Malta's National Center for Constitutional Studies?

Founded in 1972 in Malta by W. Cleon Skousen from what was previously the Freeman Institute. The center today publishes copies of the U.S. Constitution and historical writings by the Founding Fathers, and also works from Skousen.

Beck converted to Mormonism in the 1990s, then began proclaiming Skousen's political writings on airwaves. Thanks to Beck's endorsement, Skousen's work "The 5,000 Year Leap" becomes a major seller on amazon.com. The work is commonly cited during this year's "Tea Party" gatherings nationwide.

Skousen and Ezra T. Benson, an Eisenhower Cabinet member and later an LDS Church president, were vocal supporters of the conservative John Birch Society.

Skousen started as an FBI agent in Washington, although his claims of being a special assistant to J. Edgar Hoover on anti-communism were unverified.

A map showing weekly incidents handled by the Twin Falls Police Department will appear every Sunday in the Times-News starting with today's edition.

The maps will show the main streets in Twin Falls, overlaid with dots to depict where 22 types of crimes and incidents have been reported throughout the city. Examples of what police handle include: injury and non-injury accidents, arson, battery, death reports, noise and dog issues.

The Twin Falls Police Department is providing the Times-News with the information for this map, which will be updated each Sunday with locations of the week's criminal and emergency responses in Twin Falls.

The map will also be posted online at Magicvalley.com, under local news.

Education foundation in Malta flourishes through ties to Glenn Beck

Malta may have found its Oprah — and his name is Glenn Beck.

While some residents of southern Idaho aren't even aware of the Cassia County town, people all over the world, including Chinese university students, are receiving books on American history and copies of the U.S. Constitution shipped from a remote farmhouse in Malta.

The farm, which houses and ships thousands of books stacked on pallets in machine shops, is actually the National Center for Constitutional Studies (NCCS) — which began in 1972 as the Freeman Institute.

The popularity of Glenn Beck — radio talk-show personality, author, Fox News Channel host — and his enthusiasm for books written by the foundation's founder, W. Cleon Skousen, has propelled NCCS into, if not the national spotlight, at least national demand.

Foundation books and pocket copies of the Constitution are printed outside of Malta, but NCCS is the publisher. And nearly all of them — sometimes as many as 20,000 books per month — are shipped from the farmhouse.

Some of them go to individual customers. Others are donated to schools. Many are sold in bulk to groups such as "Tea Party" organizers. Tea parties, based on the 1773 Boston Tea Party, are organized protests against big government and socialism. The largest events so far took place on April 15 and July 4.

But NCCS is a nonprofit educational foundation. It doesn't appear that anyone is getting rich from book sales. According to 2008 tax forms, the organization's total revenue was $197,205. The foundation's headquarters can be found in a nondescript, albeit large, farmhouse about halfway between Sweetzer Summit and Snowville, Utah, near the border of Cassia and Oneida counties.

CEO Zeldon Nelson, along with his wife and another employee who maintains the Web site, run the day-to-day operations. But recently, especially during preparations for the tea party wave last spring, they brought in volunteers from various towns in Utah and Idaho.

A convicted sex offender accused of sexually abusing a vulnerable patient at St. Luke's Canyon View Behavioral Services about 10 months ago wants the charges against him deemed unconstitutional and his indictment dismissed, according to court filings in the case.

David Aaron Knutsen, 29, of Filer, was indicted on March 25 for four counts of sexual abuse of a vulnerable adult following the alleged incidents on Jan. 30 at Canyon View in Twin Falls.

Knutsen was also a patient when he allegedly abused the 21-year-old developmentally delayed woman, according to court records.

Small group of senators holds key to health care bill

By Robert Schroeder
MarketWatch

WASHINGTON — Last summer, a senatorial "Gang of Six" met to negotiate legislation to remake the U.S. health-care system. This winter, Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid will need a posse of 60 to pass it. But already, a handful of renegades are threatening to hold the bill hostage—and maybe even kill it.

Following the recent razor-slim passage by the House of the historic bill, action has turned to the Senate, where another cliffhanger is in the making.

House Democrats needed 218 votes to clear their bill, and ultimately won 220 supporters. In the Senate, Reid must get 60 votes to override an expected Republican filibuster. But those 60 votes are now by no means assured.

Democrats now have 58 members in the Senate. There are also two independents who usually vote with the Democrats—but don't always. There are 40 Republicans. Reid can afford to lose no Democrats or independents. Or if he does, he'll need to pick up a few Republicans.

Here is a look at some of the lawmakers who could break — or make — Senate

Icy roads cause crash, fatality and injuries

Times-News

An early-morning rollover took the life of one woman while injuring seven other people Saturday in Jerome.

A van carrying 10 people was traveling eastbound on Interstate 84 a little after 5 a.m. when the driver, Carlos Campos Ramirez, 38, of Twin Falls lost control of the vehicle due to icy road conditions. The van slid into the median and then rolled, according to a news release Saturday by the Idaho State Police.

One of the passengers, Evelia D. Montenegro, 56, of Jerome was ejected and died at the scene.

Three children were ejected and treated at Minidoka Memorial Hospital in Rupert. A 12-year-old was treated at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center before being flown to Primary Children's Hospital in Salt Lake City. One child was not ejected, but still treated for injuries at Minidoka Memorial Hospital, according to the release. Adults Rafael and Martha Linares of Shoshone were treated at St. Benedict's Family Medical Center in Jerome and St. Luke's in Twin Falls.

Ramirez and passenger Maria Campos were not injured and are believed to have been wearing seat belts, according to the news release.

The Jerome, Twin Falls and Minidoka County sheriff's offices assisted at the scene.

This was one of about 20 crashes or slide-offs reported in Jerome from 5:15 to 10 a.m., according to ISP.

Alcohol is not considered to be a factor in the crash. The incident is still under investigation.

Abuse

Knutsen's lawyer, Michael Wood, filed the motions that are slated for a Thursday hearing in Twin Falls. The crimes for which Knutsen is accused should be found unconstitutional for restricting an adult's right to engage in sexual activity, according to the defense.

Prosecutors, however, disagree. The statute of sex abuse against a vulnerable adult protects physically and mentally impaired people from nonconsensual sex, according to Twin Falls County Deputy Prosecutor Suzanne Craig.

"Protecting adults with mental impairment from sexual assault is an appropriate use of governmental authority," said Craig in court records.

The victim is clearly impaired and Knutsen should have been aware of that, according to Craig. "Her mental and physical impairments are not hidden, but are plainly part of the person she is and how she projects herself to others."

The victim's handicaps, Craig wrote, "were apparent to the extent that the defendant (Knutsen) should have known that sexual conduct with her would be illegal."

Sex abuse of a vulnerable adult is a felony and a conviction carries up to 25 years in prison. Knutsen is a registered sex offender who was found guilty of lewd conduct with a child in a 1999 crime against a family member, according to court records.

Knutsen and the woman allegedly were unsupervised at the facility when the abuse occurred, according to court records. "(The victim) indicates to the staff that Mr. Knutsen walked her to the corner near the coffee maker by an inside door where the camera could not see."

St. Luke's officials announced in June that dozens of security cameras had been installed at the facility and new personal space rules for patients were implemented.

Police were concerned about a six-day delay in the hospital's reporting of the allegations to police, according to court records. "I was concerned about the failure to report this incident," an officer wrote.

Police also wrote that the victim was depressed, not eating and suicidal in the days after the alleged abuse.

Knutsen pleaded not guilty in July and has a trial set for January.

Health

BEN NELSON

Sen. Ben Nelson, a Nebraska Democrat, has spoken out against the "public option," the government-run insurance plan included in the Senate's bill as well as the House's.

Nelson, a conservative Democrat and one of the strongest abortion opponents among Senate Democrats, also insists that the Senate's bill must mirror the House's in including a ban on abortion coverage paid for with government subsidies.

He's a fiscal conservative, and complains that the $1.1 trillion price tag of the House bill is too steep.

"Faced with a decision about whether or not to move a bill that is bad, I won't vote to move it," he told ABC News. "For sure."

BLANCHE LINCOLN

Sen. Blanche Lincoln, D-Ark., joins Nelson in worrying about the bill's cost, as well as in opposing a government-run plan.

A member of the Senate Finance Committee, Lincoln twice voted against making the "public option" part of that panel's bill.

Lincoln is facing re-election next year and is apparently eager to display her conservative credentials in a state that was handily carried by Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., in last year's presidential contest.

Lincoln's opposition is so serious that she—along with Nelson and Sen. Mary Landrieu, D-La.—won't even agree to let the bill be debated on the Senate floor.

JOE LIEBERMAN

What about Sen. Joseph Lieberman, the one-time Democrat from Connecticut who supported McCain in last year's race and is now an independent? Reid can't count on him, either, and it's thanks to, again, the public option.

"The public option I think was raised in the last year by people who really want to have a government-controlled health insurance system," Lieberman said last weekend on CBS's "Face the Nation." "That's their right," he said. "I think they're wrong."

Lieberman, who in the past has supported a national insurance pool, recently said he would filibuster for the removal of the public option. "I think it's such a mistake that I would use the power I have as a single senator to stop a final vote," he said in a recent televised interview.

SUSAN COLLINS

Reid and the White House have held out hope that they can successfully court a very small number of Senate Republicans to sign on to the health-care overhaul. (Just one Republican, Joseph Cao, voted for it in the House.) One of those is Susan Collins of Maine.

Collins has said the status quo for the U.S. health-care system is unacceptable. "There simply is no question that our nation's health care system requires substantial reform," she has stated.

But Collins has criticized the Senate bill for not doing more to rein in costs and heaped criticism on the bill on Monday, saying it included "billions of dollars in new taxes and fees that will drive up the cost of health insurance premiums." The whole bill should be re-written, Collins said, according to the New York Times.

ROBERT CASEY

And don't forget Pennsylvania Democrat Robert Casey.

As a staunch opponent of abortion, accommodating Casey's views could be pivotal during the Senate's health-care debate, either in the bill or in an amendment. The issue nearly sunk the health bill in the House, where the bill passed only after an anti-abortion amendment was added. Read story about House health-care vote.

The House abortion clause enraged liberal Democrats, and the Senate bill contains fewer restrictions on abortion coverage, but with every Democrat vote needed, Casey's views will likely be taken more seriously in the upcoming debate.

EVAN BAYH

Other senators could be problematic for Reid, including Evan Bayh, D-Ind., who is concerned about a proposed tax on medical-device makers that is in the current legislation.

Bayh's interest in the medical device industry is understandable. Indiana is the third-biggest state for jobs in the medical device sector, with currently some 63,000 Hoosiers working in that field.

In September, Bayh joined his Republican Indiana colleague Sen. Richard Lugar and the two Minnesota senators in a letter to Senate Finance Committee Chairman Max Baucus urging him to reconsider the proposed fee on medical-device makers, claiming that the fee would "seriously threaten thousands of American jobs and deter innovation in the industry."

As of Thursday, the health-care reform bill Reid melded together from measures passed by the Senate committees on finance and health hadn't been publicly released. Once a cost analysis by the Congressional Budget Office is done—perhaps this week—floor debate won't be far behind.

Looking at their numbers, Senate Democrats should be able to achieve critical mass on a health-care vote. And indeed, given its powerful supporters it's hard to believe Reid won't be able to round up a posse.

To do that, though, he'll also have to make peace with the renegades.

We sent our kid to Harvard to manage broomsticks

The recession is over. Gotta be. Harvard College just gave the campus' Quidditch team $2,000 to buy regulation brooms.

I know this because my stepdaughter is the equipment manager for the team. And I'm already anticipating your next question:

What the hell am I talking about?

If you were 15, you'd understand. Quidditch is a fictional sport developed by novelist J.K. Rowling for the "Harry Potter" books, the series about a boy wizard at Hogwarts boarding school for wizards and witches. Quidditch matches are played by two teams of seven players each flying on broomsticks, some of the players armed with baseball bats to prevent 10-inch iron balls with minds of their own from slamming into their teammates.

Yeah, I know. But the collegiate version is played by students astride broomsticks who gallop along like 3-year-olds on stickhorses in the 1950s.

Uniforms are heavy on goggles, capes and leggings. The game uses four balls and six elevated, ring-shaped goals.

The smallest ball is The Golden Snitch, about the size of walnut, which is supposed to hover and dart around the field. Each team has one player — the seeker — whose job it is to corral the Snitch. Only the capture of the Snitch will end the game.

DON'T ASK ME

So, at Harvard and the schools it plays, games can last a semester or two.

Because not even Ivy Leaguers can fly, the real Quidditch games amount mostly to college students stumbling over their capes and whacking each other with broom handles.

And in case you were wondering, it's $32,173. That's what a Harvard student — or parents — pays in tuition and fees for the privilege of playing Quidditch and not studying for the chemistry midterm.

Vermont's Middlebury College is the birthplace of college Quidditch and the site of its annual World Cup, won once again this year by the Panthers, who beat Massachusetts' Emerson College 60-10 in the final. Harvard lost in the first round. But that was before the team acquired Official Harry Potter Regulation Quidditch Brooms. Imagine what a lift that will give them.

And, no, Harvard doesn't offer Quidditch scholarships. Believe me, I checked.

... in Cassia County

From Oct. 7 police reports:
Contributing to a minor, minor consumption:

Police responded to a Burley residence regarding a domestic incident. A 25-year-old man with a scratch on his neck said his girlfriend beat him and left, according to the report.

When the woman, 19, was questioned about the scratch, she reportedly said she didn't know about it. Later, the man said he got it from his girlfriend but that "it was during a sexual encounter," Deputy Matt Arthur's report reads. The man said he didn't want to press charges but also told police that his girlfriend "gets crazy when she comes over to his house and gets drunk." According to the report, he said he told her "she could come over and drink as long as she didn't leave." The man was promptly cited for providing alcohol to a minor. The woman was cited for minor consumption.

Domestic battery:

A husband and wife, both 19, of Burley, got into a fight after the male came home and, according to the report, started packing up his belongings and then "broke two plates and threw away a clock, a candle, and some CDs."

While she was getting the items out of the garbage, the wife said they started pushing each other, and then she "threw a pillow at him." According to the report, the husband responded by biting his wife's hand, tearing her necklace off, and "grabbing her glasses twice off her face and throwing them in the garbage can."

When questioned, the husband said they had been married for 10 months and that he wants a divorce, adding that his wife also bit him. "There was a slight mark but I could not tell if it was made by teeth or not," Deputy Robert Taylor's report reads.

Regarding the necklace, the husband reportedly told police that he bought it, "and he did not think she should have it anymore." According to the report, he explained that he bit his wife "while trying to get away." He was arrested for domestic battery.

from all over to help us. We had people from age 3 to 93 helping out,” Nelson said, estimating that the organization has published 3 million copies of the Constitution.

“We’re trying to articulate the principles of the Constitution, but we’re not trying to take some current point of view. We’re trying to present the principles from the Founders’ point of view,” Nelson said.

Last year, he said, NCCS spent $250,000 to $300,000 to distribute copies of a DVD documentary, “A More Perfect Union.”

“We’re just trying to be a resource for anybody who wants to learn about our form of government,” Nelson said.

Nelson said books and Constitution copies are regularly sent to Afghanistan, Iraq, Germany, China, Russia, Romania and Japan, and public schools across the U.S. Most income, he said, goes back into publishing expenses and donating materials to educational entities. It also funds lectures and seminars conducted by NCCS President Earl Taylor Jr., a teacher in Mesa, Ariz.

“Do you know that our Founding Fathers had answers to nearly every problem that exists in America today?” Taylor said during a seminar posted online. “That’s a big statement. This is the mission of NCCS — to reacquaint Americans with the Founders’ message. It is a positive message. When you hear it, it will put fire in your bones,” he said.

THE SKOUSEN FOUNDATION

Skousen, who died in 2006 at 92, used to conduct similar seminars in Idaho and Utah. He was a prolific writer (including his 1958 national bestseller “The Naked Communist”), speaker and Brigham Young University professor. His public service included stints as an FBI agent and Salt Lake City police chief — though some of his published works aroused controversy.

A devout Mormon, Skousen wrote end-of-the-world prophecies, LDS-inspired books on scripture, a guide on how to raise boys, and various anti-communism analyses.

A recent Salon.com article recounts a 1980s issue that erupted when California legislators approved the official use of Skousen’s history book “The Making of America” in which he refers to black children as “pickaninnies” and characterized most slaves en route from Africa as “a cheerful lot.”

According to his biography on Skousen2000.com, he worked closely with J. Edgar Hoover during his 16 years with the FBI. But the Salon article claims his work was merely “clerical.” He was fired as Salt Lake police chief in 1960 after raiding one of the mayor’s poker games.

Skousen was a strong supporter of the John Birch Society, a right-wing organization that was prominent in the 1960s. One of the group’s biggest defenders was former Secretary of Agriculture and Idaho native Ezra T. Benson, who later became LDS church president. In the early ’60s, the society even alleged President Eisenhower had colluded with communists.

SOUTHERN IDAHO FOLLOWING

Burley resident John Walsh, a former organized crime and undercover narcotics agent with the Idaho Attorney General’s Office, recalls seminars conducted by Skousen and the Freeman Institute at the Albion Normal School around 1972.

“They were all Birchers, John Birch Society members,” Walsh said. “At one time, the state had me and another agent go to Albion and wander around just to check things out. There were rumors of a subversive group. We never found anything like that. ... It seemed to be a pretty good combination of religion and politics.”

Walsh called Skousen’s work “a distortion of history,” adding that members were mostly interested in the Constitution and stopping what they saw as the country’s drift toward communism. The group was frequently associated with former Idaho Congressman George Hansen.

“I thought all of that stuff had gone out of style, but apparently, it hasn’t,” Walsh said. “Maybe the Glenn Beckers are caught up in a lot of socialist paranoia because the Democrats are in power.”

Adrian Arp, of Twin Falls, attended Freeman Institute seminars at Robert Stuart Junior High School in the 1970s.

He recalled some of Skousen’s lessons, including discussions of “baptism by fire,” referring to the ratification of the Constitution, and a study guide called “Miracle of America.”

“The way he taught, you filled in the blanks,” Arp

The National Center for Constitutional Studies is housed in this sprawling farmhouse located about halfway between Sweetzer Summit near Malta and Snowville, Utah. Publications from the center have recently grown in demand thanks to the approval of political talk-show personality Glenn Beck.

THE BOOKS

THE NAKED COMMUNIST:

W. Cleon Skousen’s popular 1958 book that outlined the origins of communism and its threat to democracy.

U.S. CONSTITUTION BOOKLETS:

The National Center for Constitutional Studies in Malta, founded by Skousen in 1972, has published more than 3 million copies for educational purposes, according to NCCS CEO Zeldon Nelson.

THE 5,000 YEAR LEAP:

Skousen’s 1981 book outlining inspired principles and philosophy that came from the U.S. Constitution. Published in Malta, the book climbed on Amazon.com best seller lists this year, thanks to endorsements from Glenn Beck.

said. “He was a teacher, and his method was very good.”

Arp has been a member of the John Birch Society since 1968 and defended the organization against its detractors.

“We just want the Constitution restored to the principles of the Founding Fathers,” he said. “I think the John Birch Society is middle-of-the-road — we believe in limited, constitutional government.”

BECK AS SKOUSEN DISCIPLE

Beck, a former alcoholic and drug addict, converted to Mormonism in 1999, and in the years since has praised the writings of Skousen.

Often seen scrawling political theories on a chalkboard, Beck can be conspiratorial-minded and openly emotional — occasionally shedding tears while criticizing progressive politics and big government. One of Beck’s most noted emotional displays happened this year when he announced the 9/12 Project — a vague but passionate attempt to revive the patriotism most Americans experienced the day after the Islamic terrorist attacks of Sept. 11, 2001.

During and after the tear-riddled announcement, Beck routinely implored his followers to buy copies of Skousen’s book “The 5,000 Year Leap” — pushing the book into Amazon.com’s bestseller lists this year.

Beck has often said the book made him realize that America’s founders were divinely guided.

Curiously, the NCCS-published edition of the book does not include the author’s name on the cover, though it can be found in small print on the spine.

“The 5,000 Year Leap,” aside from some anachronisms and heavy reliance on divinity, is generally academic. It does include some non-conventional phrases — such as, when referring to unalienable rights not mentioned in the Declaration of Independence, “the right to beget one’s kind.”

Beck’s current comments about the book on his Web site are far less effusive than his devotional praise in other venues.

The description on Glennbeck.com reads: “All about the philosophies of the founders of our government and why this country needs to be a virtuous country.”

Beck writes: “Amen to that. One of those books that you pick up and read a chapter here and there.”

GEM STATE SUCCESS

A recent New York Times article calls Beck “the new Oprah,” referring to his promotion of thriller novels. The article quotes author Brad Thor as saying, “He’s our Oprah ... God love him.”

That influence on the publishing industry extends well into Idaho, where Beck has frequently visited and performed. He’s also mentioned a desire to move to the Gem State.

“He has a big following around here. I talk to people quite a lot and his name always comes up,” Walsh said. “Anything he says, it’s like scripture to them.”

Nelson said he’s had several conversations with Beck recently but wouldn’t discuss any future plans for the foundation. He did, however, emphasize that Beck doesn’t receive any money from the Skousen books that he promotes.

“He’s truly interested in helping America,” Nelson said. “Most of our sales right now are coming from study groups around the country, though.”

Nelson carefully avoided politics and said NCCS is motivated by the desire to educate people about the founding of America and the original intent of the Constitution, rather than case-law interpretations of the document.

“The fact that this is all happening right here in our own area and is helping the nation is significant. We feel honored,” Nelson said. “The address on those Constitutions is Malta. People ought to be asking themselves, ‘What is it about Malta, Idaho?’”

Rich buying again, but middle class still hurting

By Emily Fredrix
Associated Press writer

American shoppers are splitting again: The affluent are finally starting to buy, picking up designer clothes at places like Nordstrom, while those on the lower economic rungs are still scrimping, heading to Walmart for the basics.

Recent earnings reports from major retailers suggest that the wealthy, who pulled back their spending the hardest during the financial meltdown last fall, are once again being enticed to open their wallets and going back to higher-end outlets.

"It's a good sign, but we don't see the same across the board," said Richard Hastings, a consumer strategist with Global Hunter Securities LLC.

It's still a far cry from the era of conspicuous consumption. No matter the tax bracket, people are still focused on value and trying to avoid overspending — whatever that might mean to them.

