Gooding, Harry Orchard, and the struggle for Idaho

fter 119 years of statehood, Frank Robert Gooding is still the only governor of Idaho from the Magic Valley. But did Gooding violate the law in trying to get a criminal confession from the man charged with assassinating one of his predecessors?

Gooding, a Republican, was governor when Harry Orchard was charged with conspiracy to assassinate former Gov. Frank Steunberg, a Democrat, in Pinkerton agent James McParland arrested Orchard, a longtime labor activist, and transferred him from the relatively comfortable Caldwell jail to death row in the Idaho State Penitentiary before any trial occurred, according to author Peter Carlson.

McParland later threat ened Orchard with immediate hanging, and said that he could avoid that fate only if he testified against leaders of the Industrial Workers of the World. Orchard confessed, and was transferred from death row to a private bungalow in the prison yard.

McParland then had IWW leaders Bill Havwood. Charles Moyer and George Pettibone arrested in Colorado, using extradition papers which falsely claimed that the three men had been present at Steunenberg's murder.

The investigation and trial were financed with "deficiency certificates."

In his book "Big Trouble," J. Anthony Lukas recorded that with the use of these certificates, the bank acted as a conduit for the passage of money from the mining industry to the state for use in the Haywood prosecu-mine owners to the prosecuting attorneys in the case. Thus, mine owners were deliberately financing the state's prosecution of leaders of the union that had been organizing their mines. Upon hearing of this circumstance, President Theodore Roosevelt issued a particularly stern rebuke to Gooding, describing such a state of affairs as the "grossest impropriety."

Roosevelt wrote: "Idaho's government would make a fatal mistake - and when I say fatal I mean literally that - if it permits itself to be identified with the operators any more than with the miners."

Gooding's response provided a "severely distorted" account of the financial arrangements for the trial, shifted blame to others, and promised to return money contributed by the mine owners. Gooding then kept the narrowest construction of his promise to the president - he proclaimed publicly and often that no dollar has been or will be supplied from any private source or organization whatsoever, and went on taking money from mine owners.

Pettibone, Haywood and Moyer were acquitted of conspiracy in the killing. Orchard was convicted and sentenced to death. His sentence was commuted, and he spent the rest of his life in an Idaho prison.

Gooding lost the Republican primary in 1908, but was later elected U.S. senator - for two terms - in

Board requirement could derail Rock Creek Fire grant

By Nate Poppino Times-News writer

KIMBERLY An attempt by the Rock Creek Rural Fire Protection District to secure a grant to pay for a new fire station nearly ground to a halt Thursday after county officials determined its board doesn't conform to Idaho law.

Officials still weren't sure after an evening public hearing whether county commissioners will be block-grant application by its Nov. 20 due date.

If secured, the Idaho

Department of Commerce grant would cover $500,000 of a $2.4 million fire station in Kimberly. The rules of the grant require the county to apply on the fire district's behalf. But County Commissioner Tom Mikesell told the roughly 10 people who gathered for the hearing that he would not sign any documents until the district's elected board of commissioners has one representative from Cassia County – an issue Twin Falls County was alerted to just earlier that afternoon, he said.

Though the district primarily serves the eastern end of Twin Falls County, it extends to cover seven families just south of 2900 North Road in Cassia County. So, according to

"I don't know how to through." willing to sign off on a move on past that at this point," Mikesell said.

The news left district personnel - all but one member of the audience — struggling to conjure solutions. Mikesell and County Chairman Commission George Urie assured them that state legislators aren't likely to change that particular law when they meet in January, and Mikesell said the only option may be appointing a new member.

Assuming someone in the seven families is willing to serve, state law may allow for a board change within the next week. The district board, not the county, is required to fill its own vacancies within 60 days of learning about them — first publishing a notice of the vacancy, date of the meeting when the new board member will be selected and a deadline for new applicants in at least one area newspaper. Idaho open-meeting Idaho Code 31-1408, it law requires at least five appears only two of the days' notice for a public board's "regular" meetings, but only 24 hours' notice for 'special" meetings.

Also unclear is the issue's effect on the grant beyond county's concerns. Grant proposals are reviewed by Commerce and then by an advisory council three board members can for Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter. Jeff McCurdy, the project's grant facilitator with Region does not appear to have IV Development, wasn't sure but said he thought the discrepancy "would be something we can work

Dairymen benefit from Clear Springs, coalition water donations

By Nate Poppino Times-News writer

Two groups of senior water users have donated mitigation water to Magic Valley dairymen who are junior users, a move they said was made to help out the "crucial" Magic Valley industry.

The water, run through the North Side Canal Co.'s system through last week, was required as part of an agreement between dairymen and Clear Springs Foods of Buhl to make up for groundwater pumping that infringed on Clear Springs' water rights.

Oddly, Clear Springs was actually one of the donors. Both the fish company and a group of canal company and irrigation districts known as the Surface Water Coalition provided 1,500 acre-feet and nearly 2,200 acre-feet. respectively, to the Idaho Dairy Water and Land Trust, a subsidiary of the Idaho Dairymen's Association.

