonmembers, he said.

“It was interesting,” said Milenko Kulasevic. “I learned a lot.”

Kulasevic, 28, originally from Serbia, moved to Twin Falls about 13 years ago, but he’s been a believing Orthodox Christian his whole life. He started attending St. Ignatius with his wife, Irma, about five years ago once he learned there was an Orthodox church in the area.

He looks forward to the next discussion, he said.

The final lecture, “What do icons, incense and chanting have to do with worship-ping God?” will be held Nov. 18. The lecture is free and open to anyone, church member or not, who is interested in learning more about the church’s history and rituals.

This is the first time the series has been held at the church, Father Mark said, but it likely will not be the last.

First Baptist Church in Dallas is launching a $130 million campaign, making it the largest church building program in modern history. The new 1.5 million square feet, state-of-the-art campus culminates recent downtown Dallas revitalization. It will be LEED certified and include a 3,000-seat worship center and an expansive six-floor education building. At the heart of the campus will be a fountain plaza that will add one acre of new green gathering places and an oval pool with a stone water tower topped with a cross.

One of nation’s largest Southern Baptist churches is expanding

DALLAS (AP) — First Baptist in Dallas, one of the nation’s largest Southern Baptist Convention congregations, will be growing into a more environmentally friendly campus.

First Baptist announced a $130 million expansion featuring a 3,000-seat worship center.

Evangelist Billy Graham joined First Baptist Dallas in 1953 during his initial crusade in the city. Graham in late 2008 announced he was switching to a church closer to his retirement home in Montreat, N.C.

The campus for the Dallas congregation of about 11,000 is planned adjacent to the city’s updated arts district, host to the new $354 million

AT&T Performing Arts Center.

“We want to create a spiritual oasis that the residents of Dallas can enjoy,” said Pastor Robert Jeffress.

The heart of the campus will have a fountain plaza complete with green gathering places and an oval pool with a stone water tower topped with a cross.

The first building of what became First Baptist Church was purchased in 1872. The cornerstone of the current sanctuary was laid in 1891, according to the church’s Web site.

The current historic sanctuary will be retained as a site for weddings, funerals and other special events, the church said in a statement.

THIBODAUX, La. (AP) — The pastor of a Catholic church in Thibodaux estimates that more than 1,600 people gathered there to file by a glass box that encases a bone that church leaders believe is from the body of Mary Magdalene.

Addiction

Yoderian said.

The facility is a comfort for resident Jade Capson, who struggles with addiction to methamphetamine.

“If I have a problem, I can talk to (Pence),” Capson said. “He’s an addict and he understands.”

This is Capson’s second stint in the house. He left before for family reasons, but now he’s back and committed to breaking his addiction.

Through donations garnered by the ministry, the house has enough money to operate through early 2010, Yoderian said. It costs about $8,500 a month to run it.

The goal of the board of directors, which represents four area churches, is to keep it running without government assistance, Yoderian said. He hopes it will be done.

Pence does, too.

He was thrown in jail in the spring for DUI and was released Sept. 19, five months to the day of his arrest. He started the faith-based recovery program to conquer his alcoholism that day.

“It’s a neat way to do it,” Pence said. “When you give it all to the Lord and let him take care of it, you still have to do your part.”

“For me the turning point was 9/11 and the Bush administration’s attempt to move the country into a theocracy,” Jensen said. “That dogmatism wasn’t working.”

Cox’s journey was similar. He grew up in a Mormon household, served a mission to Germany and married young in an LDS temple.

Cox lays his story out on the group’s Facebook page. “At 37 I finally dug into Mormon history, which led to further investigations into religion in general, God, cult -psychology, and humanism. I emerged from all that having lost my religion, my faith, and my wife of 16 years; but what I gained was personal integrity, authenticity, and truth.”

On Tuesday, the SSA is hosting a free public screening of Julia Sweeney’s one-woman play, “Letting Go of God.” Advisors hope the event will spur interest and attract members.

Grasshoppers in the family

It’s no secret that Anita and I were not exactly thrilled when Andrea announced her intention to marry Adam.

