Twin Falls veterans honored by Sen. Crapo

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

The sun fought to break through an overcast sky as patriots gathered in Twin Falls Wednesday for a solemn ceremony in honor of veterans.

The American and Idaho flags were placed in their stands in the band shell at Twin Falls City Park, along with flags representing branches of the military. Heads bowed in a moment of prayer led by Bill Lineberry, chaplain of the Marine Corps League of the Magic Valley.

"We know that the freedoms we enjoy as a people have come at a great price," he said.

Diana Obenauer, a retired Army colonel, echoed that theme in a speech.

"Generations of men and women have demonstrated their willingness to put their country before self," she said.

She encouraged all to keep the memories of veterans and their sacrifice alive for future generations.

"Let us always draw strength and inspiration from what they have done," said Obenauer, also a former Jerome County commissioner.

At the event, two Twin Falls veterans — Robert Jackson Jr. and Kathryn Peterson — were honored for their service with Spirit of Freedom awards from Sen. Mike Crapo's office. The awards were given to veterans and volunteers who support the military in five ceremonies across the state, including Twin Falls.

A.J. Church, regional director for Crapo, presented the awards to Jackson and Peterson.

Jackson served in the Navy for 22 years, participating in conflicts from Vietnam to Operation Desert Storm before retiring in 1992. Jackson said that service to country doesn't end when a veteran's time in the military is over.

Peterson had a 20-year military career with eight years in the Air Force and 12 years in the Navy. At the event, Peterson drove a cart that transported elderly veterans from their vehicles to the band shell.

"I was just proud to serve my country," she said.

The formal ceremony of the soldiers, the white tomb under the cloudy sky; Army Spc. Andrew Pike of Kimberly had never spent a Veterans Day like it.

Pike on Wednesday was one of two U.S. veterans to participate in a wreath ceremony at the Tomb of the Unknowns at Arlington National Cemetery in Virginia.

Invited to the event by the Paralyzed Veterans of America after taping a public service announcement for the group, Pike placed one of five wreaths on the tomb, a symbol of soldiers killed in America's wars who have never been identified.

He was also able to watch President Obama lay a wreath and then give an "inspiring" Veterans Day address, he told the Times-News on Wednesday evening.

Wendell fighting suit filed by former employee

By Andrea Jackson

GOODING — After settling three other lawsuits from former employees and recalling a mayor named in each, the city of Wendell could soon break free from years of litigation.

Wendell city officials face one last legal battle, a wrongful termination lawsuit, following the wake of three others over three years, according to court records.

So far, the city's insurer, Idaho Counties Risk Management Program (ICRMP), has shelled out $135,000 to two former employees who sued the city in 2006 and 2007. The latest case alleging wrongful termination was filed in 2008 from former Wastewater Operator David Diehl and could prompt another payout with a trial set for March 23.

According to the ICRMP, former Wendell Police Chief Dave Fisher was paid $60,000 in February 2008, and former lagoon worker Kenneth Davis received $75,000 in May 2007.

Judge may factor into Eden election challenge

By John Plestina

EDEN — A 5th District Court Judge may decide a complaint alleging illegal election practices against the city of Eden.

Deputy Secretary of State Tim Hurst said City Council candidate William Scates has up to 20 days after the Nov. 3 election to file an election contest with district court.

"I'm going to follow through in district court," Scates said Tuesday. "I have to do it within 20 days. Today I am getting an attorney."

Scates, who made an unsuccessful bid for the council as a write-in candidate on Nov. 3, alleged election corruption in a letter to the editor published Nov. 6 in the Times-News.

The former city councilman was one of several write-in candidates. He also alleged that some Eden voters told him they were unable to vote for the candidates they wanted and years ago by former Wendell City Clerk Carol Boudrou ended without any ICRMP settlement, despite claims in that former Mayor Rex Strickland — who was recalled in 2007 — had a “personal vendetta” against her.

Diehl’s case is the only lawsuit that remains against the city of Wendell, according to online court records. Judge John Butler Tuesday in Gooding County 5th District Court ordered that Diehl’s medical records be turned over to the city’s lawyers. The city sought the records “because Diehl’s economic expert witness has based his damage estimate upon information concerning Diehl’s medical condition.”

Diehl asks for more than $10,000, according to his lawsuit, filed after the city sent him a letter in 2007 saying that his position was eliminated and a new one created for a wastewater treatment plant that has yet to come to fruition.

“Your services will no longer be needed,” states the 2007 letter to Diehl, signed by Strickland. “The City Council would like to thank you for your years of service and hope the best in your new endeavors.”

Diehl’s former colleague, Davis, the lagoon worker, also got a termination letter that Strickland signed.

In the 2006 letter, Strickland said Davis did not file an accident report after damaging a city truck, according to court records.

“On asking why there had not been an accident report filed I was told that it was of insignificant damage,” Strickland wrote in the letter. “At that time I then fired Mr. Davis for not reporting the accident and not completing an accident report”

Davis, however, claimed in the lawsuit that he reported to Diehl, his supervisor, about the damage.

Former Wendell Police Chief Dave Fisher’s complaint was filed in 2006 and claimed he was terminated after returning from deployment to Iraq.

Despite the ICRMP payout for Fisher, though, the city disagreed with his claims until the end, according to court records. “Both sides simply agree that this lawsuit can be dismissed.”

Former city clerk Boudrou says Strickland played a role in at least some of the lawsuits against the city.

“I feel Strickland is responsible for a whole lot of this,” Boudrou said Wednesday.

A call to Strickland’s residential phone listing in Wendell was not immediately returned. Strickland was recalled by a margin of 312-164 after almost two years in office.

The city’s mayoral election this month ended in a coin toss. Mayor-elect Brad Christopherson declined Wednesday to comment on any of the lawsuits, after winning the seat this month from the incumbent mayor and former councilman Rick Cowen.

Cowen was appointed from the council to serve as mayor one month after Strickland’s recall.

Wendell City Councilman Jason Houser said Wednesday that Diehl is a family member by marriage, and he did not support Diehl’s termination.

With only one remaining lawsuit against the city, Houser said “I do see promise in the future.”

claimed that City Clerk Edith Utt told one person she could not vote for him. Scates also accused the city of “manipulation or coercing” in the letter.

Utt disputed Scates’ assertions.

“I’m as legal as legal can be,” she told the Times-News. “I ran my election by the way the Association of Idaho Cities told me to run it. I did everything they told me to.”

Nobody from the Association of Idaho Cities returned telephone calls from the Times-News on Friday and earlier this week.

Scates also wrote in his letter that some Eden residents told him they were shown a sample ballot with names already written on it, with his name on the bottom of the list.

“He (Scates) said I had sample ballots with people’s names on it. I did because the association told me to,” Utt said. “They had to know who was running and how to spell their names.”

She responded to an assertion by Scates that one Eden resident complained that she could not write in Scates’ name. Utt said the woman wanted to write Scates in for a four-year term and that he was running for a two-year seat.

Not so, Scates said. He said he told Utt he was a write-in candidate for a four-year position. He said Utt claimed the candidates with the fewest votes get the two-year term.

Hurst said the Secretary of State office is not investigating Eden because of jurisdiction but he questioned the presence of names of write-in candidates on a sample ballot.

“I had a conversation with Mr. Scates and I advised him to talk to the prosecuting attorney,” he said. “The prosecuting attorney would have to have determined that a crime was committed.”

Scates said Jerome County Prosecuting Attorney John Horgan told him to contact the Secretary of State’s office.

“They told me to contact our prosecuting attorney,” he said. “... I did submit a total summary to the prosecuting attorney so I assume he is going to do some investigation. I never really got a straight answer.”

He also said Horgan advised him to obtain legal advice. Horgan did not return a telephone call from the Times-News.

The Eden City Council canvassed the election Monday night.

“Our attorney was there and he informed the council and everybody that was there that everything was OK,” Utt said Tuesday.

The three people elected were Michelle Taylor, 52 votes, James Pierce, with 23, and Sierra Pattersall, with 33. Scates had five votes.

courage they have shown and the sacrifices that they have made,” Obama said in a brief speech following the wreath-laying. The president pledged he would do right by all veterans and their families, saying: “America will not let you down.”

It was a humbling experience for the soldier who was paralyzed from the waist down by a sniper more than two years ago in Iraq. Pike, part of the 82rd Airborne, was shot while on a foot patrol in March 2007 in Baiji.

“His words were honoring,” Pike said of the president, whom he did not get to meet personally. “He genuinely cares about his veterans.”

Pike flew into the Washington, D.C., area on Sunday with his wife, young daughter, brother and parents; his father is Twin Falls Police Capt. Brian Pike, and his brother, Daniel, serves with the U.S. Navy. The veteran had never actually visited Washington D.C. or Arlington before — the closest he came was a stay in Walter Reed Army Hospital — and he said he’s enjoying the opportunity. The family plans to spend until Saturday exploring the area.

Back home, Pike’s currently attending school to become a physician’s assistant and said he and his family are doing well. Though he’s assumedly used to being in the spotlight — his handicapped-accessible home, built using U.S. Department of Veterans Affairs grants and help from local residents, became a model for the grant program nationally — the wreath ceremony is an experience he won’t soon forget.

“It was an honor that is not given to many people,” he said.

Big crowd remembers Veterans Day in Buhl

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — It doesn't take much to make a veteran feel important.

Just remembering those who served with an extended hand, a tip of the hat or heart-felt thanks means the world to veterans, said Riley Maxwell, of Buhl, who retired from the Army as a chief warrant officer.

Maxwell, 88, played taps during a short ceremony held at the Veterans Memorial in Buhl's Eastman Park. He said he enjoyed hearing a few patriotic songs from the Popplewell Elementary School Honor Choir and seeing a crowd gather for the event.

"We've got a bigger crowd than we usually do," Maxwell said. "Maybe it's because of the current situation in Iraq, Afghanistan or even the shootings in Fort Hood. Maybe that has more people paying attention. Generally, people are pretty patriotic and they seem to be even more so this year."

Even though Maxwell wouldn't mind an indoor ceremony he didn't complain about the brisk autumn air. He was just proud to be part of such an event.

"This is great. It gets you," he said.

The elementary honor choir — made of nearly 100 third-, fourth- and fifth-graders — has been singing at the annual Veterans Day remembrance for many years, said Director Kathy LaGrone.

In addition to rehearsals, kids give up a few lunch recesses a week to be part of the select group that LaGrone prepares mentally as well.

"We talk of the meaning of Veterans Day, that the people present today served in wartime or knew, even lost, friends or family in war. I want them to understand the seriousness of the day," LaGrone said.

Fourth-grader Kasey Clements, 9, was proud to sing for the special event.

"I feel good because my Grandpa served in a war," Clements said.

The ceremony included a benediction by Charles Sheridan, city mayor and pastor of the Nazarene Church of Buhl, and guest speaker Mike Sweeney, of Buhl, a retired Marine Corps lieutenant colonel.

Shoshone pays homage to veterans

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — The Veterans Day message to Shoshone students was one of pride in being Americans, patriotism, love of country, service and reflection.

Col. Kevin P. Connolly, commander of the 366th Medical Group at Mountain Home Air Force Base, gave the keynote address at the annual Veterans Day program at Shoshone's K-12 school. The physician with 18 years service in the Air Force oversees the medical facility at the base of 361 military and civilian personnel.

"Who here is a Shoshone Indian and proud of it?" Connolly asked the students, using the school mascot as an example.

Cheers and applause followed.

"You are all hopefully future veterans," he said.

Connolly directed his attention to Lincoln County veterans sitting in a center section in the gym. They had served in several wars.

"I would especially like to thank all of our veterans here today. Your sacrifice will not be forgotten," he said. "The true strength of our military is men and women who wear the uniforms of our military?"

The Shoshone High School Choir performs 'God Bless America' during the annual Veterans Day program Wednesday at the school.

"Every man and woman who wears an American uniform is part of a long, unbreakable chain of valor," he said. "It's a legacy to be proud of. ... Veterans continue to serve long after they take off their uniforms."

He explained the history of Veterans Day to the audience comprised largely of students. Connolly told them the holiday's roots date to Nov. 11, 1918, and commemorate the truce signed between the United States and its allies with Germany, ending World War I. He told them Americans observed the first Armistice Day one year later. He went on to tell the students that Armistice Day became a legal holiday in 1938 and Congress renamed the holiday Veterans Day in 1954 because the day honors U.S. veterans of all wars.

Mountain Home Air Force Base officials assisted the Shoshone School District and its parent-teacher organization to present the annual program. The school has hosted the event for several years.

The Honor Color Guard Team and Singing Stripes group from the Mountain Home base participated.

Services for Army pilot killed in Iraq planned for Nov. 20

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

A U.S. Army pilot from Kimberly who was killed Sunday in a helicopter crash will be laid to rest next week.

Funeral services for Chief Warrant Officer Mathew C. Heffelfinger have been scheduled for Nov. 20 at the Kimberly LDS Stake Center, with burial following in Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls, according to a death notice submitted to the Times-News.

Heffelfinger, 29, and 24-year-old Chief Warrant Officer Earl R. Scott, of Jacksonville, Fla., died from injuries received when their OH-58D "Kiowa" helicopter crashed near Tikrit, Iraq. Scott was also a pilot; both were based out of Hawaii and assigned to the 2nd Squadron, 6th Cavalry Regiment, 25th Brigade Combat Team, 25th Infantry Division.

The military is investigating the crash, which was not combat-related.

According to the Army, Heffelfinger joined the service in April 2000 and has been based in Hawaii since December 2007. His medals indicate he served in one campaign in Afghanistan and two in Iraq, and he also held Army Aviator and Parachutist badges.

His body arrived Tuesday in Dover, Del., but family members have not learned yet when he will arrive in the Magic Valley or even where he'll be flown in, his father, Craig Heffelfinger, said Wednesday evening. The family is declining further comment out of respect for Mathew, who was a private, humble individual, his father said.

An honor guard is being arranged to accompany the pilot, and local veterans also said Wednesday that they hope to honor Heffelfinger when his casket arrives.

Robert S. Jackson Jr., with the Veterans of Foreign Wars, said that as soon as his group learns when Heffelfinger will be flown into Twin Falls, members will call veterans organizations to be at the airport.

"I believe it shows the solidarity of the veterans with the family," Jackson said. "Now we have one of our fallen comrades come home."

Hailey nears a nuisance ordinance

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

HAILEY — The Hailey City Council doesn't want to be a nuisance, but members are about to crack down on others who are.

The city is nearing completion of an ordinance to address things such as collapsing fences, cars propped up on cinder blocks, unsecured outdoor refrigerators and other hazards to health and safety. On Monday, the council decided to separate from that ordinance a clause that would have prohibited residents from parking on lawns or other areas not designated for parking.

Among the concerns council members had about that ordinance were neighborhoods such as Woodside, China Gardens and Old Hailey, where the small lots don't easily lend themselves to parking multiple vehicles, trailers, campers and boats.

"If we're going to ask to have density in the city, we've got to allow those folks to have their vehicles," said Councilwoman Carol Brown.

However, as Councilman Fritz Haemmerle noted, these vehicles sitting all over someone's land can be perceived as an eyesore, lowering property values.

"It's a real detriment to a neighborhood to have cars parked everywhere," he said. "I'm willing to walk away from it in this ordinance but I want it somewhere."

The parking issue may be added to another ordinance currently under review regarding public parking, or may be separated into another zoning ordinance.

Although the council was generally in favor of the nuisance ordinance, Councilwoman Martha Burke questioned whether it would produce the result the council was hoping for.

"I have been very concerned from the beginning that it will be misused, that neighbor will go after neighbor," she said. "What I'd like to see is neighbor go to neighbor, talk to each other."

The ordinance has been tabled until the next council meeting, to massage some legal language and remove the parking portion.

Shoshone trustees discuss superintendent search

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — With Superintendent Mel Wiseman retiring after the current school year, Shoshone school trustees on Tuesday discussed the process for finding a new superintendent.

Wiseman, 60, said he plans to retire in July 2010.

He said he will reach the "Rule of 90" for early retirement under the Public Employee Retirement System of Idaho, where his age and years of service total 90.

He said he has 27 years in education with combined service as a superintendent, principal and teacher. Wiseman said he has additional years of service as a public employee. A search committee for a replacement is not yet in place.

In other business, the board discussed retaining an existing hot-lunch policy that requires payment in advance.

Wiseman said with the ability for parents to pay for meals online with credit cards, most families are paying for lunches in advance.

There are full-price, reduced-price and free lunches available depending on family need. All students are eligible for free breakfast.

In another matter, the trustees voted to renew a lease with the Bureau of Land Management for BLM employee use of a weight room at the former high school on U.S. Highway 93. Also, FFA students that attended a national convention in Kentucky made a report to the board.

Glanbia applies for emissions change

Glanbia Foods Inc. has asked state regulators for permission to adjust its air-quality permit and system at its Richfield facility.

The Idaho Department of Environmental Quality will provide a comment period on the change if a written request for one is submitted by 5 p.m. Nov. 23.

Glanbia's request would slightly increase particulate matter the facility emits, though levels would still be within state requirements. The company would replace a fabric filter known as a "baghouse" with a wet scrubber using liquid to remove the particulate matter. It has also asked to convert its current Tier II operating permit into a permit to construct.

Requests should go to Faye Weber, Air Quality Division, DEQ State Office, 1410 N. Hilton, Boise, ID 83706; 208-373-0440; or faye.weber@deq.idaho.gov.

For more information: <http://www.deq.idaho.gov/public/comment.cfm>.

announced Monday.

Trees can be cut for personal use, and options include lodgepole pine, sub-alpine fir, Douglas fir and pinyon pine. Permits are $5 for trees up to 10 feet tall and $10 for trees from 11 to 20 feet tall. Only one tree is allowed per family or organization.

Areas off-limits to tree-cutting include campgrounds, administrative sites, ski areas, summer-home sites and organization camps. Forest officials urge people to be prepared when they go to cut their trees; skis or snowmobiles may be needed to reach some sites, and weather and road conditions can change rapidly in late fall and winter.

To get a permit, visit your nearby ranger district office, the Market Basket Store in Fairfield or the Rock Creek General Store south of Hansen.

Also, beginning Nov. 28, the Sawtooth National Recreation Area Headquarters will be open extra hours on Saturdays and Sundays, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. Weekend hours will continue through Dec. 20.

The department will install arches to support a wildlife overpass 10 miles north of Wells. The 66-foot-wide fenced overpass will direct mule deer and other large animals nearly 23 feet over the road, reducing collisions and other safety hazards. The approximately $1.8 million project is built by Rafael Construction and funded in part with federal stimulus.

Work will take place from 6 a.m. to 8 p.m. daily, when drivers should expect two-hour cycles of unrestricted travel, followed by two hours of delay. Flaggers will direct traffic. Vehicle loads larger than 14 feet wide or 18 feet tall should take an alternate route.

Ketchum Planning & Zoning delays River Run decision

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — It was all about the details, and being able to see them clearly, for the Ketchum Planning & Zoning Commission on Tuesday.

The commission was reviewing a plan by Sun Valley Co. and its developers to build a large hotel and village at River Run at the base of Bald Mountain. The commission has already recommended to the Ketchum City Council that it annex the 138-acre property; on Tuesday commission members considered a planned unit development proposal on 19 of those acres.

After three hours of discussion, the commission decided to hold off making a recommendation decision until it sees diagrams that are easier to read and clarifications on other figures.

“I don’t think there’s been one of us that hasn’t struggled to piece this together,” said Commissioner Steve Cook. “Could I vote on something? I’m not sure I could. We need to clean it up.”

Among the items the commission had concerns about were building heights, roofline lengths, view corridors, setbacks, and how sensitive areas near wetlands and the river will be treated.

Sun Valley Co. was represented by Director of Resorts and Resort Development Wally Huffman, as well as Denver-based Design Workshop president Becky Zimmerman and San Francisco-based Hornberger + Worstell architect Mark Hornberger.

They repeatedly reminded the commission that the buildings and developments are not yet fully designed, and that what the commission has been presented with is tentative.

“I’m concerned you’re requiring a level of exactness that doesn’t exist,” Zimmerman said.

Hornberger said that if more specifics are proposed, the eventual architect might be too constrained by them. “I think we’ll end up coming back to you,” he said.

The commission said it was sensitive to that but wanted to put in place enough details that an eventual architect won’t be operating under any false assumptions.

The developers will return to the commission at noon on Dec. 1, to present drawings and figures that more closely match what they have been asked for. The commission may then decide whether or not to recommend approval of the PUD to the Ketchum City Council, which will have the final say on both the annexation and PUD requests.

Burley man dies in wreck near Soda Springs

Times-News

Burley resident Reynaldo Nevarez died Wednesday morning after crashing a semi-trailer about 11 miles from Soda Springs along U.S. Highway 30, according to a press release from the Idaho State Police office in Pocatello.

During the 8 a.m. single-vehicle crash, Nevarez, 61, was headed east on the highway in a 2006 Volvo tractor pulling a tanker carrying milk.

Police said Nevarez was found deceased at the scene and they are investigating.