In a lawsuit filed this month, Lowe — who was dismissed in July by the Idaho Transportation Board alleges that she was sacked after refusing to bow to threats by the governor's aides that she not interfere with a contract originally worth $50 million which benefited Washington Group International and CH2M Hill. The companies were hired as program managers for ITD's Grant Anticipation Revenue Vehicle bond program.

The lawsuit points out that the two firms and their staff and families were major campaign contributors to Otter and state Sen. John McGee, R-Caldwell, chairman of the Senate Transportation Committee.

After repeated attempts to cut the contract, McGee introduced a bill in 2009 to transfer the power to fire an ITD chief away from the ITB, and give it to the governor. The bill was killed, according to the lawsuit, after McGee was assured that the board would fire Lowe.

In the complaint, Lowe says Jeff Malmen, the governor's chief of staff at the time, and Darrell Manning, chairman of the ITB, became upset after she told the Legislature in 2007 that she would renegotiate the contract so as much of the work as possible was done by the state agency's own employees.

Lowe's efforts included having ITD engineers handle some of the contracts' work to cut expenses.

Magic Valley legislators Rep. Leon Smith, R-Twin Falls, and Maxine Bell, R-Jerome, said there were concerns in the Legislature at the time about he contract's size.

"I think all along we thought that perhaps more could be done in house and more dollars would be put on the road," said Bell, co-chairwoman of the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee.

Manning has disputed Lowe's allegations; the governor's office and McGee have refused to comment on the pending litigation. But whether Lowe's lawsuit results in a settlement or goes to trial, questions must be asked:

• To what extent, if any, did Malmen and Manning try to pressure Lowe into a making a decision favoring political contributors to Otter and McGee?

• What did Otter and McGee know about Malmen's actions, and when did they know it?

There were certainly problems with Lowe's performance at ITD apart from whatever dispute she had with Malmen. Her relationship with the Legislature was rocky, and we editorialized at the time that the board was justified in making a change.

But if her allegations are true, there are much bigger problems with transportation funding in Idaho problems that are likely to hamper ITD's efforts to secure legislative support for the growing backlog in road repair.

And sooner or later, the governor and Sen. McGee have to talk about this issue.

We Muslims are looking inward after the Fort Hood shooting

or American Muslims, the Fort Hood sacre is a crisis. There are open calls for a blanket investigation of Muslims in the military and even demands for a ban on Muslims serving in the armed forces.

Raeed N. Tayeh

Not since 9/11 has our faith - and our patriotism been placed under such a microscope.

At the same time, not since the Twin Towers fell have American Muslims taken such a sobering look in the mirror to try to understand for ourselves why an unassuming member of our community -adoctor and a soldier might have turned to mass murder, shouting "God Is Great" along the way.

Within hours of the shooting, national Islamic organizations issued unequivocal condemnations of the attack. Whatever the twisted motivations of the shooter, they argued persuasively that nothing in Islam could condone such an atrocity.

Muslim-Americans have struggled mightily over the past eight years to try to explain our faith to anyone who would listen. We do not want all of our efforts to go down the drain at the hands of a psychopathic murderer.

Muslims in the military have worked double time to combat stereotypes, knowing that doubts over their loyalty hang over their heads.

I know of Muslim-Americans who have joined the military, in part, to demonstrate their commitment to this great land. Some of them have made the ultimate sacrifice, such as Navy SEAL Michael Monsoor, who in 2006 threw himself onto a grenade during a firefight in Afghanistan in order to save the lives of his fellow war-

University of Idaho dairy study deeply flawed

am extremely disappointed by the uncritical coverage the Times-News has granted the claims and methods of the University of Idaho's industry-funded "study" of the dairy industry's impact on southern Idaho communities. The following are a mere handful of the many problems with this "study":

Method problems: Its authors admit they have little to no concrete knowledge of or data about their dairy worker subjects

The study relies primarily on survey responses and interviews with unnamed sources (i.e., hearsay) to draw conclusions.

The survey's poorly constructed questions potentially invalidate the authors' "findings." For example, they want respondents' opinions about milk producers specifically but ask about the industry as a whole.

The survey questions fail to distinguish between controversial confined animal feeding operations and less concentrated traditional dairies.

The authors didn't really investigate the extent of the dairy industry's contribution to the Magic Valley's purported resilience during this recession. There was no real work done to Hasse process the numbers or data. They simply assume that the Magic Valley must have done relatively better because of the dairy indus-

Data problems: The study handles available data poorly and fails to fully explore the dairy industry's trumpeted economic "benefits" as well as its costs. For example:

There is no mention of the federal subsidies — an average of $2 million a year in U.S. Department of Agriculture dairy program subsidies (a fraction of total subsidies) in Jerome, Gooding and Twin Falls counties alone - that keep Idaho's dairy CAFOs alive (EWG farm subsidies database).

It claims there is no discernable relation between southern Idaho's poverty rate and the dairy industry, failing to note that while dairy county populations underwent double-digit percent increases, the poverty rate in these areas stayed roughly the same or increased.

The study does not men-persons comprised 10.2 percent of Idaho's population, but 19.4 percent of those living in poverty.

The study makes no attempt to determine what proportion of Idaho's poor Hispanic population are dairy CAFO workers.

