WITNESS TO HISTORY

Gooding man recalls seeing Pearl Harbor attack in person

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

David Ray Roessler was there. The Gooding resident, now 88, is now one of a handful of Magic Valley residents who actually witnessed the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor that led to the U.S.'s entrance into World War II, 68 years ago.

He argues his memory's not quite what it used to be. But start up a conversation with him and the tales of a time long past return.

Roessler was chief clerk of the U.S. Army's 24th Division Signal Office, based out of Schofield Barracks, when the Japanese paid their visit to Hawaii. Sound asleep, he awakened on the morning of Dec. 7, 1941, to the sound of a plane going down. Running out of the barracks, he saw about 16 two-seat Japanese planes bombing Wheeler Field about two miles away.

Roessler recalls the course of the day in small vignettes. Rushing across a bare field to report to duty, he emptied his .45-caliber handgun at a Japanese plane just 50 feet above him.

"You knew it wouldn't do any good," he says today.

Timber program becomes vast entitlement

Program initially designed to help states with logging losses now doles out money to any state with federal forests

By Matthew Daly and Shannon Dininny
Associated Press writers

RESERVE, N.M. — A federal program that began as a safety net for Pacific Northwest logging communities hard-hit by battles over the spotted owl in the 1990s has morphed into a sprawling entitlement — one that ships vast amounts of money to states with little or no historic connection to timber, an analysis by The Associated Press shows.

Nicknamed "county payments," the timber program was supposed to assist counties shortchanged when national forests limited logging to protect the northern spotted owl and other endangered species.

Since becoming law in 2000, the program has distributed more than $3 billion to 700 counties in 41 states with national forests and helped fund everything from schools to libraries to jails.

The federal largess initially focused on a handful of Western states, with Oregon alone receiving nearly $2 billion.

"When you are staring down the barrel of a $1.4 trillion budget deficit, it's deals like this that got us into that mess."

Spending of that magnitude, though, sparked a new timber war — this one among politicians eager to get their hands on some of the logging money.

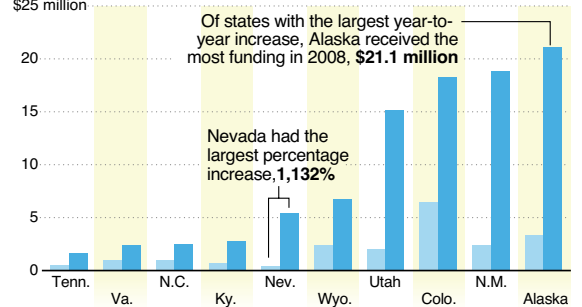

A four-year renewal of the law, passed last year, authorizes an additional $1.6 billion for the program through 2011 and shifts substantial sums to states where the spotted owl never flew. While money initially was based on historic logging

Pest abatement district completes first year of work

District attributes success to targeting mosquito larvae before they become adults

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

Twin Falls County's brand-new pest abatement district aggressively assaulted black flies and mosquitoes this year and is taking steps to do an even better job next year, representatives told county commissioners on Friday morning.

The visit, during which the district delivered its annual report, gave the commissioners a chance to ask questions about the abatement work they launched themselves with an emergency district two years ago.

Voters in 2008 approved the creation of a formal, better-financed district, complete with an annual budget of $442,000 and a public board of directors. For now, it focuses mainly on just the two insects: Mosquitoes can carry disease and pester humans, breeding in standing water, while black flies prefer moving water and are mainly a threat to livestock operations.

Having spent much of the year running across the county, District Manager Kirk Tubbs said he's now analyzing "piles of data" gathered during his prevention efforts. Mapping software will help refine his strategy next year, he said, while crunching all of the numbers will create usable information for others to coordinate off of.

According to the annual report, that data say about 42 percent of mosquitoes caught in traps were of species most likely to carry West Nile virus. But only three traps tested positive

Roessler

"But it made you feel better."

He remembers watching B-17 bombers try to land in the midst of the attack, unarmed planes that simply wanted to fuel up. And he was at 24th Division headquarters, he says, when someone brought in proof that one of the attacking planes had been brought down — the hand of a Japanese gunner, still holding the handle of his machine gun. Two men had shot the plane down using Browning Automatic Rifles.

Of course, Roessler's memories include much more than just that fateful day. There was the time just before the attack when he served as the telephone runner for two Japanese ambassadors who visited Schofield and were treated to a full parade. There was Dec. 8, 1941, when he and his fellow soldiers sat around radios and listened to President Franklin Roosevelt ask Congress to declare war against Japan.

And there were the days afterward, when Hawaii was placed under martial law. Roessler remembers that as a confused, chaotic time. Both the military and civilians were scared, he says, and panicked civilians even killed several military guards.

"If they said halt, you'd better halt, or they'd shoot if it was at night," he says of the guards. "It was rough there for about two weeks."

Roessler stayed posted at Hawaii for some time, indirectly participating in many events of the war. During early morning calisthenics at Schofield, for example, he says he watched a B-17 "all shot to heck" at the Battle of Midway fly overhead, preparing to land.

In 1943, he became part of a handful of new joint-assault signal companies sent island-hopping in the Pacific Ocean. He participated in landings on Leyte, Luzon and Okinawa, "always in the first or third wave," he says.

He left Okinawa in June 1945 as one of about 1,200 men who qualified to be discharged under a point system. But, if not for the development and use of the atomic bomb, he likely would have been called back in, he says. The bombs and Japan's subsequent surrender removed the need for a costly, comprehensive invasion of the nation itself.

"My company was one of the first units that would've been on the invasion," he says.

He stayed in touch with his fellow Pearl Harbor survivors over the year, eventually serving as secretary of the regional chapter of the Pearl Harbor Survivors Association. The chapter, started in 1979, had to be shut down a few years ago for lack of members, he says; in the Magic Valley, he's only aware of about five survivors still around.

"They're just all gone," he says.

He's happy to share the information in the vast records he kept from the war while he can. But he also realizes the eventual fate of his stories, just like the tales of World War I before it.

"After the war, years later, people don't realize what they did, you know," he says of that earlier conflict. "The same thing has happened with Pearl Harbor."

District

for West Nile this year, Tubbs said, and after extensive treatment in their areas, future tests didn't detect the disease.

The district attributes much of its success so far to the strategy of targeting larvae before they can become adults. Board President John Snelling said districts in other areas of Idaho focus much more on fogging for adult insects.

"It's an option. It's something in our arsenal," Snelling said of fogging. "But I think we're taking the right approach."

Officials discussed a few different issues, including possibly bringing in a University of Idaho graduate student to answer a few questions about the bugs' behavior and the adequacy of the district's current building — temperature control and dust are both issues, but overall the leased space isn't bad, Snelling said. Tubbs said the district wants to expand its educational work, which has included booths at various community events and presentations to local schools.

Commissioners seemed pleased with what they heard.

"I think you guys are doing an excellent job, personally," said Commission Chairman George Urie. "I'm impressed."

Timber

levels, now any state with federal forests — even those with no history of logging — is eligible for millions in Forest Service dollars.

Doling out all that taxpayer money is based less on logging losses than on the powerful reality of political clout. Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., is among the program's strongest backers.

The biggest winner under the renewal is, in fact, Nevada, where payments jumped by 1,132 percent. Reid called the timber program a personal priority that supports "the lifeblood of communities all across America, and particularly in the West."

Critics of the program do not see it through that patriotic lens. Steve Ellis, vice president of Taxpayers for Common Sense, a watchdog group, called it "the ultimate political log roll," an irrational subsidy program that serves up cash bonuses for states with forest land.

"When you are staring down the barrel of a $1.4 trillion budget deficit, it's deals like this that got us into that mess," Ellis said.

But there is already a quiet move afoot to renew county payments beyond 2011.

"Letting county payments end after 2011 would leave gaping holes in county budgets," said Oregon's new Democratic senator, Jeff Merkley. "We can't let that happen."

Here in Catron County, the part of western New Mexico where Bunch Cassidy and his Wild Bunch gang once holed up, the program distributes the highest per capita payment in the nation — $1,883 per person.

Pioneers settled this remote frontier town more than a century ago to log ponderosa pine. By the late 1980s, timber production had dwindled, and in 1990 the town's sole remaining mill shut down.

The county, which sits along the Arizona border, is larger than three Eastern states, yet has fewer than 3,500 residents. The public high school in Reserve, the county seat, has just five seniors. The handful of businesses lining Main Street close early each evening, save for a quiet bar frequented by a few locals.

"We have more elk than we do people," said longtime resident Jim Keller.

Of much more important note: New Mexico's two senators served as chairman and ranking Republican on the Senate committee that rewrote the timber payments formula.

New Mexico's increase under the new formula was 692 percent.

The original timber payments law, formally known as the Secure Rural Schools and Community Self-Determination Act, was the result of years of effort by Northwest lawmakers, primarily Sen. Ron Wyden, D-Ore., and former Sen. Larry Craig, R-Idaho. Eager to plug a budget gap caused by the timber industry's steep decline, Wyden and Craig created a substitute revenue stream to pay rural counties that no longer could depend on revenue from logging in federal forests.