Blaine County may take over recycling

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Residents of Blaine County have been recycling for years, but the county has been contracting out recycling services. That could change soon, ending Blaine County’s status as the only county in the solid waste district to have a company run its recycling.

“It seems like a pretty simple changeover,” said Brett Gelskey, manager of the Ohio Gulch transfer station where solid waste and recyclables are taken by both citizens and Clear Creek Disposal.

“They’ve (the company) wanted to be out of the recycle business for many years, and this seems like the time.”

The county took up the consideration in Tuesday’s commission meeting. As it weighs whether to take over the service, the county is also planning to re-evaluate all policies that have been part of the contract.

“Why are we recycling, why is the county taking this on?” asked Commissioner Tom Bowman.

Commissioner Larry Schoen said that was a good question. “Right now it’s somebody else’s headache,” he said, noting that the county already has many responsibilities. However, he suggested the county may be able to manage the system better than a private organization.

Among the policies to be reconsidered is whether to continue accepting glass. It is currently gathered with other recyclables, but not recycled due to cost. Instead it is used as a buffer for landfills, with the idea that at some point in the future material could be removed from those holes and reused.

Bowman suggested that by ceasing to gather glass, citizens might be motivated to choose other packaging materials that are recyclable or take up less space in a landfill, such as aluminum cans or cardboard boxes.

There is not expected to be a significant financial impact to the county, as the county expects operations under its control to cost the same as operations under the current contract.

The county needs time to evaluate all its options, and Schoen, chairman of the commission, said he will return to this item at upcoming meetings.

Does BID make sense for downtown T.F. anymore?

Old Towne businessman Scott Featherstone’s campaign to disband the Historic Downtown Business District isn’t the first challenge to the 27-year-old marketing-and-development enterprise, but it may turn out to be the most serious yet.

That’s because more stakeholders than in the past agree with the Trail Creek Brewery owner’s assessment “that the status quo is not working.”

Would some private-sector marketing initiative — organized and paid for by voluntary contributions from businesses — be more successful? We don’t know. But it’s certainly time for some soul-searching by the BID and the businesses that support it.

Featherstone’s beef is that he pays $2,000 a year in BID dues, little of which goes to support marketing in his corner of downtown. Promotional events — Oktobefest, the annual Christmas season parade, midsummer free concerts — are held on Main Avenue, several blocks from properties such as Featherstone’s.

Some $22,700 of the organization’s funds are budgeted to pay for administrative services provided by the city economic development director and an assistant.

If downtown were thriving, we’re guessing that Old Towne business owners would be more amenable, but it’s not. Although a different allocation of resources by the BID might help, the real problem is the way downtown does business.

What has to change to consistently attract enough shoppers downtown to make the Townsite more viable?

The answers are neither new nor complex: Zoning to encourage the owners of downtown buildings to convert them to living space, more “destination businesses” such as Rudy’s — A Cook’s Paradise, Inspired Living and Red’s Trading Post that draw shoppers no matter where they’re located, some sort of economic incentives for luring retailers downtown and keeping them there, and most importantly, a redevelopment plan — a goal and a step-by-step process for achieving it.

The best marketing in the world can’t help downtown unless it can find a business model that works.

Jihadists infiltrate U.S. military

By now, the script should be disturbingly familiar. Whether in the Middle East, or increasingly in America, a fanatical Muslim blows up or goes on a shooting spree, killing many. This is quickly followed by “condemnations” from “Muslim civil rights groups,” like the Council on American-Islamic Relations. We are then warned by the president and some newspaper editorials not to jump to conclusions, or to stereotype. Yasser Arafat wrote this script, which he used with great success throughout his bloody career as a terrorist.

Cal Thomas

Suddenly, the issue of gays in the military doesn’t seem as important as jihadists in the military.

If you were an enemy of America, not only would you fight overseas and develop nuclear weapons (Iran), you would also engage in an even more effective strategy by striking at America’s underbelly. This is our most vulnerable region because we now tolerate virtually everything, indulge in political correctness and subscribe to a bogus belief that if radical Islamists can see we mean them no harm, they will mean us no harm.

The federal government at all levels has hired and promoted Muslims to influential positions. It requires “sensitivity training” for federal employees, including those who work at the FBI and the Department of Homeland Security (DHS). Last week, the House Judiciary Committee, dominated by liberal Democrats, defied the White House and removed from the USA Patriot Act a tool for tracking non-U.S. citizens in anti-terrorism investigations. As our enemies grow stronger and more emboldened, they see us becoming weaker and less committed.

No amount of evidence — from Koran verses urging the killing of “infidels,” to cries of “God is great,” reportedly shouted by the alleged Ft. Hood shooter, Maj. Nidal Malik Hasan — will cure our self-deception. Sun Tzu famously wrote that all war is deception. But it takes two to deceive and the United States is behaving like a willing partner.

People claiming to know Hasan told interviewers he made frequent statements against the wars and the U.S. presence in Islamic countries. Rep. Michael McCaul, Texas Republican, told reporters after he was briefed on the shootings that Hasan “took a lot of advanced training in shooting.” Why would a psychiatrist need advanced training in shooting unless he believed in murder as therapy? Shouldn’t that, coupled with his statements about “the aggressor” and other actions — including his preference for Muslim clothing — have alerted someone in authority that he might be a time bomb waiting to go off? Yes, absolutely. But who wants to jeopardize a career by raising such questions and becoming the target of “civil rights groups” and politically correct dupes? Intimidating Americans into silence when they know better is also a very effective strategy when fighting a war.

Sound minds not brainwashed by our own “re-educators” should have seen this coming. Though born in America to Jordanian immigrant parents, Hasan described himself as a “Palestinian.” He got into trouble by attempting to proselytize some of his patients.

Most top federal agencies, including the Pentagon and DHS, now have offices of “civil liberties,” offices recommended by the 9/11 Commission to focus on “outreach” to the Muslim community. In this, they follow efforts by the Bush administration, which dispatched Karen Hughes to tell Muslim women in Saudi Arabia that American women are so free they can drive their own cars. The Saudi women were not impressed.

It’s one thing to be suckered by others. It’s quite another to sucker yourself.

How much longer will we tolerate fighting this war as if it were a minor crime wave? Our enemies are fighting to win and they are fighting everywhere, including within our borders. People trained to appear nonthreatening, until the threat becomes obvious and it is too late to do anything about it, are infiltrating our government and society at every level.

It is irrelevant that some have put the number of radicalized Muslims worldwide at 10 percent. Even if that figure is accurate, 100 million jihadists can cause a lot of damage, as they plot the destruction of Western democracies. Other wars have been won with far fewer soldiers and far fewer dupes.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Favoring ‘old school’ education for students

Based on my personal experiences, Idaho taxpayers could save a lot of money while greatly improving education. However, it would require something that is ever more difficult to obtain, even though it is free: healthy minds and bodies, discipline, determination, insight and ability to deal with harsh reality.

I was educated in a public educational system where schools had no sound equipment, wall posters, valedictorians, advisers, counselors, nurses, librarians, cafeterias, vending machines, bands, sports teams, cheerleaders, intramural sports. There was not a single club or gang. Teenage crime and suicides was unheard of. Resource officers did not exist because each teacher had the ability to mete out immediate in-class punishment with its associated shame that no student wanted to suffer. The only non-academic employee in our school was a janitor. We had no study hall or teachers aides.

If students could not meet rigid academic standards, they had to repeat classes, try harder or flunk out. There were no “GED” or other kinds of programs. We had no assemblies, demonstrations, seminars or parent-teacher organizations. No courses in self-esteem or social agendas. No one took illegal drugs, and few people took even legal ones because of more healthy lifestyles and environments. Kids mostly entertained themselves by reading and playing outdoors.

Taping school principals to walls with duct tape or kissing pigs would have been considered insane. We were not taught about sex, were deprived and unprotected, but learned sciences, mathematics and foreign languages. We studied so hard that some of our textbooks became dog-eared and dirty. There were no school buses even though students came from other cities. Everyone paid for their textbooks, supplies, food and transportation.

Our school regimen developed strong character and prepared us well to deal with life’s challenges at much smaller cost than it does today.

Smart-grid power monitors need to be hacker resistant

Suddenly, we are under a push to switch over to “smart-grid” power metering.

On the surface, this technology holds vast potential: It could inspire many of us to conserve precious energy, and some Idaho communities are already doing this. However, we would be wise to ensure that these smart systems are highly hacker resistant, before wider-scale implementation.

For instance, imagine an enemy breaking into the grid to shut down the full configuration and potentially causing long-term damage to power lines, substations and home electrical systems. This is not farfetched, as nefarious hackers have already infected various financial institutions, global security systems and millions of personal computers. Smart-grid meters are equally susceptible to these types of online attacks.

As we use them more broadly, smart-grid power systems will likely edge up higher on the list of hacker targets. As this happens, leading members of our Idaho Public Utilities Commission would do well to take their oversight roles seriously on this important issue. It would be refreshing to hear our utility commissioners require Idaho Power to pass a wide array of ongoing security tests before granting statewide approval.

Otherwise, our too-clever-by-half, super-reliance on technology might reveal that the wisest owls in Idaho are those who thrive way up yonder in the piney-wood in smart-looking cabins, simply chopping firewood and carrying water, utterly off the wavering grid.

Forced school consolidation in Idaho unlikely

Now that the 2010 legislative session is two months away, Idaho's newspapers have turned to their favorite late fall sport: telling legislators what to do come January. Among the suggestions: Consolidate school districts to save some superintendent salaries and maybe improve school quality.

Forced school consolidation isn't going to happen anytime soon in Idaho for one simple reason: Idaho citizens, particularly in smaller communities, don't want it. Nor is it clearly even a good idea.

Small and modest-sized school districts are the norm among Idaho's school districts. At least 49 districts have fewer than 500 students. You don't have to drive very far in Idaho where one town after another has its own school district, small high school and a huge amount of local civic pride.

READER COMMENT
Stephen Hartgen

Consolidating these smaller units has long been the objective of some who see small schools as anachronism, unable to offer chemistry, physics and French at the high school and wasting energy on such activities as (horrors!) Friday night football, sometimes with only eight boys to a team.

But ask any legislator who represents a rural district and you'll get a different view. Small schools are often the main social and cultural center of their communities, and consolidation would likely mean the decline of the town itself. In my own District 23, I can't recall a single person telling me they want school consolidation. Three Creek, Filer and Castleford absorbed into Buhl? Not gonna happen. Some say legislators lack the political will to compel consolidation. Actually, it's the reverse. By not forcing consolidation on those who don't want it, we're exactly reflecting the will of our communities.

Nor is it clearly evident that consolidation would save much money or improve school quality. Consolidated districts still need principals, financial managers and grants coordinators, and consolidation often means these tasks get less attention than they should.

As for improving school quality, many studies show that students often thrive in smaller schools. Young people can easily get lost and overlooked in bigger schools. And as for so-called "quality," students from smaller schools routinely test as well as their big-school counterparts, although both could be higher. The key ingredients are teaching quality and the home environment and the dedication of the students themselves, not school size.

Furthermore, Idaho law already allows for voluntary school consolidation, which has occurred where it makes sense, including Minidoka and Cassia Counties. Other districts have considered this, including Richfield, Dietrich and Shoshone, but ultimately decided against it. And in at least one recent instance, two districts tried consolidation for a few years, then separated again when practical considerations shows it wasn't as good an idea as first believed.

Two other factors are at play here. One is that the growth of charter schools in Idaho is resulting in more schools, not fewer. School choice is driving charter school growth, in places as different as Gooding and Twin Falls. This trend brings its own challenges, but it is clear that charter school choice leads in the opposite direction from consolidation.

A second factor is the growth of digital learning in Idaho. The Idaho Digital Learning Academy and the rapidly developing Educational Learning Network are helping smaller districts by offering alternatives for such hard-to-staff teaching roles as chemistry, physics and specialized courses. As the IDLA and other digital opportunities expand, the logic of school consolidation is less of a valid argument. While consolidation of Idaho's school districts may seem a worthy goal to some, in practice it is politically unlikely and may not be good for our kids. Voluntary consolidation? Sure. It's an option now.

OTHER VIEWS

Here's what Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

Spokesman-Review, Spokane, Wash.

Mail-in voting has become popular in the states that have adopted it, despite the lag times in tabulating ballots and posting final election results. Voters have made it clear that the convenience of voting by mail outweighs any drawbacks. But legislative leaders in Boise haven't warmed to the idea of change, so voters have to put up with more hassles.

One of the more inexcusable hurdles is forcing voters who want an absentee ballot to formally request one before each election. That could mean multiple requests in a single year. When voters ask why they can't be given permanent absentee status, county clerks don't have a reasonable justification.

"It's the law" is about all they can say.

An initiative effort launched by Idaho Vote By Mail could change that. The organization hopes to gather the 51,712 signatures needed to put permanent absentee voting on the ballot for November 2012, which is a presidential election year, which promises a higher turnout. If it became law, then voters would only have to make a single request to automatically receive an absentee ballot for every election. The League of Women Voters of Idaho recently endorsed it.

It would be a lot easier to shift to an all mail-in system like those in Oregon and some Washington counties, including Spokane, but legislative leaders smothered that option during the 2007 session. A bill that had passed out of committee and appeared to have popular support was yanked back by the chairman over vague concerns about the possibility of voter fraud and secrecy breaches.

The same worries were also voiced in Oregon and Washington, but those issues haven't arisen. Besides, if Idaho lawmakers were really concerned about mailed ballots, they wouldn't allow any ... absentee voting.

The unspoken concern is that political leaders are reluctant to change a system that got them elected. Permanent absentee voting makes them nervous, because voters will increasingly choose that option. Once they do, then a complete switch to mail-in voting is inevitable ...

This is what voters want. It increases access and lowers election costs ...

It's a shame legislative leaders pulled the 2007 bill, because that would have been the cleaner way to make the switch ...

Homeless advocates may well be right: The city's shelters may be inadequate to meet a rising demand for help.

But the city's parks should not become overflow shelter space. These parks are a public asset, for the use and enjoyment of all Boiseans, and the City Council is responsible for preserving that asset.

So the council should heed the advice of city legal staff and pass an ordinance clarifying its ban on camping on city property. Next comes the hard part. The community needs to commit to finding a sustainable, and potentially costly, solution to its homeless problem.

The ordinance addresses symptoms of the homeless problem, symptoms serious enough to warrant the council's attention. Temporary or permanent camps can place a strain on police, sanitation and parks departments — and their budgets. And, as the ordinance says, camping "negatively impacts the cleanliness, beauty and peace of parks and the Boise River."

These are valid reasons for passing a tighter anti-camping ordinance — even if, to no small extent, the ordinance is redundant. All city parks close at sunset. Logistically speaking, that serves as a pretty clear deterrent to camping in the parks.

So why pass this ordinance? The timing is key. The city attorney's office is pushing for the tighter language while being forced to defend homeless enforcement policies in court. The National Center on Homelessness and Poverty contends that City Hall's enforcement constitutes cruel and unusual punishment, since homeless people cannot find shelter in overcrowded shelters ...

Between 2,000 and 4,500 people are seeking shelter every night, and shelters can accommodate only 700 of them.

These numbers suggest Boise's homeless problem is too deep-seated to solve with one ordinance. In fairness, City Hall already has other policies in place, including a hotel voucher program for families, and a new real-time tracking system that will help police officers match up homeless people with shelter beds ...

But the overall challenge for City Hall — and our society — is to make sure homeless people aren't forced, by default, to pitch a tent in a park ...

... jails and the ACLU

Idaho Press-Tribune, Nampa

After recently reaching a consent decree agreement with the American Civil Liberties Union regarding conditions at the Canyon County jail, the county and the ACLU have found themselves at odds again.

Although the two sides agree that the efforts to solve the jail dispute through a dissent decree are moving forward, they differ on the amount of attorney fees the ACLU should collect. The group has submitted a request for $180,000, and county officials don't think that's reasonable.

According to Monica Hopkins, executive director of the ACLU of Idaho, her organization offered to renegotiate the fees after that initial request was denied, but the county rejected that offer. Canyon County Prosecutor John Bujak said the ACLU is asking ... too much ... and is confident the courts would agree.

If the two sides can't reach an agreement ... the issue would likely go to court. That means more legal fees, which would ... be paid by taxpayers ...

County officials need to take the whole picture into account. If they believe a judge will rule in their favor ... they should stand tough.

But if it has become a battle of wills and an attempt to simply spite the organization, they should ... reach a settlement ...

Virtuous bankers? Really?

The Great Vampire Squid has gotten religion.

In an interview with The Sunday Times of London, the cocky chief of Goldman Sachs said he understands that a lot of people are "mad and bent out of shape" at blood-sucking banks.

"I know I could slit my wrists and people would cheer," Lloyd Blankfein, the CEO, told the reporter John Arlidge.

But the little people who are boiling simply don't understand. And Rolling Stone's Matt Taibbi, who unforgettably labeled Goldman "a great vampire squid wrapped around the face of humanity, relentlessly jamming its blood funnel into anything that smells like money," doesn't understand.

Banks, Blankfein explained, are really serving the greater good.

"We help companies to grow by helping them to raise capital," he said. "Companies that grow create wealth. This, in turn, allows people to have jobs that create more growth and more wealth. It's a virtuous cycle. We have a social purpose."

When Arlidge asked whether it's possible to make too much money, whether Goldman will ignore the people howling at the moon with rage and go on raking it in, getting richer than God, Blankfein grinned impishly and said he was "doing God's work."

Whether he knows it, he's referring back to The Protestant Ethic and The Spirit of Capitalism — except, of course, the Calvinists would have been outraged by the banks' vicious — not virtuous — cycle of greed and concupiscence.

Blankfein's trickle-down catechism isn't working. Now we have two economies. We have recovering banks while we have 10-plus percent unemployment and 17.5 percent underemployment. The gross thing about the Wall

Maureen Dowd

Street of the last decade is how much its success was not shared with society.

Goldmine Sachs, as its known, is out for Goldmine Sachs.

As many Americans continue to struggle, Goldman, Morgan Stanley and JPMorgan Chase, banks that took government bailout money after throwing the entire world into crisis, have said they will dish out $30 billion in bonuses — up 60 percent from last year.

The saying used to be, whatever happens, the lawyers win. Now, it's whatever happens, the bankers win.

Under pressure from regulators, who were trying to ensure that long-term performance was rewarded, the banks agreed to award more in stock, deferring cash payments.

But as The Times reported this week, the Goldman executives who got stock options instead of bonuses last year, at market lows, got a windfall — so it had nothing to do with bank employees' performance.

As one former Goldman banker told Arlidge, the culture there is "completely money-obsessed. ... There's always room — need — for more. If you are not getting a bigger house or a bigger boat, you're falling behind. It's an addiction."

It's an addiction that Washington has done little to quell. And as far as doing God's work, I think the bankers who took government money and then gave out obscene bonuses are the same self-interested sorts Jesus threw out of the temple.

Club disappointed by lack of news coverage

Junior Club of Magic Valley is an organization that, over the past 50 years, has given more than $400,000 through the efforts of all the members who have given untold hours to this community.

In order to celebrate and acknowledge the contributions of Junior Club, a 50-year anniversary celebration was held at the Turf Club this fall, and our associate members (those who have given five years of service to the club) and current active members gathered. We reminisced and looked back through scrapbooks highlighting the many projects we have participated in which funds to the chosen causes. We thank Steve Soran and the Turf Club for helping make this a big success!

The Times-News was contacted by the current club to provide coverage of this event that brought together women who traveled from as far away as Alexandria, Va., to remember our years of service and the friendships created. The scrapbooks we looked back through to revisit past projects featured numerous Times-News photos and articles.

It was very sad that our local newspaper opted not to

Idaho charter school denies state public records request

NAMPA (AP) — A new public charter school in southwestern Idaho has denied a state agency's request for documents regarding the potential use of religious texts in the classroom.

Nampa Classical Academy declined the public records request from the state Public Charter School Commission because attorneys advised it could jeopardize an ongoing lawsuit, said Michael Moffett, the school's acting board chairman.

Administrators at Nampa Classical Academy sued the charter school commission and other Idaho officials in federal court in September, saying the state illegally barred use of the Bible as an instructional text.

School officials said earlier this year they planned to use the Bible as a primary source of teaching material, but not to teach religion, when the school opened this fall.

The plan prompted the Idaho Public Charter School Commission to review use of religious texts in the classroom.

Commissioners decided in August that the school could not use the Bible and said the state constitution expressly limits use of religious texts.

The academy, which opened in September and is the third-largest public charter school in the state with more than 550 students, is fighting that decision in court.

In an e-mail to the commission on Friday, Moffett indicated he would not provide information regarding an assignment for seventh-grade students called "Comparing the Codex Hammurabi with the Mosaic Law?"

Capitol sparks public space dispute

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Capitol renovations aren't yet complete, but a dustup has already erupted over a rule limiting public exhibitions to a single floor — and the spat boils down to who's in charge.

