PUSHING FOR BETTER VET REIMBURSEMENTS

MEAGAN THOMPSON/Times-News

Bob Jackson, 59, retired from the Navy, visits with Dee Wooten, a chef at the Twin Falls Golden Corral on Monday. Jackson, who is a disabled veteran, was one of several people manning a fundraiser booth at the door of the restaurant. A bill proposed by U.S. Rep. Walt Minnick, D-Idaho, would increase mileage reimbursement for veterans like Jackson who travel to Veterans Affairs hospitals for health care.

Idaho Rep. Minnick proposes legislation to require gov't to repay veterans who travel long distances to VA hospitals

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

U.S. Rep. Walt Minnick is pushing a bill in the House that would require the federal government to reimburse veterans for travel costs tied to their trips to a Veteran Affairs hospital or clinic.

The Idaho Democrat says veterans should be allowed to live anywhere and not be penalized in the pocketbook if they live hundreds of miles from a VA hospital or clinic. Minnick's legislation would mandate travel cost reimbursement to veterans traveling more than 150 miles.

Veterans would be repaid for lodging and food at the same rate as federal employees. The bill would also allow reimbursement if inclement weather leaves them stranded and unable to travel after getting medical treatment.

Veteran patients in the Magic Valley typically travel to Boise for care.

"Many Idaho veterans must travel on narrow, rural roads for the better part of a day just to reach a VA Hospital," Minnick said in a statement. "If a snowstorm prevents veterans from traveling home after receiving care, they should not have to wonder how they will pay for a hot meal or a hotel room."

Under the current system, reimbursements are determined on a case-by-case basis, and at a maximum of 50 percent of the federal employee rate.

Rick Helsley, state adjutant for the American Legion of Idaho, said the legislation would be welcome, adding that long-distance travel to VA facilities is common in this part of the nation.

"Especially in Idaho and some of the other states where the VA facilities are few and far between, it helps them make those appointments and also a lot of them are on fixed incomes," he said. "A lot of them do drive

State mental health evaluator jailed

Gary Pate given two weeks for battery

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

An Idaho Department of Health and Welfare clinician was sent to jail for two weeks on Wednesday for misdemeanor battery against his stepchild.

Gary R. Pate, 60, was accused of inappropriately touching the 19-year-old woman on May 14, at his home after a party. He told police he had no recollection of the night and was intoxicated, according to court records.

Pate

According to his lawyer, Kevin Cassidy, Pate has been involved in many mental health commitment proceedings as a designated examiner in the 5th Judicial District, which serves eight counties in the Magic Valley and Wood River Valley areas.

Pate, who has a master's degree in psychology, gave an Alford plea in the case. An Alford plea is not a guilty plea, but an acknowledgment there is enough evidence to convict the defendant of the criminal charge. Pate was placed Wednesday on two years of probation with a fine of $500, along with 180 days of jail time, 166 of which were suspended.

At Pate's sentencing hearing Monday, the victim

Otter outlines Idaho education goals

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter and the education community unveiled recommendations on Wednesday that are intended to chart the path of education in the years ahead.

The recommendations are broad goals that officials stressed will need more discussion and refining in the months and years ahead. They focus on four central themes: transparent accountability, high student achievement standards, postsecondary credit opportunities in high school, and more students completing a certificate or degree program after high school.

Specifics of the themes include a compensation plan for teachers based, in part,

Mercury removal from T.F. apartment complex results in $50,000 bill

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

Local, state and federal agencies likely spent more than $50,000 to respond to and clean up a small mercury spill two months ago in Twin Falls, officials said this week.

The mercury, just about two teaspoons' worth, was found the week of Sept. 15 in a parking lot outside an apartment complex at 359 and 341 Pheasant Road W. Investigators later determined it came from several thermometers intentionally broken by kids, and one family had to be temporarily evacuated from a contaminated apartment.

A number of public entities responded to the incident, including the Twin Falls Fire Department, Idaho Department of Environmental Quality and South Central Public Health District, and submitted reimbursement requests to the Idaho Bureau of Homeland Security.

On Wednesday, response costs for state and local agencies were still being tallied. But they're expected to come in between $25,000 and $30,000, said BHS spokesman Lt. Col. Tim Marsano.

In addition, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency spent about $26,000

Midnight meteor streaks across Western skies
Wednesday; fireball was visible from M.V.

By Mike Stark
Associated Press writer

SALT LAKE CITY — A streaking fireball briefly illuminated parts of the Utah sky to daylight-level conditions early Wednesday, surveillance footage shows.

The video from outside security cameras at the University of Utah's Milford observatory shows a blinding flash of light around 12:07 a.m., followed by clear images of the object streaking away.

"It looks like a shooting star on steroids," said Seth Jarvis, director of the Clark Planetarium in Salt Lake City.

Although it's too early to say definitively how large the object was and how fast it was going, Jarvis estimated that it was about the size of an oven and was traveling at about 80,000 mph. It broke through the Earth's atmosphere and was probably around 100 miles above the ground when it became visible, he said.

The event was also visible in the southern skies of the Magic Valley.

It almost certainly broke up before it reached the ground, Jarvis said.

Patrick Wiggins, a volunteer with NASA's ambassador program, was sitting in his home observatory near Tooele, Utah, when he saw the bright flash through his closed curtains. Several minutes later, he said he heard a sonic boom.

"It was like a low rumble, like thunder," he said.

Utah scientists on Wednesday said it's likely a meteor associated with the annual Leonid meteor shower.

Dave Kieda, chairman of the school's department of physics and astronomy, said meteor sightings aren't uncommon, but to see one this large — and to get much of it on tape — is unusual.

James Scotti, a planetary scientist at the Lunar and Planetary Laboratory in Tucson, Ariz., said space debris is constantly bombarding the Earth.

"These things are relics of the formation of the solar system. The more we find, see and study, the more we can say about that," Scotti said.

The near-ubiquity of security cameras and video cameras increases the odds that they'll be caught on tape. Using triangulation from different camera angles can help scientists map the trajectory path of these objects and increase the likelihood that bits of the space rocks can be recovered and analyzed, he said.

Scientists with expertise in meteors will use the university's footage to help estimate its size and trajectory.

MORNING BRIEFING

Pat's Picks

Three things to do today

Pat Marcantonio

● Visit the Minidoka National Historic Site, otherwise known as Hunt Camp, and take a ranger-guided walking tour from 1 to 2 p.m. today through Saturday, weather permitting. Meet at the site entrance area in Jerome. Wear sturdy footwear and bring water. Bathroom facilities are limited. Information: 933-4127 or <https://cms.pwr.nps.gov/miin/planyourvisit/directions.htm> for directions.

● For you history buffs, arrange a tour of the Lincoln County Courthouse, which was completed in 1904 and is on the National Historic Register. You'll find historical displays in a building that is reported to be the last remaining flat-iron jail in the west. Inquire for tours at the county clerk's office.

● The Snake River Council of the Boy Scouts of America will host a fundraising dinner and concert featuring Jon Schmidt from 6 to 9 p.m. at Canyon Crest Dining and Event Center in Twin Falls. Tickets are $75 per person, $150 per couple.

quivered and cried and said the event injured her relationship with her family and has fueled eating disorders. "My mother has decided to side with Gary," said Pate's stepdaughter, who is not being named because the Times-News does not identify victims of abuse.

The victim told Judge Mick Hodges, from Cassia County that Pate "sexually entrapped" her in a premeditated incident.

Hodges ordered the jail time for Pate along with a review hearing in 45 days.

"I feel bad about what's happened," said Hodges. "I'm sure you feel terrible ... You have to, look where you're sitting."

Pate was still employed Wednesday with the state despite his jail time, confirmed Emily Simmitt, spokeswoman for the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare. Pate was hired in October 2006 and is a clinician who is designated by Health and Welfare as a medical examiner to diagnose and treat mental illness.

Hodges said Pate could do his jail time on the weekends, but Pate told the court he wanted to do it all immediately. "I have some vacation time, I would just as soon get it over with," he said in court.

Pate was issued a counseling license in 2006 from the Idaho State Board of Professional Counselors and Marriage and Family Therapy, which remains current and expires in May 2010, according to the state licensing board. The board doesn't list any disciplinary action against Pate in online public records.

After handing down the sentence, Hodges told the court that Pate will need to self-report to his licensing board. He also issued a no-contact order between Pate and victim.

Hodges became the judge on Pate's case after others based in Twin Falls disqualified themselves from involvement. A prosecutor from Ada County, Cathy Guzman, handled the case for local authorities.

Pate underwent his own mental health evaluation before he was sentenced Wednesday, which has been sealed by the court.

great distances to get back and forth to the VA hospitals."

Curtis Russell of Burley, chairman of the Mini-Cassia Veterans Advisory Board, said it's not uncommon to stay in Boise overnight.

"If the weather looks like it's going to be bad at night I'll stay over in Boise instead of taking a chance and driving back, especially if my appointment is late in the day," he said.

Cheryl Ringenberg, Twin Falls County veteran service officer, said the VA usually provides housing to veterans who need to stay overnight.

Bob Jackson Jr. of Twin Falls, adjutant for the local Disabled American Veterans organization, said he supports the idea of a higher reimbursement, noting that many Idaho veterans live in remote areas.

"As far as the travel pay goes I think it's excellent," he said.

The DAV works to help veterans who cannot drive to the Boise VA facility for care. The organization raises money for vans that transport veterans, with the VA paying for transportation and maintenance.

CLARIFICATION

A Tuesday article on Renova's tax deferral in Minidoka County was unclear due to misused legal terms during the Minidoka County commissioners meeting.

Idaho code does not allow a county to defer property taxes but there is a mechanism in place that allows the county to accept a surety bond in lieu of issuing a warrant of distraint.

asked the Idaho Business Coalition for Education Excellence to facilitate a long-term discussion among stakeholders about improving education.

"It's one of the first steps in a process," said Curtis Eaton, an IBCEE board member. "It's a very important milestone, I think, but there are other steps to follow. One of those next steps would be to refine and be a little more definitive in some of the objectives."

Eaton also stressed that the breadth of the organizations involved is crucial. Ten organizations were involved, besides the governor's office, the State Department of Education and State Board of Education.

"We need every stakeholder in the education system in Idaho at the same table," Otter said at the press conference, adding that the work is not done.

"We've still got a long way to go, so that team still has to stay together," Otter said.

Sherri Wood, president of the Idaho Education Association, said she appreciated the opportunity for her organization to be at the table.

The goals also come at a time when state revenues are down and lawmakers will have less money as they make budget plans.

"I'm very concerned about how it is we move these goals forward and they become anything more than words on a paper in this economic climate," Wood said.

And some ideas that the alliance has outlined will face scrutiny before becoming policy. Paying teachers for performance, for example, would be opposed by the IEA if it were based on a single test score.

Melissa McGrath, spokeswoman for the State Department of Education, said that having goals is crucial for future planning.

"Even in times of economic difficulty it's important to have a vision," she said. "It's important to have a strategy. ... When the economy does turn around, which we know it will, we'll have the vision and the goals in place."

The goal of more participation on college credit opportunities for high school students fits in well with the College of Southern Idaho's work in providing dual credit courses to high schools, said Eaton, also executive director of the CSI Foundation.

to bring in contractors for assessments of the parking lot, eight apartment units and other nearby areas, including other homes. Only one homeowner denied the agency access, according to an EPA report. The money came out of an emergency-response budget authorized through the Superfund program.

Costs incurred at mercury cleanups can vary, said Greg Weidel with the EPA — the agency had to excavate some soil itself after a spill in Eagle last year. He said the money spent in Twin Falls was completely worth it. After all, EPA representatives had no idea how big of a mess they faced when they first showed up.

"And even a very small amount of mercury presents a hazard if it's indoors, where it continues to give off vapors," he said.

Staff with the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality racked up some overtime and other small costs, but didn't consider the expenses enough to be worth tracking separately.

"We consider that part of our normal duties," Tom Askew, a hazardous waste science officer in DEQ's local office, said of the response work.

The one expense not picked up by the government was the cost of cleaning up a bedroom in the one apartment. That tab was picked up by the couple who own the apartments, Alex and Valerie Spence of Hagerman; they could not be reached by the Times-News over the past month.

Authorities said they don't know what the contractor ended up charging the landlords, but praised the Spences for actively addressing the issue.

"They stepped up to the plate in taking care of the problem," Askew said.

Auditor: Shoshone in good financial health

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — An auditor told the Shoshone City Council on Tuesday the city is in good financial health, but delinquent property taxes are on the rise.

Raymond Ware, of Ware & Associates CPAs, of Twin Falls, said Shoshone currently has $42,000 in delinquent property taxes. Unpaid taxes have increased from 8 to 12 percent in the past two to three years.

“Delinquent property taxes are going up and they typically do in hard economic times,” Ware said.

Ware told the council the city’s internal controls are sound and in place.

“There are no violations of Idaho code and everything looked pretty good,” he said.

However, Ware said, he noted material weaknesses that include that City Clerk Mary Kay Bennett is not a certified public accountant and does not hold a master’s degree in business administration. He said new state regulations require him to “put the public on notice” of anything that might fall under a legal definition of a material weakness, which includes a lack of segregation of duties. A material weakness is defined as one or more significant deficiencies related to financial controls.

Ware said the situation is common for small cities because they can’t afford additional employees to take on various financial duties.

Ware said the city is carrying about seven months of operating funds in the general fund. He said he likes to see a prudent reserve of at least three to four months.

Health and Welfare releases latest swine flu update

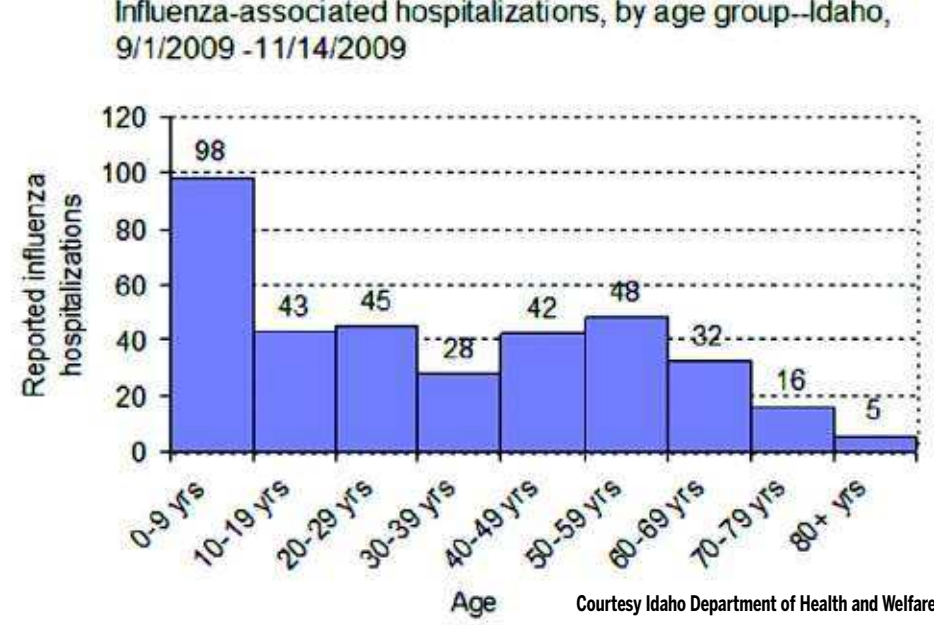

By Damon Hunzeker
Times-News writer

Swine flu isn’t going away.

The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare (IDHW) released its latest swine flu, also known as H1N1, findings this week. According to the report, widespread flu outbreaks are continuing in most states.

In Idaho, 758 people have tested positive for swine flu. Since Sept. 1, 357 people have been hospitalized, most of whom are under 10 years old.

Health officials continue to urge people in target groups — pregnant women, young people, anyone with a chronic disease — to get the vaccine. The national shortage, however, makes the recommendation easier to urge than carry out.

The South Central Public Health District, which has been conducting clinics in various school districts and in its office for high-risk people, was unavailable Wednesday to discuss immediate plans for clinics in the area.

An attorney and former judge is charged with driving under the influence for an alleged incident near his Hailey law office on Nov 13.

Kevin P. Cassidy, 54, was booked into the Blaine County Jail for DUI shortly after 7 p.m., about an hour after police questioned him concerning a collision in an alley behind 418 N. River St., according to a Hailey Police Department report filed in Blaine County court.

Cassidy is listed by the Idaho State Bar as a lawyer with the Roark Law Firm with offices in Hailey and Twin Falls.

He was a judge for nine years and was reprimanded by the Idaho Judicial Council four years ago when he was a magistrate judge in Gooding County. He is listed as a candidate to be judge for two vacancies in the 5th Judicial District and was scheduled to be interviewed Tuesday — the same day the DUI charge was filed.

It was unclear Wednesday if Cassidy remains in the running for the judge position.

Officials with the Idaho Judicial Council did not return calls Wednesday from the Times-News. Cassidy also did not immediately return a call to his office.

But he allegedly told police he backed into someone and admitted to drinking alcohol, according to the police report.

“I asked Kevin how much he had to drink today and Kevin replied ‘five drinks, of vodka,’” according to the police report. “I then asked Kevin what time he started drinking and Kevin said ‘since noon.’”

A witness to the alleged crash who called dispatch, Chris Zimmerman, told police Cassidy hit another car, according to court records.

“I pulled in right behind him, and there was a guy parked in that spot, and he just pulled right into his bumper,” Zimmerman told police. “They got out and it looked like they knew each other and apparently they did, he works for this law firm.”

Cassidy allegedly told police that the other vehicle had left. “I gave them my information,” he is quoted as saying in the police report.

Zimmerman told police that he “wasn’t going to let him drive away without calling you guys,” according to court records.

Cassidy’s breath test registered presumptively at .132 and .136, and police did not test for drugs as they were not suspected, according to the police report.

Area superintendents discuss charter-school options

By Damon Hunzeker
Times-News writer

During a wide-ranging discussion over several sandwiches at the Times-News office Wednesday, Gooding Superintendent Heather Williams and Twin Falls Superintendent Wiley Dobbs explained some of their concerns about charter schools.

Dobbs recently announced forming a committee to examine the idea of converting his district's elementary schools to charters.

He mentioned a few other options Wednesday, such as converting only one of the schools or even establishing a school-within-a-school system in which the benefits of charter and non-charter schools would be combined.

Some of the charter benefits, Dobbs said, include offering resources currently unavailable to the district's elementary students — such as foreign-language courses, musical instruments, advanced athletics and specialized art courses.

"It's really endless, the things you can come up with," he said, adding that the committee will involve district officials, including Dobbs, as well as parents and possibly grade-school children.

