The College of Southern Idaho volleyball team will play for its ninth national championship today in Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Health district waits for green light on swine flu vaccine

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

So far, about 11,000 doses of the H1N1 vaccine have been given in the South Central Public Health District's region.

But it's still going to be a few weeks before the general public will get the vaccine, instead of targeted at-risk groups.

The health district will make the vaccinations available to the general public after getting the green light from the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, said Rene LeBlanc, director of the health district.

Shots could be given to the general public as soon as next month, though it's also likely that the vaccine won't be available on that scale until after the holidays, LeBlanc said.

"The earliest it might be opened would be in mid-December," he said.

"We're just waiting for the state to give us their recommendations."

LeBlanc said that the state health and welfare agency gets its guidance on when to offer the vaccine to the general public from the Centers for Disease Control, a federal agency.

When the vaccine becomes available to the general public, it will be an option for anyone between 6 months and 64 years old, LeBlanc said.

While waiting for word of when the general public can get vaccines, the health district in the weeks ahead will continue focusing its efforts on the groups that are identified as high risk.

A guy named Q: Photographer shoots NW military funerals for free

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

There were plenty of pictures taken Friday at the funeral of Army Chief Warrant Officer Mathew C. Heffelfinger.

But one photographer's work may stand out most to Heffelfinger's family — that of Q Madp, a Portland resident who for years has photographed soldiers' funerals as favors to their families.

Madp started a tribute site to fallen soldiers when the Iraq War began in March 2003. His funeral service photography became an offshoot of that a couple of months later, when a friend at a mortuary asked him to consider taking pictures at one.

Q Madp, of Portland, who volunteers to photograph military funerals for families in the Pacific Northwest, surveys the scene Friday at Army Chief Warrant Officer Mathew Heffelfinger's funeral in Twin Falls.

Seeing the effect he had on the grateful family moved him to expand on the work, and he now attends as many services as possible in the Pacific Northwest — and not just for Iraqi veterans.

Though he's also visited funerals in California, Arizona and Minnesota, he said, he usually tries to stay within driving distance of

One hurt as train hits hay truck at rail crossing north of Paul

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

KIMAMA — A train hit a hay truck near Kimama Friday afternoon, sending one Union Pacific employee to the hospital.

Tons of loose hay lay scattered along the tracks after the 5,300-foot-long train sheered off the third trailer of a hay truck that was southbound on 600 West near the intersection of Idaho Highway 24 at 2:19 p.m.

The driver of the hay truck escaped the collision without injury.

"The driver of the train said it didn't look like the truck was going to stop and he tried to slow the train down but it hit the third trailer," said Minidoka County Sheriff Kevin Halverson.

Idaho State Police officers are investigating the crash, which occurred north of Paul in Lincoln County.

They had not compiled a report on the incident as of late Friday, but Halverson said one Union Pacific employee who was on the train at the time of the crash was injured and taken to Minidoka Memorial Hospital.

Halverson, who was one of the first officers on the scene under an agreement between Minidoka and Lincoln counties, said the truck belonged to Scott Jackson Trucking of Jerome. The names of the truck driver and the train engineer were not released.

Halverson said the train was traveling eastbound at about 50 mph, which is the speed limit for a train with double-stacked containers, when the crash occurred.

Union Pacific employee Nate Lemaster, right, inspects a damaged railroad crossing sign as Minidoka County Sheriff's Deputy Sgt. Tim Dudley watches Friday at the scene of a crash between a train and a hay truck at 600 W. Idaho Highway 24 in Lincoln County.

Wind energy proposal causing friction in Blaine

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

HAILEY — When it comes to green energy and sustainability, the Wood River Valley often likes to think it's ahead of the Idaho curve.

At a Tuesday hearing about a proposed wind energy ordinance, some residents questioned the reality of that commitment.

Rich Carlson of the Idaho Rural Council brought a photo of a turbine at Jerome Middle School, saying he has heard from area parents that they enjoy looking at it as they wait for school to let out.

"These are common elsewhere," he said. "We're wondering why Blaine County is behind the city of Jerome?"

The county looks close to approving an ordinance that would allow noncommercial turbines up to 40 feet tall on most lots in the county except the mountain overlay district (which includes many hillsides) and the county's scenic corridor. That corridor is defined as anything that can be seen from five feet above the centerline of Idaho Highway 75 from Glendale Road north.

For lots larger than five acres, the county's planning staff would approve the application for a turbine. For lots smaller than five acres, a conditional use permit would be required, which involves public hearings.

"What I don't want to do is allow for these wind generators to go up where there is going to be strong negative reaction," said Commissioner Larry Schoen. "If we're going to allow this, we want it to be successful, and part of success is community acceptance."

At their last hearing, commissioners heard strong reaction that the scenic corridor be protected from towers.

On Tuesday, it was mostly proponents of wind power who spoke, suggesting that the world aesthetic is changing and that there are many residents who would regard the turbines with pride.

Others said that if Blaine County is a green energy leader, that would attract green tourism and future residents who want to live in a green community.

The commissioners are expected to revisit the issue at 2 p.m. on Nov. 24.

Vaccine

Those groups are: pregnant women; those caring for children younger than 6 months old; health care and emergency medical personnel; all people 6 months to 24 years old; and those between 25 and 64 years old with health conditions that could create complications with H1N1.

The health district also needs to plan for the second dose of the vaccine, which is necessary for children under 10 years old. LeBlanc said there needs to be at least 28 days between the two doses.

That means parents of children who were vaccinated in a school district mass immunization clinic will need to call the district and make an appointment to come in for the second dose. LeBlanc said parents were given information about the process when their children got the first dose.

Next week, staff will offer the vaccine through the various health district clinic offices to those in the high priority groups.

There are also plans for more mass immunization clinics in school districts open only to students and their family members that fall in the high-risk categories, during the first week of December. The health district will be doing school district clinics in Wendell, Fairfield, Kimberly, Bliss, Dietrich, Hazelton and Dietrich.

Because of the 28-day wait between doses, those youngsters will need to come to a district clinic for a second dose in January, which could be at the same time the general public starts getting vaccinated.

"We're going to try and ensure that we reserve ample slots for all those children that are due their second dose," LeBlanc said.

Emily Simmitt, spokeswoman for the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, said the agency will continue to monitor how many vaccine doses are available in the state. Currently, the state has been allocated 243,600 doses.

"When we have been able to get it to those people who really need it, that's the point where the districts may turn to the general population," she said.

Ketchum's URA in good shape, says auditor

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — Few issues during the recent Ketchum election were more contentious than the city's urban renewal agency. Some candidates claimed the URA wasn't fully legal from the get-go, others suggested it would bankrupt the city, and others said it was being mismanaged.

The City Council heard from its auditor on Monday, with a report that the council hopes will put most of those concerns to rest.

"For at least the future 12 months, it's still OK," said Twin Falls-based auditor Dennis Brown. "If in the future there's not any ability to refinance that debt, then there's a real problem."

An urban renewal agency concentrates on redeveloping blighted areas of cities, as well as promoting downtown vitality, often through the purchase and development of property for workforce housing, parking, town plazas and streetscaping.

Ketchum's URA, formed in 2006, has assets of about $6.7 million and liabilities of about $5.6 million. However, some of these liabilities are loans that have variable rates and may balloon.

David Ulbricht, of Portland, Ore.-based investment banker Wedbush Morgan Securities, suggested that these loans be refinanced to a fixed rate, if possible, with private entities for now, while courts assess whether certain elements of URAs are legal. Specifically, whether a city may have what amounts to an alter ego (the URA) that can undertake debt in a different way than the city itself may.

"We ought to seek court validation of the loans that don't have court validation at the moment," said City Councilman Charles Conn. "Subject to the likely outcome of the (state) Supreme Court hearings, you could see a lower-cost public bond down the road."

The council is also planning to look into whether it would be cost effective to pay a firm to enhance the city's credit when it comes to those URA loans. Fees have gone up for that but it could still be worth it to get a lower loan rate, though Ulbricht said he didn't necessarily recommend it.

Q Madp

Department of Defense news releases daily when Madp is home. Each time he reads about a soldier from the Northwest, he said, he first tries to find the family in the phone book. If they're not listed, he'll try to go through the military's casualty assistance officer or the Patriot Guard Riders, a group of motorcycle riders who attend military funerals across the country.

If Madp still can't get in touch with a family, he'll sometimes just show up and offer his services on the day of the service. He usually only does that when the funeral is held somewhere close by, he said. But for Heffelfinger — born in Portland — he made an exception, traveling to Twin Falls even though he didn't receive permission to shoot until Friday morning.

Unlike arranging his visits, actually photographing the funerals hasn't become routine — especially when they occur close together. Following Friday's burial ceremony, he quickly left Twin Falls to be in Portland in enough time for a funeral today.

One of his hardest "missions," as he refers to them, was a funeral for a Washington soldier who died in a burn unit. A few months later, he said, he found himself taking pictures for the family of a soldier who had pulled the burned man out of a vehicle.

"I was just totally whacked, overwhelmed," Madp said.

The generosity of some families has touched him, as well. Once, on a trip to San Francisco, his car broke down 50 miles from the funeral. With the help of strangers — a tow-truck driver who dropped him at a hotel, a policeman who drove him to a bus station — Madp made it to the event 15 minutes ahead of time. Still without a car, the soldier's family offered Madp a ride in their limousine and hosted him at their house for a few hours until traffic conditions were better.

It's not easy for the Oregon resident to travel as much as he does — a link on his site even asks for help with gas, food and other expenses. But his services are worth the cost, he said. Grieving family members, for example, are too busy to take pictures and won't remember all the details of a ceremony.

"Kids won't remember, but the pictures will," Madp concluded.

who knew the young pilot. Little said Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter wanted to attend, but could not because of a previously scheduled "Capitol for a Day" event in Lava Hot Springs.

As the wind picked up, blowing leaves across the memorial park, friends and family gathered around Heffelfinger's coffin — decorated with images of his military service and Iraq. Those gathered focused their comments on honoring Heffelfinger's service while looking to the future.

"... Yes, there is a tomorrow, and life is everlasting," LDS Stake President Kent Allen said during the dedication.

Brig. Gen. Alan C. Gayhart presented Heffelfinger's Bronze Star. Then

flags were solemnly presented to widow Tanya Heffelfinger and the couple's two children. Four Army National Guard helicopters flew overhead and the services ended, allowing time for family to walk one last time past the casket.

ISP investigating fatal rollover

Idaho State Police are still investigating the fatal Nov. 14 rollover of a van carrying 10 people along Interstate 84 in Jerome.

Idaho State Police Trooper Chris Pohanka said prosecutors will review the case soon.

The crash killed 56-year-old Evelia D. Montenegro, of Jerome. At least four children were hurt, and injuries ranged from minor to life-threatening after the accident.

Pohanka said Friday he didn't have an immediate update on medical conditions, though speed and weather may have contributed to the crash.

Driver Carlos Campos Ramirez was uninjured, and couldn't be reached Friday for comment.

Pohanka said the van was headed to a religious conference before the crash.

Police check report of suspicious person

Twin Falls police are looking for information about a Thursday incident in which a 12-year-old boy reported being followed by a strange man. According to Twin Falls Police Lt. Craig Stotts, the "suspicious" incident happened at about 5:30 p.m. Thursday in the residential area of Washington Street and Pole Line Road.

