Men admit stealing seed pods from Utah nat'l park

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) -Two men have pleaded guilty to trying to steal 600 pounds of wildflower seed pods in southern Utah's Zion National Park in hopes of a payday on the commercial market. Cresencio Martinez-Guzman, 44, and Cresencio Lucena-Alvarez, 23, pleaded guilty to felony theft of government property and were sentenced to probation Dec. 7. They also admitted being in the U.S. illegally and agreed not to fight deportation.

The pair had apparently spent weeks in a remote portion of the park pinching Palmer's penstemon, a tallgrowing native plant whose seeds are often used by government agencies for reseeding projects, according to court records.

They were arrested in September after Zion park rangers spotted them with several large bags of seed pods inside the park's western boundary. The commercial value of the pair's cache was about $25,000, according to court documents.

Commercial seed collecting is a bustling business in southern Utah, and it's legal on other federal lands with a permit – but not in Zion.

Charter school questions ban on religious texts

BOISE (AP) - Founders of a public charter school under scrutiny for plans to use the Bible and other religious texts say the practice goes unchecked elsewhere in Idaho.

Nampa Classical Academy sued Idaho officials in federal court this year after the state's Public Charter School Commission decided they couldn't use religious texts in the classroom.

The charter school wanted to use the Bible and other texts for their literary and historic qualities, as part of a secular education program.

Meanwhile, Coeur d'Alene Charter Academy in northern Idaho says the Bible has been used in literature classes at that school since 1999.

Michael Moffett chairs Nampa Classical Academy's governing board and says he doesn't understand why his charter school is barred from the practice but another is not.

hank goodness for the College of Southern Idaho Foundation. For some students next year, it's going to be the difference between going to school and not.

Last week, the Idaho State Board of Education approved a one-year waiver of the board's policy of restricting state colleges and universities from proposing fee and tuition increases above 10 percent.

Before the waiver, schools could propose increases up to 10 percent. Now — at least into fiscal year 2011 – they can

That's on top of tuition increases for the current school year averaging 6 percent statewide.

The CSI Foundation handed out $1.2 million in scholarships in the most recent school year on a campus where seven-tenths of students receive some form of financial aid.

That need is consistent with other colleges across the state: 58 percent at the University of Idaho, 74 percent at Idaho State and 83 percent at Boise

If tuition is raised 10 percent or more - and the State Board of Education must approve increases before they go into effect - a significant number of those students won't be in college next year.

The Legislature should keep that in mind as it decides which of the four big spenders in Idaho government – public schools, higher education, health and welfare or corrections — will bear the brunt of the next round of budget cuts.

Idaho already has one of the lowest retention rates for college students in the nation. Despite a $3 million investment by the Albertson Foundation in an awareness campaign to increase that number, most students on the state's campus can't stay without help.

Where's the extra money going to come from? At CSI, much of it from the foundation. On the other campuses, it's anybody's guess.

Republicans lawmakers with their heads in the sand

hen I first began writing for The New York Times, I was naive about many things. But my biggest misconception was this: I actually believed that influential people could be moved by evidence, that they would change their views if events completely refuted their beliefs.

Paul Krugman

And to be fair, it does happen now and then. I've been highly critical of Alan Greenspan over the years (since long before it was fashionable), but give the former Fed chairman credit: He has admitted he was wrong about the ability of financial markets to police themselves.

But he's a rare case. Just how rare was demonstrated by what happened last Friday in the House of Representatives, when every single Republican and 27 Democrats voted against a modest effort to rein in Wall Street excesses.

Let's recall how we got into our current mess.

America emerged from the Great Depression with a tightly regulated banking system. The regulations worked: the nation was spared major financial crises for almost four decades after World War II. But as the memory of the Depression faded, bankers began to chafe at the restrictions they faced. And politicians showed a growing willingness to give bankers what they wanted.

The first big wave of deregulation took place under Ronald Reagan — and quickly led to disaster, in the form of the savings-andloan crisis of the 1980s. Taxpayers ended up paying more than 2 percent of GDP, the equivalent of around $300 billion today, to clean up the mess.

But the proponents of deregulation were undaunted, and in the decade leading up to the current crisis politicians in both parties bought into the notion that New Deal-era restrictions on bankers were nothing but pointless red tape. In a memorable 2003 incident, top bank regulators staged a photo-op in which they used garden shears and a chainsaw to cut up stacks of paper representing regulations.

And the bankers - liberated both by legislation that removed traditional restrictions and by the hands-off attitude of regulators who didn't believe in regulation responded by dramatically loosening lending standards. The result was a credit boom and a monstrous real estate bubble, followed by the worst economic slump since the Great Depression. Ironically, the effort to contain the crisis required government intervention on a much larger scale than would have been needed to prevent the crisis in the first place: government rescues of troubled institutions, large-scale lending by the Federal Reserve to the private sector, and so on

GENEROSITY, HELPING THOSE IN NEED! I, EBENEZER SCROOGE,

UNDERSTAND THE TRUE MEANING OF CHRISTMAS!

Given this history, you might have expected the emergence of a national consensus in favor of restoring more-effective financial regulation, so as to avoid a repeat performance. But you would have been wrong.