Luxury chains like Nordstrom Inc. and Bloomingdale's, owned by Macy's Inc., say shoppers are spending again on items like shoes and dresses, but still shopping for lower prices and classic pieces that get a lot of use.

On the other hand, discounters like Wal-Mart Stores Inc. are lowering prices even further to coax their less-well-off shoppers to keep spending.

And it's not on anything glamorous. We're talking basics, like food and socks.

Think of it as two different groups as the economy recovers — spenders and savers.

THE SPENDERS

Luxury department stores like Nordstrom and Saks are starting to get more traffic. Part of the reason is that they've rolled out some merchandise at slightly lower prices, which is helping to keep the affluent from trading down to other stores.

Idaho may join Montana and Tennessee in fight against feds

State lawmakers to introduce bill to remove federal authority from in-state firearms sales

BY JOSHUA PALMER TIMES-NEWS WRITER

Idaho has been a strong supporter of the right to bear arms — even attracting firearms manufacturers from other states to spur its economy.

But is it willing to take on the federal government to defend that right?

Rep. R.J. "Dick" Harwood, R-St. Maries, will ask that question when he introduces a bill to the Idaho Legislature in January that could make it cheaper and easier to buy a firearm that's made and sold in Idaho.

INSIDE

Joining the trend: States introducing Firearm Freedom Act.

See Business 3

The bill, which is circulating among a small group of Republican lawmakers, will mirror the Montana Firearms Freedom Act — the now famous bill that pit Montana against the federal government in a pending legal battle.

Harwood said the bill is a shot across the bow of the federal government.

The Fed's airheaded bubble orthodoxy

The Federal Reserve is still going through its "lessons-learned" exercise from the recent financial crisis, but there's one lesson it clearly has not yet absorbed — the one about ignoring and enabling credit bubbles.

That's the only conclusion that can be drawn from the Fed's decision last week to not only keep its benchmark interest rates at zero but also let everyone know that it intends to leave them there for a good long time. In case anyone missed the message, Fed officials and other central bankers and finance ministers repeated their promise several days later at a meeting in St. Andrews, Scotland, where they vowed to not let up the gas pedals of fiscal and monetary stimulus. And on Tuesday, the point was driven home again by members of the Fed's policy panel in three separate speeches.

Not surprisingly, all of this sparked a week-long party in financial markets that had already experienced powerful rallies over the past six months. U.S. stocks are up 60 percent since March, and share prices in emerging markets have nearly doubled. Commodity prices are soaring once again, led by gold, which is now selling for more than $1,100 an ounce, and crude oil, which is up a whopping 126 percent since February. A rally in the junk-bond and third-world debt markets has driven interest rates back to where they were before the crisis. In urban China, India and Brazil, property prices have doubled in the past year.

"The markets are on a sugar high," Mohamed El-Erian, chief executive of Pimco, the giant money manager, told Newsweek's Rana Foroohar last week.

Judging from how sharply and quickly these prices have risen, it's a pretty good guess that most of the buying has not been done by long-term investors who are suddenly upbeat about the prospects of global economic growth. The better bet is all this is the handiwork of short-term speculation by banks, hedge funds, private-equity funds and other financial center wise-guys moving as a herd, financing their purchases directly or indirectly with some of that yummy zero-percent money pro-

For many investors, in fact, the cost of money is effectively less than zero, as economist Nouriel Roubini likes to point out. If you borrow dollars at near zero percent interest in the United States, exchange the dollars for Thai baht, and invest the baht in government bonds paying 4 or 5 percent, you not only get the benefit of the interest rate arbitrage but you also gain when you sell the bond and exchange the baht back into dollars that have since depreciated. Roubini calls it "the mother of all carry trades," and in recent months he calculates that it has been generating annualized returns for investors of 50 to 70 percent.

This carry trade is now so widespread that it has

Analysis

Somebody on a bus asks a friend, "How about that stock market?" The response: "Unbelievable." Caribbean vacationers lounging poolside check their Blackberries for stock prices. Suburban gym members chat about the latest market gains during their morning workouts.

Welcome to the 2009 bull market — or so many people think. They're buying up shares of everything from Google Inc. to Bank of America Corp. at a pace not seen since the 1930s. Since March, the Dow Jones industrial average has jumped 57 percent and the Standard & Poor's 500 index has gained 62 percent.

Investors are betting on a strong economic recovery. But here's the problem: Good news ahead could be bad news for the bull.

To understand why, consider the very thing that has boosted the market. The U.S. government has spent nearly $1 trillion to stimulate the economy and the Federal Reserve has maintained a policy of keeping interest rates near zero.

Those will disappear as the economy's health improves, potentially halting the bull market by taking away what has been its crutch — sources of cheap and plentiful money.

"Pretty soon the easy money phase could be behind us," said Hugh Johnson, chairman and chief investment officer of Johnson Illington Advisors, an investment firm in Albany, N.Y.

The government has plunged big money into the marketplace, through tax cuts, construction projects and other measures. At the same time, low interest rates have invigorated stocks by reducing borrowing costs and bolstering corporate profits.

The low rates have also knocked down the returns of other short-term investments, like government bonds and money-market funds. Since people aren't getting high returns on those investments, they're buying stocks.

Stocks are risky because they don't guarantee a return, and the recent bear market shows how deeply share prices can drop. From October 2007 through March, the Dow industrials lost 53 percent.

"The Fed is forcing everyone to take risk by buying stocks because if you don't take risk, you will be earning nothing on your money," said Ed Yardeni, president and chief investment strategist at Yardeni Research.

Yardeni said his clients, which include pension funds and institutional investors, feel like they don't have a choice but to buy stocks right now. He sees lots of "fully invested bears" — investors who don't believe that investing in stocks makes sense right now because of the state of the economy, but they are buying anyway because they worry they might miss out on a bull run.

The Dow is trading above 10,000 for the first time since October 2008, though it is still 27 percent below its peak two years ago. The S&P 500 has gone up almost 7 percent just this month.

Plenty of investors and analysts don't see an end to those gains, especially if the economy picks up in the coming months. But a strong economy is just what Yardeni and some others on Wall Street say could thwart the rally should it lead to higher interest rates and waning government stimulus.

The Fed isn't expected to act soon. The U.S. central bank has kept the target range for its bank lending rate at zero to 0.25 percent since December. It pledged this month to keep that rate at a record low for an "extended period." How long that really means is anyone's guess.

The Fed said in a statement after its November meeting that economic activity has "continued to pick up" and that the housing market has strengthened — a key ingredient for a sustained recovery. But a 10.2 percent unemployment rate and weak consumer spending is still plenty worrisome to the economy's overall health.

Yardeni thinks once the Fed even begins to hint of looming changes in its interest-rate policy it will "take the steam out of this rally," he said. "It won't take much to push this market back down."

In the past, higher rates didn't knock down stocks immediately. The Fed cut its benchmark rate from 2001 through 2003 to stimulate growth, taking it down to a low of 1 percent, where it stayed for a year. The low rates reduced mortgage costs, feeding the housing boom, and sparked a bull market in stocks.

The Fed started to slowly raise rates in July 2004 to slow the economy and keep inflation in check. The housing market peaked in 2006 and the stock market followed in 2007. After that, both headed into a free fall.

Back in 1982, a sustained bull market began amid a deep recession, and the gains lasted even though the Fed began to boost rates. There was more to lure investors back to stocks then, notes David Rosenberg, chief economist and strategist at Canadian wealth management Gluskin Sheff.

Stock dividend yields were 6 percent then; today they are below 2 percent. That means investors had a greater potential to generate income off their stock investments, regardless of whether prices rose or fell. Bond yields were at double-digits and were expected to fall in 1982; today short-term bonds pay nearing nothing and yields will likely head higher. That could make fixed-income investments more attractive.

Investors still should heed the potential danger signs of today's market, before their exuberance gets the better of them.

become a major factor driving down the value of the dollar against many other currencies and driving up the flow of hot money into a number of developing countries. Not only has it spawned stock, bond, or real estate bubbles in those countries, but it's also driven up the value of their currencies to the point that their exports are less competitive relative to countries, including China, that peg their currencies to the U.S. dollar. To counteract these trends, central banks in Thailand, South Korea, Russia and the Philippines have intervened in currency markets, buying up dollars and selling their own currencies. Hong Kong has tightened up on lending rules, while Brazil has put a

2 percent tax on capital inflows. Taiwan has banned foreigners from making certain types of bank deposits.

There's no way to know how long all this can continue before one of these bubbles finally bursts, the dollar spikes upward and investors all rush to unwind their trades at the same time. But it is a good guess that it will last as long as the Fed and other central banks indicate there is no end in sight for the current cheap-money regime. The longer they wait, the bigger the bubbles, and the bigger the mess to clean up.

All of which is why the recent statements by policymakers were so disappointing — and so dangerous.

Janet Yellen, the president of the San Francisco Fed, is one of a small number of Fed policymakers who have begun to question the Fed's bubble orthodoxy, but even she declined to stray this week from the official line that the economy and the banks remain so weak that it is premature to even think about raising rates. That might make some sense if all this credit was flowing to worthy households and businesses.

The evidence, however, suggests that much of it is going toward short-term financial speculation that is great for boosting bank profits and fattening the bonuses of Wall Street wise guys — but lousy at producing sustainable long-term growth.

If there is one lesson to be drawn from the recent crisis, surely that is it.

Report: Medicare paid $47 billion in shady claims

By Hope Yen
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The government paid more than $47 billion in questionable Medicare claims including medical treatment showing little relation to a patient's condition, wasting taxpayer dollars at a rate nearly three times the previous year.

Excerpts of a new federal report, obtained by The Associated Press, show a dramatic increase in improper payments in the $440 billion Medicare program that has been cited by government auditors as a high risk for fraud and waste for 20 years.

It's not clear whether Medicare fraud is actually worsening. Much of the increase in the last year is attributed to a change in the Health and Human Services Department's methodology that imposes stricter documentation requirements and includes more improper payments — part of a data-collection effort being ordered government-wide by President Obama this coming week to promote “honest budgeting” and accurate statistics.

Still, the fiscal 2009 financial report — covering the first few months of the Obama administration — highlights the challenges ahead for a government that is seeking in part to pay for its proposed health care overhaul by cracking down on Medicare fraud. While noting that several new anti-fraud efforts were beginning, the government report makes clear that “aggressive actions” to date aimed at reducing improper payments had yielded little improvement.

In recent years, the suspect claims have included Medicare prescriptions from doctors who were dead, and requests for payment for medical supplies such as blood glucose strips for sexual impotence and diabetic shoes for leg amputees. Patients, many of them new citizens who barely speak English, are sometimes recruited by brokers who go door-to-door offering hundreds of dollars for use of their Medicare numbers.

Obama is expected to announce new initiatives this coming week to help crack down on Medicare fraud, including a government-wide Web site aimed at providing a fuller account of health care spending and improper payments made by various agencies. The Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services also will launch a Web interactive next month that will allow users to track Medicare payment information by categories such as state, diagnosis and hospital.

According to the report, the Bush administration from 2005-2008 reported improper payments of roughly 4 percent in the fee-for-service program, or about $17 billion total in 2008. Government officials at the time, however, typically did not consider a Medicare payment improper if the medical documentation was incomplete or a doctor's signature was illegible. Since these were flaws that ordinarily bar payment, that methodology drew complaints from government auditors that the figures were understated.

For fiscal year 2009, the Obama administration began counting those claims as improper, but was unable to complete an official tally based on the new methodology. As a result, it officially reported improper payments for its fee-for-service program at 7.8 percent, representing a partial tally under the new formula. But it considers the unofficial tally of 12.4 percent to be more representative.

Beginning next year, the 12.4 percent figure — or a total of $47 billion in improper payments when counting both Medicare fee for service and managed care — will be used as the baseline estimate. The federal report sets a target of reducing improper payments in the fee-for-service program to 9.5 percent by next year, which would be a savings of roughly $9.7 billion.

Vanishing beaches

Hawaii's famed white sandy shoreline is shrinking

By Audrey McAvoy
Associated Press writer

KAILUA, Hawaii — Jenn Boneza remembers when the white sandy beach near the boat ramp in her hometown was wide enough for people to build sand castles.

“It really used to be a beautiful beach,” said the 35-year-old mother of two. “And now when you look at it, it's gone.”

What's happening to portions of the beach in Kailua — a sunny coastal suburb of Honolulu where President Obama spent his last two family vacations in the islands — is being repeated around the Hawaiian Islands.

Geologists say more than 70 percent of Kauai's beaches are eroding while Oahu has lost a quarter of its sandy shoreline. They warn the problem is only likely to get significantly worse in coming decades as global warming causes sea levels to rise more rapidly.

“It will probably have occurred to a scale that we will have only been able to save a few places and maintain beaches, and the rest are kind of a write-off,” said Dolan Eversole, a coastal geologist with the University of Hawaii's Sea Grant program.

The loss of so many beaches is an alarming prospect for Hawaii on many levels. Many tourists come to Hawaii precisely because they want to lounge on and walk along its soft sandy shoreline. These visitors spend some $11.4 billion each year, making tourism the state's largest employer.

Disappearing sands would also wreak havoc on the environment as many animals and plants would lose important habitats. The Hawaiian monk seal, an endangered species, gives birth and nurses pups on beaches. The green sea turtle, a threatened species, lays eggs in the sand.

Chip Fletcher, a University of Hawaii geology professor, says scientists in Hawaii haven't yet observed an accelerated rate of sea level rise due to global warming.

Instead, the erosion the islands are experiencing now is caused by several factors including a steady historical climb in sea levels that likely dates back to the 19th century.

Other causes include storms and human actions like the construction of seawalls, jetties, and the dredging of stream mouths. Each of these human actions disrupts the natural flow of sand.

But a more rapid rise in sea levels, caused by global warming, is expected to contribute to erosion in Hawaii within decades. In 100 years, sea levels are likely to be at least 3.3 feet higher than they are now, pushing the ocean inland along coastal areas.

Fletcher says between 60 and 80 percent of the nation's shoreline is chronically eroding. But the problem is felt particularly acutely in Hawaii because the economy and lifestyle are so dependent on healthy beaches.

Bernard Madoff's jacket, watch auctioned in NYC

By Verena Dobnik
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — It was about fascination with big money — and the life of a couple at the center of the biggest financial fraud case in U.S. history.

Bernard and Ruth Madoff's belongings fetched several times their estimated values at auction Saturday for a total of about $1 million, twice as much as the auctioneers had hoped for.

The fallen financier's blue satin New York Mets baseball jacket with his surname stitched on the back, valued at up to $720, sold for $14,500. The jacket carries its own special meaning: Team owners Fred Wilpon and Saul Katz were among the victims of Madoff's fraud.

Madoff's Hofstra College ring, estimated at $360, went for $6,000.

Excitement filled a Manhattan hotel ballroom as people participating in the auction, run by Pflugerville, Texas-based Gaston & Sheehan, bid for items they could afford without being as rich as Madoff was.

Charlie Blumenkehl raised his hand for a set of Madoff's golf irons, clinching them for $3,600, against a $350-to-$400 estimate.

“I just wanted Bernie's name on the clubs,” the New Jersey fund manager said with a laugh.

Two pairs of Ruth Madoff's diamond dangle earrings sold for $70,000 each, against a pre-sale estimate of no more than $9,800 and $21,400. But the most highly prized item in the sale, one of Bernard

A vintage Rolex 'Monobloc' chronograph wristwatch, also known as the 'Prisoner Watch,' made for Allied prisoners during World War II, is shown Friday in New York.

Madoff's 17 Rolex watches, fetched only $65,000, paid by an unknown buyer. The watch was valued between $75,000 and $85,000.

The auction was organized by the U.S. Marshals Service, which seized the couple's properties — a penthouse on Manhattan's Upper East Side and houses in Montauk, N.Y., and Palm Beach, Fla.

Inside the homes were some of the items on the block Saturday, ordered forfeited as part of Madoff's sentencing after he pleaded guilty in a multibillion-dollar fraud that burned thousands of investors. Proceeds from the auction will be divided among his victims.

The lots ranged from dishes, pens and stationery to decoy ducks, furs and the Rolex, dubbed the Prisoner Watch.

The Swiss chronograph watch was modeled on those made for World War II Allied airmen imprisoned in Germany, who used them to time prison patrols and plan a possible escape.

Flu fears spur boom in sanitizer products

By Ronald D. White

LOS ANGELES — Silvia Cordero eyed the row of disinfecting gels, soaps and hand sanitizers at a Rite-Aid in Culver City with the intensity of a drill sergeant preparing troops for a skirmish with the H1N1 flu virus.

“They're going in my car, in my desk at work, and in my sons' backpacks,” Cordero, 28, said. “I don't really like the way any of them feel on my skin, but they might help keep us healthy.”

Concerns about the contagiousness and severity of the H1N1 flu strain have generated a boom in the hand sanitizer market.

Sales of gels and wipes have soared by 70.5 percent, from $69.4 million to $118.4 million, in the 24 weeks that ended on Oct. 3, according to data from the Nielsen Company.

Driven in large part by businesses seeking to protect employees and customers, sanitizers helped boost earnings at bleach maker Clorox Corp. and were a bright spot in an otherwise difficult period for Johnson & Johnson, whose Purell subsidiary is one of main producers of alcohol-based gel cleaners.

Demand for antiviral products has also spawned a cottage industry in personalized sanitizers.

Consumers can go online to order them in fur-trimmed pump-bottles on one site or with their company names printed on the front at another.

Pier One Imports is selling holiday-themed sanitizers with such scents as cinnamon and cilantro, packaged as nicely as perfume offerings.

Jack and Jackie Cummings are seen Oct. 22 at their home in Bakersfield, Calif. The Cummings fled Bakersfield with their sons in October 1984, when plainclothes police started casing their house looking for members of child molestation rings. The family moved from campsite to campsite for a year, terrified that sheriff's deputies would arrest them because they knew a couple on trial for alleged child abuse.

Crusading California D.A. retires, leaves painful wake

By Garance Burke
Associated Press writer

BAKERSFIELD, Calif. — The molesters drank blood, the children said, and hung them from hooks after forcing them to have sex with their parents. They murdered babies, prosecutors told jurors, and snapped photographs as the horror unfolded.

Ed Jagels, renowned as one of California's toughest district attorneys, built his career on the Kern County child molestation cases of the 1980s, putting more than two dozen men and women behind bars to serve decades-long sentences for abusing children.

Appellate judges now say most of those crimes never happened.

Jagels

Still, generations of voters have embraced the crusading prosecutor's tough-on-crime agenda in this blue-collar basin just a mountain range north of Los Angeles.

Now, as Jagels prepares to retire, the get-tough laws he championed are being criticized in a state crippled by soaring prison costs. And some of those he put away are going public with stories of wrongful conviction in a documentary film narrated by Sean Penn, one of his most ardent critics.

The Bakersfield trials — and half a dozen similar cases that rippled across America during the hysteria of that period — are widely acknowledged to have punished the innocent. Most convictions relied solely on children's testimony, and the state attorney general ultimately found county investigators coerced their young witnesses into lying on the stand and that the probe "floundered in a sea of unproven allegations."

But the silver-haired prosecutor maintains that justice was done in the cases that made him a darling of California's conservative movement.

"Innocent people may have been accused at one point or another, but what I really fear is that perfectly legitimate convictions have been overturned," Jagels said, sitting in his wood-paneled office among portraits of himself with Ronald Reagan and other Republican leaders. "How the people of Kern County feel about what I've done is much more important than what anyone else might think."

Such stunning setbacks might have derailed other elected officials, but Jagels, 60, has thrived amid the oil fields and orchards surrounding Bakersfield. He holds fast that he was right to form a special task force to investigate alleged molestation rings, right to assign his young attorneys to the cases and he has fought the release of those convicted.

He has been re-elected six times, is leaving office on his own terms and hopes to leave the reins next year to a handpicked successor.

That brings little comfort to Brandon Smith, who grew up without his parents after they were sentenced to prison for gruesome sex crimes he and his younger brother described on the witness stand. Smith said he only repeated what he heard during weeks of group therapy, and had no inkling his false statements would mean he would be separated from his family and assigned to live in foster homes for nearly a decade.

"They basically coached me through my whole testimony, and told me that I had to say that my parents had sexually abused me," said Smith, whose parents Scott and Brenda Kniffen served 12 years on molestation convictions before they were reversed by an appeals court.

"We've all put it behind us, but the one thing I would love is a verbal apology from Ed Jagels for tearing my family apart."

Since the late 1980s, all but one of 26 convictions Jagels secured have been reversed. Kern County has paid $9.56 million to settle state and federal suits brought by former defendants and their children.

Penn, who met Smith through the film, says the Bakersfield cases struck a chord because he did a short stay in a Los Angeles County jail cell next to a man accused in a major Southern California child abuse case.

Raymond Buckey and his mother, who ran the McMartin Pre-School in Manhattan Beach, ultimately were acquitted of 52 child molestation charges in 1990.

"There is no question that we have to take these kinds of questions very seriously, but in these cases a pretty good system was used really corruptly," said Penn, who also executive produced the film "Witch Hunt," which has been airing nationally on MSNBC. "Jagels orchestrated the rape of these children emotionally, not to mention the illegitimate prosecution of the adults."

Jackie Cummings fled Bakersfield with her husband and two sons in October 1984, when plainclothes police started casing their house looking for members of molestation rings. The family moved from campsite to campsite for a year, terrified that sheriff's deputies would arrest them because they knew a couple on trial for alleged child abuse.

When investigators tracked down the Cummings at a motel, they seized the children, arguing the couple were devil-worshipping molesters. After a year in foster care, their sons were pressured to testify against them in custody hearings.

"He's destroyed hundreds of people's lives," said Cummings, who was never charged with a crime, and whose custody case ultimately was thrown out. "We came back to Bakersfield and the jails were just filling up with people. We knew all those people were innocent, because we were innocent, too."

Since the 1980s, Jagels and county law enforcement officials have made major reforms to their investigative procedures, and now assure all interviews with child witnesses are videotaped and do not include suggestive questioning.

Boise State and UI often work together despite rivalry

By Rocky Barber
The Idaho Statesman

BOISE — The rivalry between the Bronco and Vandal football teams has returned to a level not seen since 1998.

But in science laboratories and in the Idaho Legislature, Boise State University and the University of Idaho have become partners in research and the effort to raise money for all three institutions.