The boy told police he was followed after he was dropped off at a bus stop. As he sped up to distance himself from the man, so did the man walking behind him, who walked off when the boy approached a motorist, said Stotts. "The kid did the right thing."

Stotts said the unidentified man was described as white but with dark skin, about 40 years old, 5-foot-10 to 6-feet tall with a medium build and blue eyes, wearing a blue sweatshirt with black sleeves, torn black pants, torn white shoes and a black beanie.

“Oprah Winfrey is in a category of her own. This is a great American story and like any great American story it’s supersized.”

Gooding Elementary School one of a kind

CHEERS: To Gooding Elementary School for winning the first and only HealthierUS School Challenge Gold of Distinction Award presented by the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The effort toward creating a healthy student body in Gooding has been a priority for several years, but was partially accelerated by a South Central Public Health District report last year that found that the state’s third-graders were fatter in the south-central district — 16.2 percent were obese, compared to 12.8 percent throughout the state. The Gooding School District, which purchases as much food as possible from local providers and teaches elementary students to read food labels critically, has also reinstated physical education to its requirements for graduation. The elementary school also serves breakfast in its classrooms every morning. “Although we are a struggling rural school district we have a great story to tell when it comes to making our children’s health a priority and finding a way to make it happen,” Superintendent Heather Williams said. JEERS: We’re sure government agencies did their due diligence, but jeepers — $50,000 to clean up two teaspoons of mercury? The mercury was found the week of Sept. 15 in a parking lot outside an apartment complex at 359 and 341 Pheasant Road W. in Twin Falls. Investigators later determined it came from several thermometers intentionally broken by kids, and one family had to be temporarily evacuated from a contaminated apartment. A number of public entities responded to the incident, including the Twin Falls Fire Department, Idaho Department of Environmental Quality and South Central Public Health District, and submitted reimbursement requests to the Idaho Bureau of Homeland Security. Response costs for state and local agencies are still being tallied. But they’re expected to come in between $25,000 and $30,000. In addition, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency spent about $26,000 to bring in contractors for assessments of the parking lot, eight apartment units and other nearby areas, including other homes. The money came out of an emergency-response budget authorized through the Superfund program. The government agencies involved had little choice but to follow their toxic waste cleanup protocols. The bigger question is why we as a society are willing to spend $50,000 to clean up a tiny mercury spill while we’re laying off teachers and rationing textbooks. CHEERS: To Idaho Democratic Congressman Walt Minnick for introducing legislation that would require the government to reimburse veterans for health care related travel costs. Minnick says veterans should be allowed to live anywhere and not be penalized in the pocketbook if they live hundreds of miles from a VA hospital or clinic. Minnick’s legislation would mandate travel cost reimbursement to veterans traveling more than 150 miles. Veterans would be repaid for lodging and food at the same rate as federal employees. The bill would also allow reimbursement if inclement weather leaves them stranded and unable to travel after getting medical treatment. For south-central Idaho vets on fixed incomes who seek treatment in Boise, this benefit would be a godsend.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

When it comes to health care we are our own worst enemy

“Our enemy are us!” That’s how old-time comic strip character, Pogo, might summarize our No. 1 health care problem. We are our own worst enemy: We pay expensive fees for office visits to bona fide, legally licensed, board-approved doctors who are graduates of world-renowned medical colleges; submit to expensive, technically superior diagnostic tests; pay for very expensive pharmaceuticals; risk our lives with extremely expensive medical and surgical procedures, necessary or not, justified or not; and fall for even more supremely expensive services provided by phony “health practitioners” that never went to medical school or served an internship.

And then, what do we do? More often than not, we ignore doctor’s orders and forget we paid for all of these health services! We don’t quit smoking. We continue with alcohol. We eat all of the wrong (but really delicious) stuff: lard-laden meat, brine-soaked delectables, sugar-embalmed can’t-refusables. Our exercise is clicking the TV remote and computer buttons. Then we demand a pill to null the effects of this kind of health neglect. Aren’t we lucky to live in the world’s free-est country? We can destroy ourselves uninhibitedly. We are free to compound the cost of health care and health care insurance by indulging the latest thrill sport and high-caloric junk food. Ain’t life grand?!

At least one of our prominent doctors whimsically suggests that the way we neglect our health may be a blessing in disguise: It perhaps serves to “clear the gene pool” of uninformed, unheeding, unconcerned risk-takers. Consequently, it’s predicted that health care costs will plunge. But, of course, that proposition ignores that we are all risk-takers in many, many ways, and we have a tradition of protecting and saving ourselves from ourselves. It is our moral obligation to do so. And so, up and up go medical costs. Hooptedoo!

Graduation from high school may help you lead a better life

I think that the unemployment rate in the United States is not acceptable. This is why you need to finish high school. Now I say that because there are enough jobs in the United States to significantly drop the unemployment rate. The reason those jobs are still open is because a good fraction of the unemployed did not finish high school; therefore, the companies that have open jobs cannot employ because they are not qualified. So what I’m saying is if you want to have no job and live in a dump, then don’t finish high school. If you want a good life with a job, finish high school. Now if you want to have a ton of money and a great job, finish college. If everybody can do that, then this will create a much better economy. KARL DANIELSON

The brouhaha over breast-cancer screening

Everyone has been trying to come up with a good nickname for the 10 years we’re concluding next month. Terror Era really sounds like too much of a downer. How about the Decade of Medical Backtracking?

Gail Collins

Somewhere between the reports that Pap smears and tests for prostate cancer aren’t all they were cracked up to be and the news that a high fiber diet doesn’t do anything to prevent cancer, the health establishment began looking decidedly nonomniscient. Then this week, a federal task force reported that most women don’t need annual mammograms. Even more fascinating, they suggested that doctors stop telling their female patients to self-examine their breasts for lumps. If you happen to be a woman, particularly a somewhat obsessive woman, this is huge news. The to-do list just got one item shorter. Now if dentists would just decide to withdraw the flossing directive, we may have enough additional spare time to learn Spanish. The task report said that the jury is still out on whether doctors should do the examinations themselves, but my general impression is that the U.S. Preventive Services Task Force feels that younger women should not let anybody near their breasts unless the plan is to have sex. The report triggered two immediate and inevitable responses. Doctors and patients began an animated discussion. And Republicans declared it was all a Democratic plot. “I mean, let the rationing begin. This is what happens when bureaucrats make your health care decisions,” said Rep. David Camp, the ranking Republican on the House Ways and Means Committee. Camp is definitely on to something. Whatever happens, we do not want the government conducting any studies on whether current health practices actually do any good. Let this continue and soon you will not be able to get your hands on a good leech when you need one. There is no possible political advantage in coming out against medical testing, so the Obama administration scurried away from the report. The task force did not consider the matter of cost, but, of course, people like Camp depicted it as the first step toward rationing. The current position of the Republican Party seems to be that it is not possible to spend too much money on medicine. Party on. Every rational American wants qualified experts to keep re-examining current medical practices. The only thing that bothers me about the mammogram report is all the emphasis on the “anxiety” that might follow a false-positive. We live in a time when we are constantly being reminded that a fellow plane passenger might be trying to smuggle explosives in his sneakers. We can manage anxiety. I am going out on a limb to say that the real problem with a test that creates a lot of false-positive results is that it leads to a lot of other medical procedures, some involving hospitals. Unless you are genuinely sick, there is no more dangerous place to be hanging around than a hospital. I had breast cancer back in 2000, and I am trying to come up with a way that I can use that experience to shed some light on these new findings. I have never believed that everything happens for a reason. But I do feel very strongly that everything happens so that it can be turned into a column. Whatever the moral would be, I don’t think it helps Camp’s argument. I had mammograms every year like clockwork, and I had just gotten a clean bill of health from my latest one when I found a lump on my left breast while watching a rerun of “Buffy the Vampire Slayer,” multitasker that I am. It turned out to be cancer, of a fairly low-grade variety. My oncologist felt strongly that it never would have developed if I hadn’t taken estrogen replacement therapy — another one of the medical marvels that has now been consigned to the Seemed Like a Good Idea at the Time category. So, in summary, the cutting-edge of medical thinking of the 1990s may have induced my cancer, and then the universally recommended testing protocol failed to detect it. Nevertheless, everything seemed to work out fine, except that I had to have radiation while I was covering the Republican National Convention in Philadelphia. In retrospect, it is possible that my attitude toward the Bush-Cheney ticket was colored by the fact that I was thinking a lot about mortal danger at the time.

Senate faces health care vote today

White House pins hopes on moderate Dems

By David Espo
Associated Press correspondent

WASHINGTON — Suitably opaque, Section 2006 takes up only a few dozen lines in a sweeping health care bill that runs to 2,074 pages and mentions neither Sen. Mary Landrieu nor her state of Louisiana. But the section's purpose is indisputable: to deliver $100 million or more in federal funds to the state. And in the process clear the way for one of three moderate Democratic fence-sitters — Ben Nelson of Nebraska and Blanche Lincoln of Arkansas are the others — to help propel the legislation past its initial hurdle in a crucial Saturday vote.

Nelson, Landrieu and Lincoln emerged several days ago as the last public hold-outs among 58 Democrats and two independents whose votes Majority Leader Harry Reid and the White House must have to overcome the Republicans' attempt to strangle the bill before serious debate can begin.

Each has moved carefully with an eye on home-state voters. And inside the Senate, each has taken advantage of the political leverage newly available.

Alone among the three, Nelson issued a statement Friday ending any lingering public suspense about his intentions. "The Senate should start trying to fix a health care system that costs too much and delivers too little for Nebraskans," he said, adding his decision should not be seen as an indication of how he will vote on the legislation itself.

Nelson had been publicly signaling his intentions for more than a week, and his

CRAPO TO DELIVER GOP RESPONSE

WASHINGTON — Idaho Senator Mike Crapo is delivering a national address on the health care legislation expected to be considered by the U.S. Senate today. Crapo was chosen by Senate Republican Leader Mitch McConnell to offer the Republican response to the President's weekly radio address. The address airs this morning on many radio stations. "Americans are calling on Congress for health care reform because they can no longer tolerate its skyrocketing cost," Crapo said. "They want us to stop the punishing increases in insurance premiums and health care costs that, year after year, are driving families across this nation to the edge. And, they want us to ensure that they have meaningful access to quality health care. But, when Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid finally revealed the 2,074-page bill that has been crafted for weeks now behind closed doors, that's hardly what we got."

words presumably came as no surprise to Reid or the White House, which issued a statement Friday saying the bill "provides the necessary health reforms that the administration seeks."

This sort of political minuet can be delicate, as shown when the Senate's second-ranking Democrat, Dick Durbin of Illinois, said earlier on Friday that Lincoln had already confided to Reid how she planned to vote. Republicans, eager to scut-

White House at odds with bishops over abortion

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House is on a collision course with Catholic bishops in an intractable dispute over abortion that could blow up the fragile political coalition behind President Obama's health care overhaul.

A top Obama administration official is praising the new Senate health bill's attempt to find a compromise on abortion coverage — even as an official of the U.S. Conference of Catholic Bishops says Sen. Harry Reid's bill is the worst he's seen so far on the divisive issue.

The bishops were instrumental in getting tough anti-abortion language adopted by the House, forcing Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., to accept restrictions that outraged liberals as the price for passing the Democratic health care bill.