Talk to conservatives about the financial crisis and you enter an alternative, bizarro universe in which government bureaucrats, not greedy bankers, caused the meltdown. It's a universe in which government-sponsored lending agencies triggered the crisis, even though private lenders actually made the vast majority of subprime loans. It's a universe in which regulators coerced bankers into making loans to unqualified borrowers, even though only one of the top 25 subprime lenders was subject to the regulations in question.

Oh, and conservatives simply ignore the catastrophe in commercial real estate: in their universe the only bad loans were those made to poor people and members of minority groups, because bad loans to developers of shopping malls and office towers don't fit the narrative.

In part, the prevalence of this narrative reflects the principle enunciated by Upton Sinclair: "It is difficult to get a man to understand something when his salary depends on his not understanding it." As Democrats have pointed out, three days before the House vote on banking reform Republican leaders met with more than 100 financial-industry lobbyists to coordinate strategies. But it also reflects the extent to which the modern Republican Party is committed to a bankrupt ideology, one that won't let it face up to the reality of what happened to the U.S. economy. So it's up to the Democrats and more specifically it's up to "centrist" Democrats in the Senate. Are they willing to learn something from the disaster that has overtaken the U.S. economy, and get behind financial reform?

Let's hope so. For one thing is clear: if politicians refuse to learn from the history of the recent financial crisis, they will condemn all of us to repeat it.

You must give 30 days' notice to die

he 88-year-old mother of Vicki King and Dee Dee Barnhill died in October, and the assisted living center where she resided charged her surviving relatives $929.17 because they didn't give 30 days' notice that their mother no longer would need her little apartment. Basically, the way they see it. they're being billed for not knowing the exact date their mother would die.

Does this really happen in the world of assisted living? They charge people if they don't give a full 30 days' notice of death?

King and Barnhill say yes, that they went over this with the people at the assisted living center and they intend to press for the extra $929.17.

King and Barnhill say their mother entered the center in Maryland's Harford County in June, at an out-of-pocket cost of $5,575 per month.

"Her dementia had made it impossible for her to continue living alone," King explains. Ruth Lloyd lived in a special dementia unit until Sunday, Oct. 4, when her condition worsened and she had trouble breathing. "The (assisted living center) called 911 for her, and she was transported to Upper Chesapeake Hospital in Bel Air, where she was intubated to keep her alive," says King. "We were told she could live 15 seconds to two weeks after they removed the tube. She died between 4 and 5 o'clock on the morning of October 6."

The funeral was a few days later. Then her daughters cleared Ruth Lloyd's belongings from her apartment.

Barnhill says she paid her mother's October bill in full.

But then, sometime after that, another bill arrived for $929.17. When she asked for an explanation, Barnhill says she was told it was rental for the first six days in November. The family was supposed to give the assisted living center 30 days' notice that Ruth Lloyd would be vacating the room.

"We said, 'She died!" King says, incredulous. "They said, 'It's in the contract; and, sure enough, it was."

Barnhill concurred and furnished a copy of the relevant section of the contract she signed for her mother earlier this year:

"Resident may terminate this Agreement for any reason, including a medical emergency that causes Resident to require care or service that exceeds the level of care for which the Provider is licensed to provide or death of Resident, upon not less than thirty (30) days prior written notice to Provider."

I can understand requiring 30 days' notice, and charging for the full month of rent otherwise, if your tenant runs out on you and you can't find another one right away. But in the event of death?

Leslie Robinson, regional director of operations for the Shelter Group Inc., which owns the assisted living center where Ruth Lloyd lived, says the 30 days' notice is required, even in the event of death. "Our residency agreement is very similar to a rental agreement," she says. "Many of our families appreciate being given the time to clear out their relative's belongings while in the grieving process."

Yes, but is it necessary to charge for a full 30 days when it may not be needed and the cause for the sudden vacancy is death?

"It's insulting and absurd," says Barnhill.

Barnhill says she paid the $929.17 and hopes she's done with the whole thing. The bill was due Dec. 1. She says, "there'll probably be another bill with late charges."

Idaho Mountain Express, Ketchum

The recent killing of seven leaseholders to profit by wolves near Stanley by U.S. Fish and Wildlife shooters is something Idahoans and other Americans need to accept as part of the reintroduction of wolves to the Wolf packs that attack large numbers of domestic livestock cannot be allowed to indulge their predatory natures without having their numbers reduced.

Members of the Basin Butte pack had been implicated in 14 depredation incidents. U.S. Fish and Wildlife Services had tracked the pack using radio collars on two wolves and said the pack had killed 36 sheep in just two nights in August.

Data published by the Idaho Department of Fish and Game lists wolf depredations for the year through Nov. 30 as follows: 76 cattle, 285 sheep and 14 dogs for a total of 375 domestic animals.

Records kept since 2003 show that confirmed wolf depredations have grown each year since, with this year's total reaching the highest level to date at nearly three times the total of 140 six years ago.

Through November, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Services had killed 85 wolves in response to depredation on livestock. Including those taken by hunters, ranchers and other causes, both natural and human-induced, 245 wolves had been killed.

Control actions will have to be part of the state's management tools as ranchers, hunters and communities figure out how to coexist with wolf packs.

The relationship between wolves and man will always be rocky. Wolves simply will not lie down with lambs. Coming to terms with that fact and that wolves are an important part of the ecosystem is the struggle for Americans of every stripe.