"It's possible elementary students could serve on it and do a good job," he said.

Most of the charter discussion revolved around possibilities — because, essentially, the district is looking for answers before moving forward. One obstacle is the state's current cap on only six new charters established in Idaho per year, but Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna wants to remove the cap. Consequently, unless the limit is repealed by the legislature, any local conversion wouldn't happen quickly and may require a change in only one school at a time — or, as Dobbs suggested, the school-within-a-school idea.

Dobbs, emphasizing that he merely wants a comprehensive look at what the charter option could offer students, said he has no particular agenda beyond determining which system would benefit students most effectively.

"We have a high poverty rate. We have a lot of neglect and abuse ... If a charter school doesn't have the ability to offer a social worker, that resource is lost for the community."

— Gooding Superintendent Heather Williams

Williams — whose district has been competing with North Valley Academy since the Gooding charter opened in August 2008 — said the smaller charter has received more federal funding per student than traditional Gooding schools, part of a complex formula broken down by "units" of students, but didn't object to lifting the cap on charters. She said she just wants consistency in terms of evaluating progress and providing services.

"When you start to dilute students, you dilute resources," she said, mentioning the need for support services such as a social worker in the area that charters may or may not provide.

"We have a high poverty rate. We have a lot of neglect and abuse ... If a charter school doesn't have the ability to offer a social worker, that resource is lost for the community," Williams said.

Charter schools, while still accountable to various authorities — federal, state, district — are able to offer specialized curricula and are governed at the school level.

While myriad considerations about charter schools were discussed — including whether they encourage de facto segregation — Dobbs and Williams agreed that the option may allow more room for innovation than the traditional structure.

Dobbs mentioned the refugee population in the area — 26 languages are spoken in the district — and how to better educate those students.

Williams got creative when discussing innovation and mentioned "equestrian-based therapy."

"I know a couple of kids in the district — with their learning styles, they'd learn better if they were on horses," she said.

Audit shows Ketchum pulled out of tailspin

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — It was a year of tough decisions for Ketchum, with several city positions eliminated and cuts made in most departments. The measures seem to have worked, though, according to an audit of the city's finances.

Dennis Brown, a Twin Falls certified public accountant, told the Ketchum City Council that the city has nearly $2 million in unrestricted assets that can be used to pay future bills, and that the city's general fund earned $9.6 million, while $8.7 million was spent last fiscal year.

These numbers conform with those provided to the council earlier this year by city administrator Gary Marks.

"There have been Herculean efforts, miraculous decision making and unbelievable results," Brown said to the council on Monday night, praising the city for riding out the economic recession so far. "The fall hit right at about the time the fiscal year began, and the revenues of the city were down by 20 percent. From an auditor's point of view, that's a headshaker. Way to go!"

The council was pleased with Brown's report, saying it was proof that despite claims made by some candidates in the recent election, the city is on good financial footing and is making good financial decisions.

Mayor Randy Hall said the fiduciary responsibility of elected officials in the city is one of their highest duties, and he praised the council for making two difficult "course corrections" during the past year.

"It's hard to come up here and not say, 'I told you so,'"

Marks said with a laugh.

Hall also praised the city administrator for his advice to the council. "You've done a great job helping steer this ship through the economic waters," he said.

A copy of the full audit is available on Ketchum's Web site, Ketchumidaho.org, by downloading the Nov. 16 council packet from the "public notices/agendas/meeting documents" tab.

Dispute over Idaho Capitol's public space resolved

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — A dispute over who rules the state Capitol's public areas was de-escalated Wednesday with a compromise allowing a group's annual event to promote its home-grown products on all floors of the building once it reopens.

The Capitol Commission, which oversees the building, voted to let Buy Idaho use all four floors of the Capitol rotunda — on the condition its exhibitors take special care not to wreck the place.

The nine-member panel in August passed guidelines restricting public events to just the fourth floor, to protect $122 million worth of nearly completed renovation and expansion work. But Mike Gwartney, Department of Administration director, this month overruled the commission after Buy Idaho complained the limit would hurt its members' efforts to promote products at their annual show.

"Our members have always treated the people's house with respect," said Dale Peterson, director of Buy Idaho, after the decision.

The building reopens Jan. 9 after two years of construction; state employees are now returning to offices.

For 17 years, Peterson's Buy Idaho exhibitors filled the rotunda with 100 or more booths, duct-taping cords to the marble floors and, according to some state officials, contributing to a fire risk.

By restricting events to the fourth floor, Capitol Commission members hoped to ensure the taxpayers' investment was cared for properly. Their new guidelines also forbid attaching anything to the walls, pillars, floors, staircases, statues or portraits. Loud or noisy events are prohibited, too.

Gwartney, a Capitol Commission member, originally supported the fourth-floor limit. But he's also a close friend of Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter, who founded Buy Idaho 20 years ago and opposed restricting the annual event — especially at a time when Idaho's economy is sputtering and state businesses are struggling to survive.

"I was a little disturbed when I heard we were going to start limiting the activities," Otter said Wednesday. "I distinctly remember the argument to expand the Capitol, to make it bigger, was so we could get people in there."

Gwartney's move to overrule the panel — he did so after his staff attorney concluded the Department of Administration had final say over the Capitol's public space — set off a tug-of-war over who was in charge.

Jeff Youtz, Legislative Services director and a Capitol Commission member, had been pushing for the fourth-floor limit but now says he can live with letting Buy Idaho spread out, on the condition Gwartney work up a report after February's event documenting how exhibitors treated the building.

Schools face cuts; agencies face elimination

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Two months before the 2010 Idaho Legislature convenes, the session's bitter tenor is set: Public education funding is due to be slashed again and state agencies now scraping to get by could be eliminated to help cover a remaining $52 million budget shortfall.

Speaking Wednesday at the Associated Taxpayers of Idaho annual conference in Boise, Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter ruled out an income tax increase, including a hike on those earning more than $50,000 suggested last week by a minority Democrat.

"Those who are successful ought to be celebrated and rewarded," Otter told lobbyists and politicians. "I'm resisting the effort to start class warfare."

The original budget deficit was $151 million, before Otter ordered agencies to trim 4 percent from spending in September. To make up the rest, Wayne Hammon, Otter's budget chief, told tax conference attendees that "everything is on the table," including privatizing services, selling state-owned real estate, even eliminating entire agencies.

Otter won't unveil his final plans until his annual State of the State speech on Jan. 11, Hammon said.

Agency heads have been asked to compare their missions with those from five years ago as a guide for reducing spending in fiscal year 2011. In a letter last week, Otter encouraged directors not to fill vacant positions, reduce travel further — even cancel memberships in "superfluous professional organizations."

House Speaker Lawrence Denney, R-Midvale, said Wednesday that public education will likely face austerity measures for a second straight year. Idaho's general fund share for public schools in the current fiscal year was cut to $1.3 billion, down 7.7 percent from 2009.

"The only way to balance the budget without raising taxes is to cut public education," Denney told The Associated Press. "That's always very difficult."

Already this year, at least 23 of Idaho's 115 school districts have declared a financial emergency. Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna suggested Wednesday even more districts will join that list, after depleting reserves in recent months.

Asked about his plans to deal with looming cuts for fiscal year 2011, Luna said his priorities remain preserving programs that directly boost student performance but that he would "explore many avenues and many scenarios."

House Minority Leader John Rusche, D-Lewiston, conceded public education, prisons, health and welfare, and state colleges and universities will likely be among the biggest targets for savings in the upcoming session. They make up nearly all of the $2.5 billion budget in 2010, which is down 15 percent from a year earlier.

But Rusche said lawmakers shouldn't gut valuable training and education programs necessary to help Idaho rebound from the economie doldrums and a 9 percent unemployment rate.

"I don't think anybody can really expect to hold those budgets harmless," Rusche said. "But as we understand the consequences, let's focus on what's building jobs."

State trades land with utility Avista in N. Idaho

BOISE (AP) — Idaho has agreed to trade 120 acres of steeply forested land near Lake Pend Oreille to Avista Corp. in exchange for a slightly larger parcel of gently rolling timberland a few miles away.

The swap approved Tuesday involves the state's Trestle Creek property, which runs along the northern Idaho lake, but is so steep it can only be logged by helicopter. It also contains critical habitat for the bull trout, a threatened species. In return, the state gets the so-called Gold Creek property, a few miles north of Trestle Creek.

Avista was interested in acquiring the parcel to bolster its bull trout restoration projects. The utility is involved in restoration efforts as part of a settlement with state and federal agencies and conservation groups.

The 45-year restoration program calls on the utility to pay for making fish and wildlife habitat improvements to offset the impact of its Cabinet Gorge and Noxon Rapids dams.

The Land Board — which includes the governor, secretary of state, attorney general, superintendent of schools and state controller — voted unanimously to approve the deal. The transaction is expected to be completed next week.

Don't fuel the fire: End wolf hunting season Dec. 31

This afternoon the Idaho Fish and Game Commission, meeting in Coeur d'Alene, will be asked if it wants to extend the wolf hunting season past New Year's Eve.

The commission should say no. It's a matter of public perception — in the rest of the country.

Idaho was fortunate to get a wolf hunting season at all. A Montana federal judge, who last summer approved hunts in Montana and Idaho, could end them with the stroke of a pen.

And there might not be another season if a coalition of environment groups has its way in court.

Wolf hunting success has varied across Idaho. In the Lolo Zone, where the commission set a harvest limit of 27 wolves, only six have been taken. Hunters have killed 25 wolves in the Sawtooth Zone, which has a limit of 55. Just four wolves have been shot in the Selway Zone, which has a limit of 17, and three have been killed in the Salmon Zone, where the limit is 16.

Hunting was shut down in the Upper Snake Zone on Nov. 2, when hunters reached the limit of five wolves, and in the McCall-Weiser Zone a week later, when the limit of 15 was reached.

Most of the units where wolves have not been limited out are located at high elevation and are hard to hunt. With heavier snowfall, the animals will be driven into lower valleys where they will be easier to take from roads.

The last thing the state needs is video on the national news of a wolf slogging through deep snow and a snowmobiling hunter driving up and shooting it.

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game has done a fine job — both technically and in terms of public relations — of managing the hunt. The commission set a statewide wolf harvest limit of 220 animals. Through Friday, hunters in Idaho had killed 100 wolves.

Commissioners should close out the hunt as scheduled on Dec. 31 and permit the department to assess what its managers say and look forward to setting the hunt for next season with whatever adjustments are needed.

Fish and Game should treat wolves the same as any other big game. Pursuing animals when they are stressed by winter is not the Idaho way.

Our view:

The greatest threat to a second Idaho wolf hunting season would be the perception that Idaho hunters are killing stressed animals during the first.

What do you think?

We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

The rogue American woman

WASHINGTON — Of course, the subtitle of Sarah Palin's book is “An American Life.”

Because she is the lovely avatar of real Americans — ordinary, hard-working, God-fearing, common-sense, good, ordinary, real Americans.

If you are not living an American life, you are, to use a Palin coinage, living “bass-ackwards.”

Maureen Dowd

Palin is so determinedly American that, when she went into labor with Willow on the Fourth of July while kayaking on Memory Lake in Wasilla, she writes, “I so wanted a patriotic baby that I paddled as hard as I could to speed up the contractions, but she held out until the next day.”

I approached reading her book with trepidation, worried I might learn that I am not a real American, dang it, just another dread “enlightened elite.”

I was born and live in Washington, D.C., after all. Now you'd think that this would be a rather patriotic city to call home, but Palin paints it as a cross between Sodom and Dante's fifth circle.

Here is what the former Alaska governor censoriously writes about “shenanigans” in two capital cities: “Politically, Juneau always had a reputation for being a lot like Animal House: drinking and bowling, drunken brawls, countless affairs, and garden variety lunchtime trysts. It's been known at times to be like a frat house filled with freshmen away from their parents for the very first time. At other times, the capital city's underside was even darker: clandestine political liaisons and secret meetings, unethical deeds and downright illegal acts.”

She concludes: “In short, it was a lot like Washington, D.C.”

Indeed, Sarah explains that the reason she wanted to join the McCain campaign was because she and Todd could contribute something rare and special: “We are everyday Americans.”

“We felt our very normalcy, our status as ordinary Americans,” she writes, “could be a much-needed fresh breeze blowing into Washington, D.C.”

It is also real hard to be a real, ordinary, hardworking American if you are part of “what used to be called ‘mainstream’ national media,” as Sarah scornfully writes.

“The time has come to acknowledge that it is counterfeit objectivity the liberal media try to sell consumers,” she says. “A period in the great American experiment has passed.”

I was beginning to panic. I pored over the book to see if there was anything I shared in common with this apotheosis of traditional American values.

We both had what Palin calls “a love of the written word” and we both entered a Veteran of Foreign Wars writing contest as children.

We both read “The Wonderful Wizard of Oz” and “Animal Farm.” We both came from families that loved Ronald Reagan and drove Ramblers, that watched “The Lawrence Welk Show” and “The Wonderful World of Disney” on Sunday nights.

We both grew up loving Hershey's bars and bacon and steak. As Sarah explains her carnivore philosophy: “I always remind people from outside our state that there's plenty of room for all Alaska's animals — right next to the mashed potatoes.”

She hunted moose and I hunted for Bullwinkle on TV.

We both belonged to the scouts, babysat and kept diaries. (Of course, I was writing about making Jiffy Pop and she, stacking firewood.)

We both now have stressful lives where we sometimes, as she puts it, want “a wife” to organize things.

I can empathize with Palin, bless her heart, when she observes: “After a while some of the giddy gets knocked right out of you.”

I must be somewhat American because I agreed with Palin that she was undercut by Nicole Wallace, one of the aides sent by John McCain to do the “My Fair Lady” makeover.

Wallace had a contract at CBS News and was determined to get the big interview for Katie Couric, even if it meant leading the lamb to slaughter, telling Palin that “the Perky One,” as Palin calls her, was insecure (presumably because of her low ratings) and that she would do a short- and-sweet chat about balancing motherhood and a career.

But Palin should have been smart enough to know that Couric has had a reputation for decades of being a tough interviewer, and that she wasn't going to whiff on a chance like that.

I also agree with Palin that the McCain campaign should not have barred Piper from the stage the night of McCain's concession speech.

Nobody puts Piper in a corner.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Praise for community members from M-C Businessman of the Year

I would like to thank the committee members who nominated me as the Businessman of the Year, as well as the sponsors for this great event. I was truly honored to receive such an award for only doing the things Mary and I, indeed, love performing.

Too often we underestimate the power of a touch, a smile, a kind word or the smallest act of caring, all of which have the potential to turn a life around. I do not believe we can help everyone, but God expects us to help as many people as we can. This honor would not have been possible without the help of many people in this community and especially my wife, Mary.

Mary is at every event function in which I manage to get us involved. Our son, Eric, is away in the Air Force finishing his Ph.D. at MIT. When I need a power point presentation prepared, I just give it to several MIT students. Mike is the son who keeps me on task. My office staff puts the finishing touches on all my projects, which makes me look great. Friends and church family are always in the background encouraging me; they are my personal cheering section.

When I came up with the idea to feed the community, my church family was there with 25 cooked turkeys and all the trimmings. When it was decided to feed as many people as possible at the Wild Flower Cafe, the Oasis or Charlie's Cafe, the entire community jumped in to help. I believe one of the most important things to learn about life is that each person can make a difference in a community no matter who they are or where they live.

I believe so many people have been helped and lives improved because someone cares. Therefore, lock your house, go across the street, find someone in need and do something for him or her. The service we render to others is really the rent we pay for our room on this earth. The purpose of this world is not “to have and to hold” but “to give and serve.”

Health care reform will secure a bright future

Health care reform passed the House 220-215 in a major victory for the American people. Now we must pass health care reform in the Senate and get a bill to the president's desk to secure America's brightest future.

Active Democrats are fighting to secure decent comprehensive health care options for all Americans.

Alan Grayson stated on the floor of the House that it is time to lead, follow or get out of the way! A public option is a choice; if people want to be abused by greedy health insurance providers and Republicans who tell outright lies about the bill, they can choose to continue with that. Anyone who has insurance they like can keep the plan they already have. Those who want affordable care will elect to participate in a public option of their own free choice; that is freedom!

A fiscally sound public option creates competitive pressure for insurers to stop stealing people blind. It will force insurance companies to lower outrageous premiums and prevent random policy cancellations. It offers the freedom to choose affordable health care instead of being held hostage by greedy dishonest insurance companies.

Joe Lieberman has been called the senator from Aetna! It is time for elected representatives to represent their constituents and not lobbyists and special interests!

The real disgrace is the eager willingness of House Republicans to misrepresent, obstruct and to be so callous about the plight of Americans, especially our soldiers! Stand by our soldiers and the working poor who deserve access to health care.

Senate Republicans systematically violate freedom routinely then scream how they love freedom! Enough with the hypocrisy and lies! Let's all stand up for what is actually right for a change! We succeeded with the GI bill and Medicare; we must pass this reform bill!

OTHER VIEWS

Here’s what Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

... running from consolidation

Idaho Statesman, Boise

In February, the Legislature’s hired auditors waded into the issue of streamlining Idaho’s school system. The auditors deliberately focused their attention on consolidating services ... such as transportation ... They didn’t say much about a touchier topic: trimming administration.

But the Office of Performance Evaluations still said plenty:

- The state’s smallest districts — with enrollments of fewer than 500 students — spend more than twice as much per pupil on administration as the state’s largest districts ...
- In the 2006-07 budget year, Idaho public schools spent more than $90 million on administrative salaries: superintendents, assistant superintendents, principals and assistant principals, secretaries and clerks ...
- Compare this $105.2 million in overhead to some of the school services that did draw auditors’ scrutiny. In 2006-07, the state reimbursed almost $70 million in transportation costs. Sixty-nine districts reported spending more than $17 million on general office supplies. At least 48 districts contracted for $1.3 million in professional development services ...

Why do we discuss this study in such detail? Because educators and politicians won’t. If you’re waiting for someone to take this ball and run with it, don’t.

Even in a budget crisis ... no one wants to talk about consolidating Idaho’s 115 school districts.

So much for the idea that all expenditures are on the table ... So much for all of the rhetoric about running government like a business. When times are tough, businesses look for ways to flatten out their administration and save the essentials. Why can’t school districts?

... Politicians are quick to conjure up the worst-case scenarios about consolidation: Get rid of a rural district, they assume, and schools will inevitably follow. Small towns will lose their neighborhood schools, their cultural and social hubs, their Friday night football games ...