The study does not put the generously estimated $24,000 "after taxes" earnings of milkers in perspective: in 2008 the poverty threshold was $21,200 for a family of four

The study provides no details about purportedly "higher" or "lower" wage dairy workers' earnings.

The authors shy away from exploring the obvious gap between the fact that "employers are required to ask new workers for their name and Social Security number" and their findings that Idaho dairy workers' lives have been "profound(ly)" affected by stricter enforcement of immigration laws (26).

The study is not completely worthless, but its most illuminating findings are inadvertent. Quotes from interviews with community members provide a wealth of information about the racialized logic of the global low-wage labor market – a logic forged during the co-evolution of tion that in 2007 Hispanic industrialization and institutionalized slavery - of which Idaho's CAFO-dominated dairy industry is a part: "'The whole reason dairy jobs are held by immigrants is because white people won't take those jobs'" (16). Why won't "white people" take "those (CAFO) jobs"? Because they don't have to - that's what "brown people" are for. Contrarily, "white people" are more than happy to "take those jobs" at Idaho's less concentrated, owner-operator dairies.

> Also, attempting to reconcile the study's high praise of Idaho's dairy CAFOs with excerpts describing workers' "insecurity" provides some unexpected insights about the perverse relationship between factory farms and immigration policy (16-

> Regardless, it is obvious from the glowing coverage this "study" has received that the Times-News has not bothered to take a hard look at it. The paper's journalists ought to know better; their readers certainly deserve better.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Three moves that will cause caustic shock

I am grieving for the loss of America! Three moves by our government will cause caustic shock to our country.

1. The House of Representatives passed a bad health care bill that adds fines and jail terms to American citizens without insurance.

2. The signing of the "Copenhagen Treaty" by our president will transfer wealth from the United States to the Third World via the United Nations. The United States will be required to turn over technology to the United Nations. We will be fined $169 billion yearly through 2017 in the form of carbon taxes. After 2017, the United Nations will reassess our carbon penalties. We will also be responsible for "dignity" penalties to the Third World. The Third World nations can never be taxed or penalized in this treaty. It is not about saving our planet, but it's about stealing our money.

3. The House also passed HR 2998, "The American Clean Energy and Security Act." This bill is a greenhouse tax. The U.S. Senate is in the process of addressing these issues; however, the Senate has not passed these yet.

Sen. Harry Reid is going to mark up the health bill on Nov. 16. Now is the time to contact senators and tell them that we will not re-elect anyone who supports these massive new tax and transfer of wealth schemes.

This is not an issue of Republican vs. Democrat. It is an issue of American sovereignty! Say no to "free" health care for a tax, fines and jail terms. Say no to new "carbon" taxes. And say no to a wealth and technology transfer to fund the United Nations.

Read the bills instead of being handfed by the media. Or sit on your butts, watch television, trust "big brother" and say "good-bye" to America as we now know it!

POLLY HUGGINS Gooding

Americans need access to affordable health care

To Congressman Simpson: I am a constituent who has been judged "uninsurable" by the commercial insurance industry due to my multiple sclerosis. Were it not for the safety net of Medicare, I would probably be dead right now.

You see, were it not for routine follow-up care made possible by Medicare, a cerebral aneurysm would have gone undetected and probably burst in my brain. If I had lived through this event, the medical cost would have been in the hundreds of thousands. If not, well ...

Offering Americans access to health care — affordable access — is an imperative you can't ignore. Failure to support health care reform is not a passive error of omission; it is more akin to Pilate washing his hands.

As a constituent whose life may have been forfeited but for public health insurance, I remind you that no amount of washing can cleanse the hands of those who kill by "just following orders."

Vote your conscience. Vote for life. TOM BRIGHTMAN Sun Valley

Nation can't ignore the sick and poor; vote yes on insurance bill

Rep. Simpson:

I cannot believe that you voted against government insurance for every American citizen. You yourself have government-sponsored insurance that is paid for by the taxpayers. How could you be so concerned about the future generation and then do not understand that if American citizens do not have a healthy future generation of Americans, then all that you are doing is for nothing.

On Saturday, Nov. 7, a bipartisan majority of the House of Representatives made history by passing H.R. 3962, the Affordable Health Care for America Act.

Those who did not vote for the bill have one last opportunity to reconsider and support reform in the upcoming final House vote, and they should do so.

A vote for this bill was a vote to provide secure and stable coverage for all American citizens with insurance, expand coverage for those who do not have insurance, lower costs for families and businesses, and begin to reduce the deficit.

How can we be a nation if we are all sick and poor and the insurance companies are getting wealthy on the backs of the working poor and the sick American citizens.

Something scary in the pantry

our body is probably home to a chemical called bisphenol A, or BPA. It's a synthetic estrogen that U.S. factories now use in everything from plastics to epoxies — to the tune of 6 pounds per American per year. That's a lot of estrogen.

More than 92 percent of Americans have BPA in their urine, and scientists have linked it — though not conclusively — to everything from breast cancer to obesity, from attention deficit disorder to genital abnormalities in boys and girls alike.

Now it turns out it's in our food.