... If history is any guide - as it often is - the Land Board won't meet the demands of the constitution.

The state can no longer afford this kind of political expediency. Public schools are hurting, the result of moribund state tax collections. At $31.3 million in 2009-10, the endowment payment represents a relatively small funding source for the public schools ... Still, a modest increase in the rental rate is both welltimed and overdue.

Meanwhile, Idaho needs to revive a practice that has been on hold for nearly a decade: land exchanges involving the cabin sites ... When Idaho trades off a cabin lot, it barters away lucrative land that will increase in value. But that value is something of a moot issue when state leaders cannot or will not seek rental rates that better reflect this value.

The touchstone in this debate is the constitution's call for maximum longrange return. Let's get rid of lands the state does not manage effectively, and swap them off for property that will prove to be a better investment.

... college football playoffs

Idaho Press-Tribune, Nampa

When he was campaigning last year, President Obama said he wanted to see college football decide its national champion with a playoff system. Last week, a House subcommittee, with bipartisan support, approved legislation that would, in essence, require just that.

The current bowl system used by college football is known as the Bowl Championship Series, and it is often the subject of harsh criticism. Under the system, six conferences are guaranteed to have a least one team in one of the five BCS bowl games. The other four slots are essentially "at-large" slots and can be filled with other teams from those same six major conferences or other conferences.

There are many other bowl games played each year as well, but the BCS games are the "big ones," with the most prestige and biggest payouts... Most reasonableminded people agree a playoff system needs to be in place. The current system makes it too hard for teams not in the "power conferences" to get a shot at being a national champion ... But that's not an excuse for the government to expand its everincreasing tentacles and find yet another thing it "needs" to regulate. This is an issue for college football to resolve ... Parity in college football has never been greater. Look no further than Boise State for proof. If the powers that be refuse to open the door for everyone, let's force it open.

SEATTLE - Ten years ago, we would have been blown away by a cell phone with far more computing power and memory than the average PC had in 1999, along with a built-in camera and programs to manage every aspect of our lives. Ten years from now, the iPhone and its ilk will be antiques.

Over the next decade, the evolution of computing and the Internet will produce faster, increasingly intelligent devices. More of our possessions will contain sensors and computers that log our activities, building digital dossiers that augment our memories, help us make decisions and tame information overload.

Such ideas may sound futuristic and excessive today. And technological predictions are notoriously off-base. Short-term forecasts tend to assume too much change and long-term forecasts underestimate the possibility of sudden, major shifts.

Even so, this vision of interconnected devices that produce and filter massive amounts of data in the 2010s is a logical progression of the Web, computers and gadgetry that emerged in the 2000s. Moore's Law, the principle that computing power doubles every two times as much. The vintage years without increasing in cost, still rules.

S.C. woman accused of hiding mom's body for months

The Associated Press

WILMINGTON, N.C. A woman was charged Wednesday with keeping the corpse of her elderly mother in their home for months before the body was discovered in the woman's bed.

Amy Blanche Stewart, 47, was charged with concealment of death, which is considered a low-level felony in North Carolina, the New Hanover County Sheriff's Office said. "There is no question it was known to the family and should have been communicated to law enforcement," said New Hanover County District Attorney Benjamin R. David. "This is not tolerated under North Carolina law and it is not tolerated by this law enforcement communi-

Stewart was charged one day after police said a 911 caller reported that Blanche Matilda Roth, 87, was unconscious and not breathing. Police say she likely died in May, before her 88th birthday in September.

Stewart posted a $1,000 secured bond and was released from jail. New Hanover County Deputy Charles Smith didn't know if Stewart had an attorney. She faces her first court appearance Thursday morning at 9

The family did not immediately return a message seeking comment.

Smith said caregivers daily had been going in and out of the house on a quiet cul-de-sac. He would not specify if the caregivers were family members but said they were not nurses.

Neighbors said Roth's family had been living in the house with her and continued to go on as normal after Roth's reported death. A woman who answered the door at the home refused to comment.

David said an autopsy was completed but he declined to reveal its results.

House narrowly approves year-end plan to create jobs

By Andrew Taylor Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON - Democrats in the House Wednesday muscled through a year-end plan to create jobs, mixing about $50 billion for public works projects with another almost $50 billion for cash-strapped state and local governments.

The unemployed would get continued benefits. But conspicuously absent from the plan were President Obama's recently announced proposals to give Social Security recipients $250 payments, a tax credit for small businesses that create jobs and a program awarding tax credits to people who make their homes more energy efficient.

In a statement, Obama said the House measure offers "productive ideas to respond to this great need" for jobs across the country, while urging lawmakers to do more.

"Some may think standing by and taking no action is the right approach, but for the millions of Americans still out of work, inaction is unacceptable," Obama said.

Waterproof, lightweight shoe masters many terrains

ith its new hightop trail shoe, Inov-8 stakes a simple claim: The Roclite 288 GTX is touted as being "the lightest-weight waterproof boot on the market."

Its GORE-TEX membrane provides a waterproof barrier. It weighs about 10 ounces per foot in a men's size 9 — half the weight of some traditional leather hikers.

Regenold

I am a big fan of this shoeboot. With a flexible sole and sticky-rubber tread, it can tackle a wide range of wilderness terrain.