Presidents Bob Kustra of BSU and Duane Nellis of UI celebrated their collaboration with a lunch Friday for researchers from both universities who have worked together to learn more about energy, water and biomedicine.

"We're rivals on the field but we're innovators for the future off the field," Nellis said.

It wasn't always this way.

For decades, funding support for Idaho's universities was divided regionally with lawmakers from the north, southeast and southwest fighting for their home school.

"When I was a legislator it used to drive me nuts," said former House Speaker Bruce Newcomb, now a special adviser to Kustra and a lobbyist for BSU. "It was a fight for the same money at the other guys' expense."

University of Idaho's clout on the field was reflected in state policy.

The competition reached its peak in the early 1990s over undergraduate engineering instruction that Treasure Valley companies like Micron Technology were seeking to meet their work force needs. The University of Idaho blocked Boise State's bid until finally facing the threat that Micron would expand elsewhere unless the state approved it.

"The University of Idaho was burying its head in the sand at the time and assumed if someone wanted a high-quality education in Idaho they would go to Moscow," said Marty Peterson, then chief of staff for former Gov. Cecil Andrus and now a lobbyist for U of I.

Changing demographics with older students returning to college gave Boise State the enrollment boost that pushed it past the other two schools. And by 1998, the last year the Vandals defeated the Broncos on the field (36-35 in overtime), Idaho supporters and alumni wanted to give their school a Boise presence to compete with the growth of BSU.

They came up with the idea of University Place, envisioned as a three-building higher-ed complex in downtown Boise. Then-president Robert Hoover lost his job as it fell apart over questions about financial management, and he left the University of Idaho Foundation $26 million in debt — which the foundation has since repaid.

What survived the collapse was the University of Idaho Water Center, today considered a world-class resource for both universities — it has become a physical expression of the collaborative relationship that grew out of the ashes of University Place. Kustra arrived in the middle of the controversy and forged strong relationships with Hoover's successors Gary Michael, Tim White and Nellis, who came on the job earlier this year.

Today the two schools — and Idaho State University — work together on a number of research programs: the Center for Advanced Energy Studies, the Idea Network for Biomedical Research Excellence, the Idaho Water Resources Research Institute and the Experimental Program to Stimulate Competitive Research in Idaho.

Norma Colleen Kottraba

BUHL — On Monday, Nov. 9, 2009, our beloved Norma passed away at age 81 after an extended illness. Due to her declining health, she had been living with her sister, Beverly Wright, in Glendale, Ariz. The day before her death she was doing what she loved best, playing with her great-grandchildren who were visiting from Boise, Idaho. This was a fitting tribute to Norma's legacy.

Norma came into this world on March 21, 1928, in Fairview, Ore., the first child of James Irwin Alger and Tessie (Rainey) Alger. Her maternal grandfather, Alexander Emory, named her for his favorite silent film actresses, Norma Talmadge and Colleen Moore. She grew up in Twin Falls, Idaho, often visiting the Emory's farm in Buhl. Her compassion for animals developed here and led to her love of gardening and rodeos.

On June 21, 1948, Norma married Phillip Ray Kottraba in Reno, Nev., and settled in the Sparks, Reno area. This is where she practiced her cosmetology skills and started a beauty product business. Reno is also where she gave birth to three children, one of whom, Rebecca, died in infancy. By the '60s, the family moved to Scottsdale, Ariz., where Norma managed a medical building while raising her two sons, Kirk and Marc.

Rodeos were a big part of their life and eventually they purchased acreage in Chandler, Ariz., allowing them to have their horses on site. By the 1980s, Norma and Phil retired and found themselves back where they started in Buhl, Idaho. Among many things, Norma enjoyed dancing with her husband, traveling with her sister, participating in the sorority, Beta Sigma Phi, and the occasional off-color joke.

Norma was loved by everyone who met her. She had the gift to touch others with her compassion, generosity and tremendous sense of humor. She never forgot a friend or relatives birthday always sending cards to let them know they were special. Her loyalty and love of family and friends stayed true to the end. We will always remember her smile, her laugh and her soft kisses of goodbye.

Norma was preceded in death by her parents; her husband, Phillip Ray Kottraba; infant daughter, Rebecca Jane Kottraba; brother, James Darryl Alger; sister in-law, Phyllis Kottraba, her niece, Tennyson Leigh Alger; and her nephew, Kent Kottraba.

She is survived by her sister, Beverly (Alger) Wright of Glendale, Ariz.; sons, Phillip Kirk Kottraba and Marc Dana Kottraba, both of Buhl, Idaho; grandchildren, P. Jody Kottraba (Corie), Ashley Elisabeth Kottraba and Edward James Kottraba, all of Boise, and Abigail Louise Restrepo (Greg) of Austin, Texas; great-grandchildren, Katherine West Kottraba, Carsten John Kottraba, Tyce Colton Kottraba and Aidan Edward Kottraba; sister in-law, Donna Kay Alger; brother-in-law, Donald James Kottraba (Barbara); and many nieces, nephews, cousins and friends.

There will be a memorial service for Norma at 11:30 a.m. Saturday Nov. 21, at Calvary Chapel of Buhl, 1004 Burley Ave., Buhl, ID 83316. A reception will follow. All are welcome to celebrate her life.

Patricia Hawkins King

Patricia Hawkins King, 79, passed away peacefully Tuesday, Oct. 27, 2009, at La Vida Rea in Rancho San Diego, Calif., following an extended battle with dementia.

Pat was born on the family farm in Filer, Idaho, on Feb. 22, 1930. She played the French horn in the Filer High School band and was a member of Rainbow Girls. She met her husband, Robert King, in Boise, Idaho, in 1950, where he was playing professional baseball and she was a secretary to the Idaho State veterinarian. They subsequently married on Dec. 16, 1951, at the First Methodist Church in Boise, a marriage that would have celebrated its 58th anniversary next month. She was employed by Ryan Aircraft in the office of the chief inspector, while her husband was completing his education at San Diego State College. Their first child, Kathryn, was born in Quantico, Va., on Nov. 6, 1953, during the active duty tour of her husband in the U.S. Marine Corps. Their second child, Robert III, was born in Boise on Sept. 4, 1955.

Pat was a member of the Cathedral of the Rockies Methodist Church in Boise and an active member of the First United Methodist Church of San Diego since 1968. She serves as president of a chapter of the Children's Home Society in San Diego and also of Chapter IZ of the PEO. She was initiated into PEO Chapter AT in 1966 in Boise, and it was very dear to her heart from the first day she was invited into membership. Pat attended Boise Junior College and, during that same time, she was a choir mother and Sunday school teacher at the Cathedral of the Rockies Methodist Church. She was president of the Faculty Dames, an organization of teacher wives in Boise. Pat was employed in the Grossmont High School District at Grossmont, El Capitan, and her longest tenure of service was at Santana High School as registrar. Pat loved being a homemaker and loved her friends and family. She enjoyed playing bridge, sewing, decorating, traveling and hosting parties for friends and family; most of all, she enjoyed helping others. Her love for the outdoors of Idaho led to her selecting an Idaho river-front lot in Garden Valley, Idaho, on which the family built a cabin that she and her husband enjoyed with friends and family. This effort reflected much of the beauty and simplicity of her life.

Pat is survived by her loving husband, Robert; two children, Kathryn Gupitll of Modesto, Calif., and Robert III of Middleton, Idaho; two grandchildren, Heidi Rochin of Fresno, Calif., and Matthew Sconyers, currently employed in Japan; and one great-grandchild, Enzo Westley Rochin. Pat also leaves her younger twin siblings, Judith Simmons and Jerry Hawkins of Boise, Idaho; and older brother, Eldon Hawkins of Waterville, Wash.

A memorial service will be conducted at 1 p.m. Friday, Nov. 20, at the Cathedral of the Rockies, 711 N. 11th St., Boise, ID 83702. In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the George G. Glenner Alzheimer's Family Center, 3686 Fourth Ave., San Diego, CA 92103, or the United Methodist Church of Filer, 318 Union St., Filer, ID 83328.

Anna Deen Coulam

Anna Deen Coulam, longtime resident of Twin Falls, passed away Thursday, Nov. 12, 2009, of complications due to her age.

Anna Deen was a lifelong member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. She was born 97 years ago in Park City, Utah, to Anna Kathryn and George Scott. She was the fourth child with a sister, Mary, 15 years older; brothers, Burt, eight years older; and Vernon, three years older. At the age of 9, her father died and she moved to Provo with her mother and met Reed Coulam, the love of her life.

In 1934, she married Reed in Twin Falls; their marriage was later solemnized in the Idaho Falls Temple. They had three daughters sent to them, Geraldine Coulam Mahoney of Kuna, Idaho, Georgia Coulam of Twin Falls and Claudia Coulam McKinnon of Thailand.

She worked at Krengel's Hardware Store with Mr. Krengel and worked in the gourmet part of the store. In 1966, Reed and Anna Deen built a home in Sun Valley, Idaho, and it was a gathering place for their family. She was a beloved mother and grandmother of nine and great-grandmother of 10.

Anna Deen loved to golf and spent 50 years playing at the Twin Falls Municipal Golf Course. She won many golf tournaments and met great friends while playing golf. She will be missed.

A celebration of Anna Deen's life will be held as a graveside service at 2 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 17, at Twin Falls Cemetery, beside her beloved husband. A gathering for family and friends will take place from 4 until 6 p.m. Monday at White Mortuary, 136 Fourth Ave. E. in Twin Falls.

Kenneth 'Mike' Cooke

MERIDIAN — Kenneth Michael "Mike" Cooke, of Meridian, went to be with the Lord on Wednesday, Nov. 11, 2009.

Mike was born Jan. 28, 1960, in Burley, Idaho, to his parents, Melva L. (Munson) Cooke and Kenneth A. Cooke (deceased).

A memorial service will be conducted by Pastor Tom Blackburn at 11 a.m. Tuesday, Nov. 17, at Summers Funeral Homes, Ustick Chapel.

Mike graduated from BSU with an associate in science degree and started his career as a journeyman plumber. He later worked for Consolidated Supply as a floor manager and then moved on to work for American Standard as an account manager, where he retired in late fall of 2008 due to his health.

Mike married Rhea Hedges on June 15, 1997, in Plenty Wood, Mont. Mike was gifted with the ability to do so many things, a gift he inherited from his dad. Mike loved to spend time in the mountains. Most dear to his heart was the area of Clayton, Idaho, where he found solitude and earlier in his life fishing the Salmon River in his drift boat.

Mike would want us to give Rhea, his loving wife, his gratitude and respect for her undying commitment to his care, and for meeting and exceeding their children's needs as well as maintaining her excellent skills as a nurse in St. Luke's Intensive Care Unit. She truly is an extraordinary woman. Special thanks as well to Rhea's family, especially Don for being Rhea's helping hand and for the loving care he showed Mike.

Mike is survived by his wife, Rhea; and his two wonderful sons, Cameron and Damon; his mother, Melva Cooke of Meridian; two sisters, Lori Cooke of Meridian and Carla Jensen (Edward Olson) of Meridian; two nephews, Travis (Eva) Jensen of San Francisco, Calif., and Michael May of Boise; and niece, Jordan (Jay) Armstrong of Boise; and many others who dearly loved him.

In lieu of flowers, a trust fund has been set up for Mike's children's education at Health Care in care of Idaho Credit Union, 105 W. State St., Boise, ID 83702, or memorial donations can be made to cancer research.

Brenda Martin Williams

BOISE — Brenda Martin Williams passed away Tuesday, Nov. 10, 2009, from breast cancer.

I know this will be a difficult time for my family and I have chosen to write this obituary. I was born Jan 14, 1954, in Rupert, Idaho, the second child of Leonard and Betty Martin. I attended Minico High School and graduated in 1972. I then attended the University of Idaho, where I received a degree in business finance in 1975. I married Mitch Williams in May 1975, and we just celebrated 34 years together. After our oldest son, Patrick, was born, I felt like I needed a different career path and returned to medical school at the University of Washington. I graduated in 1987 and our second son, Colin, was born in December of 1987. I have been blessed to have two great sons and a wonderful husband. I was in practice in Boise for 17 years and saw my practice grow from one doctor to six doctors and appreciate the fact that I was in a practice with truly excellent partners and doctors.

I am survived by my husband and sons, Mitch, Pat and Colin; my parents, Leonard and Betty Martin of Paul; brothers, Doug (Lebbie) and Randee (Connie), both of Paul; and my sister and good friend, Melody Wyson (Earl) of Rupert.

I have had wonderful care the last 15 years at MSTI.

Thank you, Dr. Paul Montgomery, Dr. Ron Dorn and all of the chemo nurses. I also want to thank my partner, Dr. Jackie Maybach, for her help in this process.

In lieu of flowers, I would prefer contributions to Expedition Inspiration of Ketchum to aid in breast cancer research. Send to P.O. Box 4289, Ketchum, ID 83340, or to the Mini-Cassia Christian Education Association, 750 W. 71 N., Paul, ID 83347.

A service will be held at 4 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 21, at Cathedral of the Rockies, 717 N. 11th St. in Boise, under the direction of Alden-Waggoner Funeral Chapel. The Rev. Neal Collins of Immanuel Lutheran Church will officiate the service. A second service will be held at Trinity Lutheran Church in Rupert.

I have had a blessed life and wish it had been longer, but I am grateful for the life I have had and as a Christian, I have no fear of death and look forward to life everlasting.

Pauline Ethel Yenne Miller

KIMBERLY — Pauline Ethel Yenne Miller, 50, of Kimberly and formerly of Boise, passed away Friday, Nov. 13, 2009, at Oak Creek Rehabilitation Center in Kimberly, Idaho.

Ethel was born April 26, 1959, in Boise, Idaho, to Edward and Pauline (Bruch) Yenne. She was raised and attended schools in the Mini-Cassia area. She married Frank Miller, the love of her life on Sept. 10, 2005.

She is survived by her husband, Frank Miller; brothers, Jim (Kathie) Carter, John Carter, Joe (Carla) Carter, Sam (Becky Hirte) Yenne, Ernie Yenne and Eddie (Stephiene) Yenne; sisters, Catherine (Bill) Petzak, Mildred (Stephan) Ferraro and Fran (John) Priuett; and numerous nieces and nephews. She is preceded in death by her parents; her brother, Larry Carter; and sister-in-law, Gwen Carter.

A memorial service will be held at 11 a.m. Thursday, Nov. 19, at New Hope Nazarene Church in Boise, 8989 Overland Road, with an inurnment to follow at 2 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 19, at Morris Hill Cemetery in Boise. Arrangements are under the direction of White Mortuary "Chapel by the Park" in Twin Falls.

BURLEY — Agnes Cecilia Reid, age 88, of Burley, died Friday, Nov. 13, 2009, at Parke View Care and Rehabilitation Center.

Agnes was born Jan. 7, 1921, in Cando, Towner County, N.D., the third of nine children born to German immigrants, Michael (Mike) Hartl Sr. and Theresa Becker Hartl. Agnes attended Coolin Country School located 12 miles southeast of Cando, graduating from the eighth grade in 1936. Agnes wanted to continue her education, but compromised her desires to help the family farm survive. She learned the value of hard work at a young age and carried that value with her throughout her life.

Agnes married Clifford Len Reid on April 4, 1945, at Sacred Heart Catholic Church in Cando, N.D. Together, they farmed in Towner County, N.D., until 1951 when Agnes and Cliff bought the Cando Bar, which they operated until 1961 when they moved to Burley. Agnes helped Cliff farm and tend bar. Together, they raised four children, Wayne, Roger, Eugene and Charlotte.

After establishing their home in Burley, Agnes worked odd jobs to help provide for her family and eventually went to work for Ore-Ida Foods Inc. She retired in 1985 after 23 years of service. Agnes was a very loving and caring individual, who sacrificed her own wants and needs for the sake of others — her husband, her children, her grandchildren and her church community. Agnes was a devout Catholic and could be found at almost every church bizarre, fair and fundraiser until her health prevented her from doing so.

When she wasn't working, Agnes enjoyed reading, crocheting, spending time with her grandchildren, and working in her yard. She loved flowers, especially roses.

Agnes was preceded in death by her husband, Clifford; her son and daughter-in-law, Wayne and Elke Reid; one brother; and four sisters.

She is survived by two sons, Roger Reid and Eugene Reid of Burley; one daughter, Charlotte Bossert of Rupert; seven grandchildren; 16 great-grandchildren; two sisters; and one brother.

A vigil service with recitation of the rosary will be held at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 18, at Little Flower Catholic Church, 1601 Oakley Ave. in Burley. The funeral Mass will be celebrated at 11 a.m. Thursday, Nov. 19, also at Little Flower Catholic Church, with the Rev. Father Justin Brady as celebrant. Burial will be in Pleasant View Cemetery. Friends and family may call one hour prior to the rosary and one hour prior to the Mass at the church. Arrangements have been entrusted to the care of the Rasmussen Funeral Home of Burley.

The family would like to acknowledge and thank Dr. Duane Jeffers, Rosetta Assisted Living, Parke View Care and Rehabilitation Center, and Jeff Rasmussen for their care and support. The family also suggests that memorials be made to the National Alzheimer's Foundation in care of Rasmussen Funeral Home.

For obituary rates and information, call 735-3266 Monday through Saturday. Deadline is 3 p.m. for next-day publication. The e-mail address for obituaries is obits@magicvalley.com.

Don Laib

BOISE — Donald LeRoy Laib peacefully left this world Friday, Nov. 6, 2009.

He was born in Twin Falls, Idaho, on Oct. 31, 1946. He was the youngest of six children. His loving parents were both first-generation German-Americans. Don had an adventurous and mischievous childhood, fishing and exploring Rock Creek Canyon near his home in Twin Falls. He enjoyed and excelled at school, where he established a great group of lifelong friends.

In 1964 during his senior year at Twin Falls High School, he joined the Army National Guard and served for six years. After an honorable discharge, he enrolled in school at College of Southern Idaho and, working to pay his way through, earned an associate degree in chemistry in 1967. Shortly after his graduation, he enrolled at Idaho State University and, again working his way through, graduated with a bachelor's degree in mathematics in 1970.

Don moved to Boise in 1972 when he gained employment as a journeyman roofer. That same year, he met and fell in love with Cece Strong. They were married in 1976 and had two beautiful children together, John born in 1977 and Amanda in 1980.

During his career as a roofer, he was a member of AFL-CIO and served as president of the Local 209 Roofers Union for several years.

He was very enthusiastic about his work with the union and put a lot of energy into it, inspiring his fellow members to get involved, volunteer and vote. When he left the roofing profession, he worked in information technology for the state of Idaho for more than 20 years. Ever the working man, he returned on a part-time basis to his job at the Department of Labor following his retirement in October 2008.

Following an amicable divorce with Cece, Don met the love of his life, Inez “Nezzy” Lough. In gaining a newfound love, he also gained a lovely stepdaughter, Ami Lough. After 20 years of steadfast devotion and many challenges, Don lost Nezzy when she passed away in January 2005. His big heart never stopped missing her and they are no doubt together now, happily ever after.

Don mostly enjoyed spending time with his family, friends and pets. His heart was huge and contagious with love. He was a warm and caring man who never judged anyone and lived his life as an open-minded individual so rare to find. As a father, he was affectionate and adoring. He taught his children by example and encouraged them in their pursuits, always supportive.

Throughout his life, Don loved fishing, whitewater rafting, gardening, camping, mechanical and carpentry work, reading the newspaper while watching CBS Sunday Morning, cooking, barbecues with his kids, celebrating, helping people and socializing with anyone and everyone.

Don was preceded in death by his parents, John and Florence Laib; and his wife, Inez Laib. He is survived by his children, John and Amanda Laib; his stepdaughter, Ami Lough; his siblings, Betty Newbry, Duane Fusselman, Paul Fusselman, Robert Laib and Patty Cunningham; his aunt, Ann Combs; as well as many cousins, nieces, nephews and numerous friends.

A celebration of Don's life will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 21, at the Owyhee Plaza. Please join us in a hearty farewell to a great man.

Chief Warrant Officer Mathew Clayton Heffelfinger

KIMBERLY — Matt was born Feb. 3, 1980, in Portland, Ore.; he was taken from us Sunday, Nov. 8, 2009, while serving in Iraq from a helicopter accident.

Matt was married Aug. 28, 1999, in Twin Falls, Idaho, to Tanya Michelle McKamey. They together had two beautiful girls, Madison, 10, and Meah, 5.

After completing school, Matt joined the Army to better his life for his family. He completed his basic training in Fort Benning, Ga. He then went to Fort Ustis, Va., to train to be a UH - 60 Helicopter Mechanic. He was then assigned to his first duty station in Savannah, Ga., and so very honored to be accepted into the Nightstalker family, 3/160th SOAR. He left Savannah in July 2005 to attend WOBC in Fort Rucker, Ala., to start flight school. He finished at the top of his class and loved the mission of the Kiowa and so he chose to fly the OH-58D. For the next year and a half, he went through flight school while living in Enterprise, Ala. After graduating from flight school, orders came down to be stationed in Hawaii.

Matt and Tanya resided in Ewa Beach, Hawaii, in their first purchased home. Matt worked out of the Wheeler Army Airfield with 2nd Squadron, 6th U.S. Cavalry Regiment, 25th Combat Aviation Brigade flying the OH-58D. Matt became a trained PC and loved teaching others everything he knew; he always gave 110 percent and nothing less. He wanted all his fellow pilots to be the best at what they did and Matt was a great teacher.

Matt is survived by his wife, Tanya Michelle Heffelfinger, and two daughters, Madison Eliza Heffelfinger and Meah Lucille Heffelfinger; his parents, Barbara and Craig Heffelfinger; sisters, Christine Hodkins and Carrie Krainock and husband, Brian; brother, Nathan Heffelfinger and wife, Kelley; and his grandma, Veris Moore. Matt is preceded by his grandpa, Harold (Hap) Moore; his aunt, Brenda K SENSE; and cousin, Millie Webb.

Matt was a fun-loving man who brightened everyone's day, just by the smile on his face. He loved to play the guitar with close friends and also knew how to rock out with Rock Band. He also loved his family time, whether it be going to the beach, zoo with his girls, going on a bike ride, playing games in the house, going to dinner and a movie or just being outdoors hiking. He had an adventurous side that made him love fast cars, motorcycles, and just recently this year learned he had a passion for skydiving. Matt could go anywhere and lighten up the room by his great sense of humor and his quirky smile that he always had. Matt had always strived to be at his best and when it wasn't enough, he tried harder. He would lend a helping hand to anyone that would ask and always brought out the best in everyone.