Please don’t misunderstand. We always liked Adam. What was not to like? He was a good guy, always very kind and gracious, and clearly in love with Andrea. He was also a gifted actor with a terrific singing voice. He was lively and fun and personable — a great addition to any social gathering.

But as a potential husband to our daughter — well, we had our concerns. Because he is — you know — an actor, and the way I’ve always seen it, the theater is a nice place to visit, but how are you going to make a living there? Even back in my acting days (and I was never as talented as Adam, but I tread a few boards here and there in my time) I considered acting something you did for fun — not for profit.

As I considered the possibility of Adam as a son-in-law, Aesop’s fable about the ant and the grasshopper always came to mind. You know the story: an ant works industriously throughout the summer

VALUE SPEAK

while the grasshopper laughs and plays and dances and sings. But when the summer ends and harsh winter begins to rage, the ant is comfortably ensconced in the home he has worked so hard to build while the grasshopper shivers outside in the cold.

As a father, I wanted Andrea to marry a nice, normal, secure ant. But Adam was definitely a grasshopper. I should also mention that Andrea was a grasshopper too — a talented and beautiful grasshopper, to be sure, but a grasshopper nonetheless. That was a big part of the problem, as far as I was concerned. They had a great time together, sharing so many dreams and aspirations, but it didn’t seem to me that the couple would have an anchor, someone to deal with the day-to-day realities of life in the real world. The way I saw it, somebody had to be the ant in this relationship, or they were in for some long, cold, frightening winters, shivering in the cold.

Against my objective concerns they married. For six years now their lives have been nomadic, as they move from place to place in pursuit of their dream. But these two theater gypsies are happy and joyful in their pursuit, and they have done precious little shivering in the cold — and not just because they live in Florida. Turns out Adam is also talented when it comes to budgeting and saving money. He has taught Andrea how to stretch a dollar, and makes sure they live frugally — just in case the next acting gig doesn’t come as soon as they would like.

Imagine that: a disciplined grasshopper. Go figure.

So we have a couple of grasshoppers in the family. Which, it turns out, is a pretty good thing. This was especially evident during a family gathering last week, when a lot of the planned outdoor activities had to be canceled because of inclement weather. As far as the adults were concerned, this wasn’t necessarily a bad thing. It allowed us to sit and visit and catch up on all the latest news of the family — oh, and to eat lots of really good food.

But for the little ones, the great indoors quickly became — not so great. Little legs ached to run and jump and play, and little voices yearned to be loud and boisterous. Too-long-suppressed energy was bursting to be released, which resulted in restless children and frustrated parents. Which is why it was such a relief to every one when Adam and Andrea led the children in some fun and energetic activities, including a dance concert featuring something called “The Dance of the Trolls.” I’ll never forget the image of Adam dancing joyfully, exuberantly with his nieces and nephew. And then doing it again. And again. And again.

It’s a great image, one that I hope I’ll remember when I start thinking that one kind of person is more valuable, more worthwhile, more useful than another.

Or that ants are better than grasshoppers.

Unmarked graves found in Hailey cemetery

HAILEY (AP) — A survey of the Hailey Cemetery using ground-penetrating radar has found hundreds of unmarked graves.

Many of the unmarked graves in the 13-acre central Idaho cemetery are in a one-acre area referred to on maps as the “Chinese Cemetery.”

Officials say a brush fire in the 1930s destroyed wood markers, and that another fire in town at a later date destroyed burial records.

“The oldest gravestone is from 1879,” cemetery clerk Steve Tomkins told the Idaho Mountain Express. “But I am sure there are some older burials than that.”

Cemetery officials want to find unmarked graves to avoid digging in occupied ground. Six years ago workers unearthed bones in a spot thought to be vacant.

The $12,000 survey was conducted last summer by Brad Ford, a Boise State University geophysicist. He’s now overlaying an official map of cemetery against the results of his survey.

“As you can see, we found things everywhere,” Ford said at a presentation on Wednesday to cemetery officials. “Because of the characteristics and depths of them, and the regular spacing, they are definitely burials.”