No one can argue that Idaho’s 115 districts represent a model of efficiency. More than half of these districts have fewer than 1,500 students — and given that, it’s hard to see a downside to streamlining.

If the state’s leaders won’t look at the idea now, when dollars are extremely scarce, then they probably never will. They’re placing political expediency ahead of their stated fiscal conservatism.

... Minnick the vulnerable

Lewiston Tribune

If Idaho Congressman Walt Minnick has a master plan for winning re-election, he’s keeping it to himself. In one night, he handed Republicans a reason to want him gone. And he reminded Democrats about why they’re ambivalent about keeping him.

The setting was (this month’s) historic House passage of health care reform. Leading up to it, Minnick voted against an amendment that blocks people who purchase health insurance with government subsidies from obtaining policies that cover abortions.

... good for him. But it was a protest. With House liberals holding their noses in order to pass health care reform, the amendment passed 240-194. Minnick’s (colleague) Mike Simpson, R-Idaho, voted (yes).

All Minnick did was make himself a target ...

Minnick can argue he occupies the sensible middle on the question of abortion rights. It’s also true that anyone who disagrees with Minnick on abortion was already solidly with his opposition. These aren’t the voters he won last time.

But he just gave many of those folks in the GOP’s rank and file some incentives to work for a Republican next year. Which wouldn’t matter so much if Minnick’s troops were equally committed ...

... But Democrats are making with the snide comments about Minnick picking the Democratic label from necessity, not passion. Some are griping about closing their checkbooks or refusing to campaign for them. Some are even threatening to sit out this race on next year’s ballot.

Let’s see. Minnick’s base is demoralized. His opposition’s base is energized? How is that supposed to work? ...

... ISU football

Idaho State Journal, Pocatello

Idaho State University (took) a big gamble by resigning head football coach John Zamberlin to a two-year contract.

... Zamberlin (has) compiled a (5-29) record since arriving at ISU from Central Washington three years ago. That’s the second-worst winning percentage in ISU history.

Zamberlin’s accomplishments have mostly been off the field. No doubt, shaping the character of his players, making sure they graduate and keeping his team active in the community falls under his job description.

He’s done a good job in most of those areas ... But ultimately, Zamberlin was hired to win games, and the numbers aren’t on his side ... it’s clear the community is losing interest in the program, and more of the same won’t suffice ...

Some of Zamberlin’s personnel decisions have been head-scratchers. Before the season’s start, he placed two rookie coaches at key positions — offensive coordinator and offensive line coach. The Bengals’ offense has deteriorated since then.

In Zamberlin’s defense, he didn’t have much time to recruit for his initial class, and a large number of players from his second class went on LDS missions. His third class ... seems to be a strong one. Seven true freshman are contributing this season, which perhaps represents the light at the end of the tunnel that ISU administrators and Athletic Director Jeff Tingey see ...

... ISU has rolled the dice (with Zamberlin’s contract). The university bought out the contract of its former head football coach, Larry Lewis, and he won some games.

Given ISU’s financial state, it would be irresponsible to buy out another coach ... the university has made its decision and will have to stick with it — win, lose or draw.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Act now to help thwart globalization

U.S. sovereignty and independence are under attack by the global elitists who want world government. They are consolidating power and authority while stripping power from the American people which will result in the loss of freedom. Our way of life will be reduced to Third World slavery status.

To thwart their sinister plans, we must:

- Stop ratification of The Copenhagen Treaty which Obama will sign and will transfer U.S. wealth to Third World nations via the United Nations and expand the Kyoto treaty;
- Stop participation in any new governmental authority, including new world financial regulations, a world central bank or a world currency; stop regional government under the North American Union, amnesty for illegal aliens and federal funding for the “NAFTA Superhighway”;

- Stop funding for the International Monetary Fund, World Bank and foreign countries which are unconstitutional;
- Get out of the communist-controlled United Nations by passing H.R. 1146. The U.N. is the world government in the making and where the elitists are consolidating power via various treaties like the proposed Law of the Sea Treaty;
- Stop cap and trade legislation which will destroy American industry and double our energy costs while China and India, two of the planet’s greatest polluters, are exempt. The U.S. Senate rejected the Kyoto Climate Treaty 95 to 0 because it would destroy American industry;
- Audit the elitists controlled Federal Reserve System which manipulates money supplies, causes runaway inflation and makes the elitists wealthier while destroying the middle class;

- Stop participation in no-win, undeclared wars that compromise freedom for temporary security. Our reduced military is stretched to the breaking point while our nation’s borders are nearly wide open to terrorists and illegal aliens.
- Please contact our senators and congressmen to oppose freedom-destroying globalization.

CASE NO. 02-2-34943-9 SEA

NOTICE OF PROPOSED CLASS ACTION SETTLEMENT AND FAIRNESS HEARING

IF YOU ARE A VERIZON NORTHWEST CUSTOMER WHO PAID FOR *69 SERVICE A PROPOSED CLASS ACTION SETTLEMENT COULD AFFECT YOUR RIGHTS

A Settlement has been proposed in a class action lawsuit with Verizon Northwest Inc. and other Verizon entities.

WHAT IS THE LAWSUIT ABOUT?
The lawsuit claims that Verizon Northwest Inc. (“VNI”) and other Verizon entities misrepresented the capabilities of the *69 Service and improperly charged customers in instances where the service did not provide a dialable number for the last incoming call and/or did not automatically return the call. VNI and the other Verizon entities deny all wrongdoing and liability related to these claims but VNI has agreed to settle the case.

AM I A MEMBER OF THE SETTLEMENT CLASS?
You are a member of the Settlement Class if you are or were a VNI customer who, between December 1, 1996, and November 16, 2009, paid for the *69 Service and were not provided with the number of the last incoming call and/or given the opportunity to have the call automatically returned.

WHAT DOES THE SETTLEMENT PROVIDE?
Under the Settlement, VNI has agreed to provide a credit or payment in the amount of $3.50 to Settlement Class Members who file claims verifying that they paid for the *69 Service and did not receive the number of the last incoming call and/or the opportunity to have the call automatically returned. VNI also filed amended tariffs with the governing public utility commissions in Washington, Oregon, and Idaho for the *69 Service and revised advertising and promotional materials for the *69 Service in accordance with the amended tariffs.

WHAT ARE MY LEGAL RIGHTS AND OPTIONS?

- File a Claim. You must remain in the Settlement Class to file a claim. You will be bound by the Court’s ruling, but you can object to the Settlement. Claims must be filed by March 19, 2010. By remaining in the Settlement Class, you will release claims against VNI and other Verizon entities, as outlined in the detailed Notice, available below. Please read the Release carefully, as it affects your legal rights.
- Exclude yourself and keep your right to sue VNI and other Verizon entities. Your written request for exclusion must be postmarked by February 12, 2010.
- Object to the Settlement. If you do not exclude yourself from the Settlement Class, you can object to the Settlement at the Fairness Hearing. You can speak on your own behalf or hire your own lawyer to speak for you, but if you do this, your lawyer must file a Notice of Appearance. Your written objection must be postmarked by February 12, 2010.

Details on how to file a claim and submit a valid request for exclusion or objection are available at the Web site, address and toll-free number listed below.

WHEN WILL THE FAIRNESS HEARING BE HELD?
The Court will decide whether to approve the Settlement at the Fairness Hearing to be held on February 26, 2010 at 9:00 a.m.

California requires TVs to be more energy-efficient

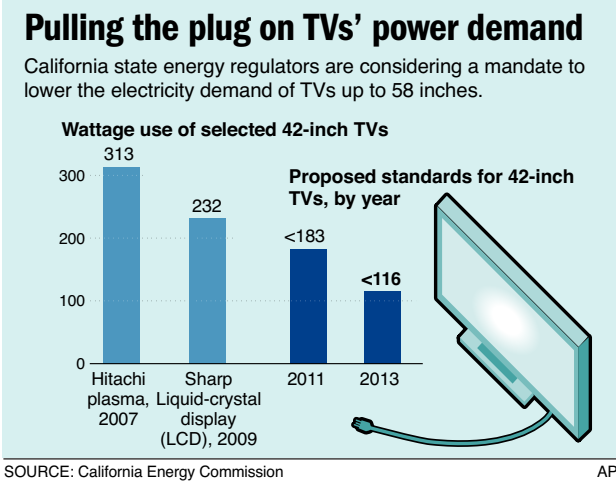

By Samantha Young
Associated Press writer

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — California regulators adopted the nation's first energy-efficiency standards for televisions Wednesday in hopes of reducing electricity use at a time when millions of American households are switching to power-hungry, wide-view, flat-screen, high-definition sets.

The 5-0 vote by the California Energy Commission is just the latest effort by the state to secure its place in the forefront of the environmental movement.

California represents such a big consumer market that environmental groups hope the new standards will lead manufacturers to make energy-saving TVs for the rest of the nation, just as California's stringent fuel standards for cars and trucks forced automakers to produce more efficient models for all of the U.S.

"Once again, California is leading the way, and we hope others will follow," said Noah Horowitz, senior scientist at the Natural Resources Defense Council.

The commission estimates that TVs account for about 10 percent of a home's electricity use. The fear is that energy use will rise as people buy bigger, more elaborate TVs, put more of them in their homes, and watch them longer.

The regulations requiring televisions to be more efficient will be phased in beginning in 2011. The standards will become even tougher in 2013, with only a quarter of all TVs currently on the market meeting the efficiency requirements.

"We have every confidence this industry will be able to meet the rule and then some," Energy Commissioner Julia Levin said. "It will save consumers money, it will help protect public health, and it will spark innovation."

Some manufacturers warned that the regulations will cripple innovation, limit consumer choice and hurt California stores, because people could simply buy TVs out of state or online.

The industry also complained that manufacturers will be forced to make televisions with poorer picture quality and fewer features than those sold elsewhere in the U.S.

"Instead of allowing customers to choose the products they want, the commission has decided to impose arbitrary standards that will hamper innovation and limit consumer choice," said Jason Oxman, a vice president with the Consumer Electronics Association. "It will result in higher prices for consumers, job losses for Californians, and lost tax revenue for the state."

Californians buy about 11 percent of the 35.4 million TVs sold in the U.S. each year, according to industry figures. The industry group said it was already working with the federal government to promote more efficient TVs through the federal Energy Star program.

At least one TV manufacturer has said it could meet the standards — Vizio Inc., the largest seller of flat screens.

The new standards will apply to new televisions up to 58 inches. Those larger than 58 inches, which account for no more than 3 percent of the market, were left out in a concession to sellers of high-end home-theater TVs. But the commission is expected to regulate them in the future.

The average plasma TV uses more than three times as much energy as an old cathode-ray tube set. Liquid-crystal display, or LCD, TVs use about 43 percent more energy than tube sets, according to Pacific Gas & Electric Co., the state's biggest utility.

LCDs now account for about 90 percent of the 4 million TVs sold in California each year.

Idaho unemployment rate pegged at 9 percent

BOISE (AP) — The U.S. Labor Department has released new October unemployment figures that put the state's jobless rate at 9 percent.

The adjusted unemployment figure was released Wednesday. The Labor Department's seasonally adjusted rate is a tenth of a percentage point higher than the state forecast released earlier this month.

Overall, the state estimates that a record 67,800

Idaho workers are out of work, with total employment dropping below 686,000, the lowest since February 2005.

The last time Idaho's unemployment rate was at 9 percent was in 1983.

The state's steady jobless rate has also taken a toll on the unemployment insurance trust fund. Since December 2007, the fund has paid out a record $558 million in state and federal benefits to more than 100,000 claimants.

Idaho jobless rate hits 9 percent

Times-News staff

October's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate hit 9 percent in Idaho for the first time since the aftermath of the double dip recessions in the early 1980s.

The U.S. Department of Labor on Wednesday revised Idaho's October rate upward by a tenth of a percentage point from the forecast rate on Nov. 6.

Based on additional statistical information, the government found that not only did the 1,000 new entrants into the labor force fail to find work but over 600 who had jobs in September did not work in October.

That drove the number of workers without jobs in October to a record 67,800 as total employment dropped below 686,000 for the first time since

The last time Idaho's unemployment rate was 9 percent was in June 1983.

February 2005.

The last time Idaho's unemployment rate was 9 percent was in June 1983.

The rapid and severe impact on Idaho of the recession that began in December 2007 pushed payment of unemployment insurance benefits to an unprecedented level in 2009. Through mid-November the state paid a record $558 million in state and federal unemployment benefits to over 100,000 claimants. The old record was $247 million in 2008.

That has drained the Idaho Unemployment

Insurance Trust Fund and required the state to borrow $75.2 million so far from the federal government to continue state benefit payments. Twenty-three other states and the Virgin Islands have borrowed another $20 billion, and Idaho expects to borrow another $125 million over the next 15 months.

Because of the record benefit demand that has drained the trust fund, the unemployment insurance tax rates for Idaho employers will more than double in 2010 and likely remain at that level for the following two years. State law calculates the rates. That law is also reducing the maximum weekly benefit a jobless worker can receive from $362 this year to $334 next, which translates into a reduction of more than $18 million in benefit payments in 2010.

Upscale McDonald's brings European style to New York City

By Karen Matthews
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Danish Modern furniture. Flat-screen TVs. Free Wi-Fi. You want fries with that?

A McDonald's in midtown Manhattan became the first in the U.S. this fall to undergo a sleek, European-style makeover similar to what McDonald's has done at thousands of outlets in France and the United Kingdom.

The eatery is outfitted with outlets for plugging in laptops, upholstered vinyl chairs instead of Fiberglass seats bolted to the floor, subdued lighting and employees whose all-black uniforms suggest a hip boutique.

"It's like a lounge," said Kimberly Burgess, one of many patrons who did a double take after entering the newly renovated restaurant in Manhattan's Chelsea section. "It's so different from all the other McDonald's. It's beautiful."

Franchise owner Paul Hendel said customers have settled down in a restaurant not known for patrons lingering over lunch.

More travelers expected this Thanksgiving weekend

Times-News staff

Idaho is expected to see slightly more travelers during the Thanksgiving weekend this year, a small sign of the improving economy.

AAA of Idaho estimates that 146,400 Idahoans will be passengers or drivers in motor vehicles traveling 50 miles or more from home this holiday period.

That's good news for retailers and travelers' services, which saw a steep decline in business during the holiday season in 2008.

AAA officials said they expect 38.4 million Americans will travel 50 miles or more from home during the 2009 Thanksgiving weekend — up 1.4 percent from a year ago.

Compared to last year's 25 percent decline in Thanksgiving travel, the increase is not significant in real numbers, but AAA officials said the travel intentions suggest there is an expectation among Americans that the economy is on the mend and better times are closer to reality.

"The increase in travel suggests that even though Americans are very much aware of high unemployment numbers and the stresses on their pocket-books, they are feeling more optimistic this year,"

The estimated number of people who will travel 50 miles or more in motor vehicles from their home during the Thanksgiving weekend.

Americans — 38.4 million said AAA Idaho spokesman Dave Carlson.

The number of travelers by automobile is expected to be 33.2 million in 2009 compared to 32.5 million last year, an increase of 2.1 percent.

However, the number of travelers by air is expected to be 2.3 million compared in 2.5 million in 2008, down 6.7 percent. The number of those traveling by "other" means, including trains, watercraft, buses and multiple modes of transportation, is expected to be 2.9 million compared to 2.8 million last year, an increase of 1.2 percent.

Last Thanksgiving's 25.2 percent drop in travel came in the wake of the ongoing housing and financial crisis. Roughly, a half million more people will travel this year, Carlson said.

Idaho's average price for a gallon of regular grade gasoline is $2.68, up 7 cents in the past month. The current U.S. average price is $2.63, also up 7 cents during the same time.

Customer gifts shouldn't be economic casualties

Small business owners with cash flow problems might be tempted during yet another difficult holiday season to forgo gifts for clients or customers. Many look at gifts as budget items that just aren't critical.

There's another, bigger-picture way to look at business giving. Gifts selected with care convey to customers how important they are, and how much an owner will continue to value their relationship going forward.

They also don't have to break the bank. They can be very small but still be meaningful. Or an owner can splurge on just a few of his or her biggest customers.

SMALL TALK
Joyce M. Rosenberg

• • •

Many company owners see holiday gifts as an investment in their companies, one that will continue to pay off as business gets better.

Even in a difficult economy, Terri Slater doesn't think it's a good idea to scrimp on client gifts.

"I know it's rough out there and people are cutting back, but this is one area where you really say, you can't afford to" stop giving, said Slater, who runs Healthy Lifestyle Publicity, based in Boca Raton, Fla. "I think it's important to acknowledge the people you work with and who are contributing to your success."

"I've never missed a year. I've never cut back," she said, and explained that while she did briefly consider not giving client gifts this year as she lost some revenue, "I wouldn't feel right about it."

Slater tries to match the gift with a client's personality, so one might get a tower of chocolates, while another will get a high-quality pen.

• • •

The pens, mugs and calendars that used to be staples of companies' gift-giving have been falling out of favor in recent years and cost is just one reason. Many small business owners have tried in recent years to give clients and customers gifts that help build or cement a relationship, and a mug or a pen just doesn't do that.

Of course, if you run a retail business or a service business like a gas station or dry cleaner, handing out these smaller gifts is more feasible than giving personalized ones (although you might want to make an extra effort for some of your very best customers). And if you're aiming for name recognition or making sure your phone number is easy for a customer to find, refrigerator magnets can help you achieve that goal.

But you might want to give something that your customers will appreciate even more — a discount. Giving customers 10 percent off their dry cleaning

Judge rejects AT&T's bid to pull Verizon ads

ATLANTA (AP) — A federal judge on Wednesday denied a request by AT&T Inc. to force competitor Verizon Wireless to pull its “There’s a Map for That” commercials.

But the judge scheduled a Dec. 16 hearing to give the AT&T attorneys another chance to make their case.

AT&T filed the lawsuit in federal court in Atlanta earlier this month and asked for a temporary restraining order and a permanent injunction to stop the ads. It contends they are misleading and amount to deceptive trade practices.

Verizon argues that the commercials are valid and truthful.

The ads show maps of the United States with areas highlighted to depict where third generation — or “3G” — network coverage is available. A map of the country nearly covered with red dots is shown to depict Verizon’s coverage, while a map with some blue areas and a lot of blank space is

The Dow fell 11.11, or 0.1 percent, to 10,426.31, after sliding as much as 77 points in morning trading. The broader S&P 500 index slipped 0.52, or 0.1 percent, to 1,109.80, while the Nasdaq fell 10.64, or 0.5 percent, to 2,193.14.

The dollar mostly fell against other major currencies. That drove demand for gold and other metals.