Five Western states — Oregon, California, Washington, Idaho and Montana — pocketed more than 80 percent of the total timber payments from 2000 to 2007. All

IDAHO'S SHARE

Most of Idaho's 44 counties are expected to receive federal timber payments through 2011. Magic Valley totals include:

Cassia	2,273,682

are traditional timber producers where huge swaths of land are owned by the federal government.

Many Oregon counties received more money annually from county payments than from timber sales during all but the peak logging years of the late 1980s.

Under the renewal, included as a sweetener in the $700 billion financial bailout program, the five Western states saw their share of the timber money drop to about 62 percent in the first year, with further drops scheduled in each of the next three years.

Other states that benefit from the change include Utah, which received a 636 percent increase; Alaska (528 percent); Kentucky (303 percent); Tennessee (188 percent); Colorado (184 percent); North Carolina and Virginia (150 percent each).

Timber was harvested in some of these states in the 1980s — the basis for the original spending formula — but at far lower levels than the Pacific Northwest, where timber was king. The new formula, however, takes into account national forest acreage in each state and county, regardless of historical timber production, and includes an adjustment based on per capita income and other factors.

Individual counties also received huge increases:

● Nevada's Clark County, renowned for its sinful desert attraction, Las Vegas, saw an 841 percent increase in timber money to $226,000 this year. That nearly equals timber receipts from the county's tiny portion of the Humboldt-Toiyabe National Forest over two decades.

● Timber harvests in Kentucky's Daniel Boone National Forest have been modest in recent decades — ranging from $7,600 to $77,000 annually — but Clay County, Ky., which includes part of the forest, received $338,510 this year from the timber program, a 341 percent increase.

● Tucked in the red rock landscape of Yavapai County, Ariz., lies the upscale community of Sedona, where, among other notables, Republican Sen. John McCain owns a $1.8 million getaway ranch nearby. Yavapai received $2 million this year under the timber program — a 221 percent increase. The Prescott National Forest, as well as portions of the Coconino and Tonto national forests, are within the county.

Sen. Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M., whose home town of Silver City, N.M., sits in rural Grant County just south of Catron County, said the new program is more fair to states outside the Northwest. Grant County received nearly $1.4 million this year, a tenfold increase.

"I do think clearly it is now designed to assist more of the rural areas throughout the West, and I think that's appropriate," Bingaman said.

Rollover kills one Saturday evening

www.magicvalley.com

Times-News

A one-vehicle rollover on Saturday evening left one Kimberly resident dead and sent another to the hospital, Idaho State Police reported.

ISP responded at 7:34 p.m. to the incident at milepost 153 of Interstate 84 near Wendell, according to a press release. Michele K. Bastian, 33, was headed east in a 2005 Chevrolet Canyon pickup truck

A passenger, Kathleen G. Bastian, 63, Michele's mother, was ejected from the truck and succumbed to her injuries at the scene. Michele Bastian was taken by ground ambulance to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center with non-life-threatening injuries; she was no longer a patient there as of Sunday evening. ISP continues to investigate the rollover. Road conditions were icy at the time, and neither occupant of the truck was wearing a seatbelt.

The rollover capped a day of crashes and slide-offs prompted by winter weather that also included a 22-vehicle pileup on I-84 near Glenns Ferry. Saturday's patterns, however, did not repeat on Sunday; emergency dispatchers across the region reported having a quiet day Sunday.

AROUND IDAHO

SANDPOINT Proposal made to fluctuate N. Idaho lake level

Members of the Pend Oreille Basin Commission say they are concerned about a Bonneville Power Administration plan to fluctuate the level of Lake Pend Oreille this winter to meet energy demands.

The agency wants to lower and raise the lake level between 2,051 and 2,055 feet above sea level to help meet energy demands that can occur during cold snaps.

But the commission says altering the lake level this winter will cause nutrient loading along the shore and could violate set standards for those zones.

Officials are also concerned about erosion in the Clark Fork and Pack river deltas.

LEWISTON Man faces jail for trespass, lewd texts

A former state Department of Health and Welfare child support employee pleaded guilty to five misdemeanor charges, including one from a trespassing incident in June where he peeked at a nude woman at a Lewiston tanning salon.

Under a plea agreement, Larry D. Dillman will spend 10 days of a 180-day sentence behind bars in the Nez Perce County Jail.

Four of the charges were for sending lewd text messages from his personal phone to four women.

The Lewiston Tribune reported that five more charges against the 41-year-old man involving additional women will be dismissed as part of the pact with prosecutors.

Dillman worked for the Department of Health and Welfare from 2004 until last June.

- An ordinance allowing outdoor or patio seating at a commercial zoned business.
- A right-of-way agreement with The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints that would allow the church to construct part of North College Road and Field Stream Way in anticipation of a future building permit.

There will be a public hearing at 6 p.m. for a planned unit development amendment that would remove the landscape buffer requirement to allow for additional parking at College View Park Subdivision, located at 176 Falls Ave. A doctor's office is planned for the site.

Drive for geothermal power heats up on U.S. campuses

By Dinesh Ramde
Associated Press writer

MILWAUKEE — While solar and wind power get most of the headlines, geothermal power is quietly gaining traction on college campuses where energy costs can siphon millions each year from the budget.

Schools from Wisconsin to New Mexico have geothermal projects in the works. There are 46 schools divvying up millions in federal stimulus dollars to advance technology that uses the temperature of the Earth, rather than coal-fired power plants, to heat and cool buildings.

So far this year, the Department of Energy has announced $400 million in grants to advance geothermal projects like those under way on a handful of campuses.

Geothermal technology has been around for decades, it works and it's increasingly affordable. At colleges that must maintain dozens of large buildings, the savings are magnified.

Those involved in the decision to pursue geothermal technology say they wanted to use less coal-fired power, although the schools also had to save money to justify the move.

The technology is a natural fit for schools like Boise State that sit atop geothermal springs. The school recently announced it expects to save as much as $80,000 per year in heating costs by doing so, and even more as the project expands. Yet schools in the Midwest and East are also turning to geothermal power using a different type of technology.

A typical geothermal system works like this:

On a warm day, the system draws heat from a hot building and pumps it underground where the soil absorbs it. On a cold day the process reverses — the system extracts heat from the earth and returns it to the building.

The process is so efficient that even though the underground temperature remains about a constant 55 degrees, the system can be used to chill water to 45 degrees or heat it to 170 degrees.

"That makes heating and cooling a whole new ball game," said Robert J. Koester, a Ball State University architecture professor overseeing one of the nation's most aggressive installations.

The Muncie, Ind. campus is upgrading all of its 45 buildings to geothermal technology, at a cost of $65 million to $70 million. The state contributed about $40 million, and because the system is expected to cut energy costs by $2 million per year, it should pay for itself in 12 to 15 years.

The savings won't translate directly into tuition breaks, Koester said, but will ease the school's pressure to find funding for other operational expenses.

Students have been advocating for a shift in campus energy sources for years. The increased investment in geothermal comes as students launch a national campaign intended to pressure schools into using less energy from coal-fired power plants. Students began protests late this year, specifically targeting 60 campuses that have their own coal-burning power plants.

There are several variations of geothermal installations. A common version involves drilling a series of holes, each about as wide as a beer mug, to a depth of 300 to 400 feet. An electrically powered compressor and fan help distribute the heat into and out of the holes.

WASHINGTON EVEN HONEST ABE'S A FAN

Obama aide says bin Laden hiding in Pakistan

Osama bin Laden may be slipping back and forth from Pakistan to Afghanistan. Or the U.S. might not have a clue, more than eight years after the al-Qaida leader masterminded the terrorist attacks on America.

Given a chance Sunday to clear away some of the mystery surrounding the whereabouts of the world's most wanted terrorist, Obama administration officials seemed to add to it with what appeared to be conflicting assessments.

President Obama's national security adviser, James Jones, said bin Laden, believed hiding mainly in a rugged area of western Pakistan, may be periodically slipping back into Afghanistan. But Obama's Pentagon chief, Robert Gates, said the U.S. has lacked good intelligence on bin Laden for a long time — "I think it has been years" — and did not confirm that he'd slipped into Afghanistan.

The failed hunt for bin Laden has been one of the signature frustrations of the global war on terrorism that former President George W. Bush launched after the Sept. 11 attacks. The main explanation given by both the Bush and Obama administrations for not getting bin Laden is that they simply don't know where he is.

Citing history, Obama rallies Senate Dems to pass health care bill

Casting health care overhaul as a legacy for the American people and failure as politically unthinkable, President Obama on Sunday rallied Senate Democrats to deliver on their party's half-century quest to expand the social safety net by providing access for all.

At the Capitol during a rare Sunday session of the Senate, Obama delivered a closed-door pep talk to the fractious Democratic caucus that lasted about 45 minutes. Deep divisions remain over abortion coverage, but there was hope for compromise on whether the government should directly offer health insurance in competition with private companies.