It can do dirt, grass, mud, dry trail and snow.

A major distinguisher with this ankle-high boot, which costs $130, is its fast feel. Like Inov-8 shoes, the 288 boots have minimal midsole cushioning and a low-profile heel. This design lets you comfortably – and speedily! – not only hike but run down the

They are not made for everyone. The boot's support is good enough for me. But the flexible sole and soft exterior material will strike many hikers as too minimal.

Protection from stubbing your toe — or doing more dangerous things like contacting a sharp edge in talus - is only mediocre. The toe guard is minimal on the front of the boot. The outer fabric is thin and soft.

One issue: The boot's sizing seems to run large. Compared to other Inov-8 (www.inov-8.com) shoes I have in the same size, the 288 boot has about a half-inch of extra space past my big toe. Try them on before buying if you can. Overall, the 288 boots have been a solid performer. I will wear these high-tops on long backpacking trips and wilderness race events.

Because they are waterproof, mountaineering comes to mind, too. Add a pair of lightweight crampons to the Inov-8 boots and you could sprint up some mountains.

The price, at $130, is in line with other boots on the market. Quality is solid so far. If you're looking for a fast and light boot, the Roclite 288 is hard to beat.

Bryan Bedrosian crimps the harness for the satellite tracking device on a bald eagle he's trapped for a study on lead poisoning in the birds Nov. 30, on the National Elk Refuge near Jackson, Wyo. The small, lightweight transmitters cost about $2,000 each.

n his pickup truck parked off a National Elk Refuge road, Bryan Bedrosian glues together a bird-sized satellite transmitter harness between taking bites of cheese, crackers and homemade elk sausage.

Occasionally, he lifts a pair of binoculars and looks north toward an eagle sitting patiently — or perhaps petulantly in a tree above a gut pile rigged with a device called a net launcher. When and if the bird lands on the pile to feed, Bedrosian will toggle a remote control. The remote, which he cannibalized from a radio-controlled toy car, fires a blank bird.

Bedrosian, a biologist with Kelly-based Craighead Beringia South, hopes to attach 10 satellite transceiver backpacks to eagles this hunting season to see if lead bullet fragments from gut piles are poisoning migratory eagles and resident birds.

Catching eagles is tedious work. Before Thanksgiving, Bedrosian spent an entire day watching a gut pile just down the road as more than a dozen eagles waited in the nearby treeline. Not a single bird landed on the trap.

Bedrosian is having similar luck the Monday after Thanksgiving. At about four in the afternoon, he gives up on the lone eagle and drives south toward another trap. He parks on a hilltop about 300 yards away, and scans the area past a line of cottonwood trees. There's movement on the gut pile, and a large wing flaps above the grass.

"There are two birds sitting on it," he says. He toggles the remote and with a crack of gunpowder fires the net launcher.

"We got one of them," he says, before gunning the engine. In a flash, Bedrosian is down the road. out of his truck, and is running through the sage brush toward the netted eagle, his orange hunting vest flapping in the wind.

Quickly, he has the bird pinned to the ground with his knee and is disentangling it from the net. The haste, he says, helps avoid injuries.

"There's always the possibility of a bird injuring itself or injuring another bird," he explains.

He bugs them all: Deer Lodge, Mont., man's hobby turns into a business

By Nick Gevock The Montana Standard

DEER LODGE Celeste Davis won't let her husband Todd Davis in the house without stripping down after spending time at his favorite hobby.

Then again, she's justi-

That's because Todd Davis is in the business of cleaning skulls from deer, elk and other animals with beetles at his We Bug Wildlife Skulls home business. And while the skulls come out clean and white in the end, it takes thousands of beetles to get that done. Those little bugs give off quite a stink while at work.

Half a minute spent in the "bug shed" where he keeps the insects and Todd Davis smells bad. Really bad. So nasty, in fact, that the clothes are in need of a heavy-duty wash.

"I come out of here, I strip at the door and everything goes into the washing machine with ammonia in it," Davis said recently at his rural home. "And I shower right away.

"It's just flat that rancid."

Turns out the dermestid beetles used in skull cleaning give off a gas while they're munching away on the flesh of animals. The fumes are so pungent that they permeate fabrics and hair, leaving a lingering odor that's impossible to miss.

Davis, 35, still remembers the first time he encountered skull cleaning with beetles. He visited a company in Stevensville called Big Sky Beetle Works for about half an hour, while Celeste waited in the car. She gave him a rude reception when he came out.

"She said get out of the car – you're walking," Todd joked. "Even then, we had to drive with the windows down back to Missoula."

Todd Davis shows off some of the bull elk skulls he's worked on at We Bug Wildlife Skulls.

Todd Davis's dermestid beetles eat the flesh off the skulls to complete a European mount, which includes the skull without the hide left on it. The style of wall mount is popular with hunters because it fits in smaller rooms and has a simple look.

popularity because unlike a full shoulder mount with the full head and hide on it. a European mount is smaller and therefore can fit in a room with lower ceilings, Davis said.

"A lot of people don't have the room to put a big old six-point bull in their house," he said.

Reynolds said all the skulls he's taken to Davis have turned out well. He's also sent friends and his sons there to get work done.