Bond prices fell, pushing yields higher. The yield on the benchmark 10-year Treasury note rose to 3.37 percent from 3.33 percent late Tuesday.

Falling stocks narrowly outpaced those that rose on the New York Stock Exchange, where consolidated volume came to 4.3 billion shares compared with 3.9 billion Tuesday.

The Russell 2000 index of smaller companies fell 2.19, or 0.4 percent, to 600.15.

Overseas, Britain’s FTSE 100 fell 0.1 percent, Germany’s DAX index gained 0.2 percent, and France’s CAC-40 slipped less than 0.1 percent. Japan’s Nikkei stock average fell 0.6 percent.

bank last year and the North American Securities Administrators Association launched an inquiry of the bank’s subsidiaries over sales of so-called auction-rate securities. The investments resemble corporate debt, except that the rate of interest they pay is frequently reset at auctions.

A number of companies, charities and individual investors were told the securities were as safe as cash. But the $330 billion market collapsed in February 2008, and investors’ accounts were frozen.

Wells Fargo said Wednesday it agreed to buy back the securities from customers nationwide. The company also agreed to pay a $1.9 million fine while not admitting any wrongdoing.

“Wells Fargo convinced thousands of investors to purchase auction-rate securities with promises of robust returns and liquidity, but when the market collapsed, investors were left out in the cold,”

A Wells Fargo Bank logo is seen in Sunnyvale, Calif. The North American Securities Administrators Association says Wells Fargo has agreed to repurchase about $1.3 billion in soured auction-rate securities from clients.

Brown said in a written statement. “Based on misleading advice, investors bought these risky securities. Now, retail investors and small businesses are finally getting their money back.”

Wells Fargo is one of more than a dozen financial firms that have agreed with regulators to buy back the risky investments, which lost most of their value when the market for them evaporated early in 2008 as the credit crisis worsened.

Financial companies have agreed to repurchase more than $61 billion in the securities.

Wells Fargo said that before any firm agreed to buy back such securities, it started lending money at favorable rates to customers who purchased the securities at until the issuers could refinance the debt.

“While there has been progress, redemptions by issuers have not occurred as fast as anyone would have hoped or predicted,” Charles W. Daggs, CEO of Wells Fargo Investments LLC, said in a statement Wednesday. “We are glad to have resolved this for our customers through an actual repurchase of their ARS.”

Senate unveils $849 billion health care bill

By Shailagh Murray and Lori Montgomery
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid presented an $849 billion health-care overhaul package on Wednesday that would extend coverage to 31 million Americans and reform insurance practices while adding an array of tax increases, including a rise in payroll taxes for high earners.

Democratic leaders were jubilant that early estimates from congressional budget analysts indicated that the Senate bill would cut federal deficits by $127 billion over the next decade. That projection represents the biggest cost savings of any legislation to come before the House or Senate this year, but the measure's effective date also was pushed back by one year, to 2014. Savings could prove far more significant in the long run, Democrats said, noting estimates that suggest the Senate bill would cut as much as $650 billion from federal deficits over the second 10 years after becoming law.

Those projected reductions could prove critical in winning the support of three wavering moderate Democrats whose votes Reid, D-Nev., must secure to bring the legislation to the floor before the Senate breaks for Thanksgiving. But Reid also stacked the bill with provisions sought by liberals, including a public insurance option, albeit a version with an opt-out clause for states.

The legislation received a positive response from across the Democratic spectrum. "This is the bill that we've been fighting for," said Sen. Sherrod Brown, D-Ohio, who pressed Reid to revive the public option. Sen. Kent Conrad of North Dakota, the budget chairman and a leading Democratic fiscal hawk, said after a briefing on the bill, "I was very impressed by what Senator Reid has done."

The Senate measure is similar in scope to legislation the House approved earlier this month. It would require most people to buy insurance, and if their employers did not offer affordable coverage, they would be able to shop for policies on new state-based "exchanges" that would function as marketplaces for individual coverage. Insurance companies would have to abide by broad new rules that would ban practices such as denying coverage based on preexisting conditions.

But the bills diverge on other key provisions. The House version would require all but the smallest businesses to offer insurance, while the Senate measure would merely fine companies for not offering affordable coverage. The Senate bill would bar illegal immigrants from buying insurance through the exchanges, while the House would restrict access only to subsidies and federal programs such as Medicaid, which would be vastly expanded under both bills.

Another potential flashpoint is abortion coverage. The issue sparked a major battle in the House, forcing Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., to agree to an amendment that would bar people who receive federal subsidies for insurance coverage from using that money to purchase policies that pay for abortion.

Reid took a different approach, proposing to establish a "firewall" that would segregate private premiums from federal funding if abortion coverage were offered in the public insurance plan. "I couldn't be happier," said Sen. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., an abortion rights advocate who was working to forge a compromise on the issue. "For those who want to keep abortion out of this bill, Senator Reid did it the right way."

Obama, Holder predict conviction in Sept. 11 case

By Devlin Barrett
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — From opposite ends of the globe, President Barack Obama and Attorney General Eric Holder firmly rejected criticism Wednesday of the planned New York trial of the professed Sept. 11 mastermind and predicted Khalid Sheikh Mohammed would be exposed as a murderous coward, convicted and executed.

"Failure is not an option," Holder declared.

The president, in a series of TV interviews during his trip to Asia, said those offended by the legal rights accorded Mohammed by virtue of his facing a civilian trial rather than a military tribunal won't find it "offensive at all when he's convicted and when the death penalty is applied to him."

Obama, who is a lawyer, quickly added that he did not mean to suggest he was prejudging the outcome of Mohammed's trial. "I'm not going to be in that courtroom," he said. "That's the job of the prosecutors, the judge and the jury."

The president said in interviews broadcast on NBC and CNN that experienced prosecutors in the case who specialize in terrorism have offered assurances that "we'll convict this person with the evidence they've got, going through our system."

In Washington, the Senate Judiciary Committee questioned Holder for hours about his decision to send Mohammed and four other prisoners from the U.S. military detention center at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, to New York for trial in a federal courthouse that is blocks from the site of the World Trade Center towers destroyed in the 9/11 attacks in 2001.

The attorney general said he is certain the men will be convicted, but even if a suspect were acquitted, "that doesn't mean that person would be released into our country."

Tempers flared when Sen. Jon Kyl, R-Ariz., challenged Holder to say how a civilian trial could be the best idea, since Mohammed had previously sought to plead guilty before a military commission.

"How can you be more likely to get a conviction in a (civilian) court than that?" pressed Kyl, to applause from some in the hearing room.

The attorney general said his decision was not based "on the whims or the desires of Khalid Sheikh Mohammed. ... He will not select the prosecution venue. I will. And I have."

South Korea welcomes Obama amid trade tensions

By Jennifer Loven
Associated Press writer

SEOUL, South Korea — Treated to friendly roadside crowds and an elaborate welcome, President Obama sped into the last round of his diplomacy tour in Asia today, a visit in South Korea.

Obama joined President Lee Myung-bak at the Blue House, South Korea's version of the White House, where the U.S. leader took in spectacular views of the hills of Seoul on a chilly, gray morning. Obama stood on red-carpeted steps and looked out on military regiments in colorful garb and flagwaving children.

The leaders walked down to the sprawling manicured lawn, taking in the pageantry as Obama shook hands. It was symbolic of America's ever-improving relations with South Korea, a crucial Asian ally.

"This was the most spectacular ceremony for a state visit we have been involved with," Obama gushed as the two leaders began their meetings. Said Lee of Obama's Asia trip: "You saved the best for last."

The two men were meeting privately before they were scheduled to make formal statements. In brief comments before reporters, Obama praised the success of the South Korean economy, saying it was one reason why the nation has become an important player on the world stage.

A stalled trade agreement, though, still looms as a concern for the economic powerhouses.

Obama, winding up his weeklong Asian journey, is expected to emphasize the two nations' unified efforts to prod a defiant North Korea out of its nuclear weapons program. He's also welcoming South Korea's return to helping U.S. efforts in Afghanistan.

Obama was embarking on perhaps the easiest leg of his whirlwind four-country Asian trip that has taken him away from Washington for the longest stretch of his presidency.

He made brief stops in Tokyo and Singapore before a longer, ceremony-filled visit to China.

Sebelius: Mammograms still vital in saving lives

By Randolph E. Schmid
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Women should continue getting regular mammograms starting at age 40, Health and Human Services Secretary Kathleen Sebelius said Wednesday, moving to douse confusion caused by a task-force recommendation two days earlier.

Sebelius issued her statement following a government panel's recommendation on Monday, that said most women don't need mammograms in their 40s and should get one every two years starting at 50.

That recommendation was a break with the American Cancer Society's long-standing position that women should get screening mammograms starting at age 40.

The task force does "not set federal policy and they don't determine what services are covered by the federal government," Sebelius said.

Medicare, which covers older Americans and some younger ones who are disabled, provides women on Medicare coverage for an annual mammogram at age 40 and older.

Sebelius noted that there has been debate about the age at which routine mammograms should begin, and how often they should be given.

"The task force has presented some new evidence for consideration but our policies remain unchanged," she said. "Indeed, I would be very surprised if any private insurance company changed its mammography coverage decisions as a result of this action."

"My message to women is simple. Mammograms have always been an important lifesaving tool in the fight against breast cancer and they ss and make the decision that is right for you," Sebelius said.

In the meantime, she added, it is clear that more research is needed into ways to help women prevent and fight breast cancer.

The recommendations from the task force have left women across the country confused about which advice to take. It also quickly led to charges from opponents of changing health care policy that it is an example of what could be expected from government-managed care.

In its report the panel of doctors and scientists concluded that such early and frequent screenings often lead to false alarms and unnecessary biopsies, without substantially improving women's odds of survival.

Guards on Maersk Alabama repel second pirate attack

By Jason Straziuso
Associated Press writer

NAIROBI, Kenya — This time the Maersk Alabama was ready. This time it did what a multinational naval force couldn't. Guards used guns and a sound blaster Wednesday to repel the second pirate attack on the U.S.-flagged ship in seven months.

But while the effort was hailed by one naval commander "as a great example of how merchant mariners can take pro-active action to prevent being attacked," it highlighted a growing schism over how ships traveling pirate-infested waters should deal with the problem.

The U.N.'s maritime agency warns against putting arms on ships although that is increasingly the case amid unrelenting hijacking attempts by young and impoverished Somalis seeking multimillion-dollar pay-days.

"Somali pirates understand one thing and only one thing, and that's force," said Capt. Joseph Murphy, a professor at the Massachusetts Maritime Academy and the father of a sailor aboard the Maersk Alabama the first time it was hijacked in April.

Then, pirates took ship captain Richard Phillips hostage, holding him at gunpoint in a lifeboat for five days. U.S. Navy SEAL sharpshooters freed Phillips while killing three pirates.

Wednesday, the ship had weapons on board to save itself.

Despite an increased international flotilla of warships off the Horn of Africa, maritime figures indicate the number of ship boardings has remained about the same in the past year. And pirate attacks have spiked around the globe in 2009, according to a report released this week.

The number of attacks worldwide rose to 306 between January and September, surpassing the 293 incidents recorded throughout 2008, according to the International Maritime Bureau's piracy reporting center in Kuala Lumpur. Somali pirate activity off the Gulf of Aden, one of the world's busiest sea lanes, accounted for at least 135 of the cases. There were 44 pirate boardings and hijackings by Somali pirates in 2008 and 42 so far this year, according to the bureau.

Somali pirates hold 11 ships and 254 crew, a U.N. diplomat said. Attacks have increased in recent weeks as the monsoon season subsided, and pirates in that area are expanding their reach well into the Indian Ocean.

On Wednesday, a self-proclaimed pirate said the captain of a chemical tanker hijacked Monday had died of wounds suffered during the ship's hijacking. The pirate, Sa'id, who gave only one name for fear of reprisals, said the captain died Tuesday night from internal bleeding. The chemical tanker Theresa was taken Monday with 28 North Korean crew, the EU naval force said.

Poverty and hunger are driving the number of pirate attacks in the Gulf of Aden and the Indian Ocean around Somalia, which has not had a central government since 1991 and is bloodied by war since then.

Turkey for the table

Turkey seasons currently open in the state include units in the Panhandle, Clearwater and Upper Snake regions. For diehard hunters, wild turkeys provide good table fare for Thanksgiving dinner.

Fall turkey hunts can be challenging but birds provide good holiday dinners, hunters say

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

If you like to provide your own table fare for the holidays, you might want to consider a turkey hunt.

Only thing is, you'd have to drive long distances to bag your bird. There are no general turkey seasons in the Magic Valley — only controlled spring hunts.

But according to John Howard, president of the South Hills Strutters, turkey interest in the area is growing.

South-central Idaho has two types of turkeys — Merriam, which look like the turkey pictured here, and Rio Grande.

Wendell resident Jerry Chapman became a turkey hunter after a friend introduced him to the sport in the late 1990s. After that he was hooked.

In October he took his two children — 14-year-old Jordan and 13-year-old Kelsey — to hunt turkeys on private land in the Orofino area, and brought back a bird they plan to cook on Thanksgiving.

It wasn't the kids' first time hunting. Hiding behind their blinds, they watched as a number of turkeys approached. At one time his son used his voice to imitate a turkey — and the birds came running.

"It was the different pitch of his voice or something, but they started gobbling," he said.

Besides using blinds, successful turkey hunting often requires developing good relationships with landowners, he said.

"There's an awful lot of turkeys on private land," Chapman said, noting that he usually brings homemade jellies or other gifts to give landowners in appreciation for allowing him to hunt on their property.

"There's no lease fee or anything like that, you just treat them nice," he said.

The South Hills Strutters is the Twin Falls chapter of the National Wild Turkey Federation, and has about 350 members. The club participates in a number of activities throughout the year, including conservation efforts in the South Hills, where there's a number of Rio Grande turkeys.

Howard, a life-long outdoorsman, has hunted wild turkeys in a number of places including Colorado, South Dakota and Mexico. He has three turkeys mounted on the walls of his office at Sportsman's Warehouse in Twin Falls, where he works as store manager. His collection includes a Rio Grande bagged in Texas, a Merriam he took in South Dakota, and a plump Gould from Mexico.

The best time to hunt turkeys in Idaho is in spring, Howard said, because the birds respond better to decoys and calls. The weather is warmer. Unless you live near a turkey zone, those who bag the birds in fall are usually already on a hunt for elk or white-tailed deer, he said. They'll bring along their shotgun in case they see a turkey as they scour for big game.

That's how Chapman's brother, Joe Chapman of Hagerman, bags fall turkeys.

Few areas in the state are currently open to turkey hunts. They include units in the Panhandle, Clearwater and Upper Snake regions. For more information: pages 30-40 in Fish and Game's 2009-10 "Upland Game, Furbearer & Turkey Seasons and Rules" booklet.

Rio Grande turkeys are plentiful in the South Hills, according to John Howard, president of Twin Falls Chapter of the National Wild Turkey Federation.

The special compression legging, calf-squeezing sock

When you pay $38 for a pair of socks — that's $19 per foot, not including tax — they had better be something special. The EX-Celerator Socks from Injinji Footwear Inc., which have individual toe slots and an over-the-calf compression fit, do indeed qualify as special. Putting them on is a task. The compression legging, made of a calf-squeezing nylon/Lycra fiber blend, is a tight fit. Add Injinji's patented "five-toe-sleeve technology," where each piggy has to be wiggled into place, and pulling on a pair is no fast feat.

But once adjusted and on, the socks feel great. They fit like no other sock I have worn, hugging toes, feet, ankles and calves like a second skin.

There is an adjustment period to getting accustomed to the feeling of your toes separated. But on a run or hike, you forget about the "foot gloves" below after a few minutes on the go.

Injinji, which sells a line of toe-socks, touts the toe separation as preventing common foot problems like blisters, hotspots, moisture build-up, and "fungal conditions."

In my test, including running and hiking in the EX-Celerator socks, the fabric-between-the-toes fit did noticeably prevent rubbing.

However, I do not commonly get blisters between my toes, so I couldn't assess the socks' effectiveness in that area.

The second technology story with this sock, the compression leg, is marketed as "fueling circulation to promote faster muscle recovery and prevent fatigue during and after exercise."

T.F. Gun Club hosts turkey shoots

The Twin Falls Gun Club's next turkey shoot will be Sunday from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. November's shooting dates and sponsor groups include:

- Sunday, Twin Falls Gun Club
- Nov. 29, KMVT Toys for Tots

Shoot for turkeys, ham, bacon, steaks and other prizes. Guarantee cards and shells available. Kitchen will be open.

Rifle & Pistol clubs schedule events

The Magic Valley .22-cal. Gallery League, sponsored by the Buhl, Rupert and Twin Falls Rifle & Pistol clubs is hosting a 16-week .22. cal competition every Friday night. The first event was Nov. 6; the next event is Friday. Sign up at 6 p.m., shooting begins at about 6:30 p.m.

Indoor 40-shot, four-position rifle and/or 60-shot timed-pistol league. All men, women, juniors, and new shooters welcome.

Each week's shooting location rotates from an assigned range — Buhl, Twin Falls or Rupert — to your local club. Bring your own ammo. Top awards given at end-of-year banquet.

Cost is a one-time fee of $8 for pistol, $8 for rifle or $15 for both; $5 for juniors. Membership to one of the clubs is required; family discounts available.

"It's just not as exciting for me to hunt turkeys in the fall," Joe Chapman said. "There's something about seeing a strutting gobbler (in spring). It's really cool."

And it's addictive, he said.

The hunt for camouflage that fools prey

By Michael Virtanen
Associated Press writer

GLENVILLE, N.Y. — Covered in his old forest camouflage, Steve Balser proved he's nearly invisible to humans. His hunting partner walked within 25 feet and didn't see him.

"I'm just not that sure about deer," Balser said.

His suspicions are backed up by scientists who have studied the sensory advantages deer have over hunters. Hence the continuing quest for strategies and camouflage that will tip the odds in hunters' favor.

Balser's pants, jacket, hat and mask all have brown, gray and green patterns that resemble the autumn hardwood forests of upstate New York. While he can also sit quietly, the longtime outdoorsman is pretty sure that his human smell is a dead giveaway to wildlife, despite garments meant to conceal that as well.

Researchers studying animal vision and behavior say that prey have certain evolutionary advantages in perception, triggering their decisions to run or hide. Science's understanding, based on both biological analysis and behavior, isn't complete, but it supports several hunter theories, including that superior sense of smell, which deer use to communicate, find food and avoid predators.

