Rickards' trespassing case goes to Idaho Court of Appeals

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

A Twin Falls activist's fight against a trespassing conviction at a public meeting has reached the Idaho Court of Appeals.

Peter Rickards, a podiatrist who has long been a critic of nuclear power in Idaho, was arrested in June 2008 at a public information meeting put on by plant developer Alternate Energy Holdings Inc. at the privately owned Glens Ferry Opera House.

That December, an Elmore County jury found Rickards guilty of misdemeanor trespassing and battery, the former when he was asked to leave while passing out leaflets and the latter stemming from accusations that he shoved a former AEHI part-time consultant. A magistrate judge sentenced him in February to pay $275 in fees and the one day in jail he had served following his arrest, but awarded him withheld judgments on both counts, meaning both could be removed from his record.

Rickards unsuccessfully challenged the convictions in district court, where a judge dismissed his appeal because he did not pay for a trial transcript. He then appealed to the Idaho Supreme Court, which passed the case to the Court of Appeals.

The case is now fully briefed and will be decided solely on the briefs, with no oral argument planned, said Karel A. Lehrman, the Idaho Supreme Court's chief deputy clerk. There's no set time frame for when a decision may be released, she said.

In his initial appeal, Rickards again challenged the constitutionality of being arrested and convicted of trespassing at a public meeting, even if it's on private property. He also recounted alleged problems that kept him from getting a proper magistrate trial.

But attorneys for the state say the court can't even consider

Federal authorities and Cassia County Sheriff's Office dispatchers confirmed the crash of a small Cessna 172 aircraft Wednesday night about 20 miles south of Burley.

Travelers begin holiday trek

Santa's sleigh needs snow, reindeer and a bit of holiday spirit. But for those traveling through the Magic Valley, it's a little more complicated.

For this week, though, holiday travel should be simple enough in the region. No snow is predicted for the Twin Falls area for the rest of the week.

At Joslin Field, Magic Valley Regional Airport, the passenger levels are about average on the four daily flights to Salt Lake City, said Airport Manager Bill Carberry.

"We've just had a little bit of snow but nothing that has required any plowing so far," Carberry said.

Of course, air travel can have delays during the holidays like any other time of the year. Passengers on Wednesday morning at the Twin Falls airport were informed over a loudspeaker that their 9:22 a.m. SkyWest connection flight to Salt Lake City was cancelled because of a mechanical problem.

Twin Falls resident Matthew Cadena was using the airport for the first time to travel to California for the holidays.

"I just don't know about these connecting flights," he said,

Search for missing man continues in Snake River canyon

T.F. resident has been missing since Sunday

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

JEROME — Battling blustery weather Wednesday afternoon, four men from Jerome County Sheriff's Search and Rescue team continued searching the Snake River near the Perrine Bridge for a man missing since early Sunday.

Leaving from the public docks in Centennial Park on the Twin Falls County side of the river, search and rescue personnel embarked on their fourth trip over a four-day span as they seek any sign of a 24-year-old man from Twin Falls.

Jerome County Sheriff Doug McFall said multiple callers reported early Sunday that the missing man called several friends and family members around 3 a.m., and claimed he was going to jump off the bridge.

Whitecaps and waves broke against a search and rescue boat Wednesday, as Bill Wilson piloted it through choppy water up and down the river. Wilson and the other three men scanned alertly for anything that might warrant a closer look.

Don't feel too sorry for them, burning the midnight oil not bad for senators

While lawmakers can't wait to get out of D.C. after health care reform vote, life is pretty civilized around Capitol

By Laurie Kellman
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Every day they've been in session every day for a month. They're sick of Christmas cookies and each other. But don't feel bad for the senators stuck working overtime. They're dining on catered food in gilded suites and cloak rooms. They're recording video tributes and poetry. And they're outta here earlier Christmas Eve morning than had been anticipated.

Also, they have jobs, unlike 10 percent of workers this holiday season.

All of that can be said of their staffs, too. But extended sessions like the Great Health Care Debate of 2009 can be tough on Senate aides, all but the most senior of whom make less than the lawmakers they serve. Most don't get paid extra for the overtime. And except for those who were sick or getting married, they weren't excused from what has seemed the past few days to be a single, snowy all-nighter.

Christmas shopping? Ha. "The Senate gift shop has replaced the mall," said Nick Simpson, spokesman for the Senate Republican Conference. "Autographed pictures of senators are the hot present this year?"

In reality, winter break is a tradition — and a perk — that dates back the several decades that Congress has met year-round. The longer sessions required several scheduled breaks so that families can make vacation plans.

"It is understood, however, that these breaks can be changed or canceled depending on legislative business," said Senate Historian Don Ritchie.

There's no heavier lift than the massive health care overhaul, a rewrite of policy that could affect every American. So for the most part, senators and aides have publicly tried to keep cheerful attitudes even during post-midnight and pre-dawn votes.

"It's not a hardship," said Sen. Patrick Leahy, D-Vt., whose wife came to Washington, complete with a Christmas tree shipped

Pat's Picks

Three things to do today

Pat Marcantonio

• While you're in the spirit of giving, give to area food banks. The Filer Ministerial Association is just one of them. For information: 326-4916.

• For another version of a holiday classic, try "Nutcracker on Ice" at 5:45 p.m. at the Sun Valley Lodge outdoor ice rink. Festivities start at 5:30 p.m., with refreshments, entertainment by the Sun Valley Carollers, a torchlight parade down Dollar Mountain, fireworks and Santa. There's free skating after the show.

• Several area churches are offering candlelight services. Check with the church nearest you. Among them: Jerome Bible Baptist Church, 132 Second Ave. E.; First Presbyterian Church, 2100 Burton Ave., Burley (both start at 7 p.m.); and the Twin Falls Reformed Church services at 5 and 6:30 p.m., at 1631 Grandview Drive N.

Rickards

Rickards' appeal. The Idaho Attorney General's office argued in its brief that Rickards is appealing the magistrate ruling rather than the district dismissal, and the Court of Appeals cannot consider direct magistrate appeals. Even if the district dismissal is reviewed, the state wrote, the judge acted properly and Rickards failed to properly support a claim for a fee waiver.

Rickards in response argued that he presented identical issues to both previous judges and listed a number of alleged areas of misconduct by the district judge — the judge didn't fully read through Rickards' initial appeal, for example. He noted in his briefings that he did not qualify for a public defender but argued that he couldn't afford the more than $6,660 the transcripts would cost.

"But after my divorce, and in these bad economic times, I cannot part with that much money," wrote Rickards, who is representing himself.

In an e-mail to the Times-News on Wednesday, Rickards seemed prepared to take the case as far as he can.

"While hope is still alive for justice in Idaho, I will probably have to eventually have to find a judge outside of Idaho to declare the 'Emperor has no clothes,' and ask the (9th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals) to once again overturn an Idaho injustice," he wrote.

adding that he may consider driving to Las Vegas to catch direct flights in the future.

After waiting in line with fellow passengers, Cadena got rebooked for the next flight that left at 2:50 p.m. — several hours later.

In Idaho and other Rocky Mountain states such as Utah, Montana, Wyoming and Nevada, AAA Idaho is projecting a 4.8 percent decline in travel compared to a 3.8 increase in travel projected nationwide.

Dave Carlson, director of public and government affairs for AAA Idaho, said that the nation's recession cut more deeply into Idaho since last year, making the impact on travel worse.

It's not all doom and gloom this holiday season, though.

While Idaho's travel is in a decline, AAA still expects about 32.5 percent of the state's population to travel, which is above the national average of 28.4 percent.

"These numbers aren't bad when we look at it in whole," he said.

While the economy's down, gasoline prices have been stable in recent months, and Idaho's current price is $2.58 a gallon, which falls in line with the national price, Carlson said.

Because gas prices have been stable for so long without fluctuating, they aren't expected to affect the number of people choosing to travel, Carlson said.

Though snow isn't in the forecast, that doesn't mean winter precautions are unnecessary.

"The roads may not have snow on them, but they're still pretty slick, said Idaho State Police Trooper Troy DeBie. "People just need to realize they need to slow down when the conditions show you need to."

On Wednesday, DeBie responded to a rollover crash with no injuries along Interstate 84 in Jerome County. Though the driver wasn't speeding, it was still too fast for the slick road, he said.

There were no injuries because the two people in the vehicle followed basic safety precautions.

"They were wearing their seat belts, luckily," DeBie said.

Wilson also kept close watch on a depth-finder. He explained that the river is as deep as 50 feet in the area near the bridge and as shallow as six feet because of ledges that drop off. It is about 30 feet deep at the bridge.

After four days on the river, the sheriff's department has not categorized the ongoing search as a recovery effort.

"This is still a missing person because we don't have any witnesses," Wilson said.

McFall said officers found evidence of a suicide Sunday morning.

Search and rescue workers found one tennis shoe floating in the river several hundred feet from the bridge of the same size, brand and color that the man was reported to have been wearing.

McFall said a deputy found footprints matching the sneaker's tread on the bridge's railing. The sheriff's department also obtained a suicide note from a member of his family allegedly written by the man they're now searching.

Deputies dispatched to the bridge found the man's car parked at the east-side observation area on the Jerome County end of the bridge.

Wilson explained several factors, including water temperature, may determine whether when a body could resurface.

He also said debris in the water, including shopping carts and vegetation, has snagged bodies in the past and kept them submerged. McFall said debris is a major safety concern that led to a decision not to use divers.

The Twin Falls County Sheriff's Department and search and rescue team assisted with the search on Sunday.

Jerome County's search and rescue has a five-boat fleet that includes one speedboat and two aluminum crafts.

crash, and that sheriff's deputies and Cassia County Search and Rescue teams were at the scene. Police on dispatch scanners said a search was being made in rugged terrain between Albion and Mount Independence.

According to the aircraft numbers given by the FAA, the four-seat, fixed-wing single-engine plane was registered to Kennewick Aircraft Services in Richland, Wash.

Temperatures in south-central Idaho dipped to around 13 degrees Wednesday night, according to the National Weather Service in Pocatello. But severe weather was absent during the time of the crash, according to Jack Messick, a NWS meteorologist in Pocatello.

NWS data from the Burley airport at the time of the crash showed only a 3 mph wind out of the west and visibility was unlimited. But Messick added that

"skies were roughly 60 to 80 percent covered in clouds."

FAA operators said officials from that agency's Flight Standard District Office in Boise would be at the scene today, along with investigators from the National Transportation Safety Board.

from home, to celebrate what they could of the holiday.

Senators have reason to withhold complaints, moreso the closer the clock ticks to the final vote today. It'll be the first time the Senate has voted on that holiday since 1895, for a debate on matters of employment of former Confederate officers.

Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid announced on the floor that concerns about the weather inspired him to move the final, 8 a.m. EST vote to 7 a.m. EST — 12 hours earlier than originally planned.

For all the reports of cold pizza and stale holiday treats, life in the Senate is pretty civilized for these lawmakers these days. A walk around the Capitol at lunchtime Wednesday revealed a buffet of barbecue from Red Hot & Blue laid out in Reid's suite just off the Senate floor. A trio of press aides were spotted hopping on an elevator, plates stacked high with ribs.

Just around the chamber in the Mansfield Room, Republicans gathered for a weekly lunch meeting over what looked like breaded chicken or fish, supplied by the Senate food service.

Not there was Pennsylvania Sen. Arlen Specter, because he's now a Democrat. Instead, Specter was seated one floor down in the senators' private dining room, lunching with his chief of staff and a third person.

Staffers reported that both cloakrooms at various times have been stocked with candy and baskets of fruit.

And on Saturday night, when the snow-challenged capital city was crippled by one of the worst storms on record, many of those forced to stay in town found shelter at a Hyatt Regency hotel a few blocks away as the clock ran toward a 1 a.m. vote Monday morning.

That vote and several other procedures dispensed with, Reid announced on the floor that he would hold the final vote on the health care bill at 7 a.m. today.

Sen. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., let out a loud groan, which in turn inspired laughter in a chamber not accustomed to it lately.

Most though, can't get out of town early enough.

"Frankly, I'm gonna just sit back and watch my rabbits eat my cactus" back home in Searchlight, Nev., Reid told reporters.

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus

Editor's note: In September 1897, 8-year-old Virginia O'Hanlon of New York City was beginning to have doubts about Santa Claus.

So her father suggested that she write to the New York Sun and ask whether Santa Claus existed. On Sept. 21, the paper published an editorial written by Francis Church answering Virginia's question.

By long tradition, the Times-News editorial board is proud to republish it on Christmas Eve. Merry Christmas.

— Brad Hurd, Bill Bitzenburg, Mary Lou Panatopoulos, Steve Crump

Virginia, your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age. They do not believe except (what) they see. They think that nothing can be which is not comprehensible by their little minds. All minds, Virginia, whether they be men's or children's, are little. In this great universe of ours man is a mere insect, an ant, in his intellect, as compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole of truth and knowledge.

Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist, and you know that they abound and give to your life its highest beauty and joy. Alas! how dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus. It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias. There would be no childlike faith then, no poetry, no romance to make tolerable this existence. We should have no enjoyment, except in sense and sight. The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished.

Not believe in Santa Claus! You might as well not believe in fairies! You might get your papa to hire men to watch in all the chimneys on Christmas Eve to catch Santa Claus, but even if they did not see Santa Claus coming down, what would that prove? Nobody sees Santa Claus, but that is no sign that there is no Santa Claus. The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men can see. Did you ever see fairies dancing on the lawn? Of course not, but that's no proof that they are not there. Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders there are unseen and unseeable in the world.

You may tear apart the baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest man, nor even the united strength of all the strongest men that ever lived, could tear apart. Only faith, fancy, poetry, love, romance, can push aside that curtain and view and picture the supernal beauty and glory beyond. Is it all real? Ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing else real and abiding.

No Santa Claus! Thank God he lives, and he lives forever. A thousand years from now, Virginia, nay, ten times ten thousand years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood.