But beyond the space savings, a lot of hunters are attracted to the simplicity of a European mount. They have more natural look that many hunters find appeal-taking numerous skulls to a taxidermist. The bills added up and he decided to start doing the beetle cleaning himself five years ago.

His first batch consisted of 50 beetles and they reproduced while cleaning up his trophies. Pretty soon Davis was busy with friends' animals.

"I realized there was a little bit of money to be made, so I pursued it," said Davis, who works construction full time.

A simple process

The beetles do most of the work, but they need a little help.

A skull cleaner can just drop a head in the beetle box, but that would take far longer to complete. Davis skins the heads right away when they come in. Then he removes the eyes and brain and finally lets the beetles get to work.

They don't take long to get cleaned. "I can put one deer in there and in six to eight hours they're done," Davis said. "With four elk heads it takes two to three days." Davis has two beetle boxes. As the hunting season goes on he needs them. His large garage gets stacked with local trophies. Davis said because of the bad smell and the clean-up required, he spends about four hours every time he's out to get work done.

Clients don't just bring in deer, elk and antelope, either. He's cleaned every game animal in the state, as well as some cattle. Among his favorites is a warthog from Africa that a hunter brought in.

Once the beetles are finished, Davis gives the skull a bleaching to make it look nice. He uses hydrogen peroxide because it cleans just as well and doesn't leave the skull brittle. The white tone contrasts beautifully with the darker antlers.

Davis said while the work is a labor of love, it's also helped him make ends meet. Last year, with construction slowing, he was laid off from his regular job for eight months, but had "My wife doesn't like the beetle work to fall back among them. looking at an animal right in on. And he doesn't see that a Reynolds said unless a the eye," Reynolds said of slowing down any time

don't mean to dampen the spirit of the season, but with the current state of the economy many of us are feeling pressure to trim our budgets right along with our Christmas trees.

For the discriminating shopper, I've put together a list of the "best of the best" entry-level rifles and shotguns on the market today. Though many of these firearms lack the aesthetic appeal and refinements of their higher priced counterparts, all are solid performers. Here are my savvy Santa picks for 2009: Two companies dominate the market with their economically-priced shotguns and rifles. Topping our list are several offerings from America's oldest gunmaker, the Remington Arms Co.

Check out its ever expanding line of Model 870 Express shotguns. Priced at around $280, the Express models sport an attractive and practical bead-blast black oxide finish rather than the signature high luster blue of the flagship 870 Wingmaster. Stocked in either walnut stained hardwood, an attractive and durable satin finished laminate, or tough black synthetic, every 870 features dual action bars for smooth pump action, a 2 3/4 - 3" chambered ventilated rib barrel with removable Rem-choke tubes, and an incredibly rugged steel receiver. With an endless array of Remington factory and after-market slug, tactical, turkey and bird shot barrels available, the 870 Express is the versatility king.

If you fancy quick shooting semi-autos, give the synthetic stocked camofinished 11-87 Sportsman model a gander. Retailing locally for around $600, this gas operated repeater softens the recoil of the 2 3/4 and 3" magnum slug, upland, waterfowl or turkey loads you'll thumb into its magazine. Internal upgrades have increased the wear characteristics of the shotgun, as well as its ability to handle light and heavy shot shell loadings. The 11-87 represents the latest refinement of their versatile Model 1100 plat-

In the market for a nofrills rifle? You need look no further than the Remington Model 700

SPS. Available in every popular small and big game chambering from the diminutive 17 Remington Fireball to the thunderous .300 Remington Ultra Mag, the Special Purpose Synthetic features the legendary 700-action dressed in a subdued matte blue finish and bolted into a redesigned black synthetic stock with non-slip rubber inserts on the forearm and pistol grip.

There's even a handy hinged floor plate for easy cartridge removal. Youth and full-sized versions are available. You can purchase all this versatility for around $500.

Not to be overlooked by any bargain-minded Santa are the offerings of another American mainstay, the O.F. Mossberg Co.

The entry-level Model 500 pump guns feature stained hardwood or black synthetic stocks, rugged alloy receivers with dual action bars, and an endless array of 23/4 and 3" chambered slug and shot barrels with removable Accuchokes. These rugged beasties can find a home under your tree for around Really strapped for cash? You may want to consider Mossberg's no-frills Maverick Model 88 pump guns. Selling for around $180, this synthetic stocked warrior just begs to be spray painted autumn colors or wrapped in camo tape and escorted into the goose pits or ice-covered duck blinds.

So take solace sportsman – you may have been naughty this year, but these guns are nice.

Childhood memories of a Christmas message from the moon

'm a child of the space age. John Glenn became the first American in orbit nine months before I was born. And my most vivid early recollection of manned space flight was in December 1968, a month after my sixth birthday.

Apollo 8 carried Bill Anders, Frank Borman, and Jim Lovell (who would command the ill-fated Apollo 13 16 months later) on the first manned flight beyond the earth's gravitational grip. The original mission plan was for Anders and Lovell to pilot the lunar module to within a few miles above the surface. But the module wasn't ready in time, so the mission was scaled back. Nonetheless, the Apollo 8 crew became the first humans to see the moon's far side and, as they rounded the moon on their fourth of 10 orbits, an "earth rise."