"The most important thing is to watch the wind. ... Anything downwind doesn't exist to your nose," said Dr. Karl Miller, a professor of wildlife ecology and management at the University of Georgia. And while deer probably hear only a little better than people, in the higher frequencies, they have a better sense of unusual sounds and large external ears that help them localize the source, he said.

Scientists say you also have to appear initially to be something that's not a threat.

That led to modern camouflage, evolving from red and black checked coats that broke up a hunter's silhouette to clothing patterns that mimic the fields and forests, to raggedy suits that resemble a fluttering leaf and brush pile, to digitally designed

Hunter Cal Welch wears new digital camouflage called Optifade, in Glenville, N.Y., Oct. 29. Modern camouflage has evolved from red-and-black checked coats that broke up a hunter's silhouette to patterns that mimic the fields and forests, to raggedy suits that resemble a pile of fluttering leaves and brush, to more recent digitally designed clothing meant to fool a deer's eye into seeing nothing recognizable at all.

"Based on some very preliminary stuff we've done, deer don't see quite as clearly as we do. They don't see 20/20. That's not their purpose — to see detail. Their purpose is to see movement."

clothing meant to fool a deer's eye into seeing nothing recognizable at all.

"Based on some very preliminary stuff we've done, deer don't see quite as clearly as we do," said Miller, who is also a hunter. "They don't see 20/20. That's not their purpose — to see detail. Their purpose is to see movement."

That, said Miller, co-author of a 2008 paper on the visual specialization of white-tailed deer, is something they do very well. "They have a harder time identifying an object, but as soon as you move on a deer, it busts you," he said.

They also see far better than people in dim light and have a larger pupil. Like dogs and horses, they have a reflective layer behind the retina that causes light to hit their photoreceptor rods and cones twice. With big eyes on both sides of their head that don't constantly move like human eyes, they have a 300-degree field of vision, giving them an advantage in detecting motion even at the periphery, Miller said.

In their 2005 paper in the journal Equine Ophthalmology, researchers Paul Miller and Christopher Murphy identified the vision issue for prey animals, processing a vast amount of information for the important bits that require attention.

"A critical aspect of vision is that an object (a wolf, for example), is identified as separate from its surroundings (dense vegetation)," they wrote. "Because this distinction is so important for survival, animals (including humans) with normal vision, can 'see' an object if it differs sufficiently from its surroundings in any one of five different aspects: luminance, motion, texture, binocular disparity (depth), or color."

Cal Welch estimated he's seen hundreds of deer in 53 years of hunting and shot at least 20, though not the three that came within 25 feet of him last year during turkey season. "I've found that even wearing orange, when you don't move, the deer don't see you," he said.

He's also found he can raise his rifle or pivot very slowly without alarming the animals. He'd been told early by an old hunter not to wear anything shiny that can reflect light, or blue jeans, which make an unusual noise if they rub against something.

"Basically as hunters we talk to other hunters. Between you and me, there's a lot of BS that goes around. You really have to sort it out," Welch said.

There's scientific support for both points, that deer see shininess in the bright part of the spectrum, and they see color, though in a more limited range than people. They have photo pigments on their cones for blues and yellows, making blue blobs a likely cause for alarm.

"They don't see as far into the red part of the spectrum as we do, which means they don't see blaze orange the way that we do," Miller said.

It's probably as a less intense color, and there's probably no reason for hunters to avoid wearing it as a safety measure, since there are often a lot of oranges in the autumn woods, but you need to break it up with a pattern so it doesn't look to a deer like a large, strange blob, he said.

Efforts are under way to protect our vanishing dark skies

From my backyard three miles south of downtown Twin Falls, I can on clear nights see the Milky Way arching overhead. But for two-thirds of the American population, whose night sky is dominated by city lights, the Milky Way is invisible.

Obviously, light pollution is at its worst where population density is highest.

But there's more to finding the darkest skies than avoiding metropolitan areas. Rural skies are dark, but remoteness alone does not guarantee immunity from light pollution's impact.

On flat terrain, cities can light up the skies for many miles around.

Intervening mountains can effectively screen a city's light pollution, but mountaintops above populated valleys can be badly impacted. For example, California's Palomar Mountain, home of the 200-inch telescope, has a clear line of sight to Escondido and the Interstate 78 corridor, and all its stray light. And while the Magic Valley's lights may be pretty as seen from Sweetzer Summit, it comes at a cost to the South Hills' night sky beauty.

In 2001, Italian researchers created a global light pollution map, using satellite data and including the effects of mountain screening, elevation, and other geographical factors. Their data can be viewed at www.lightpollution.it/dmsp.

In Idaho, two areas stand out for their dark skies. One is the Frank Church Wilderness. More accessible and closer to home is southwestern Owyhee County, which lies at the eastern edge of one of the largest remaining dark sky regions in the lower 48.

Preservation efforts are being taken. In 1999, Torrence Barrens in Ontario, Canada, was des-

Idaho shuts another wolf hunting zone

BOISE (AP) — State officials say hunters have reached their limit for killing wolves in a hunting zone in northern Idaho.

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game on Tuesday closed the Dworshak-Elk City zone after hunters reached the quota of 18 wolves for the area.

It's the third zone where the department has put an end to wolf hunting for the season after hunters reached established bag limits.

Overall, the officials report hunters have killed

106 wolves across all 12 statewide hunting zones.

The state set a hunting quota of 220 wolves for the season, which began earlier this year and ends next month.

Other zones closed are in the Upper Salmon and the McCall-Weiser area.

2 Idaho men arrested after night deer hunt

BOISE (AP) — A pair of southwestern Idaho men were arrested after shooting at a deer from a public road using artificial light early Sunday morning in eastern Boise.

Boise Police received a report of shots fired near the corner of Warm Springs and Eckert streets just before 3:30 a.m.

Police say two men used a .410 shotgun handgun to fire repeatedly at a deer they'd seen from the road using a flashlight.

Dustin L. Edison, a 28-year-old man from Nampa, was arrested on suspicion of being a felon in possession of a firearm, as well as hunting without a license, hunting with an artificial light and shooting from a public road.

His 28-year-old companion, Dustin H. Chase, of Caldwell, was arrested for hunting without a license, hunting with an artificial light and shooting from a public highway.

Edison has had numerous run-ins with the law, including a conviction for grand theft and burglary related to an incident in Canyon County from 2000 in which he served time in prison.

Food saver or life preserver?

I like to tell readers about those occasions when I happen upon outdoor-related products that meet or exceed their manufacturer's claims. Today I want to sing the praises of FoodSaver's vacuum sealers and accessories. No matter your outdoor activity, you'll discover a host of practical applications for these quality products.

Vacuum technology offers a number of distinct advantages over conventional zip lock-style bags or butcher paper for sealing food products. By removing the air and providing a leak-proof seal, food items can be frozen and stored for up to two years without the threat of bacterial contamination, flavor loss, dehydration or freezer burn.

In addition to preparing food for freezer storage, rendered portions of fish and game can be vacuum-packed and placed beneath ice for neat and odor-free transport from the field to your kitchen. FoodSaver (www.foodsaver.com) even suggests that if you're flying home, you can place vacuum-packed portions of meat/fish in an ice cooler and take it onboard as carry-on luggage.

Of particular interest to sportsmen are the GameSaver Sport Plus and Deluxe versions. Both models offer the same sealing capabilities of the top-of-the-line models, but in compact sizes more convenient for storing between intermittent use.

It is within the realm other than food-storage uses that the vacuum sealers display their amazing versatility. Riding inside my rucksack are several compact sealed packages. One contains the rudimentary components of my amateur first-aid kit — pain-relief pills, burn cream, iodine caplets, sun block, Pepto-Bismol tablets, pins/needles, thread, tweezers, folding scissors, compresses and an Ace bandage.

A second package secures my emergency light and fire starting components — metal match, waterproof match case, and butane lighter. A Mini-Mag with fresh AAA's, compact head lamp, and several chemical glow sticks stand ready to cut the gloom during an unexpected night afield.

If you spend time in a boat, you might want to consider placing emergency lights, fire-starting and signaling supplies, food, clothing and important papers in a large sealed bag. If you leave a small amount of air in the bag, the package will remain afloat if the boat swamps or turns over. These simple materials could mean the difference between life and death by allowing you to signal for help and protecting you from hypothermia while waiting for rescuers to arrive.

Vacuum storage also has potential for long-term storage of guns, ammunition, and reloading components. By excluding oxygen and moisture, the shelf life of these materials can be extended indefinitely. With prices skyrocketing and availability diminishing, many sportsmen are gathering the shooting supplies they feel will help them weather these politically uncertain times.

So no matter what sport you pursue, if you take advantage of the many benefits of vacuum packing, it's in the bag.

Good hunting!

Robotic elk's movement might entice Ore. poachers

By Mark Freeman
(Medford) Mail Tribune

MEDFORD, Ore. — Some of Oregon's more seasoned elk poachers have learned to sidestep getting caught in a backwoods wildlife-enforcement-decoy sting by following the mantra, "If it ain't movin', we ain't shootin'."

"In fact, we even hear them yell that to each other," says Lt. Steve Lane from the Oregon State Police Fish and Wildlife Division. "They know that if it doesn't move, it's probably a decoy."

Let poachers keep thinking that elk decoys are as motionless as a Beefeater guard, because that will help the OSP bust these wildlife criminals one shaken head at a time.

Troopers now have a new robo-elk decoy that sports a remote-controlled mechanism that makes its head move, giving it a new level of animation in the ongoing fight against the illegal killing of Oregon's biggest land mammals.

"Just that little bit of movement can make the difference with these seasoned poachers," says Lane, who heads the OSP's wildlife enforcement efforts. "I'll be interested to see how effective it becomes."

This latest tool in the anti-poaching arsenal comes courtesy of the Humane Society of the United States, whose Wildlife Land Trust spent the $4,000 necessary to buy and ship the decoy from a Wisconsin firm that specializes in robo-mounts.

The full-bodied Rocky Mountain elk has detachable six-by-six point antlers so it can look like anything from a herd bull to a fat cow.

OSP troopers expect to get another set of smaller antlers for use primarily on the west side.

Like with decoy deer and turkeys, the robotic elk will be used primarily to go after poachers targeting animals out of season, in closed areas or at night.

It's also good enough to pass as a Roosevelt elk, meaning it will help corner poachers on either side of the Cascades — without a real elk having to die to make a case.

That's been the key to the Wildlife Enforcement Decoy Program since it was created in 1991 as a way of proactively working poaching and spotlighting cases. But the fake deer used at that time led primarily to minor charges because the offenders were shooting at something with the legal equivalent of a throw rug.

That changed in 1995, when the Oregon Legislature passed a law that tipped the scales a little toward the OSP when it targets poachers in the woods.

The law gives state police decoys the same legal status as a live animal in the woods. That means everything from casting a spotlight on wildlife to shooting one in any illegal fashion carries the same legal weight as if a real deer or elk was killed by the offending shooter.

Poachers shooting at decoys face possible prosecution for a Class A misdemeanor, punishable upon conviction of up to a year in jail, fines of up to $6,250 and loss of hunting privileges for two years in Oregon and surrounding states.

Poachers also face restitution if the decoy — often called Scruffy because of its bullet-riddled hide and .270-caliber ear piercings — is damaged in the case.

In 2008, the OSP ran 225 Wildlife Enforcement Decoy operations across the state using primarily deer and elk decoys, though the decoy cache also includes antelope and bear decoys.

The decoys are usually stationed off roadways where they can be spotted by drivers actively scanning the hills for animals.

In 2008, troopers reported 1,206 vehicles drove past the decoys, and more than half included people spying the fake animal, OSP statistics show. People in 90 of those vehicles fired at the decoy, leading to 143 citations — mostly violations or misdemeanors but a few felonies for felons in possession of a firearm, statistics show.

A call to Custom Robotics in Wisconsin revealed that a robo-elk was almost done and ready for purchase.

Jerome City Council approves bio-tower for wastewater plant

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

JEROME — The Jerome City Council unanimously approved a $1.4 million bio-tower for Jerome’s wastewater treatment plant on Tuesday.

Water Works Director John Boyd said the second bio-tower will reduce the risk of future costly maintenance problems.

Just two weeks earlier, the council agreed to spend between $80,000 and $100,000 for an emergency repair when a 1 ½-year-old membrane blower failed at the wastewater plant.

Boyd said Tuesday that repairs were made and the city is in compliance with a permit from the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality.

He said he expects completion of construction on the bio-tower in January or February.

In other business, the council approved a rezone of a little more than 32 acres near 100 East and 100 South roads for construction of the Lutheran Care Village Subdivision, which would include senior citizen residential living with an assisted living section and an Alzheimer’s care unit.

The new zoning designation to C-2 allows light commercial uses that could be medical or other professional offices. The previous zoning was R-2, a residential designation.

Gerald Martens, representing landowner Gary Wolverton, said no big-box retailers would locate at the site.

There was no opposition during a public hearing.

The Jerome Planning and Zoning Commission previously recommended that the council approve the rezone request.

In another matter, Jerome High School senior Dani Butz asked the council to participate in the Youth City Council program, which she said is a senior project involving several students.

The council, by consensus, embraced the program in which students will shadow council members at a future council meeting.

City Administrator Ben Marchant is working with Butz on the project and is mentoring her.

60 Hours to Fight Hunger kicks off

The 10th annual 60 Hours to Fight Hunger community campaign begins today and continues through Saturday.

The campaign seeks Thanksgiving turkey donations to be delivered across southern Idaho through the South Central Community Action Partnership.

The campaign begins at noon today and will continue through 11 p.m. Saturday. Donations can be made at Team Con Paulos, 1534 Blue Lakes Blvd., Twin Falls.

As an added incentive, each donor will receive a free Subway $5 cash card, good at all Subway restaurants. The top five donors who contribute the most frozen turkeys will each receive three $5 Subway cash cards.

Last year’s campaign brought in more than 1,000 frozen turkeys for the SCCAP, providing assistance to families around the area. This year event organizers hope to exceed last year’s donation total.

“We are so appreciative of the way the community responds year after year to this drive,” said Community Service Director Leanne Trappen, of the SCCAP.

According to Trappen, recipients are determined by family income, need and access to a kitchen to cook a turkey. Turkeys will go to families in Twin Falls, Burley, Jerome, Wendell, Ketchum, Hailey, Fairfield and surrounding communities.

Eating hot peppers not a good treatment for hypothermia

DEAR DR. GOTT: Will you please describe what happens to a person when he or she suffers from hypothermia? Then describe what happens to people when they eat hot peppers. I wonder why they don’t use hot peppers to rewarm a hypothermic person quickly.

DEAR READER: Well, your theory sounds logical,

ASK DR. GOTT
Dr. Peter Gott

but the two processes are entirely different. One gives the sensation of warming the digestive tract (but doesn’t provide heat); the other chills the entire body. The main negative feature with your combination is that a hypothermic person cannot be rewarmed quickly; the shock would be too much for the heart to withstand. The process requires time and constant monitoring of vital signs.

Hypothermia occurs when the body loses heat faster than it can be produced. A normal body temperature is 98.6 F. Hypothermia occurs when that temperature drops to 95 F or below. The heart and nervous system are unable to perform adequately and can fail. The condition can be serious or even fatal if left untreated.

JEROME — Jerome Fire Department Chief Mike Hatfield and Mayor Charles Correll presented and pinned new badges on the department’s five promoted officers and four new members Tuesday.

Hatfield, a 34-year veteran firefighter, came to Jerome in September, after retiring from the fire department in Cathedral City, Calif., where he was a division chief and fire marshal.

He presented collar brass to the wives of promoted department members to pin on their spouses.

“It’s a great honor to induct our new members, as well as to promote some of our existing firefighters,” Hatfield said.

Why do we hate?

Academics seek answer in new field

By Nicholas K. Geranios
Associated Press writer

SPOKANE, Wash. — Why did the Nazis hate the Jews? Why did the Tutsi hate the Hutu?

Hate is everywhere, but the fundamental question of why one person can hate another has never been adequately studied, contends Jim Mohr of Gonzaga University, who is developing a new academic field of hate studies.

The goal is to explain a condition that has plagued humanity since one caveman looked askance at another.

“What makes hate tick?” Mohr, director of Gonzaga’s Institute for Action Against Hate, wondered. “How can we stop it?”

Gonzaga founded the institute a decade ago after some black law students received threatening letters. It has since started a Journal of Hate Studies, hosted a conference and offered its first class on hatred last spring.

The hope is that other universities will follow suit, said

Ken Stern of the American Jewish Committee in New York, who has been involved in the effort. “We wanted to approach hate more intelligently,” he said.

Stern, who has spent 20 years battling anti-Semitism, said the need for hate studies became obvious when people started fighting groups like the Aryan Nations, which once flourished in this area. Opponents galvanized against the Aryans, but didn’t really know how best to fight them, Stern said.

“We were flying by the seat of our pants,” he said. “There was no testable theory.”

There is not even a good definition of hate, Stern contends.

Philosophers have offered numerous definitions: Rene Descartes said hate was the urge to withdraw from something that is thought bad. Aristotle saw hate as the incurable desire to annihilate an object.

In psychology, Sigmund Freud defined hate as an ego state that wishes to destroy the source of its unhappiness.

Gonzaga, a Jesuit university best known for its basketball team, offered a class on the subject taught by five professors from different disciplines.

Student Kayla De Los Reyes was in that class, and said the information both horrified her and gave her hope.

“Hate is something that is part of the human emotional makeup,” she said. “Everyone feels it at one point or another. You have to learn to control it.”

The goal is to create an academic home where a variety of disciplines, including history, psychology, religious studies, anthropology and political science, can be brought together to focus on hate. It’s the same sort of effort that led to the creation of disciplines like black studies or women’s studies, Mohr said.

Such academic efforts are not without controversy. Some skeptics fear they are little more than attacks on the dominant power structure.

“This stuff tends to be one dimensional and presumes the guilt of an archetypal white male,” said Glenn Ricketts, spokesman for the National Association of Scholars.

Indeed, De Los Reyes said one of the more interesting topics in the class involved white privilege. The most recent Journal of Hate Studies contained articles about oppression of gays, Nazi experiments on Jews, the local battle against Aryan Nations, and Muslim support for suicide bombings.

Heather Veeder, a graduate assistant for the institute, said the organization has an important mission.

“Hate thrives in areas not illuminated by education,” she said.

But Stern said it is too easy to blame ignorance for hate. People can have plenty of knowledge about something and still hate it, he said. The problem is when one person or group can separate another person or group from their humanity, thinking of them as an “other,” Stern said.

Jim Mohr is seen Nov. 11 at Gonzaga University in Spokane, Wash. Mohr is developing a new field of study about what makes one group of people hate another, at the university’s Institute for Action Against Hate.