In a sleep-deprived Senate, a punch-drunk holiday

As he kicked off another day in the interminable Senate health-care debate, a weary Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-NeV., drew inspiration from the noted political strategist Rodney King.

"I would hope that everyone would go back to their gentlemanly ways," the Nevada Democrat proposed on the Senate floor, before quoting the man whose beating by cops set off the 1992 Los Angeles riots. "I've said to a number of people, 'Rodney King: "Let's just all try to get along."'"

Dana Milbank

Already the partisans had invoked Nazis and lynch mobs, "flipping the bird" and praying for misfortune to befall the other side. Reid himself had likened the opposition to slaveholders and opponents of civil rights. So it was no surprise that Rodney King and his "Can we all get along?" plea would make a cameo appearance.

Perhaps the senators should be given some slack for their strange words and actions on the Senate floor this week, in which they treated the country to everything from catnaps to poetry readings. These people are tired, after all. Enacting health-care reform has gone from a legislative activity to an endurance sport.

They've been kept in session more or less constantly since Thanksgiving, and in the final days it has become a standoff, some sort of a test of machismo. Republicans forced the delay, and Democrats, up against a Christmas deadline, responded by forcing votes at odd hours, 1 a.m. Monday and 7 a.m. Tuesday.

Just before the vote early Monday morning, a weary Reid was speaking on the floor when he confused aged Americans with African Americans.

Speaking about an endorsement from a seniors group, he said: "These are some of the reasons that AARP, the American Association for the Advancement of Colored Peop — I'm sorry, the American Association of Retired People, not the NAACP. I'm sorry about that, Mr. President."

Tuesday morning, it was Illinois Sen. Roland Burris's turn for some punch-drunk legislating. The Blagojevich appointee, recognized to deliver a speech on the Senate floor, instead offered a ditty: " 'Twas the night before Christmas, and all through the Senate The right held up our health-care bill, no matter what was in it."

The people had voted, they mandated reform But Republicans blew off the gathering storm.

The senator, wearing Christmas-red tie and pocket hankie, wore a satisfied smile. It was the most noteworthy contribution he had made to the Senate all year.

But Burris was not the first senator-poet of the season. Sen. Christopher Bond, R-Mo., posted a video of the same poem, with different words, on YouTube. Bond sat with two dogs, and the three of them wore red sweaters. The dogs fidgeted as Bond spoke of budget director Peter Orszag as Santa Claus pulled by senatorial reindeer:

"Now Schumer, now Sanders, now Durbin and Harken.

On Landrieu, on Nelson, on Bayh and Lincoln."

As Harry Reid might say, what a riot.

The legislative ultramarathon has produced many other moments that senators would probably rather forget: Al Franken, D-Minn., denying Joe Lieberman, I-Conn., a few extra seconds of time to finish his floor speech; Dianne Feinstein, D-Calif., playing a ring tone on the Senate floor that sounded like "The Sting"; John Barasso, R-Wyo., and Jim Bunning, R-Ky., vying to see who could bellow "No!" the loudest when the clerk called his name; Sherrod Brown, D-Ohio, talking about the makeup artist he met while taping "Face the Nation."

Sen. Lamar Alexander, R-Tenn., put on a brave face as he welcomed colleagues to the 7 a.m. vote Tuesday. "Top of the morning!" he called out. "Isn't this a delight?"

In such an environment, you sleep when you can — and eat when you can. Seconds before the 7 a.m. start of Tuesday's session, a clerk ran shouting into the Democratic cloakroom: "I need somebody in the chair! I need somebody to open right now!"

Sen. Ted Kaufman, D-Del., emerged, eating what appeared to be the last of a bagel. "Finish chewing, Senator," the clerk instructed.

Falling asleep at their desks? Snacking on the floor? Being forced to listen to the poetry of Roland Burris? Finally, Republicans could take it no more. Tuesday afternoon, they ended the protest and agreed to expedite the vote. It was time to settle down for a long winter's nap.

OTHER VIEWS

Here's what media are saying about ...

... bad choices

Idaho Statesman, Boise

What is the last thing Idaho's colleges should do during a recession? How about pricing students out of the market? Or driving away quality faculty or staff?

If university presidents aren't careful, they run the risk of doing both. It depends on how they handle the current cash crunch — and how much help they get from the Statehouse.

... the State Board of Education said it will allow universities to seek tuition or fee increases exceeding 10 percent. The board also moved a step closer to giving presidents greater leeway to cut personnel costs; a final decision could come in February.

There is an air of desperation here; with tax collections still sputtering, the State Board seems to be pulling out all the stops and allowing university presidents to weather the storm by whatever means necessary.

Even if the "solutions" make a bad situation worse.

In 2007, only 31 percent of Idaho's 18- to 24-year-olds attended college, according to a damning study from the National Center for Public Policy and Higher Education. That paltry rate earned Idaho a "D" for college participation — slightly better than the "F" grade the group handed out for affordability.

Despite relatively low tuition or fees — such as $4,864 per year at Boise State University and $4,934 per year at University of Idaho — the report marked Idaho down for its limited financial aid programs. As a result, poor and working-class families must spend 34 percent of their income on college costs.

Do you really think Idaho families can afford nearly $500 more a year? And do you think Idaho can afford to impose that hardship? Even State Board member Richard Westerberg seems to have his doubts ... he pointed out that the board will not necessarily approve a big tuition increase. "Idaho students and the families who support them do not have bottomless pockets and cannot bear the total brunt of this recession on campus."

He's right. But the board's other proposal — giving university presidents increased power to cut personnel budgets — is painful as well.

The board is considering policies that are commonplace in the private sector: cutting salaries and hours, imposing furloughs or layoffs. But these moves could have hidden costs. When universities cut course offerings or essential services, they make a college degree more costly for students. Personnel cuts may be inevitable, but they must be made strategically.

... We'll just hope the board's decisions got the attention of Gov. Butch Otter and legislators — who have control over budget reserve accounts that could ease some of the pain on campuses. The only remaining options available to universities are bad ones.

Latest H1N1 recall doesn't affect health district

By Damon Hunzeker
Times-News writer

Another round of swine-flu vaccine has been recalled, but officials are stressing that there's no reason to be concerned and to go about your business.

Earlier this month, a batch of 800,000 doses of H1N1 vaccine from manufacturer Sanofi Pasteur for children ages 6 months to 35 months was recalled because its potency was discovered to have dropped below levels recommended by the Food and Drug Administration. This time, manufacturer MedImmune is recalling 13 lots of its nasal-spray version that were shipped in October.

The recall was motivated for the same reason — unused doses of the vaccine lost potency in the past two months while sitting on shelves, discovered in an FDA-required quality-assurance inspection.

About 4.7 million doses were distributed across the nation. Of the 3,000 doses received by the South Central Public Health District (SCPHD), all of them have been administered — with the exception of some stray doses given to private health-care providers.

"At the time that it was given, the vaccine was well above full potency ... We do not need to re-vaccinate anyone, and it is not a safety issue," said Cheryle Becker, district administrator. "It will still provide some protection and still allows people to build immunity."

Children under 10 years old who have received the vaccine simply need to make sure they come in for their already scheduled second doses, Becker said, which is a routine recommendation unrelated to the recall.

Regarding the doses yet to be used, Becker said some of the vaccine remains fully potent but that local providers have been notified and should get rid of it.

"Anyone who may have received any of the nasal vaccine in October should look in their refrigerators and see if they have some," she said.

Tom Shanahan, spokesman for the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare, issued a press release Wednesday and addressed the issue.

"The CDC (Centers for Disease Control and Prevention) believes most of the vaccine was administered and provided a sufficient immune response so people do not need to be revaccinated," he said.

Shanahan also said only 22 percent of adults in high-risk groups, such as people with asthma and diabetes, have been vaccinated nationwide against swine flu and called it "a great concern."

SCPHD is currently administering vaccines, by appointment, to the general public in all six of its district offices. The recall presents no health concerns and doesn't affect supplies, Becker said.

New airport advisory group chosen for Blaine Co.

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

HAILEY — To help guide the rest of the process in building a new airport to replace Hailey's Friedman Memorial, the Blaine County commissioners have selected five area residents from among 17 nominated by cities throughout the county.

The newly formed Blaine County Airport Advisory Committee will initially learn from the Friedman Memorial Airport Authority, and eventually take over decision-making on issues of the replacement airport. It will be primarily responsible to the commissioners, and secondarily to the FMAA.

The FMAA will retain authority over Friedman until it is closed.

"We are very pleased with this group of highly talented people and appreciate the widespread interest shown in serving on this important panel," said Commissioner Tom Bowman in a written statement. "The mission of this committee is to help deliver a successful, well-designed new airport, on schedule and on budget, and we have no doubt they will be successful in that endeavor."

Selected to represent the cities and the flying community on the BCAAC were former tax attorney Adrienne Robideaux, former Citizens for Smart Growth executive director Vanessa Fry, engineering and consulting firm owner Carl Harris, and business investor and pilot Chris Stephens.

To represent the county commission, the commissioners chose Len Harlig, a former Blaine County commissioner and 17-year member of the FMAA. Harlig resigned his position on the FMAA to take the new post, and the commissioners replaced him with Commissioner Larry Schoen after he expressed interest in the seat.

"Under normal circumstances we'd interview for (the position)," said Bowman, who is chairman of the FMAA. "(But) I can think of no better representative than a sitting commissioner."

The BCAAC is expected to hold its first meeting jointly with the commissioners at 10 a.m. Jan. 4 at the Old County Courthouse in Hailey, and then split off to discuss organizational issues such as a regular meeting date.

On Jan. 5, the BCAAC will join the FMAA at 3:30 p.m. at the same location to hear from the financial consultant the FMAA hired to assess the feasibility and other financial issues related to the new airport. The FMAA will then hold its regular meeting at 5:30.

Charter school abandons Bible plans — for now

BOISE (AP) — A public charter school suing Idaho officials for barring the Bible and other religious texts from the classroom agreed Wednesday to comply with the ban — unless the courts rule otherwise.

Nampa Classical Academy has, until now, balked at orders from the Idaho Public Charter School Commission to abandon plans to use the Bible and other texts for their literary and historic qualities.

The charter school will comply with the state order until the matter is settled in court, said Eric Makrush, a member of Nampa Classical Academy Board of Directors. "The thing we can't afford to happen is for the charter school commission to revoke our charter. That's the bottom line," Makrush told The Associated Press.

The academy opened this fall and is the third-largest charter school in the state with more than 500 students.

School founders wanted to use the Bible and other texts as part of a secular education program.

The plan prompted Idaho's public charter school commission to review the use of religious texts in the classroom. In August, it decided the academy could not use the Bible because it violated the state constitution.

Judge allows wild horse roundup in Nevada

By Matthew Daly
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The Obama administration said Wednesday it is going forward with a contentious plan to round up about 2,500 wild horses in Nevada.

A spokeswoman for Interior Secretary Ken Salazar said herds in the Calico Mountains Complex in northwestern Nevada are overpopulated and need to be reduced to protect the horses and the rangelands that support them.

"The current population in the five Calico herd management areas is three times what the range can handle, so this gather will ensure high-quality habitat for the wild horse and burros and other wildlife while protecting the public rangeland from overuse," said spokeswoman Kendra Barkoff.

She called the dispute over the roundup "yet another clarion call to develop and implement a long-term solution to the challenges we face concerning wild horses and burros on our public lands."

The Interior Department announcement came after a federal judge on Wednesday denied a request to block the roundup, saying opponents had failed to demonstrate that removal of the horses would violate federal law.

U.S. District Judge Paul Friedman said the agency is obligated under a 1971 law to carefully manage wild horse herds to prevent overpopulation.

The roundup planned for Monday would be one of the largest in Nevada in recent years. Officials plan to use helicopters to force the horses into holding pens before placing them for adoption or sending them to long-term holding corrals in the Midwest.

The roundup is part of the land management agency's overall strategy to remove more than 10,000 mustangs from public lands across the West and ship them to greener pastures in the Midwest and East. The Bureau of Land Management estimates about half of the nearly 37,000 wild mustangs live in Nevada, with others concentrated in Arizona, California, Oregon, Utah and Wyoming.

Another 32,000 horses and burros are cared for in corrals and pastures in Kansas, Oklahoma and South Dakota.

Mustang advocates had sued to block the roundup, saying that use of the helicopters is inhumane because some of the animals are traumatized, injured or killed. Opponents also contend that the bureau is grossly inflating horse numbers to justify their removal from the range.

The lawsuit says wild horses are an integral part of the natural ecosystem and should remain on rangeland throughout the West rather than be herded into long-term holding pens.

A state wildlife agency sided with federal land managers, arguing in court papers last week that the mustangs have "severely degraded" the range and adversely affect Bighorn sheep and other wildlife that compete for scarce water resources in the drought-plagued region.

Friedman sided with roundup opponents in one aspect of his 25-page ruling. He said federal officials likely were violating federal law by stockpiling tens of thousands of horses in long-term holding facilities in the Midwest.

IDAHO Judge rejects motion to lower Caldwell boy's bond

CALDWELL — A judge has denied a request to release a Caldwell boy charged in his father's death on a reduced bond or by his own recognizance.

Zachary Neagle, 14, is charged with first-degree murder and being held on a $300,000 bond.

Third District Judge Bradley Ford said Wednesday he denied the motion to either reduce the bond amount and release the boy into the custody of his mother, Cindy Neagle, because of the nature of the charge.

Neagle's trial is also scheduled to start in about three months, on March 23. He is charged with fatally shooting his father, Jason Neagle, with a high-powered rifle while the man slept on his couch in May.

Cindy Neagle voiced disappointment with ruling, saying it would have been nice to have her son home for the holidays.

ITD: Driver, vehicle fees to increase

BOISE — The Idaho Transportation Department says fees for more than a dozen vehicle and driver's license services are poised to increase next year.