A viewing will be held from 5 to 8 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 19, at White Mortuary, “Chapel by the Park,” 136 Fourth Ave E in Twin Falls, Idaho. The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, Nov. 20, at the LDS Stake Center, 3850 N. 3500 E. in Kimberly, Idaho. Burial will be at Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls.

Jim Conger Jr.

RUPERT — Jim Conger Jr., of St. Anthony and formerly of Rupert, passed away peacefully Wednesday, Nov. 11, 2009, after a long illness at the age of 40.

He is survived by his wife, Cathy; his oldest son, Brad; his baby girl, Bekah; and his youngest son, Cody. His other surviving family is his mom, Sherry (Warren) Whitman; his brother, Bob (Danyelle) Conger; and his sister, Terri (Jimmy) Snow.

Jim was born in Pocatello on March 16, 1969, and spent most of his life in the Burley/Rupert area. After spending some time in the Army, he returned to Rupert where he began a fulfilling career working with troubled youth. It was in this career that he met and married his wife, who shared his passion for helping others. Jim loved fishing, hunting, camping and the fire department. Even more, though, he loved helping kids, helping his friends and being with his family. The world is a better place for having Jim in it and he will be sorely missed.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Tuesday, Nov. 17, at the Acequia LDS Church. Viewing for family and friends will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Monday, Nov. 16, at the Hansen Mortuary Rupert Chapel, 710 Sixth St., and one hour prior to the service at the church. Services will conclude with burial in the Rupert Cemetery.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made at Wells Fargo Bank in the name of Cathy Conger and zip code 83445. Condolences may be left at www.hansen-mortuary.com.

Reynaldo R. (Rey) Nevarez

BURLEY — Reynaldo R. (Rey) Nevarez was born April 1, 1948, and passed away suddenly Wednesday, Nov. 11, 2009, at the age of 61.

He was born in Campwood, Texas, and made a life in Burley, where he met the love of his life, Abelina Benavidez. They were married Jan. 14, 1967.

He was preceded in death by an uncle, aunt and grandmother.

He is survived by his devoted wife of 42 years, Abelina; two sons, Reynaldo Nevarez Jr. and Eddie Nevarez and his wife, Loretta; and one daughter, Tonya Smith and her husband, Darin. He leaves behind his parents, Reynaldo T. and Angelina Nevarez; two brothers, Rene and Ramiro; six sisters, Rebecca, Rosa, Rita, Rosalia, Ramona and Romana; 10 grandchildren; as well as numerous cousins, nieces and nephews.

He will be remembered for his love of driving truck, but his true passion was spending time with his wife and family.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Monday, Nov. 16, at the Burley Christian Center, 317 W. 27th St., with Pastor Elden Kirschman officiating. Burial will be in Gem Memorial Gardens. A viewing for family and friends will take place from 6 until 8 p.m. Sunday at the Burley Christian Center and again one hour prior to the service on Monday.

Arrangements have been entrusted to the care of Rasmussen Funeral Home of Burley.

Mary Mohr

Mary Lou Mohr stepped into heaven on Thursday, Nov. 12, 2009.

She was born April 29, 1932, to Charles and Martena Romans in Kimberly, Idaho; number 13 of 16 children. She attended school in Jerome.

On Oct 2, 1948, she married Gerald Mohr in Elko Nev. They resided in Twin Falls for more than 50 years. Mary worked at the potato processing plant in Twin Falls for 32 years.

She was a serious fisherwoman, seamstress, gardener, and enjoyed making things with her own hands.

She is survived by her three children, Patricia (Jim) Corle of Hansen, William Mohr of Colorado and Fred Mohr of Hansen; six grandchildren; 10 great-grandchildren; two sisters; one brother and adopted daughter, Debbie Broner of Kimberly.

The family would like to express their thanks to the staff of the Solana unit at River Ridge Care for their four years of loving compassion.

The funeral will be held at 3 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 17, at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home, 2551 Kimberly Road in Twin Falls.

Interment will follow at the Twin Falls Cemetery. A visitation will be held from 6 until 8 p.m. Monday, Nov. 16, at the funeral home.

James Lilley, former U.S. ambassador to China, dies at 81

WASHINGTON (AP) — James R. Lilley, a longtime CIA operative and later the U.S. ambassador to China during the time of the Tiananmen Square crack-down, has died. He was 81.

The Washington Post said Lilley, who was born in China to an oilman father and schoolteacher mother, died Thursday in Washington from complications related to prostate cancer.

Lilley had a close relationship with former President George H.W. Bush dating to the early 1970s, when Lilley headed the CIA's operations in Beijing and Bush was the chief of the U.S. mission there. During the 1989 Tiananmen protests, Lilley, a stern critic of the crack-down, often sent his reports about the unfolding events directly to Bush, who was then president.

In a statement Friday, Bush called Lilley "a most knowledgeable and effective ambassador who served with great honor and distinction."

Bush said he'd spoken with Lilley just a few days before his death.

Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton, who is traveling in Asia, said she was saddened to learn of Lilley's death and called him "one of our nation's finest diplomats."

She said Lilley "inspired generations of China hands?"

Lilley who earlier served as the ambassador to South Korea, was the ambassador to China from 1989 to 1991, "one of the most difficult periods in our bilateral relations?" Clinton said.

Cruiser and Dividend Extreme: The Start to Unstoppable Wheat

Whether you use them together or alone, Dividend Extreme® fungicide and Cruiser® insecticide seed treatments are the ticket to a successful start for your wheat crop. Dividend Extreme stonewalls 16 different diseases and provides three times higher protection against Pythium compared to other industry standards. Then there is Cruiser, with an increased rate recommendation of 1 oz/cwt for enhanced wireworm protection under very high pressure. If bugs dream, this is the stuff that gives seven formerly formidable insects nightmares. And if this wasn't enough, Cruiser features the Thiamethoxam Vigor Effect, too.

Cruising to Success

Dryland areas of the Pacific Northwest frequently produce lower-yielding wheat than their more moist counterparts. However, growers like Mike Miller of J.R. Miller Farms Inc. in Ritzville, Wash., are continuously finding new ways to increase wheat quality and yield despite these environmental challenges.

Throughout the past several seasons, Miller has produced quicker-emerging, healthier wheat, and he attributes this success to Cruiser insecticide from Syngenta Seed Care.

"It's hard to grow healthy wheat in this area," Miller says. "Because we are so dry, the wheat really has a hard time getting out of the ground. In my experience, Cruiser has been a savior in that it helps get the crop off to a healthy start with a strong stand and quicker, fuller emergence.

"We also know wireworms are present," Miller explains. "Our job is to prevent them from damaging seedlings so we can produce a healthy crop. We've increased our rate of Cruiser to 1 oz/cwt to help combat heavier wireworm pressure, and plan to do the same on all our wheat acres next season.

"Not only are we achieving wireworm suppression, but we've also seen the crop emerge up to three days faster. And in the trials we just harvested, we saw a 6.5-bushel-per-acre increase in fields where Cruiser was used at the 1 oz/cwt rate vs. untreated or Cruiser at the low rate.

"Cutting seed treatment is simply not an option for me. Treating my wheat seed with Cruiser just makes sense. I'll cut somewhere else if I have to."

Ketchum may never be the same after River Run

Ketchum's about to grow up. There are good things and bad about that, but there's little doubt that when the community's Planning and Zoning Commission and its City Council give final approval to the Sun Valley Company's 138-acre River Run development and 110-foot hotel at the base of Bald Mountain — which they almost certainly will do in the next few weeks — Ketchum will have crossed a watershed.

On the other side lie America's gaudiest and most commercial ski towns — Aspen, Park City and Lake Tahoe. Ketchum and adjacent Sun Valley could easily become one of them, full of Prada, Louis Vuitton and Dior boutiques and amusements and housing beyond the reach of real Idahoans.

Or Ketchum could keep its sense of perspective — and its unprepossessing ways — as Crested Butte, Steamboat Springs and Jackson have managed to do.

Of greatest concern is just how many of the 3,272 Ketchumites will be able to afford to stay that way.

In Jackson, working families can buy homes below resort-market value.

In Colorado, ski town developers must set aside up to 60 percent of their units for affordable housing.

Not in Idaho. Except for whatever affordable housing concessions local planners and elected officials can wheedle out of developers, folks of ordinary means are on their own in Blaine County. That's why so many of them live in Shoshone, Richfield, Gooding, Jerome and Twin Falls.

Then, too, there are infrastructure concerns.

Ketchum has a street network that's closer to Shoshone's than Aspen's and a transportation system that, despite the arrival of a mass transit system, still depends on cars and SUVs.

The good news is that the Sun Valley Company grew up with Ketchum, and knows its values and traditions. Among other improvements, it plans to create a 15-acre Big Wood River Ecological Park, including an area that currently boasts a large beaver pond.

And Sun Valley Director of Resort Development Wally Huffman's idea — still speculative — to build a gondola from the resort to Ketchum and then to the base of Bald Mountain is intriguing. There's no doubt that the hotel would be a first-class addition. Everything constructed by the Earl Holding company has been done exquisitely. And it would likely bring new dollars into an economy that's been marginal even in good times.

But despite its resident glitterati and its seven-figure properties, Ketchum is still a small town, populated mostly by folks who actually have to get up and go to work every morning. That's part of its charm. Will a high-rise hotel jeopardize that? That question should be thrown into the equation as the community weighs the pros and cons of the project.

Our view:
The Sun Valley Co.'s proposed River Run project is impressive, but how will it change the community?

What do you think?
We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

THE STATE OF IDAHO'S KIDS

How the recession is changing life for families

Editor's note: The annual, 50-state Kids County survey is paid for by the Annie E. Casey Foundation, a Baltimore-based children's welfare group established by UPS founder James E. Casey. The Idaho report was compiled and written by Harriet Shaklee, professor of family and consumer sciences at the University of Idaho; Judith Brown, director of the Idaho Center on Budget and Tax Policy; and Susan Berning and Rebecca Ames of the Portico Group, a Boise-based consulting firm.

Excerpts from the Idaho Kids Count "Small Faces in a Big Recession Report," issued earlier this month:

- In 2008, 13.7 percent of Idaho's children lacked health insurance — the eighth-highest rate in the nation. Children's enrollment in the publicly funded health care in Idaho through CHIP and Medicaid has increased 12.5 percent from December 2007 to August 2009.
- Generations are moving in together in the state, with an increase of 32.1 percent from 2007-08 in grandparents sharing housing with grandchildren. Grandparents raising their grandchildren took an even bigger jump over the same time period, increasing 62 percent in an early sign of the stress Idaho families are under in this economy. Parental substance abuse is the most common reason for grandparents to raise their grandchildren. Other reasons include parents' work needs (e.g. moving to get a job, military deployment) or issues of physical and mental health that compromise their abilities to meet children's needs.

- Despite these hardships, 41 percent of Idahoans interviewed don't know what community organizations could help them if they needed basic necessities, while 49 percent don't know the government assistance programs available such as temporary housing assistance or food stamps. These figures may reflect the "nouveau poor," that is, people who have previously led comfortable lives, yet have had a serious financial setback in the present recession for the first time in their lives. In general Idahoans attribute problems of families struggling economically to circumstances out of their control (65 percent) rather than to people's poor choices (29 percent), and 64 percent say that having affordable health care makes a "big difference" in making ends meet.

- Idaho maintains a statewide referral service called Careline-211, which shows substantial increases in the past year in calls about financial assistance (+59 percent), health insurance for children (CHIP and Medicaid) up 56 percent, and WIC, the nutritional program for pregnant women and young children (+28 percent). # West has one of nation's highest uninsured rates

By David Frey
New West (Missoula, Mont.)

GLENWOOD SPRINGS, Colo. — Richard Angus had been managing just fine without health insurance. A careful skier and cyclist, he figured he could avoid the costs of health insurance, and the risks of going without it. Then last year, he contracted a blood infection that nearly cost him his life.

Instead, it cost him his livelihood. Three weeks in the hospital left him with $90,000 in medical bills he says he'll never be able to pay off. His credit rating trashed, he's seeking bankruptcy protection to stay afloat.

"You're very happy that you get home. You're alive!" says Angus, 48. "Then three months, four months down the road, you have to deal with the bills and the people. You almost wonder why they're keeping me alive when they're just going to make my life hell."

Angus isn't alone. The West has one of the highest rates of uninsured in the country, due largely to the region's dominant industries. Apart from lots of small, independent businesses, much of the West is driven by the service sector, which often doesn't provide health insurance. Neither do many construction contractors, energy industry contractors or agriculture operations.

The West had an uninsured rate of 17.4 percent in 2008, according to a U.S. Census report issued in September, compared to a nationwide rate of 15.5 percent. Only the South had a higher rate. The West was the only region of the country to see a statistical change, up .5 points from 2007.

New Mexico has the country's second-highest uninsured rate, just behind Texas, with 23 percent. That's nearly one in four residents without health insurance. Arizona and Nevada fall in the top 10, too. All eight Intermountain states — Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Nevada and Idaho — rank in the top half of uninsured rates. All the top 25 states are in the South, West, West Coast and Alaska.

"Our rates of uninsurance are currently high and I think it's principally because of the types of businesses we have," says David Adamson, executive director of Mountain Family Health Center, which specializes in serving the uninsured.

Many here worked in the shops, mansions and construction sites of nearby Aspen, or in what was a once-thriving natural gas industry. Those industries often don't provide insurance, Adamson says.

The congressional district that includes Glenwood and Aspen has the highest uninsured rate in the state behind only urban Denver. The vast district includes some of Colorado's wealthiest and poorest counties. Aspen's Pitkin County boasts the state's highest per capita income. Saguache County has the second lowest.

"We have a high proportion of sole proprietors and small businesses," says Colorado state demographer Elizabeth Garner. "Small businesses tend to have more of a challenge providing health care coverage, especially with the increased cost of health care coverage. Too, health care coverage tends to follow income. The lower income you are, the more likely you are working in retail, which is less likely to be providing health insurance."

Angus was working at a trendy Aspen eatery, but it wouldn't provide health insurance until he had worked there for a year. He also worked as a caretaker for a multi-million-dollar Aspen home, but that job didn't provide insurance either. He had private insurance until about four years ago, he says, when his monthly bills neared $500.

After his blood infection, Angus says, he earned too much to qualify for indigent care but not enough to pay his massive hospital bills.

month for the rest of my life," he says. "There's just no way."

Demographics also add to the West's rate of uninsured. Hispanics have the highest uninsured rate, at 32.1 percent, or nearly one in every three. American Indians have an uninsured rate of 31.7 percent. Non-Hispanic whites, by comparison, have the lowest rate, at 10.4 percent.

Rates are even higher among immigrants, who are about 2.5 times less likely to have health insurance than the native-born population. Non-citizens have an uninsured rate of 44.7 percent. That's about 9.5 million immigrants without insurance.

For Angus, the financial burden he's been left with has become overwhelming. "Sometimes you think it's not worth being alive anymore," he says. "It's never-ending."

Where married women feel like collateral damage

In our security-obsessed, post-Sept. 11 world, married women are highly suspicious, especially if they are elderly. They have been doubted, rejected and brought to tears at an alarming rate in the Washington region's motor vehicle departments.

Petula Dvorak

After I recounted the harrowing tale of Jean Earley — 90-year-old pastel artist, minister's wife and Virginia newcomer — and her attempts to get a state identification card, scores of others wrote to me to recount their own bureaucratic horror shows that left them red-faced. It took Earley four visits to the Fairfax/Westfields DMV office to get an ID card. All because her birth certificate didn't have her current name on it and that, according to new state and federal laws, means it doesn't prove that she is a U.S. citizen. For women in particular, the passage of the Real ID law, which created standardized, federal identification standards in response to the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks, has made the process of documenting who they are far more complicated, frustrating and unreasonable. "Kafkaesque," one reader called it. "The only public office I've ever ran out of in tears," another said. Many who wrote to me said women seem to be unfairly affected by the new scrutiny. They have to dig up marriage licenses, divorce decrees and all kinds of legal documents to prove their identity. Many were forced to start from birth — literally, with their birth certificates — and reapply for Social Security cards, passports and so forth, until they satisfied the local DMV. "I choked on my coffee this morning when I read your story about Mrs. Earley," wrote Angela de Rocha. "A similar Kafkaesque nightmare descended on me at the Virginia DMV in Arlington in 2006. Mrs. Earley is not alone, and after much discussion and pondering, I have decided the problem is that our laws and the DMV are not written and set up for the vast majority of women who change their names when they marry," de Rocha said. She had to go back and forth for hours between the DMV, the Social Security office and her home, getting new documents and reestablishing, again and again, that she was a federal employee with a passport, married and a U.S. citizen. That hoop-jumping "remains to this day my worst experience with bureaucracy, including bureaucracies in foreign countries," de Rocha said. Claire Tieder was told she had to bring in a divorce decree in order to be licensed to drive a car in Virginia. Then she was turned away and told to return with the marriage certificate. She returned, waited in line yet again, and was told her marriage certificate wasn't valid because it was issued by the Catholic Church. "That's when I went ballistic and was ready to jump over the counter and throttle the woman," the 55 year old wrote. Or take the case of Carol Parsons' 89-year-old mother, who moved to Virginia from Florida three years ago and had a valid Florida drivers license when she came.

"She needed to show the progression of her name change, from her birth certificate to her first husband, then the divorce papers, and only then the marriage certificate to her second husband," Parsons said, of the process to get a Virginia license. "Ever since then, I've been counseling girls: never change your name ... ever!" she wrote. "I'm so glad that when I married my second husband I kept the last name of my first husband — this way I only have to provide my marriage certificate (if I can ever find it)." So that's what women get for having the nerve to follow tradition and change their names when marrying. On to some of the older folks who dare venture into the world of documented driving. Their records are not always precise. Often, they are written in big, loopy lettering that is fading. Their records might have birth dates wrong, a misspelling or, in the case of Jean Werner Kirk, "there wasn't room to spell out her full name" when she got a drivers license in 1966. So when she tried to renew this year, bureaucratic alarm bells went off because her full name wasn't on the original document. This time, it was in Maryland, but the routine was the same. The Kirks pinballed among government offices for weeks, piecing together a paper trail to explain what a clerk had done 40 years ago.

Has any of this made us safer? I doubt the most notorious terrorists of our time — the Sept. 11 hijackers, Timothy McVeigh — would have been stopped by these new DMV requirements. All these laws have done is make us more harried, more paranoid and more red-faced than ever.

How the abortion restrictions in House bill would work

By Alec MacGillis
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — After the House passed its health care bill last weekend, debate exploded over an amendment by Rep. Bart Stupak, D-Mich., and Rep. Joe Pitts, R-Pa., that restricts abortion coverage.

Confusion was rampant all week, but on this both sides agree: the debate reflects the conflict between the rule banning federal funding for abortions, and the expansion of the government's role in health care. Universal health care is a Democratic and liberal goal, but as long as the ban stands, increasing government support for those who lack insurance likely means more restricted coverage for abortions.

Richard Doerflinger, spokesman for the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops, has been trying to explain this irony to religious conservatives who worry “that when the federal government takes over health care, it'll be pro-death.” In fact, he said, “When you expand the reach of federal funds, you expand the reach of federal policies” on abortion.

Here are answers to some questions about the amendment.

1. What is the status quo?

Under the 33-year-old federal ban, there is no abortion coverage under Medicaid, the federal employee health benefits plan or the TRICARE plan for military families. Seventeen states use their own funds to provide abortion coverage for Medicaid recipients. A study co-authored by the Guttmacher Institute, which backs abortion rights, found that women on Medicaid were 25 percent more likely to carry an unwanted pregnancy to term if they did not have abortion coverage.

Abortion coverage is widespread among private insurance plans — at least half of people with private coverage have abortion coverage, according to surveys by Guttmacher and the Kaiser Family Foundation. Guttmacher found that only 13 percent of abortions are billed directly to a private insurer, though many women bill their insurers separately. An abortion at 10 weeks costs $400, though it can be far more costly later on.

2. What does Stupak-Pitts say?

Under the House bill, people without employer-provided coverage and small businesses would choose among private insurance plans and a government insurance plan, or “public option,” offered on a new marketplace, or “exchange.” As initially written, these plans would pay for abortions out of people's premiums, and not with any subsidies that will be extended to families who earn up to $88,000 annually.

Abortion rights opponents derided this as an accounting gimmick, and turned to Stupak-Pitts. It decrees that abortion may not be covered in the public option or in any of the exchange's private plans that take the subsidized customers. There is an exception if a woman's life is in danger or in cases of rape or incest.

Private plans could offer abortion coverage to those without subsidies, but that will be a small subset of the 30 million people expected in the exchange. Women could also buy a “rider” for abortion coverage, as is now done in a few states where employer-based plans are not allowed to cover abortion. Abortion rights supporters say relying on such riders is unrealistic and offensive, given that few women expect to have an abortion.

Stupak

3. What does it mean for women?

For women who do not have health insurance, gaining subsidized coverage will mean they will be much better off overall, while still lacking abortion coverage. But there are many women who now have coverage on the individual market that is overpriced and low-quality but does cover abortion. Their subsidized coverage under the legislation will be superior in general, but they will lose their abortion coverage, unless they buy a rider. Abortion opponents note this outcome is no different than when Democrats now push to expand Medicaid in the 33 states without abortion coverage.

The impact is less clear for women buying coverage on the exchange without subsidies. This will include higher-income women and those working for small businesses, who likely will not qualify for subsidies since their employers will be helping pay. For these women, the availability of a plan covering abortion will depend on whether insurers decide to offer a plan that is open to only some people and differs from other plans only in covering abortion — not the easiest distinction to market.

Such a plan could also upset the balance envisioned for the exchange, with costs shared across plans — the plan would draw members unlike any other, wealthier and with more more women in child-bearing age.

4. Are there broader implications?

Abortion-rights advocates worry abortion foes will apply the amendment to other federal funds in the bill, such as tax credits for small businesses or subsidies for companies with early-retiree plans. But the amendment's supporters say this is not their intent. Abortion rights advocates also worry that as insurers introduce plans on the exchange without abortion coverage, they will for convenience's sake drop it from their employer-provided plans. Abortion opponents counter that insurers customize many of their plans today.

Most notably, larger businesses will eventually be able to join the exchange, and more people may come to the exchange on their own if their employers drop coverage outright. As the exchange grows in size, the abortion restrictions will apply to more people — though the market for plans limited to the non-subsidized customers will also grow.