“We dehumanize them and justify violence against them,” Stern said.

There is no simple answer to why people hate, Mohr said. Hate can be sparked by greed, or fear, or a tribe bonding together in opposition to another. People looking to belong will hate others to fit into a group, he said.

With all the political conflict in the United States, it can seem that hate is on the rise. Some people seem to hate President Obama. Some hate Muslims. Some hate homosexuals.

But Mohr said he wouldn’t pursue a field of hate studies if he didn’t think something positive could be achieved.

“We can change,” Mohr said. “There has to be hope.”

Hundreds line up in Mich. for chance to meet Palin

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — Hundreds of Sarah Palin fans lined up Wednesday at a Michigan book store to get the chance to meet the former Alaska governor as she kicked off a national tour for her book “Going Rogue.”

Some supporters camped out overnight to be among the first to get wristbands from the Barnes and Noble bookstore at Woodland Mall in Grand Rapids. Those with the orange bands will get the opportunity to have the former 2008 Republican vice presidential candidate sign their copies of the book at the three-hour signing event Wednesday evening.

The memoir was released Tuesday but has topped best-seller lists for weeks.

“Everyone here has been excited and patient,” Barnes and Noble spokeswoman Maddie Hjultstrom said of the waiting crowd.

Calvin College students Megan Patzky, of Racine, Wis., and Sarah Cranmer, of Chicago, were among those waiting overnight to get wrist bands. The two 20-year-olds skipped their Wednesday classes at the private college located less than a mile from the book store.

Patzky bought a copy last night for her father, a Palin supporter, and plans to give it to him as a Christmas present.

After standing in the cold all night, the pair was happy to get into the Woodland Mall about 6:15 a.m.

“We were hoping that someone would start selling coffee, but nobody did,” Patzky joked.

Todd Shaffer, of East Lansing, said some of those in line were Palin supporters and other were there to get books signed to give as gifts.

A Transportation Security Administration worker at Lansing’s Capital Region International Airport, the 38-year-old arrived early Wednesday at the bookstore and described himself as a conservative Republican who voted for Palin and presidential candidate John McCain last year.

hypothermia. Symptoms occur slowly, dulling the senses, and can include constant shivering, drowsiness, confusion, shallow breathing and a weak pulse.

Contrary to previous thinking, a person should not be rubbed vigorously in an attempt to warm the skin. This process can further damage an already compromised system and cause more harm than good.

However, there are steps that should be taken, such as removing any wet clothing, warming with blankets or clothing, providing shelter from the elements, and giving a warm alcohol-free beverage if the person is conscious.

People vary in their love or dislike for hot, spicy foods. Some people are acclimated to eating hot peppers, while others can’t tolerate them. If a pepper is truly hot, it will burn the mouth and throat, and aggravate the intestinal tract all the way through. Eating hot peppers will not reverse hypothermia.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am a reverend and wrote you some time ago but never received a reply. I have severe eczema and unsuccessfully tried several medications. I need your advice.

DEAR REVEREND: Unfortunately, I cannot print every letter I receive or give personal responses. All people who write me should not expect a response, since I have limited space in newspapers in which to answer questions.

Therefore, I must choose questions that will benefit a large number of people or bring attention to unusual conditions.

I have written about treatment options for eczema several times, both in the past and more recently. It is important to keep your skin well moisturized, avoid using very hot water when bathing and follow your dermatologist’s advice.

To give you related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report “Dermatitis, Eczema and Psoriasis.” Other readers who would like a copy should send a self-addressed, stamped No. 10 envelope and a check or money order for $2 to Newsletter, PO Box 167, Wickliffe, OH 44092. Be sure to mention the title.

Robert 'Rob' William Jones

Robert "Rob" William Jones, beloved son, brother, father, uncle and friend, passed away Sunday, Nov. 15, 2009, at his home in Twin Falls, Idaho. He was 44.

They knew that his heart was as big as any and his capacity to love was without boundaries. Sadly, they now know that the world is at a loss without him. They know that life will go on but will never be the same. Maya Angelou said it best when she said that "... people will forget what you said, people will forget what you did, but people will never forget how you made them feel." We will never forget the laughter and the love of Rob Jones. We love you, Rob, and we will meet again.

He is survived by Christina Lott and his children, Kamie Jones, 20, Garrett Lott, 14, Tanner Lott, 12, and Zach Jones, 2; his parents, Garth and Ina Jones of Burley; his siblings, Debbie (Dallas) Doty of Boise, Joni (Brad) Norman of Idaho Falls and Kristine Jones of Heyburn; and many friends and family members who love him dearly. Rob is preceded in death by his grandparents, Yates and Ora Jones and Alvin and Delores Wilson; and his beloved great-aunt, Lois Egan.

A funeral service will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 21, at the Morrison Funeral Home, 188 S. Highway 24 in Rupert, with interment to follow at the Pleasant View Cemetery in Burley. A gathering for family and friends will be held from 6 to 8 p.m. Friday, Nov. 20, at the Morrison Funeral Home. Memorial contributions may be made to any First Federal Bank under Kamie and Zachary Jones's names.

Arrangements are under the direction of White Mortuary "Chapel by the Park" of Twin Falls and Morrison Funeral Home in Rupert.

Kent Howard

RUPERT — Kent Howard, 54, of Rupert, passed away Monday, Nov. 16, 2009, at the Intermountain Health Center in Murray, Utah, from complications of pneumonia and flu.

Kent was born Feb. 10, 1955, in Twin Falls, Idaho, to Darrell and Dorothy Howard. He married Marta Mabey and was later divorced. He then married Cheryl Kerbs. After graduating from high school, he completed a year of college in computer technology. He worked for many years at Inkley's, Dell and as a salesman in various places. He was a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, serving a mission in Fresno, Calif. Holding numerous callings in the church, he had a love for his calling as membership clerk. He enjoyed cars, electronics and spending time with his family.

Kent is survived by his wife, Cheryl Howard of Rupert; children, Rachel (12), Sarah (11), Kathryn (7) and Bethanne (5), all of Rupert; brother, Eddie Howard of Twin Falls; sisters, Greta Sharp of Filer, Shirlene Crandall of Twin Falls and Deanna Forbes of Idaho Falls; and numerous nieces and nephews. He was preceded in death by his dad, Darrell Howard; and his mom, Dorothy Howard.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 21, at the Rupert LDS 3rd Ward building, 526 S F St., with bishop's counselor Rick Stimpson officiating. Burial will follow at the Rupert Cemetery. A viewing for family and friends will be from 6 to 8 p.m. Friday, Nov. 20, at the Hansen Mortuary Rupert Chapel, 710 Sixth St. and one hour prior to the service at the church.

In lieu of flowers, memorials may be made to help provide for the future of Kent's daughters at Wells Fargo Bank to the Kent Howard Memorial Fund.

The family would like to thank Dr. Graham, Janet Anderson and the doctors and nursing staff at the Intermountain Health Center in Murray, Utah.

Sandra Lewis

JEROME — Our daughter, wife, mother, grandma and sister left this life and went onto her next journey Tuesday, Nov. 17, 2009, at her home surrounded by her family. She was 54.

Sandy was born Nov. 19, 1954, in Logan, Utah. She then moved with her family to Newberg, Ore., where she went to school. She then settled in southern Idaho, where she met and married the love of her life, Ron Lewis, on Dec. 23, 1977. Ron and Sandy raised three beautiful daughters, Shannon, Terry and Ronnie Jo. Sandy and Ron's girls blessed them with grandkids, which they loved with all their heart. They include Andy, Grayson, Veronica, Tristan, Cole, Joel, Jaden, Josy, Jacek, Lashelle, Lyndsi and Brennen. Sandy loved her nieces and nephews and was especially proud of those who have served in the military.

Sandy was a gifted artist who was well-known throughout southern Idaho for her painting and woodworking skills. She loved crafts and antiques and had a love for e-bay that she shared with her mom. Sandy had a gift with animals, and you never knew what you were going to find when you walked into her house or barn.

Sandy was a longtime member of the Twin Falls County Mounted Sheriff's Posse and, during that time, she was credited for finding a lost child in the South Hills and saving his life. Sandy could also be found at every rodeo or queen contest that her girls competed in and was very proud of all their achievements.

Sandy had a love for God, her family and friends, but her one true love was Ron. Sandy was blessed to have two loving sets of parents and loved nothing more than to be surrounded by her family. Sandy was very close to her mom, her daughters and her sisters.

Sandy was preceded in death by her son, David; her stepsister, Carolyn; a very special brother-in-law, Lee Lewis; Aunt Cora; and Uncle Bill. Sandy leaves behind her loving husband, Ron; her girls, Shannon Lewis, Terry (Brandon) Lewis-Rosenberg and Ronnie Jo Lewis; her mother and stepfather, Jo and Gary Hoskins of Hazelton; her dad and stepmom, Earl and Nancy Stonebrink of Newberg, Ore.; her siblings, Larry (Charity) Stonebrink, Arnold (Penni) Stonebrink, Kelly (Blas) Coronado, Gary Hoskins Jr. and Kim (Gary) Cornwell; and all of her grandchildren.

Everything is always alright in the end. If it isn't, it isn't the end.

A celebration of Sandy's life will be conducted at 11 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 21, at Farnsworth Mortuary Chapel, 1343 S. Lincoln, Jerome, ID 83338.

Koryl Nadine Thiel

On Sunday, Nov. 15, 2009, our beloved wife, mother, sister, grandmother, great-grandmother, aunt and friend, Koryl Nadine Thiel, passed away at her home after a courageous battle with cancer.

Nadine was born Jan. 5, 1934, in Bellevue, Idaho. She attended schools and graduated from Hailey High School in 1951. She married the love of her life, R.C. "Smokey" Thiel, on Aug. 11, 1951. Together they had three children, Ken, Kirk and Shanna. Nadine worked at JC Penny for 35 years. Nadine loved auctions, yard sales, family gatherings, playing ball with her grandsons, vacations, crafts and playing cards.

She is survived by her loving husband of 58 years, Smokey Thiel; her sons, Ken (Kim) Thiel of Boise and Kirk (Teresa) Thiel of Twin Falls; daughter, Shanna (Glenn) Vining of Twin Falls; sister, Janice Stewart of Twin Falls; brother, Pete Gutches of Boise; and grandchildren, Steve (Krista) Vining, Brandon (DaDree) Vining, Koryl (Cody) Campbell, Cody Thiel and Klay (Danille) Maxwell. She is also survived by six great-grandsons, Tylan, Gage, Carter, Treygan, Lockan and Robbie; one great-granddaughter, Kynizon; numerous nieces and nephews; and half brothers, Jay, Bill, Lee and Hiram Jones. Nadine is preceded in death by her parents, Wade and Jeannette Gutches; one brother, Gary Gutches; and her half brothers, Fred, Charles and Donnie Jones.

A memorial service will be held at 11 a.m. Tuesday, Nov. 24, at White Mortuary "Chapel by the Park."

The family would like to give a special thanks to Dr. Dan Prueci and Dr. Richard Miranda and their staff, Visions Hospice, Sandee, Pam, Sue, Mirza and Pat, for all their kindness and help during Nadine's battle.

Marvin E. Preston

POCATELLO — Marvin Earl Preston, 81, of Pocatello, passed away Tuesday, Nov. 17, 2009, in Pocatello.

Marvin was born Jan. 29, 1928, in Declo, Idaho, the son of Clifford and Edith Oneata Owen Preston. Marv lived in Declo until the age of 9. Then the family moved to Burley, where he lived until the age of 15, when his father bought a farm in Vale, Ore. Here he lived with his family and worked on the family farm until he was called to serve a two-year mission for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in the British Isles. Upon his return in 1950, he married Lucile Burton in the Salt Lake City Temple.

They were married for 29 years, were later divorced and have remained dear friends. Together they have four sons, Earl, Clint, Kelly and Sam; and one daughter, Marcile.

After they were married, they lived in Vale and Prairie City, Ore. In 1951, they moved to Utah, where he worked for the LDS Church. He operated the South Salt Lake Stake farm in Sandy, Utah, then the Sugarhouse and Wilford Stake farms in Lehi, Utah. In 1969, he moved his family to Snowville, Utah, where he and his brother, Ken, rented land to grow sugar beets for U and I Sugar. One year later, he and Ken added Merv to their partnership and moved to Raft River, Idaho, leasing 3,200 acres from JR Simplot (The C & Y Ranch). He, his brothers and his sons operated this farm growing sugar beets, potatoes, grain and alfalfa and built a 350-cow dairy.

In 1972, he moved his family to the Fort Hall Indian Reservation, where he leased 1,400 acres, growing sugar beets and grain. This was in operation until 1978. During the winters, he and his sons would haul feed potatoes and sugar beets from stock piles to factories. This is when he fell in love with trucking. In 1978, he became a full-time truck driver. He bought his first truck and hired on at Dunkleys as an owner/operator.

On June 9, 1979, he married Maria Guadalupe Alcaraz in Reno, Nev. Together they have two children, Marilla and Marvin Jr. After the children were raised, Lupe became his driving companion. Together they enjoyed traveling across the country and seeing the beautiful American landscape as they worked. In 2004 at the age of 76, Marv retired. During his 27 years of trucking, he logged more than 4.5 million miles.

Marv was a member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, serving in the auxiliaries of the church and in the bishopric and high council. Marvin was a man of integrity, a friend to all and had a gentle heart. He was a kind soul and his greatest joy was his family. He will be sorely missed.

The family would like to thank Lupe for her loving care and heartfelt devotion to him during his years of illness. The family would also like to thank the staff at Hillcrest Haven for their loving kindness and tender care in his behalf.

He is survived by his wife; and children, Earl and Gloria Preston of Blackfoot, Marcile and Bill Minor of Pocatello, Clint and Sandijo Preston of Plano, Texas, Kelly and Lori Preston of Pocatello, Sam and Anne Preston of Blackfoot, Mirella and Ryan Reed of Pingree, Marvin Jr. and Lacie Preston of North Las Vegas, Nev. He is also survived by 24 grandchildren and 29 great-grandchildren; brothers, Mervin Preston of Blackfoot and Charles Preston of Buhl; and sisters, Vivian Lewis of Kimberly and Edna Lee of Twin Falls. He was preceded in death by his parents; a grandson, Jess Preston; and six brothers, Lavon, Richard, Frankie, Francis, Ken and Deed Preston.

The funeral will be held at noon Saturday, Nov. 21, at the Highland LDS 3rd Ward Chapel, 2300 Butte Drive in Pocatello. The family will meet with friends from 10:30 to 11:30 a.m. Saturday at the church prior to the service. Interment will be held at 3 p.m. Saturday at the Thomas Cemetery.

Donations may be sent to the family in care of the Sims Funeral Home, 139 E. Second S., Soda Springs, ID 83276.

Services are under the direction of Sims Funeral Home. Condolences may be made to the family at www.simsfh.com.

Jose Esteban Garayoa Soto

PAUL — Jose Esteban Garayoa Soto, 70, of Paul, passed away Friday, Nov. 13, 2009, at his home.

Jose was born May 30, 1939, in Aras, Navarra, Spain, to Manuel Garayoa and Margarita Soto. He worked as a shepherd and cook. He enjoyed fishing, cooking, hosting and traveling and was an animal lover. Jose is survived by his children, Maria and

Afghan minister accused of taking bribe for copper deal

By Richard Lardner and Pauline Jelinek
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — A senior Afghan official allegedly took a $20 million bribe to steer a copper mining project to a Chinese company, a glaring example of the claims of corruption clouding the Obama administration's deliberations over expanding the U.S. commitment in Afghanistan.

In Washington, two U.S. officials familiar with intelligence reports said that Afghanistan's minister of mines, Muhammad Ibrahim Adel, allegedly accepted the money soon after the $3 billion contract was awarded in late 2007 to China Metallurgical Group Corp.

The officials spoke on condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of the issue. The payment to Adel was apparently made in Dubai, United Arab Emirates, said one of the U.S. officials. Dubai, just a three-hour flight from Kabul, has long been viewed as hub for illicit cash transactions, according to an August report by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

The minister has denied having taken any bribes and said the contract went through all legal channels, according to Afghan state television.

Afghanistan is on the eve of a ceremony to swear President Hamid Karzai in for a second five-year term. Karzai has been under pressure from the U.S. and NATO allies to rid his government of the graft and backroom deals that turn Afghans against their public institutions and undercut the U.S. military effort there.

Arriving in Kabul on Wednesday to attend the inauguration, Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton said Karzai has a "clear window of opportunity" to show Afghans that their government will be accountable.

Karzai announced the formation of a new anti-corruption unit on Monday, but American authorities want to see action as President Barack Obama nears a decision on increasing U.S. troop levels in Afghanistan.

The Washington Post reported Wednesday that Adel had accepted a bribe of roughly $30 million. The U.S. officials who spoke to The Associated Press could not account for the differences in the reported bribe amount.

State Department spokesman Ian Kelly said the bribe allegation is serious and should be investigated. But Kelly would not say whether the department has evidence Adel did anything wrong.

E-mails to Adel's office seeking comment on the bribery allegations were not immediately returned.

Radio and Television Afghanistan on Wednesday cited the minister as saying: "There was no corruption. This agreement was approved by the Cabinet and Mr. Karzai also was aware of it."

Said Tayeb Jawad, Afghanistan's ambassador to the United States, told the AP last month that the bidding process was above board and supervised by reputable international consultants.

Representatives at China Metallurgical, which is based in Beijing, could not be reached for comment Wednesday.

The copper deposits at Aynak, a former al-Qaida stronghold southeast of Kabul, are considered to be one of the world's largest unexploited copper reserves. Mining the metal is expected to generate hundreds of millions of dollars for Afghanistan, a potential financial boon for an impoverished country mired in war.

Israel brushes off Obama criticism over Jerusalem

By Ben Hubbard
Associated Press writer

JERUSALEM — Israel broke ground on a new housing complex for Jews in east Jerusalem on Wednesday, brushing off President Barack Obama's criticism that construction in the disputed part of the holy city undermines efforts to relaunch Mideast peace talks.

The groundbreaking came a day after Israel defied American, European and Palestinian demands to stop settlement activity by announcing it will press forward with construction of 900 apartments in another Jewish area in east Jerusalem.

Speaking to Fox News in Beijing on Wednesday, Obama criticized the plan to build hundreds of homes in Jerusalem's Gilo neighborhood, saying such moves make it harder to achieve peace in the region and embitter the Palestinians in a way he said could be dangerous.