"They're going to get it done," Obama said as he left. He avoided specifics in the meeting with senators and took no questions.

The health care legislation — Obama's signature domestic policy goal — would provide coverage to more than 30 million additional people over the next decade with a new requirement for nearly everyone to purchase insurance. There would be new marketplaces where people could shop for and compare insurance plans, and lower-income people would get subsidies to help them afford coverage.

NEW YORK Study: Missing DNA can promote childhood obesity

Some children get severely obese because they lack particular chunks of DNA, which kicks their hunger into overdrive, researchers report.

The British researchers checked the DNA of 300 children who'd become very fat, on the order of 220 pounds by age 10. They looked for deletions or extra copies of DNA segments.

They found evidence that several rare deletions may promote obesity, including one kind they studied further and found in less than 1 percent of about 1,200 severely obese children.

That deletion, on chromosome 16, apparently causes trouble because it removes a gene that the brain needs to respond to the appetite-controlling hormone leptin, said Dr. Sadaf Farooqi of Cambridge University.

In her study, children with a chromosome 16 DNA deletion "have a very strong drive to eat," said Farooqi, who co-led the research. "They're very, very hungry, they always want to eat."

The work, reported online Sunday by the journal Nature, has already produced a real-world payoff. Farooqi said four children with the chromosome 16 deletion had drawn the attention of British child welfare authorities, who blamed the parents for over-feeding them.

WASH. ST. More than 500 claims filed against NW Jesuits

SPOKANE — More than 500 people in the Northwest filed claims against the Oregon Province of the Society of Jesus in advance of a November deadline, alleging members of the Catholic order sexually abused them as children.

The Spokesman-Review in Spokane reports the claims against the Jesuits span decades and range from Native Alaskan children to students at Spokane's Gonzaga Preparatory School.

A federal judge overseeing the Chapter 11 reorganization of the province set a Nov. 30 deadline for people to file the claims. The organization includes Jesuits in Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Montana and Alaska.

NETHERLANDS Delegates converge for climate finale

COPENHAGEN — Delegates converged Sunday for the grand finale of two years of tough, sometimes bitter negotiations on a climate change treaty, as U.N. officials calculated that pledges offered in the last few weeks to reduce greenhouse gases put the world within reach of keeping global warming under control.

Yvo de Boer, the U.N.'s top climate official, said on the eve of the 192-nation conference that despite unprecedented unity and concessions, industrial countries and emerging nations need to dig deeper.

"Time is up," de Boer said. "Over the next two weeks governments have to deliver." Finance — billions of dollars immediately and hundreds of billions of dollars annually within a decade — was emerging as the key to unblocking an agreement that would bind the global community to a sweeping plan to combat climate change.

Nations also must need to commit to larger emission reductions, de Boer said.

IRAN Iran chokes off Internet on eve of planned protests

TEHRAN — Government opponents shouted "Allahu Akbar" and "Death to the Dictator" from Tehran's rooftops in the pouring rain on the eve of student demonstrations planned for Monday. Authorities choked off Internet access and warned journalists working for foreign media to stick to their offices for the next three days.

The measures were aimed at depriving the opposition of its key means of mobilizing the masses as Iran's clerical rulers keep a tight lid on dissent. Government opponents are seeking, nonetheless, to get large numbers of demonstrators to turn out Monday and show their movement still has momentum.

Opposition leader Mir Hossein Mousavi threw his support behind the student demonstrations and declared that his movement was still alive. A statement posted on his Web site said the clerical establishment cannot silence students and was losing legitimacy in the Iranian people's minds.

"A great nation would not stay silent when some confiscate its vote," said Mousavi, who claims President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad stole the June 12 election victory from him by fraud.

Supreme Leader Ayatollah Ali Khamenei, who has final say on all state matters, accused the opposition Sunday of exposing divisions in the country and creating opportunities for Iran's enemies.

IRAQ Iraq passes hurdle to clear way for parliament election

BAGHDAD — Iraqi law-

An elderly woman is carried on a wheelbarrow by her relatives towards a polling station to vote during presidential elections in La Paz, Sunday. The vote comes under a new constitution ratified by voters in January that allowed President Evo Morales to run for a second term and that remade Bolivia as a 'plurinational' state, allowing self-rule for the country's native peoples.

makers approved plans Sunday to hold parliament elections early next year that are seen as an important step toward political reconciliation and easing the withdrawal of U.S. troops.

The vote — during an emergency session convened just before a midnight deadline — followed a marathon talks by political leaders to break an impasse over balloting provisions that would satisfy the nation's rival groups.

"I would like to congratulate the Iraqi people for this historical victory," said Vice President Tariq al-Hashemi, who had held up the elections for weeks with a veto. He also hailed political leaders for compromises that "got Iraq out from the bottleneck and out of a problem."

A failure to pass new elections rules on Sunday would have forced Iraq to revert to those used in its last parliament election in 2005 and likely throw the political process into a tailspin.

Plans for the election had been mired for weeks over al-Hashemi's demands for a greater political voice for minority Sunnis and the distribution of seats in Iraq's expanded 325-seat parliament.

BOLIVIA Leftist Morales heads toward easy re-election

LA PAZ — President Evo Morales appeared headed to easy re-election Sunday, with a strong mandate for further revolutionary change on behalf of Bolivia's long-suppressed indigenous majority.

Opponents say they fear Morales will use a consolidation of power not just to eradicate racially based economic inequalities but also to trample human rights and deepen state control of the economy.

Exit polls by two separate polling firms said Bolivia's first indigenous leader won at least 62 percent of the vote, with the closest challenger in a field of nine, center-right former state governor and military officer Manfred Reyes, winning about 23 percent.

Voters also were choosing a new Congress, and the exit poll by Equipos-Mori said

Morales' stridently leftist Movement Toward Socialism easily won a majority in both the 36-seat Senate and 130-member lower house.

The movement secured a two-thirds majority in the Senate but not the lower house, according to that exit poll.

CALIFORNIA NASA to launch sky- mapping spacecraft

LOS ANGELES — NASA's latest space telescope will scan the sky in search of never-before-seen asteroids, comets, stars and galaxies, with one of its main tasks to catalog objects posing a danger to Earth.

The sky-mapping WISE, or Wide-Field Infrared Survey Explorer, is scheduled to launch no earlier than before dawn Friday from Vandenberg Air Force Base on the central California coast aboard a Delta 2 rocket.

If all goes as planned, WISE will orbit some 325 miles above the Earth and produce the most detailed map yet of the cosmos. It is designed to detect objects that give off infrared light or heat. Infrared light is ideal for uncovering dusty, cold and distant objects that often can't be seen by optical telescopes.

The mission is expected to find millions of hard-to-see objects, said principal investigator Edward Wright of the University of California, Los Angeles.

"It's really a mission to survey everything that's out there," Wright said. "What we're trying to do is make a map of the universe."

It is Boise State's second Bowl Championship Series bid.

Sunday was all about the excitement of making it into the BCS. The team is excited to play on such a huge stage but also to play TCU, the last team to beat BSU. The Frogs won last season's Poinsettia Bowl 17-16.

LANDOVER, Md. — The New Orleans Saints are still perfect.

Garrett Hartley kicked an 18-yard field goal 6:29 into overtime Sunday, and the Saints improved to 12-0 with a 33-30 victory over the Washington Redskins.

The Saints clinched the NFC South with a far-from-perfect win that shows just how charmed their season is becoming. They trailed by seven points late in regulation when Washington's Shaun Suisham was wide right with a gimmie 23-yarder that would have sealed the victory for the Redskins (3-9).

COLTS 27, TITANS 17

INDIANAPOLIS — Indianapolis tied the NFL record for longest winning streak, beating Tennessee for its 21st consecutive regular-season victory.

The only other team to win that many in a row: New England from 2006-08. The Colts (12-0) can break the record next week at home against Denver.

CARDINALS 30, VIKINGS 17

GLENDALE, Ariz. — Kurt Warner, back after missing a game with a concussion, threw for 285 yards and three touchdowns and the Arizona Cardinals' defense stifled Brett Favre and the Minnesota Vikings in a stunningly one-sided victory.

Favre set an NFL record for consecutive appearances, but game No. 283 in a row was no night to remember for him or the rest of the Vikings (10-2).

RAIDERS 27, STEELERS 24

PITTSBURGH — Louis Murphy caught an 11-yard touchdown pass from Bruce Gradkowski with nine seconds remaining, his second score in the final 5½ minutes, and Oakland scored three late touchdowns to deal Pittsburgh its fourth consecutive loss.

The Steelers (6-6), in danger of missing the playoffs after winning the Super Bowl for a second time in four seasons, went ahead 24-20 on Ben Roethlisberger's 11-yard touchdown pass to Hines Ward with 1:56 remaining, only to have the Raiders (4-8) rally and win it.

DOLPHINS 22, PATRIOTS 21

MIAMI — When Tom Brady missed repeated chances to put the game away in the fourth quarter, Chad Henne and the Miami Dolphins took advantage.