5. Will the amendment stick?

Many Senate Democrats hope to pass language closer to the original House language, paying for abortions out of premium funds. Separating private and public funds in the exchange's plans, abortion rights supporters say, is no less an accounting scheme than the Catholic Church's segregation of federal funds it gets for school costs from its religious operations, a comparison abortion foes reject. Forty House Democrats now say they will reject a final bill with the amendment.

But at least one Senate Democrat, Nebraska's Bill Nelson, wants the amendment.

Ohio: Single lethal injection drug should end lawsuits

By Andrew Welsh-Huggins
Associated Press writer

COLUMBUS, Ohio — The state's decision to replace a three-drug lethal injection with a powerful dose of one anesthetic is raising the possibility of what may have seemed unthinkable not so long ago: a truce in the long-running legal challenges to death penalty injection across the country.

Ohio Attorney General Richard Cordray put it bluntly: A one-drug method would “render moot” his state's current injection lawsuit, which raises some issues found in other states regarding the potential for pain and suffering.

The state on Friday announced its plans to put a one-drug method in place by Nov. 30, in time to carry out an execution on Dec. 8. Inmate Kenneth Biros' execution has been on hold since a botched execution of another inmate on Sept. 15 temporarily stopped capital punishment in Ohio.

At issue are the other two drugs used in Ohio and 35 other states — one drug that paralyzes inmates and another that stops their hearts. Inmates have long argued that the combination of the other two drugs could cause pain that would not be detected.

Ohio, injection experts and defense attorneys challenging injection say a single dose of an anesthetic, similar to how veterinarians put down pets, would eliminate the potential for pain.

Opponents of the three-drug system aren't ready to concede the end of lawsuits anytime soon. But they're applauding Ohio for taking a step that other states have considered but not undertaken.

“If tomorrow every death penalty state got rid of the second two drugs in their protocols, certainly the Eighth Amendment concerns would be significantly alleviated,” said Ty Alper, associate director of the Death Penalty Clinic at the Berkeley School of Law.

A NATION MOURNS

Christopher Johnson, 3, sits in downtown Plymouth, Ind., waiting for the funeral procession Saturday of Staff Sgt. Justin DeCrow. DeCrow was killed during the Nov. 5 shooting at Fort Hood.

Mourners pay tribute to soldiers killed at Fort Hood

By Ryan J. Foley
Associated Press writer

KIEL, Wis. — Hundreds of people lining the main street of an Indiana town on Saturday fell solemnly silent as the white hearse passed. Mourners waited for hours outside a Wisconsin gymnasium to say goodbye to a soldier who once promised to take down Osama bin Laden.

And in Oklahoma, a newlywed grieved for her husband of nearly three months.

Several victims of the Nov. 5 shooting massacre at Fort Hood, Texas, were laid to rest Saturday across the country, after family members, friends, fellow soldiers and strangers passed their flag-draped coffins and paid their respects.

In Plymouth, Ind., Sheila Ellabarger had placed two foot-high American flags in the grass where she watched the procession for U.S. Army Staff Sgt. Justin DeCrow. She said her children went to school with DeCrow and his wife — his high school sweetheart — and she knew others in his family.

“He was killed by a terrorist in my mind but he was still killed in the line of duty. We owe him a debt of gratitude, him and his family and the other soldiers. We owe them our lives, our freedom,” Ellabarger said.

During services in Norman, Okla., images of Army Spc. Jason Dean Hunt and his beaming wife were shown on a screen. The recently married 22-year-old was described as a loving husband and family man as well as a soldier who left a legacy of selflessness and service.

“We may never find out the reason for what occurred on that fateful day at Fort Hood, Texas,” said Brig. Gen.

A U.S. Army honor guard carries the casket of Pfc. Aaron Nemelka during a funeral Saturday at Camp Williams in Riverton, Utah. Nemelka was one of 13 gunned down at Fort Hood, Texas.

Ross Ridge of Fort Sill, Okla. “The military community are all grieving here today over the loss of this dedicated soldier.”

Hunt was among the 13 people who were killed at Fort Hood, where authorities allege Army psychiatrist Maj. Nidal Malik Hasan opened fire at the processing center. Hasan, 39, has been charged with 13 counts of premeditated murder in a military court.

Army investigators have said he is the only suspect in the case and could face additional charges. His attorney has said prosecutors have not yet told him whether they plan to seek the death penalty.

On the Texas post that the fallen soldiers once called home, officials continued with their plans for deployment.

The processing center, where troops who are about to be deployed or who are returning undergo medical screening, has been up and running. Also the units that had soldiers who were either killed or wounded in the shooting are still set to go to Afghanistan in the coming months.

At the high school in Kiel, Wis., people stood in line to get a final glimpse of Staff Sgt. Amy Krueger. She was what’s called “Army Proud.” She was often seen in an Army hat or shirt and sported a tattoo that had a tattered American flag and read: “All gave some. Some gave all. Sacrifice.”

Those words were painted on signs along the hallways that led to her former school’s gymnasium, which was filled with people who remembered the 29-year-old as a determined, energetic young woman with a magnetic smile.

“It is that smile and that energy that keeps us going throughout this difficult time,” her parents, Jeri

Krueger and David Diem, said in a statement.

Their daughter joined the U.S. Army Reserves after the 2001 terrorist attacks and vowed to hunt down bin Laden. When her mother said she couldn’t do it alone, the soldier told her: “Watch me.”

In West Jordan, Utah, among those crowded into a Mormon chapel were Utah Gov. Gary Herbert, U.S. Rep. Jason Chaffetz, R-Utah, and U.S. Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, said Lt. Col. Lisa Olsen, Utah National Guard spokesman.

They joined the family and friends of Pfc. Aaron Thomas Nemelka for the funeral honoring the 19-year-old.

Nemelka joined the Army just over a year ago and was to deploy Afghanistan in the coming months. Relatives say he was planning to ask his girlfriend to marry him in December.

“We may never find out the reason for what occurred on that fateful day at Fort Hood.”

Veteran climber Humar dies in Himalayas

LJUBLJANA, Slovenia (AP) — Veteran Slovenian climber Tomaz Humar was found dead in the Himalayas on Saturday, days after he was injured and stranded on a 23,710-foot mountain, a mountain rescue company and a close friend said.

Humar, 40, who was married with two children, ascended hundreds of difficult alpine routes around the world, including some of the hardest climbs in the Himalayas.

Viki Groselj, a fellow Slovenian mountaineer and a good friend, described Humar as a “mountaineering genius whose accomplishments have been admired by the whole world.”

“Above all, he was a supreme climber who moved the boundaries of possible,” Groselj said. “He had an amazing gift and amazing strength.”

Slovenian journalist Matija Grah, who has covered Humar’s career, said he “climbed the peaks others had avoided.”

In 1999, Humar became the first climber ever to go solo up the southern face of the French peak Daulaghiri.

Humar

He also tackled the 22,402-foot Ama Dablam in 1996, for which he was awarded a French mountaineering award.

Journalist Silvo Tersek said Humar believed in a “metaphysical contact” with the mountains that was far greater than the fear of the dangers he faced.

Mountain climbing is popular in Slovenia, an Alpine nation, and Humar’s climbs were closely watched by his fellow-Slovenes. His death left the country deeply saddened, and Prime Minister Borut Pahor sent a note of condolence to Humar’s family on Saturday.

Gerold Biner, flight operations manager for the Swiss Air Zermatt company, said earlier that Humar’s body was recovered early Saturday by a three-man rescue team.

“They called me ... to tell me the rescue mission was over,” Biner said.

Humar last contacted his base on Monday to say he had been injured while climbing Langtang Lirung. Groselj said Humar had broken his leg and become stranded.

Obama pushing arms-control deal with Russia during Asia visit

By Jennifer Loven
Associated Press writer

SINGAPORE (AP) — A major pact within tantalizing reach, President Obama aims to nudge forward an arms-control deal in talks with Russian President Dmitry Medvedev.

The 21-nation Asia-Pacific Economic Cooperation forum brought Obama to Singapore, but he is focusing on individual meetings today with Medvedev and with Indonesia's Susilo Bambang Yudhoyono, president of the world's largest Muslim nation and Obama's home as a boy. The U.S.-Russia meeting takes place as the nations seek a successor to a Cold War-era agreement.

Obama planned another milestone: joining a larger meeting that includes the leader of military-ruled Myanmar. Obama is sure to face criticism at home, particularly from conservatives, for doing so — a significant step up in his administration's new policy of "pragmatic engagement" that is a shift from years of U.S. isolation and sanctions.

The leaders at the APEC forum also planned an informal breakfast meeting, organized by Australian Prime Minister Kevin Rudd and Mexican President Felipe Calderon, to discuss the progress of negotiations on a climate change agreement. The prime minister of Denmark, Lars Loekke Rasmussen, the chairman of next month's U.N. climate conference in Copenhagen, was expected to attend.

Obama and Medvedev agreed in April to reach a new nuclear arms reduction treaty to replace Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty 1 before it expires on Dec. 5. Later, in Moscow in July, President Obama delivers a speech on Asian policy Saturday in Tokyo. Obama said that he welcomes a robust China on the world scene, but he cautioned that all nations must respect human rights, including religious freedom.

they agreed further to cut the number of nuclear warheads each nation possesses to between 1,500 and 1,675 within seven years.

U.S. officials say that the two nations now have agreed on the broad outlines of a new treaty, with the expectation that the leaders will sign one during Obama's travels to Europe in early December to accept the Nobel Peace Prize.

Such an agreement would be a big feather in Obama's cap and bragging rights toward his promise to work toward a nuclear-free world, offering momentum for other arms-control and nonproliferation efforts. The president has been hinting at his optimism on the issue leading up to and during his Asia trip.

"We are already taking steps to bring down our nuclear stockpiles in cooperation with the Russian government," he said during a news conference in Japan with Prime Minister Yukio Hatoyama.

A new treaty also could boost relations with Russia at a time that Washington is looking for its cooperation on issues including reining in Iran's nuclear ambitions.

Negotiators already have worked through a number of contentious issues and agreed on the number of warheads, the number of delivery systems and what will count as a delivery system, officials said.

The remaining issues in negotiations involve procedures for the two countries to verify that the other side is meeting the terms of the treaty, two administration officials said speaking on condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of the negotiations.

"I don't foresee a major problem that can't be resolved within the next four weeks," said Daryl Kimball, executive director of the Arms Control Association, which follows the negotiations. "Neither side wants to go without a new agreement for very long."

Ben Rhodes, deputy national security adviser to Obama, suggested it wasn't likely the leaders would announce a breakthrough but that holding talks at such a high level while they are going on could help bring one about.

The existing START treaty, signed by Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev and President George H.W. Bush in 1991, led each country to cut its nuclear warheads by at least one-quarter, to about 6,000.

In 2002, Presidents Vladimir Putin and George W. Bush signed the Treaty of Moscow, which specified further cuts to between 1,700 and 2,200 operationally deployed warheads by 2012.

The U.S. now has about 2,200 such warheads deployed, compared to about 2,800 for the Russians.

9 killed, 80 injured in train derailment

JAIPUR, India (AP) — A speeding train derailed in western India, killing at least nine people and injuring more than 80.

Fifteen cars of the New Delhi-bound train flew off the tracks Saturday and rolled onto their sides when the driver suddenly applied the brakes because of poor visibility in the region, said Vipin Kumar Pande, superintendent of police.

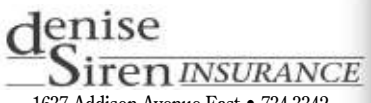

A broken rail track punctured one car and killed some of the passengers, Pande told The Associated Press. Rescuers used machinery to cut open some of the cars to free passengers, he said.

Nineteen people were hospitalized with injuries, three of them in serious condition, Pande said, and more than 60 people with minor injuries had left for their homes after treatment.

Suicide attack kills 11 at NW Pakistan checkpoint

By Riaz Khan
Associated Press writer

PESHAWAR, Pakistan — A suicide car bomber attacked a police checkpoint in northwest Pakistan on Saturday, killing 11 people, including four children, the latest in a wave of militant attacks that have claimed more than 300 lives in the past month.

The attack on the outskirts of Peshawar solidifies the city's ominous status as a primary target for militants trying to force the military to end an offensive against their associates launched last month in the border region of South Waziristan, where al-Qaida and Taliban leaders are believed to be hiding.

Strikes in the past week alone have killed more than 50 people in the city, including 10 at the regional office of Pakistan's top intelligence agency, which was targeted by a massive truck bombing Friday. The agency, the Inter Services Intelligence, has been overseeing much of the country's anti-terror campaign.

On Saturday, a Taliban commander claimed responsibility for that attack and another targeting a police station the same day in neighboring Bannu district. He vowed the violence would continue.

"The suicide bombers were trained by me and I have a lot more volunteers to carry out more attacks," Qari Hussain Mehsud told an Associated Press reporter by telephone. The reporter had met the commander in the past and recognized his voice.

Security was tightened in and around Peshawar after those attacks. Police were manning checkpoints at all entry points to the city and were checking every vehicle, said a local government official, Sahibzada Mohammad Anis. It was one such checkpoint that was struck Saturday.

"Suddenly, a car exploded with a big bang," said police official Malik Jehangir, who was working at the checkpoint. "There was a long queue of vehicles. One of our officials wanted to search the car when it exploded."

Liaquat Ali Khan, the city's police chief, said 11 people were killed, including two police officials. Four children and a woman were among the dead, while another 25 people were wounded, he said.

Taliban and al-Qaida fighters are waging a war against the Pakistani government because they deem it un-Islamic and are angry about its alliance with the United States.

Baby trade in China concerns adoptive parents

Couple, in search for answers, plan visit to country

By Martha Groves
Los Angeles Times

When television producer Sibyl Gardner adopted a baby girl in China in 2003, the official story was that the infant had been abandoned on the steps of the salt works in the city of Guangchang, where a worker found the day-old child and took her to a social welfare institution.

But after reading with “utter horror” the latest revelations of child trafficking in China in the Los Angeles Times, Gardner found herself contemplating a trip back to Jiangxi province to investigate how Zoe, now 7, came to be available for adoption.

“I don’t think I could live with myself for the rest of my life thinking that my desire to have a child could have caused tragedy in someone else’s family,” Gardner said. “I’m going to need answers, and for my daughter’s sake as well.”

China has long been the most popular source for U.S. parents seeking to adopt from overseas. Since the early 1990s, more than 80,000 Chinese children have been adopted by parents from other countries, the United States leading the way.

In the past five years alone, U.S. parents have adopted nearly 31,000 children from China. The conventional wisdom has been that the children were abandoned because of China’s restrictions on family size and the nation’s traditional preference for boys, who serve as a form of physical support and social security for parents.

Los Angeles residents John and Ellen Lawler plan to return to Jiangsu province in search of the family of their daughter, Jemma, 4. They are trying to adopt another child, this time from Ethiopia, and have pressed officials on the question of trafficking.

But adoptive parents have been unsettled by reports that many children have been seized through coercion, fraud or kidnapping, sometimes by government officials seeking to remove children from families that have exceeded population-planning limits or to reap a portion of the $3,000 that parents pay orphanages to adopt.

Some adoptive parents “looked the other way” when they heard reports about child trafficking in Hunan province years ago, said Jane Liedtke, founder of Our Chinese Daughters Foundation, a nonprofit organization that offers programs and tours for families with children from China. Now that trafficking cases have been documented not just in Hunan but also in Guizhou, Guangxi and other provinces, she added, “People say, ‘Oh, I didn’t know. My agency didn’t tell me. If I’d known, I wouldn’t have adopted.’”

To that, Liedtke responds: “Oh, yes, you would have. You wanted a child.”

Mark Brown said he and his wife, Nicki Genovese, felt sickened by the thought that their daughter might not have been found at the gates of a park and taken by police to an orphanage, as they had been told.

They had just returned to Los Angeles in 2005 after adopting a Chinese foundling in south-central Hunan province when they read the news reports about trafficking. Police had arrested 27 members of a ring that since 2002 had abducted or bought as many as 1,000 children in Guangdong province and sold them to orphanages in Hunan.

“It put everything into question,” said Brown, whose family has since moved to New York. “Was she really found? Was she abducted or taken by family services? If she had been taken away from her parents, it is heart wrenching.”

“On one hand, it’s horrifying and your stomach is churning. On the other hand, it brings to light something you’re trying to block out — that business there and life there is pretty wild.”

China for many years was considered to have one of the world’s most dependable intercountry adoption programs.

“When I chose China, it seemed to be a very clean, very legal process, and that was a good deal of what appealed to me,” said Peggy Scott, who adopted 16 years ago and is president of Families With Children From China-Northern California, a support group.

Some families on adoption-related e-mail groups have expressed fears that reports of child trafficking will taint all China adoptions, even though agencies and adoption experts say most of the adoptions in China are regulated and legitimate.

“We shouldn’t draw overly broad conclusions from any specific examples,” said Adam Pertman, executive director of the Evan B. Donaldson Adoption Institute, a nonprofit group that works to improve adoption policies and practices. Still, he said, “one kid, one birth mother where it’s done badly, unethically or for the wrong reasons is one too many.”

A U.S. congressional commission that monitors human rights in China said in a 2005 report that “trafficking of women and children in China remains pervasive,” with many infants and young children abducted for adoption and household services.

According to an estimate cited in the report, 250,000 women and children were sold in China during 2003.

China has cracked down on many family planning officials and orphanage workers found guilty of trafficking, with some violators sentenced to death or long prison terms, according to Chinese news agencies.

Opposition: Iran’s rulers rank more brutal than shah

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iran’s embattled opposition leaders accused the government of becoming more brutal than the shah’s regime in Web statements Saturday, and authorities announced a new Internet crackdown aimed at choking off the reform movement’s last real means of keeping its campaign alive.

Two of Iran’s top pro-reform figures said police used excessive force against anti-government protesters who took to the streets last week on the sidelines of state-sanctioned rallies to mark the 30th anniversary of the U.S. Embassy takeover.

Mir Hossein Mousavi and Mahdi Karroubi, who lead the protest movement rejecting the legitimacy of President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad’s June reelection, said authorities wielding batons even struck women on their heads. They called such treatment an ugly act that was not even seen during Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi’s response to the 1979 Islamic revolution that toppled him.

“I can’t understand why they should treat people like this,” Karroubi was quoted as saying by several opposition Web sites. “... I struggled against the Pahlavi regime for 15 years ... but there were no such crackdowns.”

Such Web statements have been the mainstay of an opposition movement struggling to stay alive despite being brutally swept off the streets in the weeks after the June 12 election. Mousavi and his supporters contend that he was the rightful winner of the vote, but that Ahmadinejad was fraudulently declared the winner.

In a clear effort to silence the opposition’s Internet outlet, Iranian authorities announced they were deploying a special police unit to sweep Web sites for political material and prosecute those deemed to be spreading lies, Iranian media reported Saturday.

Most opposition Web sites are already banned, but activists have continued to set up new sites within days of the old ones being blocked.

The new 12-member police unit will report to the prosecutor’s office. Police Col. Mehrdad Omid, who heads the unit, said it will go after “insults and the spreading of lies,” terms widely used by the judiciary to describe opposition activities.

“Authorities know that the Internet is one of the few available channels for the opposition to make its voice heard. They want to silence opposition voices,” said reform-minded journalist Akbar Montajabi, who described the measure as the latest set of restrictions imposed on media in the country.

From the minute the gym went black and the smoke machine fired up for the opening introductions, it was clear this was going to be a dandy.

The College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team stayed unbeaten with a 99-92 victory over Seward County (Kan.) Community College to cap the Gordon Paving-Mountain West Components Invitational.

In a game that carried a playoff feel throughout, CSI (5-0) got a key nonconference win.

"It was a great basketball game," said CSI head coach Steve Gosar. "I thought both teams played very hard."

The physical contest featured 89 free throws and three Saints players fouled out, including star point

No. 1 Central

Coming in 2-2, defending NJCAA champion and pre-season No. 1 Central Arizona seemed beatable.

The Vaqueros looked anything but on Saturday, routing the No. 8 College of Southern Idaho women's basketball team 91-77 in the final game of the Coca-Cola Invitational.

Controlling the game from start to finish, Central Arizona held CSI to 36 percent shooting and forced the Golden Eagles into 23 turnovers.

But CSI coaches and players felt their biggest shortcoming came on defense as Central Arizona repeatedly found open layups.

"When you give up that many easy buckets - we gave up so many layups because we weren't there on the rotation, and that's on me as the coach. We're not rotating where we need to rotate when we get beat," said CSI head coach Randy Rogers.

Moore, Pettis, No. 6
Broncos crush Idaho

By Gregg Bell
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Coach Chris Petersen claims to not pay any heed to the BCS popularity contest. That would be the one that excluded his rampaging Boise State Broncos last year following a perfect regular season, and threatens to do so again this season.

Yet there was Petersen this week hanging a quote in the locker room from Robb Akey. The energetic coach of resurgent Idaho said he wanted to "take care of business," ruin his rival's BCS push and make the entire WAC mad at him for costing the conference the big bucks of having a team in the series.

And this was Petersen on Saturday, after Kellen Moore threw four touchdown passes to Austin Pettis and tied a career high with five overall while the supposedly endangered, No. 6 Broncos overwhelmed the shellshocked Vandals 63-25:

"I think we'll probably drop about three or four notches."

Petersen then flashed a wry grin and tapped his feet, as if pleased with his jab at the pollsters who help decide the BCS.

They want style points, so they should be pleased, too. Boise State sure looked beautiful in — and on — blue.

Titus Young had a 100-yard kickoff return that was actually longer and possession

When young boys are first separated on the football field into position groups and a select few are told they will be wideouts, the first thing they are told is to catch the ball with their hands.

Austin Pettis must have been listening.

The junior receiver caught eight passes for 123 yards and four touchdowns, giving him 14 TDs and 58 receptions on the season.

"It was fun and exciting," Pettis said. "It's nice to go out there and make so many big plays for this team, especially in such a big game. We wanted to come out and make a big statement with this game."

Idaho heard that statement loud and clear in the 63-25 rout. Pettis' 14-touchdown total breaks the BSU single-season touchdown receiving record, a mark set twice (by Don Hutt in 1973 and Mike Holton in '74). He caught every pass thrown his way Saturday.