The nine-member Idaho Capitol Commission, which oversees the Capitol, voted in August to restrict events to the fourth floor once it reopens Jan. 9 after two years and $122 million in taxpayer-funded expense.

The panel hopes to avoid the crowding of past shows in which exhibitors filled the rotunda with 100 or more booths, duct-taped cords to the marble floors and created a fire risk.

"It's chaos," said Dolores Crow, a former state lawmaker and Capitol Commission member, at its meeting last month. "I'm not in favor of turning that building over to what it has been in the past?"

The new guidelines also forbid attaching posters, stickers and banners to the walls, pillars, floors, staircases, statues, portraits or anything else. Loud or noisy events are prohibited, too.

The rules don't sit well with Buy Idaho, a nonprofit group with 1,100 members that normally spreads out on three rotunda floors for its annual display of Gem State goods and services.

Director Dale Peterson said being banished to one floor will hamper spreading the word about Idaho products to lawmakers, something he finds especially galling amid the deepest recession in decades.

"We find it difficult to understand why we're not being welcomed with open arms into the people's house," Peterson said. "There's been no damage in 17 years. Why would there be this time?"

Buy Idaho's event is set for Feb. 17 and the group rejected a counteroffer to use the fourth floor for an entire week, saying it needs more room.

Mike Gwartney, director of the Department of Administration, which maintains the Capitol, initially supported the rule as a Capitol Commission member. But he's also a close friend of Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter, who founded Buy Idaho 20 years ago.

So when the panel's majority declined to make an exception for the group at its Oct. 21 meeting, Gwartney armed himself with a legal opinion from his staff attorney concluding he had final say over the Capitol's public space. Last Thursday, he told Peterson the event could proceed.

"In extreme cases there may be a necessity for exceptions," Gwartney informed commission members in an e-mail. "Therefore, with all due respect, I am going to overrule the Commission's recommendation."

Not so fast, said Jeff Youtz, Legislative Services director and also a Capitol Commission member who favors the limits.

Gwartney's agency oversees the building's upkeep but it's up to the Capitol Commission to review and approve permanent or temporary exhibits, Youtz said.

The Legislature is now entering the fray.

By law, its presiding officers govern all space in the Capitol basement and on the first, third and fourth floors, while Otter controls the second floor, where his offices are located.

Senate President Pro Tem Bob Geddes and House Speaker Lawrence Denney hope to settle the dispute at the Nov. 18 Capitol Commission meeting. In an interview Tuesday, Geddes said he was sympathetic to Buy Idaho's concerns but doesn't want to jeopardize the recent renovations.

"Certainly, as we go forward, we need to make sure they understand if they are granted use in the Capitol, we're going to be watching very closely," he said.

DEBIT THE HALLS?

Consumer advocates urge caution when using debit cards

By Eileen AJ Connelly
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Your new frugal lifestyle is about to get tested by the biggest consumer challenge of the year — holiday shopping.

Even if you're among the thriftiest who have pared back spending and paid off debt this year, it's likely you'll open your wallet to decorate a bit and buy a few gifts in the weeks ahead. The National Retail Federation expects people to spend an average $683 on the festivities this season. That's down 3 percent from last year's $705, but it's still a substantial sum.

For many, part of the strategy for keeping on budget includes a plan to leave the credit cards at home and use a debit card at the checkout.

But before heading out to the stores with debit card in hand, make sure you understand the risks. Relying on a card that links directly to your bank accounts, and has less protection than credit, could create more financial problems than high interest rates if the card is lost or stolen. Some advocates even say you shouldn't ever carry debit cards, because they offer less protection from thieves than credit.

At the very least, you should know when and where it's not a good idea to use such a card.

See DEBIT, Business 2

In this file photo, a customer swipes a MasterCard debit card through a machine while checking out at a shop in Seattle. For many, part of the strategy for keeping on budget includes a plan to leave the credit cards at home and use a debit card at the checkout.

Keep these tips in mind:

- EMPTY YOUR WALLET. Pickpocketing increases during the holidays. Make sure you aren't carrying any cards you don't need, and keep those at home in a secure location.
- DON'T LET YOUR CARD OUT OF YOUR SIGHT. Don't use your debit card in places like restaurants or bars, where it's taken away to process the transaction, said Jennifer Leuer, general manager of ProtectMyID.com. There's a bigger chance that it could be put through a "skimmer," a device thieves use to read the information on the card, she said. Even when a purchase is handled in front of you, make sure you keep a close eye on the clerk and be alert for unusual behavior like multiple swipes of your card.
- BE CAUTIOUS WHEN USING ATMS. Freestanding, nonbank ATMs are more vulnerable than those located at bank branches, especially those that are not in major chain stores. And even bank machines can have skimming devices attached. Thieves may also plant tiny cameras in hard-to-notice spots to record your PIN number as you punch it in. If something seems unusual, don't use the machine.
- PROTECT YOUR PIN. Take a look around to make sure no one is watching before using an ATM or entering your PIN, said Gregory B. Meyer of Meriwest Credit Union in San Jose, Calif. Cover your hand if you must.
- BE ON GUARD ONLINE. Experts are mixed on whether shopping online is safe. If you haven't updated your computer's security lately, you're definitely taking unnecessary chances, Meyer said. Make sure your security software is up-to-date, and avoid shopping on sites that don't have a bright green banner in the address bar when you're checking out. That green banner indicates the site meets the industry standard for online safety.

Remote Travelers can keep an eye on home control:

By Melissa Kossler Dutton

This photo released by Protection One shows how your cell phone can be used as a home security monitor.

This holiday season, many travelers will be able to keep a close eye on home.

Thanks to new security system technology, including live video feed, you can monitor everything from the front door to the sump pump from hundreds of miles away.

"You can see anything that's going on from anywhere in the world," said Jay Park of Park Place Installations in Buffalo, N.Y.

Homeowners can set the new alarm systems to send text messages or e-mails when something goes wrong at home.

Eric Harper, marketing director of the Lexington, Ky.-based Elan Home Systems, said a customer was on vacation recently when he got a message that his front door was open. He confirmed it by going online and pulling up feed from a camera by that door. A neighbor followed up, discovering that the pet sitter had not pulled the door firmly shut and it blew open in a storm.

New York City resident Eli Karp said he uses his cell phone to check his house about 10 times a day. His HomeLogic alarm system offers live video feed from inside the house, and Karp also can disarm the security system by phone to let in workers or delivery people.

"It's a time saver," he said. "It's extra peace of mind."

Homeowners can monitor the weather, as well as heating and cooling units and other household systems while traveling, said Richard Ginsburg, president of Protection One, based in Lawrence, Kan. Cameras show whether it's

Macy's posts smaller 3Q loss, raises outlook

NEW YORK (AP) — Macy's Inc. reported a smaller third-quarter loss as the department store operator benefited from tight inventory controls and a move to localize merchandise by region, leading it to raise its full-year profit and sales outlook.

The profit outlook, however, didn't go as high as analysts expected, and shares fell 76 cents, or 3.9 percent, to $18.67 in pre-market trading.

Some of the company's best-performing districts were the original test beds for the locally tailored merchandise. Other bright spots were its growing Internet business and rebounding sales performance at Bloomingdale's, another sign that affluent shoppers are slowly going back to shopping after a sudden retreat last fall.

The department store operator, based in Cincinnati, said Wednesday that it lost $35 million, or 8 cents per share, in the

Walmart to keep stores open to ease Black Friday

BENTONVILLE, Ark. (AP) — Walmart Stores said Wednesday it will keep its stores open 24 hours and take new crowd-control measures Thanksgiving weekend after a temporary employee was trampled to death in a Black Friday rush last year.

The world's largest retailer says day-after-Thanksgiving sales will begin at 5 a.m. Nov. 27, but most U.S. stores will be open 24 hours to prevent a mad dash. The announcement doesn't affect most of Walmart's Supercenters, which are already open 24 hours.

In the Magic Valley, Walmart operates stores in Burley, Jerome and Twin Falls.

Federal safety regulators cited Walmart for inadequate crowd management after the Nov. 28, 2008, death of a temporary employee at a Long Island, N.Y., store. A crowd of shoppers broke down the store's doors, trapping employee Jdimytai Damour, who died of asphyxiation.

Walmart said in a statement that it consulted with safety experts in the sports and entertainment industries to develop store-specific plans for all U.S. locations. Each plan looked at how customers approach and enter the store, how they check out and leave, as well as how customers move around the store and near the biggest bargains, Walmart said.

A spokesman for the Bentonville, Ark.-based retailer didn't immediately return a call for comment Wednesday.

Shoppers around the country line up early outside stores on the day after Thanksgiving in the annual bargain-hunting ritual known as Black Friday. It got that name because it traditionally was considered the day stores broke into profitability for the full year.

Small businesses downsize real estate, save money

There's a downsizing trend under way at many small businesses: Moving to smaller offices because of shrinking staffs and as more workers telecommute.

Owners say they're saving money on real estate, office furniture and other expenses by letting employees work from home or by using independent contractors who don't work on-site. And those who have cut staffers obviously don't need to provide space for them.

Adrienne Giannone, CEO of Edge Electronics, has turned seven salespeople in Texas, Florida and California into telecommuters, enabling her to shut those offices. That helped her to expand her headquarters space in Bohemia, on New York's Long Island, and hire more employees there.

"I'd rather keep my people and not spend the money on the bricks and mortar," said Giannone, whose company sells electronics components and displays.

The workers weren't sure at first about working from home, but Giannone said they soon realized they were saving money and time by not commuting. "There's a big savings overall," she said.

Like many other owners, Giannone found that the Internet made it easy to keep in close touch with far-flung workers.

SMALL TALK
Joyce M. Rosenberg

Many kinds of businesses can downsize their real estate by having more people work off-site.

Employees whose job is to handle customer service calls can do that at home. So can writers or graphic artists. Anyone whose work is done in client offices probably doesn't need a permanent desk either, and should be able to share with other staffers who are also moving about.

The constant improvements over the years in technology have helped many kinds of businesses use less real estate. Law firms, for example, don't need to have the huge libraries filled with books that were crucial before cases and commentaries became available online. Machines like photo-copiers and computers have become more compact. And software has made it possible for businesses to dispense with the typists and stenographers who were once office mainstays.

The latest downsizing

Brown pelicans taken off endangered list

Much like its death-defying dives for fish, the brown pelican has resurfaced after plummeting to the brink of extinction.

Interior Department officials on Wednesday announced that they were taking the bird off the endangered species list, after a nearly four-decade struggle to keep the brown pelican population afloat.

The bird now prevalent across Florida, the Gulf and Pacific coasts and the Caribbean was declared an endangered species in 1970, after its population — much like those of the bald eagle and peregrine falcon — was decimated by the use of the pesticide DDT. The chemical, consumed when the pelican ate tainted fish, caused it to lay eggs with shells so thin they broke during incubation.

The pelican's recovery is largely due to a 1972 ban on DDT, coupled with efforts by states and conservation groups to protect its nesting sites and monitor its population, Interior Department officials said.

ARKANSAS

Jury convicts man in newswoman's death

LITTLE ROCK — A man was convicted of capital murder Wednesday for beating an Arkansas TV anchorwoman so brutally that her face was shattered and she never regained consciousness before dying five days later.

Curtis Lavelle Vance could face the death penalty for the assault on 26-year-old Anne Pressly at her Little Rock bungalow. The same jury that convicted him reconvened to hear testimony about whether he should be put to death or imprisoned without the possibility of parole.

After the verdict, Pressly's mother, Patti Cannady, raised a hand and said, "Praise God. Praise God." She burst into sobs.

Vance, 29, of Marianna, was also convicted of residential burglary along with rape and theft of property in the Oct. 20, 2008, attack. Once jurors delivered the guilty verdict, Vance gestured toward the empty jury box, pointed to his eyes and ears and shook his head.

In various confessions made to police, Vance said he went to Pressly's neighborhood looking to steal laptop computers.

After entering her home through a Dutch door she left open for her dogs, authorities said, Vance found the computer he sought — and Pressly.

TENNESSEE

Taylor Swift wins CMA entertainer of year

NASHVILLE — It's been Taylor Swift's year, and Wednesday was her night as she became the youngest person and the first solo female act in a decade to win the Country Music Association's entertainer of the year award.

Swift won all four awards for which she was nominated, making history on a historic night that included Darius Rucker's win as new artist.

"I'll never forget this moment because in this moment everything that I have ever wanted has just happened to me," Swift said through tears as she accepted the association's highest honor during ceremonies at Sommet Center.

The 19-year-old crossover sensation beat the biggest names in country and snapped Kenny Chesney's stranglehold on the category: He won three straight and four of the last five. She also ended Carrie Underwood's three-year dominance in the female vocalist category.

Report: 10 states face looming budget disasters

By Judy Lin

Associated Press writer

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — In Arizona, the budget has grown so gloomy that lawmakers are considering mortgaging Capitol buildings. In Michigan, state officials dealing with the nation's highest unemployment rate are slashing spending on schools and health care.

Drastic financial remedies are no longer limited to California, where a historic budget crisis earlier this year grew so bad that state agencies issued IOUs to pay bills.

A study released Wednesday warned that at least nine other big states are also barreling toward economic disaster, raising the likelihood of higher taxes, more government layoffs and deep cuts in services.

The report by the Pew Center on the States found that Arizona, Florida, Illinois, Michigan, Nevada, New Jersey, Oregon, Rhode Island and Wisconsin are also at grave risk, although Wisconsin officials disputed the findings. Double-digit budget gaps, rising unemployment, high foreclosure rates and built-in budget constraints are the key reasons.

"While California often takes the spotlight, other states are facing hardships just as daunting," said Susan Urahn, managing director of the Washington, D.C.-based center. "Decisions these states make as they try to navigate the recession will play a role in how quickly the entire nation recovers."

The analysis, "Beyond California: States in Fiscal Peril," urged lawmakers and governors in those states to take quick action to head off a wider catastrophe. The 10 states account for more than one-third of the nation's population and economic output, according to the report.

Historically, states have their worst tax revenue year soon after a national recession ends. At the same time, higher joblessness and underemployment mean more people need government-sponsored health care and social safety-net programs, further taxing state services.

A grateful nation

Obama honors veterans at Arlington cemetery

ARLINGTON, Va. — On a cold, rain-soaked Veterans Day, President Barack Obama walked slowly through the white, stone markers at the section of Arlington National Cemetery reserved for troops killed in Iraq and Afghanistan, the two wars he oversees as commander in chief.

Obama led the nation Wednesday in observing Veterans Day with a traditional wreath-laying ceremony at the Tomb of the Unknowns at Arlington before an unannounced visit to the section reserved for those who fought in Iraq and Afghanistan.

"We gather here mindful that the generation serving today already deserves a place alongside previous generations for the courage they have shown and the sacrifices that they have made," Obama said in a brief speech following the wreath-laying. Obama pledged he would do right by all veterans and families, saying: "America will not let you down."

The president spoke one day after honoring the victims of a shooting rampage at Fort Hood, Texas. He said he was struck by the determination of the soldiers there, a quality that unites generations of American servicemen.

"To all of them — to our veterans, to the fallen and to their families — there is no tribute, no commemoration, no praise that can truly match the magnitude of your service and your sacrifice," he said.

The nation observed Veterans Day from remembrances at the nation's capital to a New York City parade to ceremonies in towns and cities across the nation and overseas.

At Camp Eggers in Kabul, soldiers observed a moment of silence for the more than 800 U.S. service members who have died in Afghanistan, Pakistan and Uzbekistan since the 2001 invasion to oust the Taliban regime.

The Navajo Code Talkers were special guests at the New York parade's opening ceremony, where a wreath was laid at the World War I Eternal Light Monument in Madison Square Park. As young Marines during World War II, the Code Talkers used secret Navajo language-encrypted military terms that the Japanese were never able to crack.

As the Code Talkers were introduced, the crowd — which included World War II veteran and actor Tony Curtis — let out a loud cheer.

Boston College dedicated a 70-foot-long granite wall bearing the names of 209 alumni who lost their lives while serving in a war zone. Bells tolled in three sets of 11 from the college's historic Gasson Tower, symbolizing the exact time that an armistice was declared in World War I. Harvard unveiled a plaque on campus to honor the university's alumni who have received the Medal of Honor. The university has 16 winners.

Hundreds of Minnesota military veterans and family members filled a community center gymnasium in the suburbs of St. Paul to hear words of thanks from state political leaders. The ceremony drew veterans ranging from young enlisted soldiers to retired generals.

"The title of veteran deserves great respect in America," Minnesota Gov. Tim Pawlenty said. "Veteran stands for a life dedication to our nation's greatest cause — the cause of freedom."

An American Red Cross event in Washington kicked off the start of a program called Holiday Mail for Heroes, which lets the public send holiday greeting cards that aren't addressed to a particular service member.

Under a Defense Department policy, ordinary mail addressed to "any soldier" has to be returned to the sender. The cards will be screened, sorted and distributed to military hospitals and bases nationally and overseas as well as to veterans and military family members.

Lou Dobbs, praised and criticized, to quit CNN

By David Bauder

Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — CNN's Lou Dobbs, a lightning rod for criticism following his transition from a business journalist to an opinionated anchor on such issues as illegal immigration, told viewers on Wednesday that he was quitting his nightly show to pursue new opportunities.

"This will be my last broadcast," Dobbs said after giving the day's headlines. Dobbs, who hosts a daily radio show unrelated to CNN, said the network had allowed him to be released early from his contract.

Dobbs was a CNN original, signing on when the cable network started in 1980. For much of that time, he hosted a nightly business broadcast that became one of the most influential shows in the corporate world, and CNN's most profitable show for advertising revenue.

But Dobbs said his world view changed after the 2001 terrorist attacks and corporate corruption scandals, and he began to more freely express his opinions. He was particularly persistent in bringing the immigration issue to the fore, winning him both higher ratings and enemies. Latino groups had an active petition drive seeking his removal.

His presence became awkward for CNN, particularly as it began emphasizing reporting and non-opinion shows. He angered management this summer by pressing questions about President Obama's birth site after CNN reporters determined there was no issue.

Dobbs said the decision came after months of discussion with CNN U.S. President Jon Klein. Dobbs said he wanted to concentrate on his role as a commentator and on advocacy journalism.

"With characteristic forthrightness, Lou has now decided to carry the banner of advocacy journalism elsewhere," Klein said. "We respect his decision."

Dobbs said he was proud of his role in helping to build the first cable news network. He said some leaders in media, politics and business "have been urging me to go beyond my role here at CNN and to engage in constructive problem-solving."

Seated at an anchor desk in front of a screen with a fluttering American flag, Dobbs mentioned his interest in issues such as health care, jobs, immigration, climate change and the wars.

"Unfortunately, these issues are now defined in the public arena by partisanship and ideology rather than rigorous empirical thought and forthright analysis and discussion," he said.

Cops seek child abuse clues on Missouri farm

By Bill Draper

and Heather Hollingsworth

Associated Press writers

LEXINGTON, Mo. — Authorities on Wednesday searched a rural property in western Missouri for bodies and buried glass jars containing notes written more than 15 years ago by children who may have documented sexual abuse by five members of their own family.

Lafayette County Sheriff Kerrick Alumbaugh pleaded for the public's help, saying investigators "believe that there are other victims out there, and we believe people in the public can give us more information."

Alumbaugh said authorities believe there may be bodies buried on the property once owned by two of the five family members arrested Tuesday. He refused to say to whom any of the bodies would have belonged. The property and a nearby home is currently owned by a man unrelated to the case who is cooperating with authorities.

Three of the five men arrested are lay ministers in the Community of Christ church whose licenses have been suspended, church spokeswoman Linda L. Booth said.

The five are charged with several felonies, including forcible sodomy, rape with a child younger than 12 and use of a child in a sexual performance. The allegations, which include bestiality, forcing children into fake marriages with relatives and making an 11-year-old have an abortion, date from 1988 to 1995.

Cpl. Bill Lowe of the Missouri State Highway Patrol said a 26-year-old woman came forward to investigators in mid-August with the allegations. A probable cause statement released by the Lafayette County prosecutor's office says five other siblings of the woman have accused all five men of abuse, but it's unclear whether all the siblings were claiming to be victims.

Lowe said the woman told investigators that she and her siblings had buried glass jars around the property that were filled with messages "about what was happening to them" when they were younger. The woman said she had "suppressed many of the memories of abuse perpetrated on her" and her siblings, according to the probable cause statement.

Sgt. Collin Stosberg of the highway patrol said the adults told the children to write down their bad memories.

"That was what they were told. Write these memories down, put them in a jar and bury it and the memories would go away," Stosberg said. "It was a way for them to cope."

The probable cause statement identifies the relationship between the siblings and the suspects. The Associated Press, however, is not revealing that relationship to avoid identifying the alleged victims of sexual assault.

Setback in Bear Stearns case may force gov't shift

By Marcy Gordon
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The swift acquittal of two Bear Stearns executives in the government's criminal case tied to the financial meltdown likely will force prosecutors to rethink the evidence they planned to present in a raft of cases that have yet to go to trial, legal experts say.