Henne threw for a career-high 335 yards and directed a 51-yard drive for the winning field goal with 1:02 left, and Miami rallied past New England.

EAGLES 34, FALCONS 7

ATLANTA — Michael Vick returned to Atlanta and the Georgia Dome, accounted for a pair of touchdowns — one running, the other passing — and basked in the cheers of his former home and Philadelphia thoroughly dominated the short-handed Falcons.

GIANTS 31, COWBOYS 24

EAST RUTHERFORD,

N.J. — Brandon Jacobs had the Giants' longest play of the season for just a few minutes, then Domenik Hixon topped it, lifting New York past Dallas.

The Giants (7-5) tightened the NFC East with their win, dropping Dallas (8-4) into a tie with Philadelphia for the lead.

CHARGERS 30, BROWNS 23

CLEVELAND — LaDainian Tomlinson scored his 150th career TD and stiff-armed Hall of Famer Jim Brown for eighth place on the career rushing list and San Diego won its seventh straight and 15th in a row in December by beating Cleveland.

Antonio Gates set a career high with 167 yards receiving for the Chargers (9-3), who dragged their cleats early and only led 13-7 at halftime. But Philip Rivers led San Diego on touchdown drives of 85 and 83 yards in just over nine minutes in the third quarter to open a 27-7 lead.

BENGALS 23, LIONS 13

CINCINNATI — Running back Cedric Benson returned from a two-game layoff because of an injured hip and tied the team record with his fifth 100-yard game of the season, setting up Cincinnati's victory over Detroit that had even greater significance for the franchise.

The Bengals (9-3) assured themselves of a winning record for only the second time in 19 years.

JAGUARS 23, TEXANS 18

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — David Garrard threw two touchdown passes, Josh Scobee kicked three field goals and Jacksonville stayed in the AFC wildcard hunt with a victory over Houston.

PANTHERS 16, BUCCANEERS 6

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Jonathan Stewart rushed for 120 yards and the game's only touchdown, and the Panthers intercepted rookie Josh Freeman five times — three times near the goal line — in a victory over Tampa Bay.

BEARS 17, RAMS 9

CHICAGO — Jay Cutler fizzled after a strong start, throwing for 143 yards and a touchdown without an interception, and Chicago beat St. Louis.

BRONCOS 44, CHIEFS 13

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Kyle Orton threw two touchdown passes and Denver used a punishing running game to manhandle Kansas City.

The Chiefs (3-9) didn't put up a fight on the day they retired Hall of Fame linebacker Derrick Thomas' number.

SEAHAWKS 20, 49ERS 17

SEATTLE — Olindo Mare kicked a 30-yard field goal as time expired to send Seattle over San Francisco, which wasted a career passing day from Alex Smith and many other opportunities.

Idaho men upset No. 25 Portland 68-48 in Moscow

MOSCOW — Kashif Watson scored 15 points and Idaho handed No. 25 Portland its second straight loss since entering the national rankings for the first time in 50 years with a 68-48 victory Sunday night.

It was Idaho's first win over a ranked team since it beat then-No. 16 Iowa in the first round of the 1982 NCAA tournament. The Vandals led the entire way, taking a 34-18 lead at the half. Idaho then went on a 14-2 run early in the second half to take control.

The Vandals will make the short trip to Pullman Wednesday to play Washington State.

Women's basketball

Idaho had four players in double digits for the game with junior Rachele Kloke finishing with a gamehigh 19 points on 7-of-16 shooting. Bianca Cheever added 16, Shaena Kuehu had 12, and Yinka Olorunnife scored 10 points to go along with her team-high seven rebounds. The Vandals shot 23-of-56 (.411) for the game with a 9-26 (.346) mark from 3-point land.

The Vandals host the Portland Pilots Friday.

Thousand Springs State Park is a gem worth saving

Everything is on the table as the state of Idaho tries to shrink government services to fit declining tax revenues. But we'd hate to see Thousand Springs State Park — truly one of the Magic Valley's natural treasures — become one of the casualties.

The board overseeing the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation has picked the Gooding County reserve as one of two to be closed if Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter issues any more budget holdbacks in the next month.

The board approved a contingency plan recently that also includes closing Land of the Yankee Fork State Park near Challis.

The closure isn't certain. But board members, who won't meet again until later this winter, wanted to be sure the agency was prepared should Otter announce another 4 percent to 5 percent holdback before the Legislature convenes in January. The agency was already told to slice 7.5 percent off its budget in September.

Shuttering Thousand Springs would be the second step in the four-step plan, ahead of closing Yankee Fork. Board members looked at a number of factors, including management costs versus revenues.

Closures would mean different things for different units of the park: Structures may still have to be maintained at Ritter Island, while Box Canyon might still be accessible but wouldn't receive any care or maintenance. IDPR is beginning to talk to landowners and other parties about options for keeping them open or implementing a closure.

Ritter Island in particular may be tricky to close. The site was donated along with a $1 million endowment fund by the Nature Conservancy in 2006.

We'd like to see some alternatives. IDPR and the Department of Fish and Game, working with Gooding County, kept Niagara Springs park running during the last big budget crisis in the mid-1980s.

Or perhaps state park fees could be raised statewide to make up some of the shortfall.

The Thousand Springs complex is a second home for many Magic Valley families during the summer months, and a significant source of income for the Hagerman area. It's worth saving, even if someone other than the state has to do it.

Our view: It may take an all-out local effort to keep Thousand Springs State Park from closing.

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Assessing pre-blame for the failure of Copenhagen climate-change summit

This week's Copenhagen summit on climate change already seems doomed to failure, and voices on both sides of the global-warming debate are trying to pin the blame on Climategate. Republicans on Capitol Hill are trying to use Climategate to scuttle the Democrats' cap-and-trade legislation. Even the Saudis — who like fossil fuels even more than Tiger Woods likes the ladies — are getting in on the act, saying the scandal casts the entire case for global warming in doubt.

not why cap-and-trade should be scuttled, and it's not why Copenhagen will produce nothing, save enormous expense-account submissions for cookie-pushing climate diplomats (and a massive amount of greenhouse gases; the U.N. estimates the 12-day "green" confab will produce 40,584 tons of CO2 equivalents, roughly equal to Morocco's carbon footprint in 2006).

Here is one simple, inconvenient truth: No developing country with significant and remotely accessible stocks of fossil fuels will agree to leave the stuff in the ground.

"Ten countries ruled by nasty people control 80 percent of the planet's oil reserves — about 1 trillion barrels, currently worth about $40 trillion," writes energy expert Peter Huber in City Journal. "If $40 trillion worth of gold were located where most of the oil is, one could only scoff at any suggestion that we might somehow persuade the nasty people to leave the wealth buried. They can lift most of their oil at a cost well under $10 a barrel. They will drill. They will pump. And they will find buyers. Oil is all they've got."

And it's not just the nasty countries. Canada, the Dudley Do-Right of the international community, insists on exploiting its vast and dirty oil reserves in the so-called "tar sands" under Alberta. The intro to an article by British eco-scoold George Monbiot declared: "Canada's image lies in tatters. It is now to climate what Japan is to whaling." If Canada, which has long been the U.N.'s Richie Cunningham, won't play ball, does anyone think the Chinese, Indians or Brazilians will?

Here's another inconvenient truth: The United States will not agree to draconian carbon caps either, for the simple reason it would be political suicide for all but a handful of politicians. Unless you represent hyper-wealthy liberal enclaves or the ethanol moonshine industry, it makes no sense to vote for anything like cap-and-trade.

That's why the Kyoto Protocol never made it out of the crib in the United States.

It was often said that President George W. Bush "refused to sign the Kyoto Protocol." This is technically true — because Bush couldn't sign Kyoto. It was already signed during the Clinton presidency (Bush didn't sign the Treaty of Versailles either). The important point is that Clinton immediately shoved it in his desk drawer because he knew it would never be ratified by the Senate. Indeed, the Senate voted 95-0 to not even consider ratifying it so long as developing countries like China were left out of the scheme. (See inconvenient truth No. 1.)

Overlooked by the mobs who decried Bush's "treason against the planet" (to borrow a phrase from Paul Krugman) is the fact that Barack Obama has opted to stay out of the Kyoto system for the same reason. Making carbon fuels more expensive for us while not making them more expensive for China and Co. means that fossil-fuel users will move their businesses to the developing world even faster while costs and taxes for consumers will skyrocket.

While it's great fun — and entirely worthwhile — to make a big stink about Climategate, it would be a shame if people believed that Copenhagen's inevitable failure hinged on this one scandal. Even if the CRU researchers were the model of scientific dispassion, these schemes are pointless. Indeed, even if global warming is the threat the alarmists claim it is, it makes no sense to waste trillions of dollars on "fixes" that will do little to fix the alleged problem.

It's time to start over, beginning with the science.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Jerome officer a great blessing to resident

It has occurred to me during the Thanksgiving season that it is a blessing to live in Jerome County. We have everything we need right here.