As much courage as Buzz Aldrin and Neil Armstrong needed to descend to the lunar surface the following July, the Apollo 8 astronauts were the first to face the awful possibility of being marooned in space. In the worst-case scenario of their engine failing to blast them out of lunar orbit, theirs would have been a fate of perishing when their oxygen supply ran out days later. And contrary to urban legend, there were no suicide pills on board for hopeless situations. For a 6-year-old, the technological achievement unfolding on what was the most widely-viewed television broadcast to date, far overshadowed the dangers. I

Urinary tract infection needs to be treated

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am a 78-year-old woman who reads your column every day. I now have a question for you. I had a urine test and got the report back from the lab. When I asked my doctor about it, he said he had never heard of the test before. I have enclosed the report for you to review. Also, my doctor didn't do anything to treat me because he didn't know what to do. Is there anything that I can use to treat this?

DEAR READER: The lab report that you have enclosed is a urine culture and sensitivity test, also known as a urine C&S. This is a common test used to determine whether a urinary tract infection (UTI) is present, what type of bacteria are causing it, and which antibiotics are best used to eradicate the infection. The report indicates that you have an infection caused by pseudomonas aeruginosa and that it is susceptible to most antibiotics.

I hope that you were mistaken in your understanding, because I cannot believe that your physician did not know what the test was or how to interpret the results to provide treatment. This test is common, and every physician, even medical students, should know and understand what it is for. If your doctor did not order the test, there may be some understandable confusion about why it was ordered, but that does not excuse his refusal to treat your UTI.

This is a hospital laboratory test, meaning it must be ordered by a physician, otherwise the lab technicians would have refused to carry out the test without proper documentation that you needed the work-up. You would have had to either hand deliver a form or the ordering physician would have had to fax it to the hospital. Another consideration is how you knew to arrive at the hospital to have the testing done if you were not told ahead of time by a physician or nurse that you needed to.

Somehow, there was a huge mix-up, and you are suffering because of it. You clearly have a UTI and need treatment with antibiotics. You will then need to have repeat testing to determine whether the infection has been eliminated or whether further treatment is necessary.

Untreated urinary-tract infections can lead to potentially serious consequences, such as a kidney infection, which is much harder to treat, requires longer courses of antibiotics and, if left untreated, may cause permanent kidney damage. That is not to mention the symptoms you may have of frequent urination, pain or burning during urinating, fever, abdominal pain or blood in the urine.

I urge you to return to your physician to discuss the situation. You need to be treated, and if he truly does not know what this test is for and how to use it to provide appropriate treatment, he should not be a doctor. This is probably just a misunderstanding, but regardless of who ordered the test, the results are clear.

Meanwhile, I recommend you drink two or three glasses of 100 percent cranberry juice daily. This simple home remedy will not cure the infection, but it should reduce the symptoms you may be experiencing while you are being treated.

To provide related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Bladder and Urinary Tract Infections." Other readers who would like a copy should send a selfaddressed stamped No. 10 envelope and a $2 check or money order to Newsletter, P.O. Box 167, Wickliffe, OH 44092. Be sure to mention the title.

BRUINS ON A ROLL

Twin Falls boys crush Pocatello in home win

By Bradley Guire Times-News writer

Wednesday night's Twin Falls boys basketball game was just an old-fashioned trip behind the woodshed. Again.

The Bruins opened with a 16-0 run against visiting Pocatello and didn't let up as they defeated the Indians 78-45 at Baun Gymnasium in Twin Falls. Five of Twin Falls' 10 3-point buckets came in building a 25-2 first-quarter lead. The Bruins beat Pocatello 60-47 on Dec. 5.

Justin Pedersen (11 points) hit three, and the rest came from Brennon Lancaster (10 points), T.J. Ellis and Eric Harr. Marcus Iardine also scored in double figures with 11 points.

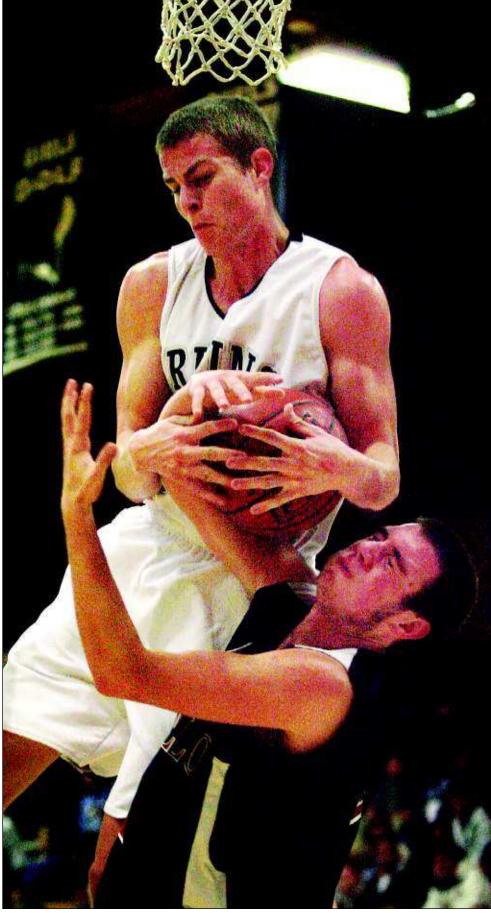

"It's hard to beat a team twice, so we wanted to put it to them," said Twin Falls post Ion Pulsifer, who had 18 points and six rebounds.