Criminal cases may be percolating against executives at fallen mortgage lender Countrywide Financial Corp. and bailed-out insurance giant American International Group Inc., among others. The Bear Stearns acquittals show how tough it can be to prove that bank executives committed fraud by lying to investors.

The government must show that executives were actually committing fraud and not simply doing their best to manage the worst financial crisis in decades, said Michael Levy, a white-collar defense attorney at Bingham McCutchen in Washington. Jurors were not swayed by e-mails the government presented in the Bear Stearns case.

Fraud is "a very difficult theory for the government to prevail on in the context of an unprecedented financial crisis," Levy said.

Federal prosecutors and the Securities and Exchange Commission have launched wide-ranging investigations of companies across the financial services industry. But a year after the crisis struck, charges haven't yet come in most of the probes. The investigations also are targeting government-owned mortgage financiers Fannie Mae and Freddie Mac and crisis casualty Lehman Brothers.

The Bear Stearns case was the second case to go to trial, following the conviction in August of a former Credit Suisse broker on conspiracy and securities fraud charges in connection with a $1 billion subprime mortgage fraud.

That's a sharp contrast to the 2002 corporate accounting scandals that engulfed Enron, World Com and other companies. Back then, "perp walks" seemed to occur almost daily, and news conferences brought announcements of charges against a series of executives and high-profile individuals.

Tuesday's not-guilty verdict dealt a setback to the Justice Department. It "will cause prosecutors to rethink any future cases related to the financial meltdown," said Robert Mintz, a former federal prosecutor who is a private defense attorney.

The Justice Department "remains committed to following the facts and the evidence where they lead," spokeswoman Laura Sweeney said Wednesday. "If we believe the actions of individuals or companies were criminal, we will pursue those cases aggressively."

The two Bear Stearns executives, Ralph Cioffi and Matthew Tannin, ran hedge funds that collapsed after betting heavily on the shaky subprime mortgage market. The jurors in federal court in Brooklyn, N.Y., acquitted the pair of conspiracy and other charges in an alleged scheme that cost investors about $1.6 billion.

The jurors said they decided that e-mail evidence presented against Cioffi and Tannin was contradictory and taken out of context and that the executives were blamed for a market cataclysm beyond their control.

The e-mails written by the two showed anxiety over the slide in the subprime market and what it could do to the hedge funds' investments. Jurors said they didn't prove intent to deceive investors. In a panicky situation where circumstances shifted by the hour or minute, the e-mails could have conveyed "mixed messages" to a jury, Mintz said. In future cases, prosecutors will have to take care to present "clear and unambiguous evidence of wrongdoing and concealment," he added.

The SEC, for its part, sued the two Bear Stearns executives in a civil action last spring. That case is expected to proceed.

Boom times for precious metal as dollar sinks

By Dave Carpenter
Associated Press writer

CHICAGO — The new gold rush is on.

The price of the precious metal is soaring, hitting a record $1,119 an ounce on Wednesday — confounding market analysts who thought there was no way gold would remain so expensive when it first cracked the unheard-of $1,000 mark last year.

The remarkable run has implications far beyond savvy investors. In New York's diamond district, more people started showing up late last year to sell their gold, and the crush hasn't let up, said Anthony Iannelli, owner of Iannelli Diamonds.

"They're bringing in jewelry from the '70s and '80s they don't wear anymore," he said. "They're following the news and see prices are high. They realize they have a little cache, and want to take it out of the vault."

Typically, gold is a safe place for investors to park their money, not something they buy to make money. It doesn't earn any interest, and because it's always sought-after, its value tends to be fairly stable.

For example, gold first reached $1,000 in March 2008, shortly after the collapse of investment bank Bear Stearns. Investors bought it up then because they feared for the stability of the financial system.

This time is different. Investors are buying gold to protect themselves against the falling dollar.

Currencies are weak investments around the world because of record-low interest rates. Foreign banks that hold substantial amounts of U.S. debt, such as China's, want to diversify their holdings.

News earlier this month that India's central bank bought nearly $7 billion worth of gold from the International Monetary Fund triggered a frenzy of gold buying.

The surge has been remarkable. Gold is up 7 percent just this month, and 26 percent for the year. Some forecasters see it going to $1,200, $1,500 or beyond — unless the buying frenzy comes to a halt.

Some analysts are panning the gold speculation.

"You just don't see increases like this over the short term" that last, says Steve Condon, director of investor advisory services for Truepoint Capital in Cincinnati. "This isn't materially different from gambling."

Nevertheless, people across the country are cashing in. More than 100 people a day now come to sell their gold at Ernest Perry's antique and estate jewelry store in Charlotte, N.C., up significantly in recent weeks.

But the rising price of gold has put a dramatic dent in jewelry sales, already suffering from the recession. Far fewer customers are looking to buy gold jewelry because of the soaring price, Perry said.

"I think it will just about kill the gold jewelry business" if the price rises and remains above $1,500 an ounce, Perry said. He predicted silver would become the primary metal used in jewelry if gold prices drive customers out of the market.

For the most part, though, demand for gold is coming from investors and speculators, not from people who actually want to use it.

Demand for gold for jewelry and for industrial and dental uses was already falling during the second quarter, according to the latest data available from the World Gold Council.

Perry said customers looking to sell their gold should go to dealers with plenty of experience and expect to get, on average, about 70 percent of the current price. And there are other ways to get into gold than selling family heirlooms.

Record gold prices

The price of gold is up 26 percent year-to-date, continuing to rise to record levels.

Red Bull introduces Energy Shot

Caffeine. Taurine. Glucuronolactone. These are the energizing — and sometimes controversial — ingredients that have fueled untold millions of outdoors and action-sports types since 1996 when a previously unknown blue and silver can appeared on shelves in the U.S. market.

THE GEAR JUNKIE
Stephen Regenold

Red Bull Energy Drink is now a fixture from cyclocross bike races to climbing competitions with active people looking for a subtle chemical edge. A boost in the guise of a beverage is an accepted performance-enhancing procedure and a ritual for some as common as a morning cup of coffee.

New this year, Red Bull unveiled a concentrated version of its original energy drink. The Red Bull Energy Shot comes in a tiny re-sealable vessel. Inside, two liquid ounces of non-carbonated concentrate serve as an even quicker way to get Red Bull's energizing constituents into your system.

The small plastic cans do not need to be refrigerated. They are solid and will not burst if sat on or tossed around. You can stash a couple in your backpack on a wilderness trip for a morning jolt in place of coffee.

Red Bull promises the "same great taste" with its Energy Shot as found in the original Red Bull Energy Drink. Love it or not, the same tangy flavor is present in the little cans, though it's even stronger with the non-carbonated Shots.

The Red Bull Energy Shots cost about $2.50 each. They come in a regular (with sugar) version and a Sugarfree Shot variety.

Each Energy Shot can has 80mg of caffeine — about the same amount as you'll get from an espresso shot. That's not to mention the taurine, glucuronolactone, and other ingredients Red Bull adds to tout as perpetuating human performance via the simple action of sipping liquid from a can.

Horsemen's group cleans trails, hosts convention

By John E. Swayze

Almost every weekend will find them in the saddle leading pack trains along trails in the South Hills.

But on Saturday, members of the High Desert Back County Horsemen will be hosting the Back Country Horsemen of Idaho Convention at the Red Lion Canyon Springs Inn in Twin Falls.

"We organized the convention several years ago and this will be the second time around for us," High Desert club president Susan Lehman said. "Our club formed in about 1996 and has about 50 families from communities throughout the Magic Valley."

A 7 p.m. banquet will feature a presentation by guest speaker Patty Dawson. Dawson and her husband recently completed a horseback trip across part of the United States.

New antennas help biologists study fish in remote Idaho areas

Biologist Rick Orme works to stabilize a 120-foot long fiberglass antenna enclosure that houses six different antennas in the river bed of the South Fork of the Salmon River Sept. 28 in the Payette National Forest. The antennas receive a signal from a tiny transmitter implanted in steelhead and chinook salmon and the data is logged and transmitted.

By Todd Dvorak
Associated Press writer

WARREN — Biologists studying salmon in the Pacific Northwest have for decades lost track of the fish just as they set out on life's last leg, that final upstream lunge to spawn and die in the remote, back-country streams and creeks in Oregon, Washington and central Idaho.

In many ways, an inability to track the fish has taught them even less about the first year of life, forcing researchers to make assumptions about salmon behavior and the influence habitat restoration and other expensive recovery programs are having on the threatened and endangered species.

That is changing, as crews have installed giant antennas in nearly two dozen rivers and streams across the region to track fish — at least those implanted with a microchip the size of a rice kernel — when they swim by. Researchers hope to learn more, much more, about the species they are desperately trying to preserve.

ON THE NET

The biggest of these antennas, or arrays, was anchored recently in the rock and cobble of the South Fork of the Salmon River in a rugged corner of Idaho wilderness. Built of six, 20-foot-long sections, the array looks like a submerged sidewalk to the opposite bank.

Solar panels connect to a thermoelectric generator to power six antennas installed at the bottom of the South Fork of the Salmon River in the Payette National Forest. The antenna, which costs $125,000, is manufactured by Boise-based Biomark Inc. and will help researchers study fish at the end of their life cycle.

For researchers like Chris Jordan, this network and the data it provides could help explain more about the mysterious behavior of salmon and the potential success of current and future restoration projects.

"We've only known part of this story for so long," said

Jordan, a research fish biologist with the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration's Northwest Fisheries Science Center in Portland. "There are plenty of subtleties we need to understand much better."

Recent big-game hunts helped turn a 13-year-old Twin Falls boy into a successful hunter, while at the same time making his father a proud parent.

Nicolas Devine harvested a mule deer — his first — in unit 56 this season, and an elk in unit 49.

"He made a great shot on the elk at 350 yards," his father Tim Devine wrote in a recent letter to the Times-News. The deer was taken the day after a snowstorm, which made it a cold and wet — albeit successful — experience.

It was a true do-it-yourself hunt, Tim Devine wrote, explaining how it took him and his son two days and seven trips up and down the mountain to remove the elk — without the help of an ATV — along with another elk Tim had shot.

"I am a very proud father and he is a very accomplished hunter," Tim Devine said, noting that his son "never once complained or balked at our task ahead."

Though they hunted with friends and Tim had himself shot an elk, "this was all about my son and young man Nicolas Devine," he said.

Upcoming outdoor events in S-C Idaho

T.F. Gun Club hosts turkey shoots

The Twin Falls Gun Club's next turkey shoot will be Sunday from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. November's shooting dates and sponsor groups include:

- Sunday, Twin Falls Optimist Club
- Nov. 22, Twin Falls Gun Club
- Nov. 29, KMTV Toys for Tots

Shoot for turkeys, ham, bacon, steaks and other prizes. Guarantee cards and shells available. Kitchen will be open.

Rifle & Pistol clubs schedule events

The Magic Valley .22-cal. Gallery League, sponsored by the Buhl, Rupert and Twin Falls Rifle & Pistol clubs is hosting a 16-week .22. cal competition every Friday night. The first event was Nov. 6; the next event is Friday. Sign up at 6 p.m., shooting begins at about 6:30 p.m.

Indoor 40-shot, four-position rifle and/or 60-shot timed-pistol league. All men, women, juniors, and new shooters welcome.

Each week's shooting location rotates from an assigned range — Buhl, Twin Falls or Rupert — to your local club. Bring your own ammo. Top awards given at end-of-year banquet.

Cost is a one-time fee of $8 for pistol, $8 for rifle or $15 for both; $5 for juniors. Membership to one of the clubs is required; family discounts available.

For more information about club rotations or other matters: Dave Gyorfy at 734-9327, Dan Brown at 734-8217 or Walt Charles at 436-3344.

Tour historic site Saturday

Join in a guided walking tour at the Minidoka National Historic Site. From 1-2 p.m. on Saturday and again on Nov. 21, meet at the Minidoka National Historic Site entrance area in Jerome. A Park Ranger will lead a walking tour through the old Minidoka Relocation Center, also known as the Hunt Camp. Get an in-depth view of what it was like to live there during its years of operation. Learn about life at the camp and what it must have been like for the people interned at the site.

The tour is weather permitting. Wear sturdy footwear and bring water. Bathroom facilities are limited.

For more information, including directions: 933-4127 <https://cms.pwr.nps.gov/miin/planyourvisit/directions.htm>.

Gun club hosts sporting clays

The Jerome Gun Club will host a sporting clays shoot on Sunday.

This is a 100-target event. If you have never shot sporting clays at the club, your first 50 targets are free. Cost is $20 for adults, $14 for juniors under age 18. There is a $5 charge for non-members. Sign up at 9 a.m., shooting begins at 10 a.m.

The club is located 11 miles north of the junction of Highway 93 and I-84 at mile marker 64. For more information: Mike at 539-4814 or www.jeromegunclub.com.

Ducks Unlimited to hold meeting

The Idaho Chapter of Ducks Unlimited will hold its first meeting of the season at 7 p.m. Nov. 17 at Idaho Pizza, 1859 Kimberly Rd., Twin Falls. Anyone interested in volunteering to help organize the club's annual banquet is welcome to attend.

For more information: Mike at 420-7110 or Rich at 732-1063.

Muzzleloaders gather for turkey shoot

Join the Oregon Trail Muzzleloaders from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Nov. 21 for a turkey shoot and the chance to win prizes.

There'll be three shooting categories — rifle, pistol and scoped rifle. The event will include drinks, food and raffle prizes, including turkeys. Tickets are $1 apiece, six for $5, or 13 for $10. Targets are $5 apiece or $13 for three targets; $20 for five targets, plus two raffle tickets.

Senior Citizens annual breakfast will be held in Albion from 7:30 to 9:30 a.m., go eat breakfast and come have some fun and shoot for a great cause. All proceeds will be donated to Meals on Wheels. The club also is looking for turkey and raffle donations to help senior citizens.

Directions: Located on Highway 77, two miles southeast of Albion (toward Pomerelle). Watch for the Llama's and turn at the first road past them. There will be signs.

For more information: Rick Ramsey at 679-7603 or Mitzi Ramsey at 878-3500.

Jr. Air Rifle Club meets Mondays

Junior target shooting meets at 6:30 p.m. on Mondays at the Twin Falls Rifle and Pistol Club, 253 Fifth Ave. W., Twin Falls. The club is open to new shooters who are large enough to shoot air rifles (normally 12- and 13-year-olds) to 18 years of age. Cost is $1 per night for pellets and targets. Rifles and spotting scopes are provided. New shooters are welcome.

Being the biggest, fastest and strongest athlete does not give you an advantage as it does in other sports. In target shooting boys and girls, large and small, have an equal chance at success. If you have good concentration, good eye sight and like a challenge, you may be amazed at what you can do.

Sun Valley celebrates new gondola on Nov. 21

By Karen Bossick

Times-News correspondent

Sun Valley is going to have a Gondola 'Ganza.

The resort will celebrate the grand opening of the Roundhouse Gondola from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 21, with a Winter Expo and Gondola 'Ganza.

There'll be free rides on the new gondola that takes skiers and boarders from Lower River Run to the historic Roundhouse Restaurant from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. following a ribbon cutting at 11 a.m.

The Sun Valley Mountain Department and Ski Patrol will put on snowcat, snowmaking, and other demonstrations involving avalanche rescue dogs and evacuation techniques from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Snow Park Technologies, which is building a Jib Park on Dollar Mountain, will offer a sneak preview by building a few rails, boxes and other man-made features at the bottom of River Run.

And the Elephant's Perch is organizing a free foot or snowshoe race to the Roundhouse immediately following the ribbon cutting at 11 a.m. Pre-register at The Elephant's Perch or at the site until 10 a.m.

There'll also be prizes and raffles, including lift tickets and merchandise from Pete Lane's, along with free hot chocolate and cider.

And Bald Mountain

chefs will serve up Tastes of the Mountain — blackened salmon, Caesar salad, tomato artichoke bisque, fish 'n chips, macaroni and cheese and wok specialties at nominal prices — from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Participating chefs are Scott Wamsley who presides over the River Run Day Lodge, Ken Pratt, of the Seattle Ridge Lodge, Eric Thomason, of Warm Springs Lodge, Don Wise of the Roundhouse and Chris Hodapp of Carol's Dollar Lodge.

Sun Valley officials hope the event will amp up the anticipation for the new gondola, which will start carrying skiers and snowboarders on Thanksgiving Day, weather permitting.

"They told us it would be an eight-minute ride. But it's actually six minutes and 47 seconds — and very comfortable," said Jack Sibbach, Sun Valley's marketing director.

"It's a different look when you go up there in the gondola," he added. "Not only are you going up in a different place but you'll be able to look behind you to the town below, which was something that was hard to do on the chairlift."

When the season opens it'll cost $20 for non-skiing adults to ride the gondola to get to the Roundhouse and $10 for children.

Sun Valley is considering opening the restaurant for a First Tracks breakfast, Sibbach said, and it will stay open past lunchtime for those who want cocktails in the restaurant's new Averell's beer and wine bar.

Sibbach said the phones are beginning to ring as winter draws near.

"We're at the pace we were last year at this time. Mostly value packages — a lot of people are going for our $94.50 hotel packages, which are called 'Ski Free packages' since the lift ticket is basically included in that price."

The resort is offering a Thanksgiving Package — four nights lodging and three days of skiing topped off with a lavish Thanksgiving buffet, for $282 per person double occupancy, according to Sun Valley marketing assistant Kate Randall.

And Resort Quest, Ashton hotels and Resorts Sun Valley are offering 15 percent to 20 percent discounts on home and condo rentals over the holidays, said Stefany Mahoney, of the Sun Valley/Ketchum Chamber and visitors Bureau.

Sun Valley's Pre-holiday Package begins Nov. 27 and includes one night's lodging and one day of skiing for only $67 per person double occupancy through Dec. 20. A Stay and Ski Package running through Dec. 14 includes a daily lift ticket per guest and starts at $88.05 per night.

Gearing up for the cold

Since June 21 when the sun began to trace its annual southerly migration toward the Tropic of Capricorn, residents of North America have experienced the diminishing hours of daylight and cooling temperatures that characterize the approach of fall and winter. If you're one who chooses to expose yourself to these increasingly chilling conditions in the name of sport, you may want to consider what you can do to better prepare for the inevitable challenges you'll face afield this season.

I'm mechanically inept, so don't ask me the tough questions. I can, however, offer some suggestions about outdoor clothing that, for me, has withstood the test of time and, more important, Mother Nature.

I'm a believer in the layering principle. The rationale behind the layering principle is that you can maintain warmth and comfort through widely varying temperature and moisture conditions by adding or removing layers of inner- and outerwear. At its most basic, you clothe yourself with base, thermal and outer layers.

I've found no better base layer material than the various weights of poly underwear and sock liners marketed by Cabela's, Under Armour, L.L. Bean, Carhartt, etc. These fabrics wick perspiration away from the skin while retaining body heat. If you prefer natural materials, various companies sell 100 percent silk or silk/wool combination fabrics, which perform similarly. You'd be wise to avoid the traditional cotton undergarments that absorb and retain perspiration. When these moist garments cool down, they actually rob vital body heat.

RICH SIMPSON/For the Times-News

SHOOTING THE BULL

The purpose of the thermal layer is to move moisture outward and insulate the body against the loss of body heat. This is where the lofty poly fleece garments excel. Slide into a pair of fleece pants and zip on a fleece jacket or pullover and you're good to go. I'm not sure if it's my Scottish genetics, but I really love wool clothes. This is where I like to suit up with quality wool shirts, sweaters and gloves that I scrounged up at Goodwill-type and Army surplus stores.

Finally we shroud ourselves with the outer garments. The purpose of this outer layer is to provide a wind/water proof barrier between you and the environment. Wool pants, jackets, coats, hats, mittens and gloves serve admirably, particularly when backed with wind-proofing materials. Jump online and check out Columbia's, L.L.Bean's, Filson's and Cabela's wool selections. If there's a downside to wool clothes, it's that some people find wool scratchy and the scent of wet wool offensive. Woolen fabrics of sufficient thickness are also heavier and bulkier than competing synthetics.

It's in the realm of synthetic outer garments that the wonder of the free-market economy really struts its stuff. I sing the praises of the Rivers West H2P line.

All Rivers West products sandwich their proprietary wind/waterproofing fabric between camouflaged fleece layers. Their hats, balclavas, gloves, parkas, jackets, coats, pants and bib coveralls are lightweight, durable, stretchable, quiet and comfortable. They even offer three levels of protection: the original heavyweight H2P line for extreme conditions, the mid-weight L.A.W. line for moderate, and the lithe APF line for milder conditions.

With quality clothing like this available, the only way you'll be roughin' it outdoors this season is if you dress your sandwich with regular mustard instead of your Grey Poupon.

Good hunting!

Trout numbers up in Missouri River in Montana

HELENA, Mont. (AP) — Longtime Missouri River fishing guide Pete Cardinal says the rainbow and brown trout in the river near Craig were as healthy as he's ever seen.

And a report by the Montana Department of Fish, Wildlife and Parks backs him up. For the second year in a row, FWP said a survey on the Missouri found an increase in the number of large rainbow and brown trout between Holter Dam and Cascade.