Right now, I am thinking in particular of the law enforcement people who serve and protect our community; in particular, the officers of the sheriff's department who have recently assisted my dear wife, Maggie, who occasionally has a relapse because of her mental condition and is given rides back to our house. This does not occur often, but I am very grateful to these people who serve tirelessly and do not get much recognition. I am very hopeful that fellow citizens will honor their service by voting for the new jail when it is again proposed this coming May.

Getting back to my dear wife, Maggie, she is about the sweetest person I have ever met and has so many wonderful abilities, including her art work and volunteer effort at New Hope Transition center in Twin Falls. I am also grateful to Mental Health, in particular Chris Johnson and Sammy Warren who have given us much direction. To all, we wish a very happy season of holidays and a chance to be grateful for our blessings.

Leaders are thumbing noses at Constitution

Our president and the Democrat-controlled congress have succeeded in destroying the balance of power established by our Constitution. This is but one way, in my opinion, the "Progressives" (Socialists), with the help of the Republicans, have succeeded in thumbing their noses at the Constitution.

They are responsible for creating the crisis we are in, using it to pass more cost-prohibitive programs and bring us down economically, effectively perpetuating their power in our government. If they succeed, it will not matter to them if they are voted out in 2010 and 2012.

By breaking down this government and giving away our sovereignty, they figure to rule. Some of our sovereignty may possibly be relinquished at the G20 conference in Copenhagen today (Pearl Harbor Day). It is being said that if President Obama signs the agreement being prepared for conference participants' signatures, we will essentially be locked into it. European Union, Belgian Prime Minister Herman Van Rompuy has announced that "global governance is the only way to address the crises that beset the planet." He is referring to "the financial crisis and its dramatic impact on employment and budgets, the climate crises which threatens our very survival."

In my opinion, the financial crisis was politically contrived by our Congress, and the climate crisis is purely political poppycock fabricated to alarm the public. By telling everyone they can solve crises, "they" curry political favor to buy their reelection. Climatic variations are the norm. Those in power control what the public hears, and ultimately public opinion. One thing we ought to know by now is we can not trust most of the present elected officials. If we cannot trust our elected officials in Washington — how can we trust unelected officials in one-world government. How are the sheep feeling now? Check out Cloward-Pivans on the Internet.

The war being waged on cops

The left's police-hating chickens are coming home to roost. While partisan liberals have gone out of their way to blame conservative media and the Tea Party movement for creating a "climate of hate," they are silent on the cultural and literal war on cops that has raged for decades — and escalated tragically this year.

The total number of law enforcement officers shot and killed this year is up 19 percent over last year, according to the Christian Science Monitor. More officers have died in ambush incidents this year than in any other since 2000.

The Lakewood, Wash., massacre on Thanksgiving weekend claimed the lives of four dedicated officers getting ready for work at a coffee shop Sunday morning. Maurice Clemmons — the violent career thug who received clemency from former Arkansas GOP Gov. Mike Huckabee and benefited from fatal systemic lapses in the criminal justice system — had many other enablers.

Clemmons had told numerous friends and family members to "watch the TV" before the massacre because he was going to "kill a bunch of cops."

The witnesses did worse than nothing. Several have been arrested for actively aiding and abetting Clemmons — with shelter, food, money and medical aid — before he was discovered in Seattle early Tuesday morning and shot after threatening a patrol officer investigating Clemmons' stolen vehicle.

A militant online group called the National Black Foot Soldier Network celebrated Clemmons as a "Crowned BOW (Black on White) Martyr" and dubbed the Lakewood ambush a "preemptive strike on terrorists." It wasn't the only chilling propaganda cheering black-on-white police murders in the Pacific Northwest this year.

Just three weeks before the Lakewood massacre, the region endured another police attack.

Suspect Christopher Monfort was arrested last month in the targeted shooting death of Seattle Police Department Officer Timothy Brenton and the wounding of his partner Britt Sweeney. Monfort had written diatribes against law enforcement, harping against white policemen.

The leader of a Seattle hip-hop/punk band commemorated the assassination with a T-shirt depicting Monfort's face splattered with blood and overlaid with a Seattle Police Department badge under the slogan "Deliver Us From Evil." The other side of the shirt read, "Most of my heroes don't appear on no stamp."

From where does the deadened and deadly callousness toward the thin blue line come?

How about years of cop-bashing rap from N.W.A.'s "F**k tha Police" and Ice-T's "Cop Killer" to Dead Prez's "Police State" ("I throw a Molotov cocktail at the precinct") and The Game's "911 is a Joke" ("I ought to shoot 51 officers for the 51 times that boy was shot in New York")?

Try the glamorization of poisonous anti-police domestic terrorist groups like the Weather Underground and the Black Panthers.

Add in the mainstreaming of anti-police demagogues Jesse Jackson and Al Sharpton (whose ex-wife and daughter were arrested last week after verbally abusing a Harlem cop and resisting arrest after running a red light). And toss in the global glorification of Death Row cop-killers Stanley "Tookie" Williams and Mumia Abu-Jamal by the Hollywood elite.

It is, in my mind, no coincidence that another of 2009's bloodiest multiple-police shootings took place in Oakland — a hotbed of black nationalism/Free Mumia radicalism that gave us the likes of Angela Davis, Huey Newton and Obama green jobs czar turned liberal think-tank fellow Van Jones (whose "creative" activism and "energy" in the Bay Area won senior White House adviser Valerie Jarrett's heart). Four Oakland officers went down and one was injured when a convicted felon ambushed them during a routine traffic stop.

Nearly 20,000 law enforcement officers and supporters from around the country filled a memorial event for the fallen.

President Obama — Chicago pal of police-targeting Weather Underground terrorist Bill Ayers and the convener of the national beer summit to indulge his race-baiting, police-bashing Harvard professor friend Henry Louis Gates — did not attend the service.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Helicopters shouldn't be allowed in forest

U.S. Forest Service officials are very close to a mid-December decision whether to approve or deny the Idaho Department of Fish and Game's dubious request to land helicopters in the Frank Church River of No Return Wilderness for the ostensible purpose of counting and radio-collaring wolves. Whether it's counting wolves or counting widgets, motorized helicopter landings are clearly prohibited in Federal Wilderness by the 1964 Wilderness Act, Section 4(b) and 4(c).

A further fatal flaw is that the Forest Service proposes to use a flimsy categorical exclusion to justify its actions if it does erroneously capitulate and throw the Wilderness Act under the bus to politically appease the state of Idaho. A full environmental analysis is mandated.

We have already witnessed the horrible recent decision by Fish and Game to extend the wolf hunting season until March 31 when wolves are denning, the mothers pregnant, and newborn pups entirely defenseless. Does the Forest Service really want to have a "partnership" with an unscrupulous Fish and Game?

While I hold out hope that the Forest Service will redeem its clear duty to uphold the law, your help is urgently needed. Please stand up for your irreplaceable Wilderness Resource and the law and urge the decision makers to reject the helicopter landings. Time is of the essence.

Please send a succinct e-mail urging denial of the Helicopters to: William Wood, Supervisor, Salmon Challis National Forest (wwood@fs.fed.us) and Ogden Regional Forester Harvey Forsgren (hforsgren@fs.fed.us).

The Forest Service must stiffen its backbone, uphold the law and just say no.

CASTLEFORD — Andrew Ryan Schorzman, at the tender age of 14, returned to his peaceful place in Heaven to embrace his job as one of God's angels. He will always be remembered as our big hearted, enormously caring gift given in a small package. His accomplished and impeccable understanding, kindness and caring personality to a new acquaintance, friend or loving family member will be greatly missed. Truly ahead of his years and size, his contribution as an outstanding son, grandson, nephew, cousin, and heroic big brother is immeasurable.

Born Jan. 5, 1995, to the proud and scared parents Daniel and Tara Schorzman (Mathiason), he grew up in the small towns of Buhl and Castleford. He is survived by his parents; brother Riley Schorzman, age 9; great-grandma Betty Waters; grandparents Dennis and Susan Schorzman and Allen and Teresa Fritz, and a very long list of immediate and extended family.

Andrew had a deep compassion for the outdoors. Born into a close family who spent quality time together hunting, fishing and touring the mountains by foot, four-wheeler or Jeep, he too grew up to appreciate the carefree beauty and non-stop adventure the outdoors brings.

He also enjoyed games, drawing, music, and construction from Legos to full-sized buildings with whatever he had access to. As long as he was busy with a project, Andrew always wore a sheepish, shy smile that the ones who knew him could not mistake. If you didn't get the chance to meet him or take the time to know him, you truly missed out on the most generous, vivacious, sunny-souled individual that the ones near him have ever been granted.

A viewing will be held from 4 to 7 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 8, at Farmer Funeral Chapel (130 Nineth Ave N.) in Buhl. The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Wednesday, Dec. 9, at St. John's Lutheran Church (1128 Poplar St.) in Buhl. There will be no burial at this time. A memorial account to help with funeral expenses is set up at Farmer's National Bank in Andrew's name and can be made at any Magic Valley branch.

