Structure built on U.S. 93, where deer and antelope play

 By Nate Poppino
 Times-News writer

WELLS, Nev. — Signs alone don't get drivers' attention.

And deer apparently pay no attention to car-mounted whistles, researchers have concluded 20 years after they were first used, because the animals can't actually hear them. The animals certainly aren't polite enough to wait for an opening in traffic.

So, in an attempt to keep fewer deer and other wildlife from being hit by cars along U.S. Highway 93, the Nevada Department of Transportation is building them their own highway crossing — a wildlife overpass about 10 miles north of Wells and 59 miles from the Idaho border.

When finished, the concrete structure will measure 66 feet wide, 162 feet long and almost 23 feet tall and will be covered with dirt and natural vegetation.

NDOT officials told the Elko Daily Free Press that they expected to have its base completed Thursday afternoon, ending traffic delays that the agency warned in a press release could last two hours at a time. A fence will eventually direct wildlife up and over the 26 precast concrete rings, each weighing 50,000 pounds, that make Construction workers hoist half of a prefabricated ring that will serve as part of the wildlife overpass on U.S. Highway 93 about 10 miles north of Wells, Nev.

Teacher shortage gives way to teacher glut

 By Heather Hollingsworth
 Associated Press writer

LAWRENCE, Kan. — When Lilli Lackey started college, talk of a growing teacher shortage gave her confidence that a job would be waiting for her when she got out.

Now, six months after graduating, she considers herself lucky just to find work as a substitute.

Across the country, droves of people like Lackey are unable to find teaching jobs, in large part because the economy is forcing school systems to slash positions. The teacher shortage that many feared just a few years ago has turned into a teacher glut.

"I always thought that if I didn't find a job, I would be able to sub. And then once that started to be more difficult, it was really kind of devastating," Lackey, an art teacher, said during a career fair for educators at the University of Kansas.

At the same time, many teachers who had planned to retire or switch jobs are staying on because of the recession, and many people who have been laid off in other fields are trying to carve out second careers as teachers or applying to work as substitutes to make ends meet.

Since last fall, school systems, state education agencies, technical schools and colleges have shed about 125,000 jobs, according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics.

District, said the district has experienced a dramatic increase in the number of people applying for substitute teaching jobs, positions that have typically always been open for applicants.

"We recently closed that because we have plenty of applicants," Dobbs said.

The district has a pool of about 100 substitutes, though the same teachers tend to work for other districts as well.

At the same time, it's still hard to fill positions like openings for special education teachers and speech and language pathologists, Dobbs said.

Gripes about swine flu vaccine abound

 By Mike Stobbe
 Associated Press writer

ATLANTA — When the nation's swine flu vaccination program began in early October, health officials predicted it was going to be "messy." They were right.

The program has been plagued with problems and information gaps:

- Health officials have been terrible at predicting when and how much vaccine would be available. Only about 44 million doses have been shipped so far.

- At times vaccine shipments have been inexplicably lopsided. For example, some smaller counties received the same amount as counties with seven times as many people.

- And despite pledges that they would be transparent about the vaccine program, some health officials have refused to disclose where all the doses are going, and they have held back on public service announcements telling people who should be coming in for shots. Also, many states were slow to establish Web sites that give vaccination locations.

To be fair, health officials say, the government deserves credit for a herculean effort to develop and distribute a safe and effective vaccine against a deadly virus that was first identified only seven months ago.

"You have a brand-new disease that gets identified in April. By October, you have a vaccine for it. By any standards, it's a miracle," said Dr. Diane Helentjaris, director of the Virginia Department of Health office handling swine flu response.

But complaints have been

Jerome taking new financial direction

 By John Plestina
 Times-News writer

JEROME — Jerome's new finance director, Ross Hyatt, a certified public accountant and a qualified auditor, was hired three months ago to keep the city within state and federal compliance.

His marching orders from the City Council and City Administrator Ben Marchant are to meet all new financial reporting regulations because of possible violations and the risk of the city not qualifying for future grants.

The city took the proactive approach of hiring Hyatt at $75,000 per year as one of two priorities following a critical audit report for the 2007-08 fiscal year. The other priority was implementing the 74 percent water consumption rate increase that went into effect in October.

New regulations require auditors to include statements to alert the public of anything that might fall under a legal definition of a material weakness, which includes a lack of segregation of duties. A material weakness is defined as one or more significant deficiencies which relate to financial controls.

Mayor Charles Correll said there was not enough municipal staff to separate functions for handling cash, therefore creating a lack of proper controls.

Armenian Genocide memorial placed in park

 By John Plestina
 Times-News writer

Liyah Babayan envisioned an Armenian Genocide memorial in Twin Falls to serve as a permanent tribute to those who died in what has become known as the Armenian Holocaust and to honor Armenian refugees who now contribute to the community.

The 26-year-old Babayan, who came to Twin Falls from Armenia with her family when she was 11, spent much of this year lobbying and raising money for the granite memorial that was placed at

Twin Falls City Park on Saturday. Armenian refugees planted a flowering pear tree beside the granite stone.

The memorial is a permanent reminder that the Turks killed between one-million and 1 1/2-million Armenians between 1915 and 1918 that were living in what was then the Ottoman Empire (now Turkey).

"It really means a lot to my parents and my grandparents," said Babayan, now a U.S. citizen who witnessed the fall of the Soviet Union as a child in Armenia, then a

T.F. City Council to resume Desert View annexation work

Times-News

The Desert View subdivision will likely come one step closer to becoming a Twin Falls neighborhood today.

After the Twin Falls City Council approved the annexation of the 71-lot, 37.2-acre neighborhood on Nov. 10, city staff has recommended in a report that the council adopt an ordinance giving the annexed land an R-2 residential zoning designation.

The subdivision, located on the north side of Falls Avenue East, east of Eastland Drive North, was approved for annexation by a 6-1 vote, after a group of residents formed the Desert View Neighborhood, LLC and made an agreement with the city to hook into water and sewer services with the understanding that the subdivision would one day be annexed.

While some residents sought the annexation as a way to avoid dealing with tightened arsenic standards in their community wells, others disagreed, citing increased taxes associated with being annexed.

The zoning ordinance would regulate future development in the neighborhood, which will receive city services, including sewer and water for properties already hooked in.

In other business, the council will:

• Consider plat approval, zoning change and comprehensive plan amendment requests for land along Park View Drive west of Canyon Ridge High School. The changes would allow the developer to build the Riverhawk Plaza Subdivision, providing professional office space on 6.18 acres of currently residential R-2 zoned property.

• Consider an application for a beer/wine alcohol license from the Von Scheidt Brewing Company, LLC, at 157 Second Ave. W.

• Consider approval of an agreement for the development of Cheney Drive, from Washington Street North to North College Road, part of the College of Southern Idaho Student Safety Initiative.

• Consider the final plat for the commercial Magic Valley Market Subdivision, 2.98 acres at the northeast corner of Washington Street North and Pole Line Road. The plat would outline three commercial lots on the property, one of which is now occupied by a Walgreens.

• Consider a zoning amendment to allow canopied, outdoor dining areas in front-yard setbacks of C-1 commercially zoned areas.

• Review city sealcoat progress.

The council will meet at 5 p.m., at Council Chambers, 305 Third Ave. E.

She explained that the memorial brings awareness to why Armenian refugees are in Twin Falls.

The Twin Falls City Council approved the memorial in September by a 4-3 vote after considerable debate.

mounting, with lawmakers this week holding hearings in Washington and elsewhere, pressing for explanations.

"Calls are still coming in to me about, 'Why can't I get the vaccine?'" said Andrea Stillman, a Connecticut state senator speaking at a Wednesday hearing in Hartford.

She noted reports of uneven distribution within her state, and of places where vulnerable patients can't get the vaccine. "Obviously we're very frustrated in southeastern Connecticut," she said. People are frustrated everywhere, said Sen. Susan Collins, R-Maine. At a hearing in Washington on Tuesday, she complained of "layers of misinformation and miscommunication!"

Arthur Caplan, director of the University of Pennsylvania's Center for Bioethics, said health officials should have done more to make sure limited doses get to the people most at danger from the virus. And he said they should have been tougher on nurses and other health-care workers who are putting their patients at risk because they declined to get a shot.

Officials at the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention have said the main issue is insufficient vaccine from manufacturers.

Teacher

Gaylen Smyer, superintendent of Cassia County School District, said he's noticed an increase in teachers coming to the district who have chosen education as a second career. The economy, though, isn't the only factor that makes teaching an attractive option for a second career, Smyer said.

For example, some people want to have the same schedules as their children, and for others, teaching lets them return to an area they have ties to, he said.

Nationwide demand for teachers in 60 out of 61 subjects has declined from a year earlier, according to an annual report issued this week by the American Association for Employment in Education. Only one subject — math — was listed as having an extreme shortage of teachers. In recent years, more than a dozen subjects had extreme shortages.

"We don't see a teacher shortage now," said Neil Shnyder, executive director of the association. "The school districts aren't hiring."

Just a few years ago, "we were recruiting really, really hard just to get people to take a look at us and take a look at our profession," said John Black, deputy superintendent of the Augusta, Kan., school district, who was at the job fair even though he was already being deluged with applications for a midyear kindergarten opening. "Now we have these great applicants wanting to teach, and we don't have jobs to offer them."

Times-News writer Ben Botkin contributed to this report.

Despite Sunday's midday snow flurry, emergency dispatch officials from throughout south-central Idaho reported little in the way of crashes or slide-offs.

Dispatch officials from Blaine, Cassia and Minidoka counties reported no significant traffic accidents Sunday afternoon. Meanwhile, dispatchers at the Idaho State Police Region IV office in Jerome, which covers all Interstate 84 traffic in south-central Idaho, said ISP was responding to only one minor midday slide-off.

A dispatcher with the Twin Falls Police Department cited no notable accidents.

At the Southern Idaho Regional Communications Center, which handles emergency dispatch for most of Gooding, Lincoln, Jerome and Twin Falls counties, a dispatch official said SIRCOMM had responded to no more than 20 minor accidents.

Jerome

The 54-page audit report released Feb. 27 by Jerome CPA firm Rexroat, Harberd & Associates made reference to one or more control deficiencies and significant deficiencies, including where city staff might not be able to prevent or detect misstatements on a timely basis.