State biologists found nearly 3,500 rainbow trout longer than 10 inches near Craig this fall, compared with a long-term average of nearly 3,000.

"The most noticeable difference is the quality of the fish. They're just larger than they've been," said Cardinal, owner of Missouri River Angler in Craig. "People are really happy with the quality of the fish, and the fish really fight hard. They're so healthy that they just really tear you up when you hook them."

Fisheries biologist Grant Grisak said the rainbows in the Craig area were remarkably high quality.

"About 85 percent of the rainbows were 15 inches and larger, and fish in the 18-inch length alone represented about 24 percent of the total population," he said.

In the river's Pelican Point section, just upstream from Cascade, rainbow trout were estimated at 1,577 fish per mile, compared with the long-term average of 1,494. Grisak said 64 percent of the rainbows there were at least 15 inches long.

Brown trout populations are also up. The spring estimate in the Craig section was 584 per mile, just above the long-term average of 578. In the Pelican Point section, spring browns were estimated at 611 per mile, well above the long-term average of 358.

Biologists estimate the number of fish per mile by electro-shocking the water and then counting, tagging and releasing the fish. Two weeks later, they repeat the process and use the ratio of tagged and untagged fish to calculate an estimate of the number of trout per mile.

Cardinal, who has guided on the Missouri for 26 years, said high water levels helped.

"That's what happens when you add water to a Montana river," he said. "The fish like it. There's more habitat, more food, more space and greater survival. It's probably a real reflection of great habitat conditions from the last two years of great water levels."

Things weren't as encouraging on the Smith River, where trout populations continue to trend down.

"Higher water flows and lower water temperatures in the Smith River this year should provide relief to future trout populations, especially in the wake of a nine-year drought experienced in central Montana," Grisak said.

Forest Service removes illegal hot spring pools

BOISE (AP) — Workers with the U.S. Forest Service have removed a series of man-made pools that were built illegally along a popular hot spring near Crouch.

The pools, some made with rocks and mortar, were filled with steaming water and have been popular with weekend soakers in recent years.

Boise National Forest officials have said the man who built the pools did so without a permit, breaking federal land-use regulations and dramatically altering the landscape.

Boise National Forest spokesman David Olson says work crews used sledgehammers to remove the pools on Monday, and hauled the debris away from the site.

What the president saw (or didn't see)

On Oct. 7, President Obama hosted the first-ever White House star party. The event kicked off with the president gazing through a telescope, then inviting his guests (150 middle school students) to enjoy the views through 20 other telescopes scattered about the lawn.

The president's view was provided by the telescope of Derrick Pitts of Philadelphia's Franklin Institute. While there were plenty of celestial objects above the horizon, the light pollution of D.C. swallowed all but the brightest. The students got to see the moon and Jupiter, among other targets, but the president saw (or tried to see, amid the glare of TV lights) a quadruple star known as Epsilon Lyrae, the "Double-Double."

(Some sharp-eyed star gazers can see Epsilon as double without optical aid.)

Epsilon Lyrae is a set of four stars, arranged in two pairs. Through a telescope eyepiece, the pairs are widely separated from one another, but each pair comprises a close duo of blue-white stars.

The northern pair, Epsilon 1, orbit one another in about 1,200 years. The southern, Epsilon 2, orbit about twice as fast. In the meantime, the pairs orbit a common center over hundreds of millennia.

Pitts probably chose the Double-Double because it was high overhead at the time, minimizing the chance of clouds blocking the view.

Furthermore, it's relatively bright; each of the four components would be visible to the naked eye in a dark sky if they weren't so close together. (Some sharp-eyed star gazers can see Epsilon as double without optical aid.) To see the Double-Double, just find Vega, the brilliant blue-white star really high up in the west after 7 p.m. Epsilon is about the width of a pinkie finger at arm's length directly above Vega. Binoculars should show it as a double; it takes a pretty good telescope (and a steady atmosphere) to see all four stars.

Next week: America's darkest skies.

78-year-old climber hikes Y Mountain monthly

By Ashley Franscell
Daily Herald (Provo, Utah)

PROVO, Utah — On a crisp, fall day at the end of October, DeVerl Humpherys made his 200th consecutive monthly climb up Y Mountain. He was accompanied by his two sons, his daughter and several grandchildren, who all struggled to keep up with the 78-year-old.

"How come your kids are so slow?" asked his grandson on the way up.

Humpherys laughed and stopped to wait for the others. "This sure beats the treadmill," Humpherys said on the descent looking over Utah Valley.

His monthly hiking goal started more than 16 years ago after his third back surgery, when his doctor suggested that some activity would help to rehabilitate his back. Each month he would set out to hike the 7-mile loop with a 3,000-foot elevation gain.

The goal became 100 consecutive months. When he reached that, it became 200. And now he's hoping for 222, which would be August when he'll be 80.

His daughter, Lisa Rollins, came up with him eight years ago to celebrate his 100th and has been tagging along ever since.

"He's drug me along," she said.

"Nope," he replies Humpherys. "She's kept me going."

But Humpherys doesn't need too much motivation from others. Most of the time anyone else who offers to hike with him gets left in his dust.

It takes Humpherys about three hours to complete the hike, 20 minutes more than his time from 16 years ago.

Waiting for them at the top is the previous hike's number arranged in the rocks. In the few short minutes that Rollins reaches the summit before her father she changes the last digit to reflect that day's hike and then she takes a picture of her father and the number for a scrapbook.

Once he hiked to the summit in spite of immense pain in his back from his sciatic nerve. It took him twice as long as it normally does but he didn't break his streak.

"I made it up but I couldn't walk until the next month," he laughed.

Salmon

This latest technology is being paid for by the Bonneville Power Administration, which sells power generated at 31 hydroelectric dams in the Columbia River Basin and spends millions of dollars each year trying to improve habitat and bolster the numbers of salmon and steelhead trout.

The dams are at the center of a tense and complex debate over the best way to restore 13 salmon runs listed under the Endangered Species Act.

The dams are blamed by tribes, salmon fisherman and conservationists for killing salmon and steelhead on their journey as young fish to the sea and on the return trip as adults to reproduce in the same stream they were hatched. But decades of logging, irrigation, livestock grazing and human activity have also taken a toll.

In September, NOAA Fisheries submitted its latest blueprint for saving salmon. The plan, known as a biological opinion, recommends increased monitoring, intensifying habitat restoration and improving dam passage systems. It also restores consideration of tearing down four dams on a stretch of the Snake River in eastern Washington.

U.S. District Judge James Redden will decide whether the plan complies with the Endangered Species Act and is a viable tool for bolstering salmon numbers. Twice before Redden has declared previous versions inadequate.

Three of the new research antennas are now in place in the Entiat River basin in northcentral Washington, seven in the Wenatchee River and its tributaries in central Washington, eight in the John Day River system in northeastern Oregon and three in central Idaho's Lemhi River basin.

Idaho's South Fork of the Salmon River now has four, each at strategic points along the river and its main arteries. The biggest one is fastened with rock-climbing equipment downstream from the Payette National Forest's Shiefer Campground. It cost BPA $125,000.

The antennas are powered with a propane generator and solar panels. Information from passing fish is beamed by satellite to a database and posted in real time on a Web site available to the public. Federal, state and tribal agencies implant hundreds of thousands of the chips, known as PIT tags, each year in hatchery fish and wild fish captured at the dams or traps scattered across the region.

So far, the Shiefer Campground antenna has tracked 60 fish, most of them juvenile steelhead setting out on a 600-mile journey to the Pacific coast. Two of those fish were adults tagged in 2006 and once thought lost, but are now making their way back upriver.

But the big picture goal for the arrays is to help teach researchers more about the nuances and preferences of fish behavior.

For the first time ever, researchers are counting on the tracking system to help build more accurate estimates of juvenile fish and survival rates before coastal migration.

The data will be used to help pinpoint where in a river system juvenile fish prefer to spend their first year, or why certain stretches are preferable to others. Does one habitat improve juvenile survival rates over others? And are fish adapting to a changing environment or paying a price?

Researchers are also eager to find out if the millions of dollars spent each year on habitat improvements and managing stream flow really make a difference, or if those resources should be focused elsewhere. BPA spends about $300 million annually on habitat restoration, buying and protecting habitat and researching fish protection.

"We're spending millions of dollars on restoration work without having a tool to measure actual benefits," Jordan said "We can model this all we want, but having these arrays ... throughout a watershed, can show where a fish goes throughout its life cycle ... we can ask ourselves questions about which strategies are are most successful at producing the next generation."

raised during the convention will go toward funding High Desert service projects.

The Back Country Horsemen of Idaho was founded in 1979 and consists of 15 independent chapters across the state. These are further linked to a 30-state network affiliated with the Back Country Horsemen of America out of Montana.

The organizational mission, at both the state and national level, is to assist with and have a voice in preserving recreational opportunities and a wilderness heritage for future generations. The High Desert club works closely with officials from the U.S. Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management to maintain trails and bridges, as well as construct corrals and hitching rails.

"Some groups think they should be the only users, but historically horses and mules built the backcountry trails," Lehman said. "Our view includes all user groups and perpetuates a common sense approach to use of the backcountry through education."

Bonnie Stacy, who has been part of High Desert for 13 years, says the organization also has a political arm that keeps members informed when government agencies propose changes to

"We get information from our national directors about bills coming down from Congress and also have people who lobby for us in Washington D.C.," Stacy said. "We're not radicals but recreational groups aren't afraid to make our voices heard."

Additional information about the convention or membership in Back Country Horsemen is available at www.bchi.org or www.highdesertbch.org.

LOVE BIRDS

Mourning doves perch on a farm gate Wednesday afternoon along Golf Course Road south of Jerome. Poo Wright-Pulliam, a self-described birding fanatic and owner of the Hailey Web-based business BinocularsAndScopesPro.com, said the morning dove is the most abundant and widespread dove in the lower 48 U.S. states. She said the bird can be recognized by the fluttering wing whistle that occurs when it takes flight. 'It's soft cooing (owoo-hooo-hoo-hoo) is often confused with the hoot of an owl,' said Wright-Pulliam. She said the birds lay two eggs in a simple stick nest and are often seen in pairs. 'Idaho is really good for birding; especially in Twin Falls and the Wood River Valley. There's always something to look at.'

Jerome Co. weighs jail options

Judicial confirmation, second election, regional jail all possible

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

JEROME — Jerome County's next step in securing funding for a proposed new jail will likely lead officials in one of two directions — back to the polls or into a courtroom.

After a Nov. 3 lease-to-purchase proposal to build a $13.5 million, 165-bed jail failed to gain supermajority voter approval by 25 votes, Sheriff Doug McFall said one option citizens have suggested is for the county to seek judicial confirmation of the county's need to enter into long-term debt to build the facility.

"I've been talking to citizens since the vote occurred and I've discovered a vast array of options," McFall said during Tuesday's county commission meeting.

Idaho law requires voter approval for municipalities and local governments to enter into long-term debt, but a judge can also approve a project deemed ordinary and necessary, bypassing the need for voter approval.

County officials on Tuesday discussed replacing the existing 35-year-old jail as a priority, citing potential civil liability and loss of casualty insurance.

Commissioner Cathy Roemer cited the close vote with nearly two-thirds of voters in favor of the lease-to-purchase financing proposal as a possible justification for judicial confirmation. She said she doesn't, however, want to bypass the electorate by placing a final decision with a 5th District Court judge. She added that the county should pursue all of its options.

"Regardless of what we do, we don't have a crystal ball and we can't see into the future," McFall said.

McFall said he would like to run a new jail as a business and hopes to pay for it in 20 years rather than the 30 called for in the ballot question.

"We have to rethink our process and reload," said Commissioner Joe Davidson. "As close as we were, I think our response as commissioners is to educate people about the lease process."

Commission Chairman Charlie Howell invited Jerome City Administrator Ben Marchant to weigh in on the issue. The city includes 44 percent of the county's population.

"Our police department works closely with the sheriff's department," Marchant said. "... I think it was very prudent of the county to ask the voters."

With the vote being very close, "it's certainly enough to validate the need for a jail," Marchant said, adding that judicial confirmation might be prudent with the costs associated with another election and six-month wait before another can be held.

A potential different option surfaced Monday at a Lincoln County Commission meeting when state Rep. Wendy Jaquet, D-Ketchum, proposed a regional jail for Jerome, Gooding, Lincoln and Camas counties.

She suggested a meeting of several county commissions later this month in Jerome. No meeting was scheduled by Tuesday afternoon.

Jerome County commissioners made no decisions on a course of action for the jail on Tuesday.

Consultant Rocky Mountain Corrections is on a commission agenda for late November. The county's contract with RMC expired Nov. 3. It is unclear whether Jerome County will retain the Blaine County-based consultant for future services.

Jerome library celebrates Family Reading Week

During the week of Nov. 15-21, every library item returned to the Jerome Public Library will have its fine forgiven, regardless of amount owed.

The staff and board hope the incentive will get items returned and reinstate privileges of patrons whose accounts have been suspended due to large fines.

To celebrate family reading activities, new children's programmer Ralyn Nelson has organized a kick-off event that will be held at 6 p.m., Monday, at the library. The theme for the week is "Idaho is WILD about Reading." Food and games will be centered around outdoor recreation and Idaho wildlife, with a presentation given by Idaho Fish and Game featuring hides and skulls.

Families attending the event will be given a reading passport to be completed throughout the week. An outdoor recreation gift basket will be raffled on Nov. 20. All participating families who return their passports by 3 p.m. Friday will be eligible for the raffle.

Pumpkins can be used for more than holiday pie

DEAR DR. GOTT: My 72-year-old husband has been seeing his urologist for several years for an enlarged prostate. He had burning during elimination, ran slight temperatures due to infections, and had problems urinating due to the swelling.

At first, his PSA was 4.2. The urologist put him on Uroxatral. He also continued to take saw palmetto and fish-oil capsules. His PSA gradually dropped to 3.7.

A friend told me about taking pumpkin-seed oil. Since it didn't hurt to try,

ASK DR. GOTT
Dr. Peter Gott

my husband used it for six months. His PSA dropped to 3.1. The doctor was pleased with the count, but kind of brushed aside the ingestion of the pumpkin-seed oil. My husband also explained that the burning sensation lessened quite a bit, there were no elevated temperatures, and elimination was easier. He doesn't have to return to his urologist for a year.

Perhaps this information can help someone with similar problems.

DEAR READER:
Pumpkin seeds are an excellent natural source of carbohydrates and amino and unsaturated fatty acids. They also contain calcium, potassium, phosphorous, niacin, most of the B vitamins, and C, D, E and K. They have been used by Native Americans for countless years for kidney problems and for elimination of intestinal parasites.

There are numerous sources claiming pumpkin seeds and oils benefit depression, cholesterol levels, prevent the formation of kidney stones and prostate and bladder issues, and improve bladder function. So I am not at all surprised that your husband experienced success in lowering his PSA.

Prostatic-specific antigen (PSA) is produced by the prostate gland. As you are likely aware, a normal range for blood testing is up to 4.0. An elevation does not necessarily indicate cancer. Many men with elevated readings are found to have noncancerous conditions, such as prostatitis or benign prostate enlargement. Furthermore, some medications can have an effect on readings.

His urologist put him on a medication that falls into a group of drugs known as alpha-adrenergic blockers. The Uroxatral can be used to treat an enlarged prostate gland and help relax the muscles in the prostate and bladder neck, making it easier to urinate.

I am passing your information on so others might be able to benefit the way your husband did. Thank you for sharing the information.

To provide related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "The Prostate Gland." UN says hunger stunts some 200 million children

By Ariel David and Maria Cheng
Associated Press writer

ROME — Nearly 200 million children in poor countries have stunted growth because of insufficient nutrition, according to a new report published by UNICEF Wednesday before a three-day international summit on the problem of world hunger.

The head of a U.N. food agency called on the world to join him in a day of fasting ahead of the summit to highlight the plight of 1 billion hungry people.

Jacques Diouf, director-general of the Food and Agriculture Organization, said he hoped the fast would encourage action by world leaders who will take part in the meeting at his agency's headquarters starting Monday.

The U.N. Children's Fund published a report saying that nearly 200 million children under five in poor countries were stunted by a lack of nutrients in their food.

More than 90 percent of those children live in Africa and Asia, and more than a third of all deaths in that age group are linked to undernutrition, according to UNICEF.

While progress has been made in Asia — rates of stunted growth dropped from 44 percent in 1990 to 30 percent last year — there has been little success in Africa. There, the rate of stunted growth was about 38 percent in 1990. Last year, the rate was about 34 percent.

South Asia is a particular hotspot for the problem, with just Afghanistan, Nepal, India, Bangladesh and Pakistan accounting for 83 million hungry children under five.

"Unless attention is paid to addressing the causes of child and maternal under-nutrition today, the costs will be considerably higher tomorrow," said UNICEF executive director Ann M. Veneman in a statement.

Diouf said he would begin a 24-hour fast on Saturday morning. The agency also launched an online petition against world hunger through a Web page featuring a video with Diouf counting from one to six to remind visitors that every six seconds a child dies from hunger.

The U.N. children's agency called for more strategies like vitamin A supplementation and breast-feeding to be rolled out more widely. That could cut the death rate in kids by up to 15 percent, UNICEF said.

Not everyone agreed.

"It is unrealistic to believe malnutrition can be addressed by any topdown U.N. scheme," said Philip Stevens, of International Policy Network, a London-based think tank. "The progress UNICEF's report points to in improving nutrition is almost certainly a result of economic growth, not U.N. strategies."

The Rome-based FAO announced earlier this year that hunger now affects a record 1.02 billion globally, or one in six people, with the financial meltdown, high food prices, drought and war blamed.

The agency hopes its World Summit on Food Security, with Pope Benedict XVI and some 60 heads of state so far expected to attend, will endorse a new strategy to combat hunger, focusing on increased investment in agricultural development for poor countries.

U.S. Afghan envoy resists increase in troops

By Greg Jaffe, Scott Wilson and Karen DeYoung
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The U.S. ambassador in Kabul sent two classified cables to Washington in the past week expressing deep concerns about sending more U.S. troops to Afghanistan until President Hamid Karzai's government demonstrates that it is willing to tackle the corruption and mismanagement that has fueled the Taliban's rise, senior U.S. officials said.

Karl Eikenberry's memos, sent as President Obama enters the final stages of his deliberations over a new Afghanistan strategy, illustrated both the difficulty of the decision and the deepening divisions within the administration's national security team. After a top-level meeting on the issue Wednesday afternoon — Obama's eighth since early last month — the White House issued a statement that appeared to reflect Eikenberry's concerns.

"The President believes that we need to make clear to the Afghan government that our commitment is not open-ended," the statement said. "After years of substantial investments by the American people, governance in Afghanistan must improve in a reasonable period of time."

On the eve of his nine-day trip to Asia, Obama was given a series of options laid out laid out by military planners with differing numbers of new U.S. deployments, ranging from 10,000 to 40,000 troops. None of the scenarios calls for scaling back the U.S. presence in Afghanistan or delaying the dispatch of additional troops.

But Eikenberry's last-minute interventions have highlighted the nagging undercurrent of the policy discussion: the U.S. dependence on a partnership with a Karzai government whose incompetence and corruption is a universal concern within the administration. After months of political upheaval, in the wake of widespread fraud during the August presidential election, Karzai was installed last week for a second five-year term.

In addition to placing the Karzai problem prominently on the table, the cables from Eikenberry, a retired four-star general who in 2006-2007 commanded U.S. troops in Afghanistan, have rankled his former colleagues in the Pentagon — as well as Gen. Stanley McChrystal, defense officials said. McChrystal, the top U.S. and NATO commander in Afghanistan, has stated that without the deployment of an additional tens of thousands of troops within the next year, the mission there "will likely result in failure."

AFGHANISTAN'S WARLORDS

Presidential candidate Gen. Rashid Dostum rides a horse after his speech at Ghazi Stadium in Kabul, Afghanistan, on Oct. 6, 2004. The Uzbek warlord was on the payroll of the C.I.A. and his militia worked closely with U.S. Special Forces in 2001, according U.S. officials. Dostum has been accused of overseeing the suffocation deaths of up to 2,000 Taliban prisoners during the 2001 U.S.-led invasion.

Back in power, they threaten country's future

By Todd Pittman
Associated Press writer

KABUL — Warlords helped drive the Russians from Afghanistan, then shelled Kabul into ruins in a bloody civil war after the Soviets left.

Now they are back in positions of power, in part because the U.S. relied on them in 2001 to help oust the Taliban after the Sept. 11 attacks. President Hamid Karzai later reached out to them to shore up his own power base as America turned its attention to Iraq after the Taliban's rout.

With the Taliban resurging, the entrenched power of the warlords is complicating Karzai's promises to rid his new government of corruption and cronies, steps seen as critical to building support among Afghans against the insurgents.

"You can't build a new political system with old politicians accused of war crimes," said lawmaker Ramazan Bashardost, who finished third in the country's fraud-marred August election. "You can't have peace with warlords in control."