The Palestinians claim the West Bank and east Jerusalem — areas captured by Israel in the 1967 Mideast war — for their hoped-for state and have refused negotiations until Israel stops settlement construction in these areas. The Palestinians say the continued growth of settlements on land they claim will make it impossible for them to establish a viable country of their own.

The Israeli government declined to respond to Obama's comments.

But earlier in the day, Foreign Minister Avigdor Lieberman said Israel had no intention of stopping the Gilo construction. He called the neighborhood "an integral part of Israel, an integral part of Jerusalem."

The future of east Jerusalem is the most intractable issue in the Israeli-Palestinian conflict. The area includes Jerusalem's walled Old City — home to sensitive Jewish, Christian and Muslim holy sites. Israel annexed east Jerusalem immediately after the 1967 war and claims all of the city as its eternal capital. The annexation was never recognized by other countries.

Speaking in parliament Wednesday, Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu did not address the tensions with the U.S. and ignored an Arab lawmaker who asked why he was allowing the new construction in Gilo.

Instead, Netanyahu reiterated his call for an immediate resumption of peace talks and criticized the Palestinians for refusing to return to the table.

CSI men, women open SWAC play against rival Salt Lake

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

Salt Lake? Already?

The College of Southern Idaho men's and women's basketball teams are just five games into the season, but thanks to an expanded 20-game league schedule, the Golden Eagles open Scenic West Athletic Conference play today against rival Salt Lake Community College.

"We shouldn't be here yet," said CSI women's coach Randy Rogers of facing the Bruins tonight in Twin Falls.

Both the men's and women's games feature compelling matchups.

The No. 16 Salt Lake men are the defending NJCAA champions but lost all five starters from last year's team. The Bruins (5-0) have reloaded, though, led by 6-foot-4 freshman wing Collin Chiverton.

Sophomore point guard Darian Norris, 6-8 forward Wil Carter and outside shooting threats Jake Dastrup and Craig Cusick add to Salt Lake's attack.

"They're a very complete team. They're a very talented team," said CSI head coach Steve Gosar. "We're going to

CSI MEN ENTER NJCAA POLL; WOMEN FALL 10 SPOTS

The Golden Eagle men's basketball team tied for No. 25 with Vincennes University in the second NJCAA Division I poll of the season, released Tuesday.

CSI was unranked in the preseason poll.

Salt Lake Community College held steady at No.

16, and North Idaho College rose a spot to No. 4.

The CSI women plummeted 10 spots to No. 18, while Salt Lake rose to No. 3. North Idaho fell out of the poll.

Like the Bruins, No. 25 CSI is 5-0. The Eagles are coming off a 99-92 win over Seward County (Kan.) Community College.

CSI completes final prep for run at nationals

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa — The quest for 32-6 is at hand.

Today marks the beginning of the NJCAA Division I Volleyball Championships at the Mid-America Center, where the College of Southern Idaho hopes to claim its record ninth national championship in two days' time.

Four more wins will bring about the 32-6 record the Golden Eagles desire, one that CSI coach Heidi

Cartisser said "sounds amazing."

Wednesday's final practice started anything but amazing, but it ended crisp enough. Regardless of the outcome, it was a much-needed hint of on-court action.

"It wasn't the greatest practice, but it wasn't the worst either," said sophomore libero Britani Hathorn. "We were getting used to the feel of the floor and the lighting and how big the arena was. But I

Cutting loose is CSI's trump card

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa — While the rest of the College of Southern Idaho volleyball team exited the Mongolian restaurant the team picked for lunch, five players danced shamelessly next to their van with iPods blaring in their ears.

Local drivers and passengers stared at them with a hint of confusion. So too did the players for Seminole State (Okla.) — CSI's first-round opponent at today's NJCAA Division I Volleyball Championships — as they filtered into the pizza joint a few shops down.

Don't mind those girls busting moves in the parking lot, folks. They're just here to win a title.

Much like archery or shooting, volleyball is a precision sport. The slightest flaw dramatically changes the outcome of a point. But while the Golden Eagles strive to be a machine on court, they're really anything but outside of the gym.

The ability to cut loose just at the right time is something that has keyed CSI's run to nationals.

In the buildup to the Region 18 semifinal match with No. 1-ranked North Idaho, the team bus was quiet. The tension was palpable. CSI coach Heidi Cartisser figured out how to work the microphone on the bus, sophomores Samantha Misa and Britani Hathorn laid down a freestyle rap that spurred howls of laughter from all corners of the bus, and suddenly there was no doubt whatsoever the Black coaches group calls for progress in hiring for college football positions

By Michael Marot
Associated Press writer

INDIANAPOLIS — The Black Coaches and Administrators group is looking for creative ways to get more minority football coaches into college jobs.

They'll consider almost anything — more input from college presidents in coaching searches, NCAA help to measure diversity in hiring, advice from Tony Dungy, maybe even a lawsuit.

On the day the BCA released its latest hiring report card, executive director Floyd Keith and others acknowledged that while they have made some progress, the ultimate measuring stick, hires, continues to lag.

"We are looking at every opportunity we can to advance the cause," Keith said on a conference call Wednesday. "I think the important thing for us is the part about hires, not interviews. We've hit the interview mark. Regardless of the direction, we've got to make the numbers work and they have to be better."

When the BCA started compiling these report cards, in 2004, it contended that if searches became more inclusive, hires would follow.

Charlotte Westerhaus, the NCAA's vice president for diversity and inclusion, said 85 percent of the 32 Division I schools looking for coaches last year interviewed coaches of color. Five were hired.

The problem: Of the 120 Football Bowl Subdivision coaches, only nine are minorities — seven blacks, one Latino and one Polynesian. That's a record, but a number Keith and others do not believe is good enough.

Richard Lapchick, director of Central Florida's Institute for Diversity and Ethics in Sport, called it "scandalous" that five of the six BCS conferences have no coaches of color. He wrote in the report that it's time for a "civil rights movement" in college sports.

In fact, Lapchick contends minority coaches lost ground last year because three black coaches at BCS schools — Kansas State's Ron Prince, Mississippi State's Sylvester Croom and Washington's Tyrone Willingham — were not retained. And the hires in the FBS did not result in prominent enough positions.

"What is lost in the improvement in numbers is that three jobs were lost in the Pac-10, Big 12 and SEC," Lapchick wrote. "Adding positions at Miami

Bruin girls beat Buhl

Times-News

The Twin Falls girls basketball team improved to 2-0 with a 64-36 victory over Buhl Wednesday at Baun Gymnasium in Twin Falls.

Every player on the Bruin squad scored in the contest, led by Erin Grubbs-Imhoff's 14 points. Twin Falls head coach Nancy Jones said she tried players in some new positions while it's early in the season.

"Whenever you do that, it takes some time," she said. "We were struggling defensively, but our half-court (defense) wasn't bad. We need to work on transitioning from the press. On offense, we have quite a bit to do."

Bailee Montgomery led the Indians with 22 points. Buhl will travel to Hazelton Saturday to face Valley. Twin Falls hosts Skyview of Nampa Friday.

Maynor, Jazz hold off Raptors 104-91

SALT LAKE CITY — Rookie Eric Maynor scored 11 of his 15 points in the fourth quarter and helped the Utah Jazz hang on for a 104-91 victory over the Toronto Raptors on Wednesday night.

The Jazz let an 18-point lead slip to one early in the fourth before pulling away for their ninth straight win over the Raptors.

Carlos Boozer had 22 points and 18 rebounds and Deron Williams added 20 points and nine assists for the Jazz, who had only nine players available because of injuries.

Chris Bosh scored 32 points and pulled down 17 rebounds to lead the Raptors, who lost their third straight and went 1-3 on a four-game Western Conference road trip.

WIZARDS 108, CAVALIERS 91

WASHINGTON — LeBron James was stymied down the stretch by DeShawn Stevenson, Antawn Jamison delivered 31 points and 10 rebounds in his season debut, and the Washington Wizards beat the Cleveland Cavaliers 108-91 Wednesday night to end a six-game losing streak.

James finished with 34 points and nine assists, but he scored only six points in the fourth quarter while shooting 3 for 7. No one else scored more than 10 points for Cleveland, which was without the injured Shaquille O'Neal and Anderson Varejao, and had its five-game winning streak snapped.

HAWKS 105, HEAT 90

ATLANTA — Joe Johnson made it two straight 30-point games, Josh Smith dominated during a decisive first-half run and Atlanta won its sixth in a row, beating Miami to reclaim a share of the NBA's best record.

Johnson scored 30 points on the heels of a 35-point effort against Portland on Monday. Smith was all over the stat sheet: 16 points, 14 rebounds, seven assists, two blocks and two steals.

BUCKS 99, NETS 85

MILWAUKEE — Andrew Bogut and Carlos Delfino each scored 21 points, Bogut also grabbed 11 rebounds, and Milwaukee beat winless New Jersey.

Chris Douglas-Roberts scored a career-high 31 points and had 10 rebounds, but the Nets blew a 48-41 halftime lead by shooting 9 of 38 in the second half.

KNICKS 110, PACERS 103

INDIANAPOLIS — Al Harrington scored 13 of his 26 points in the fourth quarter against his former team, and New York beat Indiana to snap a six-game losing streak.

Larry Hughes had 22 points and 10 rebounds, Wilson Chandler scored 18 points and David Lee added 17 for the Knicks (2-9), who overcame a double-digit deficit in the final period. Eddy Curry scored 10 points in 12 minutes in his first game since he tore his right calf muscle on the opening day of training camp.

Elizabeth Weaver scored 14 points to lead the Chanticleers (2-1), who shot 29 percent from the field.

NO. 7 LSU 61, NO. 24 MIDDLE TENNESSEE 40.

BATON ROUGE, La. — Taylor Turnbow had 17 points and 12 rebounds to lead No. 7 LSU.

All-American forward Alysha Clark had 16 points and a game-high 20 rebounds for Middle Tennessee (1-1).

LaSondra Barrett added 10 points for the Lady Tigers (2-0).

The Blue Raiders beat the Lady Tigers each of the last two seasons, including last year's game in which Clark scored 37. However, Middle Tennessee's hopes of a third straight win over LSU evaporated quickly.

Andre Iguodala scored 25 points, Williams had 19 and Elton Brand contributed season highs of 19 points, 11 rebounds and six blocked shots for the Sixers.

ROCKETS 97, TIMBERWOLVES 84

MINNEAPOLIS — Luis Scola had 20 points and a season-high 16 rebounds in Houston's 97-84 victory over Timberwolves on Wednesday night, Minnesota's 11th loss in a row.

CELTICS 109, WARRIORS 95

BOSTON — Rajon Rondo scored 12 of his season high-matching 18 points in the third quarter and the Boston Celtics rebounded from a two-game skid with a 109-95 win over the short-handed Golden State Warriors on Wednesday night.

No. 3 Texas clubs West Carolina 73-41

AUSTIN, Texas — Damion James scored 18 points and No. 3 Texas continued to break in its talented group of freshmen with a 73-41 win over Western Carolina on Wednesday night.

James, a senior, also grabbed seven rebounds, falling three short of his 39th career double-double for the Longhorns (2-0).

Gary Johnson, a junior forward who played just 14 minutes in Texas' season-opening win over UC-Irvine, added 10 points and seven rebounds. Freshman point guard J'Covan Brown scored 10 points and had his first assists of the season, finishing with three assists against six turnovers.

Harouna Mutombo scored 10 points to lead the Catamounts (1-1).

NO. 11 BUTLER 67, NORTHWESTERN 54

EVANSTON, Ill. — Shelvin Mack had 15 points, Gordon Hayward added 14 points and 10 rebounds, and Butler showed off its depth with a victory over Northwestern.

Five players had nine points or better for the Bulldogs (2-0), who never trailed in beating Northwestern (1-1) for a second straight year. Mack also dished out eight assists.

Michael Thompson scored 16 and John Shurna 14 for short-handed Northwestern. This was the Wildcats' first game since announcing that both Kevin Coble, their leading scorer and rebounder the last three seasons, and Jeff Ryan will miss the rest of the season.

Women's Top 15

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Cetera DeGraffenreid scored 20 points and tied a career high with eight steals to help No. 4 North Carolina beat Coastal Carolina 88-49 on Wednesday night.

She'la White added 16 points for the Tar Heels (2-0), who added 22 points, 12 boards and three blocks.

Gosar said his team didn't play its best game against the Saints, but he was pleased with the nonconference win.

"I think we grew as a team, and we found a way to win," said Gosar, "but at the same token, we're going to have to play better basketball on Thursday."

CSI got a big lift from reserve point guard D.J. Stennis against Seward. Today's game will be the first SWAC experience for the freshman from Las Vegas, who knows Salt Lake will be another challenge.

"They're a solid team," he said. "No real superstars, but they play together."

CSI will face Snow College on Saturday afternoon. The Badgers are 3-1 entering their SWAC opener at North Idaho College tonight.

The 3-2 CSI women, who fell to No. 18 nationally, will have their hands full with a 5-1 Salt Lake Community College team that knocked off No. 1 Central Arizona College and No. 6 Midland (Texas) College at last week's Coca-Cola Invitational in Twin Falls. For their efforts, the Bruins climbed to No. 3 in the NJCAA poll this week.

The Bruins are led by point guard Sheila Adams and 5-7 freshman guard Haley Holmstead, the Coca-Cola MVP. She led Utah's American Fork High to the Class 5A state championship last year and was named Utah's Gatorade Player of the Year.

Rogers said his team is fortunate to have seen the Bruins last week, but with 10 freshmen on the CSI roster, playing Salt Lake this early isn't ideal.

"I don't have a feel for my own team yet," said Rogers. "I know we're not near where we need to be to play Salt Lake. We're going to have to step up to a major challenge."

Redshirt freshman point guard Kiki Lockett sat out last week's games as she battled a foot injury. She returned to practice on Monday but will not play tonight.

CSI's women get another test Saturday against an unbeaten Snow College team (5-0) that Rogers said may have even more talent than Salt Lake.

"That's probably the two top teams in our league we have to open up with," said Rogers. "These are important."

think it picked up, and we were starting to do our thing by the end."

If the Golden Eagles are tight or nervous, they didn't show it. According to Hathorn, the overriding emotion was that of anticipation.

But that doesn't mean CSI is oblivious of the stakes that come with being one of 16 teams to descend upon this city of some 58,000 just across the Missouri River from Omaha, Neb.

Rather than piling on extra pressure, it just ratchets up the Golden Eagles' desire.

"It's not like this in Brazil," said outside hitter Elisa Brochado, of Belo Horizonte, Brazil. "Here in the United States a national championship is so huge ... we want to win this so badly."

CSI, seeded No. 4 for the tournament, appears well positioned with its draw. The Golden Eagles' potential matches in the quarterfinals and semifinals, barring upsets on either side, are schools they have already University (Ohio), New Mexico, New Mexico State and Eastern Michigan was important but these schools will likely never get a shot at a BCS championship."

So Keith is committing himself to building stronger relationships with university presidents and athletic directors.

If that doesn't work, the BCA could propose the creation of a Diversity Progress Rate, something similar to the NCAA's Academic Progress Rate that is released each spring. Coaches and athletic directors at many schools now frequently cite APR statistics because failure to consistently meet baseline academic standards can result in penalties ranging from loss of scholarships to ineligibility for NCAA tournaments.

Dungy, the first black coach to win a Super Bowl, also is getting involved. He met last week with NCAA officials and has offered his help.

The last resort would be filing a lawsuit under Title VII legislation.

The report showed 60 percent of all schools graded over the past six years received A's or B's, more than twice as many as those receiving D's or F's (28 percent). This year, 11 of 32 schools received A's while five schools received F's including two — Oregon and Presbyterian — that did not file reports with the BCA.

Golden Eagles would win.

The only pressure this team ever seems to get is the kind it puts on itself. And for all the times it seems to do so, it also appears to know just the right time and manner in which to blow it all off.

"When we put that pressure on ourselves, we start to try too hard and overplay," Hathorn said. "When we're playing loose and having fun, that's when we're at our best."

Loose is good. Fun is better. But when the whistle goes today to start the tournament, it's still all business, however taxing it might be.

The Golden Eagles are tired, as any team can expect to be after playing one of the most grueling schedules in the nation. But they can see the finish line on the horizon — it's Saturday night.

After all, there's no better night than a Saturday for a little hip-hop and dancing.

TRACY, SCIOSCIA WIN MANAGER OF THE YEAR AWARDS

NEW YORK (AP) — Jim Tracy of Colorado won the NL Manager of the Year award on Wednesday — and earned a new contract, too — while Mike Scioscia of the Los Angeles Angels was selected for the AL honor.

Tracy became the second manager to win the award after taking over during the season, joining Jack McKeon for Florida in 2003. Less than an hour after the award was announced, the Rockies said Tracy had been rewarded with a three-year contract.

“One guy doesn’t win an award like this,” Tracy said in a conference call. “The Colorado Rockies won this award.”

Tracy received 29 first-place votes and two seconds for 151 points in balloting by the Baseball Writers’ Association of America. Scioscia got 15 first-place votes, 10 seconds and one third for 106 points.

The Rockies promoted

Tracy from bench coach after Clint Hurdle was fired in late May and won the wild-card race. Scioscia kept the Angels going after the death of pitcher Nick Adenhardt, and they won their fifth AL West title in six years.

“Some things, you’re never prepared for,” Scioscia said. “But those things really weren’t about us. They were about the Adenhardt family and I think as we supported them we found some peace.”

Ron Gardenhire finished second in the AL voting for the second straight year and fifth time during his eight seasons as Minnesota manager. He also placed third in 2002, when Scioscia was honored for the first time, but has never won the award. Tony La Russa of the Cardinals, a four-time winner, was a distant second in the NL with 55 points.

Lou Piniella of the Cubs and Joe Maddon of the Rays were honored last year.

Colorado was 18-28 and 14 1/2 games behind NL West-leading Los Angeles when Tracy was promoted from bench coach following Hurdle’s dismissal on May 29. The Rockies responded to Tracy’s steady hand, going 74-42 the rest of the way and taking the division race to the final weekend before settling for the wild card.

There was no Rocktober this year — Colorado lost to Philadelphia in the division series — but it was still quite the turnaround for the club and Tracy, who was fired after leading the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 68-94 record in 2007.

The 53-year-old Tracy was out of baseball before becoming the Rockies’ bench coach in November 2008.

Scioscia managed the Angels to their third consecutive division title during one of his most difficult seasons in the dugout. Los Angeles has earned six postseason berths in the last eight years under Scioscia, who was a catcher for the Dodgers for 13 seasons and retired in 1994.