The Indians managed just one bucket during the first quarter — with 90 seconds left – as the Bruins pressed the full length of the court. Flustered, Pocatello turned the ball over 11 times during the period, either passing out of bounds, traveling or having passes intercepted.

The Indians began the second half down 45-19 but tried to rally and close the gap. Pocatello stayed with Twin Falls as both teams scored 18 points during the third quarter, but it wasn't enough considering the 25-point

Halladay-Lee trade finalized on day of big deals

Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — On a day like no other in baseball history, two Cy Young Award winners in their primes changed teams.

The four-team, nine-team megatrade became official Wednesday, with the Toronto Blue Jays sending 2003 AL Cy Young Award winner Roy Halladay to the Philadelphia Phillies, who in turn dealt 2008 AL Cy Young winner Cliff Lee to the Seattle Mariners.

Philadelphia dealt Lee to Seattle for three prospects: outfielder Tyson Gillies and right-hander Juan Ramirez. "When you have the opportunity to acquire a pitcher of Cliff's caliber, immediate effects are (obvious)," Seattle GM Jack Zduriencik said. "Did I think we'd be getting a guy of this caliber? You always set your expectations high. We're really glad it came to fruition." Halladay got a $60 million, three-year contract extension through 2013 in exchange for waiving his no-trade clause, and Toronto paid Philadelphia $6 million as part of the swap. Seven prospects changed hands, with Oakland also part of the mix.

"This is where we wanted to be," Halladay said at Citizens right-hander Phillippe Aumont, Bank Park in Philadelphia. "It was an easy decision for me.

Gerratt's greatest challenge is no challenge at all e's the greatest wrestler in Valley High School history, yet Derek Gerratt seems laid back about his senior season, which could be his last on the mat.

"I don't think I'm going to," he says when asked about possibly wrestling in college.

"He could be an NCAA champion," says his coach, Rick Hall. "He could be as good as he wanted to be."

Gerratt is in a position where he must challenge himself, because he knows nobody else is going to. To be so dominant can become dull for a competitive person. It's like Michael Jordan's first retirement from basketball, when he stepped away at the top of his game because it wasn't a challenge anymore.

"I used to (wrestle year-round), but I got a little burned out." Gerratt says. "I did stuff every now and then over (last) summer, I'd just go show up to stuff, went to a couple camps."

It doesn't help that Valley is in Idaho's lowest classification for wrestling. When the Vikings wrestle up, like last Tuesday against Class 4A Minico and Jerome, they only face the bigger schools' JV squads. It's strange to see the best wrestler in the gym throwing kids around over on the JV

This weekend at the Bear-Cat Invitational, Gerratt could finally meet his match in Will Keeter of Class 4A Twin Falls. Both are ranked No. 1 in their respective classifications.

Good thing, because Gerratt's got to be feeling bored.

"I'd say I was hungrier last year, because I felt like I kind of cheated myself (my) sophomore year and got hurt my freshman year, so I was really hungry last year. I'm hungry this year to finish it out right, but I think I was hungrier last year."

Can't blame him. Does anyone remember anything Neil Armstrong did after walking on the moon?

What can Gerratt do for an encore? After all, he went undefeated (43-0) and won the 135-pound Class 2A state championship as a junior. He was barely challenged - never as much as surrendered a takedown. So far this season. Gerratt is 8-0.

Yawn.

Gerratt is an automatic six points for the Vikings every time he steps on the mat. He can't remember what a second round looks like because he pins opponents too quickly. Hall says he'd like Gerratt to wrestle a complete match for conditioning purposes, but he's pinning opponents when he doesn't even mean to.

What's more, he's doing this with torn ligaments in his thumb and wrist which will require surgery after the season. "I tape it up and go," he says.

Truthfully, he could tape his entire arm behind his back and still contend for another state title.

Here's hoping somebody steps up and challenges Gerratt this season. He's worked hard and deserves a good test.

"I'm still competitive and I'm still out here to win," he says. "I'm just not putting as much pressure on myself."

That's why Gerratt might seem more relaxed and laid back about his senior year. He's still working hard to go undefeated and repeat as state champ, but he's approaching it with a more mature been-there-done-that perspective. I don't know what Gerratt must be going through because I've never been that good at anything in my life. But one thing I do know: Your second vacation to Hawaii doesn't have the same "wow" factor as the first.

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. - The NHL is players that competed at the college level considering adding a Winter Classic outdoor game for Canadian teams. So far the league's annual outdoor game on New Year's Day has matched up teams from American cities with strong hockey followings. Adding Canadian teams was considered for 2010, but it didn't happen.

"It's something we're going to look at for next season," commissioner Gary Bettman said Wednesday. "We'll see if we can make that happen." The Boston Bruins and Philadelphia Flyers are scheduled to play at Fenway Park on Jan. 1. Last year, Detroit and Chicago played at Wrigley Field after the first Classic matched up Buffalo and Pittsburgh on a

Cincinnati hires Cen. Mich.'s Jones

CINCINNATI

Cincinnati went right back to Central Michigan for its next coach.