Hyatt explained that the changes in government rules mandate financial reporting that is ready to be audited. Jerome had no qualified city staff at the time the audit was submitted.

Auditor Laurie Harberd confirmed what city officials have said, that there were no improprieties that raised red flags for her.

"It is internal control over financial reporting.

That's considered an internal control deficiency in that they cannot review the financial statement," she said, explaining that changes in government rules now mandate financial reporting that is ready to be audited. She also affirmed the city had no qualified staff when the audit was submitted to her firm.

"That's common with small governmental entities," Harberd said.

Marchant said one major issue was the city's failure to meet pledged revenues for water bonds, which was a material deficiency because the city was supposed to more reserves on hand to fulfill requirements of its bond obligation.

"We have rectified that with the water rate increase going into effect," he said, adding that the city has complied with all other bond obligations.

Harberd said the city missed the pledged revenues by about $13,000.

"They're supposed to set aside 1.25 times the average annual debt service," she said.

The Times-News asked Marchant if there were any lapses in leadership during the 2007-08 fiscal year.

Marchant was city administrator for less than one-third of the period the audit was conducted for. The majority of that fiscal year was on the watch of former City Administrator Travis Rothweiler, now the assistant city manager for Twin Falls.

"I don't feel there was any mismanagement. I feel there might have been some oversight by not keeping pace with the water rates," Marchant said.

Rothweiler told the Times-News he was not aware of what was in the audit report.

"When I left the city of Jerome, I had not tracked the things they have done," he said. "I have never reviewed the audit (and) I was unaware of those things that were stated."

up the structure. Contractors from Las Vegas and Elko performed the work.

The bulk of the rest of the project — which includes weather proofing the rings, building wing walls out from the structure, back filling dirt and putting up the remainder of the fence — is expected to be completed this year, weather permitting, said Mike Murphy, NDOT assistant district engineer. Some work will be done next spring.

Building the overpass, Nevada's first, will cost $1.8 million and rely partly on federal stimulus dollars.

It was one of three recommendations to come out of a 2006 report compiled by NDOT and the Nevada Department of Wildlife. Researchers tallied 290 deer-vehicle collisions along the highway from 2000 to 2004, and recommended the state install and evaluate both the overpass and a "deer walk" with flashing lights and painted cattle guards. The study also recommended high-level luminaries along a stretch of Interstate 80 near Pequo Summit.

Another 40 collisions happened along U.S. 93 between 2005 and 2008, officials said.

In reviewing published literature on the overpasses, the researchers found that structures in Canada, Europe and Wyoming had proven effective — six underpasses in Wyoming practically eliminated all collisions in the area.

State officials and the University of Nevada-Reno will next study how effective the overpass is in reducing collisions and whether animals even use it.

Elko Daily Free Press writer Ali Helgoth contributed to this report.

Ketchum citizens share ideas for town plaza

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — If Ketchum residents only had a new town plaza, they'd stomp from overturned soapboxes, glide through tai chi classes, toast marshmallows and gather for band battles in it.

At least those were some of the ideas the more than 80 people crowded into the Wood River YMCA's Community Room offered during a Thursday brainstorming session with the Ketchum Community Development Corporation, which hopes to develop a town square in an existing parking lot between Atkinsons' Market and the Sun Valley/Ketchum Chamber of Commerce and Visitors Bureau.

An anonymous donor has offered $100,000 toward the new plaza and the city could donate another

KAREN BOSSICK/For the Times-News
Eliceo Patlan prepares to string Christmas lights while Adolfo Rivera works on the roof of LERoy's Ice Cream. The Ketchum ice cream shack occupies property planned to become part of a large town plaza.

$100,000, Ketchum architect Dale Bates said.

Bates said the immediate question for Ketchum residents is whether they want something new built for the coming summer, based on a $200,000 budget, or if they'd prefer a larger-scale plaza that could take a minimum of eight years to develop.

Suzanne Crowhurst Lennard, who has written several books on the world's plazas, said she thought the town could easily develop a short-term solution, setting up umbrellas for shade, and incorporate a long-term vision for the plaza as money becomes available.

"As people discover how great it is, you'll get more people buying into it," she said. "The long term will be harder — you need more people living downtown who will walk to work."

Lennard told attendees that the best thing they can do for their community is to create a place people can congregate. Such places can teach children how to recognize who's friendly and how to have conversations with adults, among other things, she said.

"We don't have good public places in this country for children to learn these things anymore," she said. "This creates paranoia — the idea that strangers are danger."

She said that some hallmarks of successful plazas are the inclusion of farmers and holiday markets, use of the plaza for political events, and the presence of a variety of food vendors. She added that a multiuse format — with shops at street level and residences above — helps to enhance safety.

"I've noticed a strong architectural identity in Ketchum — buildings that say this is a ski town; this is a mountain town," Lennard said. "This should be epitomized in the square."

Peter Everett noted that Mountain Rides' bus meetings are poorly attended: "What about having public meetings outside in good weather? If I walk by eating lunch and hear guys talking about rezoning the heights of Ketchum's downtown buildings, I'm going to want to get involved."

A large number of attendees expressed support for doing away with on-street parking on East Avenue, perhaps replacing it with underground parking.

One of the interesting issues the town plaza planners will have to deal with is the city's fluctuating population, Bates noted.

"Right now the plaza is the right size for a town of 3,000 to 4,000 people. The problem is we are sometimes a town of 15,000."

Construction begins on new Hansen Head Start building

By Kali Stewart
Times-News correspondent

Construction of a new South Central Head Start building in Hansen is expected to be underway this week, after ground was broken at the center's new site on Friday.

The new center, built between the town's post office and the intersection of Main Street and Pine Avenue, will sit on approximately 1.2 acres. Funded through an Idaho Department of Commerce block grant of about $350,000, the new building was originally expected to be finished in December.

However, due to a need for the city and the Idaho Transportation Department to widen the intersection of Main and Pine, construction hit a delay as plans were changed to compensate for a loss of space from the widened roads.

With those details worked out, the completion of the building is now slated for the end of March.

"There were so many things along the way that could have derailed the project," Hansen Mayor Chad Urie said at Friday's groundbreaking ceremony. "I think everyone was positive and that helped things come along."

Part of the College of Southern Idaho, the Hansen center provides preschool and family-support programs to 34 currently enrolled low-income families. The new, approximately 3,450 square-foot building will continue serving those families, along with additional families expected to require services as Hansen grows.

"This is Chad Uries' brainchild," said CSI Vice President of Administration Mike Mason. "... We had to get permission from so many sources in a unique situation, but the city just never gave up and Chad deserves a lot of credit."

Located near the Mercy housing development and a city park, the new center is expected to be convenient for families to access. It will also eliminate ongoing concerns surrounding the condition of the current building, at the northeast intersection of Rock Creek Road and U.S. Highway 30, which dates back to around 1910.

For South Central Head

Start Director Mary Marshall, the new building represents "adding value to our community."

"It demonstrates when we as rural communities and partners come together to do things, we are so much stronger than people trying to achieve it by themselves," she said.

Don Anderson Construction, of Twin Falls, is the contractor for the project.

"It was a multiple, joint effort," Urie said. "Everyone stepped forward to make sure this happened."

Elk poached near Jarbidge

Elko Daily Free Press

ELKO, Nev. — The Nevada Department of Wildlife is investigating a report of elk poached at Young American Creek near the Bruneau River.

A sportsman called NDOW's Operation Game Thief hotline Tuesday to report a cow elk and calf found dead in Hunt Management Unit 071, in the Jarbidge area.

"The two cow elk were shot in the head with a high powered rifle and needlessly left to waste," said Lt. Don Klebenow, NDOW's Eastern Region Game Warden Supervisor, in a release. "We believe that the crime was committed Nov. 6." Klebenow reported the two elk were part of a large herd observed between the Rattlesnake and Wickiup drainages, which flow into the Bruneau River.

Because of the large herd, there was a heavy concentration of elk hunters in the vicinity during the first week of elk season, and game wardens hope someone has more information to help solve the crime.

"At least one set of ATV tracks went directly to the location of the two dead elk," Klebenow said in a release, "and we have evidence that can tie a suspect or suspects to the site."

Anyone with information can call Klebenow, at 775-777-2304, or Operation Game Thief, at 800-992-3030. People who report can remain anonymous and are eligible for a reward if the information leads to a conviction.

Senate Democrats at odds over health care bill

By Anne Flaherty
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Moderate Senate Democrats threatened Sunday to scuttle health-care legislation if their demands aren't met, while more liberal members warned their party leaders not to bend.

The dispute among Democrats foretells of a rowdy floor debate next month on legislation that would extend health care coverage to roughly 31 million Americans. Republicans have already made clear they aren't supporting the bill.

Final passage is in jeopardy, even after the chamber's historic 60-39 vote Saturday night to begin debate.

"I don't want a big-government, Washington-run operation that would undermine the ... private insurance that 200 million Americans now have," said Sen. Ben Nelson, a conservative Nebraska Democrat.

Senator Ben Nelson, D-Neb., speaks before the U.S. Senate voted to begin debate on legislation for a broad health care overhaul at Capitol Hill in Washington on Saturday.

Nelson and three other moderates — Democratic Sens. Mary Landrieu of Louisiana and Blanche Lincoln of Arkansas and Connecticut independent Joe Lieberman — agreed to open debate despite expressing reservations on the measure. Each of them has warned that they might not support the final bill.

One major sticking point is a provision that would allow Americans to buy a federal-run insurance plan if their state allows it. Moderates say they worry the so-called public option will become a huge and costly entitlement program and that other requirements in the bill could cripple businesses.

"I don't want to fix the problems in our health care system in a way that creates more of an economic crisis," said Lieberman.

The sway held by such a small group of senators has annoyed their more liberal colleagues, who could vote against a final bill if it becomes too watered down.

Sen. Sherrod Brown, D-Ohio, said he didn't think rank-and-file Democrats would feel compelled to go that far. At the same time, Brown warned Democratic leaders not to make too many concessions.

"I don't want four Democratic senators dictating to the other 56 of us and to the rest of the country — when the public option has this much support — that (a public option is) not going to be in it," said Brown.

The Senate bill would require most Americans to carry insurance and provide subsidies to those who couldn't afford it. Large companies could incur costs if they did not provide coverage to their work force. The insurance industry would come under significant new regulation under the bill, which would first ease and then ban the practice of denying coverage on the basis of pre-existing medical conditions.