The agency says many of the fees have not increased in more than a decade.

Starting Jan. 1, the cost of a standard Idaho driver's license will go up to $15 to $55, up from about $12 to $45. The fee for motor vehicle and driver's license records will increase to $7, up from $4.

State lawmakers during the 2009 Idaho Legislature approved the changes, which are expected to generate about $13.1 million for state highways and to modernize computer systems at the state Division of Motor Vehicles.

Schools under Jan. 12 'Race to the Top' deadline

LEWISTON — The state Department of Education says school districts have until Jan. 12 to sign onto Idaho's application for $75 million or more in competitive federal grant money.

The agency has posted the eight-page agreement on its Web site for school districts that want to participate in the federal Department of Education's 'Race to the Top' program.

Idaho's grant application is due Jan. 19.

The department has said the program will be the only way to boost funding for education in the next two to three years.

Lewiston school board chairman Dan Rudolph says that while 'Race to the Top' provides some hope as districts operate on leaner budgets, he was also saddened to see money for education come down to a "competitive game."

Woman sentenced in prostitution case

CALDWELL — A Nampa woman will serve prison time on convictions that she induced a minor into prostitution and aided in the sexual battery of a minor.

Third District Judge Thomas Ryan on Wednesday sentenced Rachele Bromley to serve two years fixed and eight years indeterminate, the Idaho Press-Tribune reports.

Bromley was arrested in May after posting an Internet advertisement offering erotic massage involving a teenager. A 40-year-old man who responded to the advertisement was later convicted of sexual battery of a minor.

Ryan ordered Bromley to serve six months in a women's correctional facility in a program for sexual offenders.

She may have to serve the remainder of her sentence afterward based on her performance.

UTAH EnergySolutions defends foreign nuclear waste plan

SALT LAKE CITY — EnergySolutions Inc. has started airing commercials critical of a U.S. congressman who wants to prevent the company from importing Italian nuclear waste for disposal in Utah's west desert.

The company is fighting a bill in Congress sponsored by U.S. Rep. Jim Matheson, D-Utah, that would ban the importation of foreign low-level radioactive waste unless it originated in the U.S. or served a strategic national purpose.

EnergySolutions contends jobs will be put at risk if it isn't allowed to dispose of the waste at its facility, about miles west of Salt Lake City. Meanwhile, Matheson said that any country that creates nuclear waste should dispose of it itself.

The two argued Wednesday at separate news conferences over a mailer Matheson sent to constituents in support of his bill and a commercial aired in response on Sunday by EnergySolutions.

The bill was written to block the company's plans to import up to 20,000 tons of waste from Italy's shuttered nuclear power program through the ports of either Charleston, S.C., or New Orleans. After processing in Tennessee, about 1,600 tons would be disposed of in Utah.

If approved by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, it would be the largest single shipment of foreign radioactive waste ever allowed into the U.S.

Matheson and bill cosponsors, U.S. Reps. Bart Gordon, D-Tenn., and Lee Terry, R-Neb., contend EnergySolutions' facility should be preserved for domestic nuclear waste. The company's facility is currently the only one available to 36 states.

Dollar's decline a boon for U.S. manufacturers

By Dana Hedgpeth
 The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The weak dollar has made it easier for U.S. manufacturers of parts for appliances, automobiles and other equipment to compete globally on price and is helping them win back business lost to overseas competitors, a shift that economists say should help the country's economic recovery. Last year, as the financial crisis hit a crescendo, investors poured money into U.S. Treasury securities, long considered one of the safest places to invest. That caused the dollar's value to skyrocket, putting U.S. companies with heavy export businesses at a pricing disadvantage compared with competitors abroad.

More recently, as the global economy has shown signs of a turnaround, investors have been spreading their risks and putting money into stocks and bonds around the world. That strategy has pushed the value of the dollar back down and has helped U.S. manufacturers compete with producers in Asia and Europe. The dollar rose 25 percent between April 2008 and March 2009 relative to a basket of other major currencies, then started its steady slide. The dollar's value has rallied again during the past three weeks, but on Tuesday it still traded 12 percent below that March high. The lingering weakness "helps the poor, beleaguered exporter whose goods are becoming more competitively priced in the global market," said Cliff Waldman, an economist at the Manufacturers Alliance/MAPI. The greenback's slide is part of the reason that U.S. exports were 12 percent higher in October than in April, and is a factor in the nation's industrial output rising steadily for five straight months. In a recent nationwide survey of major manufacturers that buy tools and parts from smaller suppliers, 47 percent said they were doing more business in the U.S. as a direct result of the dollar's decline, according to Mfg.com, a Web site that links suppliers and manufacturers. ## Income, spending post gains for Nov.

By Martin Crutsinger
 Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Personal incomes rose in November at the fastest pace in six months, while spending posted a second straight increase. But economists caution that the gains remain too weak to sustain a strong economic recovery.

The Commerce Department said Wednesday that personal incomes rose 0.4 percent in November, helped by a $16.1 billion increase in wages and salaries. It reflected the drop in unemployment that occurred last month.

The rise in incomes helped bolster spending, which rose 0.5 percent in November. Both the income and spending gains were slightly less than economists had expected.

After taking inflation into account, after-tax incomes are rising at an annual rate of just 1.2 percent. Economists say the recovery will require higher levels of income and spending. This is especially true at a time when households are using some income to shrink debt loads and rebuild savings, rather than spend.

"Annualized income growth of a little over 1 percent will not be enough to drive a significant recovery in consumption at the same time that debt needs to be paid down," said Paul Dales, U.S. economist at Capital Economics.

The 0.4 percent rise in incomes followed a 0.3 percent October gain. It was the best showing since a 1.5 percent spurt in May, a month

Dell departure highlights holes in federal labor law

By Joshua Palmer
 Times-News writer

Officials with Idaho Department of Labor say Dell did not comply with all the requirements of the Worker Adjustment and Retraining Notification Act, which requires companies to notify state labor offices before laying off a significant number of employees.

"The WARN Act was not followed in Dell's layoff," said Jan Roeser, regional economist with Idaho Department of Labor, in a memo to Region IV Development that was obtained by the Times-News. "Likely due to the sizeable legal staff employed by Dell who understand the WARN Act is a recommendation and not a requirement."

Dell notified workers ahead of time, but failed to notify the state labor office — something state labor officials say was a minor infraction. The purpose of reporting layoffs of more than 100 employees is to prepare labor offices for an influx of workers seeking benefits and retraining.

Dell notified city and state officials only a few hours before calling employees into the Canyon Crest Dining & Event Center to announce the closure.

"It was definitely something that was discussed in our office," Roeser said. "But the general consensus was that Dell followed the spirit of the law."

She said Dell told employees about the layoffs more than 60 days in advance and the company provided severance packages.

"The only thing they didn't do was notify a central office," she said.

Dell Computers Inc. announced Sept. 11 that it was closing the call center in Twin Falls and laying off most of the 500 employees. Dell officials said some of the employees would be hired back to work from home and others would be offered positions in Oklahoma and Texas.

were not immediately returned Wednesday.

However, there was little — if anything — the state could do if Dell blatantly violated the act.

"The act doesn't have any teeth to it, so there isn't really much that we could do," Roeser said. "Some states enforce it more or have labor unions that impose their own penalties."

According to the U.S. Department of Labor, about 30 states have imposed fines or other penalties for failing to comply with the federal act. However, the department did not provide further details about each states' individual penalties and requirements.

New home sales sink 11 percent

By Alan Zibel
 Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Sales of new homes plunged unexpectedly last month to the lowest level since April, a sign the housing market recovery will be rocky.

The 11 percent slump from October's pace shows that consumers are taking their time following an extension of a deadline for first-time buyers to qualify for a tax credit. The incentive was set to expire at the end of November, but Congress pushed back the date to April 30 and expanded the program to include current homeowners who relocate.

"They don't have to act today," said David Crowe, chief economist at the National Association of Home Builders, who called the results "pretty awful."

New home sales data, released Wednesday, are a better indicator of future real estate activity than sales of previously occupied homes, but capture a smaller slice of the market. The new home figures tally sales agreements signed in November, while home resale numbers reflect contracts signed over the summer that were completed in November.

So while home resales rose 7 percent last month, the National Association of Realtors reported Tuesday, most economists expect completed sales to decline during the winter months.

"Buyer traffic is likely to be flat until spring," predicted Mark Vitner, senior economist with Wells Fargo Securities.

Despite the poor showing from new home buyers, the housing market has been recovering from the worst

BlackBerry e-mail restored for some after outage

By Rob Gillies
 Associated Press writer

TORONTO — BlackBerry e-mail service in North America was restored for some users Wednesday morning following its second outage in less than a week.

Research In Motion Ltd. said Wednesday the root cause is still under review but its preliminary analysis has determined there was a flaw in two recently released versions of its BlackBerry Messenger instant messaging software.

RIM has also provided a new version of BlackBerry Messenger (version 5.0.0.57) and is encouraging anyone who downloaded or upgraded BlackBerry Messenger since Dec. 14 to upgrade to this latest version, which resolves the issue.

RIM said late Tuesday technicians were working to resolve e-mail messaging delays on its BlackBerry smart phones in North and South America.

But by Wednesday morning many BlackBerry users posting on the social networking site Twitter reported their BlackBerry service was back to normal.

RIM said message delivery was delayed or intermittent during the service interruption but said phone service and SMS service were unaffected. The Canadian company said it has taken corrective action to restore service.

During Tuesday's outage, users in the Americas were unable to send or receive e-mail messages. Some said they also could not connect to the Internet.

BlackBerry service last went out last Thursday. At the time, Research In Motion said technicians had isolated and resolved the issue and were investigating the cause of the outages. The company didn't say how many users were affected or how long that outage lasted.

The BlackBerry Storm2 for Verizon is shown in San Francisco. E-mail messaging delays plagued BlackBerry users in North America for the second time in a week, though by early Wednesday the problems appeared to be resolved for some users.

YESTERDAY ON WALL STREET

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 1.51, or 0.01 percent, to 10,466.44. The Standard & Poor's 500 index rose 2.57, or 0.2 percent, to 1,120.59, while the Nasdaq composite index gained 16.97, or 0.8 percent, to 2,269.64.

Three stocks rose for every one that fell on the New York Stock Exchange, where consolidated volume came to 3.2 billion shares, down from 3.7 billion on Tuesday.

Trading volume on the New York Stock Exchange has been especially light throughout the month, which can exaggerate price swings.

The Russell 2000 index of smaller companies rose 7.38, or 1.2 percent, to 630.98.

Overseas, Britain's FTSE 100 gained 0.8 percent, Germany's DAX index gained 0.2 percent, and France's CAC-40 rose 0.3 percent. The DAX and CAC-40 both hit highs for the year earlier in the day. Markets in Japan were closed for a holiday.

BUSINESS BRIEFS

Micron swings to profit on sales jump, price hike

BOISE - Micron Technology Inc. on Tuesday reported its first quarterly profit in about three years as sales jumped 24 percent, driven by higher volume and prices.

In the quarter ended Dec. 3, the Boise-based semiconductor maker had net income of $204 million, or 23 cents per share, compared to a loss of $718 million, or 93 cents per share, a year earlier.

Analysts polled by Thomson Reuters had expected profit of 7 cents per share in the most recent quarter.

Revenue rose 24 percent to $1.74 billion from $1.4 billion. Micron's gross margin on sales of memory products improved to 27 percent from 12 percent in the prior quarter as it hiked prices.

The company, whose products go into PCs, mobile phones, flash memory cards and digital cameras, generated $326 million in cash flow and ended the quarter with cash and investments worth about $1.6 billion.

Micron shares rose 16 cents to $9.57 in after-hours trading Tuesday.

Atlas Mining's former boss settles SEC allegations

BOISE - A northern Idaho mining company's former chief executive officer must pay $50,000 to settle allegations he financed his company's struggling operations by illegally distributing millions worth of stock to investors.

William Jacobson, former CEO of Atlas Mining Co., is also barred from serving as an officer or director of any issuer for five years, the Securities and Exchange Commission said in a statement Tuesday.

Atlas Mining is now known as Applied Minerals, Inc.

The SEC alleged Jacobson from 2002 to 2005 tried to keep Atlas afloat by orchestrating illegal stock schemes, then fabricated documents and made false statements in public filings to cover his tracks.

The company, based in Osburn, Idaho, in July settled a class action lawsuit when it agreed to pay $1.25 million to investors who claimed the company artificially inflated stock prices through false financial statements.

Agriculture futures trade mixed on the CBOT

CHICAGO - Agriculture futures were mixed Wednesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat for March delivery gained 6 cents to $5.29 a bushel, while March corn rose 6 cents to $4.0475 a bushel and oats for March delivery slipped 0.5 cent to $2.585 a bushel. January soybeans jumped 10.25 cents to $10.0125 a bushel.

Meanwhile, beef futures advanced and pork futures traded mixed on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

February live cattle edged up 0.7 cent to 85.37 cents a pound; January feeder cattle climbed 1.03 cents to 95.45 cents a pound; February lean hogs added 0.92 cent to 65.67 cents a pound; and February pork bellies lost 0.2 cent to 87.9 cents a pound.

Winter storm moves across nation's midsection

By Josh Funk Associated Press writer

OMAHA, Neb. — Holiday travelers battled slick, icy roads and flight cancellations and delays on Wednesday as a major winter storm began to spread across much of the nation's midsection.

Parts of Nebraska were coated with ice that was up to 1/4-inch thick and a number of churches were already canceling Christmas Eve services in anticipation of more ice and snow.

The storm began in the southwest — where blizzard-like conditions shut down roads and caused a pileup involving 20 vehicles in Arizona on Tuesday.

Slippery roads were blamed for at least six deaths — three in accidents on Interstate 80 in Nebraska, two in a crash on Interstate 70 in Kansas and one near Albuquerque, N.M.