Consumer Reports magazine tested an array of brand-name canned foods for a report in its December issue and found BPA in almost all of them. The magazine says that relatively high levels turned up, for example, in Progresso vegetable soup, Campbell's condensed chicken noodle soup and Del Monte Blue Lake cut green beans.

The magazine also says it found BPA in the canned liquid version of Similac Advance infant formula (but not in and in canned Nestle Juicy Juice . The BPA in the food probably came from an interior coating used in many cans.

Should we be alarmed? The chemical industry doesn't think so. Steven Hentges of the American Chemistry Council dismissed the testing, noting that Americans absorb quantities of BPA at levels that government regulators have found to be safe. Hentges also pointed to a new study indicating that BPA exposure did not cause abnormalities in the reproductive health of rats.

But more than 200 other studies have shown links between low doses of BPA and adverse health effects, according to the Breast Cancer Fund, which is trying to ban the chemical from food and beverage containers.

"The vast majority of independent scientists — those not working for industry — are concerned about early-life lowdose exposures to BPA," said Janet Gray, a Vassar College

Nicholas Kristof

More than 92 percent of Americans have BPA in their urine, and scientists have linked it—though not conclusively—to everything from breast cancer to obesity, from attention deficit disorder to genital abnormalities in boys and girls alike.

professor who is science adviser to the Breast Cancer Fund.

Published journal articles have found that BPA given to pregnant rats or mice can cause malformed genitals in their offspring, as well as reduced sperm count among males. For example, a European journal found that male mice exposed to BPA were less likely to make females pregnant, and the Journal of Occupational Health found that male rats administered BPA had less sperm production and lower testicular weight.

This year, the journal Environmental Health Perspectives found that pregnant mice exposed to BPA had babies with abnormalities in the cervix, uterus and vagina. Reproductive Toxicology found that even low-level exposure to BPA led to the mouse equivalent of early puberty for females. And an array of animal studies link prenatal BPA exposure to breast cancer and prostate cancer.

While most of the studies are on animals, the Journal of the American Medical Association reported last year that humans with higher levels of BPA in their blood have "an increased prevalence of cardiovascular disease, diabetes and liverenzyme abnormalities."

Another published study found that women with higher levels of BPA in their blood had more miscarriages.

miscarriages. Scholars have noted some increasing reports of boys born with malformed genitals, girls who begin puberty at age 6 or 8 or even earlier, breast cancer in women and men alike, and declining sperm counts among men. The Endocrine Society, an association of endocrinologists. warned this year that these kinds of abnormalities may be a consequence of the rise of endocrine-disrupting chemicals, and it specifically called on regulators to re-evaluate BPA.

Last year, Canada became the first country to conclude that BPA can be hazardous to humans, and Massachusetts issued a public health advisory in August warning against any exposure to BPA by pregnant or breast-feeding women or by children under the age of 2.

The Food and Drug Administration, which in the past has relied largely on industry studies — and has generally been asleep at the wheel — is studying the issue again. Bills are also pending in Congress to ban BPA from food and beverage containers.

"When you have 92 percent of the American population exposed to a chemical, this is not one where you want to be wrong," said Dr. Ted Schettler of the Science and Environmental Health Network. "Are we going to quibble over individual rodent studies, or are we going to act?"

While the evidence isn't conclusive, it justifies precautions. In my family, we're cutting down on the use of those plastic containers that contain BPA to store or microwave food, and I'm drinking water out of a metal bottle now. In my reporting around the world, I've come to terms with the threats from warlords, bandits and tarantulas. But endocrine disrupting chemicals — they give me the willies.

State sends charter school 3rd notice

BOISE – The agency that authorizes and governs more than half of the public charter schools in Idaho on Thursday once again warned leaders of the troubled Nampa Classical Academy to comply with state rules.

School administrators have cited their federal lawsuit against Idaho officials over the use of religious texts while denying the state Public Charter School Commission a public records request and visit to its southwest Idaho campus.

Nampa Classical Academy sued the commission and other Idaho officials in September, saying the state illegally barred use of the Bible as an instructional text in the classroom.

Commissioners Thursday identified several areas of noncompliance with state rules for charter schools and voted to send the academy another notice of defect – the first step in a lengthy process that could result in closure.

This is the third notice the commission has issued the charter school in recent amid massive weeks, turnover within the Nampa Classical Academy Board of

Foreclosures dip 3 percent in October

Report shows third straight decline

By J.W. Elphinstone Associated Press writer

NEW YORK - The number of homeowners on the brink of losing their homes dipped in October, the third straight monthly decline, as foreclosure prevention programs helped more

But foreclosure filings are still up 19 percent from a year ago, RealtyTrac Inc. said Thursday, and rising job losses continue to threaten the stabilizing trend.

More than 332,000 households, or one in every 385 homes, received a foreclosure-related notice in October, such as a notice of default or trustee's sale. That's down 3 percent from September.

Banks repossessed more than 77,000 homes last month, down from nearly 88,000 homes in September.

New state programs, like one launched in Nevada in July, that require mediation before banks can seize a property have helped stem foreclosure activity, said Rick Sharga, senior vice president at RealtyTrac.

Also, anecdotally, lenders are delaying foreclosure as they evaluate which borrowers might qualify for the federal loan modification program, he said.