Congressional budget analysts put the legislation's cost at $979 billion over a decade and say it would reduce deficits over the same period while extending coverage to 94 percent of the eligible population.

Rising unemployment taxes could hinder small business hiring

WASHINGTON (AP) — As if small businesses needed another reason not to hire, consider their latest financial burden: The cost of rising unemployment itself.

Employers already are squeezed by tight credit, rising health care costs, wary consumers and a higher minimum wage. Now, the surging jobless rate is imposing another cost. It's forcing higher state taxes on companies to pay for unemployment insurance claims.

Some employers say the extra costs make them less likely to hire. That could be a worrisome sign for the economic recovery, because small businesses create about 60 percent of new jobs. Other employers say they'll cut or freeze pay.

• Chuck Ferrar, who owns a liquor store in Annapolis, Md., expects to pay $9,000 in unemployment taxes next year, up from $3,000 this year. Health care costs for his employees will rise by $8,000, or 17.5 percent. "When you start adding this up, it turns into real money," he said. "If I lose an employee through attrition, I will not replace him. You can't afford to do it."

• Sam Schlosser, owner of Plymouth Foundry Inc. in Plymouth, Ind., said his unemployment tax bill could double next year. Revenue at the family-owned company, which makes iron castings for machine parts, has fallen about 50 percent, he said. In case of higher taxes, his company may have to consider layoffs, he said.

• Marjorie Feldman-Wood, president of Al's Beverages in East Windsor, Conn., which makes soda fountain syrup, said higher taxes would make pay raises less likely. Connecticut is borrowing from the federal government, and employers fear the state will have to raise taxes soon to repay the loan. "There's only so much money at the end of the day," she said.

Bruce Meyer, a University of Chicago economics professor, said his studies show that higher unemployment taxes usually lead to lower pay for employees.

Behind the trend are widespread layoffs. The number of people claiming jobless aid has tripled since the recession began. The demand has drained the funds that many states use to pay jobless claims. Nearly half the states are borrowing from the federal government.

Now the bills are coming due. States reset their unemployment insurance taxes at the end of each year, and 33 states will raise them next year, according to the National Association of State Workforce Agencies. The states' tax revenue in the last fiscal year fell $42 billion short of what's needed for unemployment aid.

Most of the tax increases are being triggered by laws requiring higher taxes to make up for a decline in state funds to pay for benefits. In some cases, cuts in jobless aid are required, too.

Florida's minimum unemployment tax, for instance, will skyrocket next year to $100.30 per employee from $8.40. The maximum will rise to $459 per worker from $378. Like most states, Florida taxes companies more if they've recently laid off workers who draw benefits.

Hawaii will raise its average unemployment tax 10-fold next year, from about $90 per employee to more than $1,000. And Maryland's minimum tax will more than triple from $51 per employee to $187. Its maximum will jump from $765 to nearly $1,150.

Federal law requires states to build up unemployment insurance trust funds in good times so they can pay benefits during downturns. The idea is to avoid having to raise taxes or cut benefits in a recession.

But the severity of this recession has bankrupted many states' trust funds and forced them to borrow from the federal government. States eventually must pay back the loans. Otherwise, the federal government can raise taxes on their businesses.

The tax increases will have "a small, negative effect on hiring" because they will raise employers' costs, said Wayne Vroman, an economist at the liberal Urban Institute.

Yellowstone grizzly deaths down, future uncertain

BILLINGS, Mont. (AP) — Fewer run-ins between Yellowstone grizzly bears and hunters and renewed efforts to protect them led to a sharp drop in bruin deaths in 2009, officials say, but the decline has failed to quiet growing concerns about the long-term fate of the species.

The lower death toll comes just a year after a record number of the region's grizzlies were killed. In September, they were returned to the threatened list.

Biologists say it's unlikely this year's death toll will grow much beyond an estimated 46 killed so far, because the massive bears are denning up for the winter. Seventy-nine were killed last year — by hunters acting in self-defense, wildlife officials dealing with problem bears, natural causes and vehicles slamming into the animals.

Environmentalists pointed to last year's deaths as evidence the bear's slow recovery from near-extirmination had turned sour. They argued in part that climate change was forever altering the animal's food supply. But federal officials say last year — when a short summer drove hungry bears out of deep wilderness and into areas where they got into trouble — will likely be an exception.

"It was just one of those bad years and it looks like the good years are coming back," said Chuck Schwartz, a U.S. Geological Survey biologist who leads a multi-agency grizzly research team.

This year's warmer weather saw food sources rebound, meaning fewer bears ran into hunters after being forced to widen their search for nourishment. Also, state and federal land managers took extra pains to educate hunters and hikers about safety in bear country.

A recent population estimate showed the Yellowstone region has about 580 bears. That's down from almost 600 last year and the first decline in a quarter century.

Nevertheless, Schwartz said the population's long-term trend — increasing about 2 to 4 percent annually — still holds.

Yellowstone's grizzlies were removed from the threatened species list in 2007. At the time, officials in Montana, Idaho and Wyoming heralded the federal decision. They said it was proof conservation efforts had successfully shielded bears from pressures ranging from logging to new home construction.

Hunting remained illegal, although some officials began to push for an eventual bear season.

Then, in September, U.S. District Judge Donald Molloy ruled that the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service had acted too hastily. Molloy said climate change, conflicts with humans and lax protections kept bears at continued risk. He ordered their threatened status restored.

Federal officials asked Molloy to reconsider, arguing that the danger posed by the loss of a key bear food source — nuts from white-bark pine trees — had been overstated. In a ruling issued last week, the judge shot down that argument. "Every study suggests the opposite," he wrote in the Nov. 17 order.

Chris Servheen, the head of Fish and Wildlife's grizzly recovery program, said bears could adapt. He said around Glacier National Park and adjacent wilderness areas in northern Montana, white-bark pine trees vanished 50 years ago — yet the bear population has since grown to almost 800 animals.

BCS at-large bids up for grabs in final weeks

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Iowa and Penn State ended their seasons eligible for an at-large BCS bid, and Oklahoma State and Virginia Tech are also in position to be eligible for invites to the four big-money bowl games even though they have no shot to win their conferences.

The top seven teams in the Bowl Championship Series standings released Sunday were unchanged from last week, with Florida, Alabama and Texas still in control of the national championship race.

The No. 11 Hawkeyes (10-2) and the No. 13 Nittany

Lions (10-2) will likely be vying for an at-large bid with sixth-place Boise State, which is two victories away from a 13-0 regular season but would be unable to gain an automatic bid if it finishes behind TCU.

Barring any major upsets over the next two weeks, the winner of the Florida-Alabama Southeastern Conference title game will face Texas in the BCS title game on Jan. 7 at the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif.

With fourth-place TCU a victory away from securing an automatic BCS bid and the loser of Florida-Alabama essentially a lock

Broncos still No. 6 in AP

The Associated Press

Boise State maintained its spot in the Associated Press Top 25 college football poll Sunday, No. 6 behind fellow unbeaten No. 1 Florida, Alabama, Texas, TCU and Cincinnati. The Gators received 36 first-place votes, Alabama had 13 and Texas 11. Also holding their places were No. 7 Georgia Tech, No. 8 Pittsburgh and No. 9 Ohio State.

The only change in the top 10 came at No. 10. Oregon moved up a spot after LSU slipped seven places to No. 17 following a 25-23 loss at Ole Miss.

The top seven in the BCS standings released Sunday were the same as the AP Top 25.

to be selected, only two at-large berths would remain.

To be eligible for an at-large BCS bid, a team must finish 14th or better in the final standings, which are released Dec. 6.

Oklahoma State (9-2) from the Big 12 is in 12th place with its regular-season finale at Oklahoma on Saturday. The Cowboys need a victory to keep their hopes for an at-large bid alive.

Virginia Tech (8-3) is 14th and has to be considered the longest shot to receive a bid, even if it finishes its regular season by beating Virginia on Saturday.

No automatic bids to conference champions will be clinched this week, but five conference titles and BCS bids will be decided by five games the following week.

Oregon and Oregon State meet in Eugene on Dec. 3, with the winner earning the Pac-10 title and a trip to the Rose Bowl. The loser is essentially eliminated from BCS contention.

Cincinnati is at Pittsburgh on Dec. 5 in what has turned into a Big East conference championship game. Both teams play this week (Pitt visits West Virginia on Friday, the same day Cincinnati hosts Illinois in a nonconference game). If the Bearcats and Panthers both finish 11-1, the loser of their game would definitely be in the running for an at-large bid.

Florida and Alabama both face big rivalry games this week, with the Gators taking on Florida State and the Crimson Tide playing at Auburn. Upsets could keep the SEC champion out of the BCS title game.

Texas plays at Texas A&M on Thursday before facing Nebraska in the Big 12 title game. A loss in either could keep the Longhorns from playing for a national championship, but they don't need to win the conference title to end up in a BCS game.

CONTINUING COVERAGE OF THE CSI VOLLEYBALL PROGRAM'S 9TH NJCAA NATIONAL CHAMPIONSHIP

ERIN FRANCIS/For the Times-News

College of Southern Idaho libero Britani Hathorn (3) serves to Seminole State Thursday during the opening round of the 2009 NJCAA National Tournament in Council Bluffs, Iowa. The Golden Eagles won the program's ninth national championship Saturday.

Sacrifices lead to immortality

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa — There's hard work and dedication, and then there's real sacrifice.

Both forms of selflessness rested in the 2009 College of Southern Idaho volleyball team, and both are major reasons why the Golden Eagles are queens of the junior college volleyball world once more.

In sharing a championship, they share a unique bond that can never be broken.

"We're beyond sisters," Samantha Misa said. "We worked hard together, put our faith in each other, and we got it."

Volleyball is not war, but success requires many of the same principles: teamwork, selflessness, excellence and courage. Those attributes were evident in the starters for this CSI team. Others rested well below the surface.

Before the tournament started, CSI head coach Heidi Cartisser talked about sending Jessica Peacock home from her American experience a champion. The Australian international will leave at semester's end, and she'll do so a champion and a national tournament MVP.

She could have gone on to a four-year school, but it would have meant more coursework when she got back to Australia anyway, so she's leaving now instead to get a head start.