Daylong Va. post office standoff ends peacefully

By Mitch Weiss Associated Press writer

WYTHEVILLE, Va. — A daylong standoff at a small-town Virginia post office ended peacefully with three hostages being released and a suspect who came out of the building in a wheelchair in custody.

Carlton Austin said his daughter, postal worker Margie Austin, was among the hostages. She managed to call a family friend around 4:30 p.m. and said she was fine.

Niki Oliver told the Enterprise that her brother, Jimmy Oliver, was one of the hostages and had been able to phone family members.

If you haven't made dinner plans for Christmas yet, no worries — you still have today to get things squared away.

Here's a tip: Hagerman Wildlife Management Area.

PLENTY OF BIRDS

BY ANDREW WEEKS / TIMES-NEWS WRITER

HAGERMAN SITE HOME TO VARIETY OF GAME BIRDS, WATERFOWL

ANDREW WEEKS/Times-News

A male pheasant sits roadside Dec. 3 at the Hagerman Wildlife Management Area. The site, managed by the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, is home to a variety of upland game birds and waterfowl. Upland bird hunting continues through Dec. 31.

The Hagerman Wildlife Management Area, managed by the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, is home to a variety of waterfowl and upland game birds. While there's no waterfowl hunting at the WMA, upland game birds are yours for the choosing — as long as you have a valid hunting license, of course.

It's difficult to gage how many people hunt the area, said Bruce Palmer, regional wildlife biologist with Fish and Game. There's a sign-in box at the area, he said, but not many people use it.

At the WMA you'll likely encounter California quail, gray partridge and ring-necked pheasants.

"Pheasant season is a little better than last year," Palmer said, but noting it's nothing like it used to be during the 1970s and '80s. Since then a number of habitat changes, some caused by agricultural production, has slowed the pheasant population statewide, he said.

"There's still birds out there, but it can be kind of tough to find them," Palmer said. "Farming practices have changed over the years, eliminating a lot of cover along ditches ... Pheasants like to nest in alfalfa, but it gets harvested at the same time they're nesting."

Palmer says he understands why farming practices have changed — in part, to save money — but "unfortunately it's had a negative impact" on pheasants and other upland birds, he said.

Fish and Game does not stock pheasants at the Hagerman site, but it does stock Niagara Springs WMA — about 120 a week throughout the season. Niagara Springs is about 10 miles from the Hagerman site, or about six miles south of Wendell.

through Dec. 31.

On the other hand, you can bird watch all year long.

"It's a pretty nifty place, particularly at this time of year when there are so many birds," Palmer said of the Hagerman site.

Bald eagles, swans, cranes, ducks and geese are some of the waterfowl that migrate to the area during winter. Like clockwork, though, when waterfowl season ends in mid-January the ducks return to the Snake River.

"They seem to know where the hunting takes place and where it doesn't," he said. "Within about week or so after hunting they figure it out and go back out on the river."

Nordic organizers sweetening the pot

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

Think you can do the Hokey Pokey on snowshoes? It might win you a big prize.

With six weeks to go until the inaugural Sun Valley Nordic Festival, organizers are sweetening the pot with everything from cocoa with peppermint schnapps to a snowshoe dance competition.

One of the biggest additions is the 200k challenge: Ski all of the valley's Nordic trails and be eligible for prizes.

"We have more than 200 kilometers of trails and we're challenging people to ski on all 200k," said Jim Keating, director of the Blaine County Recreation District. "Or, just ski 200k. Those who hand us their totals at the end of the festival will be entered into a drawing for prizes."

The week will kick off on Jan. 30 with the family-friendly Ski the Rails and end with the 32-kilometer Boulder Mountain Tour, one of the premiere cross-country ski races in the nation.

Here's the schedule:

Jan. 30: Ski the Rails—Skiers are invited to ski at their own pace from Ketchum to Hailey, stopping to take partake in refreshments along the way. An après ski party at the Sun Valley Brewery will feature live music from Up the Creek and shopping specials.

Feb. 1: Nordic Night of Champions—A send-off celebration for local Nordic skiers who will be competing in the 2010 Olympic Games.

Feb. 2: Ski at Alturas Lake with après ski specials at Smiley Creek lodge. "We want to give people a chance to see the hidden treasure that's up there," said Tom Jones, who runs the lodge.

Feb. 3: Olympic skier John Morton will present a free slide show and book signing while telling stories of being in the Olympics at The Community Library. There'll be hot chocolate with peppermint schnapps.

The Sun Valley 5K Snowshoe Challenge will be held at noon on the White Cloud Trails at the Sun Valley Nordic Center. There

Ice climbers excited by arrival of wintry weather

By James Roh
Daily Herald

PROVO, Utah — This is the time of year when the temperature dips below freezing and the snow starts to blanket the ground. Aside from the occasional snowball fight and adventure to the ski slopes, most people associate the cold weather with wearing a heavy jacket and staying inside to keep warm. And the mere mention of ice results in heavy sighs from motorists fearing the worst.

But for Willis Knapp and Darren Knezek of Provo these telltale signs of winter indicate that it's only a matter of time before the once free-flowing springs in Provo Canyon begin to freeze and form massive sheets of vertical ice. From there, Knapp and Knezek dust off the pick axes and crampons in anticipation of a new ice climbing season.

"There's a lot of seasons where the snow will be terrible and the ice will be perfect," Knezek said. "So it gives you a whole other sport you can do. I think the positive aspect of ice climbing is you get to do something in the winter time when it's really cold and you might not want to do anything."

In the ice climbing circles, Utah is a sought-out destination. With several quality locations within close proximity, including the world-renowned Provo Canyon, it's no wonder that Knapp and Knezek picked up the sport more than a decade ago and are still going strong.

Similar to the summertime equivalent sport of rock climbing, the goal of ice climbing is to ascend a vertical wall, or face, to the top. Both sports require

Becoming a stronger paddler with the Vasa Kayak Ergometer

This winter, I have kicked my athletic training into high gear. In February, I am traveling to Chile to captain a team in the Wenger Patagonian Expedition Race, an ultra-endurance event through Tierra del Fuego. The multi-day race will include long treks, mountain bike segments, climbing, and sea kayaking in icy ocean waters at the tip of the South American continent.

It's a once-in-a-lifetime event. I want to be prepared.

To get serious about the kayaking sections in the race, for the past three months I have been sitting on a machine in my basement "paddling" for an hour at a stretch. The Kayak Ergometer, an esoteric exercise machine made by Vasa

Inc. of Essex Junction, Vt., has a paddle-like shaft to grip, a contoured seat, foot braces, and a flywheel drive that gives resistance with each pulled stroke.

The machine mimics the kayaking experience better than anything I have tried. My strengthened abs, shoulders and arms are testimony to the Ergometer's efficiency in whipping a body into paddling shape.

The Kayak Ergometer, priced a hefty $1,999 at www.vasatrainer.com, debuted in 2007 with foot braces and a bench seat. New for this winter, Vasa adds a kayak seat option. Called the K1 Swivel Seat, the new feature better matches the feel of being in a boat. I tested an early prototype; the final product comes to market on Feb. 1, a few days before I depart for Patagonia.

Using the Vasa unit now for a couple months, I have come to like the sound of

Bucks and Bulls banquet planned

Almost 200 racks have been submitted so far in this year's annual Buck and Bulls Contest at Sportsman's Warehouse in Twin Falls.

"We're running out of room," says store owner John Howard.

The contest is open for entries through Dec. 31.

So far 185 racks have been submitted, an increase over last year's 150 racks.

The Bucks and Bulls Banquet will be Jan. 2 at Radio Rondevo, 241 Main Ave. W., Twin Falls. Doors open at 5:30 p.m., dinner will be served at about 6:30.

Tickets to the banquet are $25 if purchased before Saturday, $30 after Saturday, and $40 at the door.

As is tradition, Eastman's Journal will participate. Dinner will be catered by the Snake River Grill.

"Banquet tickets are selling real fast," Howard says.

S.V. Nordic Center open on Christmas

Sun Valley Nordic Center will open for the season Christmas Day.

The Nordic Center will be fully operational offering private and group lessons (classical and skate), equipment and locker rental and retail sales. It is even rumored that Santa may be taking a tour of the trails.

Classical group lessons will begin at 10 a.m. daily and skate instruction starts at 2 pm. Private lessons may be arranged. Regular hours for the Nordic Center will be 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily.

In addition, a new Guided Historic Snowshoe Tour will begin at 2 p.m. each Saturday and Sunday.

The Sun Valley Club remains open daily serving lunch from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

For more information, including private lessons: 622-2250.

Hunters need to file harvest reports

Hunters are reminded to file their mandatory harvest reports early, which will save hassle for themselves and Idaho Department of Fish and Game officials.

All deer, elk and antelope hunters must complete and submit a report for each tag issued within 10 days of harvest or within 10 days of the close of the season for which their tag was valid.

The easiest way is to submit the harvest report card online at <http://fishandgame.idaho.gov>, and click on the logo below the photo. Or go to <https://www.idahohunt.com> and use your hunting license or tag number and the first four letters of your last name.

Submitting online is the surest way to have hunt information included and the only way to get confirmation that the report was received.

Reports also may be mailed to: Idaho Fish and Game, Hunter Harvest Reports, P.O. Box 70007, Boise, ID 83707-0107 or called in toll-free at 877-268-9365 or faxed to 775-423-0799.

Beware of cold-water dangers

Times-News

Water does not have to be near freezing to kill, it only has to be colder than a person to cause potentially fatal hypothermia.

Waters are cold now while waterfowl hunters enjoy the last few weeks of the seasons, and many anglers are still fishing.

Overloaded boats and failure to wear life jackets are leading reasons Idaho typically loses a couple of waterfowl hunters every year, according to the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation.

Cold water wicks body heat 25 times faster than air at that same temperature. Anyone who falls in has only a few minutes before the cold renders them numb and unable to swim.

Most boats float even when capsized or swamped, so get in or on the boat to get as far out of the water as possible. Wearing a life vest is a must. It will help preserve body heat and keeps even an unconscious person afloat. Get to shelter, change into dry clothing and warm up slowly.

Here are some tips to remember when using open boats during cold weather:

- Life jackets only work if they are worn. Most drowning victims could have survived if they had worn theirs. Idaho law requires a life jacket on board for every passenger, and a throwable personal flotation device is required in boats more than 16 feet long.

- Stay within the load limits shown on the boat's capacity plate. All vessels under 20 feet in length and built after Nov. 1, 1972, must have a capacity plate permanently attached and clearly visible. For boats that don't have a capacity plate, use this formula: boat length times width divided by 15 gives the number of passengers of about 150 pounds each. Distribute the load evenly and keep it low.
- In a canoe, each person should paddle on the opposite side at all times to maintain balance.
- Stay seated. Standing to shoot is not worth the risk of parting company with the boat. Sitting on the sides can also capsize the boat.

- If the boat capsizes on a large lake, it is better to sit on top of the boat than to swim more than 100 feet with a life jacket, or 50 feet without a life jacket. By swimming or treading water, a person will cool 35 percent faster than if remaining still.

• Do not swim unless there is absolutely no chance of rescue.

• Leave the booze at home. Alcohol makes a person more susceptible to hypothermia, interferes with their ability to swim and to make quick decisions in an accident.

• Do not be afraid to cancel the trip if the weather turns bad.

A New Year's Eve blue moon – or is it?

Ask most anyone what a "blue moon" is and they'll probably say it's the second full moon in a calendar month. But that definition stems from a half-century old error.

An article in the March, 1946 issue of "Sky & Telescope" magazine entitled "Once in a Blue Moon" gave us the modern definition. The author had referenced a 1943 article in the same publication, which mentioned that a blue moon occurs in a year with 13 full moons. The earlier article, derived from a 1937 Maine Farmers' Almanac, failed to define a blue moon explicitly, leaving the author of the 1946 article to guess, wrongly, that it was the second full moon in a calendar month. The Farmers' Almanac blue moon was an "extra" moon in a particular season. With 29.5 days between full moons, a year is 12.4 "phase months" long. So, while most years have 12 full moons (three each season), one in four will have 13.

In ancient times, each season's moons were named for activities taking place at the time. For example, autumn's moons were the harvest moon, the hunters' moon, and the beaver (trapping) moon.

In years with 13 moons, one season thus had a nameless moon, which became the blue moon. Under this definition, the blue moon necessarily preceded an equinox or solstice. (The next "true blue moon," if you'll pardon the term, will be next November.) The modern blue moon meme took hold after 1980, when it was repeated on the popular radio program "Star Date." It's since become so widespread that the erroneous definition has effectively supplanted the Farmers' Almanac version.

One week from today will be the second full moon of December. Whether you consider it a blue moon depends on whether you embrace the new or old definition.

Hunting, fishing seasons continue on through the holidays and beyond

Times-News

For hunters and anglers itching to get out in the field or to wet a line during the holiday season, several opportunities are available.

The pheasant season in Areas 1 and 3 is open through Dec. 31. The forest grouse season also is open statewide through Dec. 31. Seasons for bobwhite and California quail in Area 2 are open through Jan. 31. Chukar and grey partridge seasons are open statewide through Jan. 31 as well.

For upland game hunters, the cottontail season is open through Feb. 28, and snowshoe hares through March 31. There is no season on pygmy rabbits.

Waterfowl seasons are also open through the holidays – to Jan. 15, in Area 1, northern and eastern Idaho; and to Jan. 22 in Area 2, southwestern Idaho and Magic Valley.

Hunters age 16 and older must have a federal Migratory

Waterfowl Stamp, available at Idaho Department of Fish and Game offices, local post offices and some vendors and good through the end of the season.

Fall steelhead season remains open through Dec. 31. The spring steelhead season starts Jan. 1, but anglers will need a new steelhead permit and a 2010 fishing license.

Many rivers and streams are closed to other fishing, though some are open under winter fishing rules for certain species, such as whitefish and brook trout.