Despite Nevada's legislative efforts to slow foreclosures, the state still clocked in the nation's

Fed: Banks need customer consent on overdraft fees

WASHINGTON - Banks will have to secure their customers' consent before charging large overdraft fees on ATM and debit card transactions, according to a new rule announced Thursday by the Federal Reserve.

The rule responds to complaints from consumer groups, members of Congress and other regulators that the overdraft fees are unfair because many people assume they can't spend more on a debit card than is available in their account. Instead, many banks allow the transactions to go through, then charge fees of up to

For small purchases, such as a cup of coffee, the penalty can far exceed the actual cost of the transaction.

Under the Fed's new rule, which will take effect July 1, banks will be required to notify new and existing customers of their overdraft services and give customers the option of being covered. High in the showroom wall is a wooden shelf, supported by decorative panels. It looks divine, even if all of the wood used was salvaged from another retailer who was sending the material to the dump.

She enlisted the help of her father, Larry Petitt, of Twin Falls, to cut her design into the supports. He's a woodworker by trade, owner of L&F Enterprises.

Pieces of shadow art made by the elder Petitt are being sold at Wild Orchid. He isn't surprised with the progress his daughter is making with her own business.

"Lora's always been artistic.

She's always been the one into decorating and fixing up the house," Petitt said.

Tamra Wagner, of Buhl, has visited the store numerous times.

"The shop felt comfortable," Wagner said. "The warmth from the store combined with Lora's passion for what she does is an inspiration."

Opening the business took more elbow grease than an influx of capital, Petitt said. She started with a $6,000 loan and lots of familial support.

"My husband was great. We were in here for a month straight, only getting a few hours sleep a night, working in here and getting the building where it is today," Petitt said. She didn't ride into business on

The economy, mixed with the resurgence of reusing items instead of throwing it out, is helping sales, Petitt said.

Her opening day sale's surpassed her month's goal.

"I'm learning the trade. While I refurbish by quote I have underbid, it ended up taking a lot more than I thought and that came back to bite me, but I'm learning," Petitt said.

Magic Valley Symphony debuts two pieces with local ties

It's a flood of sound like a rushing river, a symphony with a colorful array of inspirations, and a chance for Magic Valley Symphony members to flex their musical muscles.

The group is debuting two pieces from composers with local ties at its Tuesday concert. George Halsell and Lynette Westendorf composed the music specifically for the symphony, said conductor Ted Hadley.

Hadley said. With well-known pieces, there are recordings to consult and precedence to look to. With these pieces, the symphony is on its own. "Some of the members of the orchestra are rebelling," Hadley joked. Most,

One of the challenges of playing new music is the lack of a frame of reference, though, are embracing the challenge and hoping it makes them better musicians.

"Essentially, that's what we hope for from new music," Hadley said. "The composer provides the framework for that."

Lynette Westendorf's 'Tributary'

Westendorf lives in Washington, but her roots are in southern Idaho.

"My folks farmed north of Rupert, and I grew up there," she said. "And then my husband and I lived in Hailey for over ten years." Her mother still lives in Twin Falls.

She drew on her memories of the Snake River for her tone poem, composed for Magic Valley Symphony. A tone poem is a single-movement piece of music inspired by nature or works of art. Westendorf composed it earlier this year while taking a two-month break from teaching lessons. She had the music in her head before putting it on paper.

The piece is thin in parts - to evoke a river's beginnings in streams and springs – and builds with brass and percussion when imitating a waterfall.

"It flows from one section to the other, which is another kind of metaphor for the river," she

Westendorf composed the piece with the Twin Falls-based symphony in mind. She wrote a nice violin section specifically for concertmistress Lori Casperson, and played up the brass.

Symphony conductor Ted Hadley called Westendorf's piece evocative. One section, "Cauldron Linn," starts smoothly "and gets rockier and rockier," Hadley said.

Lynette Westendorf was commissioned in 2006 to compose a soundtrack for a touring museum exhibit about the Columbia River. The music was intended to be for orchestra, but for lack of funding it was completed for small ensemble. 'Since that music was originally orchestral in idea, if not in practice, I have welcomed this opportunity to return to the original vision for some of the "River of Memory" music for the Magic Valley Symphony, Westendorf wrote in her program notes for 'Tributary.'

Twin Falls musician and composer George Halsell rehearses with Magic Valley Symphony on Tuesday at College of Southern Idaho. Halsell will conduct as the symphony premieres his work at next week's concert.

George Halsell's 'Symphony in Five Episodes'

Halsell, a music professor at College of Southern Idaho, composed a symphony with five movements during a sabbatical.

For the piece, he harvested inspiration from television and movie composers. His first movement, "News Music," mimics the strong, urgent chords often heard in newscast themes. "Secret Agents and Circus Dreams" uses a flute solo, like so many spy shows from the 1950s, and starts with a Latin vibe. Egg-shakers, percussion instruments with a chk-chk-chk sound, start out the piece.

"It really lends a mysterious quality to it," Halsell said. The movement soon changes into a carnival-like waltz with a booming tuba and lilting flutes and piccolo.