The survey also showed burials under asphalt roadways and in an old canal that once ran through the cemetery but was filled in.

Ford said, based on the ground-penetrating radar, some of the unmarked graves contained metal coffins and concrete vaults, while others could be wood coffins.

About 300 Chinese lived in Hailey during the 1880s, said Teddie Daley, director of the Blaine County Historical Museum. Daley said they worked in mines in the surrounding hills, kept shops and grew crops in what is now a residential area of town.

Cemetery Board Chairman Ray Grosvenor said the board plans to erect a “Memorial to the Unknown” in the “Chinese Cemetery.”

AROUND THE WEST

Idaho program lets dogs donate blood

IDAHO FALLS — An eastern Idaho veterinarian has set up a program where dogs can become blood donors for injured or ill canines.

“We’re ready to move to the next level of veterinary medicine,” Adam Petersen, a veterinarian with the Ammon Vet Clinic, told the Post Register. “We’re not using the same surgical techniques we used 10 and 20 years ago, so why would this be any different? This is the highest level of transfusion medicine available.”

Petersen has tested and approved seven dogs from Idaho Falls for the Hemolife program and will test any dog for free that meets age, size and health requirements.

Hemolife in return will pay up to $300 per year in veterinary costs for dogs accepted into the program.

Petersen said a blood donation by a dog named Hurley in October helped save the life of a 100-pound Rottweiler named Maddie who was bleeding internally.

Sarah Jacobsen, a veterinarian at the Animal Health Clinic, said Maddie was anemic and needed a transfusion.

Petersen said it would have taken 24 hours to get blood from a lab in California, and Maddie wouldn’t have lasted that long. He had already screened Hurley and within three hours was able to get a blood transfusion for Maddie.

Both dogs are doing fine.

“If he hadn’t had a universal donor lined up, I’m not sure we could have saved her,” Jacobsen said.

Kelly Andrus, Hurley’s owner, said Hurley was comfortable during the procedure.

“You take it for granted and think that when you go to the clinic they will have blood, but you never think about what happens if a dog needs it,” Andrus said.

Korbyn Andrus, 8, said

she’s proud of Hurley.

“Hurley is a great dog, because he was able to give his blood to save another dog,” Korbyn said.

Otter cuts ties to arrested fundraiser

BOISE — Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter cut his 2010 campaign’s ties to a Republican consultant jailed this week for violating his felony drunken driving probation.

Jason Lehosit was arrested Wednesday after court officials said he violated probation conditions, including a ban on drinking. His business, Meridian Resources, has been paid more than $200,000 since 2008 by Republican candidates, including more than $70,000 from Otter.

Brenda Maynard Walters, an Otter campaigner, told the Idaho Statesman in an e-mail, “In light of these unfortunate circumstances, the Otter for Idaho campaign is ending its relationship with Meridian Resources.”

Vaughn Ward, a GOP U.S. House candidate, has also worked with Lehosit.

Ryan O’Barto, Ward’s spokesman, said the campaign was evaluating the situation before deciding on future work with Lehosit.

The Department of Correction is recommending Lehosit spend seven days in jail and develop a new treatment regime.

Simpson, Minnick vote to extend jobless benefits

BOISE — Idaho Reps. Mike Simpson and Walt Minnick are among the congressional leaders who voted to extend unemployment benefits for nearly two million people nationwide.

The measure cleared the U.S. House Thursday on a vote of 403-12, one day after it was approved in the Senate. The bill extends benefits for 14 weeks for those who have exhausted their federal aid or are close to doing so. The bill adds another six weeks of aid in states like Idaho where unemployment rates top 8.5 percent.

Minnick, a Democrat, says the bill offers important assurances for the thousands of Idaho workers looking for new jobs.

Simpson, a Republican, also praised a section in the bill that extends the a tax credit for first time home buyers.

President Obama signed the bill Friday.

Minnick also said he intends to vote against the health care reform bill coming up for a vote in the U.S. House.