Pearl Harbor survivor back for first time since war

By Audrey McAvoy Associated Press writer

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii — Ed Johann will always remember the sound of planes diving out of the sky to bomb U.S. battleships, the explosions and the screams of sailors. He still recalls the stench of burning oil and flesh.

The 86-year-old retired firefighter is due to return today to Pearl Harbor for the first time since World War II to attend a ceremony marking the 68th anniversary of the Japanese attack.

"I really don't know how I'm going to handle it," said Johann, from his home in Oregon. "When I think about it, all I have is unpleasantness. I'm sure it's not like that now."

Johann was a teenage apprentice seaman on Dec. 7, 1941. He had enlisted in the Navy only five months earlier so his parents, who picked and packed tomatoes and other crops in California's San Fernando Valley, wouldn't have to support him.

He and two other sailors were waiting to ferry passengers on a small boat to and from the USS Solace, a hospital ship that was moored in Pearl Harbor, when they saw the Japanese planes.

They first thought they were U.S. aircraft conducting drills until they saw explosions and flames from the stricken ships.

In this Dec. 7, 1941 file picture, the battleship USS Arizona belches smoke as it topples over into the sea during a Japanese surprise attack on Pearl Harbor, Hawaii.

Johann's motor launcher boat rushed to the USS Arizona, which was hit by several bombs, one of which struck her forward ammunition magazines and set off a massive explosion. Already fueled and manned when the attack began, their 30-foot boat was the first rescue vessel to arrive at the scene.

They found the water littered with people — some wounded, some dead, some unharmed. Many were covered in the leaking oil from the ships.

They loaded as many as they could and delivered them to the hospital ship before returning to the USS West Virginia for more.

"As we're pulling them out of the water, a lot of times the skin would come right off the arm," Johann said. "They would just be black with oil, except maybe you could see the white of their eyes."

The planes kept coming. Dive-bombers plunged out of the sky, dropping bombs and strafing the water and ships with machine gun fire before roaring back up for another round. Torpedo bombers flew in level to drop their submersible weapons for underwater assaults.

The burning, sinking vessels at first lowered men into Johann's makeshift rescue boat. But some sailors started to panic and jump into their small ship, forcing it to pull away so it wouldn't sink too.

"Some of the sailors would be like in shock and some of 'em would be like going out of control, screaming and hollering," Johann said.

Living despite the PAIN

Smoking rate rises slightly from a year ago

ASHLEY SMITH/Times-News

Jeanene Ellis, who lost a lung during a fight with cancer, says a yoga class at the College of Southern Idaho helps her manage chronic pain.

Class teaches chronically ill how to manage disease

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

Before March, Jeanene Ellis took exercise classes and led an active life. That was before cancer took her right lung. Ellis, who never smoked, said she felt frustrated with having to slow down. The Twin Falls woman felt anger and wondered why she got cancer after living a healthy life.

In the fall, she took "Living Well in Idaho," a class for people with chronic conditions and their caregivers. The College of Southern Idaho is offering the six-week class again this spring semester, starting Jan. 20.

The class taught Ellis and other students coping methods, the importance of exercise and healthy diet, medication management and stress relief activities. Students talked about their experiences with being sick and learned how to more effectively communicate with doctors and care providers. Learning about imaging especially helped Ellis. When she is frustrated, she pictures a pearl.

"It takes a little piece of sand to start that," Ellis explained. "It irritates it, and those are the ups and downs in life. And then hopefully when this is all said and done, I will be pretty much like a pearl."

The class originated at Stanford University and is available in communities across the U.S. CSI educators Jan Mittleider and Deb Annett traveled to Palo Alto, Calif., to learn how to teach the class to Stanford standards.

The battle to get adult smokers in the U.S. to quit has stalled. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported in November that 20.6 percent of adults — about 46 million — were smokers in 2008, up slightly from 19.8 percent in 2007.

Although the smoking rate has dropped sharply since the mid-1960s, when it hovered around 40 percent, the CDC had hoped to lower the rate to 12 percent or less by 2010. The lack of progress is dismaying to health officials because smoking is the leading preventable cause of death in the U.S., killing 443,000 people a year.

Despite cigarette price hikes, antismoking ad campaigns and smoking bans in offices and restaurants, adult smoking rates have changed little since 2004, partly because the efforts haven't been widespread enough, the CDC says. So what does work? If you're trying to quit, consider these proven methods:

- Exercise: Physical activity changes the way the brain processes information, reducing the cravings for nicotine, according to research from the University of Exeter published earlier this year in the journal Psychopharmacology. Other studies have shown that just one short burst of moderate exercise — a brisk walk for as little as five minutes, for example — can significantly reduce smokers' nicotine cravings and withdrawal symptoms.

- Seek out other quitters: Smokers are twice as likely to kick the habit if they use a support group, found a University of Bath study published in the February issue of Addiction. More than a third of smokers using support groups quit after four weeks, almost double the proportion of those using one-to-one support.

- Try a substitute: Strong and consistent evidence shows that nicotine replacement products can help people quit smoking. Nicotine patches, gum, lozenges, nasal spray and inhaler are equally effective, says the National Cancer Institute.

- Cut back: Cutting back on the number of cigarettes smoked, coupled with nicotine replacement, raised the quit rate in 16 of 19 studies reviewed by University of Vermont researchers, who said their 2006 findings contradict the commonly held belief that smokers must stop abruptly.

- Drugs: The FDA has approved two prescription drugs — bupropion, an antidepressant marketed as Zyban, and Varenicline, which is marketed as Chantix — to help reduce the urge to smoke.

In a few years, smokers may be able to inject themselves with a vaccine to combat their habit. Nabi Pharmaceuticals' NicVax, which is in late-stage tests, is designed to prevent nicotine from entering the brain, where it creates a highly addictive sensation of pleasure.

- More help: The National Cancer Institute talks about what works and what doesn't at www.cancer.gov/cancertopics/factsheet/tobacco/cessation.

Quick Study

The topic: Blood clots

Waist and hip size might alter risk

THE QUESTION

The chance that a blood clot will develop and block a vein becomes more likely with obesity. Does it make a difference where a person has extra fat?

THIS STUDY

It analyzed data on 56,014 adults, most in their mid-50s when the study began. In the next 10 years, 641 of them developed clots in a leg vein (deep vein thrombosis) or lung (pulmonary embolism). Overall, as weight increased, so did risk for developing a clot. However, weight distribution had an effect. Men with the biggest waists (41 inches or greater) were twice as likely to develop a clot as men with the smallest waists (36 inches or less). Women whose hips measured the largest (43 inches or more) were 2 1/2 times as likely to have a clot as women with the smallest hips (38 inches or less).

WHO MAY BE AFFECTED?

People who are obese. In addition, factors that increase the likelihood of blood clots include medication or disorders that make blood thicker, injury to a vein from surgery or trauma, pregnancy and lack of movement, such as when a person is bedridden or traveling on a plane or in a similarly confined space for a long time.

CAVEATS

The study did not determine why weight distribution and clotting appear to be linked.

FIND THIS STUDY

It's in the Oct. 26 issue of Circulation.

What to expect when you get a CT scan

By William Hageman
Chicago Tribune

A trip to the doctor is a big enough hassle without having to deal with a fear of the unknown. Having a procedure for the first time can fill a patient with dread. For the uninitiated, here's a short lesson on what to expect if you get a CT scan.

Purpose: A computed axial tomography scan, or computed tomography scan, produces detailed pictures of the body quickly.

How it works: X-rays create cross-sectional pictures of the body. The images ("slices") can be stored, viewed on a monitor or printed on film. Stacking the slices produces a 3-D image.

What's involved: The patient lies on a narrow table that slides into the center of the CT scanner. Depending on the study being done, he or she may need to lie on the stomach, back or side. Once the patient is inside the scanner, the X-ray beam rotates around the body.

What to wear: A hospital gown is provided.

Restrictions: Patients

must be still — and may be asked to hold their breath briefly — because movement results in blurred images. Because X-rays are being taken, patients also must remove all jewelry. Some scans require a dye ("contrast") to make the images clearer. A patient may be required not to eat or drink for 4-6 hours before the test, possibly longer if contrast is being used.

Time frame: Scans can take 15-60 minutes, but the newest scanners can do an entire body, head to toe, in less than 30 seconds.

Pain level: Lying on the table can be uncomfortable. And the contrast, delivered by an IV, may cause a burning sensation or a metallic taste in the mouth.

Worst part of procedure: Having to stay still for the procedure.

Recovery: Most patients can resume normal activity immediately.

The hidden women's topic

By Jane Glenn Haas
The Orange County Register

What won't women talk about?

Bladder weakness, according to a poll by TENA and Harris Interactive.

They'll talk about infertility (32 percent), their relationship with their spouse (30 percent) and even their own menopause (15 percent) before they'll say "they gotta go, gotta go!"

The saddest fact is an alarming percentage of women, 43 percent, have done nothing to alleviate their symptoms, says Dr. Lauri Romanzi, a New York City-based pelvic health expert.