Reid, D-Nev., now faces a similar choice: Ultimately, he will need the votes of a handful of Democratic senators who oppose abortion to get his bill through. Republicans hoping to block the health bill in the Senate are relishing the Democrats' predicament.

"Obviously, it's a problem (for Reid)," Sen. Jon Kyl, R-Ariz., the No. 2 Republican, said Friday.

Reid has steered the Senate bill in a direction that abortion-rights supporters can live with: allowing coverage for abortion in federally subsidized health care plans, provided that beneficiaries' own premiums are used to pay for the procedure. But abortion opponents say his compromise would gut current restrictions that bar federal funding of abortion, except in cases of rape, incest, or to save the life of the mother.

tle the bill — and defeat Lincoln in 2010 — instantly accused the two-term senator of telling Democratic party leaders before informing her own constituents in Arkansas.

"No other senator speaks for Senator Lincoln. She is still reviewing the bill," declared the senator's spokeswoman, Leah Vest DiPietro, adding her boss had not yet made up her mind. For his part, Durbin sought to quickly close the loop with a statement saying he had been unclear and misinterpreted.

As for Nelson, several officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, said he had insisted Reid omit from the bill any change in the insurance industry's protection from federal antitrust law. The House version of the legislation would expose the industry to scrutiny by both the Justice Department's antitrust lawyers and the Federal Trade Commission.

Reid, who spoke out strongly in favor of the change in antitrust treatment earlier in the fall, left it out of the bill he drafted over several weeks and unveiled on Wednesday.

Lincoln has been the most close-mouthed about her intention. As a committee chairman, she is the most powerful of the group. As the only one of the three seeking re-election next year, she is also the most politically vulnerable.

In public, she has asked that the bill be available for 72 hours before the vote occurs. In private, her demands have been more substantive, according to officials who did not describe them.

Tamiflu-resistant swine flu cluster reported

ATLANTA (AP) — Four North Carolina patients at a single hospital tested positive for a type of swine flu that is resistant to Tamiflu, health officials said Friday.

The cases reported at Duke University Medical Center over six weeks make up the biggest cluster seen so far in the U.S.

Tamiflu — made by Switzerland's Roche Group — is one of two flu medicines that help against swine flu, and health officials have been closely watching for signs that the virus is mutating, making the drugs ineffective.

More than 50 resistant cases have been reported in the world since April, including 21 in the U.S. Almost all in the U.S. were isolated, said officials with the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

The BBC reported another cluster of five Tamiflu-resistant cases this week in Wales, in the United Kingdom.

The CDC has sent three disease investigators to North Carolina to help in the investigation there, said Dave Daigle, a CDC spokesman. CDC testing confirmed the Tamiflu-resistant cases.

All four cases at the hospital were very ill patients in an isolated cancer unit on the hospital's ninth floor, and it is believed they all caught the flu while at the hospital, said Dr. Daniel Sexton, professor of medicine.

GENEVA — Scientists switched on the world's largest atom smasher Friday night for the first time since the $10 billion machine suffered a spectacular failure more than a year ago.

It took a year of repairs before beams of protons circulated late Friday in the Large Hadron Collider for the first time since it was heavily damaged by a simple electrical fault.

Labor officials: Energy has significant job potential in Idaho

Vast natural resources like wind, water and wood could fuel job growth in sector

Times-News staff

Officials with Idaho Department of Labor said Friday that a report released by the U.S. Department of Energy shows the job potential that renewable energy plays in the Gem State. In 2008, the U.S. Energy Information Agency ranked

Idaho seventh nationally in its renewable energy generating capacity, and an Idaho Department of Labor analysis found energy sector employers paying $2.6 billion to over 49,000 workers, 12 percent of total wages and 7.5 percent of total jobs. A $1.25 million federal grant awarded earlier this week to the Idaho Department of Labor will be used to develop detailed information on the current and future potential of jobs in the state's power and energy industry, and in particular jobs in the area of efficient and renewable energy, also known as "green jobs." The Energy Information Agency profile of Idaho identifies its vast hydropower resources — the sixth largest in the nation — as the source of nearly all the state's renewable energy capacity. Wind and wood or wood waste accounted for less than 7 percent combined. But researchers at the Idaho National Laboratory have identified 6,700 additional hydropower sites that could potentially produce another 2,100 megawatts of electricity. That would boost Idaho's hydro capacity by another 22 percent. A megawatt hour of electricity is enough to power 1,000 average homes in the Intermountain West for a month, according to UtiliPoint International, an energy research firm. Wind remains the most likely alternative resource for development. In 2004, the federal energy agency found no notable wind generation in Idaho. Today, Idaho has wind projects with a generating capacity of 105 megawatts with a marked potential for growth, particularly in southeastern Idaho. Idaho's federal energy profile, however, is limited to hydro, wind and wood. It does not include any existing capacity for solar, geothermal or biomass other than wood, and there are developments, especially in

Dairy producers need to update records by Monday

By Cindy Snyder
Times-News correspondent

The Twin Falls Farm Service Agency office fax number is: 734-5138.

Dairy producers who are participating in the Milk Income Loss program have until Nov. 23 to get their 2009 production figures updated or risk losing payments under a new support program. Congress has appropriated $290 million in payments to be made through the Dairy Economic Loss Assistance Payment (DELAP). Producers have heard for months that the payments were coming, now the program is rolling on fairly short notice. Lance Phillips, county executive director for the Farm Service Agency in Twin Falls, said payments will be based on total production from February through July 2009. He said it's important that producers verify any production figures they have already submitted to the program or provide any missing data from February through June. "If you are in doubt, fax the numbers to us," Phillips said. "We'll check it." DELAP payments are expected to be made by mid-December. Except for making sure the needed production data is on file with the local FSA office by Nov. 23, no additional application form is necessary. Producers who did not choose to participate in the program will have also have a chance to sign up during a 30-day period in DELAP. Those rules are being finalized and are expected to be announced in mid-December along with the sign up period. Thanks to rising milk prices, no payments will be made through the program in December, Phillips said. The program price is based on the Boston milk price and is adjusted monthly based on variations in feed costs.

Crackdown targets counterfeit drugs

By Ylan Q. Mui
The Washington Post

NEW YORK — In highly orchestrated raids around the world this week, Interpol officers in Europe, drug agents in the United States and task forces from Sweden to Singapore hunted down counterfeit prescription drugs to stem a rapidly growing criminal business preying on financially pressed consumers looking for bargains. The operation, code-named Pangea, is an effort to fight back against fraudulent businesses, which have become a $28 million industry in the United States alone. The national crackdown uncovered nearly 800 alleged packages of fake or suspicious prescription drugs including Viagra, Vicodin, and Claritin, and shut down 68 alleged rogue online pharmacies. Some counterfeit drugs may have as much as three times more of an active ingredient than is typically prescribed; others may be placebos. Drywall

Dell's profit, stock drop on weak quarterly report

By Jordan Robertson
Associated Press writer

SAN FRANCISCO — Some of the computer industry's biggest players — such as IBM Corp., Intel Corp. and Hewlett-Packard Co. — have wowed Wall Street this fall with stronger-than-expected profits. Dell Inc. didn't join them Thursday. The company reported a 54 percent drop in net income and a 15 percent decline in revenue in its latest quarter, both steeper than analysts had forecast. Dell's shares fell $1.43, or 9 percent, to $14.44 in morning trading Friday. The numbers show that Dell isn't fully benefiting from the industry's fledgling recovery, even though the company is seeing improvement in some areas. Dell has been hurt more than its peers because of tightened spending by corporations and large government agencies, which make up 80 percent of Dell's revenue. Meanwhile, rivals such as Hewlett-Packard Co. and Acer Inc. have boosted their market share by exploiting their bigger presence in retail stores. That has been a big weapon because consumer interest in little laptops called "netbooks" has helped the PC industry start to pull out of its worst slump in years. In the last quarter, Acer replaced Dell as the world's No. 2 personal computer maker. Dell has said it is willing to lose some market share rather than lower prices too much. That is a key part of Dell's strategy to improve profitability — an effort that has included a huge restructuring. Dell's work force was trimmed by 9,300 last year to 78,900 at the end of January, the last time the company gave employment figures. It also has changed the way it makes and sells computers, leaning more on contract manufacturers and retailers instead of doing everything in house. Dell is also trying to expand into more profitable markets through acquisitions. The most significant is Perot Systems Corp., a technology-services company that Dell is buying for $3.9 billion. The deal is a move against HP, which paid $13.9 billion for another services company, Electronic Data Systems Corp. The changes haven't been enough to lift Dell's profit. Net income fell to $337 million, or 17 cents per share, in its latest quarter, which ended Oct. 30. That compares with $727 million, or 37 cents a share, in the same period a year ago. Revenue fell 15 percent to $12.9 billion. Analysts polled by Thomson Reuters expected Dell to earn 28 cents per share on $13.2 billion in revenue in the latest quarter. Dell, which is based in Round Rock, Texas, said it expects revenue in the current period to be better than in the prior quarter, but it attributes that to the seasonal benefit of consumers buying PCs around the holidays.

With fuel demand down, refineries across the country are shutting down

By Randall Chase
Associated Press writer

WILMINGTON, Del. — Refineries from New Mexico to New Jersey are under severe economic pressure because of falling demand for fuel, with a number of facilities shutting down in recent months. Valero Energy Corp., which shuttered a major refinery over the summer, said Friday it would permanently close its Delaware City oil refinery and layoff 550 workers. It is the largest largest refinery in the U.S. to close this year. Refineries in the Northeast are particularly vulnerable because many are older, operate less efficiently and must compete with gasoline imported from Europe. The Delaware City refinery, where workers were notified of the closing Friday, lost about $1 million every day this year, said Valero spokesman Bill Day. Demand for fuel has been falling for some time and the recession has made things worse, squeezing profit margins for refiners everywhere. Refiners are pulling capacity offline and are now operating at levels more consistent with the aftermath of a hurricane in the Gulf of Mexico. El Paso, Texas-based Western Refining Inc. announced earlier this month that it would close its Bloomfield, N.M., facility, putting 100 people out of work. Valero, based in San Antonio, said in September that it would idle two units in

Want graffiti to stop? Get personally involved

Q: I see graffiti in every town I go to. It looks terrible. What can be done to stop all the graffiti?

A: The truth of the matter is that graffiti has been around for centuries. I've heard that some people even say ancient cave paintings could have been the graffiti of their time. The sad fact is that graffiti, like many other crimes, will never be stopped. When one graffiti artist gets caught — and that is very seldom — another one takes that one's place.

There is a way to slow it down though. The easiest, fastest way to slow graffiti is to create a group to paint over any graffiti that goes up. Many cities have started using this tactic and the graffiti problems they had were all but ceased.

I hear from people that the person who created the graffiti should be made to clean up the mess created. It's a great idea. But if we wait for that to happen, we might be the cavemen that future generations talk about.

I know it might sound as if the police don't try to find the culprits but finding them is hard — much more difficult without the help of citizens. If you see or hear somebody in an alley — a favorite target zone for graffiti — then please call the police. We only get mad when we don't get the call. Graffiti is a crime that requires a community to solve.

Q: My question refers to Twin Falls. Why are school zones' posted 20 mph speeds set from 7:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m.?

When I was a child we played on the playground equipment before and after school — also all day on weekends. We also used the basketball courts until dark. So why are speeds not set 24 hours a day, 365 days a year? Doing so would make everyone slow down all the time.