Minnick, Idaho’s lone Democrat in Congress, says the new House bill fails to meet key goals for reforming the nation’s health care system. But Minnick says he likes some of what he’s seen in the Senate version.

Democratic leaders say they are still short of the votes needed to pass the sweeping reform package and are pushing a vote back to Sunday or early next week.

Minnick is part of a group of moderate Democrats opposed to the bill.

Minnick says he favors reforms in the insurance industry, reducing government spending on Medicare and reducing costs throughout the system. But he says the House bill falls short of doing those things.

Police: Boise man threatened to burn roommate

BOISE — A 23-year-old Boise man is in jail after police say he threatened to set his female roommate alight.

Johnathan E. Drake was arrested late Wednesday.

Witnesses told police Drake had been drinking and became angry at an adult female roommate.

They said Drake then sprayed the victim with the lighter fluid, while holding a lighter and making verbal threats.

Drake faces charges of aggravated battery, which covers spraying “any vitriol, corrosive acid, or a caustic chemical of any nature” on somebody.

He remains in Ada County Jail in Boise.

Man gets 10 years for operation that sent meth to Idaho

DURANGO, Colo. — A Mexican national has been sentenced to 10 years in prison for running a multi-state methamphetamine operation out of southwest Colorado.

Sergio Molinares Macias was sentenced Thursday by District Judge Jeffrey Wilson in Durango.

Prosecutors said Molinares’ La Plata County operation distributed methamphetamine in Arizona, Colorado, Utah, Oregon, New Mexico and Idaho. Undercover police working with the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration bought a half-pound of methamphetamine from the ring before arresting the 23-year-old Molinares.

Yellowstone cleans up fuel tank sites

CODY, Wyo. — Contractors are cleaning up several sites around Yellowstone National Park where leaky underground fuel tanks had contaminated soil and groundwater over the past few decades.

The park’s environmental protection specialist, Jim Evanoff, says some of the polluted sites are near pristine waters but don’t pose an immediate threat to drinking water.

The National Park Service is working with the Wyoming Department of Environmental Quality on the $3.5 million project.

Most of the 11 contamination sites are at service stations operated by concessionaires, and most of the leaks occurred or were discovered more than a decade ago.

NOTICE OF SALE
North Side Rentals, Inc., under provision of Idaho Code 28-7-210 will sell at Klaas Auction on November 10, 2009 the stored items of: Jim Kimble, Jerome, ID.

PUBLISH: October 31 and November 7, 2009

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE FIFTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT OF THE STATE OF IDAHO, IN AND FOR THE COUNTY OF CASSIA MAGISTRATE DIVISION

Case No. CV-2009-1179
NOTICE OF HEARING
IN THE MATTER OF THE PETITION FOR NAME CHANGE OF:
XAVIERE SAVAUN PAGE -CURIEL,
a minor child under eighteen (18) years of age.

A Petition by Xaviere Savaun Page-Curiel, born March 15, 1996, at Burley, Idaho, now residing in Burley, Cassia County, State of Idaho, proposing a change in name to Xaviere Savaun Page, has been filed in the above-entitled Court, the reason for the change in name being that Petitioner has been known by and used the last name "Page" since birth. Further, Petitioner has developed a strong bond with his biological mother and desires to use her maiden name of "Page." Petitioner has used the name of "Xaviere Savaun Page" since he has started school and it is the name his peers know him by and the name that he is more comfortable with.

The name of Petitioner's father is Guadalupe Curiel, of 472 East 500 South, Burley, Idaho 83318.

Such Petition will be heard on the 16th day of December, 2009, at 2:00 o'clock p.m., at the above-entitled Court, in Burley, Cassia County, Idaho, and objections may be filed by any person who can, in such objections, show the Court a good reason against such a change of name.

WITNESS: Larry A. Mickelsen, Clerk of the Magistrate Court, County of Cassia, State of Idaho, with the seal of the Court affixed this 3rd day of November, 2009.