Peacock knew this semester would be her last at CSI before she even came back. The hope that she'd touch the championship trophy on a Saturday night in Council Bluffs, she said, was only reason she still got on the plane despite needing shoulder surgery for the better part of a year previous to that. She needed it before she even got to Twin Falls but refused to contemplate it until the mission was achieved.

"I feel complete," Peacock said Saturday after the Golden Eagles won the title. "It's all worth it because we won, and because I have a new family here that I'll never forget."

Peacock's understudy, Alex van Dyke, was caught in a numbers game and couldn't find meaningful floor time all year. Yet she was the first one running down the line after just about every point, leading the cheers and exhorting her team.

She was one of the team leaders despite rarely playing, helping lead stretches and exercises, among other things.

"If I have to be the cheerleader, get the water, whatever," van Dyke said. "I was picked by the coaches to be on this team, and this is something that I'll have for the rest of my life. We're champions, and they can't ever take that from us."

Danielle Dean got one year to play at CSI. She's listed as a freshman, but two years at BYU-Idaho means her JUCO eligibility is now exhausted. Chauncey Axelson, a Hagerman alum, came home after a year of basketball at Blue Mountain Community College (Ore.). She's got a year of eligibility left, if she decides to

Johnson wins 4th straight NASCAR title

By Jenna Fryer
Associated Press writer

HOMESTEAD, Fla. — All Jimmie Johnson ever wanted was a chance to race with the best in NASCAR. Maybe even win a race or two.

Never did he expect to be a champion.

Especially four times over.

Johnson bulldozed his way into the record books by becoming the first driver in NASCAR history to win four consecutive championships, finishing fifth in Sunday's season-finale at Homestead-Miami Speedway. He joins Richard Petty (7), Dale Earnhardt (7) and teammate Jeff Gordon (4) as the only drivers to win more than three titles.

"To do something that's never been done in the sport, and love the sport like I do and respect it like I do and the greats — Petty, Earnhardt, Gordon — to do something they have never done is so awesome," Johnson said. "And to win four championships in eight years, what this team has done — this is unbelievable."

Yes, it is.

Johnson now stands atop NASCAR as a one-man dynasty, much like Tiger Woods, Roger Federer and Lance Armstrong in their sports.

Only Johnson hasn't been feted under a blizzard of confetti by himself. His mighty Hendrick Motorsports team rules NASCAR the way UCLA once dominated the hardwood or Michael Jordan's Chicago Bulls reigned supreme.

Johnson's title gave team owner Rick Hendrick a record 12th NASCAR championship, on a day that saw the team take the top three spots in the final

Indianapolis now 10-0 with win over Baltimore

By David Ginsburg
Associated Press writer

BALTIMORE — The unbeaten Indianapolis Colts sidestepped another potential obstacle in their march toward NFL history.

The Colts kept Baltimore out of the end zone Sunday and got the go-ahead field goal from former Ravens kicker Matt Stover in a 17-15 victory, their 19th straight win over two seasons.

Indianapolis (10-0) overcame three turnovers, including two interceptions by Peyton Manning. The Colts' 19-game streak is the second-longest in NFL history behind a 21-game run by the New England Patriots (2006-08). In addition, their eight consecutive 10-win seasons ranks second behind San Francisco's 16 (1983-98).

Those records, or thoughts of an unbeaten season, are not overly important to the Colts.

The defense forced a field goal after

Saints also continue win streak.

See Main 6

Baltimore got a first-and-goal at the 1 in the fourth quarter, and linebacker Gary Brackett sealed the win with an interception in the closing minutes.

Baltimore's last chance ended when Ed Reed fumbled on a punt return with 17 seconds left.

Manning did his part by throwing a touchdown pass and directing a 60-yard drive before Stover kicked a 25-yard field goal with 7:02 to go. Baltimore (5-5) did not re-sign Stover over the summer, and the move has proven costly.

Billy Cundiff made field goals of 46, 44, 38, 36 and 20 yards in his debut with the Ravens. But he also was wide right on a 30-yard attempt that would have given Baltimore a 15-14 lead in the third quarter.

New Orleans still perfect

TAMPA, Fla. — Drew Brees threw for three touchdowns and the Saints shrugged off a slow start defensively defeat Tampa Bay 38-7 and remain unbeaten.

Robert Meacham caught touchdown passes of 4 and 6 yards in the first half. Third-string running back Mike Bell scored on runs of 3 and 1 yards in the second half, when New Orleans gained 147 of its 183 yards rushing. The Saints (10-0) have their first 10-game winning streak in franchise history.

CHIEFS 27, STEELERS 24, OT

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Ryan Succop kicked a 22-yard field goal with 8:28 left in overtime after Chris Chambers' 61-yard catch-and-run, and the Chiefs snapped a team-record 10-game home losing streak.

The Super Bowl champs, with Charlie Batch replacing a shaken-up Ben Roethlisberger in overtime, had to punt on their first possession. Steelers coach Mike Tomlin said Roethlisberger's injury was a "concussion-oriented thing."

VIKINGS 35, SEAHAWKS 9

MINNEAPOLIS — Brett Favre completed a career-high 88 percent of his passes for 213 yards and four touchdown passes and the Vikings delivered their most complete performance of the season.

Favre completed 22 of his 25 throws for the Vikings (9-1). His previous career high was 85.2 percent against Detroit on Sept. 20. But he has only completed at least 80 percent two other times in his previous 18 seasons in the league.

LIONS 38, BROWNS 37

DETROIT — An ailing Matthew Stafford threw his fifth touchdown pass from 1 yard to Brandon Pettigrew, and Jason Hanson's extra point with no time on the clock gave Detroit a thrilling win.

Detroit was given the untimed play because safety Hank Poteat was called for pass interference in the end zone when Stafford attempted. Stafford was hit after his throw to the end zone and appeared to hurt his left shoulder or chest area. He was replaced by Daunte Culpepper.

GIANTS 34, FALCONS 31, OT

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Eli Manning and the offense bailed out the Giants' top-ranked defense.

Lawrence Tynes kicked a 36-yard field goal 3:54 into overtime to make up for an earlier miss after the defense blew a two-touchdown lead in the fourth quarter.

COWBOYS 7, REDSKINS 6

ARLINGTON, Texas — Tony Romo led a single scoring drive, hitting Patrick Crayton for a 10-yard touchdown pass with 2:41 left to preserve first place in the NFC East.

The Cowboys (7-3) avoided getting shut out the previous week by scoring with 38 seconds left at Green Bay, then almost saw it happen again at home.

PACKERS 30, 49ERS 24

GREEN BAY, Wis. — Aaron Rodgers made San Francisco pay for a draft-day snub in 2005. Rodgers threw touchdowns to Greg Jennings and Jordy Nelson, and Ryan Grant rushed for 129 yards and a score. The Packers (6-4) saw outside linebacker Aaron Kampman injure his left knee and cornerback Al Harris also injured a knee.

Rodgers was 32 of 45 for 334 yards, including 274 in the first half as the Packers took a 23-3 lead.

JAGUARS 18, BILLS 15

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — David Garrard's second game-winning drive in as many weeks gave the Jaguars their first three-game winning streak in nearly two years. Garrard threw a touchdown pass to Mike Sims-Walker with 56 seconds remaining, spoiling Perry Fewell's debut as interim coach of the Bills (3-7).

Buffalo bottled up Maurice Jones-Drew, pressured Garrard and managed 300 yards of offense for the first time in two months. But Garrard directed a 68-yard scoring drive when it mattered for the Jaguars (6-4).

CARDINALS 21, RAMS 13

ST. LOUIS — Kurt Warner threw for 203 yards and two touchdowns while building a 21-3 cushion, and the NFC West leaders hung on without him, remaining unbeaten on the road with a 21-13 victory over the St. Louis Rams on Sunday.

Warner left with an apparent head injury late in the first half.

CHARGERS 32, BRONCOS 3

ENGLEWOOD, Colo. — Philip Rivers and a dominant defense led the San Diego Chargers into sole possession of first place in the AFC West with a 32-3 drubbing of the Denver Broncos on Sunday.

The Chargers (7-3) have won five straight and the Broncos (6-4) have dropped four in a row, turning the division race upside-down. Just five weeks ago, the Chargers trailed the Broncos by 31/2 games.

RAIDERS 20, BENGALS 17

OAKLAND, Calif. — Bruce Gradkowski threw a 29-yard tying touchdown pass to Louis Murphy with 33 seconds left and Sebastian Janikowski kicked a 33-yard field goal after Andre Caldwell fumbled the ensuing kickoff, giving the Raiders a 20-17 victory Sunday.

The Bengals (7-3) have lost all 10 games in Oakland, including one playoff game.

PATRIOTS 31, JETS 14

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. — The defense Bill Belichick didn't want to put on the field a week ago kept the offense of the New York Jets off it Sunday.

Leigh Bodden had three of the four interceptions thrown by Mark Sanchez and the New England Patriots defense allowed just one touchdown and 226 yards in a 31-14 win. The victory gave them a two-game lead in the AFC East and sent the Jets to their sixth loss in seven games.

EAGLES 24, BEARS 20

CHICAGO — Donovan McNabb threw for 244 yards against his hometown team, LeSean McCoy scored the go-ahead touchdown on a 10-yard run following Antonio Dixon's blocked field goal, and Philadelphia came away with a 24-20 victory over struggling Chicago.

Continued from Main 5 exercise it. Charelle Minor and Ashleigh Pollard, both freshmen sitting out on a redshirt, worked tirelessly in practice.

The supporting cast did its job, pushing the starters to be even better than they were. It was all in the goal of being hailed in the CSI athletic halls for a lifetime.

"I told the team before the match that everything we do is to sustain a team's life-span," Cartisser said. "I told them if they win a national championship, the team never dies. It goes on forever. It's a legacy."

Champions never die. Champions are honored in the halls of whatever school they represent, well after they've moved on.

Each of this flock of Golden Eagles is a champion in every sense of the word, Cartisser said.

And champions are immortal.

Garnett beats buzzer for Celtic's OT win over Knicks

NEW YORK — Kevin Garnett made a jumper to beat the overtime buzzer, giving the Boston Celtics a 107-105 victory over the New York Knicks on Sunday.

Paul Pierce scored a season-high 33 points, and had all of Boston's points in overtime until the final shot. Two Knicks followed Pierce on the final play, leaving Garnett wide open from the top of the key for his 19-foot-er.