Two of Karzai's vice presidents — Mohammed Qasim Fahim and Karim Khalili — are ex-warlords. His outgoing military adviser, Abdul Rashid Dostum, has been accused of overseeing the suffocation deaths of up to 2,000

Taliban prisoners during the 2001 U.S.-led invasion.

The term warlord is applied to the commanders of the Afghan resistance who fell out with each other after the defeat of the Soviets. They see themselves as political figures and patriots who defend their people in areas of the country where the central government has little or no control.

They often refer to themselves as "mujahadeen," which means holy warriors.

Karzai sought support from those branded as warlords to bolster his weak power base, win re-election and build alliances with ethnic groups. He has defended those ties publicly, pointing out that the U.S. backed the same people eight years ago when it engineered the war to oust the Taliban and brought Karzai to power.

But the U.S. and its allies fear that the continued strength of the warlords undermines government authority. It is hard to convince ordinary Afghans to obey the laws, pay their taxes and support the government when it is dominated by men who flouted the rules to amass power and fortunes.

International pressure is mounting on Karzai to rid his government of corruption and sideline the warlords. Leaders of the U.S., Britain and other troop-contributing countries cannot ask their own soldiers to risk their lives for a corrupt government.

Fahim

"I am not prepared to put the lives of British men and women in harm's way for a government that does not stand up against corruption," Prime Minister Gordon Brown said Friday.

Last week, Kai Eide, the U.N. mission chief in Afghanistan, suggested time was running out. "We can't afford any longer a situation where warlords and power brokers play their own games," he said. "We have to have ... significant reform."

And Obama told the Afghan leader last week that assurances of reform had to be backed up with action.

Presidential spokesman Humayun Hamidzada supported them in the 2001 attack against the Taliban, enabling the U.S. to oust the Islamists from power without committing large numbers of U.S. ground troops.

But some of the alleged crimes attributed to the warlords were so odious that Washington could not ignore them. Witnesses claim Dostum's forces polled believed security would improve if war criminals were brought to justice. Only 8 percent felt it would decrease security and 13 percent said they did not know. The remaining 3 percent were missing.

Removing them from government is "by far the most important issue facing the country today," said Brad Adams, the Asia director of Human Rights Watch.

The New York-based rights group has called for several senior officials in Karzai's administration to be tried for war crimes alongside some of Washington's biggest enemies, like Taliban leader Mullah Omar and insurgent chief Gulbuddin Hekmatyar.

Faction leaders defend their roles in the civil war of the 1990s, which broke out when the pro-Soviet government collapsed following the departure of Moscow's troops. Some of them held out against the Taliban after the Islamist movement seized Kabul in 1996.

The Bush administration supported them in the 2001 attack against the Taliban, enabling the U.S. to oust the Islamists from power without committing large numbers of U.S. ground troops.

But some of the alleged crimes attributed to the warlords were so odious that Washington could not ignore them. Witnesses claim Dostum's forces placed Taliban prisoners in sealed cargo containers and suffocated them to death before burying them en masse, according to a State Department report. Dostum denies involvement in the deaths.

The U.S. and its allies pressured Karzai into firing Fahim, his new vice president, as defense minister and dropping him from the ticket in the 2004 election. He tapped him again as his running-mate this year, a move that helped split the opposition vote.

All that has encouraged a climate of impunity that has trickled down through Afghan society. Rights groups accuse soldiers and police loyal to warlords of kidnapping, extortion, robbery and the rape of women, girls and boys.

Geraldine (Jerry) Goodwin Quigley

Geraldine (Jerry) Goodwin Quigley, beloved mother, grandma, sister and friend, passed away Tuesday, Nov. 10, 2009, at her home after a long illness.

She was born Feb. 19, 1930, in Ogden, Utah, to Ruth Geneva Sanders and Gerald Goodwin. She married Herald Mickey Quigley on March 17, 1948, in the Logan LDS Temple. Together, they raised nine children (eight girls and one boy). They celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary in 2008.

Family was Jerry's reason for living. She was like a mother to her younger brothers while growing up and opened her heart and home to others over the years. Jerry was an excellent seamstress in her younger days. She often made her girls beautiful dresses. She taught her children to be strong and independent.

Jerry loved to crochet, cook, do crossword puzzles and play Canasta. She later enjoyed playing Bingo and doing jigsaw puzzles with her friends at The Coventry. She was an intelligent lady and enjoyed a career in real estate and mortgage. She traveled the United States with her husband as hotel managers. They retired and moved back to Salt Lake City to be near their children in 2001.

Jerry is preceded in death by her husband, Mickey Quigley; daughter, Bonnie Quigley Villalobos; and granddaughter, Heather Krantz. Jerry will be greatly missed by her surviving children, Kathy (Dale) Eskridge, Jerri Quigley (Kathe), Linda Quigley, Shauna (John) Poulsen, Susan (Randy) Krantz, Sherrie Gay (Ron) Skow, Jan Quigley (Ted), Mickey (Patrice) Quigley and George Curtis (like a second son); her brothers, Ronald (Evelyn) Goodwin and ConRoy Stevenson; 22 grandchildren; and 24 great-grandchildren.

The family would like to thank The Coventry and Envision Hospice Services for the excellent loving care they gave mother her last few months.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, Nov. 13, at Memorial Mortuary, 5850 S. 900 E. in Murray, Utah, where friends and family may call from 9 to 10:45 a.m. Friday prior to the service. Interment will be at the Murray City Cemetery in Murray, Utah.

Al-lexx Pierce Beverly-Hatch

Al-lexx Pierce Beverly-Hatch, 1 year 9 months, of Twin Falls, Idaho, passed away in his loving parents' arms Friday, Nov. 6, 2009, at St. Luke's Pediatric ICU in Boise.

Al-lexx was born Feb. 29, 2008, in Twin Falls, to his mommy, Sarah Hatch, and daddy, Jon Beverly. Al-lexx was a happy little guy with a smile that brightened and warmed hearts; his favorite things were frogs and the song "What's New, Pussy Cat."

Al-lexx is survived by his mommy and daddy; great-grandfather, Max Hatch of Arizona; great-grandmother, Marian Russell of Tennessee; his Memoe, Karen Smith, and Poopa, Paul Hatch, both of Twin Falls; and grandma, Emily Brown of Oklahoma. He was a brother to A.J. Hatch, Isabelle Beverly and Macalynne Beverly, all of Twin Falls; and many other extended relatives and friends. Al-lexx was preceded in death by his great-grandfather, Randall Russell of Twin Falls; and great-grandmother, Jean Hatch of Arizona; and his sister, Savannah Beverly of Twin Falls.

A service will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 14, at White Mortuary "Chapel by the Park." The family asks that those in attendance wear bright colors to celebrate Al-lexx's life.

Our family would like to thank all the friends and family who have been incredible with support and love. We want to thank the St. Luke's Pediatric Unit and staff for being supportive and for the loving job they do.

Study: Kidney angioplasty brings risks, no benefit

By Linda A. Johnson
Associated Press writer

If you're among the hundreds of thousands of Americans with clogged kidney arteries, you might want to consider trying medicines before rushing into angioplasty to open them up. The pricey procedure is no more effective and carries surprisingly big risks, a study found.

The National Kidney Foundation estimates more than 250,000 Americans have narrowing of the arteries that supply blood to the kidneys. It's usually caused by a buildup of fatty plaque, mostly in folks 50 or older, and can result in high blood pressure and, sometimes, kidney failure. Each year, about one in six patients with the condition dies.

About 16 percent of patients with newly diagnosed blockages in kidney blood vessels undergo angioplasty or, occasionally, more-invasive artery bypass surgery. But rushing to get blood vessels cleaned out could be a dangerous mistake, according to a British study and some experts.

Doctors at several British hospitals and universities compared patients with severe kidney artery blockages who were treated just with medicines with a group that got the same drugs and underwent angioplasty, in which a catheter is threaded through an artery to clear out blockages. The angioplasty group fared no better — and some of those patients suffered serious complications, including deaths and amputations.

"There really was no benefit," said Dr. Harlan Krumholz, a cardiologist and health outcomes researcher at Yale University. "What's remarkable is that this procedure got so popular and adopted into widespread use before a study like this was conducted to show us what its value might be."

He said doctors believe some treatments have obvious benefits, but recently a series of studies like this one have upended conventional wisdom. That means precious health care dollars are being wasted and patients are enduring unnecessary procedures and risks. In the study, published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine, all the patients were treated with drugs to lower cholesterol, control blood pressure and prevent blood clots.

Nearly 400 only got drugs. Another 335 patients also underwent angioplasty, which is most often done for clogged heart arteries. Nearly all of them had a stent, a tiny metal-mesh scaffold, inserted to keep the kidney artery open.

After an average of about three years, the researchers found the two groups had similar rates of death, heart attack, stroke, heart failure and decline of kidney function leading to a transplant or the start of dialysis. But 20 percent of patients getting angioplasty had a related complication in the first month, including two deaths, three amputations of toes or limbs, five cases of sudden kidney failure and four hospitalizations for internal bleeding.

Overall, patients in the two groups had the same rates of heart and kidney problems and death over the entire study period.

This report "is the first hint" that medication may produce equal results to angioplasty, said Dr. Leslie Spry, a kidney foundation spokesman. He said there's an ongoing U.S. study of the same issue.

The foundation's president, Dr. Bryan Becker, said the patients getting angioplasty may not have fared better because they had blockages in small blood vessels in addition to the blocked large blood vessels feeding the kidneys that were cleared out.

London arrest latest in pilot drinking episodes

By David Koenig
Associated Press writer

DALLAS — The arrest of a United Airlines pilot this week for allegedly drinking too much before entering the cockpit is the latest in a series of incidents involving airline pilots and alcohol.

The United pilot, Erwin Vermont Washington, was about to take off from London's Heathrow Airport for Chicago with 124 passengers on board. Instead, he was removed from the aircraft, suspended by his airline and now faces up to two years in a U.K. prison if convicted on criminal charges. He is the third U.S. pilot arrested in 13 months on alcohol-related charges.

Monday's arrest raises more questions about what goes on in airplane cockpits. It follows the distracted flying incident in the U.S. last month, where Northwest Airlines pilots overshot Minneapolis by more than 100 miles because, they said, they were using their laptop computers.

In May an American Airlines pilot was arrested at Heathrow and charged with being under the influence of alcohol. Another United pilot was arrested on the same charge in October 2008. And a Southwest Airlines pilot was suspended in January after allegedly showing up for his flight in Ohio reeking of alcohol. He's back on duty.

In 2008, 13 pilots violated the Federal Aviation Administration's alcohol-related rules. Pilots can't fly if they have a blood-alcohol level of 0.04 percent or higher, half the legal driving limit in most states. They are prohibited from drinking any alcohol in the eight hours before reporting for work, a provision known in the profession as the "bottle-to-throttle" rule.

British law is even stricter with a 0.02 percent limit. That level can be reached with about one regular beer.

The number of incidents involving alcohol is tiny compared with the thousands of flights each day around the world. But when it happens it's usually up to passengers or crew members to spot a pilot who isn't fit to fly.

The FAA checks pilots' backgrounds for alcohol-related offenses such as drunk driving, But Barry Sweedler, a former National Transportation Safety Board official who worked on alcohol-related issues, said in a recent interview that the FAA does little enforcement. "They rely on other people to find the bad apples," he said.

U.S. regulators have approached the issue by encouraging pilots with a drinking problem to identify themselves and seek treatment. They are tested periodically and can regain their license, usually in about a year. Sweedler estimated that there are hundreds of airline pilots who are alcoholics and take part in a federally sanctioned treatment program that includes periodic monitoring.

"It's the guy who thinks he can get away with it that's scary," Sweedler said. "I'm sure there are pilots over the limit who are flying every day."

Critics have pressed for a zero blood-alcohol level standard.

In the latest incident, a United co-worker turned in Washington. Experts say that's rare. In other recent cases, passengers were the cops.

That's what happened in Ohio. Passengers told security screeners that Southwest Airlines pilot David P. Shook smelled of alcohol. Shook dashed into a bathroom, took off his uniform jacket and called in sick, according to airport police. The airline put the 11-year veteran on leave. The co-pilot, who accompanied Shook to the security checkpoint, said he didn't smell alcohol.

The president of the pilots' union at Southwest, Carl Kuwitzky, said then that nervous fliers often accuse pilots of drinking, especially after a highly publicized incident.

"Ninety-nine percent of (the accusations) are completely unfounded," he said.

Sweedler said he can't remember any U.S. airline crashes attributed to alcohol. A 1961 crash in Finland that killed all 25 people aboard was blamed on pilot error, with drinking and fatigue of the two pilots being a contributing factor, according to the Aviation Safety Network.

Since the 1970s, the FAA has backed an alcoholism-treatment program run by the Air Line Pilots Association and the airlines.

Dana Archibald, an American Eagle pilot and the union's national chairman for the program, says 90 percent of the pilots who volunteer complete the program successfully. He says 4,300 pilots have returned to active duty after becoming sober.

Archibald says pilots can become alcoholics just as easily as doctors, lawyers and congressmen. He says the program encourages pilots to deal with their alcoholism rather than "going underground."

"I went through the program myself," Archibald says. "It not only gave me my job back, but it saved my life."

Israel displays coins dating from ancient Jewish revolt

By Michael Barajas
Associated Press writer

JERUSALEM — Israel displayed for the first time Wednesday a collection of rare coins charred and burned from the Roman destruction of the Jewish Temple nearly 2,000 years ago.

About 70 coins were found in an excavation at the foot of a key Jerusalem holy site. They give a rare glimpse into the period of the Jewish revolt that eventually led to the destruction of the Second Jewish Temple in A.D. 70, said Hava Katz, curator of the exhibition.

The Jews rebelled against the Roman Empire and took over Jerusalem in A.D. 66. After laying siege to Jerusalem, the Romans breached the city walls and wiped out the rebellion, demolishing the Jewish Temple, the holiest site in Judaism.

The coins sit inside a glass case, some melted down to unrecognizable chunks of pockmarked and carbonized bronze from the flames that destroyed the Temple.

tury,” said Gabriela Bijovsky, an antique coin expert from Israel Antiquities Authority. “These are a very vivid, dramatic example of that destruction.”

“The most important coins we have are from those last four or five years of the rebellion against the Roman army, and one coin we found was actually minted very close to the destruction of the Second Temple,” she said.

The coins were excavated from an ancient street below the Temple Mount, experts said. Archaeologists had to sift through debris and remove boulders thrown off the Temple Mount during the Roman raid before they found the road and the hoard of coins.

Today the Al Aqsa Mosque compound sits atop the ruins of the temples. Muslims refer to the site as the Noble Sanctuary, marking the spot from where they believe the Prophet Muhammad ascended to heaven. The conflicting claims make the site one the most explosive issues in the Israel-Palestinian conflict.

The coins are part of a larger exhibition in Jerusalem’s Archaeological Garden, showing a collection of antique coins that have been uncovered over the past three decades.

The exhibition shows not only coins minted in Jerusalem during the rebellion but also European, North African and Persian coins that were found around the holy site from various periods.

“This just shows the international character of the city,” Katz said. “It shows the importance of Jerusalem to generations of people ... the importance of Jerusalem never faded away for Jews, Christians and Muslims,” she said.

Scientists: New dinosaur species found in S. Africa

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — A newly discovered dinosaur species that roamed the Earth about 200 million years ago may help explain how the creatures evolved into the largest animals on land, scientists in South Africa said Wednesday.

The Aardonyx celestae was a 23-foot-long small-headed herbivore with a huge barrel of a chest. It walked on its hind legs but also could drop to all fours, and scientists told reporters that could prove to be a missing evolutionary link.

This is a species “that no one has seen before and one that has a very significant position in the family tree of dinosaurs,” said Australian paleontologist Adam Yates.

Yates, who is based at the University of the Witwatersrand’s Bernard Price Institute for Paleontological Research, led the research with a number of other local and international scientists.

Their findings were published Wednesday in the Proceedings of The Royal Society B, a London-based peer-reviewed journal.

The Aardonyx celestae species dates back to the early Jurassic period. Yates said the creature found in South Africa stood nearly 6 feet high at the hip and weighed about 1,100 pounds. It was about 10 years old when it died, and its death may have been caused by drought.

The newly discovered species shares many characteristics with the plant-eating herbivores that walked on two legs, Yates said. But the new species also has similar attributes to dinosaurs known as sauropods, or brontosaurus, that grew to massive sizes and went about on all fours with long necks and whip-like tails.

“The discovery of Aardonyx helps to fill a marked gap in our knowledge of sauropod evolution, showing how a primarily two-legged animal could start to acquire the specific features necessary for a life spent on all-fours,” said Paul Barrett, a paleontologist at the British Natural History Museum who assisted on the dig that led to the finding but was not directly involved in the research.

Why and how dinosaurs grew into such massive creatures is a question that scientists have been trying to answer for a long time.

Walking on all fours allowed animals to carry more weight, and size was often their only defense against sharp-toothed carnivores, said one of the report’s co-authors, Matthew Bonnan of Western Illinois University, by video conference.

Clearing up BSU's BCS headache

Boise State head football coach Chris Petersen can deflect the BCS talk all he likes. Doesn't mean it magically goes away. And, with the Broncos possibly staring down the barrel of their second straight snub from the power-conference-driven money machine, nor should it.

A season ago, an undefeated Boise State was No. 9 in the final BCS standings. The Broncos were passed over for two-loss Ohio State, sitting at No. 10, because undefeated Utah was at No. 5.

David Bashore

With TCU at No. 4 and the Broncos seemingly stuck in neutral at No. 6, concern exists that it could happen again.

Peruse various message boards, blogs and Web sites and you'll find no shortage of folks clamoring for both TCU and BSU to be selected if they're undefeated. You won't see a differing opinion from me, but I'm going to spell out how it will in fact come to pass.

For those needing a refresher course, there is a set criteria to be eligible for BCS selection — not necessarily to guarantee selection. A team must have at least nine regular-season wins and be ranked in the top 14 of the BCS, unless it is a champion of one of the six BCS conferences.

My projected champions are Florida (SEC), Georgia

Who to cheer for

If you're a Boise State fan, here are five teams (not counting BSU) to root for the rest of this season in order to make the Broncos' path to the BCS an easier one even if TCU beats Utah this weekend and runs the table.

1. Cincinnati. The Bearcats winning out might deny the Broncos their slim shot at getting into the BCS Championship Game, but it'll keep a team like Pittsburgh from stealing the Big East title and dropping Cincinnati into the at-large pool.
2. Texas. If the Longhorns are upset, especially in the Big 12 championship, they could sneak the last at-large berth if TCU wins out, leaving Boise State to contemplate a trip to someplace like Honolulu or perhaps San Francisco or Las Vegas.
3. Georgia Tech. For the same reasons as Texas and Cincinnati, it's important to Boise State that the Yellow Jackets aren't stung by Duke or Georgia during the regular season, or Clemson or Boston College in the ACC championship game.
4. South Florida. The last week of the regular season could be huge for Boise State's BCS dreams. If the Bulls can knock off Miami, it would eliminate another potential contender for the at-large berth BSU fans believe rightfully belongs to their team.
5. Michigan State. Penn State has to go to East Lansing next weekend, which is by no means an easy place to play. Bronco fans just might be rooting ol' Sparty on to a win that would rule the Nittany Lions out.

Tension builds as BSU-Idaho rivalry renews

By Dustin Lapray

BOISE — To slap accurate value on Saturday's collision between Boise State and Idaho would be like imparting the importance of spring rain in the thirsty desert. It's just too much.

To remind Bronco fans of the weighty import, BSU's athletics department have dubbed this Bleed Blue Week. Since plenty of Vandal fans live in the Treasure Valley, Bronco Stadium will again be flecked with gold.

The difference this season? The Vandals (7-3, 5-2 WAC) are winning again, reigniting a rivalry soured by years of Vandal mediocrity.

"I think it always adds a little more to it when both teams are in bowl situations and having a lot of success,"

Kellen Moore said. "It's a solid team that's coming in. They're going to give us their best shot. We're going to have to play four quarters and see what happens after that."

The series has endured winning streaks by both teams. BSU leads it overall 20-17-1. The Broncos won nine of the first 11 games, starting in 1971. From 1982-98, the Vandals won 17 of 19 meetings. Since then, it's been all Boise State. In the current 10-game winning streak, the Broncos have outscored Idaho 498-174. The closest the Vandals have come was a 24-10 loss in 2003. BSU has scored at least 42 points in all but two of those 10 games.

"We don't talk about streaks," BSU coach Chris Petersen said. "We talk about just beating the team we're playing. What hap-

BETTER BEGINNINGS

CSI men look to start fast in home tourney

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

Steve Gosar likes the endings. It's the beginnings that need to change.

"I'm hoping back at home that we don't start off so slow," the second-year College of Southern Idaho men's basketball coach said of his 2-0 team, which hosts the Gordon Paving-Mountain West Components Invitational today through Saturday.