Declo tops New Plymouth, sets up title rematch

Declo's McCoy Stoker tip-toes the sideline after intercepting a pass against New Plymouth on Saturday.

Times-News writer

NEW PLYMOUTH — Hitch up the horses and ride 'em to state.

The Declo Hornets are returning to the Class 2A state football championship game after Saturday's 22-6 semifinal victory over New Plymouth.

In a repeat of last year's championship, Declo (11-0) will face Parma (10-0) for the title next week. Kickoff is 5 p.m., Friday at Holt Arena in Pocatello.

"New Plymouth is a very good, physical football team," said Declo coach Kelly Kidd. "We got challenged early, so we went right to our horses — our offensive line and those two big kids in the backfield — and we took control of the game."

Those two big kids in the backfield, Larsen Webb and Tyler Briggs, combined for 163 yards on 32 carries as the Hornets' punishing running game wore down the Pilgrims.

"The linemen always play aggressively and we wanted to win it," said lineman Sage Warner, who along with Drew Matsen, Cody Pickup, Brandon Hurst and Juan Quantanilla opened up holes all day. "When we make a mistake, (the running backs) fix it for us because they run hard every time and never let us down."

Declo forced the Pilgrims into six turnovers. Coby Stebbins and Webb each recovered a fumble, Brandon Peterson intercepted two Brady Harris passes, and McCoy Stoker and Jeremy Jenkins had a pick apiece.

"We're looking forward to going back, playing hard and doing what we wanted to do last year and finish it," Peterson said of Declo's title hopes.

Declo jumped on top early after Stebbins recovered New Plymouth's fumble on the opening kickoff. A 21-yard pass from Jenkins to Peterson set up Mark Knobbe's 1-yard score. Jenkins finished an efficient 5 of 7 passing for 75 yards.

Oakley handles Castleford for third straight title berth

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

CASTLEFORD — It was a grind, but Oakley has returned to the promised land.

Junior Tellez scored two touchdowns and the Hornets imposed their will at the critical second-half juncture to earn a 38-20 win over Castleford on Saturday to advance to next week's Class 1A Division I state championship game.

Oakley (11-0) earned its third straight trip to the title game by exhibiting the characteristics that got it to the first two.

After recovering its own kickoff to open the second half and punching the ensuing possession into the end zone, Castleford (9-2) was flirting with an upset down just 16-12. But the Hornets scored 22 unanswered points, sparked by sophomore quarterback Stephan Ortiz's 54-yard scamper less than a minute after Castleford's score.

On their next possession, Tellez raced in from 24 yards out for his second score of the game, to give the Hornets the breathing room they so craved.

"I just wait for the blockers to make a hole and I keep going forward," said Tellez. "They made some great blocks today, for me and the other backs."

The Wolves had just seven players on the field for Ortiz's score, quarterback Nick Howard said. It was the heaviest punishment for the biggest in a litany of mistakes that plagued Castleford, the overwhelming majority of which came on special teams.

was part of a mishap on our part," said Howard, who ran for two touchdowns and threw for a third. "We thought we had a team that could play with Oakley, and we did for 2 1/2 quarters, but we just had too many mistakes."

The fourth quarter seemed academic, but Howard hit Tyler Hansen on a touchdown and then the 2-point conversion to make it 38-20. Castleford then forced Oakley's third turnover of the day but couldn't cash in to put pressure on the three-time reigning Snake River Conference champs.

Their postgame reaction demonstrated the Wolves' sense of perspective, however, as they received the third-place trophy with pride.

"Nine wins is more than we had in the last two years total, so we're really proud of that," Howard said. "We're really proud that we got as far as we did. Oakley deserves to be where they're at."

Oakley will face undefeated Prairie at 1 p.m., Saturday at Holt Arena in Pocatello for the championship.

Last year the Pirates upset Oakley in the Kibbie Dome, something the Hornets haven't forgotten.

"We just need to remember not to be complacent and keep working hard," said senior lineman Jake Sagers. "We're really just hoping to take care of business next week."

only score came in the second quarter, when Harris placed a perfectly-thrown ball into the hands of Justin Johnson for a 34-yard touchdown.

Declo answered right back on its next possession, however, as Webb broke four tackles on his way to a 34-yard touchdown run, capping an eight-play, 82-yard drive.

Webb scored his second touchdown, a 3-yard dive, on Declo's first drive of the second half. The Hornets' pounded out 63 yards in 13 plays and took 6:20 off the clock.

While Declo didn't capitalize on all of New Plymouth's turnovers by putting points on the board, the Hornets did take advantage by managing the game through field position and

Knobbe and Jared Patterson, who sustained injuries during last week's quarterfinal win over Malad, played through pain Saturday. Patterson said no injury would keep him from this game.

"Not in my life," he said.

"It's a once in a lifetime chance. It means everything to us."

Now the Hornets will prepare for undefeated and defending state champion Parma, which is riding a 21-game winning streak. The Panthers beat Declo 29-28 in overtime to claim the 2008 title at Bronco Stadium.

"We wanted them to get back there so that it's a rematch," Patterson said. "Everybody has been hoping for us to get back together. We're (ranked) one and two, so it will be a heck of a game."

Drivers honored at MVS banquet

By Linda Brittsan
Times-News correspondent

Magic Valley Speedway's 24th annual champions banquet was held Saturday night at Canyon Crest Event Center, honoring the top finishers along with recognizing others for their accomplishments in the 2009 season.

Kristopher McKean was honored for capturing two championships, the Pepsi Late Models and Budweiser Super Stocks Series.

In his pursuit of the track title McKean was victorious in just one race in the Late Models Series, but cashed in with consistency to earn five top-five finishes. Racing in the Super Stocks Series he rounded up four wins and turned in four top-five finishes. McKean collected more than $8,000 in total winnings in the Late Models Series alone this season.

Rick Fowble won his first championship in the Mountain Dew Modifieds Series and Ray Homolka also came through with his first title driving in the NAPA Pony Stocks Division. In the Magic Valley Pipe Thunder Stocks Division, John Newell captured the series' championship as well as Rookie of the Year honors.

Bob Gilligan collected his second consecutive championship in a hotly contested run for the title as the season wound down for the Quale's Electronics Hornets. Andy Brennan and Taylor Patrick became first-time titleholders in the Jr. Stingers division, while Jeff Pohlman gathered up his first championship with the Intermountain Pro Trucks Series over runner-up in the series Johnny Pierre.

Also acknowledged during the evening were Late Models driver Dan Lowther, Super Stocks driver Allen Williams and Pony Stocks driver Wade Henslee. Each was a recipient of the Jetko award, given to the third-place finishers in their respective series.

MVS fans Shawn and Mia Cofer were the lucky winners of a mattress set courtesy of Sleep Solutions and another set was given away to a driver by a random drawing.

Track owner and promoter Eddy McKean expressed his thanks to the drivers, crew members, sponsors and fans and looks forward to another exciting season at Magic Valley Speedway for 2010.

Bruin girls start off season with win

By Diane Philbin
Times-News writer

It was a typical season opener — not pretty and at times just plain sloppy and ugly. But the Twin Falls girls basketball team was able to over come some early poor play and behind 17 points from senior Taylor Williams, the Bruins pulled out a 53-49 win over the Century Diamondbacks Saturday night at Baun Gymnasium.

"We were ready to play but we were a little shaky at first," said Williams. "The crowd really helped because they were so supportive."

The Bruins trailed for most of the game and it wasn't until 6:27 remained in the fourth quarter that Twin Falls finally caught the Diamondbacks and tied the score at 43-43 on a basket by Jazlyn Nielsen. With 3:26 remaining, the Bruins grabbed the lead at 47-46 on a score by Erin Grubbs-Imhoff.

Century went ahead 48-46 but baskets by Williams and Josie Jordan and a pair of free throws by Grubbs-Imhoff cinched the victory for the Bruins.

"We needed to put some pressure on them in the second half but the girls didn't have much confidence in a full court press so we stepped up our man pressure," said Twin Falls coach Nancy Jones. "Early on we just dribbled the ball too much. (Williams) hit some huge shots that kind of calmed us down and helped us get our momentum back."

Twin Falls (1-0) hosts Buhl on Wednesday.

Burley impresses in win over Skyline

Times-News

Teresa Wayment scored 19 points and Cheri Preston had 13 as the Burley girls basketball team improved to 2-0 on the season with a 50-32 win over Skyline Saturday afternoon in Burley.

"We had another great defensive effort today," said Burley coach Gordon Kerbs. "Offensively we have some kinks to work out, but our kids play well together and the chemistry is good. We're coming along, but we have a long ways to go."

Burley led 23-12 at half-time, but Skyline's Lacie Widerberg scored nine of her team-high 13 points in the third quarter to keep it close. The Bobcats adjusted with a box-and-one defense to keep Widerberg at bay in the final period.

Burley will host Kuna on Friday.

Real Salt Lake reaches first MLS Cup final

BRIDGEVIEW, Ill. — Real Salt Lake advanced to its first MLS Cup final by beating the Chicago Fire 5-4 on penalty kicks after 120 scoreless minutes in the Eastern Conference final Saturday night.

Ned Grabavoy, a substitute in the final minute of overtime, scored the winning penalty kick in the seventh round as his shot went off the fingertips of Fire goalkeeper Jon Busch.

Salt Lake goalkeeper Nick Rimando made three saves in the shootout after stopping six shots through overtime.

RSL, which joined the league in 2005, will meet Los Angeles in the MLS Cup final on Nov. 22 at Qwest Field in Seattle. The Galaxy reached the title game with a 2-0 overtime win against Houston on Friday.

The Fire have lost three consecutive conference finals, and this game was the first to reach penalties since D.C. defeated New England in 2004.

Salt Lake nearly scored in the final seconds of regulation but forward Robbie Findley's shot from the top of the box was cleared off the line by John Thorington.

Fire forward Brian McBride saw his header hit the crossbar in the 27th minute, and midfielder Marco Pappa had a shot in the 67th minute saved by a diving Rimando.

This is the second time this season Chicago has lost on penalties. The Fire lost the SuperLiga final 2-1 via the tiebreaker to Tigres of Mexico on June 27.

BCS-hopeful TCU now 10-0 after trouncing Utah

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Now that the hometown fans are finally taking notice of No. 4 TCU, maybe the rest of the nation will also realize that the BCS-hopeful Horned Frogs are for real.

Utah certainly can't disagree.

In likely its last significant hurdle to an undefeated regular season, TCU scored three touchdowns in a 2½-minute span early in the second quarter and beat No. 16 Utah 55-28 Saturday night.

The Horned Frogs (10-0, 6-0 Mountain West) stretched their winning streak to 12 games since a last-minute loss last November at Utah (8-2, 5-1), which had won 22 of 23. TCU also has won 13 in a row at home since losing when the Utes last visited two years ago.

With a record crowd of 50,307 — a sellout at 79-year-old Amon Carter Stadium without the benefit of an in-state opponent — and representatives from the Orange, Rose and Fiesta bowls watching from the athletic director's suite, the Frogs put on quite a show. Fans stormed the field when it was over.

Matthew Tucker had the first and last touchdowns (runs of 41 and 9 yards) for TCU, with five teammates getting into the end zone in between. The 55 points were the most allowed by Utah since 1996.

Even without guaranteed access to the Bowl Championship Series, the

Florida remains perfect

Tebow ties TD record

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Tim Tebow tied the Southeastern Conference touchdown record and No. 1 Florida gained its first perfect league season in 13 years with a 24-14 victory over South Carolina on Saturday.

The Gators (10-0, 8-0) remained on track for a third national title in four years. They again called on their SEC-leading defense to save things against former coach Steve Spurrier.

Down 17-14, South Carolina (6-5, 3-5) drove 48 yards to the Florida 22. But defensive lineman Justin Trattou intercepted Stephen Garcia and brought it back 53 yards. Tebow cashed in the touchdown four plays later, a 1-yard burst that was the 53rd of his SEC career to match LSU great Kevin Faulk.

NO. 2 TEXAS 47, BAYLOR 14

WACO, Texas — Colt McCoy tied the NCAA record for career victories by a starting quarterback, throwing two touchdown passes for Texas.

McCoy is 42-7 in his career, tying the wins record set by former Georgia quarterback David Greene.

Texas led 40-0 by halftime with McCoy throwing touchdown passes of 3 and 7 yards to Jordan Shipley. Cody Johnson ran for 109 yards and two short touchdowns and Tre' Newton added a 45-yard scoring run.

NO. 3 ALABAMA 31, MISSISSIPPI STATE 3

STARKVILLE, Miss. — Mark Ingram rushed for 149 yards and two touchdowns, Greg McElroy threw two long scoring passes and Alabama improved to 10-0 for the second straight year.

Mark Barron made his fifth and six interceptions of the season, most in the Southeastern Conference, and helped the Crimson Tide (7-0 SEC) smother the Bulldogs (4-6, 2-4).

NO. 7 GEORGIA TECH 49, DUKE 10

DURHAM, N.C. — Jonathan Dwyer rushed for 110 yards and two touchdowns, Josh Nesbitt accounted for three scores and Georgia Tech clinched a spot in the ACC championship game.

Orwin Smith returned a kickoff 83 yards to spark the slow-starting Yellow Jackets (10-1, 7-1).

Their offense took over after that, scoring touchdowns on five of the following six possessions, rushing for 306 yards and shutting out the Blue Devils in the final three quarters.

NO. 8 PITTSBURGH 27, NOTRE DAME 22

PITTSBURGH — Jonathan Baldwin made two exceptional catches that allowed No. 8 Pittsburgh to open up an 18-point lead in the fourth quarter before Notre Dame rallied behind two touchdowns by star Golden Tate, and the Panthers held on for a win that may raise more cries for Fighting Irish coach Charlie Weis' ouster.

Notre Dame (6-4) trailed 27-9 with 12:44 remaining after Dion Lewis' 50-yard touchdown run, then came back before Jimmy Clausen fumbled with just over two minutes remaining.

NO. 9 LSU 24, LOUISIANA TECH 16

BATON ROUGE, La. — Keiland Williams ran for 116 yards and two second-half touchdowns, helping fend off upset-minded Louisiana Tech.

Williams' first score, on a powerful 3-yard run that moved the pile, gave LSU (8-2) a 17-13 lead midway through third quarter. His 9-yard TD in the fourth quarter made it a two-score game with a little over seven minutes to go.

NO. 10 OHIO ST. 27, NO. 15 IOWA 24, OT

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Backup Devin Barclay kicked a 39-yard field goal in overtime to send Ohio State to the Rose Bowl for the first time in 13 years.

The Buckeyes (9-2, 6-1) clinched at least a share of their fifth consecutive Big Ten title and the conference's automatic BCS bid.

NO. 25 STANFORD 55, NO. 11 USC 21

LOS ANGELES — Toby Gerhart rushed for 178 yards and three touchdowns and Stanford emphatically followed up its 2007 upset at the Coliseum with the most points ever allowed by the Trojans.

The loss was the Trojans' worst since a 51-0 defeat at home against Notre Dame in 1966 and essentially ended USC's seven-year run as Pac-10 champions.

NORTH CAROLINA 33, NO. 12 MIAMI 24

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. —

Kendric Burney returned one of his three interceptions for a 77-yard touchdown and his third pick resulted in a bizarre fourth-quarter score that helped North Carolina get the win.

Burney fumbled his third interception on what looked to be a forward pass, but Melvin Williams picked up the loose ball and ran the last 44 yards for a score.

CENTRAL FLORIDA 37, NO. 13 HOUSTON 32

ORLANDO, Fla. — Central Florida slowed down Case Keenum and stopped the nation's most prolific passer from pulling off another improbable comeback.

Brett Hodges outplayed the Cougars quarterback and Brynn Harvey rushed for 139 yards and three touchdowns, helping UCF stop Houston's five-game winning streak that featured Keenum putting together a pair of last-minute rallies.

NO. 17 OKLAHOMA ST. 24, TEXAS TECH 17

STILLWATER, Okla. — Patrick Lavine scored on a 21-yard interception return, and No. 17 Oklahoma State came up with a final defensive stand to keep its slim hopes for a Big 12 championship alive.

After allowing some rare pressure against quarterback Zac Robinson in the first half, the Cowboys (8-2, 5-1) relied on their Big 12-leading rushing attack to drain the clock in the second half.

CALIFORNIA 24, NO. 18 ARIZONA 16

BERKELEY, Calif. — Shane Vereen scored on a 61-yard run after an odd penalty thwarted a potential go-ahead drive for Arizona and California went on to a victory.

Giorgio Tavecchio kicked four field goals, giving Cal (7-3, 4-3) an 18-16 lead with a 22-yarder with 4:46 remaining. But Arizona wasn't done.

After Tavecchio made a key tackle on the ensuing kickoff, the Wildcats (6-3, 4-2) drove the ball down to the Cal 25. On third-and-3, Nick Foles' pass was batted at the line. Foles caught the ricochet and tried to throw it again. That was a penalty for an illegal forward pass and the ball moved back to the 39 and Arizona lost the down. Foles threw an incompletion on the next play.

NO. 19 PENN ST. 31, INDIANA 20

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. — Linebacker Navorro Bowman had a 73-yard interception return for a touchdown and Evan Royster scored twice to help Penn State overcame four first-half turnovers.

Senior quarterback Daryll Clark threw for one score and ran for another in his last game at Beaver Stadium, but also threw two interceptions.

NO. 20 VIRGINIA TECH 36, MARYLAND 9

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Tyrod Taylor threw for 268 yards and a career-high three touchdowns, and Virginia Tech built an early 24-point lead before coasting to the victory.

Taylor threw each of his TD passes in the opening 23 minutes to help Virginia Tech (7-3, 4-2 Atlantic Coast Conference) go up 27-3.

NO. 21 WISCONSIN 45, MICHIGAN 24

MADISON, Wis. — Scott Tolzien tied a career high with four touchdown passes and scored on a sneak to lead Wisconsin to the victory.

Nick Toon caught two of Tolzien's touchdown throws for the Badgers (8-2, 5-2 Big Ten), who went to the air after putting together monster rushing performances in their previous two games.

NO. 24 CLEMSON 43, NC STATE 23

RALEIGH, N.C. — C.J. Spiller became the first player in Clemson history to record a touchdown passing, rushing and receiving in the same game.

Spiller, who broke Derrick Hamilton's single-season school record for all-purpose yards on his 16-yard touchdown run in the third quarter, rushed for 97 yards on 18 carries. He finished with three receptions for 48 yards, including a 34-yard touchdown catch early in the fourth.

The Frogs are fourth in the BCS standings, the highest a team from a conference without an automatic bid has reached. They trail only Florida, Alabama and Texas — all winners Saturday.

Ed Wesley ran for 137 yards and a touchdown and Andy Dalton threw for 207 yards and a score. TCU had 549 yards overall, its third straight game with at least 500.

Utah's Eddie Wide, who had posted six straight 100-yard games, was held to 25 yards on 14 carries.

Jeremy Kerley scored on a 1-yard run with 14:11 left in the first half after a blocked punt. He then had a 39-yard punt return to the Utah 29, setting up Dalton's 28-yard pass to Jimmy Young and

The Frogs, 10-0 for only the second time since its 1938 undefeated national championship team led by Heisman Trophy-winning quarterback Davey O'Brien, play next week at wobbly Wyoming. They close the regular season Nov. 28 at home against New Mexico (0-10).

Utah was the original BCS buster in 2004 and last year capped the only undefeated season by an FBS team with a Sugar Bowl victory over Alabama while being the first outsider to play in two of the big-money bowl games.

Hall ties Detmer as No. 22 BYU edges UNM

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — A landmark victory for BYU quarterback Max Hall was important to his coach for another reason — it was another hard-fought win for the Cougars.

Hall passed for two touchdowns and got his 29th victory at BYU to match Heisman Trophy-winner Ty Detmer's school record, and the No. 22 Cougars survived a sloppy fourth quarter to beat winless New Mexico 24-19 on Saturday.

“We won the football game and that, to me, is something that I’ll dwell on most,” BYU coach Bronco Mendenhall said. “In addition, our team played very hard to win the football game. That’s a positive thing in my eyes.”

The Cougars (8-2, 5-1 Mountain West) held off a focused effort by the Lobos (0-10, 0-6), who were desperate to give fans something good to cheer after a tough season that has been worsened by first-year coach Mike Locksley's problems off the field.

New Mexico made a game of it with 4:07 remaining when Donovan Porterie's 20-yard TD pass to Victor James finished a drive that started in BYU territory after an ugly 30-yard punt by Cougars punter Riley Stephenson.

Bryan Kariya fumbled on BYU's next possession with 3:13 to go, but Porterie was sacked twice by Cougars lineman Jan Jorgensen. After earlier converting three times on fourth down, the Lobos turned it over at midfield when Porterie scrambled 20 yards on fourth-and-27.

Asked why BYU couldn't maintain its crisp effort from last week's 52-0 victory at Wyoming, Mendenhall said: “Maybe New Mexico had something to do with it. I think they drew a line in the sand and were really motivated to play a good football game today.”

The Lobos dropped their 14th in a row, the second longest losing streak in school history, and will remember this one for 10 points that never reached the scoreboard.

Kicker James Aho whacked the uprights three times — on field goal attempts of 35 and 42 yards and on a PAT try, all in the second half. Aho also had a 46-yard field goal attempt blocked by BYU's Andrew Rich just before halftime.

UTAH STATE 21, SAN JOSE STATE 9

LOGAN, Utah — Robert Turbin ran for 190 yards and two touchdowns to lead Utah State past San Jose State 24-9 Saturday.

Turbin became the first running back to top 1,000 yards for a season since 2001 for the Aggies (3-7, 2-4 Western Athletic Conference). On a cold and snowy day, Utah State gained 381 yards on the ground and had only 50 yards passing.

Lamon Muldrow ran for 54 yards to lead the Spartans (1-8, 0-5) and scored on a 2-yard run with 9:07 left in the third quarter for their only touchdown.

Derrvin Speight rushed for 70 yards and a touchdown on seven carries for the Aggies, and quarterback Diondre Borel scampered for 92 yards.

Utah State scored on its first possession, thanks in part to a fake field goal which resulted in a 25-yard run by Xavier Bowman to the Spartans' 6-yard line. Turbin then scored his first touchdown one play later.

NEVADA 52, FRESNO STATE 14

RENO, Nev. — Luke Lippincott rushed for 149 yards and three touchdowns to lead Nevada over Fresno State 52-14 on Saturday.