A: First, let me say I'm not familiar with Twin Falls school zones. I think though, you might have answered your own question.

Long-term use of cannabis questioned

DEAR DR. GOTT: If what I read in the paper is correct regarding drug consumption in America, a lot of people must smoke pot. Since I am one of them and am now past 60, I would like your comments on what potential health problems might be in the future for those of us who have indulged throughout our lives.

DEAR READER: You have presented me with an awkward question that I will attempt to answer objectively. There are two sides to every story, and this issue falls into that category.

The active ingredient in marijuana is THC, which travels through the brain and body. Within a short time following inhalation, the heart begins to beat rapidly, sometimes 50 beats per minute more than it had prior. One study indicates a person's risk of heart attack within the first hour following smoking is four times greater than normal. Further, bronchial passages enlarge, and the blood vessels in the eyes expand.

THC affects the portion of the brain that regulates coordination, balance, posture and reaction time. Perhaps this is the reason that up to 11 percent of all people fatally injured test positive for THC. Marijuana smoke contains up to 70 percent more carcinogenic hydrocarbons than does ordinary tobacco smoke — and we know that tobacco smoke is tied to numerous health issues.

People who smoke marijuana frequently but do not smoke tobacco have a greater number of health problems and miss more days at work. Even infrequent use can cause a cough, burning of the mouth and throat, acute chest illness, lung infections and airway obstruction. Marijuana smoking doubles and triples the risk of cancer of the head, neck and lungs, and the more one smokes, the greater the risk. This may occur because THC impairs the immune system's natural ability to fight off cancer and infectious diseases.

As people age, their ability to remember becomes diminished. Laboratory testing has shown THC exposure may hasten the process. So long-term use impairs memory, increases the risk of emphysema and other lung conditions, affects our ability to make rational decisions and may lead to dependence.

On the positive side, THC has been useful in treating a variety of medical conditions and is legally recognized in some states for that purpose. It is prescribed under strict control for the nausea involved with chemotherapy, stimulates the appetites of AIDS patients and reduces spasticity from multiple sclerosis.

While I do not endorse the use of recreational marijuana, I am cognizant of the fact that I cannot impose my standards on others. I must admit I would be undone were I to be stopped by the police because I had a minor traffic violation and was found to be in possession of the drug. The legal implications are simply too stringent in my state. According to NORML, The National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws (www.norml.org), anything less than 4 ounces for a first offender is a misdemeanor with a fine of $1,000 and/or incarceration of one year. A subsequent offense is a felony with a fine of $3,000 and incarceration of five years. Were I in possession of marijuana and within 1,500 feet of a school, the minimum mandatory sentence would be two years. Possession of 4 ounces or more for an initial offense is a felony subject to a $2,000 fine and five years' incarceration. Subsequent offenses of a like amount raise the ante to $5,000 and incarceration to 10 years! I don't know about you, but I'm simply too old for such nonsense and get more satisfaction from smoking an occasional pipe filled with tobacco. Therefore, I can only recommend you weigh the facts and implications and make the right choice regarding future use.

Now consider this: 20 U.S. states have tax-stamp laws covering illicit drugs. Those in possession are required to purchase and affix stamps issued by the state onto any contraband, with the cost of the stamp determined by the quantity held. Few citizens observe the law, fearing incrimination. Since there is no tax assessed at the time of purchase, tax-evasion penalties are imposed on drug offenders following their arrest. If a stamp is obtained and someone is arrested for possession, he or she will be fined based only on the amount held. Without the stamp, taxes and a fine will be imposed. Go figure!

Because the respiratory tract is extremely vulnerable with marijuana use, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Living with Chronic Lung Disease." school zones all the time might create a safer area but it may also create a greater amount of road rage. Most school zones are designed to be in place when children are at the greatest risk of being hurt — when they're arriving at and leaving from school. Making a school zone a 24/7 proposition would probably create a nightmare of complaints for the city and school district.

I know some cities have set school zone speeds at 25 mph permanently. That might be another answer to drivers who say 20 mph is too slow, but as I've written before, the difference in the potential danger between a collision at 15 mph and 25 mph is pretty dramatic.

CSI volleyball thwarts Salt Lake to reach title tilt

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa — They celebrated it like a championship, but the Golden Eagles know there's still one more hurdle to clear. The College of Southern Idaho volleyball team defeated Region 18 rival Salt Lake Community College 21-25, 25-17, 25-13, 16-25, 15-10 on Friday evening to advance to the NJCAA Division I national championship match. In so doing, the Golden Eagles (31-6) avenged their most recent defeat, a five-set loss to the Bruins (29-7) in the Region 18 championship. "This is the sweetest thing ever, to lose to them at regionals but beat them here and keep them from winning the title," said CSI freshman Alyssa Everett. The Golden Eagles will go for their record ninth championship, and first since 2004, at around 5:30 p.m., MST, today, when they face sixth-seeded Missouri State University-West Plains. Jessica Peacock led the Golden Eagles with 19 kills against Salt Lake, while Samantha Misa had 11 and Elisa Brochado chipped in nine. CSI stumbled out of the gates in dropping the first set and labored through the first part of the second, but put on a volleyball clinic in its run to the second set and the complete domination of Salt Lake in the third. But the Bruins got up off the deck and forced the fifth set — they had been 6-3 in decisive sets prior to Friday, while CSI had been just 1-5. "The fifth set is our most confident set because it's a brand new game," said Salt Lake outside hitter Ame' White, who terrorized CSI in the regional tournament on her way to MVP honors and finished with 10 kills Friday night. "CSI brings a big game, and we like big games. It didn't turn out the way we wanted but we never stopped fighting and we can hold our heads high." The fifth set was won purely on desire. The teams traded points until CSI won three straight points at 7-7 to gain

HORNETS STUNG AGAIN

DECLO DÉJÀ VU

Declo players Larsen Webb (6) and Craig Christensen (67) console each other while Parma celebrates winning the Class 2A state championship Friday night at Holt Arena in Pocatello.

Hornets lose to Parma in 2A title game for second straight year

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

POCATELLO — After a lifetime of dreaming of this moment, plus months of off-season workouts, two-a-days in August, an eight-game regular season and four state playoff games, the Declo Hornets' state title hopes hinged on one simple bounce of the ball. Declo trailed 21-20 with 7:57 remaining, but the Hornets had all the momentum. Declo forced Parma to punt — the first punt of the game for either team. However, the dreaded turf goblin at Holt Arena caused the ball to take an unfortunate bounce off a Declo player's foot, and Parma pounced on the loose ball at Declo's 13-yard line. The Panthers scored one play later to steal momentum and went on to win the Class 2A state championship, 36-20. "To win a title, you've got to be strong, stay healthy and all of those things, but you've got to be lucky, too," said Parma coach Greg Asbury. "If (Declo) goes down and scores again, I thought they would have won the game, to be honest with you. We got a lucky bounce of the ball."

After trailing 21-6 early in the third quarter, Declo came storming back. Jeremy Jenkins threw a 64-yard touchdown pass to McCoy Stoker to make it 21-12. Then, Logan Knopp intercepted quarterback Trevor Kramer on Parma's next possession to set up Declo's 15-play, 73-yard scoring drive that culminated in Jenkins' 1-yard TD sneak to make it a one-point game. "In football at every level, heart and character has a lot to do with your belief in whether or not you think you can get it done," said Declo coach Kelly Kidd. "When it was 21-20, the Hornets believed they were going to win the football game. One crazy bounce of the football changed the mentality of our whole team and gave (Parma) the momentum back." Blame for the muffed punt cannot be pinned on the player whose foot the ball touched. He was wisely moving away from the ball on the play, but it took a bad hop. After the muffed punt and Parma's quick score, Declo turned the ball over on downs for the fourth time. Parma then extended its lead and put the game away on Kramer's 5-yard touchdown run. As a rematch of the 2008 title game, in which Parma beat Declo 29-28, the sequel played out eerily similar. Each team had most of the same cast of characters. Just like 2008, Parma again led by a touchdown at halftime and Declo made a second-half comeback. But while the Hornets would have liked nothing more to rewrite the ending, the final plot unfolded the same. Just like 2008, the game came down to a botched special teams play. "There were a few little things that we could have done to make it a better outcome for us," said Declo senior lineman Drew Matsen

"There were a few little things that we could have done to make it a better outcome for us. But we played solid all game. Parma is just a good football team. We figured that the team that made the most mistakes would lose. I think that happened."

Martin leads Boise State in blowout

By Doug Alden
Associated Press writer

LOGAN, Utah — Doug Martin ran for 121 yards and four touchdowns and No. 6 Boise State remained unbeaten and in BCS contention with a 52-21 victory over Utah State on Friday night. Jeremy Avery added 116 yards rushing and two touchdowns for the Broncos (11-0, 6-0 Western Athletic Conference), who gained 243 yards and scored four TDs in the second quarter — two 43 seconds apart to break a 14-all tie. Boise State added another touchdown barely 2 minutes into the third quarter and what was a close game for about 25 minutes turned into the rout it was expected to be. Utah State (3-8, 2-5) fell to 1-51 against ranked teams. Boise State's Kellen Moore was a

What depleted backfield? With Martin, BSU rolls

LOGAN, Utah — Looks like Doug Martin is feeling better. The sophomore tailback drudged up his dynamo self and scored four touchdowns in Boise State's 52-21 drubbing of Utah State on Friday night. Martin tallied 121 yards on 13 carries, but he wasn't the only rushing star. Jeremy Avery added 116 yards and two scores on 16 carries against the hapless Aggies (3-8, 2-5 Western Athletic Conference). Avery's 23-yard run in the third quarter put him over 1,000 yards on the season. He now has 1,008 for the year. It was suggested that the unbeaten and No. 6 Broncos would be able to run against USU, but with both backs going over 100 yards, it's safe to say the BSU rushing attack will be OK without Richie Brockel and Matt Kaiserman. Brockel and Kaiserman both suffered season-ending injuries against Idaho last week.

KNICKS' ANSWER: NO TO IVERSON

GREENBURGH, N.Y. (AP) — The New York Knicks won't sign Allen Iverson, believing any short-term gain would hinder their plans to build for the future. Team president Donnie Walsh said Friday the team won't make any additions at this time despite its 2-9 record. He added the decision to pass on the former MVP had nothing to do with Iverson's ability to play or his character in the locker room. "I've always admired him," Walsh said. "I think he'd be a great addition for a team that's in a different position than we're in and I hope he gets picked up." Coach Mike D'Antoni said Iverson would have come in and played 40 minutes a game, taking playing time away from others who need to be on the court to continue their growth. "We just didn't think right now we wanted to have that dominant force on the team right now," D'Antoni said.

the Sixers (5-7).

THIS WEEK'S BIGGEST COLLEGE FOOTBALL GAMES

NO. 9 OHIO STATE (9-2, 6-1 BIG TEN) VS. MICHIGAN (5-6, 1-6) 10 a.m. MST (ABC)

Line: Ohio State by 12.
Series Record: Michigan leads 57-42-6.
Last meeting: 2008, Ohio State 42-7.

What's at Stake

Ohio State has already accepted a Rose Bowl bid and won at least a share of a fifth straight Big Ten title. It can win an outright championship with a sixth straight win against rival Michigan. The Wolverines need a victory to become bowl eligible, take some heat off coach Rich Rodriguez and avoid consecutive losing years for the first time since 1962-63.