"More important, too few of these women know how to do the Kegel exercise," she says.

Q. OK. Kegel exercises. I think I know what this is.

A. Developed by Dr. Arnold Kegel, it is a way of contracting and relaxing the pelvic floor muscles. We teach Kegel exercise as part of our pelvic fitness spa in

New York.

Q. Women don't talk about Kegeling because it's so, what, personal?

A. It's ridiculous. Men talk about the pathetic condition of erectile dysfunction without being embarrassed. Should pelvic fitness be a humiliating topic? We should be comfortable understanding our bodies and knowing what the resources are and how to get in shape. The idea that Kegel fitness is hush-hush doesn't make sense. Besides, if you Kegel you will have a better orgasm.

Q. Bladder incontinence is a midlife problem?

A. Yes, usually. There are different types, of course, ranging from "exert and squirt" to a sling. Some over-active bladder symptoms are not the type we do a surgical procedure for, of course. Symptoms such as hearing water running, putting your hands in water. But all of these are nicely treated with Kegel exercises.

Q. What about medications? The "gotta go" pills.

A. All of these medications get into the blood stream and reduce the bladder's Pavlovian trigger response. Very often, studies show, if you do the Kegel with the medications, the result is more effective — as much as a 70 to 80 percent improvement.

Q. Sounds as if women from a young age should be concerned about keeping pelvic floor muscles strong.

A. You lose these muscles by ignoring them and most women don't have a clue the muscles are there. You know, one-third of women expect to live their lives as menopausal creatures. They are aware that fitness is part of health, but they are not aware about fitness of the pelvic floor. They only hear about the pelvic floor when they are pregnant. Kegel is the dental floss of pelvic health.

Q. So when should you Kegel?

A. The average woman should do two sets of focused contractions every day, holding the contraction for five counts and doing 10 contractions.

Q. OK. How do I learn to Kegel?

A. There are pelvic floor physical therapy centers or there is a free DVD. Here's how to get the DVD and learn more about your pelvic floor. Go to tena.us/Women/exercise-area/core-wellness-program.

Just squeeze.

Class

And it works. According to follow-ups with people who took the Stanford classes, students decreased their number of doctor visits and emergency room trips while upping their sense of well-being, Mittleider said. Students who had completed the program saved up to $600 annually on health care each.

In Twin Falls, the class is free for people 60 and older thanks to grants from the U.S. Administration on Aging and the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare. Those younger than 60 have to pay for the one-credit course and accompanying materials. But Mittleider stressed that the class is geared for all adults with chronic illnesses, regardless of age. She hopes to train peer educators and hold more classes in the future.

"Today, I went to the hospital for a blood test, and of course it takes three weeks to get it back," Ellis said Wednesday. But armed with optimism and empowered by her healthy lifestyle choices, she isn't worried. "I just know that it's going to be OK."

College freshman caught 'forgotten disease' that once killed most victims

By Sandra G. Boodman
Special to The Washington Post

When Shannon Aud, a freshman at Virginia Tech, came home for winter break last December, she was looking forward to a few weeks relaxing with her family, hanging out with her friends and skiing at a West Virginia resort. But on Christmas Eve, when she developed a bad sore throat, Aud figured she'd caught a virus from her boyfriend.

Aud, who had never been seriously ill, expected she would be fully recovered in a few days. She had no inkling that she was about to spend several weeks in the hospital, followed by months recuperating from a disease that was greatly feared 100 years ago but is nearly unknown today.

"At first I was annoyed at losing my Christmas break," recalled Aud, now 19, an international studies major from central Virginia. "Then I remember feeling really bad and that I just wanted to be home. I do know that I could not have gotten through this without my mother. She was there every day."

For Susan Aud, a senior research scientist at the U.S. Department of Education, the events involving her oldest child remain vivid.

"It was just so out of the blue," said Aud, a single mother. "You never want to hear a doctor say, 'In 20 years of practicing medicine, I've never seen this — and I don't know what it is.'"

Shannon's sore throat was soon eclipsed by a high fever and vomiting. Flu, she thought: crummy timing. Determined not to spoil her family's ski trip, Shannon decided to tough it out. She, her mother and her two younger brothers packed up and left as planned on Dec. 26.

After a day spent sleeping in the condo, Shannon felt worse. Her fever sometimes reached 104 degrees, the right side of her neck was visibly swollen and she had wracking chills. "I would take these scalding baths, but I just couldn't stop shaking," she recalled.

The next day her mother took her to a nearby urgent care center. A doctor gave her a cursory exam and told her she might have strep throat; he prescribed Augmentin, a potent antibiotic. The drug didn't seem to help: Her fever bounced around, sometimes shooting up to 104, at other times dropping to nearly normal, which Shannon hoped might mean she was getting better. The swelling spread to her face.

After her boyfriend arrived, Shannon said she decided to "give it the old college try" and go skiing. While waiting in a lift line on Dec. 29, she passed out. Susan Aud decided the vacation was over. She quickly packed up her family and drove home, dropping off her younger children at the house before making a beeline to an emergency room with Shannon.

Shannon, who was badly dehydrated, was hooked up to an IV. Doctors first believed that a stone might have formed in her salivary gland and become infected or abscessed, which would explain the swelling and fever. A CT scan revealed no stone but something much more alarming: a large blood clot in her jugular vein. None of the doctors seemed to have a clue about what might be causing it, nor, they told her mother, had they ever seen anything similar.

For the next several days, various specialists — a hematologist; an ear, nose and throat specialist; and an infectious-disease physician — trooped into her room. They gave her steroids to try to shrink the swelling. She endured painful daily injections of blood thinner into her stomach to dissolve the large clot. Doctors ruled out Epstein-Barr virus, which causes mononucleosis and some forms of cancer, as well as lymphoma.

To Susan Aud, two things were becoming increasingly clear: Doctors were stumped and Shannon was deteriorating.

On Jan. 2, an ear, nose and throat specialist pulled her aside. "If it were me, I'd get her out of here," he advised, adding that her daughter's illness "has exceeded the capacity of this hospital."

Aud, who had reached the same conclusion, wanted Shannon to go to either the University of Virginia Medical Center in Charlottesville, reasonably close to their home, or Georgetown University Medical Center, not far from her office.

tentative diagnosis.

Infectious-disease specialist Charlotte Barbey-Morel strongly suspected she had Lemierre disease, also known as Lemierre syndrome, an extremely rare complication of a throat infection that tends to affect otherwise healthy teen-agers and young adults. Dubbed the "forgotten disease" — it was once common and killed 90 percent of its victims — Lemierre's was virtually eradicated by penicillin.

The disease, named after French physician Andre Lemierre, who described 20 cases in 1936, is caused by Fusobacterium necrophorum, which thrives without oxygen. It develops after a severe sore throat typically caused by strep creates a peritonsillar abscess, a crater near the tonsils that fills with bacteria and pus. The bacteria then invade the jugular vein in the neck, causing an infected clot to form. The clot can break up and travel through the bloodstream, causing pneumonia, widespread infection, even death.

Barbey-Morel said she suspected Shannon had Lemierre's because of two telltale symptoms: a jugular infection and a blood clot. Blood cultures and CT scans confirmed her suspicion. There was another, more personal reason, she later told Susan Aud: When her son was 16, he had a similar infection, which was caught and treated earlier.

Barbey-Morel said she is not surprised that other doctors were stumped. Most have never seen a case and may not even have heard of the disease because it is so rare: The incidence is estimated to be one in one million. After decades in which the disease never appeared at Georgetown, she said, a case surfaced about 10 years ago.

Now doctors there see at least one annually.

Georgetown's experience is not unique, and there appears to be a resurgence of interest in the disease. Twenty studies have been published in medical journals this year, among them a report by doctors at Howard University Hospital of a 9-year-old boy who developed Lemierre's after an ear infection. In August, researchers in England suggested that the "apparent increase ... may be due to antibiotic resistance or changes in antibiotic prescription patterns."

Because Shannon's infection was too entrenched to be treated solely by drugs, she underwent surgery to remove her tonsils and a salivary gland and to clean out dead tissue in her jaw. She also required treatment for pneumonia, the result of tiny clots that had settled in her lungs.

"Shannon was very sick, but she was very brave," Barbey-Morel recalled.

She was discharged in mid-January, weighing 95 pounds, 20 pounds less than normal, and remained on IV antibiotics for weeks and a blood thinner for months. It was clear that returning to college would have to wait.

For two months, she was too weak to climb stairs. "I did not look like myself for a long time," she said.

The illness changed her. "I used to be really carefree," she said. "Being in the hospital, there was a feeling of despair I'd never felt before." She returned to Virginia Tech in August.

Barbey-Morel said that as rare as Lemierre's is, recurrences are rarer still. "But I suspect it won't take much for doctors to treat her sore throat immediately for the first year or two," she said.