Rajon Rondo finished with 14 points, 10 assists and nine rebounds as Boston won for the second time in five games.

HEAT 102, HORNETS 101
MIAMI — Dwyane Wade had 31 points, and Udonis Haslem hit a jumper with 15.4 seconds left to lift Miami.

Haslem finished with 14 points off the bench, including both field goals for the Heat in the final minute. He tied the game at 100 with 45 seconds left, then after Marcus Thornton put the Hornets ahead with a free throw, Haslem won it

BOBCATS 104, PACERS 88

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Nazr Mohammed scored 18 points, Boris Diaw added 17 and Charlotte snapped a seven-game losing streak.

Rookie Derrick Brown scored a season-high 13 and Stephen Jackson added 10 in his first home game with Charlotte, helping the NBA's lowest-scoring team to its best offensive performance in weeks.

It spoiled Tyler Hansbrough's first professional game in North Carolina. With college coach Roy Williams sitting courtside, Hansbrough didn't get his first field goal until midway through the fourth quarter, when the Pacers were down 20 points.

MAGIC 104, RAPTORS 96

TORONTO — Vince Carter scored 24 points, Dwight Howard had 17 points and 12 rebounds and Orlando won its fifth straight.

J.J. Redick had 19 points, Jason Williams had 16 and Rashard Lewis added 11 for the Magic, who have won eight of 10.

Chris Bosh scored 22 points, Jose Calderon had 16 and Hedo Turkoglu scored 12 for Toronto, which has lost four of five. The Raptors are 4-2 at home this season, with both defeats coming against the Magic.

SUNS 117, PISTONS 91

PHOENIX — Amare Stoudemire scored 21 points and Steve Nash added 20, then sat out the fourth quarter to watch Phoenix hand road-weary Detroit its fifth straight loss.

Nash made 7 of 8 shots and had nine assists. Jason Richardson scored 17 as the Suns (11-3) improved to 5-0 at home.

QUOTABLE

“This is a perfect Christmas present for Alaskans and children across the country.”
 — Sen. Mark Begich, D-Alaska, after the Postal Service reversed a decision that would have discontinued the Santa’s Mailbag program

EDITORIAL

Sometimes in dire straits, politicians find inspiration

Boise, a Democratic capital in the most Republican state in America, is frequently an ironic place. Never more than last Wednesday, when Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter was touting educational reform a few minutes after he and others told the Associated Taxpayers of Idaho that more — and probably bigger — cuts are coming for the public schools.

The reform recommendations from the Education Alliance of Idaho, which represents various education organizations in the state, were practical and specific: Idaho must focus on getting its high school graduates to go to college and keep them there. It should have a performance-based public school teacher pay system. It needs more Advanced Placement classes, more dual-credit courses and Tech-Prep programs.

Great ideas. Question is, what’s going to be left of our education system to build them on?

Idaho’s general fund share for public schools in the current fiscal year was cut to $1.3 billion, down 7.7 percent from 2009. At least 23 of Idaho’s 115 school districts have declared financial emergencies, and many more are to come.

Couple that with the swath that Otter’s midyear budget holdback cut through higher education, and Idaho will have fewer students who can afford to stay in college because of tuition and fee increases needed to offset dwindling state support.

Statewide, it’s likely to have fewer AP classes offered, fewer dual-credit opportunities and less professional-technical education.

And merit pay for teachers? Many of them will be lucky to keep their jobs.

If ever there were a time for courage and creativity in government, it’s now. Maybe Otter could take a lesson from one of his long-ago predecessors, Ben Ross, and lawmakers from the 23rd Legislature.

Ross was Idaho’s chief executive when the state hit the bottom of the Great Depression. The Federal Emergency Relief Act of 1933, which subsidized state assistance for the unemployed and their families, was literally keeping some Idahoans from starving.

Trouble was, the feds required matching state cash, which Idaho didn’t have. Ross kept the federal money flowing in 1934 by using state highway funds as matching dollars (not an option for Otter). Then in 1935, he asked the Legislature to approve a 2 cent sales tax — a tax increase in the worst economic downturn in Idaho’s history.

Legislators balked, and Washington turned off the spigot. So Ross called the Legislature back into special session — twice — until lawmakers finally passed the tax.

All of which cost Ross — and some legislators — their political careers.

The smart thing to do? No way.
 The brave thing? You be the judge.

If you follow the debate around the energy/climate bills working through Congress you will notice that the drill-baby-drill opponents of this legislation are now making two claims. One is that the globe has been cooling lately, not warming, and the other is that America simply can’t afford any kind of cap-and-trade/carbon tax.

Thomas Friedman

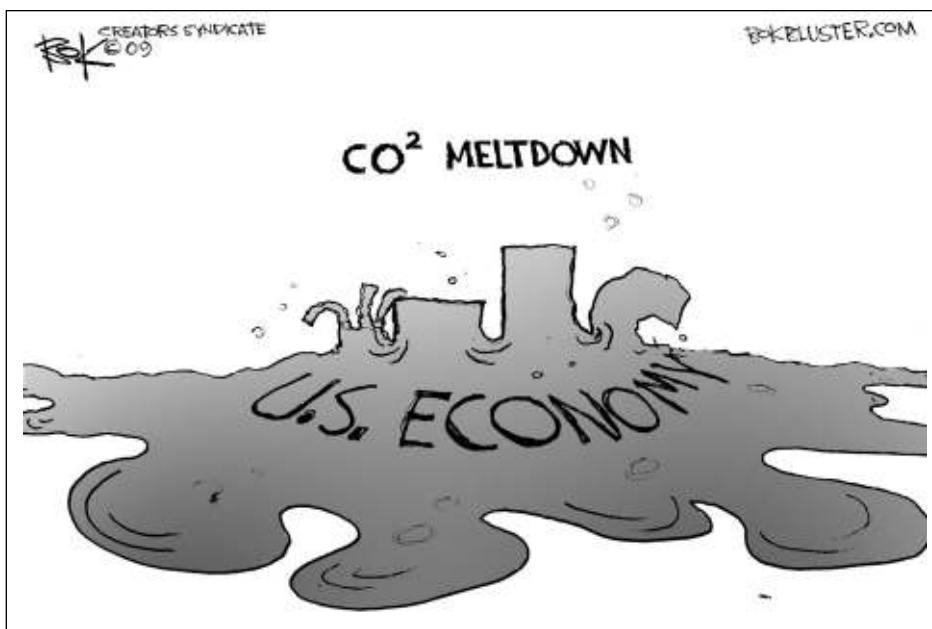

But here is what they also surely believe, but are not saying: They believe the world is going to face a mass plague, like the Black Death, that will wipe out 2.5 billion people sometime between now and 2050. They believe it is much better for America that the world be dependent on oil for energy rather than on clean power technologies that are controlled by us and only go down in price as demand increases. And, finally, they believe that people in the developing world are very happy being poor — just give them a little running water and electricity and they’ll be fine. They’ll never want to live like us.

Yes, the opponents of any tax on carbon to stimulate alternatives to oil must believe all these things because that is the only way their arguments make any sense. Let me explain why by first explaining how I look at this issue.

I am a clean-energy hawk. Green for me is not just about recycling garbage but about renewing America. That is why I have been saying “green is the new red, white and blue.”

My argument is simple: I think climate change is real. You don’t? That’s your business. But there are two other huge trends barreling down on us with energy implications that you simply can’t deny. And the way to renew America is for us to take the lead and invent the technologies to address these problems.

Cap-and-trade foes in never-neverland

The first is that the world is getting crowded. According to the 2006 U.N. population report, “the world population will likely increase by 2.5 billion ... passing from the current 6.7 billion to 9.2 billion in 2050. This increase is equivalent to the total size of the world population in 1950, and it will be absorbed mostly by the less developed regions, whose population is projected to rise from 5.4 billion in 2007 to 7.9 billion in 2050.”

The energy, climate, water and pollution implications of adding another 2.5 billion mouths to feed, clothe, house and transport will be staggering. And this is coming, unless, as the deniers apparently believe, a global pandemic or a mass outbreak of abstinence will freeze world population — forever.

Now, add one more thing. The world keeps getting flatter — more and more people can now see how we live, aspire to our lifestyle and even take our jobs so they can live how we live. So not only are we adding 2.5 billion people by 2050, but many more will live like “Americans” — with American-size homes, American-size cars, eating American-size Big Macs.

“What happens when developing nations with soaring vehicle populations get tens of millions of petroleum-powered cars at the same time as the global economy recovers and there’s no large global oil supply overhang?” asks Felix Kramer, the electric car expert who advocates electrifying the U.S. auto fleet and increasingly powering it with renewable energy sources. What happens, of course, is that the price of oil goes through the roof — unless we develop alternatives. The petro-dictators in Iran, Venezuela and Russia hope we don’t. They would only get richer.

So either the opponents of a serious energy/climate bill with a price on carbon don’t care about our being addicted to oil and dependent on petro-dictators forever or they really believe that we will not be adding 2.5 billion more people who want to live like us, so the price of oil won’t go up very far and, therefore, we shouldn’t raise taxes to stimulate clean, renewable alternatives and energy efficiency.

Green hawks believe otherwise. We believe that in a world getting warmer and more crowded with more “Americans,” the next great global industry is going to be E.T., or energy technology based on clean power and energy efficiency. It has to be. And we believe that the country that invents and deploys the most E.T. will enjoy the most economic security, energy security, national security, innovative companies and global respect. And we believe that country must be America. If not, our children will never enjoy the standard of living we did. And we believe the best way to launch E.T. is to set a fixed, long-term price on carbon and then let the free market and innovation do the rest.

So, as I said, you don’t believe in global warming? You’re wrong, but I’ll let you enjoy it until your beach house gets washed away. But if you also don’t believe the world is getting more crowded with more aspiring Americans — and that ignoring that will play to the strength of our worst enemies, while responding to it with clean energy will play to the strength of our best technologies — then you’re willfully blind, and you’re hurting America’s future to boot.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

On Nov. 15, the Times-News published another “photo illustration” wherein the photographer, then your readers, stare down the muzzle of a gun. I have no quarrel with the story itself. But like a similar photo that appeared two weeks ago, I am dismayed by the journalist’s irresponsible depiction of a scene that violates a key principle followed by responsible gun owners and gun safety educators: We never, ever point a gun at someone (law enforcement and military are the obvious exceptions)

It would be helpful if the Times-News would honor this rule. Thank you,

Remembering a simpler life

The beauty of a low-tech

existence:

Not a century ago, it really takes me back less than a generation. The old days when you didn’t miss sending messages because you were out of tower range, you made contact with your family over the dinner table. You never lost a connection because you couldn’t find your phone or its batteries were down. You didn’t need that $900 exercise machine, you kept fit by getting up every 10 minutes to change the TV.