One of the more unusual instruments, crotales, makes an appearance in the fourth movement, "Melancholy Memories." The metal discs are arranged similar to piano keys and have a distinctive, bell-like sound, Halsell said.

"To me, they have a very, very vague suggestion of a tolling bell," he said, "although I don't use them in quite that manner."

Halsell, who normally plays trombone for the symphony, is conducting his piece. Ted Hadley, the regular Magic Valley Symphony conductor, is stepping up to play percussion, including the crotales.

"I just on Tuesday learned how to do it," he said in a Nov. 5 interview.

Halsell composed the symphony with the help of music software. He entered in the notes and selected the instruments, then could hear a mock-up of the music on his computer.

It sounds much better from the symphony, Hadley said. The musicians add emotion and character.

"There's more ebb and flow in the rhythm," he said.

Niels S. Nokkentved, author of "The Wormwood Forest: Sagebrush, Water, and Idaho's Twin Falls Canal Company," will discuss his book at the next Herrett Forum at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the Herrett Center's Rick Allen Community Room.

Nokkentved, a former Times-News environmental reporter, will cover the development of the canal company and some of the key issues in development of today's water law. Irrigation water rights are key to maintaining control of water, which is important to rural economies and southern Idaho's agricultural communities.

No tickets are required for this free public lecture. Doors open at 7 p.m. The Herrett Center for Arts and Science is on the north side of the College of Southern Idaho campus, at the North College Road entrance.

"The Book Thief" by Markus Zusak (Knopf,

$11.99). It is unfortunate this book is labeled and sold as a "young adult novel"; while it belongs on every high school reading list, it is definitely a captivating story for book lovers and unquestionably one that will generate much discussion.

The setting is Nazi Germany, and the book thief is a 9-year-old girl named Liesel Meminger; Death is the narrator. They meet when Death comes to take her little brother. "I traveled the globe ... handing souls to the convevor belt of eternity." Death writes. "I warned myself that I should keep a good distance from the burial of Liesel Meminger's brother. I did not heed my advice." Death and Liesel both have a way with words. And we are reminded that words can be good, as well as evil. After all, what would Hitler have been without words? What would any of recipes" is instead a delectable culinary account of Abu-Jaber's cultural duality and an insightful journey into her world of family, food and rootlessness. Her family moves from America to Jordon, then back again; she struggles to find her place in both cultures, always under the shadow of her colorful, comedic father. The story and recipes combine to make this rich, dense and achingly funny.

breaking heartbreaking symphony of a novel," McCann's volume paints a sweeping canvas of New York City in 1974, and high-wire walk between the twin towers.

But the walker fades into the background as the stories of the people below become the focal point. From the Irish monk living in the Bronx projects to the Park Avenue mother mourning her dead son, the reader is drawn into the tapestry of their interwoven lives and the country's pivotal sum-

"Sarah's Key" by Tatiana de Rosnay (St.

Martin's Griffin, $13.95). Over the past decades, the Holocaust has been the back-hundreds, perhaps thousands, of novels.

One might think all the horror stories of that time have been told, but de Rosnay shines a fierce light on a shocking wrong that will leave readers haunted and profoundly moved.

A discovery made during American magazine writer Julia Jarmond's research marking the 60th anniversary of the Vel' d'Hiv' roundups shakes her world, marriage and family.

I guarantee: You will not be able to put it down, and group discussions will be lengthy. (Interesting author note: Parisianborn, de Rosnay is of English, French and Russian descent. "Sarah's Key" is her 10th published novel, but the first written in English, her mother fills in the blanks on a period of American history usually focused on the Great Depression.

Timothy Egan (Mariner Books, $14.95). This extraordinary National Book Award winner

On April 14, 1935, a "black blizzard" struck.

This massive dust storm, stretching from the Dakotas to Amarillo, Texas, wreacked havoc on an already reeling country. It was not the first, but was by far the largest of hundreds of dust storms that decimated the plains during the '30s.

Egan's interviews of survivors gleaned remarkable stories of courage, desperation and hope. A powerful and heartwrenching book.

Used book store opens at Twin Falls library

Times-News

Book lovers, take note: Twin Falls Public Library Foundation has opened a used book store – dubbed The Giving Tree Store — on the main floor of the Twin Falls library.

In addition to used books, existing merchandise will continue to be available, including book bags, note cards, James Varley's "Tales of the Tract" and The Bonneville Flood DVD.

Used paperback books sell for 50 cents; hardback books, VHS videos and complete books on tape are $1 each. All proceeds from the store benefit the library.

And don't worry: This ongoing sale does not replace the library foundation's annual Used Book Sale in the spring. Used books for the store come from two sources: when the library refreshes its collections and when the community donates used items. Look for a large wooden bin inside the library's main entrance for donating books, DVDs and CDs (no magazines or Reader's Digest books). Used books are accepted all vear long.

The store currently has Christmas-themed books, cookbooks, large print, children's books, current bestsellers and a variety of other genres. The store is open the same hours as the library,

Idaho's Reader could make second start at BSU

By Josh Wright Times-News correspondent

MOSCOW - This time two years ago, Brian Reader was the scout team quarterback at the University of Arkansas, biding his time to get a crack at the ferocious defenses of Southeastern Conference.