Most lakes and reservoirs as well as ditches and canals are open year round.

Some lakes and reservoirs already have enough ice for ice fishing.

Anyone planning to go hunting or fishing on or after New Year's Day must have a 2010 license.

ample amounts of physical endurance and intense concentration, but that is about where the similarities end. Rather than reach for rocks and cracks to hold on to, ice climbing requires the participant to slam a sharp pickax into the ice to hoist themselves up, thus creating their own route to the top. Meanwhile, the footing's stability is dependent on how hard the crampons, a metal cleat-like boot attachment, were kicked into the ice.

"If you haven't experienced it, it seems crazy," Knapp said. "I always thought people were crazy before I ever did it."

Knapp initially got his start after trying rock climbing with a friend in the early 1990s, despite being terribly afraid of heights.

"What drew me to it was facing that fear," Knapp said.

However, his fear of heights wasn't enough to stop him from taking the sport up as a hobby. Since becoming involved with rock climbing, Knapp had had his eye on the sport of ice climbing. Eventually, he got his chance to try it out.

"After one time, I was hooked," Knapp said. "I'd rather ice climb than anything."

Quarry, an indoor climbing gym located in Provo, and is active in several other sports. But ice climbing remains his top priority due to its in-the-moment attributes.

"When I'm leading ice is probably the only time in my life that I'm 100 percent focused," Knapp said. "Nothing else even exists other than exactly what I'm doing."

Similar to Knapp, Knezek began ice climbing following several years of rock climbing in his home state of Texas. After earning a music degree from Texas Tech, Knezek began looking for graduate schools in Utah. The fact that Utah is a Mecca for climbing was not a coincidence.

"It was between BYU and University of Utah just because the climbing was here," Knezek said.

Knezek got accepted to BYU where he studied music, and proceeded to rock climb in nearby Rock Canyon every day. Knezek hasn't stopped climbing since college, in fact, he's picked up even more styles of climbing, including ice climbing.

"I think the common misconception is that it's super, super dangerous and scary," Knezek said.

In fact, both Knezek and Knapp struggle to recall any ice climbing injuries that weren't flukes or extremely preventable. Knapp, also an avid skier, is convinced that driving to Sundance Ski Resort in Provo Canyon during the winter is more audacious than ice climbing.

"That's the most dangerous thing I do in the winter," Knapp said. "I think it's more dangerous than ice climbing."

the machine: Pull a stroke with the paddle shaft and you force air through the flywheel fan. The quiet noise and moving air conjure waves and natural movement on a lake.

The resistance is even throughout the whole stroke, making for an accurate substitute to pulling a paddle blade through water. There are varying levels of resistance to set, letting you simulate paddling downriver or upstream against a current.

A small digital monitor displays your time, distance, pace, and power output in watts. It can measure right and left arm force individually, letting you adjust technique if one side overpowers.

Though I have only used the Vasa machine in kayak mode, with the bench and different grips it can be configured as a training tool for swimming, XC ski poling, canoeing and other types of paddling. The K1 Swivel Seat, as the name implies, will swivel when you stroke. This is for K1 kayak race training. For sea-kayak training, the swivel can be locked with the seat set in a stationary position.

Overall, my criticisms are minimal. The price is high, and this is a niche product. Not everyone will want to jump on a Vasa machine night after night. The motion, like with any exercise machine, is repetitive, though I did not find it to be tedious. The foot brace works fine. But I would prefer it to be wider to better mimic how my feet fit inside a kayak hull. While training, I place my feet as wide as I can on the Vasa's brace.

In three months so far, the Vasa Kayak Ergometer has made me a significantly stronger paddler. I feel fit and ready for my big race in February, where we'll face hours of paddling in some of the most remote waters in the world. Patagonia here I come!

Wolf hunts and licenses

Question: "Since the Fish and Game Commission extended the wolf seasons through March 31, is the 2009 tag I purchased in November valid through March? My second question is if I harvest a wolf or mountain lion in December 2009, can I harvest another one in January 2010?"

Answer: No and Yes. To begin with your first question, all personal hunting and fishing licenses and game tags are only valid for the calendar year in which they were purchased. This means you must purchase your new hunting license and big-game tags before you hunt any hunting seasons in 2010.

You may be confused on your next question with the old regulations for mountain lion hunting. Those regulations were changed in 2001.

Current hunting seasons for many big and small game species begin in the fall of one year and run into the spring of the following year. Some small game hunting seasons running into the New Year include all waterfowl, partridge and cottontail rabbits. Hunting seasons for wolves, mountain lions and black bears also begin during the fall of one year and extend into the late winter or spring of next year.

The old regulations prior to 2001 restricted hunters to harvest to one animal either during a calendar year or between Sept. 1 and March 31. During the 2001 hunting season this rule was changed to one animal per calendar year.

This change effectively allows a mountain lion or wolf to be harvested on Dec. 31 of one year, and a second one could be harvested on Jan. 1 of the next year. A hunter doing this would then not be allowed to hunt or harvest during the fall because of the prior spring harvest. His next hunting opportunity for that species would be January the following year.

The answer to your last question is, yes you may harvest a wolf, mountain lion or black bear in the fall of one year and another one the spring of the next year as long as it was within the prescribed harvest season and you possess the proper licenses and tags.

Sportsmen and women are reminded to purchase their new hunting and fishing licenses before the New Year. A new hunting or fishing license makes a great Christmas gift!

A very deer friend

By Karen Nelson
The Sun Herald

GULFPORT, Miss. — Wayne Waits has just about quit hunting white-tailed deer, though he used to love the sport — the excitement and logistics of running deer with dogs along Harrison and Jackson county back roads.

Things have changed. Now he's more likely to watch them in his yard. He puts out food this time of year and has quite a following. An hour before dusk, they'll come out of the woods, a little skittish, with the one he raised leading the way.

He still likes to hunt in the mountains of Colorado for elk and mule deer. His den is a testament to that, with the busts and antlers looming over the couch.

It was into that home that he and his wife, Candy, brought the little white-tailed deer they found by the side of a dirt road near Wiggins. That was more than five years ago.

She was so young her umbilical cord was still attached.

They tried to give her to the Forest Service, but the rangers said she would just be put down.

He brought her home and made a bed for her in the closet off the master bathroom. And she grew.

She grew to love the food they ate.

She'd eat steak if Candy cooked it, or even sardines when Waits declared there was no way she would like them.

He called her Lady-girl and she lived in the house with them, potty-trained in her own way, until she lost her fawn spots and began to get possessive of Waits' attention.

By that time, she was the size of a large dog.

Waits knew it was time for Lady-girl to go when she jumped into bed with him one night while he was watching TV and began kicking his wife.

When he first turned the deer loose, she would go outside for a few hours and come back in to sleep in her closet.

Then she'd stay gone longer and longer, until she made the woods her home.

Now, her routine is to stay gone in the spring and come back for visits during the summer, fall and winter.

"About the time you think a coyote has caught her or someone shot her, she shows up at the back door," Waits said.

"Everyone said she'd go wild. They said, 'You'll never see her again!' Well, I've got news for them, I see her regularly," he said.

She has had at least four babies over the years.

When she comes to visit with them, Waits can go outside and pet her, but the babies won't let him. They back off into the woods.

And if he ever happens upon Lady-girl in the wild, it's as if they'd never met.

"She won't fool with anybody out there, not even me," he said. "I can call her, but off she'll go."

She leaves in the early spring and comes back pregnant. She'll let him feel her stomach.

"I can feel the baby kicking in there," he said. Waits will check her milk bags. Then she disappears for a time and comes back with the baby.

Waits believes she had twins this year.

In late August, when her babies were about two weeks old, Waits saw tracks in his yard, the size of his fingernail.

Now they're half-grown.

One of them is a female and still comes around with her mother. The other one and others in years past, he believes, have been bucks, because Lady-girl runs them off after a period of time. He believes the deer group that comes to his yard is matriarchal, and he's hoping this new little female will fit in and stay with the group.

In the spring, Waits might not see Lady-girl for two or three months.

"A few weeks before she has her baby, she's here every day," he said.

Then, when she's had the baby, she comes every day or two.

"She's something else," he said.

Lady-girl wears a red fluorescent collar year-round, but in the fall, it's particularly important so neighbors and hunters in the area recognize her and don't shoot her, he said.

Waits gets calls during hunting season, which is open now.

"A neighbor will call to report he saw Lady-girl running with her baby," he said.

WORTH A FAIR CHASE

Hunting geese in Midwest in subzero temperatures a special occasion

By Dennis Anderson
Star Tribune (Minneapolis)

MINNEAPOLIS — Christmas is best celebrated with a goose in the oven, and Wendell Diller and I like them as fresh as possible. Any goose in the freezer is a good goose. But one that has been fattened by the long autumn and roasted to moist perfection on a cold December evening steadies the nerves as few holiday meals can.

Friday morning, I was in the barn early, long before dawn, leaning into the chores like a hired hand. The thermometer registered 9 degrees below zero, and the old gelding nickered ruefully when I scooped grain from a bucket. The dogs were next; I walked and fed them. Then I pulled a pair of waders from the garage, loaded a heavy duffel into the truck and drove off, tires squeaking against the snow.

Wendell drives a '78 Volare wagon, heavy on the Bondo, with a new blue paint job courtesy a couple dozen spray cans from Wal-Mart. The rig doesn't look like much and its slant-6 is staring hard at 375,000 miles. But Wendell is an engineer and inventor and when I arrived, the old buggy, as usual, was purring like a kitten in the hand.

"Good morning," I said. "It's cold," Wendell said. "Yes, it is," I said.

At the shoreline of the frozen backwater we would hunt we unloaded an aluminum canoe, a dozen decoys and one shotgun, its barrel 7 feet long. This last is one of Wendell's inventions, and the result is a nearly silent discharge — the better on a day like Friday not to overly disturb geese with loud reports.

"You can hunt today," Wendell said, explaining the lone scattergun. "I'll shoot pictures."

Attempting to land on ice isn't easy for any winged creature, no matter how often they have accomplished the feat. Here a honker puts its feet down as it approaches a small patch of open water in backwaters along the Minnesota-Wisconsin border.

Wendell has watched me take photos for so long on these hunts that he has become a shutterbug himself. A few years ago on the Internet he found himself a lovely wife, Galina, who at the time was living in Siberia. You can't make this stuff up, and after a long-distance romance, Galina is now a Minnesotan.

"Galina," Wendell said, "wants me to take lots of pictures."

"Images," I said. "Not pictures?"

"Right," Wendell said. "You shoot the birds."

"I'll shoot pictures."

We loaded the decoys and gun into the canoe and lifted it onto a homemade sled. What we were about to do isn't dangerous except when the ice gives way. That's when the waders come in handy. And life jackets. Also, the canoe itself has an inner-tube outrigger attached to one side to keep it from tipping in the event we break through and have to pull ourselves aboard.

The equipment is specialized and time-tested, absent which (friendly suggestion to follow) no one should attempt to replicate our little adventure.

The ice was solid. But we did occasionally encounter slush, which made the pulling difficult and the going slow. We make this trip every December, usually multiple times, and no two outings are alike. Sometimes we walk a mile or more on good ice before we find open water. Other times, we break through a few hundred yards from shore, climb into the canoe and paddle.

On Friday we walked a long way to the edge of a pool of steaming water not much larger than a handball court. On the water were a gaggle of Canada geese and a bevy of trumpeter swans. On days this cold, these birds often fly late, well after sunrise, if they fly at all. Now, as we approached, they arose in unison, honking and trumpeting, gaining altitude slowly as they struggled to put distance between themselves and Wendell and me.

"They'll be back," Wendell said.

I set out decoys at the edge of the open water while Wendell reached for his camera. Galena talks frequently over the Internet to her relatives in Russia and also sends photos. A few snapshots from this little trip, I figured, and even motherland skeptics should be convinced Americans won't be easily denied when the subject is protein for the pot.

In a short while, a lone goose overflowed us and I lobbed a single volley toward it with the long gun. These were special sub-sonic loads we were shooting, and I led the goose too far. That was OK. If history repeated itself, soon we would be covered up in birds as they circled to land again in the icy water.

The first goose to return was so much fun to photograph I forgot to shoot it. It landed not in the pond but on the ice, skidding about 5 yards before somersaulting to a stop.

Then it waddled alongside one of our decoys and lay down.

"I'm not going to shoot that goose," I said.

"The element of fair chase does seem absent, doesn't it?" Wendell said.

For a couple of hours our friend the goofy honker maintained its position.

In the end we shooed it away.

The morning seemed to grow no warmer as the sun angled higher in the sky. A slight wind twisted across the ice, and as it did we talked about all the old subjects, including our friend, Don (Duckman) Helmeke.

When Don was alive, sometimes he, Wendell and I would hunt geese in the morning, after which Don and Wendell, roommates at the time, would cruise the Internet for Russian women, comparing notes about who might make a good mate.

"Rest in peace, Don," I said.

Except for a few swans, no geese returned.

By noon we loaded up the canoe and again pulled it atop the ice, toward shore.

With the temperature a few degrees below zero, Wendell Diller, of Oakdale, Minnesota, pulls a canoe filled with goose decoys.

Filer students make handcrafted cards for the homebound

By John E. Swayze
 Times-News correspondent

FILER — Christmas can be a lonely time for anyone.

Thanks to a contest sponsored by Filer Middle School's special education department, the holiday spirit may have a chance to warm the hearts of people in Filer and Twin Falls who are homebound or won't have family around to share in the season's joy.

On the morning of Dec. 18, in anticipation of a long-awaited two-week vacation, Filer Middle School's sixth- through eighth-grade student body used their first period to create 286 cards containing unique artwork and personal greetings.

Connie Klaas' eighth-grade English class took up the call by contributing cards with reindeer themes that will be sent to Heritage Assisted Living Center in Twin Falls. Cards designed by students in other classes will be distributed by Filer Senior Haven's mobile meals program.