Key Matchup

Ohio State QB Terrelle Pryor vs. Michigan DE Brandon Graham. Pryor, who considered attending Michigan after it hired Rodriguez, has thrown three touchdowns and run for two scores without throwing an interception in his last three games. Graham, who leads the nation with 21 tackles for losses, is Michigan's best hope to force Pryor into mistakes.

NO. 11 OREGON (8-2, 6-1 PAC-10) AT ARIZONA (6-3, 4-2) 6 p.m. MST (ABC)

Line: Oregon by 6.
Series record: Oregon leads, 20-14.
Last meeting: 2008, Oregon 55-45.

What's At Stake

The winner will gain control of the Rose Bowl race. Several teams still have a shot at the Pac-10 title, but the Ducks and Wildcats are the only ones who control their own destinies. Only one of them will be able to say that after this game. Both teams still have big rivalry games after this one, and Arizona also has to play at USC, so the winner won't be able to book reservations for Pasadena just yet.

Key Matchup

Arizona's front seven vs. Oregon's backfield. The Ducks rush for 237 yards a game, sixth in the nation. The Wildcats give up 104 yards per game, 20th in the nation. Oregon's attack thrives on the deft ball fakes of quarterback Jeremiah Masoli, so Arizona NT Donald Horton and DE Ricky Elmore will have to be disciplined. Masoli ran for three TDs, including a 66-yarder, in the Ducks' 55-45 victory in Eugene last year.

CALIFORNIA (7-3, 4-3 PAC-10) AT NO. 14 STANFORD (7-3, 6-2) 5:30 p.m. MST (Versus)

Line: Stanford by 7.

Series Record: Stanford leads 55-45-11.

Last meeting: 2008, California 37-16.

What's at Stake

Stanford can make it to the Rose Bowl with a win and losses by Oregon, Oregon State and Arizona. A win and a loss by Oregon would give the Cardinal at least a share of the conference title. The Bears are playing for pride and the Axe.

Key Matchup

California DL vs. Stanford OL. The Golden Bears got three sacks last week against an Arizona team that had allowed only four all season going into the game. Stanford has been almost as tough, giving up just six sacks this season.

AIR FORCE (7-4, 5-2 MOUNTAIN WEST) AT NO. 19 BYU (8-2, 5-1) 1:30 p.m. MST (CBS College)

Line: BYU by 10.
Series Record: BYU leads 23-6.
Last Meeting: 2008, BYU 38-24.

What's at Stake

After TCU's rout of Utah last week, about the only race left in the Mountain West is for second place. Air Force has won three straight and still has a chance to finish with a share of second place with a win on Saturday, which is the Falcons' final game of the regular season. BYU closes the regular season with two straight at home — Air Force, then rival Utah next week.

Key Matchup

Air Force's running game vs. BYU's defense. The Falcons lead the Mountain West and are fourth nationally in rushing with an average of 279 yards per game, but are last in the league in passing offense. BYU has been more effective at stopping the run than the pass.

SAN DIEGO STATE (4-6, 2-4 MOUNTAIN WEST) AT NO. 23 UTAH (8-2, 5-1) 2 p.m. MST (VERSUS)

Line: Utah by 20.
Series Record: Utah leads 15-12-1.
Last Meeting: 2008, Utah 63-14.

What's at Stake

The Aztecs can finish the regular season at .500 if they win out against Utah and at UNLV next week. The last time San Diego State avoided a losing record was when the Aztecs went 6-6 in 2003. San Diego State hasn't had a winning record since going 7-5 in 1998. Utah is trying to remain in contention for second place in the Mountain West after last week's 55-28 loss at TCU.

Key Matchup

Utah's secondary against San Diego State's receivers. The Aztecs have been relying on the pass, averaging 261.5 yards per game — No. 2 in the MWC. The Utes have been holding opponents to 173 passing yards.

Westwood shoots 69, leads at Dubai World Championship

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates — Lee Westwood shot a 3-under 69 Friday to take a two-stroke lead after the second round of the Dubai World Championship, strengthening his chance of winning the European money title.

The English golfer could pick up two big prizes on Sunday. If he wins the last tournament of the European Tour season, he will receive $1.25 million in prize money — plus a $1.5 million bonus for winning the Race to Dubai money prize.

Northern Ireland's Rory McIlroy, the leader of the money race going into the tournament, also shot a 69. He was one of six players tied for second place at 7 under, two shots behind Westwood.

The others are Ireland's Padraig Harrington, England's Ross McGowan, Australia's Robert Allenby, South Africa's Louis Oosthuizen and Colombia's Camilo Villegas.

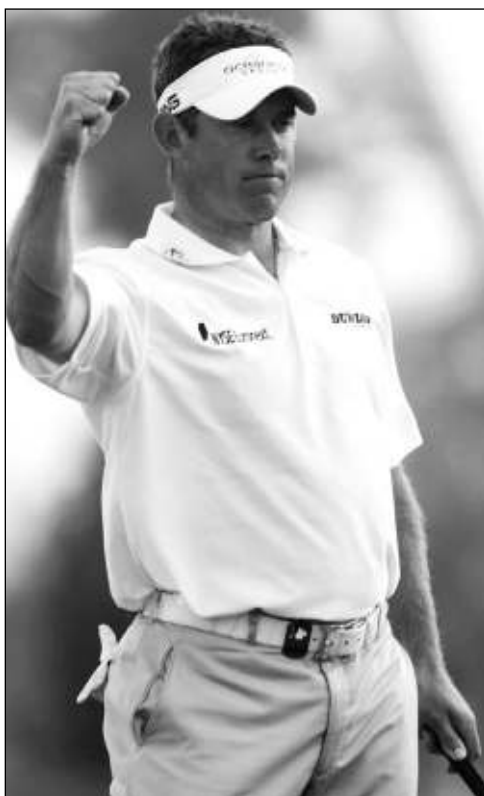

Westwood is confident of winning both prizes.

"I am as much in control of my game as I have been for a long time," he said after a round that began with two birdies on the Earth Course. "I feel very calm and happy with myself. All parts of my game feel solid and I enjoy times like this. I know that if I play as good as I can play I can win this tournament."

IDLE OCHOA LEADS LPGA TOUR CHAMPIONSHIP

RICHMOND, Texas — Sophie Gustafson moved within two shots of leader Lorena Ochoa at the LPGA Tour Championship on Friday before second-round play was suspended because of bad weather.

Rain swamped the Houstonian Golf and Country Club before dawn and the start of the second round was pushed back six hours. The tournament resumed at 1 p.m., but light rain started falling about two hours later and play was halted for the Ochoa didn't play on Friday after shooting a 6-under 66 early Thursday. She will start her second round at daybreak today.

Gustafson shot a 70 in the first round, then played 11 holes and moved to 4 under on Friday. Helen Alfredsson, Juli Inkster and Wendy Ward were 3 under.

POINTS, BETTENCOURT LEAD AT PEBBLE BEACH

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. — D.A. Points shot a 2-under 70 at Del Monte, and Matt Bettencourt had a 71 in wind and rain at Spyglass Hill to share the second-round lead Friday in the Callaway Golf Pebble Beach Invitational.

Points, 66th on the PGA Tour money list this season, had a scrambling round with two eagles, three birdies, two bogeys and a triple bogey.

Bettencourt, who won the 2008 Nationwide Tour Championship and just completed his rookie season on the PGA Tour, had four birdies and three bogeys to match Points at 6-under 138.

Champions Tour veteran Jim Thorpe, who had 72 at Spyglass Hill, and PGA Tour newcomer Craig Bowden, who shot a 68 at Del Monte, were tied for third at 5 under.

Matsen. “But we played solid all game. Parma is just a good football team. We figured that the team that made the most mistakes would lose. I think that happened.”

Kramer, Tyler Ford, and Lance Johnson combined for 227 yards rushing in Parma’s option offense.

“That option causes teenage kids all sorts of dilemmas,” Kidd said. “We made some adjustments at halftime and they worked out well and we gave ourselves a chance to win the game.”

Kidd praised Parma’s ability to run the ball against Declo’s defense, especially studs Sage Warner and Mark Knobbe.

“I’m not sure how they did it, but they neutralized two of the best kids in the state and made them non-factors in the game,” Kidd said. “We didn’t do a good enough job of freeing up those two kids so that they could make the plays that they usually make.”

Asbury said the Panthers’ rushing success came from a new wrinkle installed just this week.

“We ran an inside dive on them, which we haven’t run all year. It came to me on Wednesday at practice,” Asbury said. “We thought it might work, and it did. I thought, you know, this might work, and it did. For a kid with a broken ankle, (Knobbe) played his butt off.”

While Parma’s option gave Declo trouble, it was Kramer’s arm that caused the most damage. The junior completed 9 of 14 passes for 206 yards.

“The difference in the game in my mind was the fact that we were able to throw the ball over their heads a few times,” Asbury said.

Declo turned the ball over on downs to end its first two drives of the night after the Hornets drove to Parma’s 5 and 26 yard lines, respectively.

After Declo’s first turnover on downs, Parma drove 95 yards in 13 plays, highlighted by Kramer’s 35-yard pass over the top to Devin Erickson, and Johnson ran for the 9-yard touchdown to give Parma an early 7-0 lead.

Declo got on the board in the second quarter when Jenkins raced 49 yards for a TD.

Another long pass from Kramer to Erickson over the top set up Parma’s next score, which Johnson punched in from a yard out,

“It’s devastating,” Kidd said. “We knew the game would hinge on a turnover or a special teams play. That turned the tide of the game. It took the heart right out of us.”

Next year Parma (11-0) moves up to Class 3A, leaving the 2A ranks as back-to-back state champs and with a 22-game winning streak. Declo finished its season 11-1 and with its second state title game appearance in school history.

“We feel proud to do that,” Matsen said. “Yeah, we lost, but we accomplished something that no other Declo team has. We won 11 straight games. We were hoping for a 12th, but you always have trials and tribulations.”

modest 15 for 29 for 233 yards with a touchdown, breaking a streak of six straight games with three of more touchdown passes. But he had enough help in the backfield that it didn’t matter.

The Broncos rushed for a season-high 323 yards and outgained the Aggies 572-363.

Diondre Borel was 18 for 30 for 201 yards and kept the Aggies alive by avoiding several sacks with his speed, but the Broncos eventually started catching him and Utah State didn’t have enough other weapons to keep up after matching Boise State’s first two touchdowns.

After Robert Turbin tied it at 14 on a 24-yard run for the Aggies with 6:28 left in the second, the Broncos drove 73 yards in four plays to retake the lead for good. Titus Young made a diving grab with a defender all over him for a 56-yard catch at the 2, where Martin easily ran it in for a 21-14 lead.

Then Utah State fumbled a handoff and Ryan Winterswyk recovered at the 9 for the Broncos and Avery scored on first down, putting the Broncos up 28-14 with 4:04 left in the quarter.

Being down two touchdowns at halftime would have been tolerable for the Aggies, but another defensive lapse late in the period allowed the Broncos to drive for a 1-yard touchdown by Martin with five seconds left in the half. The Aggies almost had Boise State stopped on third-and-10 with about a minute left, but Martin broke through for a 17-yard run to keep the drive going.