Even with your door unlocked, your kids were safe without a $4,000 security system. They were just outside playing with the neighborhood kids, not down at the mall with some unknown/unnamed friends. You weren’t awakened at night by somebody’s unattended car alarm.

Telemarketers had to manually scan the phone books to get your number before trying to sell you something you didn’t want or need. Coffee was coffee and didn’t come from some Frankenstein machine.

TV didn’t broadcast porn, so you didn’t need a chip to keep it out of your house and computers weren’t old or sophisticated enough to produce a pedophile threat. If not an Ozzie-and-Harriet lifestyle, you could provide for your family without your wife working a second or third job. You knew where your kids were and whom they were with. You had enough to eat, but didn’t need Jenny Craig.

You knew if your daughter tried to leave the house like a skank in clothes sized for a Barbie Doll or your son dressed like a refugee from a horror film with pants below his butt and chains and gang tattoos everywhere. You bought a car you could afford without ransoming your future and thoughts of retirement were for a simple existence, not floating on the Caribbean in a drug king’s yacht.

U.S. will go downhill with Obama in control

It took many years to eradicate slavery in this country, but it seems clear to me that we have a president with a Third World socialist agenda who does not have a clue on how to run the United States government and is willing to turn control of the United States to the communist United Nations.

Under Obama’s inept leadership, we will soon find ourselves living under the same conditions as those living under the iron fist of communist dictatorship.

It won’t matter which ethnic group we belong to, we will all be affected.

Ri bishop asked Kennedy in 2007 to avoid Communion

EAST PROVIDENCE, R.I. — The Roman Catholic bishop of Rhode Island says he asked Rep. Patrick Kennedy to stop receiving Holy Communion in 2007 because of the lawmaker's support for abortion rights. That revelation Sunday proved an ugly climax to a simmering feud between Kennedy and his staunch critic, Bishop Thomas Tobin.

Kennedy told The Providence Journal in a story published Sunday that Tobin "instructed" him not to receive Communion because of his abortion rights stance. Kennedy said Tobin told diocesan priests not to give him Communion. Tobin says he asked Kennedy to stop receiving communion, but he never instructed his priests not to give the sacrament to Kennedy.

Holidays will again test NYC air travel bottleneck

NEW YORK — Fewer people are expected to fly this holiday season, but travelers shouldn't expect a full reprieve from the horrid flight delays of Thanksgivings past, especially if they need to land anywhere near New York City.

Despite some recent improvements, the Big Apple's three major airports continue to be the country's worst air travel bottleneck.

Through the first nine months of the year, they ranked first, second and third worst in on-time arrivals among the 31 major U.S. air hubs, according to federal statistics.

Lawyer: 9/11 defendants want platform for views

NEW YORK (AP) — The five men facing trial in the Sept. 11 attacks will plead not guilty so that they can air their criticisms of U.S. foreign policy, the lawyer for one of the defendants said Sunday.

Scott Fenstermaker, the lawyer for accused terrorist Ali Abd al-Aziz Ali, said the men would not deny their role in the 2001 attacks but "would explain what happened and why they did it."

The U.S. Justice Department announced earlier this month that Ali and four other men accused of murdering nearly 3,000 people in the deadliest terrorist attack in the U.S. will face a civilian federal trial just blocks from the site of the destroyed World Trade Center.

Ali, also known as Ammar al-Baluchi, is a nephew of professed 9/11 mastermind Khalid Sheikh Mohammed.

Mohammed, Ali and the others will explain "their assessment of American foreign policy," Fenstermaker said.

"Their assessment is negative," he said.

Fenstermaker met with Ali last week at the U.S. prison at Guantanamo Bay in Cuba. He has not spoken with the others but said the men have discussed the trial among themselves.

Fenstermaker was first quoted in The New York Times in Sunday's editions.

Critics of Attorney General Eric Holder's decision to try the men in a New York City civilian courthouse have warned that the trial would provide the defendants with a propaganda platform.

Dean Boyd, a spokesman for the Department of Justice, said Sunday that while the men may attempt to use the trial to express their views, "we have full confidence in the ability of the courts and in particular the federal judge who may preside over the trial to ensure that the proceeding is conducted appropriately and with minimal disruption, as federal courts have done in the past."

Last week, the Senate Judiciary Committee questioned Holder for hours about his decision to send the five 9/11 suspects to New York for trial.

Critics of Holder's decision — mostly Republicans — argued the trial will give Mohammed and his co-defendants a world stage to spout hateful rhetoric. Holder said such concerns are misplaced, and any pronouncements by the suspects would only make them look worse.

"I have every confidence that the nation and the world will see him for the coward that he is," Holder told the committee. "I'm not scared of what Khalid Sheikh Mohammed has to say at trial — and no one else needs to be, either."

The attorney general said he does not believe holding the trial in New York — at a federal courthouse that has seen a number of high-profile terrorism trials in recent decades — will increase the risk of terror attacks there.

Thousands of strange creatures found in the deep, dark ocean

By Cain Burdeau
Associated Press writer

NEW ORLEANS — The creatures living in the depths of the ocean are as weird and outlandish as the creations in a Dr. Seuss book: tentacled transparent sea cucumbers, primitive "dumbos" that flap ear-like fins, and tube-worms that feed on oil deposits.

A report released Sunday recorded 17,650 species living below 656 feet, the point where sunlight ceases. The findings were the latest update on a 10-year census of marine life.

"Parts of the deep sea that we assumed were homogeneous are actually quite complex," said Robert S. Carney, an oceanographer at Louisiana State University and a lead researcher on the deep seas.

Thousands of marine species eke out an existence in the ocean's pitch-black depths by feeding on the snowlike decaying matter that cascades down — even sunken whale bones. Oil and methane also are an energy source for the bottom-deep-sea mountains, along with cities of brittlestars and anemone gardens. Nearly 500 new species ranging from single-celled creatures to large squid were charted in the abyssal plains and basins.

Also of importance were the 170 new species that get their energy from chemicals spewing from ocean-bottom vents and seeps. Among them was a family of "yeti crabs," which have silky, hairlike filaments on the legs.

In the mid-Atlantic, researchers found 40 new species and 1,000 in all, said Odd Aksel Bergstad, an oceanographer with the University of Bergen in Norway who was reached by telephone in the Azores islands.

"It was a surprise to me to find such rich communities in the middle of the ocean," he said. "There were not even good maps for the area. Our understanding of the biodiversity there was very weak."

More than 2,000 scientists from 80 countries are working to catalog the oceans' species.

dwellers, the report said.

The researchers have found about 5,600 new species on top of the 230,000 known. They hope to add several thousand more by October 2010, when the census will be done.

The scientists say they could announce that a million or more species remain unknown. On land, biologists have catalogued about 1.5 million plants and animals.

They say they've found 5,722 species living in the extreme ocean depths, waters deeper than 3,280 feet.

"The deep sea was considered a desert until not so long ago; it's quite amazing to have documented close to 20,000 forms of life in a zone that was thought to be barren," said Jesse Ausubel with the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation, a sponsor of the census. "The deep sea is the least explored environment on earth."

Iran stages war games as west's nuclear offer remains on the table

By Thomas Erdbrink
The Washington Post

TEHRAN — Iran's army and Revolutionary Guard staged large-scale air defense war games on Sunday in an effort to show off the country's deterrence capabilities amid rising pressure from the West over its nuclear program, state television reported.

Images broadcast Sunday included warplanes dropping bombs on targets in the desert, rockets being launched and paratroopers boarding Chinook troop helicopters. Iranian leaders had earlier warned that any attempt by Israel to destroy Iranian nuclear facilities would be met with a military response. "If the enemy tries its luck and fires a missile into Iran, our ballistic missiles would zero in on Tel Aviv before the dust settles on the attack," said Mojtaba Zolnour, Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei's representative in the Revolutionary Guard Corps, told state news agency IRNA on Saturday.

The display of military muscle Sunday came as Iran's envoy to the International Atomic Energy Agency, Ali Asghar Soltanieh, insisted Iran needs guarantees it will receive nuclear fuel on time for its research reactor if it is to agree to a swap of uranium proposed by the West, reported semi-official Iranian Students' News Agency (ISNA).

The United States, Russia and France have said they are running out of patience with Iran, which has not given a formal answer on a proposal for trading a large part of Iran's stockpile of low-enriched uranium for the higher-enriched uranium that the country needs for medical uses, such as cancer treatments.

"The main issue is how to get a guarantee for the timely supply of fuel which Iran needs," said Soltanieh. "We are ready to have negotiations with a positive approach, but because of a lack of confidence with the West, we need to have those guarantees."

Previous statements by Iranian leaders have suggested the nation was unlikely to agree to a deal.

As President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad on Sunday started a five-day trip to Africa and South America, a former vice president was sentenced to six years in prison in connection with protests over June's presidential election.

Mohammad Ali Abtahi, a cleric and prominent blogger within Iran's reformist movement, was temporarily released on $700,000 bail, the state news agency IRNA quoted Tehran prosecutor Abbas Jafari Dowlatabadi as saying on Sunday.

Abtahi, a strong critic of Ahmadinejad's government, made televised confessions after his arrest in June. He also updated his popular blog from prison. In one posting while being held in state custody, he called his interrogator "his friend" and he repudiated his involvement in the protest movement following the election, which officially ended in an Ahmadinejad landslide but which the opposition claims was rigged.

Thanksgiving Day charity races offer family exercise

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

Oh, Thanksgiving. The day the table groans with poultry, carbohydrates and pie, and couches groan under the weight of overstuffed football fans.

But it doesn't have to be that way. Across the region, Turkey Trots give families an easy opportunity to get out into the crisp fall air and burn off a few calories before sitting down to feast. The races also follow the theme of the day, helping participants give thanks by contributing to charity through their registration fees.