"I know we hear a lot of bad things about what kids do but sometimes we just have to give them an outlet to do things that are positive in the community," Klaas said. "My own students, well over 120 kids in all of my classes, got right at it and I read some really neat things that they wrote on the back."

The cards were also entered into a contest, with cards judged on creativity, quality of drawing and their message. Each of the nine winning artists were given a Filer Wildcats T-shirt and a voucher for free ice cream.

For the students involved, however, the project was about more than winning a T-shirt and a treat.

"What it means is the chance to give other people a nice holiday and show them that somebody cares," said one of the contest winners, eighth-grader McKenzie Schroeder.

Chelation inappropriate for treatment of heart disease

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am a 76-year-old male who has been diagnosed with blocked coronary arteries. One vessel is 40 percent to 59 percent blocked, and another is 60 percent to 70 percent occluded, according to my last echocardiogram. At present, I am taking Crestor, Cholest Off twice daily, niacin 500 milligrams twice daily and 1,200 milligrams fish oil twice daily.

I've read on the Internet about intravenous or oral EDTA chelation. It states that it is effective 80 percent in cleansing the arteries. What is your opinion of chelation? Would you advise me to try the treatment? I am supposed to return in six months for another examination.

ASK DR. GOTT
Dr. Peter Gott

Thank you for answering my letter.

DEAR READER: EDTA chelation therapy is a series of intravenous infusions that contain disodium EDTA, along with a variety of other substances. Proponents claim the process is effective against heart disease and is purported to be a valid alternative to coronary-artery-bypass procedures. The problem here is that there is absolutely no scientific evidence to support the claim. It is important to note that neither the American Heart Association nor the Food and Drug Administration recommend the process for any form of heart disease.

Having stated this, I will now answer your question: no. I cannot in clear conscience advise you to consider the process. You have only one heart, and you owe it to yourself to be under the care of a reputable cardiologist whom you can trust. Unless standards have changed, you are not a candidate for bypass surgery at this time. Modify your diet, exercise as much as possible under physician direction, and take any appropriate prescription medication. I see no harm in continuing your Crestor and the over-the-counters you are presently taking.

I should also note that chelation is a valid medical treatment for heavy-metal poisoning. The EDTA binds with the metals, thus removing them from the body. Under these circumstances, it can be a lifesaving medical procedure.

To provide related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Coronary Artery Disease." Other readers who would like a copy should send a self-addressed stamped No. 10 envelope and a $2 check or money order to Newsletter, P.O. Box 167, Wickliffe, OH 44092. Be sure to mention the title.

DEAR DR. GOTT: Both of my great toes are rather sore and have a hard lump midway on the inside near the first toe. I read your articles faithfully, but must have missed the one on ingrown toenails. I've always tried to keep my toenails cut straight across, but I need some help at this point.

DEAR READER: I am not sure from your brief description that I can identify your problem. Perhaps the lumps are ingrown toenails, but they could also be warts or abnormal growths. Perhaps your bumps are signs of joint damage owing to arthritis. What has me puzzled is that you indicate you have these lesions bilaterally.

Make an appointment with your primary-care physician, who will examine you and then determine what they might be, followed by what the best approach for treatment is. If you fail to get a satisfactory answer, request a referral to a podiatrist or orthopedic foot specialist.

To provide related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Medical Specialists." Other readers who would like a copy should send a self-addressed stamped No. 10 envelope and a $2 to Newsletter, P.O. Box 167, Wickliffe, OH 44092. Be sure to mention the title.

Panic – but no deaths – in jet accident in Jamaica

By Ben Fox and Howard Campbell
Associated Press writers

KINGSTON, Jamaica – Passengers on American Airlines Flight 331 had endured the crowded airports and delays of holiday travel, and were moments from their Caribbean destination. Suddenly, everything seemed to spin out of control.

Touching down Tuesday night in a fierce rain, the Boeing 737-800 slammed into the runway of Kingston's Norman Manley International Airport. The aircraft skidded to a halt at the edge of the sea, leaving battered and bruised passengers screaming in panic as the smell of jet fuel spread through the darkened cabin, which had cracked open in places.

"I just wanted to get the hell out of there, as far as I could, because I could smell the fumes, and I knew that if it blew, it could be a pretty big fireball," said Gary Wehrwein, 67, who was traveling with his wife, Pilar Abaurrea, from Keene, New Hampshire.

All 154 people aboard survived, with 92 taken to hospitals and 13 admitted, but none of the injuries was considered to be life-threatening, said Jamaican Information Minister Daryl Vaz. One woman had surgery for a broken nose and cuts to her face.

State Department spokesman P.J. Crowley said 76 of the passengers were Americans.

The plane came to a stop on the sandy edge of an airport access road, and Transport Minister Mike Henry described it as a "Christmas miracle."

"If the plane was going faster, it would have gone into the sea," Henry said.

In daylight Wednesday, as soldiers stood around the wrecked jet, the damage was clear: The fuselage was cracked open, its left main landing gear had collapsed, and its nose was crushed and pointing off toward the sea.

Members of the U.S. National Transportation

Safety Board were assisting an investigation led by Jamaica's government, but there was no immediate explanation for what caused the plane to overshoot the runway. The "black box" flight data recorder from the plane was retrieved and will be taken to the NTSB laboratory in Washington.

Some aviation experts speculated the pilot was descending too fast for the conditions.

Investigators were expected to analyze, among other things, whether the plane should have been landing in such bad weather, said American spokesman Tim Smith in Fort Worth, Texas, although he added that other planes had landed safely in the heavy rain.

"At this point, it's now going to be in the hands of the NTSB and the FAA, plus any Jamaican government authorities that may be involved, and to start and sort of backtrack and see what happened and how it can be prevented from happening again," Smith said.

Health care bill on brink of Senate passage

By David Espo
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON – Democrats pushed sweeping health care legislation to the brink of Senate passage Wednesday, crushing a year-end Republican filibuster against President Obama's call to remake the nation's health care system.

The 60-39 vote marked the third time in as many days Democrats have posted a supermajority needed to advance the legislation. Final passage, set for about dawn on Thursday, was a certainty, and will clear the way for talks with the House on a final compromise. Those negotiations likely will stretch into February.

The Senate has met for 24 consecutive days to debate the legislation, the second-longest such stretch in history, and Democrats held a celebratory press conference.

"We stand on the doorstep of history," said Majority Leader Harry Reid of Nevada, who painstakingly pieced together the bill – and the now-controversial deals with wavering lawmakers that made its passage possible.

The measure would extend coverage to an estimated 31 million who lack it, while banning the insurance industry from denying benefits or charging higher premiums on the basis of pre-existing medical conditions. The Congressional Budget Office predicts the bill will reduce deficits by $130 billion over the next 10 years, an estimate that assumes lawmakers carry through on hundreds of billions of dollars in planned cuts to insurance companies and doctors, hospitals and others who treat Medicare patients.

Obama has also said he wants legislation that slows the rate of growth in medical spending nationwide, but the CBO said it has not determined whether that is the case with the bill.

Unlike the House, the Senate measure omits a government-run insurance option, which liberals favored to apply pressure on private insurers but Democratic moderates opposed as an unwarranted federal intrusion into the health care system.

In an interview with PBS, Obama signaled he will sign a bill even if it lacks the provision.

"Would I like one of those options to be the public option? Yes. Do I think that it makes sense, as some have argued, that, without the public option, we dump all these other extraordinary reforms and we say to the 30 million people who don't have coverage, 'You know, sorry. We didn't get exactly what we wanted?' I don't think that makes sense."

Guantanamo prison may have to stay open until 2011

By Larry Margasak
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON – President Obama's commitment to close the U.S. detention center at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, by next month may be delayed until 2011 because it will take months for the government to buy an Illinois prison and upgrade it to hold suspected terrorists.

The drawn-out construction timetable shows the political risk of Obama's pledge, a delay that could even be extended by congressional opposition to funding the purchase and upgrades for the Thomson Correctional Center, an underused state facility about 150 miles west of Chicago.

Lawmakers in both parties have been wary of bringing detainees to the United States. Attorney General Eric Holder already has decided that self-declared 9/11 mastermind Khalid Sheikh Mohammed and four others will be tried in federal court in New York City.

In the Senate, a spokesman for Republican leader Mitch McConnell promised that the GOP would use delaying tactics to prevent funding the Illinois facility and added that he expected support from Democrats.

"I think there will be bipartisan opposition" to bringing detainees to Illinois, Donald Stewart said.

Congress also needs to change a law prohibiting detention in the U.S. of detainees who are not awaiting trial.

The prison in rural western Illinois may not be purchased from the state until March and will need up to 10 months of construction, said Joe Shoemaker, spokesman for Sen. Dick Durbin, D-Ill.

AROUND THE WORLD

BRAZIL Lawyer's aide: Boy given to U.S. father

RIO DE JANEIRO – A Brazilian family has decided to end its legal fight for custody of a 9-year-old boy and will obey a court order to turn him over to his U.S. father, an aide to the family's lawyer said Wednesday.

"It is certain the family will not pursue any more legal channels," the aide to lawyer Sergio Tostes said, speaking on condition of anonymity because she wasn't authorized to discuss the matter.

Tostes, reached by telephone, referred inquiries to his office.

The decision ends a five-year legal fight by David Goldman to regain custody of his son, Sean.

Earlier Wednesday, a federal court in Rio ordered the family to relinquish Sean to Goldman by 6 a.m. EST Thursday.

WASHINGTON Census: Economy caused dramatic growth slowdown

Many of the states in the South and West that boasted the country's highest growth rates are now experiencing a dramatic slowdown because of the recession, the Census Bureau reported Wednesday. The magnet states of Florida and Nevada are seeing more people leave than move in – a reversal from just a year or two ago.

Texas had the biggest population leap, with 478,000 more people living there in the year that ended July 1. Its growth rate of 2 percent last year was marginally lower than Wyoming and Utah, which had the top growth rates in the country but are much smaller states.

The state population numbers released Wednesday reflect how the weak economy and the housing bust have forced many people to stay put instead of moving. Growth rates were down significantly in several states, including Idaho, Arizona, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia. Conversely, states such as California, Massachusetts, New Jersey and New York showed a continued upswing after years in decline in the first half of the decade.

MEXICO Prosecutor: Marine's family killed by cartel

VILLAHERMOSA – Family members of a fallen marine hailed as a drug-war hero were slain by a gang allied with a top drug lord in retaliation for the cartel leader's death, a state official said Wednesday.

Four people who are believed to be informants and aides for the Zeta gang were detained in the deaths of the mother, two siblings and aunt of Melquisedet Angulo, Tabasco state Attorney General Rafael Gonzalez said.

Angulo was the only marine who died in a Dec. 16 raid that killed drug lord Arturo Beltran Leyva.

The Zetas, former military elite-turned-hit men, have allied with the Beltran Leyva cartel in recent years.

DELAWARE More than 100 kids could be victims of pediatrician

GEORGETOWN – A pediatrician charged with sexually abusing his patients likely attacked more than 100 children at an office he had decked out with a merry-go-round and a ferris wheel, a state official said Wednesday.

The volume of evidence seized from Dr. Earl Bradley's practice and home, including video tapes and computer files, makes it difficult to estimate the number of victims, said Alexis Slutsky, a deputy attorney general assigned to the state's Child Predator Task Force.

"I'm comfortable in saying probably well over 100 potential victims," she said at a news conference with Attorney General Beau Biden and other law enforcement officials.

Bradley, 56, was arrested last week and is being held in prison on $2.9 million bond.

NEW YORK Sandwich shop opens at ground zero

Fresh bread will soon be baking high above ground zero.

The new World Trade Center got its first restaurant Wednesday – a sandwich shop at the top of the Freedom Tower under construction.

As the sun rose over the site of the Sept. 11 attack, a lift on a hydraulic jack hoisted the Subway restaurant up the signature skyscraper that marks the rebirth of the trade center's 16 acres. ### LOS ANGELES Study: Swine flu poses a threat to new moms

Swine flu is not only dangerous to pregnant women, but it's a threat to new mothers too, the first study to document this risk shows.

An analysis of pregnant women and new mothers who were hospitalized with swine flu in California found that those who had a baby in the previous two weeks were at higher risk of severe flu complications.

The swine flu threat to pregnant women has been well-documented, and public health officials urged them to get vaccinated. Previous research showed expectant mothers infected with the virus are more likely to be hospitalized and face a greater risk of death than the general population.

The new report, released Wednesday by the New England Journal of Medicine, is the first to look at the risk to women who recently gave birth and highlights "the continued high risk immediately after pregnancy," the researchers wrote.

Commuter train hits truck in accident

A Metrolink commuter train struck a pickup truck that flew into its path after crashing into a car which had stopped for a passing ambulance early Wednesday, authorities said. Six people were treated for injuries, including two in critical condition.

The chain-reaction crash occurred around 7 a.m. in the eastern San Fernando Valley where train tracks parallel a major road.

Four people in the two vehicles were injured and two were taken to hospitals in critical condition, including a 2-year-old boy, said fire Capt. Steve Ruda. The child, his mother and a man were in one of the vehicles, while a 40-year-old man, also in critical condition, was in the truck, he said.

Eight of the 39 passengers aboard the train complained of injuries, but only two were taken to hospitals for treatment of minor injuries, authorities said.

Egypt Bin Laden daughter hides in Saudi embassy in Iran

CAIRO – A daughter of al-Qaida leader Osama bin Laden has taken refuge in the Saudi Embassy in Tehran after eluding guards who have held her, her sister and four brothers under house arrest for eight years, a Saudi-owned newspaper reported Wednesday.

It has long been believed that Iran has held in custody a number of bin Laden's children since they fled Afghanistan following the U.S.-led invasion of that country in 2001 – most notably Saad and Hamza bin Laden, who are thought to have held positions in al-Qaida.