The Broncos opened the third quarter with a 71-yard drive, needing only four plays to score again on a 32-yard run by Avery.

Boise State intercepted a tipped pass on the opening possession and quickly took a 7-0 lead on a pass from Moore to Tommy Gallarda.

Boise State quarterback Kellen Moore (11) scrambles as he is pressured by the Utah State defense during the second quarter at Romney Stadium, Friday in Logan, Utah.

The 1-2 punch of Avery and Martin gives Boise State legitimate balance. And the Broncos needed it against Utah State, which somehow held Kellen Moore to the worst completion percentage of his career (15-for-29). Moore had never before had a game with less than 60 percent completion percentage. He was averaging more than three touchdowns per game this season and only threw one at USU.

But his backs picked him up with big runs all night long. They ran power, counter, a little option, some Wildcat, some reverses and end-arounds, everything and anything they could.

Even Titus Young got in the action. Young hasn’t been getting into the end zone as much as he’d like, but he finished with 37 yards on a pair of carries. He also had an 80-yard TD called back for holding.

Heck, even Jarvis Hodge picked up a 14-yard run on the final drive and probably would have scored if time wasn’t running out and the Broncos took a knee. Hodge had 46 yards on seven carries, all on the last drive.

BSU gained a season best 323 yards on the ground.

Boise State head coach Chris Petersen is always saying that he’ll do whatever he needs to do to win. He proved that in sticking with the run on Friday.

This is a sign that the offensive line – in such rapid carousel last season – has finally settled down. The five guys sometimes change, but there is a core beginning to emerge. With center Thomas Byrd, guards Kevin Sapien and Will Lawrence and tackles Nate Potter and Garrett Pendergast, there are five guys finally getting it done in the trenches.

It’s also a scheme thing that’s working for the Broncos. They are doing more counters, pulling Byrd and a guard around to seal the edge. They also fake the end-around repeatedly and actually hand it off at times to make sure the defense will buy the fakes. If you don’t fire the end-around, the inside power play can be overloaded. But if safeties have to stay home on the edge to watch out for Young they cannot plug the middles in run support. It’s pretty simple: keep defenses guessing.

The play-action runs are like the option game BSU cannot run (but would love to) because Moore is not a running quarterback. By faking defenses and calling plays to cause confusion, they accomplish the same task.

Martin came into the game after nursing a hip flexor strain for the past few weeks. He said sitting on the bench was getting to him. He knew that Friday would be different. Petersen would give him the ball. He shared it with Avery. Together they ruled the day. If this can stay constant, if BSU can win by 31 points when Moore plays poorly, then this team could truly be unstoppable in its quest for the perfection.

New Lutheran body to form after gay pastor vote

By Patrick Condon
Associated Press writer

NEW BRIGHTON, Minn. — The split over gay clergy within the country’s largest Lutheran denomination has prompted a conservative faction to begin forming a new Lutheran church body separate from the Evangelical Lutheran Church in America.

Leaders of Lutheran CORE said Wednesday that a working group would immediately begin drafting a constitution and taking other steps to form the denomination, with hopes to have it off the ground by next August.

“There are many people within the ELCA who are very unhappy with what has happened,” said the Rev. Paull Spring, chairman of Lutheran CORE and a retired ELCA bishop from State College, Pa.

At its annual convention in Minneapolis in August, ELCA delegates voted to lift a ban that had prohibited sexually active gay and lesbian pastors from serving as clergy. The new policy, expected to take effect in April, will allow such individuals to lead ELCA churches as long as they can show that they are in committed, lifelong relationships.

Opponents, led by Lutheran CORE, said that decision is in direct contradiction to Scripture.

At a September convention, Lutheran CORE members voted to spend a year considering whether to form a new Lutheran denomination. However, its leaders said Wednesday that a heavy volume of requests for an alternative from disenfranchised congregations and churchgoers prompted them to hasten the process.

John Brooks, spokesman at the ELCA’s Chicago-based headquarters, said Lutheran CORE’s move was not unexpected. He expressed hope that church members would ultimately opt to stay in the denomination as it strives to be “a place for all people despite any differences we might have on any issues.”

Neither Brooks nor Lutheran CORE leaders would guess what kind of numbers a new denomination might attract. Lutheran CORE leaders believe there is deep opposition to the new policy among rank-and-file churchgoers, but NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Terverius Black believes in hip-hop gospel so much he sold his first home to get the money needed to start his Christian-themed entertainment company.

It was a risky move, but the 34-year-old entrepreneur believes the company’s diversity, which is producing music, a film, a reality television show and a gospel cruise, will help boost a struggling genre of Christian music.

Secular hip-hop used radio as a launching pad, but holy hip-hop gets little play on regular hip-hop stations and nearly none on gospel or Christian radio.

get a little more creative,” said Black, who started Huntsville, Ala.-based Xist (pronounced “exist”) Worldwide Record Label three years ago with partner Sean Simmonds.

Both men point to hip-hop moguls like Sean “Diddy” Combs, Jay-Z and Russell Simmons, who succeeded branching outside the music industry. Even though their message is faith-based, Black and Simmonds believe they can find the same success.

“We’re trying to create our own blueprint for gospel, but at the same time, make it so that it’s respected across the board, and can be followed,” said Simmonds, 32.

Hip-hop gospel has been around nearly two decades, but many followers say it didn’t start getting recognized until a few years ago. So far this year, there have been more than 500,000 CD and digital sales of hip-hop gospel, according to the Christian Music Trade Association, which operates Christian SoundScan.

Supporters also point to an increasing number of hip-hop gospel fan Web sites.

“I think holy hip-hop music is starting to make a move,” said Danny Wilson, a former road manager for rapper-actor LL Cool J and the main organizer of the Holy Hip Hop Awards in Atlanta. “Look how long it took regular hip hop to take. You’re talking about 25 to 30 years for it to really make an impact to the point that it’s a driving culture that’s known all over the world.”

Wilson said better air play of hip-hop gospel would make it a more effective tool in reaching the unchurched. He

Area churches giving thanks

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

It’s a good time of year to be thankful. And Magic Valley churches are just that, they told the Times-News recently.

Here’s a few church leaders and what they say they and their congregations are thankful for this season:

Eastside Southern Baptist (Twin Falls): “We’re thankful to God for his grace,” said Pastor Paul Thompson. “We’re unmerited, undeserving and he still gives us grace.”

Thompson said God’s blessings have been prevalent in congregants’ lives this year in a number of ways, including opening doors to financial aid for those who’ve lost jobs or battled health issues.

The church also has been able to send some of its members abroad to spread Christianity. Areas where people have served include an orphanage in Vietnam and areas of extreme poverty in Mexico,

Thompson said.

“The Lord has been very kind to invite us to join in his good works,” he said.

Clover Trinity Lutheran (Buhl): “I’m thankful for the families (of the church) and for the health that we’re enjoying now,” said Pastor Mark Christ. While people elsewhere have been afflicted with the H1N1 virus, members of his church, he said, including its children, have for the most part remained healthy.

“I’m thankful for the families that are here and their willingness to work together,” he said.

United Methodist (Jerome and Filer): “We’re thankful for 100 years of ministry in Jerome County,” said Pastor Carol Thompson. The Jerome church celebrated its centennial in September.

Members also are grateful for a new heating and cooling system that was installed in the church this year, and for the fact that “most of it is paid for,” she said.

Thompson also is pastor of United Methodist Church in Filer, where there’s a “spirit of faithfulness,” she said. Even though they’re a small bunch, “there’s a faithful remnant there and they’re not giving up. ... I’m thankful for that.”

Hansen Baptist Fellowship (Hansen): “We have a lot to be thankful for,” said Pastor Doug Stevenson, noting that many in society don’t know how to be thankful. But, he said, out of thankfulness to God and others comes joy.

The church, which started in April 2008, hosts a Clothes Closet every month that provides clothing and other items to area needy. Stevenson said he’s thankful for the many people who have and continue to donate items. And, he said, he knows the beneficiaries also are thankful.

“That kind of gratitude makes you feel humble,” he said.

“We’re unmerited, undeserving and he still gives us grace.”

Golden cross in Vatican's collection gets new look

By Nicole Winfield
Associated Press writer

VATICAN CITY — One of the gems of the Vatican's priceless religious art collection — a 6th century reliquary containing what is revered as fragments of the cross on which Jesus was crucified — has been restored to its Byzantine-era glory.

The Vatican on Thursday unveiled the restored Crux Vaticana, a foot-high (40-centimeter-high) jewel-encrusted golden cross containing what tradition holds are shards of Jesus' cross inside.

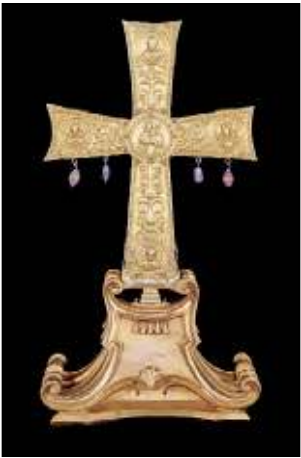

The Associated Press was given an early look at the piece, and Byzantine art experts said the restoration rendered the cross much closer to what it would have looked like at the time the Byzantine Emperor Justin II gave it to the people of Rome.

Most significantly, the restoration corrected a botched 19th century restoration that threatened to corrode the piece. And it replaced the brightly colored gems that were added in previous centuries with the large, imperfect pearls that are emblematic of Byzantine-era imperial masterpieces, said restorer Sante Guido.

A circle of 12 pearls now surrounds the relic, and pearls around the cross' edge now alternate with emeralds and sapphires — the two other gems most often associated with Byzantine emperors, he said.

While there are purported fragments of Christ's cross in churches around the world — including at Paris' Notre Dame and even across town at Rome's Holy Cross basilica — the Crux Vaticana is considered the oldest reliquary of the cross. It is the crown in the Vatican's Treasury of St. Peter's collection of religious and historic artifacts.

In addition to the relic inside, the cross itself is an important piece of early

These photos provided by Ku.Ra Comunicazione agency shows the front, above, and back of the Crux Vaticana (Vatican Cross) before restoration. Christian art. Measuring 15.75 inches by 11.81 inches it's a rare example of an imperial gift and an expression of the emperor's Christian faith. Across the piece is written in Latin: "With the wood with which Christ conquered man's enemy, Justin gives his help to Rome and his wife offers the ornamentation."

"It's the most important reliquary of the 'true cross' that we have," Guido told the AP. "It's particularly important because it's the only reliquary that came from an emperor, so there are various levels of religious and historic significance."

For centuries, the cross was used in the Vatican's most solemn ceremonies at Christmas and Easter. But 1,500 years of candle wax and smoke had dulled the gems and the cross' warm golden hue — grime that has been removed following a two-year restoration.

The work was paid for by an anonymous donor who didn't want the pricetag to be made public, officials said.

Ioli Kalavrezou, a Byzantine art history professor at Harvard University who has taught classes on the cross, said the restoration clearly rendered the cross closer to what it would have looked like when it was presented to Romans sometime between 565-578.

"I can't say it's exactly as it would've been, but it comes much closer to what an object like that would've looked like," she said in a phone interview.

The exact circumstances of why Justin gave Rome the relic are unclear. Guido noted that even though the eastern Byzantine Empire gained prominence in Constantinople after the 476 fall of the Roman Empire, Rome remained a religious capital because it was the "city of martyrs" — where Saints Peter and Paul were buried.