The Golden Eagles won both outings at last week's Wells Fargo Tip-Off Classic in Casper, Wyo., but rallied from big deficits each time before winning comfortably.

Asked about the slow starts, redshirt freshman forward Josten Thomas said, "We don't look at it as playing bad. We feel as though the other team's already juiced because they're playing against CSI and they know that we are good. We look at it as warming up."

And once the Golden Eagles are warmed up, watch out.

"As we get it turned on, as we saw this weekend, we can do pretty deadly stuff, coming back from a 19-point and a 15-point deficit," said Thomas.

The Golden Eagles tip off their home invite tonight against Westchester (N.Y.) Community College, which is playing its first game of the season under new head coach Tyrone Mushatt.

With only one returning player and a new head coach, Westchester is a bit of a mystery. "We're going to just have to learn on the go," said Gosar.

Today's afternoon matchup features the Pro-Look All-Stars against Seward County (Kan.) CC. Pro-Look is filling in for Southeast Select, which backed out the event with the flu wiping out its roster. Pro-Look, which CSI will face on Friday night, is a team of former collegiate

GIRLS HOOPS PREVIEW: CLASS 3A

Kimberly girls seek another SCIC title

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

The Bulldogs could make it three in a row in the Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference.

The Kimberly High School girls basketball team returns four players from last year's SCIC title squad, including Alex Pfefferle, Nellie Makings, Averie Schroeder and Whitney Carlton. Pfefferle said that this group isn't as physically big as squads of years past, but they can make up with speed and intelligent play.

"It's going to be different," she said. "I think that we'll make better decisions, push the ball, have less turnovers and play better defense."

The Kimberly Trojans took home the Class 3A state runner-up trophy last year, but the loss of six players to graduation has the program in rebuilding mode. Head coach Delon Huse expects Kristen Brandsma, Krystyl Miller, Yvonne Bartholomew and Heather Sturgeon to lead a young squad through the tough conference.

Buhl could continue to grow into more of a threat as five seniors return in Courtney Azevedo, Lacy Hall, Toni Wuench, Mercedes Pearson and Bailey Montgomery. The Indians faced the Trojans Tuesday in a preseason jamboree and lost to their conference rival by a narrow margin.

"This team shows a lot of promise," Buhl head coach

CSI SPIKERS HANDED NO. 4 SEED AT NATIONALS

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

It wasn't No. 1, but the College of Southern Idaho volleyball team has to like its chances just the same.

CSI was handed the No. 4 seed for next week's NJCAA Division I Volleyball Championships during a conference call Wednesday, pitting the Golden Eagles against Seminole State College (Okla.) in the first round next Thursday in Council Bluffs, Iowa.

It means CSI likely has to go through No. 1 Salt Lake Community College to potentially reach the championship, but the team isn't fazed after playing the Bruins five times during the regular season, among other tough competition.

"The hardest part was getting there, because our conference is the toughest in the country," said CSI sophomore middle blocker Torrey Hulsey. "I have no doubt that when we get there, we're going to have fun and play well."

If CSI gets by Seminole State, the Golden Eagles would match up with Miami Dade (Fla.) or Panola (Texas). CSI beat Miami Dade in three sets earlier in the season.

CSI hoped to get the No. 2 seed initially, but the weight given to the final poll left the Golden Eagles sitting at No. 4. Western Nebraska (39-3) got the No. 2 seed, while Iowa Western (40-4) is the third seed.

The Golden Eagles' match with Seminole State will tip at 2 p.m., MST Thursday with a 6:30 p.m., quarterfinal match looming that night if they win.

Joining the Pac: Leckenby headed to WSU to pitch

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

BUHL — J.D. Leckenby is headed to a college worthy of his resume.

The lanky senior signed a National Letter of Intent Wednesday to pitch at Washington State University, fulfilling a life-long dream of securing a path to play college baseball.

"The Pac-10 is the best conference in the nation, so this is a dream come true for me," said Leckenby. "This is what I've always wanted to do, was play baseball. It's my favorite sport."

Leckenby's pitching and hitting prowess were key in Buhl's run to the Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference title and third place at the Class 3A state tournament last season.

His ability to touch 90 mph with the fastball despite being so lean was one of the major factors that led Washington State to offer him a scholarship before his junior year of high school, after impressing at a scouting camp in Pullman, Wash.

Washington State head coach Donnie Marbut said while Leckenby is raw, there is enormous room for him to develop into a potential impact pitcher.

"Just because he's such a good athlete, we think he can really do a lot of good things," Marbut said. "When you're in college and he can focus on one sport we think he can really progress. He'll be big and strong and he's capable of throwing three pitches.

"At Washington State we're not always going to get the guys who are polished right away, but we think J.D. can develop into one of the better pitchers we've had here. He might get a chance to swing the bat but we think he'll be a professional one day on the mound and we think he can be an impact guy for us one day."

Just because Leckenby's signed, sealed and delivered doesn't mean he plans to coast through his senior season, however. There's unfinished business for him both as a player and a leader.

"This is a dream of a lifetime for him, but hopefully it sets in as reality now that it's happened," said Buhl assistant baseball coach Brady Swallow. "He's committed to his teammates to work hard in the classroom and on the field, and hopefully he can be an encouragement to those guys with the same dream who look up to him."

Jerome's Callen signs with SPU to play basketball

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

JEROME — Signing a National Letter of Intent was cool. Aubree Callen's next step is to go about proving she deserves her scholarship.

Callen inked her letter to play women's basketball at Seattle Pacific University on Wednesday, the first day of the weeklong early signing period, in front of family and friends at the Jerome High School gymnasium. But she wasn't satisfied that the process was over.

"It's going to force me to get better," the senior playmaker said. "I've got to keep working hard because the jump to the college game is a big one, and I want to be in a position to contribute right away."

Callen, who led Jerome's girls basketball team to the Great Basin Conference championship the last two years and third place at the Class 4A state tournament last season, gave a verbal commitment to the Falcons last month.

She will be reunited with SPU top assistant coach

Michelle Skyles, who led Jerome to a 25-0 record and the Class 4A championship in 2004.

"I think that was a big deal for her, going with someone that she's known for a very long time," said Jerome coach Brent Clark, adding that Callen is the third Jerome player in his time with the program to sign with a four-year college.

Seattle Pacific, a NCAA Division II school and member of the Great Northwest Athletic Conference, reached the national quarterfinals a season ago. That was a major factor in landing Callen, who said she had interest from several area Division I schools.

"I wanted to go someplace where I had a chance to win a national championship," Callen said. "They've been in the Elite Eight and the Final Four, and I wasn't going to get that at a lot of the other schools that were interested in me."

Callen averaged 15 points, six rebounds, four assists and four steals last season, earning Times-News player of the year honors.

Celtics cruise to victory over Jazz

BOSTON — Rajon Rondo had 14 points and 11 assists and the Boston Celtics beat the Utah Jazz 105-86 on Wednesday night to match their 8-1 start from their title-winning season two years ago.

Boston has won two in a row since its only loss, to Phoenix on Friday.

Kevin Garnett scored 18 points, Paul Pierce had 13 and Ray Allen 15 for the Celtics.

Deron Williams, who was a game-time decision because of a bruised left calf, had 13 points, seven rebounds and four assists in 33 minutes for Utah. Ronnie Brewer added 13 points, and Paul Millsap had nine points and 13 rebounds.

Josh Smith added 22 points and 12 rebounds for the Hawks. Toney Douglas scored a season-high 23 points in his first start for the Knicks (1-8), off to their worst start since also dropping eight of nine to open the 2002-03 season.

BLAZERS 107, TIMBERWOLVES 84
MINNEAPOLIS — Greg Oden Oden had 18 points and 11 rebounds in three quarters, and Rudy Fernandez added 15 points for Portland.

The Blazers have won four in a row and are off to their best start since 1999 at 6-3. Jonny Flynn had 15 points and six rebounds for Minnesota. The Timberwolves have lost eight in a row since a season-opening win over New Jersey.

PACERS 108, WARRIORS 94
INDIANAPOLIS — Danny Granger scored 31 points and had a career-high 16 to lead Indiana to its third straight victory.

Roy Hibbert and Earl Watson each added 16 points for the Pacers. Corey Maggette led Golden State with 21 points, and Anthony Randolph had 17 points and 13 rebounds.

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Charlie Villanueva had a season-high 30 points for Detroit, outscoring Charlotte 18-12 by himself in the third quarter.

Gerald Wallace had 12 points for the Bobcats.

SPURS 92, MAVERICKS 83
SAN ANTONIO — Richard Jefferson scored 29 points and San Antonio survived another game without Tony Parker and Tim Duncan.

Manu Ginobili had 13 points in the first meeting between the Texas rivals since the Mavs cruised past the ailing Spurs in the first round of the playoffs last season, handing San Antonio its earliest playoff exit since 2000.

ROCKETS 104, GRIZZLIES 79
HOUSTON — Luis Scola had 22 points and 15 rebounds, and Carl Landry scored 20 points in Houston's victory over Memphis.

Trevor Ariza scored 17 points, Kyle Lowry had 10 assists, and rookie Chase Budinger had 15 points for the Rockets, who've won the last seven meetings against Memphis in Houston.

CAVALIERS 102, MAGIC 93
ORLANDO, Fla. — LeBron James scored 36 points, Shaquille O'Neal provided an inside presence and the Cleveland Cavaliers beat the Orlando Magic 102-93 on Wednesday night in a rematch of the Eastern Conference finals.

Only this one had a different look.

O'Neal battled boos and bruises to score 10 points and keep Dwight Howard in foul trouble for most of the night, giving James and Co. all the inside strength they sorely lacked last season.

Toby Gleave takes over the Filer program this season. He's the Wildcats' third head coach in as many seasons, and he hopes to provide stability. Gleave was an assistant under Joe D. Shepard a few years ago at Twin Falls High School.

The Wildcats return only two starters in Natalie Hughes and Charmaine Weatherly. Hughes is a 6-foot-1 senior post, while Weatherly is a 5-7 senior guard. Gleave said that guard Kindee Wilson and point guard Taylor Twitchell saw some varsity minutes last year and will get more this winter. Two juniors, a sophomore and a freshman make up the rest of the squad, so the lack of varsity experience will be an issue to overcome.

In Gooding, the Senators will face a lack of depth as only seven players are listed on the roster.

The consensus is that Kimberly is the team to beat. Bulldog coach Rich Bishop is staying cautiously optimistic.

"You never know," he said. "It's always kind of a mystery. Teams in this league will surprise you. We just hope we can take care of business on our end."

the Saints will be looking to return the favor.

"They're going to be a tough team to beat," he said.

Gosar said his team's focus is most inward, trying to improve its own execution rather than focusing on opponents. He felt last week's early struggles were mostly a matter of nerves as new players settle into their roles.

"It showed that we had a bunch of fresh faces out there without any returning starters to lean on," he said.

Redshirt freshman guard Carrick Felix scored 18 points in the season-opener at Northwest (Wyo.) College and added 23 against Casper College, while Thomas scored 17 against Northwest and had a 16-point, 12-rebound effort against Casper.

Point guard Pierre Jackson came off the bench to provide a nice spark despite getting only a couple practices under his belt after returning from a broken elbow that required surgery. Center Romario Souza is still slowed by a sore back, but is expected to play today.

Thomas is looking forward to playing at CSI Gymnasium.

"It's going to be really exciting," he said. "Even with the away crowd booing and all types of stuff, it drives me to play harder just like the crowd here. When we get into it, they get into it and it drives the whole team to play harder."

CSI is asking fans to wear white to Saturday's matchup with Seward County as the Golden Eagles go for a white-out in CSI Gymnasium. Gordon Paving and Mountain West Components will also give away white T-shirts to a select number of fans.

Quinn back in saddle for Browns, will start Monday

BEREA, Ohio — Brady Quinn and the Cleveland Browns are right back where they started.

Benched by coach Eric Mangini just 2 1/2 games and 69 pass attempts into the season, Quinn will start Monday night's game against the Baltimore Ravens, the team he was facing on Sept. 27 when the former Notre Dame star was yanked at halftime.

Quinn's got his second chance. Now he must make the most of it.

"I'm excited to play," he said. "I'm excited to be part of Monday night"

Quinn never worried about getting another opportunity. He was confident it would come. Patience is the one thing he has mastered during his short pro career.

"That's kind of how I've learned to live life, at least in the NFL," he said.

Mangini's decision to switch back from Derek Anderson to Quinn wasn't met with overwhelming support in Cleveland's locker room. Several Browns players interviewed on Wednesday said they were unaware of Quinn's return to the top of the depth chart.

With his team at 1-7 and showing little progress amid growing speculation about his future, Mangini may as well give Quinn another look to see if he can get things going. Quinn can't do any worse than Anderson, who was a disaster in five starts.

Anderson posted the NFL's lowest passer rating (36.2) and was unable to crank up Cleveland's offense, which to this point has been outscored by the New Orleans defense.

Mangini said it wasn't all Anderson's fault, but there was no way the Browns could continue in reverse.

BILLS WR OWENS MISSES PRACTICE DUE TO HIP INJURY

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — Trent Edwards is back as the Buffalo Bills starter, though he might be missing his top threat after Terrell Owens missed practice Wednesday because of a strained hip.

Coach Dick Jauron said Owens' hip began bothering him during the team's day off on Tuesday, and he noted that the receiver was feeling "very uncomfortable" when he arrived for meetings on Wednesday. It's unclear how Owens was hurt, because he practiced on Monday after the team returned from a four-day break following its bye.

Jauron was unsure whether Owens will be able to practice as the Bills

(3-5) prepare to play at the Titans (2-6) on Sunday.

"We're kind of hoping it goes away as quickly as it came," Jauron said. "We really won't know any more until tomorrow."

Owens declined to speak to reporters when he made a brief appearance in the locker room after practice. He's not missed a game this season since signing a one-year deal with the Bills in March, but he did miss Buffalo's final four preseason games because of an injured toe.

FAVRE SAYS HE THINKS HIS GROIN INJURY WILL BE FINE

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. — The latest injury Brett Favre must fight to maintain his record durability streak is a pulled groin muscle. Back from his bye week, Favre said he believes he'll be fine.

Favre said he was hurt in practice while rolling out during a drill two weeks ago and aggravated the injury in pregame warmups at Green Bay on Nov. 1. The Vikings didn't play last week, giving their 40-year-old quarterback extra time to heal.

"It was a concern for the game. I made it through. With a week's rest I think I'll be fine," Favre said Wednesday. "But I'm not going to make it a bigger issue than it is. It's kind of a new thing for me. To play 18 some-odd years and not have anything like that that probably worried me more than anything. But I think I'll be fine."

Favre said the injury bothered him during the Packers game, but "not as bad" as he feared it might. He told coach Brad Childress, offensive coordinator Darrell Bevell and backup quarterback Tarvaris Jackson to be ready in case he couldn't finish the game.

Singletary not focused on facing former team

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Mike Singletary became a Hall of Fame linebacker with the Chicago Bears during a 12-year career spent all with the same club. Photos of Singletary and his Monsters of the Midway brethren still hang in the linebackers meeting room, reminders of the Bears' special 1985 Super Bowl season.

"He's obviously one of the great leaders to walk these halls," Chicago linebacker Lance Briggs said.

For Singletary, this is no time to turn nostalgic.

He would rather not reflect too much on his time with the Bears. He has few ties there anymore and finding a way to beat his former team is all he can think about right now.

Singletary's 49ers (3-5) are desperate to get back on track, mired in a four-game losing streak that dropped them two games out of first place in the NFC West after they led the division only a month ago and were talking playoffs.

"The Bears will always be a team that I love," Singletary said. "The Bears, so many friends, family, memories, that goes without saying. ... I'm glad this is not the first time I am playing the Bears because that would be tough. Now that I have played them a couple times, it's just a matter of going out there and competing against a good football team and trying to do the best I can"

Singletary's goals for his team haven't changed, but it will take an impressive climb to get back in the postseason mix. Singletary liked how his offense played aside from the costly mistakes.

He still believes the 49ers will pull out of this funk, and be better having gone through it.

"In these moments, this is when I am at my best because in these situations you just have to rise above and you have to put your best foot forward," Singletary said. "You have to be positive. You have to look at where things are and just call it what it is. I can't get lost in the reality of the four losses. It's not something

Buckeyes look to get back to Rose Bowl

By Ralph D. Russo
Associated Press writer

The last time Ohio State played in the Rose Bowl was Jan. 1, 1997. It's almost hard to believe it's been that long.

The Buckeyes under coach Jim Tressel have been the dominant team in the Big Ten for the past decade, winning at least a share of the last four conference titles. But in a BCS world, Texas and Oklahoma have played in the Rose Bowl more often in the past 10 years than Ohio State.

"It's something that Ohio State hasn't been to in a while," tight end Jake Ballard said. "It's something that I think the Buckeyes need to bring back to Columbus."

The Buckeyes are a victory away from ending that Rose-less run.

No. 15 Iowa visits Ohio Stadium on Saturday and the winner gets a trip to Pasadena, Calif., and a New Year's Day date with the Pac-10 champion.

Ohio State's last Rose Bowl trip was a memorable one. The Buckeyes topped Jake Plummer's late-game heroics with some of their own and beat Arizona State 20-17.

The Hawkeyes have gone without a Rose Bowl bid even longer than the Buckeyes. Hayden Fry was still at the helm in Iowa when it lost to Washington 46-34 in the 1991 Rose Bowl.

The other marquee game with major BCS implications on Saturday will be in Texas.

No. 16 Utah is at No. 4 TCU, and the Horned Frogs have legitimate national title hopes. They'll need plenty of help to get to Pasadena for the BCS national championship game, but beating the Utes represents the toughest task remaining on the road to an undefeated regular season and the Frogs' first chance to play in any of the five big-money bowls.

The picks:

Tech (ACC), Oregon (Pac 10), Ohio State (Big 10), Texas (Big 12) and Cincinnati (Big East). Those six champs qualify no matter what.

The only way a non-BCS conference champion is automatically included is if it finishes in the Top 12 in the final BCS rankings, or in the Top 16 if it is ahead of any BCS conference champion.

It's likely that TCU or Boise State, or both, will meet that criteria but the BCS is required only to take one of the two. Assuming TCU takes care of Utah this week, the Horned Frogs would be all but assured of the seventh automatic bid, leaving three at-larges.

One is sure to go to the loser of the SEC championship game between Florida and Alabama, if both are unbeaten when they play next month. Otherwise LSU will get the conference's second bid. (A conference can receive no more than two BCS bids.)

ed for USC should the Trojans win out, even though they were embarrassed by Oregon and lost to Washington earlier in the year. That leaves one, with Boise State competing against teams like Penn State, Pittsburgh and Miami — or maybe even fellow non-BCS team Houston. I believe Iowa will be essentially eliminated this week by Ohio State, and Oklahoma State will lose to Oklahoma to rule out its chances as well.

Penn State, Pitt and Miami all travel better than Boise State and are higher-profile programs — distinct advantages. But they have to finish in the top 14 to be considered.

Put Boise State with the nine teams I believe are locks to make the BCS, and you have 10 of my expected final top 14. LSU, which may not factor into this equation depending on Florida and Alabama, makes 11. That leaves three possible teams to compete with Boise State.

Ohio State and Iowa play each other this week. The winner probably gets the Big 10 title and an automatic BCS berth, while the loser is scrambling to back-door into the top 14 to be considered.

I expect Boise State to be battling with Houston, Virginia Tech and South Florida for final consideration. The Broncos would likely win out over Houston based on their undefeated record and win over Oregon, a better win than Houston's victories over Oklahoma State or Texas Tech. South Florida would have two Football Championship Subdivision wins among its 10, dealing its hopes a crippling blow.

That leaves a straight-up choice between Boise State and Virginia Tech for that final spot, some nine months before the two teams meet on the field in Washington. But while taking a two-loss team close to Boise State in the rankings last year was a kick to the teeth for the Broncos, picking a three-loss squad, even one as good as the Hokies, is surely unthinkable.

Even for the BCS.

Rivalry

called "Hate Week" in Moscow. Should the Vandals spawn an upset, they could ruin the Broncos' BCS bid, end a decade-long streak and quiet a Bronco Nation that hasn't had to deal with an in-state loss in half a generation.

Idaho coach Robb Akey got things rolling in his Monday press conference with this: "My goal is that on ... Saturday night that I will be the least popular individual with every administrator within the WAC conference because we have taken the BCS hopes away from our conference."

The Broncos aren't looking past Idaho.

"I know we respect them," Daron Mackey said. "I don't know if there's too much love there. They're having a good season so far. They're definitely making this game a big deal. Our goal is to get a win, no matter how it turns out, no matter how it looks."