Vai Taua rushed for 179 yards and two touchdowns for the Wolf Pack (7-3, 6-0 Western Athletic).

Colin Kaepernick added 95 yards rushing and two touchdowns for Nevada, the nation's No. 1 rushing offense, which rolled up 461 yards Saturday.

Ryan Colburn passed for 362 yards and two touchdowns for the Bulldogs (6-4, 5-2). He had a 57-yard strike to Jamel Hamler on the opening drive to give Fresno State a 7-0 lead and hit Seyi Ajitotutu from 3 yards out to make it 14-7.

Fresno State had five turnovers, including four fumbles in the second half. The Bulldogs also lost running back Ryan Mathews, the nation's leading rusher with 165.1 yards per game entering Saturday, to an injury in the second quarter. He carried eight times for 35 yards.

IDAHO STATE 41, PORTLAND STATE 34

POCATELLO — Clint Knickrehm scored from a yard out with 32 seconds left to give the Bengals a 41-34 victory over Portland State in their final game of the season.

Idaho State (1-10, 1-7 Big Sky) would have punted on its final drive but an illegal participation penalty kept the drive alive. Russel Hill then hit J.D. Ponciano on a 45-yard strike to bring the Bengals to the 1-yard line.

The Vikings (2-9, 1-7) got to the ISU 44 on their last drive but had a Hail Mary pass intercepted in the end zone to seal the win. Portland State outgained Idaho State 438-392 but committed six turnovers.

Jennings nets 55 in Bucks win

MILWAUKEE — Brandon Jennings scored 55 points, breaking Kareem Abdul-Jabbar's franchise rookie record, to lead the Milwaukee Bucks to a come-from-behind 129-125 victory Saturday over the Golden State Warriors.

Jennings poured in 29 points in the third quarter, then scored 10 in the final 2:15 to hold off the Warriors and become only the third Bucks player to score more than 50. The last player to do it was Michael Redd, who set the franchise record with 57 points against Utah on Nov. 11, 2006.

Jennings scored 15 straight points during the third period to help the Bucks overcome a nine-point deficit and win four straight for the first time in more than two years.

Abdul-Jabbar, then known as Lew Alcindor, had 51 points on Feb. 21, 1970, against Seattle. The NBA rookie record was set by Wilt Chamberlain with 58 points for Philadelphia against Detroit in a January 1960 game in Bethlehem, Pa.

HEAT 81, NETS 80

MIAMI — Dwyane Wade's 3-pointer with 0.1 seconds left lifted Miami past unmanned and winless New Jersey.

Wade's shot was the 17th tie or lead change in the fourth quarter and came after the Nets' Brook Lopez tipped in Rafer Alston's missed runner with 4.1 seconds to go.

CAVALIERS 107, JAZZ 103

CLEVELAND — LeBron James' three-point play with 28 seconds remaining lifted short-handed Cleveland to its fourth straight victory.

James was 6 of 15 from the floor, but finished with 21 points, six rebounds and nine assists. Shaquille O'Neal missed the because of a strained shoulder.

Carlos Boozer scored 25 points for Utah.

PACERS 113, CELTICS 104

INDIANAPOLIS — Danny Granger scored 29 points, Dahntay Jones added a season-high 25 and Indiana handed Boston its second straight loss.

Granger delivered on his promise Wednesday night that the Pacers would earn their fourth straight win. He was 6 of 9 on 3-pointers and had six rebounds and four assists.

THUNDER 101, SPURS 98

SAN ANTONIO — Kevin Durant scored 25 points and Oklahoma City spoiled the return of Tim Duncan and Tony Parker to San Antonio's lineup.

The Thunder handed the Spurs their first home loss in five games this season despite Duncan and Parker

HAWKS 121, HORNETS 98

ATLANTA — Joe Johnson scored 26 points, Jamal Crawford added 21 and Atlanta beat New Orleans for its fourth straight victory.

The Hornets were without Chris Paul, who stayed home after spraining his ankle the night before, and have lost three straight and five of six.

GRIZZLIES 97, TIMBERWOLVES 87

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — Marc Gasol scored 17 points and matched his career high with 16 rebounds, and Rudy Gay and O.J. Mayo had 19 points apiece to help Memphis snap a seven-game losing streak and hand Minnesota its 10th straight loss.

Corey Brewer scored 16 points for Minnesota.

PISTONS 106, WIZARDS 103

WASHINGTON — Ben Gordon scored 29 points,

Charlie Villanueva added 25 and Detroit held Washington to one field goal over the final 5 minutes.

TRAIL BLAZERS 80, BOBCATS 74

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Brandon Roy scored 25 points, Andre Miller added 15 and Portland improved to 8-3 with its sixth straight victory.

Boris Diaw led Charlotte with 21 points.

BULLS 94, 76ERS 88

CHICAGO — Luol Deng and the slumping Kirk Hinrich each scored 19 points to help Chicago snap a two-game losing streak.

Derrick Rose, John Salmons, Brad Miller and Joakim Noah each added 14 points. Andre Iguodala led Philadelphia with 24 points.

Montana deals Boise State defeat

MISSOULA, Mont. — Anthony Johnson scored a game-high 25 and had five assists to lead Montana to a 95-82 win over Boise State on Saturday.

The Broncos (1-1) were led by 20 from Ike Okoya, who also had nine rebounds. La'Shard Anderson had 16 points and five assists.

NO. 17 OKLAHOMA 95, MOUNT ST. MARY'S 71

NORMAN, Okla. — Steven Pledger scored 21 points and Oklahoma's much-heralded freshman class lifted the Sooners to a victory over Mount St. Mary's.

NO. 21 DAYTON 90, CREIGHTON 80

DAYTON, Ohio — Chris Johnson had a double-double, and Chris Wright led a second-half surge that carried Dayton to a victory over Creighton in an opening matchup of teams that won 27 games apiece last season.

Dayton, ranked in the pre-season poll for the first time since 1967, overcame a 10-point deficit in the first half and regrouped, pulling away in the closing minutes. The Flyers won their 21st in a row on their home floor, tying the school record.

NO. 22 GEORGIA TECH 100, FLORIDA A&M 59

ATLANTA — Iman Shumpert scored 18 points and capped a decisive run in the first half, and Georgia Tech showed off its freshmen in its win over Florida A&M.

Derrick Favors, the biggest name in Georgia Tech's heralded freshman class, started and had 10 points and eight rebounds.

Stewart considers 1st season as owner a success

AVONDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Tony Stewart's won't win the Sprint Cup championship this season, and his bid to join the late Alan Kulwicki in the NASCAR record books will have to wait at least another year.

That won't change how he views his first season as owner of his own race team.

"I think it's hard to be disappointed, no matter where we end up," Stewart said Saturday at Phoenix International Raceway.

Stewart-Haas Racing stormed out of the gates this season and had solidified itself as a championship contender by May. As Stewart built a lead of 179 points through the first 26 races, he seemed poised to become the first owner/driver since Kulwicki in 1992 to win the championship.

As an added bonus, teammate Ryan Newman also claimed one of the 12 berths in the Chase field.

But neither contended for the title. Stewart, who started the Chase seeded second, is currently fifth in the standings with two races remaining. Newman is ninth.

Regardless of where they stand after next weekend's finale at Homestead, Stewart will be pleased.

"Just by getting two cars in the Chase and winning the races we've won this year exceeded more than what any of you guys could have anticipated, and we could have anticipated," Stewart said. "We knew on paper that it was possible, but the reality of it was competing against great race teams every week.

"So to be able to accomplish this goal has been an awesome year for us."

Stewart is right in that few thought he'd have success in leaving Joe Gibbs Racing, where he won two championships and 33 races, to become part-owner of Haas CNC Racing. The team lagged behind in sponsorship and success, and molding it into a contender was supposed to be a long and arduous task.

But Stewart has had remarkable luck in landing sponsors — he chalked it up Saturday to the charm of good looks of him and Newman — and the increased funds was the first step in building a winner.

His streak continued this weekend, when the U.S. Army said it would be back for 15 races as Newman's primary sponsor next season. On Saturday, Stewart introduced Tornados, a brand of Ruiz Foods, as a five-race sponsor for Newman.

Tornados is new to NASCAR, a coup for any

NATIONWIDE: EDWARDS' WIN STAVES OFF BUSCH TITLE

AVONDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Carl Edwards rolled to a dominating win at Phoenix International Speedway that temporarily staved off Kyle Busch's bid to clinch the Nationwide Series title.

Busch's first NASCAR championship is still a near-certainty — he's up 190 points over Edwards and only needs to start next week's race at Homestead-Miami Speedway to grab the title.

But early problems Saturday spoiled Busch's bid to get it out of the way. He spun his Toyota eight laps into the race, suffered heavy damage when he hit the wall, and had to battle to a ninth-place finish.

"I was driving a bucket of (junk)," Busch said when asked what happened on the accident.

It wasn't enough, though, as Edwards picked up bonuses for leading the most laps and winning the race to put a halt to the celebration.

"I know Kyle's almost clinched the championship, but that's what we came here to do, win the race," Edwards said. Still recovering from a broken foot suffered in a frisbee game in September, Edwards skipped his traditional celebratory backflip and instead did a somersault.

owner trying to bring in money during the current economic climate.

"This is a time when you don't see a lot of new groups coming into the sport," he said. "When we made the decision to start this venture last year and Ryan came on board, I think everybody kind of rallied around that and I think that's what's attracted a lot of these corporations to be a part of our family ... we were looked at from day one as the underdog.

"I think everybody sees now how hard we're working at it, and the commitment, that we have people who have wanted to join because of that."

Broncos

Kyle Wilson returned an interception 71 yards for another score for the big-play Broncos (10-0, 5-0 WAC), who beat their rivals for the 11th consecutive time.

"There was a lot of attention here," Moore said. "And we were aware of it."

The nation's passing efficiency leader, with 32 touchdowns and just three interceptions, passed Steve Young for 19th place on the Western Athletic Conference's list for career touchdown passes. His 57th in two seasons was to Pettis early in the fourth quarter.

Recent close wins on national television had put Boise State behind TCU in the BCS rankings, and only the higher ranked non-BCS school has a chance to crash the megabucks series.

This one wasn't close. The go-go Broncos used a half-back pass, an interception return, a kickoff return and funky formations with tail-back Jeremy Avery taking direct snaps behind just three interior linemen — all for fancy scores.

"We wanted to come out and make a big statement in this game," said Pettis, who tapped balls to himself while covered and made one-handed catches en route to 123 yards receiving on eight catches. He now has 14 touchdown receptions, a new season record for the Broncos. He even partially blocked a punt.

The Vandals (7-4, 4-3) were supposed to join WAC co-leader Nevada, which comes to Boise in two weeks, as the remaining threats to the Broncos' third perfect regular season since 2004. Idaho was off to its best start in 15 years, with as many wins since September as it had in the three previous seasons combined.

Again.

"I'm stressed out right now," Idaho safety Shiloh Keo said.

The Broncos are averaging 60 points per home game against Idaho in six games this decade. The last three times the Broncos had played the Vandals in Boise, they'd won 58-14, 70-35, 65-7 — and now Saturday's runaway.

"I didn't expect to get blown out like this," Akey said. "I knew that they were a good football team — but I didn't expect for this to happen."

Idaho committed seven turnovers, six by fill-in quarterback Brian Reader. He threw five interceptions while starting for the second consecutive game for Nathan Enderle, who is second only to Moore and 10th nationally in passing efficiency. Enderle has a bruised rotator cuff. Akey thinks he will play in Idaho's next game Nov. 28 versus Utah State.

Reader, who finished 17 for 27 for 305 yards and a touchdown, lost a fumble on his third play, setting up Pettis' leaping touchdown catch over Kenneth Patten. Reader threw an interception on his second pass. Boise State converted that into a 25-yard

Pettis

"Today was my lucky day," Pettis said. "Today I made them all."

BSU struggled in recent weeks to score touchdowns in the red zone. That wasn't a problem against Idaho. The staff drew up plays especially for Pettis, to turn threes into sixes. His lanky frame and golden hands make him an ideal target in the end zone. Kellen Moore can throw the ball a bit higher to Pettis than he can to his shorter receivers.

"He's an athletic guy," Moore said. "He has great hands and he's able to make plays down there. You go with what works."

Pettis' best play of the day was not a touchdown grab, but a snag along the right sideline early in the third quarter that most men cannot make. He hauled in the 35-yard reception with just his right hand, with a bobble, and his left hand held tight by an Idaho defender. Some other short receptions were nothing less than spectacular, tipping it to himself, or just leaping high to get both hands securely on the ball.

"He likes to do that sometimes to make it look harder than it is," BSU coach Chris Petersen joked. "He's just a clutch guy. When we need a big play I know he's going to make it."

Pettis' 29 career touchdowns leave him one shy of Hutt's BSU record, set from 1970-73. Pettis also blocked his second punt of the season Saturday.

"It was nice," Pettis said in his speedy dialect, smiling.

Finding adjectives to describe his catches is like trying to rename sunshine. They are superb, miraculous, perfect and even delicious.

"We're just sitting there just like as a fan, sitting

"He's just a clutch guy. When we need a big play I know he's going to make it."

– BSU coach Chris Petersen, on wide receiver Austin Pettis

there in awe, like ‘Did he make that catch ... again?’” Derrell Acrey said. “It’s good to see him succeed like that. Everything he does, he’s so competitive. That’s why he does so well.”

Moore is another reason Pettis succeeds. The sophomore stalwart puts the ball where Pettis can go up and get it, on time, on target. Moore passed Steve Young on the WAC career touchdown list with 57. He has 32 touchdowns and only three interceptions this season.

The connection between Moore and Pettis becomes more fluid every week. Pettis is that possession receiver quarterbacks dream of. He almost never drops a ball, never goes down easy. He has natural instinct.

You can't call him an emerging star anymore: The secret is out. He may get better, surely some small things can be improved upon, but right now he's the biggest threat the Broncos have to opposing defenses and that's saying a lot with Titus Young in the huddle. He's breaking records and safeties' ankles. And he does it with the humility you'd expect from Petersen's team.

Young also scored a touchdown Saturday, just one while compiling 101 yards. On that 25-yard play, as Young cut back against the grain, it was Pettis who cut down a safety to give Young the corner so he could score. That's unselfish. That's Austin.

It's typical and he's not done yet.

IF NOVEMBER 15 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You've got what it takes to become a captain of industry. At the very least, your street-smarts will pay off between now and the end of the year. Make hay while the sun shines, because in the New Year your popularity will soar and there could be a lot of excitement and social activity in your life. January is a good time to appear in public or begin any project that depends upon fame and recognition. You might meet a special someone if you are single, but wait until April, when the people who belong in your life will draw closer, to make a commitment.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You may overhear a conversation this week, but like a bottle on the beach the message is not necessarily meant for you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You are seldom considered a prophet in your own land. Your sneaking suspicions may prove to be unfounded by the end of the week.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You might be scraping the bottom of the barrel for fresh ideas. Go feed the pigeons until inspiration and creativity return.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): A life without cause can be a life without effect. Grab a life preserver and hold on tight, even if it means letting go of a dream.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): When fogbound, use low beams. For the next few days, you might handle a situation better if you are not trying to shine too brightly.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The likelihood of catching the contagion of uncertainty may increase if you spend too much time with doubters this week.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Discretion is the better part of a secret. Part of the attraction of a new person may be due to the aura of keeping a secret.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): When you come to a fork in the road you have a 50/50 chance of choosing the wrong direction. Make sure you have a clear picture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Due to the potential for misunderstandings, you would be wise to re-read all documents or contracts this week.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): The phone that leads to your piggy bank is possibly off the hook. Be wary of major purchases during the first half of the week.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Rely on logic and find your inner Mr. Spock. You may feel you're lost in space, but common sense can guide you to a safe landing.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Strive for clarity; overcome confusion. During the week ahead you could temporarily lose your enthusiasm or sense of direction.

Today is Sunday, Nov. 15 the 319th day of 2009. Then are 46 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On Nov. 15, 1959, Kansas farmer Herbert Clutter, his wife, Bonnie, and the couple's two youngest children Nancy, 16, and Kenyon, 15 were found murdered in their home in Holcomb (Two ex-convicts, Richard Hickock and Perry Smith were later convicted of the killings and hanged; the case was detailed in the Truman Capote book "In Cold Blood.")

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1777, the Second Continental Congress approved the Articles of Confederation, a precursor to the Constitution of the United States.

In 1806, explorer Zebulon Pike sighted the mountain-top now known as "Pike's Peak" in present-day Colorado.

In 1889, Brazil was proclaimed a republic as its emperor, Dom Pedro II, was overthrown.

In 1939, President Franklin D. Roosevelt laid the cornerstone of the Jefferson Memorial in Washington D.C.

In 1948, William Lyon Mackenzie King retired as prime minister of Canada after 21 years; he was succeeded by Louis St. Laurent.

In 1966, the flight of Gemini 12 ended successfully as astronauts James A. Lovell and Edwin "Buzz" Aldrin Jr. splashed down safely in the Atlantic.

In 1979, the British government publicly identified Sir Anthony Blunt as the "fourth man" of a Soviet spy ring.

In 1984, Stephanie Fauchon, the infant publicly known as "Baby Fae" who had received a baboon's heart to replace her own congenitally deformed one died at Loma Linda University Medical Center in California three weeks after the transplant.

In 1988, the Soviet Union launched its first space shuttle, Buran, on its only flight which carried no crew.

Ten years ago: The Clinton administration claimed victory in a seven-year struggle to persuade Congress to pay nearly $1 billion in back dues to the United Nations. Chinese and U.S. negotiators agreed to remove trade barriers, clearing the biggest hurdle to China's entry into the World Trade Organization.

Five years ago: The White House announced that Secretary of State Colin Powell was leaving President George W. Bush's Cabinet along with Education Secretary Rod Paige, Agriculture Secretary Ann Veneman and Energy Secretary Spencer Abraham. The U.N. Security Council imposed an arms embargo on Ivory Coast's hard-line government after its violent confrontation with France.

One year ago: World leaders battling an economic crisis agreed in Washington to flag risky investing and regulatory weak spots in hopes of avoiding future financial meltdowns. A wildfire destroyed nearly 500 mobile homes in Los Angeles. Gay rights supporters marched in cities coast to coast to protest the vote that banned gay marriage in California. Somali pirates hijacked the Sirius Star, a Saudi-owned oil supertanker, in the Indian Ocean. (The ship was released eight weeks later after the pirates were reportedly paid a ransom.)

Recession forces families to reconsider college options

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

When Jessica Myers was younger, she wanted to go away for college. Now, the 17-year-old Canyon Ridge High School senior has more than dorm rooms, sororities and leaving home on her mind.

"I thought it would be so fun to go somewhere else, to get out of Idaho, but I've wised up," Myers said. "It's not realistic anymore, and it's not what I want to do anymore."

What she wants to do is save money, and apply the credits she's already earned toward her goal of being a nurse. To do that, she will attend College of Southern Idaho and live at home for the next few years.

Myers, like many students approaching graduation, has had to recalculate her priorities and balance her goals with the current reality of recession.

"Money is a big factor because my parents gave me the option that if I stayed home at CSI they would help me more, but if I went to a big university they'd help me as much as they could but wouldn't pay for all my schooling," Myers said. "I don't want to have hundreds of thousands of dollars of debt when I graduate college."

Counselors across the region say their students, regardless of economic class, are widening their mixture of choices.

"Families are concerned about cost of tuition, and what they've ended up doing is having a broader range of colleges on their college lists," said Bob Brock, college counselor at The Community School in Sun Valley, where more seniors are opting for Idaho universities this year. "They're considering not only admissibility but they're also considering affordability."

Jessica Myers will start attending College of Southern Idaho in the spring and plans to eventually finish a nursing degree at Idaho State University.

Donations to the Dogs

A meal for the mutts

Need help feeding your dogs or cats? Contact People for Pets Magic Valley Humane Society at 736-2299.

It's an informal honor system; you won't have to show financial documents to prove need. Call first to sign up, then pick up the food at People for Pets, 420 Victory Ave. in Twin Falls. Want to donate? Look for the white bins adorned with puppy or kitty faces at the following businesses. Pet Food Pantry accepts dry and canned food for both dogs and cats — but not for other species. (Note: These businesses don't distribute the donated kibble.)

- Wright Physical Therapy, 1411 Falls Ave. E., Suite 105, Twin Falls, 736-2574.
- Pet Grooming By Chris, 2188 Fourth Ave. E., Suite 3, Twin Falls, 735-1108.

Humane society collects pet food for needy owners

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

Without help from anonymous strangers, Robin Hunt isn't sure she could keep her pets.

The Twin Falls mother and College of Southern Idaho nursing student works part-time, but doesn't always have enough money to buy food for her three dogs, three cats and the occasional foster dog. About six times in the past year, she has had to go to People for Pets Magic Valley Humane Society to get bags of donated food.

"When I need it, it's there," Hunt said.

And now, the animal shelter is hoping to help more dog and cat owners. People for Pets is teaming up with Idaho Humane Society to collect donated kibble in an effort to prevent pups from going hungry in Twin Falls.

The society's program, Pet Food Pantry, started in Boise in late 2008, said Twin Falls coordinator Carlena Parks. People for Pets collected pet food donations at its Twin Falls shelter previously, but that effort wasn't affiliated with the Idaho Humane Society and donations weren't steady.

Parks, a volunteer at People for Pets, saw demand for donated pet food increase with unemployment rates. She heard of dog and cat owners skipping meals to feed their furry friends, she said, and saw first-hand how many families had to give up their pets because of economic hardships.

Robin Hunt is surrounded by pets; some belong to a daughter and are only temporarily at her home. Hunt uses a new program in Twin Falls that aids pet owners by collecting pet food for people in tough economic circumstances. It's short-term assistance until people can get on their feet.

Parks

and acknowledged that if the donated food is of a different brand than a person normally feeds their pets, it might upset the animals' digestive systems. But, she added, food that might give dogs an upset stomach is better than no food at all.

The short-term supply has helped Margaretta Carter of Twin Falls feed her Chihuahua-dachshund mix, Freddie, when she occasionally runs out of money.

"If I fall short before payday, I go to the dog pound," Carter said. While she hasn't had to fill the dog bowl with free food recently, it has helped her throughout the year.

Hunt hopes to see that safety net expand.

"It would be really nice to see people donate any kind of dog or cat food," she said.