"Everybody says, 'Everything's ready, turkey's in the oven, and we don't just want to sit in front of the TV and watch TV all day,'" said Daryl Fauth, organizer of the Trot in Hailey. His event has grown from 100 to 600 participants in its six years, and has contributed at least $1,000 each year to the local Catholic church to provide hot suppers to those in need. "It makes everybody feel good that they're helping somebody."

The trots can also be a way for families to come together. Hailey Trot participant Shari Kunz began running a few years ago to raise money for cancer research in honor of her brother, who was fighting lymphoma. A year after he died, her whole family came to Hailey to celebrate his life, and all 30 of them decided to join the Turkey Trot — grandmas, babies and all.

"It's a real family affair for us," she said. And the benefits sure don't hurt. "It gets your blood flowing; you always feel good when you're done. Some people say it gives you an excuse to eat more at Thanksgiving."

Kunz said that the lack of competitive spirit at the Trot makes it appealing for all abilities and ages.

"It's just something active and fun to do; it gets you outside," she said. "It's just so cool to see the community come out and do something positive for themselves and each other."

Although Bald Mountain usually opens on Thanksgiving Day as well, Fauth said the Trot gives those who don't ski — or those who don't want to take the time to get up to the mountain with a car full of gear — a good alternative.

"Everybody brings their dogs, their strollers, their bikes," he said.

Of course, a new tradition of running on Thanksgiving morning doesn't mean other traditions go out the window. Joked Fauth: "The best thing of all is, I'm home by 1 o'clock watching football!"

IT'S THE LITTLE STEPS YOU TAKE THAT CAN KEEP YOU HEALTHY

Take control of your health

By Julie Deardorff
Chicago Tribune

If you're ready to take control of your health, start by washing your hands for 15 to 20 seconds, about as long as it takes to sing "Happy Birthday" twice. Doing this simple act, while avoiding certain behaviors — smoking, excessive drinking and eating too much — can dramatically improve your health, said internist William Meller, who specializes in evolutionary medicine in Santa Barbara, Calif.

Prevention goes well beyond the mammograms, prostate screenings or blood tests that we can get at the doctor's office. It's the little steps you take that can keep you healthy.

"Ideally, prevention should also emphasize healthy lifestyles, a practice

1. Take a walk.

Humans are designed to be on the move, Meller said. "Walking triggers all of our bodily systems: digestion, stress relief, thinking and preparation for sleep." It's easy, simple, free and confers the benefits of exercise without the energetic pursuits, Muller said. Walk every day — barefoot is fine — and get a pedometer to track your steps, shooting for a minimum of 10,000.

Stay committed by setting walking dates with a friend.

2. Keep a food journal.

Writing down everything you eat can double your weight loss, according to a study published in the American Journal of Preventive Medicine. "The more food records people kept, the more weight they lost," said lead author Jack Hollis, a researcher at Kaiser

Permanente's Center for Health Research. Scribble down your dietary transgressions on a note pad, use an online food journal or send yourself text messages. "It's the process of reflecting on what you eat that helps us become aware of our habits, and hopefully change our behavior," said Dr. Keith Bachman, a member of The Kaiser Permanente Care Management Institute's

Mysterious allergy

STEPHEN KLEIN-DAVIS/Washington Post

Hayden Newell was rushed to a hospital three times before doctors were able to determine the cause of his severe and unpredictable allergic reactions.

Research sheds light on dangerous reactions

By Sandra G. Boodman
Special to The Washington Post

This cannot be happening again, Hayden Newell thought as the angry, red, ferociously itchy welts encircled his waist and spread up his arms. The 57-year-old metallurgist from tiny Boones Mill, Va., who was attending a business lunch in Florida, knew what would probably happen next: His lips would grow numb, making it hard to speak, he would become short of breath and his blood pressure would plummet: all unmistakable signs of anaphylaxis, a potentially fatal allergic reaction. Newell knew from experience that he had to get to an emergency room — fast.

The same thing had happened a month earlier, in August 2008, an event that culminated in an early-morning ambulance ride to a hospital in Roanoke, Va. At the time, his general practitioner suspected that Newell had developed an allergy to the oysters he had eaten the previous night. But tests revealed no shellfish allergy, so Newell had grazed at a buffet, sampling shrimp, scallops and meatballs.

What, he wondered, as a colleague drove him to a Florida ER, could be causing these frightening episodes that came out of nowhere?

The probable answer did not emerge until nearly six months later, and it seemed downright bizarre. The diagnosis, shared by a growing number of patients on two continents and described in two recent studies, has upended long-held views about an allergy previously considered rare. "It has changed our thinking," said Newell's allergist, Saju Eapen of Roanoke. "This was not something we looked for in the past."

In July 2008, Newell spent several days visiting his nephew in rural North Carolina. Three days after returning home he noticed a red spot between two toes on his left foot, evidence of a tick he had picked up while walking barefoot in the country. He extracted it and, assuming the bite had become infected, called his doctor, who prescribed an antibiotic.

Problem solved, Newell thought.

But a month later, hours after a dinner that included oysters Rockefeller and filet mignon, both of which he had eaten many times before, Newell awoke at 3 hives, which can cause anxiety and shortness of breath. He prescribed an EpiPen, a device that administers an emergency epinephrine injection, which he told Newell to carry at all times. Then he handed him an order for a blood test. In the event of another attack, he told Newell, doctors should test his blood for levels of serum tryptase within three hours. An elevated reading would indicate true anaphylaxis, not just anxiety.

Newell didn't have to wait long. In December, after eating chicken and beef — but not seafood — he was driving home from a business lunch in Norfolk when he felt the unnerving itching.

"I was thinking, 'I won't be able to eat anything,'" as he pulled off the highway and headed for the nearest hospital, he recalled. The episode did lead to one definitive answer: His serum tryptase level was elevated, which meant the anaphylaxis was genuine. But what was he so violently allergic to?

At an appointment the following day, Eapen asked a crucial question: "Do you remember if you had beef when you had shellfish?" The answer, Newell said, was yes, every time.

Eapen said he thought knew what was wrong. When the allergist asked about tick bites, Newell told him about the July incident.

Eapen took a blood sample and told Newell he was sending it to a lab at the University of Virginia School of Medicine for testing that might point to the suspected culprit: an allergy to red meat. Eapen was familiar with groundbreaking work underway at U-Va.'s allergy clinic that had found a link between a reaction to tick bites and the development of a sudden allergy to red meat, as well as pork and lamb, in people who had eaten it all their lives without incident.

A team headed by U-Va.'s Thomas Platts-Mills, an internationally prominent allergist, published a study in February detailing the cases of 24 adults who developed a sudden allergy to red meat. Eighty percent had reported being bitten by ticks weeks or months before the allergy appeared, and many had experienced anaphylaxis as much as six hours after eating red meat, a highly unusual occurrence because food allergies typically cause violent reactions within minutes.

Similar findings were reported in the Medical Journal of Australia in May by a team of Sydney allergists.

So how does a tick bite trigger a sudden allergy to meat?

Scott Commins, an assistant professor of medicine and lead author of the U-Va. study published in the Journal of Allergy and Clinical Immunology, said that in susceptible people such as Newell, a tick bite that causes a significant skin reaction seems to trigger the production of an antibody that binds to a sugar present on meat called alpha-galactosidase, also known as alpha-gal. When a person who has the antibody eats meat, it triggers the release of histamine, which causes the allergic symptoms: hives, itching and, in the worst case, anaphylaxis.

But many questions remain unanswered, said Platts-Mills, whose research is continuing. His lab has collected data on more than 300 patients from across the country and abroad.

"We're sure ticks can do this," he said. "We're not sure they're the only cause." Nor do researchers know why anaphylaxis is so delayed or why only some people develop a problem after tick bites. They do know that the allergic reaction is dose-related: Eating a tiny amount of meat probably won't cause a serious reaction. A large steak will.

Cancer linked to excess body fat

By Jennifer LaRue Hugot
Special to The Washington Post

Newly compiled data suggest that "excess body fat alone is responsible for more than 100,000 cancer cases in the U.S." The report comes from the American Institute for Cancer Research, which said its data included cases of endometrial, esophageal, pancreatic, kidney, gallbladder, breast and colorectal cancer. No one has pinned down exactly how body fat might increase cancer risk. Researcher Laurence Kolonel explains that fat isn't just sitting around waiting to be drawn on when your body's starving. In fact, he says, there are "all kinds of things going on in fat tissue," including production of estrogen and other cancer-promoting hormones. Fat tissue also contributes to inflammation, an established cancer precursor, he says.

Quick Study

The topic: obstructive sleep apnea

Losing weight seems to ease sleep disruption

THE QUESTION

Might losing weight improve the disturbed breathing known as obstructive sleep apnea?

THIS STUDY

It involved 264 obese people, all with diabetes, who were randomly assigned to an intensive weight-loss program or a diabetes education and management program. About three-quarters of them had mild or moderate sleep apnea, and the rest had more severe cases. The weight-loss group followed a strictly regulated diet and exercised moderately for about three hours a week; the others attended three informational sessions on diet, physical activity and social support.

After a year, those in the weight-loss group had lost, on average, 24 pounds, compared with an average one-pound loss for the others. The percentage of those in the weight-loss group who still had severe apnea was about half that of those in the other group. Overall, sleep apnea disappeared in about 14 percent of the weight-loss group and 4 percent of the others, and it worsened in those whose weight remained fairly stable in that year.

WHO MAY BE AFFECTED?

Obese people with obstructive sleep apnea, which occurs when breathing temporarily stops or becomes very shallow, severely disrupting sleep. In the U.S., about 12 million people — men more than women — have the disorder, and about half of them are overweight.

CAVEATS

Participants ranged from 45 to 75 years old; whether the findings would apply to younger people remains unclear. They also might not apply to people without diabetes.

FIND THIS STUDY

It's in the Sept. 28 issue of Archives of Internal Medicine.

Good fats really do exist

The Washington Post

It's no myth: There is such a thing as healthy fat. Monounsaturated and polyunsaturated fats — when eaten in moderation — can reduce bad cholesterol and lower your risk of heart disease and stroke. Monounsaturated fats are also usually high in vitamin E, while polyunsaturated fats contain omega-6 and omega-3 fatty acids.