Emperor Justin clearly wanted to give the pope and people of Rome "a recognition of Rome as a city of Christianity," Guido said. At the time, most parts of Christ's cross were in the hands of the Byzantine emperor in Constantinople after being moved from Jerusalem in the 4th century, Kalavrezou noted.

"This is one of the earliest examples of this imperial gift, where he (Justin) shows the power he has in his hands — to control the most important relic in Christianity and to have the luxury to make a gift of that," she said from Washington, where she is a visiting scholar at the Dumbarton Oaks Byzantine research library.

The cross will be on public display inside St. Peter's Basilica through April 12.

Not my job

Let's be very clear about this right up front: it was not Geoff's job to remove that dirt.

It was his job to take the complaint and to notify others of the constituent's legitimate concern. And he did so. Several times. Each time with increasing urgency.

But it wasn't his job to actually remove the dirt from the elderly woman's driveway. There's no doubt about that. He wasn't part of the construction crew that left it there. In fact, he wasn't part of a crew at all. In the blue collar world of road construction, his collar was decidedly white. It would probably be a violation of some union rule or regulation for him to move anything anywhere. And the last thing he needed at this point in his career was trouble with some union boss somewhere.

And it wasn't as if he hadn't already done a ton of stuff for this woman. He heard from her often, and he always responded. Even when she threatened to chain herself to a sign. Or a tree. Or whatever it was that she threatened to chain herself to. Geoff always responded patiently. Kindly. Graciously. That was his job.

Even if moving dirt wasn't.

But this time his efforts to address the woman's concerns were unsuccessful. He tried going through channels but never got anywhere. Everyone was too busy or too apathetic or too unwilling to accept responsibility. None of which mattered to the woman. She just wanted that pile of dirt removed from her driveway before the snow fell.

And according to the TV weather person, snow was on its way. That night.

Geoff made one last attempt to get the people responsible for creating the dirt pile to move it. "We'll get to it — eventually," he was told. "But we're awfully busy tonight. There's a storm blowing in."

"I know," Geoff said. "That's the point. We need to get that pile of dirt off her driveway before the storm hits. She can't shovel her driveway if that dirt is still there."

"We've got other priorities. We'll get to it if we can."

Geoff understood that tone. He'd heard it before. It meant: "She's on her own."

And to Geoff, that was unacceptable. This wasn't about turf or responsibility or job descriptions. This was about a frustrated older woman who might get stuck in her driveway if somebody didn't come move the pile of dirt. So he grabbed a truck from the motor pool and had his wife bring his shovel and broom down to the office. At the same time as everyone else in the office was going home, Geoff hopped in the truck and drove 25 miles to the woman's house. As the first squalls of the first winter storm of the season billowed around him, Geoff shoveled the dirt pile into the back of the pickup, swept the last of the dirt off the woman's driveway and hauled the dirt back to another project that he knew could use the material.

And yes, he sweated a little under that white collar — swirling snow notwithstanding.

In a perfect world, the woman would have seen him working outside her home and come out to thank him and warm him with hot chocolate. Or the workers would have finally showed up and helped him finish the project, apologizing profusely. But she didn't, and they didn't. As far as I know, neither the woman nor the workers even know what Geoff did. But Geoff knows. And now, you do too. I wanted you to know because as far as I'm concerned, the world is a little better place every time one of us sees a personal, human need and addresses it in a personal, human way.

Even if it isn't our job.

Hip-hop

cites a syndicated two-hour radio show sponsored by Holy Hip Hop Awards that airs once a week in about 100 cities.

"We get letters from prison all the time," Wilson said. "One man wrote, 'I wish I had this music when I was out on the street, it might have saved my life.'"

Joey Elwood, president of Gotee Records, a small independent label, agrees hip-hop gospel would benefit from more air play on both gospel and secular outlets, but he believes "a lot of the outlets are afraid of offending people."

"If there's any genre where I think that would not be an issue, it would be in hip-hop," Elwood said. "I think hip-hop listeners are less likely to complain about a gospel message in their song. The radio stations have got to get a little bit braver."

Xist could create more awareness and demand for its music with its other ventures, said Kymberlee Norsworthy, director of publicity for Verity Gospel Music Group, a subsidiary of Sony.

"I think only time will tell, but I have faith and confidence that it will be successful," she said of the company.

Xist's film, "Stand," and its reality TV show focus on three young hip-hop gospel artists struggling in the industry who refuse to trade their beliefs for fame.

Black said the gospel cruise, which allows fans to mingle with their favorite artists, is also an opportunity for people to enjoy themselves "and not ... worry about compromising what they believe in."

"We Christians, but we party, too," he said.

The key will be staying true to a Christian message, said Vassal Benford, a top California-based record and movie producer who is working on his first gospel album. Xist needs to clearly distinguish the music from secular hip hop, whose reputation and lyrics are often "centered around a lot of darkness," such as robbing and killing.

"Gospel music has a certain wholesomeness to it," he said. "And whether it's a hip-hop beat or whatever it is under it, the underlying cause of it should always be about God and ... creating a positive influence."

Lutheran

said some may not be willing to actually depart the ELCA over it.

Brooks said the ELCA has not seen significant departures yet, but he cautioned it's too soon after the August decision to read much into that.

So far, he said, five congregations nationwide have voted to leave the ELCA. More have started the process, with 87 taking a first vote to leave the denomination. Of those, 28 did not achieve the two-thirds vote necessary to leave the ELCA. In all, there are 10,300 ELCA churches in the country with about 4.7 million members.

If a congregation passes the two-thirds bar on its first vote, it must then wait 90 days before taking a second, final vote that also requires a two-thirds majority.

Other Christian denominations have seen factions split off over the gay clergy debate. In 2003, the 2 million-member Episcopal Church consecrated its first openly gay bishop, a move that alienated American Episcopalians from its worldwide parent, the Anglican Communion. The divide has led to the formation of the more conservative Anglican Church in North America, which claims 100,000 members.

In addition to helping birth a new Lutheran church body, Lutheran CORE leaders said their organization would continue its recent move toward creating a free-floating synod within the ELCA for congregations opposed to the liberalized policy but who don't want to leave the denomination.

Lutheran CORE has also urged supportive congregations to stop paying so-called mission support funds that help supplement the ELCA's operating budget. Last weekend, ELCA leaders reduced their 2010 operating budget by $7.7 million, a move Brooks said was motivated mainly by the U.S. economy but also in part by an expected drop in the mission funds.

Ryan Schwarz, a Lutheran CORE member from Washington, D.C., is charged with leading the organizing effort for the new denomination. He said a committee would begin work immediately on drafting a constitution, building a budget and other steps needed to form the yet-unnamed denomination. They hope to have it ready to go by next August, he said.

"Many of us have spent years now struggling to call the ELCA to remain faithful to the Orthodox Christianity of the last 2,000 years," Schwarz said. "While this is of course a wrenching decision, there is also a sense of hope in refocusing on our true mission, which is evangelizing the Lutheran faith."

Disappointed at formation of local secular group

I must say that I was certainly disappointed but not surprised that a group like the Secular Student Alliance would try to be a recognized club on the campus of the College of Southern Idaho. Secularism or secular humanism has been around for at least 35 years now and has continued to degrade our country and its values. Secularism continues to promote the idea that man had the need of a god and created one in his image to fulfill the need for deity. It is this movement that has permeated higher education for many decades now. It has stripped the moral high ground away from our nation and has allowed for this false idea of "human-based ethics" as a guide for our nation. Without morality, ethics are only a fad. Ethics have no foundation from which to gain staying power. Those who follow such a philosophy are left to the whims of society. We see such examples manifest today with the desire of some groups to redefine the family, marriage and by the legalization of abortion. There is no moral clarity on these subjects for the secularist. To make matters more extreme, it is this movement that has become the recognized religion by many in government. No longer can any Judeo-Christian ethic be taught in the public arena without opposition. Instead we concede to the new religion of secularism to leave our nation awash in moral ambiguity. When those people of faith seek to voice their opinions in such a society, they are discounted and labeled as extreme. It is this new religion of secularism that will remove religious freedom from our country and faith from our government. Those who profess this new faith claim intellectual enlightenment and freedom. In so doing, they deny the creator of mankind and the source from which this country's blessings originate. JEFF ACKERMAN

Christians and global warming

In response to the article about a Christian couple writing a book to inform the "undecided evangelicals and talk radio listeners" about their lack of knowledge concerning global warming: There has been global warming and cooling since the beginning of time. Hayhoe Farley says in the article that greenhouse gases are the only explanation she and others can find at this time. I would ask her why there has been global warming in the past not attributable to greenhouse gases. In the last few years, I've heard we've had a season of global cooling. There are just as many reputable scientists who would dispute the claims of global warming by human production. Unfortunately, their side of the story has not been told in the mainstream media. Because of the frenzy over global warming, surplus food that once fed starving and malnourished people in Third World countries has become more costly and harder to come by because crop production is being diverted to alternative fuels. With current legislation at the federal level being subjected to current global warming speculation, industry will suffer, ability to compete in the marketplace will be diminished and utility costs will soar. LARRY GARRETT

IDAHO Police say holdup claim was bogus

LEWISTON — Police in Lewiston say a convenience store manager who reported she'd been mugged on her way to deposit the day's profits at a local bank is now under investigation for fraud.

The Lewiston Tribune reports detectives are also searching for the woman's boyfriend, who they say may have conspired with her.

Police went to Wells Fargo bank on Wednesday after a woman called to say she'd been mugged. But Sgt. Jeff Arneson says the woman later admitted she made up the story, and her boyfriend is believed to have taken more than $4,000 of the deposit.

Capt. Tom Greene says charges are pending against both the woman and her boyfriend.

Idaho settles price charges with Sanofi-Aventis

BOISE — Idaho's Medicaid Division is getting a nearly $115,000 share from a nationwide settlement with French drug giant Sanofi-Aventis.

Attorney General Lawrence Wasden said Thursday the settlement resolves allegations that the company's Aventis Pharmaceutical unit knowingly misreported the lowest prices for three nasal sprays, Azmacort, Nasacort and Nasacort AQ.

The multistate and federal settlement totals $95.5 million.

Boise man faces stiffer crime for fatal punch

BOISE — A Boise man accused of killing a friend with a punch to the face has been charged with second-degree murder.

Ada County Prosecutors amended the criminal charge this week against 26-year-old Joshua Luman.

Luman was initially charged with second-degree murder, but prosecutors changed it days later to involuntary manslaughter. Police say Luman punched 26-year-old Noah Hopper while they were drinking near a bandshell at a Boise city park on Sept. 7.

After being hit, police say Hopper fell and hit his head, and died the next day after being taken to a Boise hospital.

Deputy County Attorney Barbara Duggan has not yet revealed details that prompted her to charge Luman with a more serious crime. If convicted, Luman faces up to life in prison.

Judge orders couple to file tax returns

BOISE — A district judge has ordered a southwestern Idaho couple to file state tax returns for two years in which their reported incomes totaled more than $475,000.

A 3rd District judge gave Trent Beattie and his wife, Pamela, a Dec. 11 deadline.

Court records show the couple earned $133,800 in 2006 and about $342,000 in 2007.

The Idaho State Tax Commission says this is not the first time legal action has been taken against Beattie, a manager at a medical device company, and his wife for not filing a tax return.