This year, U.S. officials said Saad bin Laden may have been killed by a U.S. airstrike in Pakistan, where they said he may have fled after being freed from Iran, but they could not confirm the information.

But Omar bin Laden, another son who lives abroad, told the Ashraq Al-Awsat newspaper that Eman told relatives in a call from the embassy that 29-year-old Saad and four other brothers were still being held in Iran.

Lloyd William Smith, 49, of Twin Falls, passed away Monday, Dec. 21, 2009, at University of Utah Medical Center in Salt Lake City, Utah.

shows were an obsession to Lloyd; these were his favorite pastimes.

He was born Jan. 27, 1960, in Twin Falls, Idaho, the son of Homer and Dorothy Smith. He attended high school in Twin Falls and married the love of his life, Joyce Holland, on Feb. 5, 1982, in Twin Falls.

He had a great talent for woodworking, working for Dandy Wood Water Beds and then J.C. Anderson Cabinet Shop before starting his own business, Mountain States Industries in 1985. Lloyd had a love for making things look good; he spent many hours restoring his Jeep and Ford Mustang. He was at his best in the outdoors, where he loved dirt biking, camping and was an avid hunter and fisherman. Family was important to Lloyd; he loved being with his children and spending countless hours with his grandchildren. He was a big kid himself, so being with grandchildren was second nature. # Wife: Husband was troubled before murder

By Sven Berg
Post Register

IDAHO FALLS — The lives of Jack Purcell and Keith Matthias appeared headed in radically different directions in the months before Matthias killed Purcell on Friday night and turned his gun on himself just minutes later, friends and family of the men said Monday.

To much of the outside world, Matthias, a math teacher at Idaho Falls High School and father of three children, seemed no different than any other math teacher. But in reality, his life was spiraling out of control, his wife, Jennifer Matthias, said.

The family was facing mounting debt, with no way to pay bills. The Matthias' marriage, long strained, was on the verge of collapse. Jennifer Matthias had begun seeing Purcell romantically within the previous two weeks, an affair she told her husband about just hours before the shootings.

"Keith was angry. He was depressed. He was not a happy person," said Jennifer Matthias, who watched through a rearview mirror as her husband gunned down Purcell in the Wal-mart parking lot. "He was a depressed person who had talked about suicide before."

The day before he killed Purcell and himself, Keith Matthias filled a prescription for a series of anti-anxiety drugs, including Xanax, Jennifer Matthias said.

As a teacher in Manatee County, Fla., Keith Matthias was once accused by a student of sexual harassment, she said. The investigation was dropped, she said, but the incident led to the Matthias' move to Idaho. Idaho Falls School District 91 Superintendent George Boland said the event did not surface in background checks.

Unlike Keith Matthias, Purcell's flaws were known to judges, lawyers and penal systems across the West. He had a lengthy criminal record of violence, theft and drug convictions in at least three Western states, including Idaho. He had lived in prisons for about half of the past 15 years.

But those who knew Purcell told of a man who had dealt with his demons and put his life back on track. Two years ago, Purcell began working for Johnson Bros. in Idaho Falls through the state's prisoner work-release program. He was well-liked and respected by fellow workers. They said he had moved past his old ways and was living a healthy, productive life.

"He was one of the few that didn't make excuses for his past," said Max Bennett, one of Purcell's supervisors at Johnson Bros.

Javier Tavera, who worked beside Purcell nearly every day and was perhaps Purcell's best friend, said Purcell recently told him he was happier than he'd ever been.

"To have something steady in his life was more valuable than anything he'd had in the past," Tavera said.

Jennifer Matthias said she had only recently learned of Purcell's past. She met him in April at a local health club, but for months their relationship was nothing more than a "very casual, passer-by, 'Hi, how are you?'" she said.

The two became romantically involved within the past two weeks as her marital problems worsened, she said.

"Jack was a support for me with some things that were going on with Keith and me," she said.

During their lunch break on the day of the shootings, Jennifer and Keith Matthias met at their home in Idaho Falls and discussed their marriage. They agreed to separate and see other people, she said. It was then that Jennifer Matthias told her husband about her relationship with Purcell, she said.

"Everybody knew the story," she said. "Nobody was kept in the dark. There was no secret affair."

At the time, Keith Matthias seemed to accept the agreement, she said. They agreed to meet at their home for dinner that night, after which she planned to visit Purcell to ask him whether he wanted to continue as a part of her life as a single mother of three. Keith Matthias did not object to the meeting, she said.

Teen burned in attack celebrates his first night out of hospital

By Ihosavani Rodriguez and Rachel Hatzipanagos
Sun Sentinel

MIAMI — On his first night out of the hospital since he survived being set on fire two months ago, Michael Brewer watched a movie while lounging on a couch and eating a pizza snack, his mother said Wednesday.

"We got our Christmas last night when he came home from the hospital," Valerie Brewer said during a news conference at Jackson Memorial Hospital. Her son, who was burned on more than two-thirds of his body in the Oct. 12 attack in Deerfield Beach, Fla., was discharged from the hospital's burn center Tuesday afternoon.

Brewer is staying at a house his mother described as a "safe place." She would not give the location.

Three teens have been charged as adults with attempted murder for allegedly surrounding Brewer, dousing him with rubbing alcohol, and lighting him on fire.

Valerie Brewer said her family plans to stay in South Florida, but will not remain in their old neighborhood, where the attack occurred and relatives of the accused boys live.

Michael, 15, doesn't want to return, she said.

"He doesn't feel safe going back home," Valerie Brewer said. "He does fear for his life going back there."

She said her son doesn't talk to her about the incident because he doesn't want to upset her. But he is seeing a therapist and probably will have to keep talking to one for the rest of his life, she said.

Michael uses a broomstick for balance to walk around, his mother said. She also described the pain her son goes through when he showers, which he did Tuesday night.

He ate a pizza-flavored

Lunchable snack pack and watched a cartoon movie; she didn't remember the name.

Appearing on national TV before the news conference, she said she has no opinion on whether the teens accused of setting her son on fire should be tried as adults. Supporters of one of the suspects have asked prosecutors to reconsider their decision to move the case out of the juvenile justice system. The three suspects face second-degree attempted murder charges, which carry a maximum 30 year prison term.

Instead, she said she's focused on her son's recovery, calling him her hero.

"We thought he would be at the hospital for a year," Brewer said on the "CBS Early Show." "This is a Christmas miracle."

It is not clear how the burns will affect the boy as an adult, said Dr. Louis Pizano on the NBC "Today" show. He must undergo physical therapy five days a week and be constantly monitored for any possible infections.

Vaccine means more holiday hugs, fewer bugs

By Alicia Chang
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — More hugs, fewer bugs. Holiday visits have become safer for grandparents thanks to a childhood vaccine that has dramatically curbed infections spread by kids, a new study finds.

For years, serious bacterial infections spiked among older adults around Christmas and New Year's, presumably because of contact with germy children. However, only one such spike has occurred since 2000, when the vaccine, Prevnar, came on the market, researchers report.

The vaccine is advised for children under 2. It fights common types of strep bacteria that cause illnesses ranging from mild ear infections to severe pneumonia and meningitis.

The vaccine has done "a terrific job of preventing transmission from children to adults not only around the holidays, but during other times of the year as well," said Dr. Matthew Moore of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Moore was part of the new research, reported in a letter to the editor in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

Scientists studied illness patterns between 1995 and 2006. Infections surged among older adults every year during the holidays before the vaccine was available. Scientists suspected the increase came from contact with contagious kids during family gatherings. Women were most at risk, possibly because they were around kids more.

Infections, though, tapered off after the vaccine came out in 2000. The only exception was during the 2004-2005 holiday season; it's unclear why.

Many people carry the bacteria in their nose and throat without becoming sick. The illness is spread by direct contact with an infected person. Symptoms can include fever, chills, headache or ear pain.

Prevnar is the world's top-selling vaccine. It's made by Wyeth, which was acquired by Pfizer Inc. this year. The vaccine protects against seven of the most common strains of strep bacteria. A new version that defends against six additional strains is awaiting government approval.

Different paths

Idaho State RB Skylar 'Poke' Morgan

As teammates at Minico High School, Dane Broadhead and Skylar Morgan led the Spartans to a 16-3 record and won two Great Basin Conference West championships.

With the help of their teammates, the pair also re-wrote the Minico record books — Broadhead breaking passing records and Morgan shattering the rushing marks.

Since graduation — Broadhead in 2008 and Morgan in 2009 — the former Spartans parted ways and started down different paths in their college football careers.

Morgan began his freshman season at Idaho State University as a redshirt, but injuries to running backs ahead of him on the depth chart presented Morgan with an opportunity to play. He was ready. "If somebody went down, I knew (the coaches) were going to pull my redshirt, so I studied my playbook and made sure I knew everything that was going on," Morgan said. "I got the opportunity and I just tried to go out and do my best."

Morgan played in the Bengals' final eight games, carrying the ball 29 times for 74 yards and a touchdown. He also caught nine passes for 69 yards.

Those numbers are meager compared to what Morgan put up in high school but not bad for a young freshman who played the final seven games with three fractured ribs.

"Physically, I wasn't up to par, but my mental part of the game I was (prepared)," Morgan said. "It kind of humbled me a bit, where I knew I needed to work a little harder."

Morgan has mixed feelings about the season. He's happy to contribute and get playing time as freshman, but he's disappointed with the Bengals' 1-10 finish.

"It was great to get experience and stuff, but overall the season, as a team, wasn't as I expected it was going to go," Morgan said. "But we saw positive stuff toward the end of the season, and we don't graduate very many, so hopefully we can build on that."

From Pocatello, head north 320 miles to Helena, Mont., where Carroll College's football team enjoyed a vastly different season. The Fighting Saints finished 13-1 and came within one touchdown of a berth in the NAIA national championship. Lindenwood beat Carroll 42-35 in the semifinals.

Broadhead, however, watched most games from the sideline.

Last year, Carroll starting quarterback Gary Wagner suffered a season-ending injury, leaving Broadhead, a freshman, to step in. Despite going 10-0 as a starter, a rehabilitated Wagner returned Broadhead to his backup role in his sophomore season.

He completed 20 of 27 passes for 203 yards and three touchdowns in limited action. It's a far cry from the 1,562 yards and 17 TDs he passed for as a starter last season. But Broadhead has a positive attitude about taking a back seat.

"It was a little different, but I think I made the adjustment well," Broadhead said. "I got some

TCU's Patterson is AP Coach of the Year

By Ralph D. Russo
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Gary Patterson guided TCU to its best season in 70 years on the way to becoming the first Associated Press Coach of the Year from outside the six conferences with automatic BCS bids.

Patterson led the Horned Frogs to a perfect regular season, their second Mountain West Conference title, their first BCS appearance and even had them vying for a spot in the national championship game.

"I'm really kind of humbled by the whole thing," Patterson said in a telephone interview. "The best way I know how to deal with it is to put my nose down and keep getting ready for Boise."

No. 3 TCU plays No. 6 Boise State (13-0) in the Fiesta Bowl on Jan. 4.

In a close vote released Wednesday, Patterson received 21 votes from the AP college football poll panel to edge Brian Kelly. The former Cincinnati coach, now with Notre

SAN DIEGO — Jordan Wynn threw for a career-high 338 yards and three touchdowns to rally No. 23 Utah from an early two-touchdown deficit to a 37-27 victory over California in the Poinsettia Bowl on Wednesday night.

The Utes scored 27 straight points to win their ninth straight bowl game, the longest current streak in the country. The Golden Bears, in a bowl game for the school-record seventh straight year, had their four-game postseason winning streak snapped.

Wynn, a true freshman, improved to 3-0 at Qualcomm Stadium, including two section championships while the starter at suburban Oceanside High. He graduated last December and enrolled at Utah in January, allowing him to participate in spring ball.

Wynn completed 26 of 36 passes and improved to 3-2 as the Utes' starter.

Utah's defense came up big, too. The Utes sacked Cal's Kevin Riley five times and intercepted him twice, with linebacker Stevenson Sylvester returning a tipped pass 27 yards for a touchdown late in the game. Riley also lost a fumble.

Shane Vereen, who scored twice, was the seventh Cal back to gain more than 100 yards in a bowl, finishing with 122 yards on 20 carries.

Utah wide receiver Jereme Brooks is lifted in the air after his touchdown reception against California during the second quarter of the Poinsettia Bowl Wednesday in San Diego.

Utah (10-3) looked overmatched after Cal (8-5) scored twice in 11 seconds midway through the first quarter. Vereen scored on a 36-yard run and Eddie Young intercepted Wynn on the first play of Utah's next drive and returned it 31 yards for a score.

After that it was all Utah, which a year ago beat Alabama in the Sugar Bowl.

Steroids' shadow over MLB is AP Sports Story of the Year

By Nancy Armour
Associated Press writer

Alex Rodriguez joined the list of cheaters this year, and Manny Ramirez and David "Big Papi" Ortiz are forever tainted now, too.

Five years after Major League Baseball added punishments to its testing program, questions about performance-enhancing drugs still swirl around America's favorite pastime. The sport's ongoing drug problem was chosen as the 2009 Story of the Year by members of The Associated Press, out-muscling even the shocking downfall of Tiger Woods.

"The impact that that story had made it the story of the year," said Lance Hanlin, sports editor of the Beaufort (S.C.) Gazette and The (Hilton Head) Island Packet. "It was a big, ongoing, overall story."

In fact, the Woods scandal finished fifth in the top story voting. Jimmie Johnson's unprecedented fourth straight NASCAR championship was second, followed by Roger Federer winning his 15th Grand Slam and Brett Favre ending his (second) retirement to lead the Minnesota Vikings to the division title.

This year's balloting was unusual in that a major story — Woods' accident on Nov. 27 and the salacious revelations that followed — happened after voting had started.