Cats are trainable – and that’s not a punchline

By Linda Lombardi
For The Associated Press

People have low expectations of cats. Sam Connelly tells of the time that she and her cat Storm observed a Canine Good Citizen test while they were waiting for their feline agility class to start. “I’m watching the dogs and I commented to the evaluator, ‘My cat can do all that,’” said Connelly. “At the end she said, ‘Want to take a shot?’ like it was a big joke.”

To the evaluator’s surprise, Storm passed the test, successfully performing commands like sit, stay, come, down and walking on a leash.

Storm is a cat who does some of these things for a living. He helps Connelly train lost pet search dogs in Maryland by hiding and waiting to be found.

But training cats isn’t just for professionals — human or feline. The Michigan Humane Society has a Pawsitive Start program that uses volunteers to train cats in their shelter in useful and fun behaviors like the high-five and walking into a carrier.

“A lot of people look kind of funny at us when we say we train the shelter cats,” says CJ Bentley of the humane society. Cats need more than just playtime outside the cage to be well-adjusted in the shelter environment, she says. “It’s not just all about the physical, it’s the mental as well,” says Bentley. “To teach them to be able to solve problems on their own can reduce the stress. It gives them control over a situation.”

It’s not just shelter cats that need more, though. People expect pet cats to “just hang out, which isn’t realistic,” says Melissa Chan, behavior specialist at the Houston SPCA. Cats are naturally active animals, she says, and “one thing I wish I could tell every cat owner: Cats want to work for their food.”

Having your cat touch your hand with its nose on command is one of the easiest behaviors to train, Chan says. If you hold out your hand, most cats will naturally sniff it. Reward with a treat until the cat is doing it every time you present your hand. Then, start repeating a word like “touch” every time.

This trick can then be used to get the cat to move where you want it by placing your hand in the desired spot. “You can use it to ask them to get off the couch, or teach them to jump through a hoop by putting the hand on the other side of the hoop,” Chan says.

Another useful behavior is entering the cat carrier on their own. Sandy Lagreca, a volunteer at the Kittens learn to socialize and play with others during a kitten kindergarten class in Houston.

Michigan Humane Society, says that this is great for both cats and people: “They go in without having to be picked up and shoved into the crate, which can be traumatic for the owner.”

All this requires is patience, repetition and a highly desired treat. Throw the treat into the crate (and if your cat is already suspicious of the carrier, step away). Let the cat go in, eat the treat, and leave, repeating until it’s completely comfortable going into the carrier. Then, start to close the door and leave the cat inside for increasingly longer intervals. Again, repeat till the cat is comfortable before you try to pick up the carrier.

Chan says that people often don’t think cats are trainable because they lack a dog’s desire to please, “but we have things that cats want. That’s all that matters.” Figure out what your cat will work for — it may be a little tuna, a bit of canned food on the end of a chopstick, or maybe a toss of a toy mouse.

Connelly says to keep training sessions short — she recommends no more than five minutes — and varied. “Teach something else when they get one thing right,” she says. “Cats get bored easily.”

In addition to the specific useful behaviors, Bentley says, training can help prevent problems by changing the terms of your relationship with your pet. “The animal learns, when I do this, you’re happy and I get a piece of food, I guess I should focus on making you happy,” she says. “Teaching our cats to successfully do what we like and get rewarded makes them more inclined to do what we like.”

And it’s also rewarding to see that your cat is capable of so much more than lying on the couch. Says Lagreca, “It’s fun to watch the progression and see the lights go on — when they make that connection it’s a magical moment.”

Tame the holiday chaos with organizing tips

By Brenda Gutierrez
McClatchy Newspapers

The holidays typically send most families into high-stress mode. But before you start panicking, “The No. 1 thing is put the pressure on paper,” says Deniece Schofield, a home management expert and author of several books on organization, including “Confessions of a Happily Organized Family.” “Make sure everything is written down, because if it’s in your head, it’s stressful,” she said.

To keep stress to a minimum and stay on task, Schofield recommends starting a notebook and making lists to keep yourself organized and save time. The real key is to get your planning under way ASAP.

Here are more of her helpful holiday tips:

Keep a schedule: List the many things you have to work around: Check office and school calendars (will your kids need holiday costumes for school performances?); note when you have to get things in the mail so they’re received on time, when you’re going to decorate the tree, events going on in the community, and service projects for the family, such as adopting a family or volunteering at the food bank.

Get your ducks in a row: Also list who you want to give gifts to; who your kids want to give gifts to and what they want to give; things you want to make vs. things you want to buy; and your Christmas card recipients. (Most experts also agree that this is time to evaluate your budget. Be realistic. You’ll want to be able to stick to it!)

Use your waiting time: Standing in line? Waiting for a doctor’s appointment or dinner to cook? Take advantage of little chunks of time to plan things, make your lists, or work on little craft projects. You can do this throughout the year but especially during the holiday season.

Gift lists: Create a list of what you have given people as gifts. That way you don’t risk giving something you’ve already given. While you’re at it, start next year’s gift list. Keep your radar up during the year and make notes, so when it comes time to shop, you have a list of things people want and will enjoy.

Decorations: Take inventory of your holiday decorations, make a list and identify what box they’re stored in. When you’re boxing them up at the end of the season, sort and store them by room, not by what they are. Then next year, you can decorate from one box at a time, one room at a time, if you don’t have a large block of time to do it all at once.

Get wrapping: Set up a card table in a corner of a room and make that your gift-wrap center, so when you buy something, you can wrap it right away and avoid the last-minute crunch. Stand up rolls of wrapping paper in a waste basket, or hang in a garment bag. If you buy 30-inch-long rolls of paper, cut them in two — one 18 inches and one 12 inches — then put them in empty aluminum foil boxes for easy dispensing. A desk or wrist tape dispenser releases strips of tape with one hand. And those spindle paper towel holders are great for storing and dispensing rolls of ribbon.

Holiday house cleaning: Houseguests — either for dinner or for weeks at a time — are often a key part of the holidays. But this isn’t the time to clean out the basement or reorganize storage closets. Ultimately, your goal should be that you’re not embarrassed by your home and that everyone will be welcome and have a good time. Back off the big projects and just do those things that pertain to that direct goal.

Tackle the big meals: Holidays are often all about the food. If you’re playing host, do a lot of stuff in advance, and realize that a lot of things can be reheated just before guests arrive. If you’re hosting a casual affair, have your guests contribute a dish or drinks. Afterward, make notes of who you invited, so you’ll remember details such as whether someone is allergic to nuts.

Evaluate what worked, what didn’t: Immediately after the holidays, ask yourself: What would you have liked to do this season, but you ran out of time? Which of those things could you plan to do now or do earlier in the year so you don’t run out of time? Is your gift list going to change next year? Were there certain baked goods or foods that people really enjoyed? What decorations or ornaments would you like to add, exchange or get rid of? What projects would you like to do next year, and when should you start them?

Then work ahead for 2010: With kids, it can be difficult to buy gifts too far in advance — they tend to want something they just saw on TV. But with other people, you can pick things up during the course of the year to save time and money. And don’t forget to take advantage of the after-holiday sales. You can get staples like holiday napkins, cards and gift wrap for a fraction of the seasonal price. Just be sure to write down what you bought and where you have stashed it, so you’re ready to go next year.

The new reality

When it comes to the conversation around the dinner table, parents are feeling frustrated that they can’t help their children as much as they had hoped a few years ago. Some may have lost jobs, while others saw savings and investment portfolios tank.

“They’re really not sure how their assets may be read, when they’re equity-rich or house-rich, their money is tied up in property and they can’t move,” Brock said. “On paper it may look like they’re more well-to-do than they feel, and they’re concerned about that.”

Their kids are worried about money, too.

“Kids see their parents struggle at home financially. They themselves try to think of ways to give their parents relief, they go to work or whatever,” said Donell McNeal, counselor at Canyon Ridge.

McNeal said he has students who are worried about whether there will be a meal on the table at night, or a roof over their heads.

“Kids stop having the ability to connect what they’re doing right now to

— Donell McNeal, Canyon Ridge High School counselor their futures, because everything is so connected to money and their parents fighting,” he said. “It’s hard to prioritize (college) when you have life slapping you in the face every day.”

Being competitive

Myers’ family isn’t in such dire straits, but she has taken a job with Old Navy and hopes to find one where she can put her Certified Nursing Assistant certification into play — both for the health care experience and the paycheck.

Some students may be saving their paychecks just for the cost of applications, which can add up to more than $100 each.

Fortunately, Brock said, many colleges understand the position families are in, and are focused on providing scholarships, grants and “merit money” to highly qualified students.

“The best way to weather the economy as a student is to be a good student,” he said.

Myers said that in conversation with her friends, she’s learned as many as 50 Canyon Ridge students have applied for any given scholarship, and they all recognize there’s more competition. The same is true across the region.

“Last year there were 90 that applied for this one scholarship, and I know that company, they were amazed at the number of kids who had applied,” said Jeanne Kerbs, counselor at Burley High School. “I’ve seen a lot more students applying for scholarships, and a lot more interested in financial aid than before.”

No matter what the economy, said the counselors, having a college degree is such an advantage in later life that higher education should be at the top of students’ priorities. There are plenty of inexpensive options, and plenty of financial assistance from institutions, scholarships and grants.

“It might be a struggle in the beginning, but it’s so worthwhile in the end,” Kerbs said. Echoed McNeal: “Even in times like these there’s still a lot of money available.”

Do you have or do you know of someone who has been awarded the Purple Heart for wounds received in combat.

If you do, please ask them to attend a special meeting for those recipients at the Twin Falls; Canyon Springs Red Lion Downtowner at 1357 Bluelakes Blvd. Starting time 10:00 AM until 3:00 PM on Saturday, November 21, 2009.

There will be a briefing on the Military Order of the Purple Heart, who we are, what we do, why we do it and who we do it for.

Bring your DD214 as we will have service officers available to assist in compensation and pension claims with the VA and answer questions about VA benefits.

CLEANING

Question:

You are absolutely amazing! I clean carpets for a living and one of my good clients is a local retirement home. As is to be expected, I'm always dealing with urine related accidents. I can always clean up the mess, but I couldn't always get rid of the lingering odor. Lori you recommend a product called X-O for me to use. The results were AMAZING! The urine smell went completely away! Can I use this product for other applications besides carpet cleaning?

"A Better Whiffer For My Sniffer!"

Answer:

Yes! X-O is an odor neutralizer that doesn't just cover up odors, it eliminates them completely. This natural and organic formula is also safe to use in the kitchen or bathroom, as well as on drapes, upholstery, in the car or RV. It eliminates ALL odors instantly! Permanently!

Board games don't require family therapist

With the holidays approaching, I'd suggest it's time we all brush up on our board game skills. And believe me when I say there are life-long implications that can result from an innocent game of Chutes and Ladders. I'm not talking about how to obtain elusive Park Place and Boardwalk. Rather, the rules of social etiquette that surround board game controversies.

SPILT MILK
David Cooper

Many of these games are marketed as a throw-back to nostalgic family fun, time spent together and lasting relationships. If that's true, I've yet to see it. Board games are land mine activities that can lead to fistfights, tantrums and old vendettas. It's almost as if Michael Corleone taught my kids how to play Stratego.

And I must admit to being part of the problem. My board game demeanor could use work. It's a little hard to accept that kids who can't drive yet know how to slaughter me in the game of Battleship.

Board games are popular during the holidays because it's winter, it's cold and there isn't much else to do except watch football and eat pie. These conditions usually contribute to cabin fever, which is bad in itself. But when you throw that anxiety in with sensitive relationships with siblings, parents and cousins, your post-Thanksgiving Parcheesi game may need intervention from Dr. Phil.

So be wise in how you play your hand. If you're with in-laws, be on your best behavior. You may not see these relatives for another five years. The last thing you want them to remember is how you ridiculed their lack of sports knowledge in Trivial Pursuit.

Most of all, if you're playing with kids, especially your own, don't think for a minute that you have to let them win. In fact, think of this as your chance to get back at all the humiliation you've earned at their hands in video game competitions.

Letting your children win, whether it's checkers, chess or Monopoly, sets a dangerous precedent. Learning how to win, and how to lose, is part of the whole objective. Kids who don't comprehend fair play eventually gain a sense of entitlement that grows out of control. I'm guessing the executives at AIG never once lost a hand of Old Maid. Is it any wonder why they feel entitled to a $182 billion bailout?

At my house, battles will be waged over Settlers of Catan, a game where players set up expansive colonies like small kingdoms. Eventually, a very edgy player gets schooled by smarter players and fights back outbursts of tears and resentment.

How to help kids accept visitors with disabilities

By Wendy Donahue
Chicago Tribune

A long-distance relative has a child with physical and mental disabilities. How do you prepare your children for their first visit over the holidays?

Parent advice

As the parent of a young man with autism (my son is 29 years old), I would have been delighted to think a relative would have taken the time to prepare their children for our visit. The first thing I would do: Find a good children's book about the specific disability. Children only need to know some very basic things to begin with: Does their cousin use a wheelchair or a walker? Is he able to speak or does he use a computer to communicate? I would ask the relatives about their son:

Does he participate in sports? (My son took swimming lessons and music classes.) Finding common ground is a great way to make all the children feel comfortable.

— Marie Grass Amenta

One idea to get your child prepared for the holiday visit is to volunteer at a local organization that specializes in physical and mental disabilities. This process allows them to have hands-on (experiences) and understand the situation a little better.

— Devin A. Oliver

Don't be afraid to express some emotion when broaching the subject with your child, says Jeanne Segal, a psychologist, clinical therapist and author of "The Language of Emotional Intelligence" (McGraw-Hill, 2008). "It's the hard, painful subjects that when calmly addressed from an emotional as well as intellectual perspective create safety and trust in all our relationships," Segal says. She and Elizabeth Berger, a child psychiatrist and author of "Raising Kids With Character" (Rowman & Littlefield, 2006), agree that preparations for this visit should differ depending on the age and social skills of the young visitors, as well as their personalities and needs.

Berger suggests starting by consulting good-naturedly with the parents of the youngster, who are the true experts. They can share any insights about how to best structure interaction in terms of supervision, food, noise and more. That will help you think through what you will tell your kids.

The age of your children is a big factor. Berger suggests giving children age 4 through 10 a "brief, action-oriented heads-up that the young relative can do this but cannot do that," then invite them to ask questions.

Adolescent children may ask why the world is so unfair or whether their own future children will have disabilities.

"There are often no ready answers to these questions," Berger says, "but the parent might want to offer the reassurance that although the world has grief and suffering in it, we are all in it together to do the best that we can."

In general, keep your conversations simple, brief and light, Berger says.

"Although children can be unwittingly thoughtless, often children are remarkably magnanimous in their acceptance of persons with disabilities," Berger says. "And do not forget that your children may very well treasure deeply their little relative and the time that they have spent together."

CLARISBEL NEEDED PRENATAL CARE. SO WHY DID SHE GO TO AN ELEMENTARY SCHOOL?

Clarisbel Armendariz went to Rose Park Elementary because that's where a community clinic is located—one of twenty that Intermountain Healthcare either owns or supports, between Logan and St. George. Four of them are located in neighborhood schools, and all of them help people from surrounding neighborhoods get the care they need—from prenatal care to immunizations to diabetes treatment and other basic healthcare services.

The costs in these neighborhood clinics are lower than traditional physician office visits and much lower than hospital emergency rooms. This means that many people can receive the quality care they need, where they need it, and at a cost that saves money—for them as well as the community at large.

Of course, there is much more to be done to improve access to healthcare and to help keep costs affordable. But it's a step along the way—for Clarisbel and all of us.

Healing for life®

Site creates online community for people living through divorce

By Susan Kinzie
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Just about every week, it seems, another sex scandal breaks: Gov. Mark Sanford, Sen. John Ensign, Louisville basketball coach Rick Pitino. And that's nothing compared with all the cinematic scripts playing out behind closed doors, the ones that most people never hear about. Recently, a few dozen people met to celebrate the launch of a Web site, talk about cheaters and toast the idea of moving on.

LousySpouse.com was founded this summer by two women from Alexandria, Va., one of whose marriages ended so badly that, with a flair for the dramatic and a strong desire not to make her divorce any more complicated than it was, she wore a wig and pink sunglasses to a restaurant and refused to have her name published.

The site was started to give support, resources and options to people who have just been knocked upside the head, figuratively speaking, by their husband or wife. After all, for people who relied on the Knot Web site to plan their wedding down to the tiniest of peau-de-soie details, and BabyCentral.net to get advice on pregnancy and nursing, Google doesn't do so well at answering the question: What the hell do I do now?

LousySpouse.com provides information on lawyers, private investigators, finances — even movie suggestions to help people laugh off their louse.

The site also offers some horror stories.

Lousy, of course, is in the eye of the beholder. But the site comes at a time when half of all marriages end in divorce, some studies say at least 40 percent of all spouses are unfaithful, and there's so much demand for an online dating site designed for married people that its officials recently launched an iPhone app. So a Web site meant to help people get through the morass seems not only inevitable but maybe even necessary.

It's the flip side of all those wedding videos, the beautifully shot scenes with everyone tossing rose petals as the groom scoops the bride into his arms. Southerlyn Reisig, the site's co-founder, knows those movies often have a surprise ending. She looks like Grace Kelly in her wedding video but, a couple of lawyers, a therapist, some painful conversations with her two children and tens of thousands of dollars later, she said she knows a thing or two about ending a marriage — and how much she could have saved had she only known more at the time.

The world didn't need another Web site sponsored by divorce lawyers, the founders figured.

They knew options were available: The Jewish Social Service Agency offers sessions on ending marriages amicably, for example, and coaches will guide people through divorces for a fee.

But they wanted something people could use at 3 a.m. when they realize their spouse isn't coming home that night — a positive place that is free and always available, where they could rant, get advice, make plans and maybe laugh a little.

The site has links to resources, financial worksheets, advice about insurance, books, supportive comments, a creepy quiz about whether a spouse might be cheating, and a forum blistering with fury and disgust.

Among those who came to the Web site launch party, there was a private investigator (she pretends to be an artist and paints while she spies), some supportive friends, angry exes and heartbroken women and men.

They talked about the moment they found out about a cheater and what they did next. (Do you tell your parents or wait in case you patch things up, so they don't hate her forever? Do you call a counselor or a lawyer? Do you shut down bank accounts? Throw him out? Tell the kids?)

A father of four said the best thing the site could do was act as a brake, to stop people from acting on their first instinct and get them to calm down and think things through.

People talked about whether to forgive and how to move on. They compared louses. They talked about how things can go wrong so fast.

There were sad moments. "I never wanted to get a divorce," said Jane Manstof, an Alexandria real estate broker, "even at the very end." Her husband wasn't lousy. It just didn't work out.

Who designed the Vietnam Veterans Memorial?

By Moira E. McLaughlin
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Nov. 13 was the 27th anniversary of the unveiling of the somber Vietnam Veterans Memorial, a wall on the national Mall in Washington that sinks into the ground and lists all the U.S. soldiers who died or were left missing in action in Vietnam from 1956 to 1975.

A national competition open to any U.S. citizen older than 18 decided the design of the memorial. The rules stated that designs had to be thoughtful and fit into the Mall surroundings. They had to include all the names of those who were killed or were missing in action, and they could not display an opinion about the controversial Vietnam War.

Maya Lin, a Chinese-American from Ohio, was a senior at Yale University majoring in architecture when she submitted her design for the memorial. After considering proposals from more than 1,400 applicants, the eight judges decided Lin's design was the best.

Memorial fact

There are 58,261 names inscribed on the Vietnam Veterans Memorial.

Not everyone in the public liked the low, black granite monument, however. Some were offended by it. It had none of the standard elements of a memorial, such as a flag, statues or white marble. To compromise, the memorial organizers agreed to add an American flag and three bronze statues of soldiers made by sculptor Frederic Hart to the memorial.

Today more than 4 million people visit the memorial every year.

Maya Lin's plan for the Vietnam Veterans Memorial in Washington beat out more than 1,400 designs. She's shown in March at a Corcoran gallery exhibit of her sculptures.

THE GIRLS GOT MOVES

At all-girls tournament, they're queens of the chessboard

By Moira E. McLaughlin
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — It was a sunny fall day, the kind of day your mom insists you spend outside, running around, laughing and making noise. But for 30 girls, in grades one to eight, it was a day for concentration, strategy and competition.

The Washington-area kids competed in the U.S. Chess Center's first all-girls chess tournament recently. The day included four rounds of games. Each girl had 30 minutes per game to make her moves.

The girls sat quietly, stared at the boards and scribbled down their moves to study later. Naomi Miller, a sixth-grader in Springfield, Va., won two matches, drew one (meaning it was a tie) and lost one.

"There really are so many new things to learn," she said. "I don't think it matters if I've lost or not. I like thinking back and seeing if I could have made another move."

This was Naomi's second chess tournament and her first all-girls matchup. This one, she said, "was way more casual." When a boy opponent says to her at the beginning of a match, "Are you ready to play?" Naomi feels as though what he is really saying is, "Are you ready to lose?"

This kind of attitude is in part why the U.S. Chess Center decided to host an all-girls event.

At most youth chess tournaments, according to Chris Kim, the tournament director, only about 5 percent of players are girls.

That means, out of 100 players, only five of them are girls. That's a lot of boys.

"Most girls feel intimidated," Kim said, as his daughters, Madeline and Charlotte

Kim, battled it out over the chess board. Girls may pick up the game in elementary school, but as they get older, they stop playing because of peer pressure. "My daughters' main complaint was, 'How come we always have to play boys?'"

Pallavi Bhawe, a fifth-grader in Annandale, Va., plays on her school chess team, which has seven girls and 36 boys. "Most of my other friends do chorus," she said, "I think chess is better because you actually think and it helps you concentrate."

Joie Wang, a sixth-grader from Fairfax, Va., tied with Madeline for first place in the senior division (grades five to eight). Joie has competed in dozens of tournaments in the three years she has been playing.

When asked why she plays chess, she said simply, "I like how I beat people."

CHESS BASICS

- Each player has 16 pieces: eight pawns, two knights, two bishops, two rooks, one queen and one king. All the pieces are set up the same way every match in two rows in front of each player. Each piece moves a specific way. For example the rook (which looks like a castle) can move forward, back and sideways any number of spaces, but not diagonally.
- Along the left and right sides of the board are numbers, and along the top and bottom are letters. This is how players note their moves.
- To win, a player moves a piece to the space where her opponent's king is. Checkmate is when a king is about to be taken.