Chewing gum may help you lose weight, but it's not a snap

By Jennifer LaRue Hugel
Special to The Washington Post

Contestants on NBC's weight-loss competition show "The Biggest Loser" undergo all kinds of duress in their efforts to shed pounds. Some of the ordeals they endure — including a brutal workout in hot July sun for an episode that aired recently — seem like sheer torture to me.

But there is one tiny weapon in "The Biggest Loser" arsenal that most of us might happily enlist in our own battles of the bulge: gum. The Losers chew lots of gum, but does it really help them lose weight?

Probably, in its own small way. But given the number of pounds these contestants need to drop, chewing gum isn't likely to make a huge difference in the outcome of their competition.

For those of us who wage our wars with lesser poundages, though, taking up gum-chewing might not be a bad idea. There's actually a bit of scientific evidence showing that chewing gum helps fight fat in a number of ways.

It's important to note that much of the research regarding gum-chewing's role in weight management is sponsored by the Wrigley Science Institute, which is in turn funded by Wrigley, maker of Extra and many other chewing gums. Gilbert Leveille, the institute's executive director, assures me that the gum-makers don't hold any sway over the scientists, whose primary goal is to "understand the fundamentals of the physiological effects of chewing gum." Their work (which also investigates gum's role in stress management, oral health and mental concentration), he adds, is usually conducted under the auspices of such outside organizations as the Obesity Society.

In any case, the findings aren't dramatic enough to send every pudgy person to the store seeking gum. In short, the handful of gum studies so far suggest that chewing gum may help reduce cravings, particularly for sweet snacks, and spur people to cut their daily intake by about 50 calories. The latest study, presented at the annual scientific meeting of the Obesity Society in late October, showed that gum-chewing people consumed 67 fewer calories at lunch and didn't compensate by eating more later in the day. Many of the men in that study, which, like the others in the field, was small, said they felt less hungry after chewing gum.

That last study made another contribution to our understanding of the physiology of gum-chewing: Not only do gum-chewers take in fewer calories, but they also burn more calories. As Leveille describes it, the study showed a "small but measurable increase in energy expenditure" among the gum-chewers. And gum adds hardly any calories to your day: Sugar-free varieties have about five calories per stick, and even regular gum has only 10.

The combined effects of gum-chewing on weight management — the reduced calorie intake, increased calorie burning and distraction from potentially fattening foods that Leveille says gum can offer — may not seem to add up to an awful lot compared with sweating it out on the treadmill and going on grapefruit diets.

But chewing gum may be in keeping with an emerging approach to weight management that calls for focusing on small changes rather than dramatic, hard-to-sustain weight-loss tactics.

Today is Monday, Dec. 7, the 341st day of 2009. There are 24 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Dec. 7, 1941, Imperial Japanese warplanes attacked the U.S. Navy base at Pearl Harbor in Hawaii, as well as other American and British bases in the Pacific; the pre-emptive raids prompted the United States to enter World War II.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1787, Delaware became the first state to ratify the U.S. Constitution.
In 1796, electors chose John Adams to be the second president of the United States.

In 1808, electors chose James Madison to be the fourth president of the United States.

In 1836, Martin Van Buren was elected the eighth president of the United States.

In 1909, in his State of the Union address, President William Howard Taft defended the decision to base U.S. naval operations in the Pacific at Pearl Harbor in Hawaii, instead of in the Philippines. Chemist Leo H. Baekeland received a U.S. patent for Bakelite, the first totally synthetic plastic.

In 1946, fire broke out at the Winecoff Hotel in Atlanta; the blaze killed 119 people, including hotel founder W. Frank Winecoff.

In 1972, America's last moon mission to date was launched as Apollo 17 blasted off from Cape Canaveral, Fla.

In 1983, in Madrid, Spain, an Aviac DC-9 collided on a foggy runway with an Iberia Air Lines Boeing 727 that was accelerating for takeoff, killing all 42 people aboard the DC-9 and 51 aboard the Iberia jet.

In 1987, 43 people were killed after a gunman aboard a Pacific Southwest Airlines jetliner in California apparently opened fire on a fellow passenger, the two pilots and himself, causing the plane to crash.

In 1988, a major earthquake in the Soviet Union devastated northern Armenia; official estimates put the death toll at 25,000.

Ten years ago: NASA scientists all but gave up hope of contacting the Mars Polar Lander, last heard from four days earlier as it began its descent toward the Red Planet.

Five years ago: Hamid Karzai was sworn in as Afghanistan's first popularly elected president. The House of Representatives passed an intelligence network overhaul measure, 336-75. Amway co-founder Jay Van Andel died in Ada, Mich., at age 80. Singer Jerry Scoggins, who performed "The Ballad of Jed Clampett," the theme song to "The Beverly Hillbillies," died at age 93.

One year ago: President-elect Barack Obama introduced retired Gen. Eric Shinseki as his choice to head the Veterans Affairs Department. Actress-singer Barbra Streisand, actor Morgan Freeman, country singer George Jones, dancer and choreographer Twyla Tharp and musicians Pete Townshend and Roger Daltrey of The Who received Kennedy Center Honors.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Man is the only animal that blushes. Or needs to."

— Mark Twain

In today's deal, from an online tournament, South's redouble was far from unreasonable — but as matters progressed, declarer was pleased he could not see the faces of the other three players at the end of the deal!

West led the heart seven against four spades doubled and redoubled. South played low from dummy and East played the jack — a card to which declarer paid too little heed. Declarer could have drawn trumps ending in dummy and taken a diamond finesse. Later he could cross back to dummy with another trump for a second diamond finesse. That would work if the diamond honors were divided, but South thought he could see a way to do better. If he could eliminate the clubs and hearts before diamonds were played, he would succeed even if West held both diamond honors.

So at trick two South played a trump. When West showed out, declarer realized he could not draw all the trumps before playing a club, as he might run out of entries to dummy. So at trick three he played a club. West won and surprised South by giving his partner a heart ruff. Now East switched to a diamond, and declarer could not afford to duck because he would lose another heart ruff. So he rose with the ace, belatedly drew the last trump, and eventually had to lose two diamond tricks for one down.

The flaw in South's plan was failing to draw a second trump before playing the club. That would have prevented the defenders from being able to get two ruffs.

ANSWER: You would normally lead your long suit here, but your opponents' auction does strongly suggest concern over clubs. Unless East is the sort of smart aleck who might be trying to put you off a diamond lead, I would go with the club 10 and apologize to partner later if declarer has fooled you.

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing about the letter you printed from "Right or Wrong in Wisconsin" (Nov. 9). My co-workers and I had a field day with the issue of the father shaving while his 12-year-old daughter takes her morning shower.

The women here were pretty much unanimous in agreeing with your response, while the men mostly thought there was nothing wrong. As a man writing to you, my opinion may seem a little biased, but please try to keep an open mind.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

I assume that this gentleman has raised his daughter since birth, and that he changed "Lia's" diapers and bathed her when she was younger. It's ridiculous that at the young age of 12 it is suddenly inappropriate for her father to have a conversation with her (presumably) through a shower curtain.

I could understand the mother (whom he never referred to as his wife) being concerned if he was simply in the bathroom to dish about the day's issues. But that wasn't the case. He was shaving. We don't see a problem with that. We men agree that if this wasn't an issue that Lia herself raised because she was uncomfortable, then it probably shouldn't be an issue at all.

- DISAGREES

IN TOPEKA, KAN.
DEAR DISAGREES: I did not mean to start a war of the sexes in your workplace, so allow me to clarify the issue from my perspective. "Right or Wrong" appears to be a caring father, or he wouldn't have written me. He views his daughter as his "little girl." But at age 12, Lia is an emerging young woman both physically and emotionally. She is in transition, and her father may not recognize that fact. At 12, many girls start their periods and their breasts begin developing. Lia's mother may have noticed these changes in her daughter.

What this presents is a teachable moment - and an opportunity for a family discussion to talk about what's happening. Among the issues Lia will face in the next few years are decisions she'll have to make about drinking, drugs, sex, respect and modesty. While other cultures have a more liberal view regarding modesty, ours is less so.

And remember, it's not as though sharing the bathroom in that family is a necessity. There are two bathrooms in that house, and I think it's time one of them began using the one downstairs. If that makes me a fuddy-duddy, so be it. It's still my opinion.

DEAR ABBY: My friend recently committed suicide and although I'm still mad at times, I'm no longer sad all the time. My problem is I'm having a hard time dealing with stress.

Before, when things got hard or my workload went up, I'd work harder to get it done. Now I just become overwhelmed and all I want to do is go to bed. Is this normal? I have never had a friend die before.

- SAD IN SAN DIEGO

DEAR SAD: Please accept my sympathy for your loss. When someone close to me suffers an emotional shock - and the death of a friend or loved one qualifies as one - I remind him or her that shock can affect not only the emotions but also the body. That's why it's important to get extra rest and eat properly.

When a person grieves, it's not unusual to be less resilient, so listen to your body. When you become overwhelmed, chicken soup and extra rest may be in order, and it's not a cliché. However, if these feelings persist for more than a few weeks, please discuss them with your doctor because they could be a symptom of a treatable form of depression.