/s/Deputy Clerk

WWW.MAGIC VALLEY.COM/ CLASSIFIEDS

DEAR ABBY: I am a 16-year-old guy in my sophomore year of high school. I am known as a friendly, outgoing guy who gets along with girls. My problem is, I used to be one of the biggest jerks who ever was. I was involved in fighting and other things I won't go into. But I turned my life around.

I was going out with an amazing girl, "Samantha." She always kept me in line, but was sweet about it. Recently, because I was ashamed of my past, I lied to her. She found out about it and, needless to say, she was very hurt. When I saw how hurt she was, I was sick to my stomach knowing how much pain I had caused such a trusting girl.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

I want to make things right, but I don't know where to start. I have talked to her since then, but things aren't the same. Please help.

—LOVESICKIN
KENNEWICK, WASH.
DEAR LOVESICK:
Apologize again to Samantha for not being completely truthful with her, and explain that you lied because you were ashamed about your past behavior and only wanted someone as special as she is to see you in a good light. Promise never to do it again.

If she likes you as much as you like her, she'll give you another chance. But remember, from here on you will have to be honest because if she catches you in another lie, she won't believe another word that comes out of your mouth. Enough said?

DEAR ABBY: I am blessed with many wonderful friends. We exchange small gifts on birthdays and at Christmas. As much as I appreciate the gifts, I am running out of room in my closets because I have too much stuff. Sometimes the gifts are not to my taste or they don't fit in with my decor.

How long should I keep an item before I donate it to a thrift shop? Is it ungracious to give it away? Am I obligated to display or use something I don't like?

I don't want to hurt anyone's feelings. I have tried suggesting that at our ages (50s and 60s) we should cut out the gift-giving, donate the money to charity and celebrate by going out to lunch on our birthdays. It didn't go over very well. They all enjoy the exchange of presents. I am happy to give one, but I really don't need anything more. Thanks for your help.

—TOO BLESSED IN

SANTA ANA, CALIF.
DEAR TOO BLESSED: It's not ungracious to give away something you can't use — in fact, the practice is so common there is a name for it. It's called "regifting." It won't cause hurt feelings as long as you are careful not to give an item back to the person who gave it to you.

Donating something to a thrift shop is also a practical way to get rid of it, and you can do it anytime you wish. One person's "castoff" can be another's treasure. Everybody wins and a worthwhile charity makes money.

Because you are "tinged out" and prefer divesting to accumulating, I recommend you stop "suggesting" and have a frank talk with your friends. Tell them you have everything you need, that their friendship — which you already have — is the most precious gift they could ever give you, and on birthdays from now on you'd much prefer meeting for your celebratory lunch, but please to donate whatever they'd spend on your gift to charity. After that, the ball's in their court.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Hope tells a flattering tale,
Delusive, vain, and hollow.
Ah! Let not hope prevail, Lest disappointment follow."
— Miss Wrother

West leads the club king against your heart slam. Can you see any way of making 12 tricks?

Curiously, your best chance is that East has no more than two clubs. After winning the club ace, you should cash the ace of trumps, then lead a low trump to dummy's 10. Next you ruff a club and play two more rounds of trump.

When you play your last trump, throwing a club from table, East is in trouble. You know he began with seven diamonds, a trump and, hopefully, two clubs. If East reduces to three diamonds, you will play the ace, king and another diamond. East wins the trick and has to return a spade, allowing you to take the last three tricks with the spade ace-king and the diamond nine. Whenever East keeps four diamonds, and so only two spades, you will counter by cashing the spade ace-king, reducing East to his four top diamonds. This allows you to make three of the last four tricks by leading the diamond two to dummy's 10. When East takes it with the jack or queen, he will be forced to lead a diamond, allowing your nine to take a trick, and you will have the rest.

It was vital to ruff a club; otherwise, East would defeat you by coming down to two spades, three diamonds and a club on the last trump. After winning his diamond, he would be able to play a club to his partner.

ANSWER: You may hate the idea of putting down a void in trumps in dummy, but any further action you take now would likely make matters worse. You are playing in partner's long suit (he has at least six). Making a call in a new suit is forcing and shows at least invitational values. So pass, and let partner suffer undoubted!