"That was an experience in and of itself," Reader said this week.

So was what happened next. Shaken by coach Houston Nutt's decision to step aside, Reader left Arkansas - where he as a redshirt walk-on with preferred status — and hopped cross-country to play at a junior college in his native Bay Area.

No. 6 Boise State 1:30 p.m., Saturday TV: ESPNU Radio: 1310 AM/98.3 FM

It was a risky move on the surface, and the QB was unsure if he would get another chance to play FBS (formerly Division I-A) football. But here he is, a day away from perhaps starting his second consecutive game for the 7-3 Idaho Vandals.

"Finally to get to Division I where (I'm) playing right now," Reader said, "it makes you appreciate things."

It's been a winding collegiate journey for the 6foot-3, 220-pound sophomore, who was first discovered by Idaho when running backs coach Jeremy Thielbahr stumbled upon him. In need of a JC quarterback, the Vandals pounced quickly and Reader enrolled at Idaho in January.

In evaluating Reader, two things stuck out to Vandal coaches: His junior college. Monterey Peninsula College, went 10-0 in the regular season under his direction, and he had three years of eligibility.

"We felt kind of fortunate that we were able to find him, to be honest with you,"

Everybody agrees Jerome is the team to beat. Nobody is willing to roll over, however.

Mini-Cassia rivals Burley and Minico, which each handed Jerome a loss last season, are ready to put up a fight again in Great Basin Conference girls basketball. "There are a lot of things that can happen during the season," said Minico coach Joe. D. Shepard. "You just have to play out the season and see how you match up."

Glenns Ferry vs. Parma

The Pilots' only losses this season have been to unbeaten teams. Now the only obstacle standing between them and the state title game is the defending state champ and undefeated Parma Panthers, who are on a 19-game winning streak and are outscoring opponents 38.6 to 3.5 on average.

"They are definitely the real deal," said Glenns Ferry coach Rob Spriggs. "They are solid all the way around, especially defensively."

"We have to find a way to score, Here's a look at the Class 2A state maybe not just on offense, but maybe on special teams and defense, too," Spriggs said.

> Glenns Ferry's road to the semis has been dramatic, if not fortunate. The Pilots needed a goal-line stand to survive the first round against West Side. Last week in the quarterfinals, they shook off a long bus ride and a flat start to come from behind in the second half to beat North Fremont. Nevertheless, Spriggs says his team played its best football of the season in that second half, which hopefully carries over to today's game.

After last week's grueling double-overtime victory over Malad, the Declo Hornets are now a game away from reaching the state championship for the second con-

'Our kids knew Malad was going to be a challenge and now we've got to guard against the letdown," said Declo coach Kelly Kidd. "But these kids have been through this before and they know how difficult it is, so I don't foresee a letdown."

"We lost over 500 pounds of power with Knobbe and Patterson," Spriggs said. "We're Kidd said. "We had kids who came in and stepped up and played solid, which kept us in the game (against Malad). We showed how good we are as a team. Even if they can't play this week, we're at an advantage because we can prepare to not have them."

Part of Declo's success has come from spreading the ball around. Instead of one 1,000-yard running back like some teams boast, the Hornets instead have two 500yard rushers in Tyler Briggs and Larsen Webb. Quarterback Jeremy Jenkins completes 59.8 percent of his passes.

Regarding common opponents, New Plymouth lost to Glenns Ferry 34-12 in Week 3. The Pilots had a field day, piling up over 350 yards of offense. Declo defeated Glenns Ferry 29-7 four weeks later for the Canyon Conference championship.

FULL-SIZE CAPABILITIES!

RoadWorthy! By Ken Chester, Jr. Motor News Media Corporation

The GMC Yukon XL is capable of hauling more passengers and cargo than any other vehicle in the segment and features a 360-degree safety system of occupant protection and crashavoidance technology. Based on GM's sophisticated GMT900 truck architecture, the large GMC SUV boasts distinctive styling, spacious and refined interiors, impressive driving characteristics and enhanced safety features. The Yukon XL boasts a long wheelbase that provides a smooth, confident and secure driving experience.

Enhancements and upgrades for the 2010 model year include: new Dark Labyrinth Metallic and Sheer Silver Metallic exterior colors; OnStar 8.2 with long-range remote start and traffic probe; USB connectivity in center-console, enabling stored audio files to play through the audio system and battery charging for some handbeld devices; and an enhanced battery saver mode.

Available in two-or fourwheel drive and half- or threequarter ton configurations and SLE/SLT trim levels, , the large GMC SUV is propelled by two sophisticated prime movers produced by GM's Powertrain Division - a Vortec 5.3L V8

(1500) and Vortec 6.0L V8 (2500). A 6.2L V8 is a newly available option for the Yukon XL 1500 models. All versions of the base 5.3L V8 engine are now E85 FlexFuel compatible and are equipped with cam

Torque is communicated to the ground through a Hydra-Matic 6L80 six-speed automatic transmission. Series 2500 models are outfitted with a heavy-duty Hydra-Matic 6L90 six-speed automatic transmission. A single-speed transfer case is now standard on 4WD models while a two-speed transfer case is optional.