The commission says the couple was ordered earlier this year to file a 2005 return.

Monsanto aims to stop leaks at mine dump

BOISE — Monsanto Co. is installing a water management system at its southeastern Idaho phosphate mine that's leaking selenium and heavy metals into a tributary of the Blackfoot River.

The company hopes capturing runoff and underground water from the waste rock dump below its South Rasmussen Ridge Mine will remedy leaks that have resulted in Clean Water Act violation notices from the federal Environmental Protection Agency.

Activist groups have demanded Monsanto remedy problems like South Rasmussen's dump before it gets federal approval for a new mine nearby.

The St. Louis-based company says this water management system would have been built regardless of its efforts to mine elsewhere in the region.

Dave Farnsworth, who heads Monsanto's phosphate mining operations in Soda Springs, says "Our engineers have extensively studied this issue, and believe this design will work."

SW Idaho man pleads guilty to child injury

BOISE — A 35-year-old Caldwell man convicted this week of molesting a young girl has pleaded guilty in a separate case to injuring his young sons.

Kekoa Gaunavinaka pleaded guilty to two counts of felony injury to a child on Friday, when he was scheduled to face trial on the charges.

Gaunavinaka told the court he used a tree branch to discipline the children, who are adopted. Another time, he struck them with a shower curtain rod. The boys are nine and 10.

The Idaho Statesman reports the abuse spanned from January 2007 to April 2009.

In a separate case, a jury found Gaunavinaka guilty of lewd conduct in the molestation of a girl, who was 11, two years ago. Gaunavinaka will be sentenced in both cases Feb. 11.

Canyon County to pay ACLU legal fees

CALDWELL — Canyon County commissioners in southwestern Idaho have agreed to pay $190,000 to the American Civil Liberties Union for legal fees stemming from a federal lawsuit the group filed earlier this year.

The lawsuit filed in January in U.S. District Court on behalf of six inmates claimed conditions at the Canyon County Jail amounted to cruel and inhumane treatment of inmates.

In August, county officials and the ACLU signed an agreement that requires officials to closely monitor the jail population to avoid overcrowding. The county also agreed to maintain and repair heating, cooling and plumbing systems within two days of a problem developing.

Commissioner Steve Rule says he's not comfortable paying the money but the county would likely have faced a larger bill if it hadn't reached the settlement on Thursday.

NEVADA Wildlife officers seek elk poachers

ELKO, Nev. — Nevada game wardens are seeking information about two elk poached in northern Elko County near the Idaho line.

Nevada Department of Wildlife the cow elk and a calf were shot in the head with a high powered rifle and left to waste. They were found Tuesday at Young American Creek near the Bruneau River by a sportsman who called the agency's Operation Game Thief hot line.

Officers believe the animals were shot Nov. 6. There were many elk hunters in the vicinity at the time, and officers are hoping someone will come forward with information.

Investigators say at least one set of tracks from an all-terrain vehicle led to the animals, and they have evidence that could tie a suspect or suspects to the crime.

IF NOVEMBER 21 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: If you stick to business as usual for the next several weeks, your efforts will pay off. You have a head for business, but a soul that is inspired to succeed for all the right reasons. Every small success will build your confidence. In April you may feel that a commitment must be made, but if you are burdened by doubts you should delay the decision. A newfound sense of popularity may tempt you to make impulsive shifts. New insights and experiences will bring some spice into your life throughout May, and a very beneficial opportunity could serve to swing the direction of your life into improved avenues.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): This may be the right time to talk over any issues that have caused a temporary rift. You can harness an inspirational attitude.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You have a chance to treat yourself, as well as loved ones, to the good things in life. You have a beneficial, far-seeing perspective.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): If you hope to make a convincing presentation of any type, this is a good time to sit down and start working out the details.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): It will take some time to relax and unwind this weekend as it seems that you have been on a long and intense schedule.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Exuberant ideas and a sense of confidence may lead you into taking a few extra risks. A companion is needed to share creature comforts.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): What's good about the occasional conflicts that couples experience is that they provide an excuse to kiss and make up. Get smooching!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You are wise enough to appreciate your blessings. You may be feeling more attractive, generous and cheerful than usual.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Family matters may come to a head as you realize that home is truly where your heart is. Appreciate the special people in your life.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your spirits are uplifted by someone's appreciative actions. Take joy in your friends and the good luck that comes your way.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): True goodness always defeats the guys in the black hats. A kind-hearted philosophy also can conquer negativity in your life.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be a rock that everyone can depend upon. A new hookup seems to have a bright and prosperous future. Or does it?

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your sensitive nature doesn't need encouragement, but you will find it easier to be blissful when competition flies out the door.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"His imagination resembled the wings of an ostrich. It enabled him to run, though not to soar."
— Lord Macaulay (on Dryden)

If you want a challenge, cover up the East and West cards and see if you would have done better than the top-class international who misplayed this hand.

Against three no-trump West led the heart five to East's king and South's ace. Declarer started by playing ace, king and another club. East discarded a couple of diamonds as West won and continued with the heart jack. What next?

South won the heart queen and ran the clubs. Since East seemed to have started with the guards in diamonds, if he also held the spade king, he would be squeezed if West cashed his hearts. So South now exited with a heart. But West cashed his hearts as East discarded spades easily. Now a diamond exit from West forced declarer to lead away from the spade tenace and go one down.

Do you see where South went wrong? East appeared to have begun life with at least five diamonds when he discarded two of them on the early rounds of clubs. If he had started with four or fewer diamonds, he would surely have had spare hearts or spades to throw. So When South won the second heart, he should have cashed the diamond ace. Now he takes the remaining club winners and exits with a heart from dummy, and West has to lead a spade for South at the end.

When defending, remember that it is often much easier to pitch from a five-card suit than a four-carder — and declarer knows that too!

ANSWER: You are not overly endowed with high cards, but you do possess nice shape and apparently (facing relatively short hearts and a decent hand) have your cards in the right place. Jump to four spades rather than signing off in three spades or (horrors!) passing two no-trump.

Today is Saturday, Nov. 21, the 325th day of 2009. There are 40 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On Nov. 21, 1934, the Cole Porter musical "Anything Goes," starring Ethel Merman as Reno Sweeney, opened on Broadway.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1789, North Carolina became the 12th state to ratify the U.S. Constitution.

In 1922, Rebecca L. Felton of Georgia was sworn in as the first woman to serve in the U.S. Senate.

In 1927, picketing strikers at the Columbine Mine in northern Colorado were fired on by state police; six miners were killed.

In 1942, the Alaska Highway was formally opened.

In 1959, former heavyweight champion boxer and actor Max Baer died in Hollywood at age 50.

In 1969, the Senate voted down the Supreme Court nomination of Clement F. Haynsworth, 55-45, the first such rejection since 1930.

In 1973, President Richard Nixon's attorney, J. Fred Buzhardt, revealed the existence of an 18½-minute gap in one of the White House tape recordings related to Watergate.

In 1979, a mob attacked the U.S. Embassy in Islamabad, Pakistan, killing two Americans.

In 1980, 87 people died in a fire at the MGM Grand Hotel-Casino in Las Vegas.

In 1989, the proceedings of Britain's House of Commons were televised live for the first time.

Ten years ago: President Bill Clinton, speaking at a conference in Florence, Italy, called on prosperous nations to spread global wealth by helping poor countries with Internet hookups, cell phones, debt relief and small loans. China completed its first unmanned test of a spacecraft meant to carry astronauts. Quentin Crisp, the eccentric writer, performer and raconteur best-known for his autobiography "The Naked Civil Servant," died in Manchester, England, at age 90.

Five years ago: President George W. Bush, trying to mend relations with Latin America, pledged during an economic summit in Chile to make a fresh push for stalled immigration reforms. Iraqi authorities set Jan. 30, 2005, as the date for the nation's first election since the collapse of Saddam Hussein's dictatorship. Six Wisconsin hunters were shot to death by Chai Soua Vang, an ethnic Hmong immigrant who was later sentenced to life in prison. The NBA suspended Indiana's Ron Artest for the rest of the season following a brawl that broke out at the end of a game against the Detroit Pistons; eight other players received shorter bans.

One year ago: Wall Street staged a comeback, with the major indexes jumping more than 5 percent and the Dow Jones industrials surging nearly 500 points. Somali pirates released a hijacked Greek-owned tanker, MV Genius, with all 19 crew members safe and the oil cargo intact after payment of a ransom. (The ship had been seized almost two months earlier.) Madonna and Guy Ritchie were granted a preliminary decree of divorce by a London court.

DEAR ABBY: I am an 11-year-old girl who loves going shopping and doing various stuff with my mom. But when we go to the mall or stop for lunch and she hears a song she likes, she'll start singing to it. And if we're standing up, she even dances to it a little.

I have tried telling her to stop because she's embarrassing me, but all she says is, "No one is looking, honey." She also does it at home in front of my friends when I play my iPod. Any suggestions?

— BLUSHING
IN SAN FRANCISCO

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR BLUSHING: Your problem is one that has been shared by generations of young people. You have reached an age when image is becoming important to you, and you're afraid that your mother's behavior will reflect badly on you. It won't.

Rather than be embarrassed, please consider how lucky you are to have an upbeat, music-loving mother with a sense of rhythm and some knowledge of the lyrics. (If she has forgotten, be a sweetheart and offer to teach her.) I have it on good authority that an "old dog" can learn new tricks.

DEAR ABBY: After 30 years of marriage I still don't know how to tell my wife she can't cook. I came home tonight to find an expensive piece of meat I had been looking forward to eating reduced to shoe leather.

In our golden years, we will be able to afford to splurge on expensive cuts of meat, etc., only rarely. It is disappointing to have to toss it into the garbage.

I never encouraged my wife to cook, and usually the pressure of work distracts her. But she has been "surprising" me more often with "delicacies" on her days off.

I dread retirement. How can I nicely ask her not to go to the trouble of preparing these disastrous dishes?

— WANTS TO BE TACTFUL

DEAR WANTS: Who has been doing the cooking in your household all these years — or have the two of you been eating out? Because you can't bring yourself to tell your wife her cooking skills need improvement, allow me to offer an alternative. Sign the two of you up for nighttime cooking classes so she can brush up on her culinary skills and, if necessary, you can take over the role of family chef after you retire. Bon appetit!

DEAR ABBY: My parents divorced when I was 15. It was nasty. My mother, in an act of desperation, dragged me into it. I was placed in foster care until her allegations were looked into and found to be false.

I held a grudge for 10 years. During that time I was bitter, angry, shy, anxious, scared — overall, just a mess. I finally realized that until I addressed those feelings, it would affect all aspects of my life.

At 25, I am finally trying to have a relationship with my mother. It has been hard. There are some things from the past that I cannot forget, and I find it difficult to let go of my anger and resentment.

I'd like to write a book about my experience as a guide to forgiving and moving on, but if I do, I would not be able to hide my identity or my mother's. Is it realistic to write a self-help book without the world knowing it's my family I'm talking about? I'm longing to help others.

— ASPIRING WRITER
IN ILLINOIS

DEAR ASPIRING WRITER: It can be done. I can think of two ways to accomplish what you have in mind. The first would be to write the story as fiction. The second would be to adopt a pen name. Whether or not your story turns out to be a best seller, the experience would be cathartic.