Butch Jones was hired on Wednesday to replace Brian Kelly, who came from Central Michigan three years ago and built the Bearcats program into national prominence before leaving for Notre Dame last week. Now, it's up to one of his former assistants to keep it there.

fourth-ranked The Bearcats (12-0) won their second straight Big East title, finished third in the BCS rankings and earned a chance to play Florida in the Sugar Bowl on Jan. 1.

"It's very rare to have the opportunity to come in and take over a two-time defending champion and the No. 3 team in the country," said Davis, who was introduced at an evening news conference.

The chance came along because Kelly left for Notre Dame last Thursday. Jeff Ouinn, who was his offencoordinator Cincinnati, was named interim coach and will direct Tenn. the team in its first Sugar Bowl appearance while Jones American last season, and settles in.

As sports go, it wasn't close: Tiger Woods was famous for his golf long before he became infamous for his personal life.

For 10 incomparable vears, no one ruled a sport like Woods. He won 64 tournaments, including 12 major championships. He hoisted a trophy on every continent where golf is played. And those 56 titles in one decade on the PGA Tour? Consider that only four of golf's greatest players won more in their entire careers.

DEAR ABBY: It's that time of year again when parents take their kids to see Santa. As a professional Santa's helper for many years, may I offer some suggestions?

Let your children approach Santa on their own. Do not force your child to sit on Santa's lap. Santa has been seen in books and on TV, but he is now real, big and loud. That can be scary to a child. If he or she wants to stand at a distance and talk to Santa, that is OK. Sometimes just holding the child and standing next to Santa is all it takes for a child to warm up to the idea of sitting on his lap.

 $\mathbf{A}$ BBY Jeanne Phillips

If your little one is upset and you want a picture with Santa, have someone else snap the photo while you stand by your child. Let Santa talk to your children while you hold their hands. Santa (if any good) will pace the visit and stop it if it's taking too long. If children are afraid, do not let Santa grab at them to put them on his lap. That will only make the problem worse.

I hope this helps to make the visit easier.

- SANTA'S HELPER IN CENTRAL ILLINOIS DEAR SANTA'S HELPER: Ho-ho-ho! Thank you for being ABBY's helper today. I hope parents will take your sound suggestions to heart when introducing their little ones to the jolly man in the red suit.

DEAR ABBY: I'm a retired waitress who worked for years in a family restaurant. Many elderly people would come in alone, and I could see they were hungry for conversation as well as food, so I'd talk to them as much as possible.

As the restaurant became more crowded, I had less time to chat, so I set up a table for four and asked the seniors if they might like to sit at the "senior table." So many of the customers said yes that it turned into a table for 12!

It would be great if restaurants would set up senior tables so everyone could have a dinner partner if they wanted to visit. It's also a great way to make new friends. Now that I'm a senior myself I notice a lot of us alone, watching families enjoy being together.

- KATHY IN

BREMERTON, WASH. DEAR KATHY: You're a sweet and compassionate woman. A few years ago I heard about some restaurants here in Los Angeles offering a "community dining" table for singles — but they were intended to help young singles mingle. Your idea of a table for solo seniors is a good one, and I hope restaurateurs agree and give it a try. Food tastes better when it's seasoned with good fellowship.

DEAR ABBY: My ex-wife recently remarried and has decided to keep my last name and hyphenate it with her new husband's. She says she's doing it "for the sake of our children."

I don't buy that for a minute, Abby. She was unfaithful many times during our marriage, and I want her to stop using my name so some dignity and honor can be restored to it.

Do you agree that she should drop my name, or does she have a right to it?

> WANTS MY NAME BACK IN MAINE

DEAR WANTS: Although I understand your anger, try to take comfort in the fact that your ex still finds prestige in the association with you. Honor and dignity will be restored to your name by the way you and the children conduct yourselves in the future.

P.S. As long as your ex is not trying to defraud anyone, she has the right to use the name you gave her. Accept it and move on.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Healing is a matter of time, but it is sometimes also a matter of opportunity."

— Hippocrates

At the World Championships in Verona in 2006 the junior player with the best result was Eldad Ginossar of Israel, who collected a bronze medal for finishing third in the World Open Teams Championship, playing with a Turkish partner and Israeli teammates. Here's Ginossar in action, declaring four hearts.

A diamond was led and declarer played low from dummy to start to cut the defenders' communications. He could not avoid the loss of a diamond whatever he

The diamond went to East's queen, and a heart was returned. Ginossar drew two rounds of trump and played the spade king. West won the ace and made the fatal mistake of returning a diamond. That was won by dummy's ace, and a club went to the king. Now Ginossar played off all his trumps, reducing to a three-card

He could keep two spades and the bare club queen in dummy, but what was East to hold onto? With four cards left he had retained the guarded spade jack and the club ace and jack. But now, if he discarded a spade, declarer would lead to dummy's queen and take the 10. If he pitched a club, as he did, Ginossar could throw East in with his club ace to concede the last two tricks to dummy's spades.

Should West have worked out, when in with the spade ace, that he needed to play a second spade? It is certainly easier with all four hands in view.

ANSWER: The best call here is to double. This is technically known as a responsive double. (These apply when you double a bid-andraised suit in response to your partner's double.) The sequence suggests the minors, not spades, since if you had spades, you would bid them yourself. If partner picks diamonds, there is a de-