Where possible, replace the saturated and trans fats in your diet with the monounsaturated and polyunsaturated kind. Find them in such foods as avocados, peanuts, seeds, olive oil, vegetable oil, salmon and trout. The fats you eat should make up no more than 25 to 35 percent of your daily caloric intake (with each gram of fat containing nine calories), the American Heart Association recommends.

How to pick an exercise class

By Alison Johnson
Daily Press (Newport News, Va.)

The lengthy menu of group fitness programs at most gyms can be overwhelming. Here is advice from personal trainers on finding one suited for you:

Observe it first. Ask the instructor if you can stand in the back of the room and watch a class in action. You also can talk to some participants afterward and, if you like what you hear, get a few tips on tackling the first day.

Talk to the instructor. Find out the usual pace of a class and its fitness goals, whether it's overall toning, weight loss or working on specific body parts. A program also may be more or less intense on certain days of the week.

Determine your "impact" level. Aerobics classes usually are divided into low, medium and high impact. If you haven't exercised regularly and get out of breath fairly easily, start out low and aim to move up over time.

Consider your personality. An introvert may not fit into a loud, upbeat aerobics class as much as an extrovert. At the same time, going against your personality may be just what you need — for instance, a peaceful yoga class for a hard-charging type.

Don't be afraid to branch out. Many classes that seem intimidating — such as belly dancing, yoga or spinning — are organized so people of all fitness levels can enjoy them. You may be surprised by what you like (and remember: you don't have to go back).

Look for more than one class. Switching up your routine throughout the week will increase your body's fat-burning rate.

Bring a friend. Checking out a new class can be intimidating. Get a pal to join you — preferably another beginner.

Steps

Weight Management Initiative.

3. Stop drinking soda.

Soda and other caloric, sugar-sweetened beverages have contributed to skyrocketing rates of obesity and Type 2 diabetes. But there's also evidence that drinking diet soda leads to weight gain. Researchers suspect that tricking the brain — getting sweetness without the calories — makes you crave more sugar than ever.

Your best bet is to stop drinking calories altogether, said obesity specialist Dr. Yoni Freedhoff. His most confused patients seem to be doing everything right but may have two glasses of milk, one glass of juice and one glass of wine a day. "That's roughly 40 pounds of liquid calories per year," he wrote on his blog, Weighty Matters. Freedhoff's advice: Don't rely on beverages for nourishment. "A well-balanced diet replete with fruits, vegetables and proteins should satisfy all of one's nutritional needs," he said.

"Liquid calories are not satiating and in studies tend only to add calories to a meal," said Freedhoff, founder of Ottawa's Bariatric Medical Institute, a multidisciplinary weight-management center.

4. Strengthen your muscles.

If you want to keep your muscles from weakening as you age, start strength training. It's "the only style of exercise that maintains and increases lean muscle tissue and burns between 22 and 36 calories per day," said personal trainer Jim Karas. He suggests starting with push-ups for the upper body and lunges and squats for the lower body. "Move slowly, and think about the muscles you are engaging. One slow set of 10 is all you need, but make sure to fail," which means you can't perform another repetition.

5. Chill out.

Stressed-out people are more vulnerable to colds and other viruses, they take longer to recover from illness and they gain more weight than their relaxed counterparts, research has shown. We also know that "the inability to feel in control of stress, rather than the stressful event itself, is the most damaging to immunity," wrote Joan Borysenko in "Mending the Body, Mending the Mind."

Another stress expert, Debbie Mandel, likes to lift weights when her stress levels creep up. "Then I'm ready to reframe negatives into positives to turn stress into strength," said Mandel, the author of "Addicted to Stress." In addition to exercise, deep-breathing techniques, meditation, tai chi and yoga are proven stress relievers.

6. Eat out less.

We often use restaurants in the same way our parents used supermarkets, one of the main reasons for the dramatic global rise in chronic diseases such as obesity, Type 2 diabetes and heart disease, said Freedhoff. "Nutrition and calories aren't intuitive," he said. "When restaurant salads can have more calories and fat than a Big Mac, you know you're putting your health at risk. You'll save more than your money by eating meals in. You might even save your life."

7. Be a social butterfly.

Human beings are social creatures, if only because we need to reproduce. But research has shown that joining a club or sports team, belonging to a church group or keeping in contact with friends creates a sense of social identity that can help significantly reduce your risk of having a stroke, dementia and even the common cold. "We do not outgrow our need for others," according to the MacArthur Foundation Study of Aging in America. "Loneliness breeds both illness and early death."

8. Get your ZZZZZZZZ.

Sleeping well is the single most overlooked factor critical to good health, especially during the flu season, said sleep specialist Dr. Rubin Naiman, an assistant professor at the University of Arizona's Center for Integrative Medicine. But because focusing on doing all the right things before bed can make it harder to sleep, Naiman suggests lightening things up, perhaps by watching comedy on television before bed. "Too often sleep is approached with an anxious mind and heavy heart," he said. "Laughter is good medicine — and good sleep medicine. I recommend it over sleeping pills."

9. Eat whole foods.

Whole foods — fruits, vegetables, legumes, nuts, seeds, eggs and whole grains — are unprocessed and unrefined and typically don't have added sugar, salt or fat. They often have a low glycemic index, which means they don't raise blood sugar and insulin levels as quickly as processed foods. Choose a baked potato instead of French fries, eat whole wheat bread instead of white bread, or start the day with oatmeal, rather than a sugary breakfast cereal. "I eat as many fresh veggies and fruits as possible and stay away from anything in a bag, a box or a can," said Yvonne Conte of Syracuse, N.Y., the author of a guidebook to living a happier and healthier life. "When I started this, I lost 22 pounds. And it has stayed off. Best thing I ever did."

10. Find your passion.

Do things that bring meaning to your days, said Patricia Boyle, a neuropsychologist in the Alzheimer's Disease Center at the Rush University Medical Center in Chicago, whose research has shown that having a higher purpose can reduce the risk of death among older adults. "Purpose is cognitively stimulating, and this is very much along the lines of the adage 'Use it or lose it,' which certainly has merit," said Dr. Thomas Perls, director of the New England Centenarian study.

DEAR ABBY: I have been dating "Charlie" for almost a year. We both have children from previous relationships. He has recently been talking about marriage, but as much as I care for him, I am reluctant.

When my daughter, "Mia" was in kindergarten, she was diagnosed with ADHD. I went through some rough times. It took all I had to raise her and her younger brother. Mia is now 13 and finally starting to overcome her ADHD issues.

Today is Monday, Nov. 23, the 327th day of 2009. There are 38 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Nov. 23, 1765, Frederick County, Md., became the first colonial entity to repudiate the British Stamp Act.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1804, the 14th president of the United States, Franklin Pierce, was born in Hillsboro, N.H.

In 1889, the first jukebox made its debut in San Francisco, at the Palais Royale Saloon.

In 1903, singer Enrico Caruso made his American debut at the Metropolitan Opera House in New York, appearing in "Rigoletto."

In 1936, Life, the photo-journalism magazine created by Henry R. Luce, was first published.

In 1943, during World War II, U.S. forces seized control of Tarawa and Makin atolls from the Japanese.

In 1959, the musical "Fiorello!" starring Tom Bosley as legendary New York Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia, opened on Broadway.

In 1963, President Lyndon B. Johnson proclaimed Nov. 25 a day of national mourning following the assassination of President John F. Kennedy.

In 1971, the People's Republic of China was seated in the U.N. Security Council.

In 1980, some 2,600 people were killed by a series of earthquakes that devastated southern Italy.

In 1996, a hijacked Ethiopian Airlines Boeing 767 crashed into the waves off Comoros Islands, killing about two-thirds of the 175 people on board.

Ten years ago: In a plea met with scant applause and silent stares, President Bill Clinton told ethnic Albanians in Kosovo that "you must try" to forgive Serb neighbors and stop punishing them for the terror campaign of Slobodan Milosevic. Defense Secretary William Cohen called for a military-wide review of conduct after a Pentagon study said up to 75 percent of blacks and other ethnic minorities reported experiencing racially offensive behavior.

Five years ago: Opposition leader Viktor Yushchenko declared himself the winner of Ukraine's disputed presidential election and took a symbolic oath of office. (He won a court-ordered revote in December 2004.) Viacom agreed to pay a record $3.5 million to settle dozens of government investigations into allegations of indecency in its radio and television programming. Dan Rather announced he would step down as principal anchorman of "The CBS Evening News" in March 2005.

One year ago: The government unveiled a bold plan to rescue Citigroup, injecting a fresh $20 billion into the troubled firm as well as guaranteeing hundreds of billions of dollars in risky assets. A gunman shot and killed a woman and a man who came to her aid inside a church in Clifton, N.J. (Suspect Joseph Pallipurath, the estranged husband of the dead woman, Reshma James, is awaiting trial.) Spain clinched an improbable, come-from-behind Davis Cup victory over Argentina.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"The reason why worry kills more people than work is that more people worry than work." — Robert Frost

Because the Nationals start on Thursday in San Diego, all the deals this week are from last year's Fall Nationals. In the Board-a-Match Teams, Alex Ornstein (East) had the opportunity to make a master play and grabbed it with both hands.

On West's revealing lead of the heart seven against three no-trump, declarer played low from dummy and Ornstein played the king. South won it and immediately ran the club queen — the right play because after the lead, West was far more likely to have three clubs to the K-10 than the singleton king.

At any rate, Ornstein won the club king and shifted to the spade jack — curtains for declarer. East's logic was that if West had led a heart from three low cards with what clearly was a four-card spade suit, then he must have the spade ace-queen, and unless West had the spade 10, nothing could help the defense's cause.

As you can see, if East had shifted to the more mundane low spade at trick three, declarer simply plays low, and West must win the first spade. Now declarer's spade king is protected from further attack.

One further point: Was West wrong not to lead a spade at trick one? I'd say not. At matchpoint pairs or Board-a-Match, the main objective on defense to a normal contract is to avoid giving away unnecessary tricks. Yes, you sometimes fail to set a contract that you might have beaten, but if on three other occasions you save an overtrick, that is a fine investment.

ANSWER: West showed 5-5 in hearts and diamonds, and subsequently settled in four spades, probably therefore with one club and two spades. The danger with leading ace and another trump is that it gives up trump control. Maybe a better lead is your small trump! Now you may be able to get in and draw dummy's last trump before cashing your clubs. This idea comes from Krzysztof Martens' "University of Defence: Opening Leads."