The full-size SUV platform features a fully boxed perimetertype frame which provides an extremely solid foundation. The hydroformed frame has three distinct sections - bays - with specific strength and support characteristics. Chassis stiffness is greatly enhanced throughout the frame, as well as providing enhanced performance during a crash. Combined with wide front and rear tracks over, the Yukon XL is smooth, stable and composed, with flat, controlled cornering.

Inside the passenger cabin, the look is rich with a world class rendition of displays, controls and switchgear. Roomy, spacious and ever user friendly, the cabin features a "finished" interior that doesn't have any exposed metal hardware or latches. Flush-mounted accessories and controls create the look of a single unit, rather than components stacked together. The GMC SUV is equipped more like a car than an SUV - with a long list of standard features and amenities.

The Yukon XL family also offers an industry-exclusive power fold-and-tumble secondrow seat feature that eases access to the rear of the vehicle. The power fold-and-tumble secondrow seats feature release buttonsaccessible by the driver or on the interior C-pillar to provide an easy, immediate release of the seat to create an access path to the standard third row seat or cargo area. In addition, the rear batch features a rear liftgate. that permits either window or full hatch access.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

REAL NEWS. REAL VALUE

DEAR ABBY: My neighbors, "John" and "Marcia," are such a nice couple, I'm not sure what to do. I don't know them all that well, but what's going on is extremely upsetting. On several occasions, I have seen a woman park her car near my home after dark and walk to the back door of their house. About an hour later, I see John let her out the front door. He even has the nerve to kiss her goodbye right on the front porch! I'm sure he is slipping this tart in for sex - right under his wife's nose.

I want to tell Marcia what's going on, but I'm unsure how to go about it. I have contemplated just going over, knocking on the door and blurting it out. I have also considered writing her an anonymous letter. What's the right way to let someone know that her husband is cheating on her in her own house while she's there?

NOTNOSY JUST CONCERNED NEW CUMBERLAND, PA.

DEAR NOT NOSY: I strongly recommend that you mind your own business and do nothing. If there was any hanky-panky going on, I seriously doubt that John would be indulging in it while his wife was in the house — and kissing his illicit lover goodbye on their doorstep, yet. The woman may be a relative - a sister, cousin or daughter - so please do not embarrass yourself.

P.S. When someone is overly preoccupied with the sex life of a neighbor, it isn't "concern." It IS nosy, so please get a life.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 79year-old recent widow. Shortly after I was married I had a brief, intense affair with a man at work. I'll call him "Earl."

Earl's wife, "Lillian," was in her third trimester of pregnancy and he was needy. We fell hopelessly in love and our affair continued after his baby was born. We were happy together and nothing else seemed to mat-

Somehow Lillian found out and left him. The divorce she said she'd seek would have solved our problems because I would have immediately divorced my husband, but it never happened. She still loved him, and he decided to do the "honorable thing" and reconcile with her. We swore we would love each other forever, no matter what.

Earl and Lillian moved to a city 50 miles from here and we had no further contact. My husband forgave me, and we had a good life and three children. A friend kept me informed about Earl — where he was and what he was doing. She told me he has spent his life making up to Lillian for his "indiscretion" and treating her like a queen. She is now in a nursing home suffering with Alzheimer's. She no longer knows Earl, but he goes to see her every day.

Would it be wrong of me to get in touch with him to sympathize? I still love him. Perhaps he loves me, too. We are both old and lonely. -HOPING FOR MORE

DEAR HOPING: Please accept my condolences for the loss of your husband, but offering "sympathy" to Earl right now would not be a good idea. If your informant is correct, he has not only spent his life making amends to his wife for the affair, but he is still in love with her.

It would not be out of line to ask your friend to let Earl know that you are recently widowed, but don't hold your breath waiting for him to renew the romance. He has an important commitment he needs to see through to the end. And if you love him, you'll let him

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

"Do your duty and a little more, and the future will take care of itself."

> — Andrew Carnegie . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . .

You bid aggressively to the excellent six diamonds and receive a top-spade lead. Plan the play.

You expect to make five clubs, five trumps, the spade ace and a spade ruff. The only worry is that East may hold four diamonds. As you expect West to hold the heart ace, and entries to your hand are few and far between, a little care is needed with today's layout.

A careless declarer would cash the diamond king at trick two and be doomed at once. A slightly more careful declarer would take the diamond ace at trick two and then lead the diamond eight. A mean East would resist covering that card. Now you cannot arrange to draw trumps and also ruff a spade in dummy, so the contract can no longer be made.

Instead, after taking the spade king with the ace, the key play is to ruff a spade at trick two with the trump 10 (or, if you prefer, the eight) and not with dummy's small trump. Then, on cashing the ace of trumps and finding the bad news, you must continue with the diamond eight. This time East can do no better than cover. You will take this in hand with the queen, cross back to dummy with a club, and pick up East's remaining trumps via the diamond finesse. Then, after drawing the last trump, you will have your 12 tricks.

ANSWER: While there might be a case for bidding only two no-trump, partner's pass over the double suggests a balanced hand. Your crisp honor-structure indicates that you should have a decent chance at nine tricks, and you want to protect your heart holding. So it looks logical just to bid three no-trump and take the pressure off partner.