Today is Saturday, Nov. 7, the 311th day of 2009. There are 54 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Nov. 7, 1917, Russia's Bolshevik Revolution took place as forces led by Vladimir Ilyich Lenin overthrew the provisional government of Alexander Kerensky.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1874, the Republican Party was symbolized as an elephant in a cartoon drawn by Thomas Nast in Harper's Weekly.

In 1893, the state of Colorado granted its women the right to vote.

In 1916, Republican Jeannette Rankin of Montana became the first woman elected to Congress.

In 1940, in Washington state, the Tacoma Narrows Bridge, nicknamed
"Galloping Gertie," collapsed during a windstorm.

In 1944, President Franklin D. Roosevelt won an unprecedented fourth term in office, defeating Thomas E. Dewey.

In 1962, Richard Nixon, having lost California's gubernatorial race, held what he called his "last press conference," telling reporters, "You won't have Nixon to kick around anymore."

In 1967, President Lyndon
B. Johnson signed a bill establishing the Corporation for Public Broadcasting.

In 1972, President Richard Nixon was re-elected in a landslide over Democrat
George McGovern.

In 1973, Congress over-rode President Richard Nixon's veto of the War Powers Act, which limits a chief executive's power to wage war without congressional approval.

In 1989, L. Douglas Wilder won the governor's race in Virginia, becoming the first elected black governor in U.S. history; David N.
Dinkins was elected New York City's first black mayor.

Ten years ago: Relatives of the victims of EgyptAir Flight 990 gathered in Newport, R.I., to bid them a wrenching farewell, a week after the plane crashed into the Atlantic Ocean. Tiger Woods became the first golfer since Ben Hogan in 1953 to win four straight tournaments. Kenya's
Joseph Chebet won the New York City Marathon; Adriana Fernandez won the women's division.

Five years ago: France rolled out overwhelming military force to put down an explosion of anti-French violence in Ivory Coast, its former West African colony.
In the New York City
Marathon, Britain's Paula Radcliffe won the women's race, edging Kenya's Susan Chepkemei by only four seconds; South Africa's Hendrik Ramaala won the men's race. Actor and musical star Howard Keel died at age 85.

One year ago: In his first news conference since being elected president, Barack Obama called on Congress to extend unemployment benefits and pass a stimulus bill.
The government reported the unemployment rate had soared to 6.5 percent in Oct.
2008, up from 6.1 percent
just a month earlier. General Motors Corp. reported a $2.5 billion loss in the third quarter while Ford Motor Co. said it had lost $129 million. A school in Haiti collapsed, killing some 90 people.
Mieczyslaw Rakowski,
Poland's last communist-era party chairman and prime minister, died in Warsaw at age 81.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Bury the hatchet before someone can use it. Correct past misunderstands or resolve current conflicts.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Use soothing kindness early in the day to show a special someone how you really feel. A major purchase might not be necessary.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): More is not always merrier. Buying in bulk could seem like a bargain but ultimately could cost more if the excess is wasted.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Search for the deep wisdom in a problem or find humor in a dire situation. Surround yourself with plenty of friends and loved ones.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be content with what you have. Call on family members if you are in need and someone will quickly rally to your aid.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A minor financial windfall could slip through your fingers if you squander it. Make sure that you get the most value from your dollar.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A sweeping gesture in one direction could create conflicts in another. Embracing extreme opinions could lead to a long-term feud.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Realize that a conflict may be caused by emotional stress. Try to put your differences aside to achieve a mutual goal.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You can have too much of a good thing. Being too indulgent with simple pleasures can cause you to neglect other responsibilities.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The best things in life aren't always free. Sometimes your inner child demands a day of foolish fun — so, enjoy yourself today.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): If you have nothing good to say about someone, then say nothing. Being in the right place at the right time could boost your morale.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): As one door closes, another opens. Today's opportunity to do some social climbing can be used to your economic advantage.

SUDOKU

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Concepts Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