Rivalries are won on the field, but their importance floods the state as well, dividing families, fueling debates between co-workers, etc. And since the

IDAHO AD REFUSES TO BOARD BOISE ST.-THEMED PLANE

MOSCOW (AP) — The Boise State vs. Idaho rivalry has taken to some not-so-friendly skies. Idaho athletic director Rob Spear says he declined to board a Horizon Air flight after learning the airplane was painted in Boise State's blue and orange colors. Spear was traveling to Boise on Saturday for fundraising events. He requested another flight and then drove about 90 miles north to fly from the Spokane, Wash., airport to Boise. Boise State and Horizon Air unveiled the plane, which sports the team logo on its tail, as an ode to the Broncos earlier this month. Spear says he'll board the plane after Horizon Air paints an airplane for the Vandals, whose football team will try to beat the No. 6 Broncos this Saturday for the first time since 1998.

Vandals are winning, the Gold and Black populous is again proud to wear its colors.

"There's a lot more Vandal fans coming out now," Austin Pettis said. "I didn't know a lot of my friends were Vandal fans at heart. It's always fun when you got people going against you."

Considering BSU's dominance in the matchup, is it still a rivalry?

"It's more of a rivalry for us because it's going to be a more competitive game," Pettis said. "That's even better for us, because we haven't experienced (losing to Idaho), and different stuff like that and how close that matchup was a couple of years back. We're going to have to come out here and play a real good game and compete with these guys a lot."

The Broncos say they approach every game the same, but this one has to carry added importance.

AMENDED NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

On Monday, February 22, 2010 at the hour of 10:30 o'clock A.M., of said day, on the steps of the Lincoln County Courthouse located at 111 West B Street Shoshone, ID 83352. Alliance Title & Escrow Corp., as successor trustee, will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder, for cash, cashiers check, certified check or tellers check, (from a bank which has a branch in the community at the site of the sale), money order, State of Idaho check or local government check, or cash equivalent in lawful money of the United States, all payable at the same time of sale, the following described real property, situated in the County of Lincoln, State of Idaho, and described as follows, to wit:

Lot 3 and the South 20 feet of Lot 4 in Block 1, First Addition to Shoshone, Lincoln County, State of Idaho, as the same is platted in the official plat thereof, now of record in the office of the recorder of said county.

THE TRUSTEE HAS NO KNOWLEDGE OF A MORE PARTICULAR DESCRIPTION OF THE ABOVE-DESCRIBED REAL PROPERTY, BUT FOR PURPOSES OF COMPLIANCE WITH IDAHO CODE, SECTION 60-113, THE TRUSTEE HAS BEEN INFORMED THAT THE STREET ADDRESS OF: 503 North Birch Street, Shoshone, ID 83352, MAY SOMETIMES BE ASSOCIATED WITH SAID REAL PROPERTY.

If the successful bidder cannot provide the bid price by means of one of the above means of payment, the sale will be postponed for 10 minutes only to allow the high bidder to obtain payment in a form prescribed herein above. If the high bidder is unsuccessful in obtaining payment as directed within 10 minutes, the sale will be re-held immediately and any bid by the high bidder from the previous sale, will be rejected, all in accordance with Idaho Code 45-1502 et. Sec.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possession or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the deed of trust executed by Tiburcio Bedolla, an unmarried man and Juana Yuliana Frias, an unmarried woman, as Grantor to Alliance Title & Escrow Corp., as Successor Trustee, for the benefit and security of Chase Home Finance LLC as Successor Beneficiary, recorded November 6, 2007 as Instrument No. 183990, Mortgage records of Lincoln County, Idaho. THE ABOVE GRANTORS ARE NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 45-1506(4)(a), IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR ARE NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION.

The default for which this sale is to be made is failure to:

Make principal and interest payments as set forth on said Deed of Trust and Promissory Note. The original loan amount was $83,194.00 together with interest thereon at the rate of 7.00% per annum, as evidenced in Promissory Note dated November 2, 2007. Payments are in default for the months of April 2009 thru & including August 2009 in the amount of $805.21 per month and continuing each and every month thereafter until date of sale or reinstatement. The principal balance as of August 24, 2009 is $82,090.58 together with accrued and accruing interest thereon at the rate of 7.00% per annum. In addition to the above, there is also due any late charges, advances, escrow collection fees, attorney fees, fees or costs associated with this foreclosure.

The balance owing as of this date on the obligation secured by said deed of trust is $82,090.58, excluding interest, costs and expenses actually incurred in enforcing the obligations thereunder or in this sale, as trustee's fees and/or reasonable attorney's fees as authorized in the promissory note secured by the aforementioned Deed of Trust.

NOTICE OF SALE

On the 25th day of February, 2010, at the hour of 11:00 A.M. of said day, at the lobby of the office of Cassia County Abstract, Ltd., 1245 Overland Avenue, Burley, Idaho, trustee, will sell at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, lawful money of the United States, all payable at the time of sale, the below described real estate situated in Cassia County, State of Idaho, below described.

The beneficiaries, Lionel Rodriguez and Jennie Rodriguez, husband and wife, have elected to declare the entire balance due under a certain promissory note and to sell or cause to be sold the trust property (commonly known as or located near 550 West Highway 30, Burley, Idaho) to satisfy said obligation. The property is more particularly described as:

Part of the NE¼SW¼ of Section 29 of Township 10 South, Range 22 East of the Boise Meridian, Cassia County, State of Idaho.

Beginning at the SE corner of the NE¼SW¼ of Section 29 of T.10 S, R. 22 E., B.M. said corner marked by a 5/8" rebar; Thence North 00°08'09" East (N 00°24'E, rec.) along the east line of the SW¼ for a distance of 221.90 feet to a ½" rebar which shall be the Point of Beginning; THENCE South 89°58'25" West for a distance of 197.00 feet to a ½" rebar; THENCE North 00°08'09" East (N 0°24' E, rec.) for a distance of 221.90 feet to a ½" rebar; THENCE North 89°58'24" East (S 89°55'E., rec.) for a distance of 197.00 feet to a ½" rebar on the east line of the SE¼; THENCE South 00°08'09" West (S 0°24'W., rec.) for a distance of 221.90 feet to the Point of Beginning.

Subject to a 25 foot access easement along the east side and TOGETHER WITH a 25 foot wide access easement as reserved for road purposes and utilities along the east side of that property as deeded to Earl E. and M. Ivalou Johnson by Warranty Deed recorded Dec. 2, 1965 as instrument no. 27093 and subject to any other easements or right of ways, existing or of record.

Said sale will be made without covenant of warranty regarding title, possession, or encumbrances, to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the Deed of Trust dated February 9, 2005, between themselves, as beneficiaries, and Daniel Caldera-Castro and Maria Caldera, husband and wife, of 618 East 6th Street, Burley, Idaho 83318, all as AGrantor®, recorded as Instrument Number 281272 in the records of the Recorder of Cassia County, Idaho on May 2, 2002, given to Lionel Rodriguez and Jennie Rodriguez, husband and wife, as beneficiaries.

Foreclosure is being effected because of default in the payment of the obligation due and owing from the grantor to beneficiaries, and evidenced by a promissory note, which said obligation is secured by the said deed of trust. Said default, as of the date of the Notice of Default, is the failure to make installment payments and/or payments of taxes, late payment fees, and insurance in the sum of $622.52 as of this date, plus accruing interest, under Deed of Trust Note and Deed of Trust. The total principal and interest due is $4,174.42 as of September 16, 2009, which amount is due plus accrued interest, late charges, back real property taxes, escrow fees, attorneys fees and any other costs or expenses associated with this foreclosure. The Notice of Default was recorded in the records of Cassia County Idaho on September 25, 2009, as Instrument No. 2009-004842.

That by reason of said default, the beneficiaries of said deed of trust have, in the Notice of Default, declared all sums secured by said deed of trust immediately due and payable.

For additional information contact the trustee or the attorney for the beneficiaries: Steven A. Tuft, 1918 Overland Avenue, P.O. Box 759, Burley, Idaho 83318. Tel: 208-878-2922.

Date Filed: 1/3/2008

Application proposes recording the use of water associated with a pond located approximately 0.85 miles north and 1.4 miles west of the center of Buhl. The application proposes allowing continual storage of 4.2 acre-feet of water for wildlife purposes and to record wildlife use as an authorized use for up to 0.40 cfs of water from an unnamed stream located on the west edge of the pond. This 0.40 cfs of water is the same water diverted pursuant to irrigation right 47-2370. The application proposes no additional diversion from the stream beyond what is currently allowed by the existing irrigation right, only recording a new use of the same water. The application proposes providing water for the initial filling of the pond by not irrigating 1.4 acres during the 2008 irrigation season. Companion transfer # 74313 also proposes permanently converting a 1.5 acre portion of irrigation right 47-2370 to wildlife use to provide water for evaporative losses associated with the pond. *Permit will be subject to all prior water rights. Protests may be submitted based on the criteria of Idaho Code § 42-211. Application for Transfer No. 74313 proposes changing a 0.04 cfs (1.5 acre) portion of irrigation right 47-2370 to wildlife use associated with a pond located approximately 0.85 miles north and 1.4 miles west of the center of Buhl. The remaining 0.36 cfs (13.5 acres) portion of right 47-2370 will be used to irrigate land around the pond. In total, up to 0.40 cfs will be diverted from four points of diversion from an unnamed stream that flows along the west edge of the pond. Protests may be submitted based on the criteria of Idaho Code Sec. 42-222*For specific details regarding an application, please contact IDWR Southern Regional Office at 208-736-3033 or visit the website for the Department at <http://www.idwr.idaho.gov/apps/ExtSearch/WRFfiling.asp> Protests may be submitted based on the criteria of Sec 42-222, Idaho Code. Protests against approval must be filed with IDWR, Southern Region, 1341 Fillmore St.-Suite 200; Twin Falls, ID 83301 with a protest fee of $25.00 for each application on or before November 23, 2009. The protestant must also send a copy of the protest to the applicant.

NOTICE OF PROPOSED CHANGES TO WATER RIGHTS

Notice is hereby given that several applications for Transfer have been filed with the Idaho Department of Water Resources for changes to water rights within the local area.Application No. 75351 filed by MICHAEL W. and CONNIE J. THOMPSON, 335 W 300 N; JEROME ID 83338 concerns Right Nos. 36-7337H, 36-8545, 36-14504, 36-14786, 36-14505, 36-16693, 36-16547, & 36-16380 within Jerome County. Transfer proposes to dry up 7.9 acres currently diverted from ground water for irrigation in the Hazleton area and convert 0.16 cfs and 25 AF to stock water and commercial uses for expansion of an existing dairy in the Jerome area. It also proposes to move 0.06 cfs and 18 AF from an existing heifer facility in Jerome and move it across the road and west approximately one mile to the same dairy. No new wells will be drilled. The dairy facility is located approximately 3 miles north and 2.5 miles west of Jerome.Application No. 72954 filed by AARDEMA FARMS LTD PARTNERSHIP, 2306 E 3600 S; WENDELL ID 83355 concerns Right Nos. 36-14035B, 36-14035C, 36-2586C, & 36-2586B within Jerome County. This application proposes to dry up irrigated land on this farm to provide water for enlargement of the existing dairy located on the same farm. The two existing dairy wells will continue to provide water for the facility; no new wells will be drilled. The dairy is located in Jerome County 7 3/4 miles south of Shoshone and 1 1/2 miles west of Hwy. 93.Application No. 76051 filed by MARK T. and LONNA NEWCOMB, 251 E 200 S; RUPERT ID 83350 concerns Right Nos. 45-2508, 45-2389B, 45-12441, 845-13629 within Cassia County. This application proposes to drill a replacement irrigation well to make up for a well that went dry and for declining production in two other wells. The new well will be located about 2 1/4 miles east and 4 miles north of the Declo city center (1/2 mile north of Hwy I-84).Application No. 76058 filed by JOHN R. and MARGARET A. LE MOYNE, 901A GRIDLEY ISLAND; HAGERMAN ID 83332 concerns Right No. 2-10037 within Gooding County.

This application proposed to add a point of diversion on the north side of the LeMoyné property located on Gridley Island west of Hwy. 30 about 3 1/2 miles south of Hagerman. The application also clarifies the location of the existing point of diversion, and more-accurately describes the current place of use. If the transfer is approved, the Riley Creek water right that also serves this property will be relinquished. *To see a full description of these rights and a proposed transfer, please contact IDWR Southern Regional Office at 208-736-3033 or visit the website for the Department at www.idwr.idaho.gov/apps/ExtSearch/WRFiling.asp Protests may be submitted based on the criteria of Sec 42-222, Idaho Code. NOTICE OF MITIGATION PLAN SUBMITTAL BY
SOUTHWEST AND GOOSE CREEK IRRIGATION DISTRICTS IN RESPONSE TO BLUE LAKES AND SNAKE RIVER FARM WATER DELIVERY CALLS

Notice is hereby given that on October 20, 2009, Southwest Irrigation District ("SWID"), and Goose Creek Irrigation District ("GCID"), through their counsel, Parsons, Smith and Stone, LLP, PO Box 910, Burley, ID, 83318, submitted the Southwest and Goose Creek Irrigation District Mitigation Plan 2010 ("plan" or "mitigation plan") to the Idaho Department of Water Resources ("Department"). The Department will process this plan pursuant to the Department's Conjunctive Management Rules (IDAPA 37, Title 03, Chapter 11).

SWID and GCID represent numerous landowners who hold ground water rights for irrigation uses located within Cassia and Twin Falls Counties. Certain of these ground water rights have priority dates junior to the priority dates of certain water rights from spring sources that discharge to various reaches of the Snake River. The ground water and springs are interconnected sources of water.

SWID and GCID have proposed the mitigation plan to mitigate injury to specific senior priority surface water rights that may result from depletions under junior priority ground water rights held by SWID and GCID members. The surface water rights that the plan proposes to benefit are: 36-2356A, 36-7210 and 36-7427 held by Blue Lakes Trout Farm, Inc. for use at its hatchery facility near Blue Lakes; and 36-4013A, 36-4013B, and 36-7148 held by Clear Springs Foods, Inc. for use at its hatchery facility near Clear Lakes. The plan provides for continued and new conversions of irrigated land from ground water to surface water and waste water supplies, the ongoing enrollment of ground water irrigated lands in the Conservation Reserve Enhancement Program, the ongoing voluntary curtailment of specific ground water irrigated acres under ground water rights held by SWID and GCID members, and seasonal aquifer recharge through injection of surface water to ground water wells and/or open ditches.

The Department has not determined the adequacy of the proposed plan. A complete copy of the proposed plan is available for review at either the Department's State Office in Boise, the Department's Regional Office in Twin Falls, or may be viewed online at the following website along with other related documents:

http://www.idwr.idaho.gov/News/WaterCalls/1000Spring%20Users%20Calls/blue_lakes.htm

Any protest against approval of the plan must be filed with the Department, together with a protest fee of $25, on or before November 23, 2009. The protest must include a certificate of service showing that a copy of the protest has been mailed to or served on SWID and GCID, and their counsel.

MORATORIUM

A MORATORIUM of the CITY OF DIETRICH, State of Idaho, regarding the issuance of building permits, sewer hook-ups and water hook-ups within the City of Dietrich.

WHEREAS, the Dietrich City Council is in the process of evaluating the capacity of its sewer and water system; and,

WHEREAS, there has been an influx of applications and proposals for new developments within the City; and,

WHEREAS, the City of Dietrich is, at this time, not fully confident that the City's water and sewer system has the capacity to handle new water and sewer hook-ups; and,

WHEREAS, the City has hired an engineer to evaluate the capacity of the systems and develop a standard for the issuance of building permits, sewer hook-ups and water hook-ups; and,

WHEREAS, The Dietrich City Council hereby determines that an emergency exists.

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED BY THE CITY OF DIETRICH, IDAHO, That a moratorium on the issuance of building permits, sewer hook-ups, and water hook-ups, within the City of Dietrich is hereby adopted for a period not to exceed one hundred eighty (180) days. It is ordered that no building permits be issued, no sewer hook-ups allowed, and no water hook-ups allowed, in the City until this moratorium is cancelled. This moratorium is passed by the City Council and approved by the Mayor of the City of Dietrich, this 2nd day of November, 2009.

IF NOVEMBER 12 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Your enthusiasm is contagious. You can ace business deals and make a favorable showing on the career front during the next several weeks. Because you have more enthusiasm than wisdom, it is a good idea to study diligently and learn more about how to achieve your most cherished ideas. Next April you will have ample opportunities to put your ideas into motion and will have the knowledge, help and guidance needed to follow through. Next April is also a time when you will have proof whether a person in your life is in it for the long haul.

HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21-April 19): This is the time to spread your wings and explore new vistas, but you would be wise to stay grounded if you experience turbulence.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): New goals and objectives seem entirely reachable today and you may meet people who can help you achieve your most important ambitions.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Words of wisdom might be right at your fingertips. Avoid arguments or confrontations with others and wait to sign crucial documents.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): It's OK to retreat to your quiet cave. This may give you a chance to think about the people you can count on through thick and thin.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You have great ambitions, but may be so riveted upon achieving them that you cause someone to doubt your trustworthiness.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Start any new undertaking that depends on computers, international contacts or public acclaim to get the upper hand.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A new flirtation may be based on a false assumption. This is a good day to make a new friend, but not a good day to pursue romance.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): This is a good time to appear in public. But if you try something different, you are sure to run into opposition from someone.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Take the road less traveled. The power is in the hands of those who display unique qualities and appeal to the public.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Although the spirit of the day welcomes open mindedness and brotherly love, you may need to honor formalities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You may think you can charm your way out of any impasse, but your smooth-talking ways could boomerang and cause a breakup.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Something you do or say could have a major impact on your fans. Your influence can live in someone's memory for a long time.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"We must laugh at man to avoid crying for him."

— Napoleon Bonaparte

When this deal came up at the Dyspeptics Club, South very reasonably decided that there was no point in introducing his club suit opposite a passed hand. He just described the main features of his hand with a jump to three hearts, and his partner raised to four.

West led the club two to East's seven and declarer's ace. Can you see any likely traps when the trump queen is taken by East's ace?

After winning the ace of trumps, East continued deviously with the club jack. Declarer, who could not envisage such deception, played his club king before the rats could get it. Alas for him, West ruffed in and there was now no way of avoiding two subsequent losers in the club suit.

I hope that if you had been in declarer's shoes, you would have seen far enough ahead to sidestep this little trap. All that declarer needed to do was count his tricks — he could afford to lose two clubs, but not three. He should have played the club four under the jack. East would then have the club Q-9 left, and if he continued with the nine, declarer could play low from his hand, and West would be ruffing a loser. Declarer would then lose just two trumps and one club.

Suppose instead that East continued with the club queen. Declarer would cover with the king, and West would then be welcome to ruff. Dummy's club 10 would be good for a trick on the fourth round.

Vulnerable:

DEAR ABBY: May I respond to your column regarding excessive waits in doctors' offices (Sept. 1)?

I am a board-certified interventional cardiologist who has been practicing for 30 years. I work 85 to 90 hours each week. As hard as we try, our office schedule often falls behind. Despite recommendations that acute problems go to the emergency room, unscheduled patients come to the office with chest pains, and they must be attended to.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Even scheduled patients can develop complex medical issues that require extra, unplanned time to evaluate and treat.

Our patients with a history of heart disease do not mind waiting when the office runs behind because they receive the same specialized extra-care treatment when they need it. Delays that result from spending extra time evaluating and treating sick patients with complicated problems is not "unprofessional" behavior as "Larry W" implied. On the contrary, it relates to the art of medicine and caring for the well-being of each patient above all else.

And for the architect, I wonder when he last worked a 90-hour week, took seven or eight phone calls from his clients after midnight, and got up at 3 a.m. to do an emergency two-hour procedure before returning to his office at 8 in the morning bright-eyed, bushy-tailed and running on schedule the rest of the day?

— DR. RON IN LAS VEGAS

DEAR DR. RON: I felt it was only fair to print your response to my follow-up column on "Sick of Waiting in Denver." That column elicited a mountain of letters, all of them offering reasonable explanations for the delays in medical offices.

Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Many factors cause doctors to run behind. Routine physicals can reveal life-threatening conditions that must be dealt with immediately.

Also, people do not reveal the true reason for their visit when they call, so they are not given the appropriate amount of time for the appointment. A teenager brought in for vomiting could have the stomach flu, onset diabetes or even be pregnant.

A colleague once had a woman complaining of abdominal pain who gave birth in the exam room. That definitely took more than 15 minutes!

— M.D. IN WOODSTOCK, ILL.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is a thoracic surgeon who spends four days a week in the O.R. and one action-packed day seeing patients in his office in addition to his on-call schedules. When I ask my husband what held him up when he gets home late for dinner, his response is always the same: "I give each patient my undivided attention. I would never cut them off or hurry to see the next one until I know every concern was addressed." If these readers who complained about waiting have a doctor as kind and caring as my husband, their wait is worth every second.

— MARRIED TO A WONDERFUL MAN

DEAR ABBY: Every single day, multiple patients wait until their appointment time is up to say, "There's just one more thing I was afraid to bring up..." Then they tell me about their chest pain, depression or possible abuse. These are things I cannot and will not ignore. But it does mean the next patient will have to wait.

Some people behave as if they're going to a fast food drive-thru. And if things don't change, that is exactly the kind of care they'll end up getting.

— DELMAR, N.Y. DOCTOR