The Angels used 14 starting pitchers and played without sluggers Torii Hunter and Vladimir Guerrero for long stretches due to injuries. The team’s biggest challenge was moving past the sorrow it felt when Adenhardt was killed in a car accident in April.

Scioscia, who turns 51 on Nov. 27, was credited for giving his players time to grieve while gently insisting on accountability as an early slump lingered. Los Angeles responded by surging to another division title and making it to the AL championship series, eliminating postseason nemesis Boston along the way.

“They emerged as a terrific club as the summer wore on,” Scioscia said.

Los Angeles Angels manager Mike Scioscia reacts to Torii Hunter’s two-RBI hit during Game 5 of the American League Championship Series against the New York Yankees in Anaheim, Calif., on Oct. 22. Scioscia won the AL Manager of the Year award Wednesday.

Panthers and Dolphins on rise

By Barry Wilner
Associated Press writer

At the end of September, the Miami Dolphins and Carolina Panthers already were being written off. Both were 0-3 and their 2008 division titles were being termed flukes.

Guess who is back in the playoff chase, albeit on the fringes right now? Yep, the Dolphins and Panthers almost certainly won’t repeat their first-place finishes of a year ago, but at 4-5, each can think wild card.

Of course, the loser Thursday night in Charlotte will have a much tougher chore to get into the playoffs. But the winner will have positive vibes and an impressive 5-2 mark since such a spotty beginning.

The Panthers, favored by three points, might be the more desperate team because their last four games are against current winners who might win their divisions: the Patriots, Vikings, Giants and Saints. Not that Miami has a leisurely swim through December and early January: New England, Jacksonville, Houston and Pittsburgh still remain. All of them have winning marks, too.

Carolina has found southern comfort in the no-huddle offense.

“It presents some challenges, particularly in a short week,” Dolphins coach Tony Sparano said.

Miami’s wildcat does the same, but without Ronnie Brown running it, the Dolphins could struggle to move the ball against an improved Carolina defense.

THE REST OF THE WEEK
N.Y. Jets (plus 10) at New England Belichick will go on fourth down every time — and make it. BEST BET: PATRIOTS, 30-17		Fitzgerald: Greatest Show On Turf Redux. In St. Loo. CARDINALS, 27-16
Baltimore (minus 1) at Indianapolis Doesn't seem quite fair to make it UPSET SPECIAL, but the Colts are underdogs. Ravens didn't show much against putrid Browns. COLTS, 24-20		Cincinnati (minus 9 1/2) at Oakland WE BELIEVE. WE BELIEVE. BENGALS, 24-9
Tennessee (plus 3 1/2) at Houston, Monday night Beginning to like what we're seeing from Titans. TITANS, 20-17		Philadelphia (minus 2 1/2) at Chicago Two disappointing teams still in NFC wild-card race. What does that say about the conference? EAGLES, 17-16
San Diego (no line) at Denver Ditto from Chargers, and uncertainty about Denver QB Kyle Orton makes them look even better. CHARGERS, 23-10		Buffalo (plus 8) at Jacksonville Will coaching change make a difference? Not if Maurice Jones-Drew runs for 200. JAGUARS, 20-10
Seattle (plus 11) at Minnesota Matt Hasselbeck will get hassled by Jared Allen and company all day. VIKINGS, 30-13		Kansas City (plus 9 1/2) at Pittsburgh Steelers are banged up, but Chiefs aren't in their class. STEELERS, 24-9
Washington (plus 12 1/2) at Dallas Even with Redskins coming off nice upset and Cowboys coming off stinker, spread is big. Too big. COWBOYS, 21-13		Atlanta (no line) at N.Y. Giants Michael Turner's likely absence means no spread. Two teams in dire need of a win. Giants snap four-game slide. GIANTS, 22-14
New Orleans (plus 12 1/2) at Tampa Bay Saints had a scare last week against Rams, and Bucs are playing better. Still, it's a mismatch. SAINTS, 32-17		San Francisco (plus 5 1/2) at Green Bay Aaron Rodgers won't be throwing five balls to Niners the way Jay Cutler did. PACKERS, 20-17
Arizona (minus 9 1/2) at St. Louis Kurt Warner to Larry		Cleveland (plus 4 1/2) at Detroit Sales should be brisk on "We Are Terrible" towels. LIONS, 13-6
RECORD: Versus spread, 10-5 (67-70-2 season); Straight up, 9-6 (96-48 season); Best Bet: 4-6; Upset Special: 7-3

College athletes outperforming others in classroom

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — College athletes are still setting records and dispelling myths — in the classroom.

Just like the late NCAA President Myles Brand believed they could.

The NCAA's latest graduation numbers show nearly four out of five student-athletes earn their diplomas on time, an all-time high, and federal statistics show athletes are still more likely to graduate on time than other students.

“The misconception is that NCAA student-athletes are not good students,” interim NCAA President Jim Isch said in a conference call Wednesday. “The truth, as Myles reminded people, is that they could perform in the classroom and they outperformed the general student body in almost every measure.”

NCAA statistics show 79 percent of all freshmen entering school in 2002-03 graduated within six years, matching last year's record high. The four-class average, for students entering college between the fall of 1999 and the fall of 2002, also was 79 percent, a 1 percent point increase over last year's record.

The federal numbers are lower, 64 percent for athletes, but still 2 percentage points higher than the general student body that does not have access to all the assistance provided to student-athletes.

Federal statistics do not include the performance of transfer students. So if an athlete enrolls at one school, then transfers to another, neither school receives credit if the athlete graduates.

NCAA officials believe the improving numbers can be attributed to stronger eligibility standards for incoming freshmen and a greater emphasis on academics during Brand's tenure as president.

“I think everyone understands how much this has changed the culture on campus and I expect that will continue to be the case in the future,” said Walter Harrison, chairman of the committee on academic performance. “I think coaches are clearly more aware of the Academic Progress Rate. They know how it's calculated, and most importantly they know that they have to do well in the classroom and stay on track to graduate.”

Female athletes outperformed their male counterparts, 88 percent to 72 percent, and the only women's sport to score lower than 79 percent was bowling (74 percent). Women's basketball came in at 83 percent under NCAA guidelines and 64 percent on the federal report.

The three biggest men's sports — football, basketball and baseball — all failed to top 70 percent in the NCAA report.

Men's basketball and Football Championship Subdivision teams (formerly Division I-AA) had the lowest rates of any sports, coming in at 64 percent under NCAA calculations. Basketball players scored 48 percent on the federal report, while FCS athletes were at 54 percent. Baseball came in at 69 percent on the NCAA study, but had 47 percent on the federal report.

Bowl Subdivision teams came in at 67 percent (NCAA) and 55 percent (federal).

“I'm especially pleased with the progress in baseball and men's basketball,” Isch said. “Over the last eight years, baseball is up 10 points, and basketball is up 5 points. Football is up 3 percentage points in the bowl subdivision.”

Of the top 10 teams in the BCS standings, Cincinnati, now fifth in the standings, was the only school to top 70 percent in both reports.

Texas, which is third in the standings, and Georgia Tech, which is seventh, had the lowest scores. Both came in at 49 percent (NCAA) and 41 percent (federal).

And half of the top 10 teams in the BCS standings — Florida, Texas, Boise State, Georgia Tech and LSU — failed to reach 50 percent in the federal report.

But Harrison believes the numbers will increase again next year, the first time the NCAA will measure the impact of more stringent eligibility standards that require athletes to accumulate 20 percent of their credits toward graduation each year.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

On March 23, 2010, at the hour of 1:00 o'clock PM of said day, at First American Title, 260 Third Avenue North, Twin Falls, Idaho, JUST LAW, INC., as Successor Trustee, will sell at public auction to the highest bidder, for cash, in lawful money of the United States, all payable at the time of sale, the following described real property, situated in the County of Twin Falls, State of Idaho, and described as follows to wit:

Lot 13 in Block 1 of South 93 Heights, P.U.D., Twin Falls County, Idaho, recorded in Book 17 of Plats, page 13.

The Trustee has no knowledge of a more particular description of the above referenced real property, but for purposes of compliance with Section 60-113 Idaho Code, the Trustee has been informed the address of 2423 East 3830 North, Filer, ID aka 2423 Jordan Ln., Filer, ID, is sometimes associated with the said real property.

This Trustee's Sale is subject to a bankruptcy filing, a payoff, a reinstatement or any other conditions of which the Trustee is not aware that would cause the cancellation of this sale. Further, if any of these conditions exist, this sale may be null and void, the successful bidder's funds shall be returned, and the Trustee and the Beneficiary shall not be liable to the successful bidder for any damages.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possessions or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the Deed of Trust executed by Robert A. Hase, Bertha R. Hase, husband and wife, as Grantor(s) with Mortgage Electronic Registration System, Inc., acting solely as nominee for American Home Mortgage as the Beneficiary, under the Deed of Trust recorded January 29, 2007, as Instrument No. 2007002132, in the records of Twin Falls County, Idaho. The Beneficial interest of said Deed of Trust was subsequently assigned to Midfirst Bank, recorded November 9, 2009, as Instrument No. 2009-024842, in the records of said County.

THE ABOVE GRANTORS ARE NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION 45-1506(4)(a), IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR ARE NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION.

The default for which this sale is to be made is the failure to pay the amount due under the certain Promissory Note and Deed of Trust, in the amounts called for thereunder as follows:

Monthly payments in the amount of $870.16 for the months of February 2009 through and including to the date of sale, together with late charges and monthly payments accruing. The sum owing on the obligation secured by said Deed of Trust is $113,910.81 as principal, plus service charges, attorney's fees, costs of this foreclosure, any and all funds expended by Beneficiary to protect their security interest, and interest accruing at the rate of 6.5% from January 1, 2009, together with delinquent taxes plus penalties and interest to the date of sale.

The Beneficiary elects to sell or cause the trust property to be sold to satisfy said obligation.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

On the 2nd day of March, 2010, at the hour of 10:00 am of this day (recognized local time), in the office of First American Title Company, 260 Third Avenue North, Twin Falls, ID 83303, in the County of Twin Falls County, State of Idaho, TitleOne Corporation, an Idaho corporation, as successor trustee, will sell at public auction to the highest bidder, for cash or cashier's check (cash equivalent), in lawful money of the United States, all payable at the time of sale in compliance with Section 45-1506 (9) Idaho Code, the following described real property, situated in Twin Falls County, State of Idaho, and described as follows to wit:

Lot 11 in Block 37 of Twin Falls Townsite, Twin Falls County, Idaho, according to the Plat thereof, recorded in Book 1 of Plats, Page 7, in the office of the County Recorder of Said County.

The Trustee has no knowledge of a more particular description of the above referenced real property, but for purposes of compliance with Section 60-113, Idaho Code, the Trustee has been informed that according to the County Assessors office, the address of 419 5th Avenue East, Twin Falls, ID, 83301, is sometimes associated with said real property.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possession, or encumbrances to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the Deed of Trust executed by Gale Mitchell and Geneva Mitchell, Husband and Wife, as Grantor(s), to TitleOne Corporation, an Idaho corporation, as successor trustee, and Mortgage Electronic Registration Systems, Inc., solely as nominee for lender, as Beneficiary, recorded August 12, 2005, as Instrument No. 2005-017880, and assigned to Chase Home Finance LLC by assignment recorded October 22, 2009, as Instrument No. 2009023657, in the records of Twin Falls County, Idaho.

THE ABOVE GRANTORS ARE NAMED TO COMPLY WITH SECTION (45-1506)(4)(A), IDAHO CODE. NO REPRESENTATION IS MADE THAT THEY ARE, OR ARE NOT, PRESENTLY RESPONSIBLE FOR THIS OBLIGATION.

The default for which this sale is to be made is the failure to pay when due, under Deed of Trust Note, the monthly payments of $809.71, due per month for the month of June 1, 2009 and all subsequent monthly payments of principal, interest, late charges and any miscellaneous fees thereafter. The Principal balance is $89,728.10, the current interest rate is 6.75% per annum, as of October 6, 2009. All amounts are now due, together with unpaid and accruing taxes, assessments, trustee's fees, attorney's fees, costs and advances made to protect the security associated with this foreclosure and that the beneficiary elects to sell or cause the trust property to be sold to satisfy said obligation.

NOTICE OF PROPOSED CHANGES TO WATER RIGHTS

Notice is hereby given that several applications for Transfer have been filed with the Idaho Department of Water Resources for changes to water rights within the local area. Application No. 75351 filed by MICHAEL W. and CONNIE J. THOMPSON, 335 W 300 N; JEROME ID 83338 concerns Right Nos. 36-7337H, 36-8545, 36-14504, 36-14786, 36-14505, 36-16693, 36-16547, & 36-16380 within Jerome County. Transfer proposes to dry up 7.9 acres currently diverted from ground water for irrigation in the Hazleton area and convert 0.16 cfs and 25 AF to stock water and commercial uses for expansion of an existing dairy in the Jerome area. It also proposes to move 0.06 cfs and 18 AF from an existing heifer facility in Jerome and move it across the road and west approximately one mile to the same dairy. No new wells will be drilled. The dairy facility is located approximately 3 miles north and 2.5 miles west of Jerome. Application No. 72954 filed by AARDEMA FARMS LTD PARTNERSHIP, 2306 E 3600 S; WENDELL ID 83355 concerns Right Nos. 36-14035B, 36-14035C, 36-2586C, & 36-2586B within Jerome County. This application proposes to dry up irrigated land on this farm to provide water for enlargement of the existing dairy located on the same farm. The two existing dairy wells will continue to provide water for the facility; no new wells will be drilled. The dairy is located in Jerome County 7 3/4 miles south of Shoshone and 1 1/2 miles west of Hwy. 93. Application No. 76051 filed by MARK T. and LONNA NEWCOMB, 251 E 200 S; RUPERT ID 83350 concerns Right Nos. 45-2508, 45-2389B, 45-12441, 845-13629 within Cassia County. This application proposes to drill a replacement irrigation well to make up for a well that went dry and for declining production in two other wells. The new well will be located about 2 1/4 miles east and 4 miles north of the Declo city center (1/2 mile north of Hwy I-84). Application No. 76058 filed by JOHN R. and MARGARET A. LE MOYNE, 901A GRIDLEY ISLAND; HAGERMAN ID 83332 concerns Right No. 2-10037 within Gooding County.

This application proposed to add a point of diversion on the north side of the LeMoyné property located on Gridley Island west of Hwy. 30 about 3 1/2 miles south of Hagerman. The application also clarifies the location of the existing point of diversion, and more-accurately describes the current place of use. If the transfer is approved, the Riley Creek water right that also serves this property will be relinquished. *To see a full description of these rights and a proposed transfer, please contact IDWR Southern Regional Office at 208-736-3033 or visit the website for the Department at www.idwr.idaho.gov/apps/ExtSearch/WRFiling.asp Protests may be submitted based on the criteria of Sec 42-222, Idaho Code. FREE Chihuahua, adult male, house broken,

DEAR ABBY: Is there anything wrong with having a lover solely for the purpose of sex? He is grieving for his late wife (my best friend), and I am separated from my husband. We're both lonely and have supported each other through our pain. A few weeks ago we decided to become lovers.

We both have our eyes open, and we don't expect anything out of this except a friendship with benefits. I am satisfying his needs, and he is making me remember the woman I used to be before I was emotionally beaten down by my husband.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

I see myself as enjoying the best of both worlds: I'm finding myself again, and I don't have to answer to anyone but me. So, Abby, what do you think? I guess I'm looking for some validation for our selfishness.

— FRIEND WITH BENEFITS

DEAR FRIEND: Selfishness? You are both consenting adults. You can do what you want. Many successful relationships have begun with two people supporting each other through a painful period — and I don't consider that "selfish" at all.

What I AM having trouble understanding is why you haven't begun divorce proceedings from your emotionally abusive husband. Once that's started, you should have no reason to have any second thoughts at all.

DEAR ABBY: My husband of 25 years died last year. How long do I need to maintain ties with his family? Must I still give gifts at Christmas and birthdays to all his siblings, nieces and nephews?

What I need to know is how to ease out of this without offending them. His parents are still alive, and the most I want to do is send a card at Christmas.

— READY TO MOVE ON IN CANADA

DEAR READY TO MOVE ON: No law says that you "have to" maintain a gift-giving relationship with your late husband's relatives. It would be nice, however, to send something to the nieces and nephews — if only a few dollars and some kind words included in a card.

The message that speaks loudest to me in your letter is the one you did not directly put into words — that after 25 years of marriage to your husband, you had no meaningful connection with his family. An acceptable way to begin stepping back would be to explain to them that, because of your reduced circumstances, you are no longer able to send the usual gifts and will be sending cards during these holidays.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for all the great advice you have given over the years. I have enjoyed reading your column since I can remember.

When I was in high school nine years ago, I gave birth to a beautiful baby whom I placed in an open adoption with a great family. I am now in my 20s.

I find that if I mention the adoption, the conversation sometimes becomes awkward. I don't like to mention it with acquaintances because it's something very personal and I am somewhat sensitive about it.

When people ask me if I have children, what would be the appropriate response?

— BIRTH MOTHER IN MINNESOTA

DEAR BIRTH MOTHER: You are under no obligation to give chapter and verse about your personal history to anyone who is only an acquaintance. If you are asked if you have children, just say no because you are not raising any.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Sometimes your best investments are the ones you don't make."

— Donald Trump

West leads the heart 10 to dummy's ace against your spade slam. What is your plan?

The first move is to count your winners. If trumps are 3-2, you can make all of the tricks — five trumps, a heart, a heart ruff, the diamond ace and five clubs. However, there is a good chance that West's pre-emptive raise to three hearts is based on a spade shortage. Suppose that the trumps are indeed 4-1.

If so, you now have a trump loser, but all that does is reduce your 13 tricks to 12 — provided you are careful. Your plan should be to lose a trump trick at a convenient moment. In fact, the only way to make the slam on this layout is to find the somewhat unnatural move of ducking a round of trumps at trick two. Imagine that East wins and switches to his singleton club. You win with the king, ruff a heart with the trump nine, and cash the trump ace. You can then return to your hand with the diamond ace to draw the remaining trumps. You have made six tricks already (three trumps, a heart, a heart ruff and a club), and there are six more waiting to be cashed — a trump, a diamond and four clubs.

Were you lucky or unlucky? You did run into bad breaks admittedly, but in context you were lucky because any nonheart lead from West sets the slam.

ANSWER: In situations of this sort, it is a mistake to act just because you have high cards. Doubling would be highly premature, and reraising spades with such a balanced hand is equally inappropriate. You would want to rebid spades only with a sixth trump, or with extra shape in the side-suits. So pass and leave it to partner to bid again with extra trump length.