By then, 37 of 161 ballots had been submitted by editors at U.S. newspapers which are members of the AP. The voters were asked to rank the top 10 sports stories of the year, with the first-place story getting 10 points, the second-place story receiving nine points, and so on.

Given the extraordinary nature of the Woods story, the AP added it to the top stories ballot Nov. 30 and gave editors who had voted prior to that the chance to submit a new ballot, which about 10 did.

"I think it's transcended sports in general. It's become a national story," said Phil Kaplan, the deputy sports editor at the Knoxville (Tenn.) News Sentinel, who changed his vote to place the Woods'

Wade gets 29, Heat stifle Jazz

MIAMI — A year ago, this matchup was all about offense. This time around, all about defense.

Both times, Dwyane Wade and the Miami Heat took down the Utah Jazz.

Wade scored 29 points and the Heat survived the NBA's slowest first half this season on the way to beating the Jazz 80-70 on Wednesday night, a game where both teams oddly set season marks for fewest points scored and fewest points allowed.

THUNDER 117, SUNS 113

PHOENIX — Kevin Durant scored 38 points, including a key jumper from behind the key with 14.4 seconds left.

It was the Suns' first loss at home to a Western Conference team in seven games this season.

For the Thunder, it was their first win over the Suns since Feb. 14, 2007. It also was their 14th victory of the season, a figure they did not reach until Feb. 28 last season in their 59th game.

NUGGETS 124, HAWKS 104

DENVER — J.R. Smith came off the bench to score a season-high 41 points, hitting 10 3-pointers.

Carmelo Anthony added 24 points and rookie Ty Lawson, starting in place of the injured Chauncey Billups (groin), had 16, helping Denver win its sixth in a row at home.

TRAIL BLAZERS 98, SPURS 94

SAN ANTONIO — Jerryd Bayless scored 31 points in his first start for injured All-Star Brandon Roy.

Portland played without Roy and center Joel Przybilla, who ruptured a tendon in his right leg in a win against Dallas on Tuesday to become just the latest Blazers player to go down.

WIZARDS 109, BUCKS 97

MILWAUKEE — Antawn Jamison had 25 points and 10 rebounds and Earl Boykins scored 12 of his 15 points in the fourth quarter.

Caron Butler added 23 points and 10 rebounds and Gilbert Arenas had 18 points before leaving in the fourth quarter with a bruised left thigh. The injury didn't appear to be serious, with Arenas seeming to be in good spirits on the bench.

HORNETS 108, WARRIORS 102

NEW ORLEANS — Chris Paul scored 20 points and the New Orleans Hornets handed the Golden State Warriors their seventh straight loss.

Emeka Okafor had 10 points and 14 rebounds for New Orleans, which trailed late in the third quarter before surging ahead for good with a 13-2 run. David West scored 14 points and Peja Stojakovic had 13 for the Hornets.

MAGIC 102, ROCKETS 87

ORLANDO, Fla. — Dwight Howard had 20 rebounds and 13 points, and the Orlando Magic rolled.

Howard outmuscled a Rockets team lacking size and strength in the middle with Yao Ming injured. The reigning Defensive Player of the Year blocked four shots and showed how dominant he can be even on a night he didn't have his best offensive game.

RAPTORS 94, PISTONS 64

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Andrea Bargnani scored 21 points, Hedo Turkoglu added 11 points and a season-best 11 assists and Toronto clamped down on the short-handed Pistons.

Detroit has lost six straight and matched the lowest point total in franchise history. The Pistons were without Ben Gordon (ankle), Richard Hamilton (hamstring) and Tayshaun Prince (back). Charlie Villanueva went 0 of 7 from the field trying to play through a foot injury.

TIMBERWOLVES 103, NETS 99

Dame, received 19 votes and Alabama's Nick Saban, who won the award last season, got 14 votes.

Chip Kelly of Oregon received three votes and Boise State's Chris Petersen and Texas' Mack Brown each got one vote.

Patterson's ninth season with the Horned Frogs has been his best, but TCU's success this season is no great surprise. The Frogs have consistently been a threat to bust the BCS under Patterson, who was promoted from defensive coordinator after Dennis Franchione left Fort Worth for Alabama in 2000.

Patterson is 85-27 at TCU and has led the Horned Frogs to five seasons of at least 11 wins the past seven years. This season, the Horned Frogs went 12-0 for their first undefeated regular season since 1938, when TCU won its only AP national championship.

Patterson said he's become a more well-rounded coach during his time at TCU.

"I had to change my personality. I'm a passionate guy on game day. I'm all over the place," he said. "I'm better at helping kids with their lives. When you first become an assistant you're all about Xs and Os but I tried to become better at (helping players) after practice."

The Horned Frogs came into this season ranked No. 17 in the country, but Patterson needed to replace seven starters on a defense that was one of the best in the nation in 2008.

"We were not happy with the way we played defense in the spring," Patterson said.

He and his staff quickly rebuilt another fast, swarming defense around All-American pass rusher Jerry Hughes. The Horned Frogs ranked No. 1 in the country in yards allowed and sixth in points allowed.

Hughes is the perfect example of TCU's ability to spot and develop talent.

He was a 210-pound running in high school, but Patterson switched him to defensive end where Hughes has blossomed into a future NFL draft pick.

"We want to be known as the best developmental program in Texas," Patterson said.

This season's TCU team has developed into a dominant one. The Frogs have blown out most of their opposition — nine victories by at least 25 points — and come up big on the road. TCU has won at Virginia, Clemson and Utah.

BOISE — Kurt Cunningham scored 14 points Wednesday night to lead Boise State to a 58-56 victory over Montana State.

Cunningham hit two free throws with 4:48 remaining to put Boise State (8-4) ahead to stay.

Bobby Howard and Erik Rush scored 14 apiece to pace Montana State (7-5).

Montana State trailed by 18 points with 17 minutes remaining before going on a 21-2 run to take a 52-51 lead on Cody Anderson's layup and free throw with 7:11 left.

Boise State closed the first half with a 24-2 run to take a 41-27 halftime lead. The Broncos scored the first three points of the second half to make it a 27-2 run before Rush scored on a dunk.

Montana State made 10-of-14 field-goal attempts in building a 25-17 advantage, but was just 1-of-16 the rest of the half.

LXINGTON, Ky. — John Wall scored 19 points and No. 3 Kentucky pulled away in the second half.

DeMarcus Cousins shook off early foul trouble to finish with 15 points and 10 rebounds as the Wildcats (13-0) continued their best start in more than 30 years.

The Wildcats, who celebrated the program's 2,000th victory on Monday night, led 58-55 before using their size to outmuscle the 49ers down the stretch.

Stephan Gilling and Larry Anderson led the 49ers (6-6) with 15 points each.

NO. 6 WEST VIRGINIA 76, NO. 15 MISSISSIPPI 66

MORGANTOWN, W.Va. — Wellington Smith scored 17 of his career-high 19 points in the second half for West Virginia.

Devin Ebanks added 14 points and 13 rebounds and Kevin Jones had 12 points for West Virginia (9-0), which is off to its best start since the 2004-05 team started 10-0.

Facing a ranked opponent for the first time this season, West Virginia shot 60 percent (18 of 30) from the field in the second half and frustrated one of the nation's top offenses. Mississippi (10-2) was held to its lowest point total of the season and saw its six-game winning streak snapped.

NO. 8 VILLANOVA 97, DELAWARE 63

VILLANOVA, Pa. — Scottie Reynolds scored 22 points and Reggie Redding had 16 for Villanova.

The Wildcats (11-1) used a string of big baskets from Reynolds, who keyed their Final Four run last season, to turn a tighter-than-expected game into an easy win in their final tuneup for the Big East.

Taylor King had 19 points and 12 rebounds for Villanova.

ORAL ROBERTS 75, NO. 13 NEW MEXICO 66

TULSA, Okla. — Michael Craion had 18 points and 13 rebounds and Dominique Morrison scored 17 points as Oral Roberts handed New Mexico its first loss of the season.

Oral Roberts (7-6) took an early 13-point lead but then had to make another charge after the Lobos (12-1) rallied to take the lead in the second half.

NO. 14 GEORGETOWN 86, HARVARD 70

WASHINGTON — Chris Wright scored a career-high 34 points and Greg Monroe added 16 points and 16 rebounds for Georgetown, which used a half-ending 11-0 run to break open a tight game.

Wright is the first Georgetown player to reach 30 in a game since Jeff Green against Notre Dame in the Big East tournament in March 2007.

NO. 16 TENNESSEE 99, NORTH CAROLINA A&T 78

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — Tyler Smith and Kenny Hall both had 16 points and Tennessee scored the first 22 points of the game.

Hall's points were among 60 scored by Tennessee's reserves. Skylar McBee added 12 points and fellow reserve J.P. Prince had 10, while starter Scotty Hopson scored 10.

Brian Williams grabbed 11 rebounds for the Vols (9-2), who were coming off a loss to Southern California on Saturday.

Legend Michael Schumacher to return to F1 racing

BERLIN (AP) — Seven-time Formula One champion Michael Schumacher is coming out of retirement to drive for Mercedes in 2010, saying he expects to contend for the title again.

The German, who turns 41 on Jan. 3, announced his comeback on Wednesday after three years away from the sport that he dominated for the first half of the decade.

"Three years of absence gave back all the energy that I'm feeling right now," Schumacher said in a telephone conference. "I feel ready for some serious stuff."

"I still feel absolutely on the edge. It's thrilling and exciting. I believe I can be absolutely competitive."

Schumacher, who will join Nico Rosberg in an all-German team for the 2010 season, said he and Mercedes are in discussions about a deal through the 2012 season.

"We are talking about a three-year deal. It's not a one-off thing," Schumacher said. "We are looking for some continuation."

Financial terms were not disclosed, but Germany's Bild daily — which first broke news of the deal — reported that Schumacher would earn $10 million under an initial one-year contract.

Schumacher competed in 249 F1 races from 1991-2006 with Jordan, Benetton and Ferrari.

He won the F1 driver's championship in 1994 and 1995 and five straight years from 2000-2004. He set records with 91 race wins and several other milestones in the sport which still stand.

"Our aim can only be to fight for the championship," Schumacher said. "Yes, there will be strong competition ... but I'm absolutely thrilled to be back in this one."

Steroids

scandal ahead of baseball's drug woes.

"He's such a figure in sports that people are interested," Kaplan added. "People who don't follow sports are following this story."

Nonetheless, the final tally had the steroids story with 800 points to 617 points for Woods' travails. And even if only the votes cast after the Woods' scandal broke were counted, editors still picked the steroid scourge as the year's top story.

Voters who included the Woods saga on their list, however, were more likely to make it their top item: His downfall received 41 first-place votes compared with 27 for the steroids crisis.

Though only one major leaguer tested positive for a performance-enhancing drug in this, the first full year under toughened rules, baseball still finds itself trapped in the clutches of the Steroid Era.

Spring training began with A-Rod, the highest-paid player in the game and one of its biggest stars, admitting that he used banned substances from 2001-2003 while playing for the Texas Rangers. Initially greeted with boos and foam syringes by some fans, the taunts quieted as he and the New York Yankees steamrolled their way to a 27th World Series title.

But he will forever be linked to Barry Bonds, Mark McGwire and Sammy Sosa — and not only because of their place on baseball's home run list.

In May, Ramirez was suspended for 50 games after baseball obtained records that showed the Los Angeles Dodgers slugger used the female fertility drug HCG, or human chorionic gonadotropin. HCG is popular among steroid users because it can mitigate the side effects of ending a cycle of the drugs.

The summer brought reports that Ortiz and Sosa were on the infamous "list," 104 players who federal prosecutors allege tested positive in baseball's anonymous 2003 survey.

Sosa's inclusion was hardly a surprise. Neither he nor McGwire, the stars of baseball's great home run race in 1998, have ever admitted using performance-enhancing drugs. But people have been suspicious of them for years, and their appearances at that Congressional hearing in 2005 did nothing to change that.

Ortiz, though, was considered one of baseball's good guys, his size, smile and cute nickname making him seem more teddy bear than surly slugger.

Ortiz said he may have been careless in buying over-the-counter supplements and vitamins, but he insisted he's never knowingly used performance-enhancing drugs. And because the results of that 2003 survey were supposed to be anonymous and are now under seal, there's no way to know whether Ortiz actually tested positive or, if he did test positive, whether it was for steroids or a substance contained in a supplement.

Miguel Tejada finally 'fessed up to buying HGH — he still says he threw the drugs away — and became the first high-profile player to be convicted of a crime stemming from the steroids mess.

He was sentenced to a year of probation after pleading guilty in federal court to misleading Congress about the use of performance-enhancing drugs.

Bonds and Roger Clemens remain in limbo, their legal cases related to performance-enhancing drugs working their way through the system.

Baseball is in a sort of limbo, too, unable to shake the taint of drugs no matter how often it tests its players or how many suspensions it hands out.

"Too bad for him, too bad for baseball. Too bad for both," New York Yankees star Derek Jeter said this summer when the news about Ortiz surfaced. "I'm sad for everyone. Once again, we're sitting here talking about this again."

New era begins for Cotton Bowl

By Ralph D. Russo
Associated Press writer

A new era for the Cotton Bowl begins Jan. 2 when Mississippi plays Oklahoma State at the $1.2-billion Dallas Cowboys Stadium.

The Cotton Bowl game ditched the antiquated Cotton Bowl Stadium after last season. Not only will the game be played in Jerry Jones' palatial new home for his NFL team but Cotton Bowl officials also have offices in the stadium.

The Cotton Bowl, once one of the jewels of college football's postseason, is ready to rise again.

Cotton Bowl president Rick Baker shies away from talking directly about the Cotton Bowl making a bid to become a BCS game down the line.

With the BCS about to start a new television contract with ESPN next season, the soonest a change to the lineup could happen would be the 2014 season.

But when the time comes for the conference commissioners to open discussions about the future sites of the BCS, it would be shocking if the Cotton Bowl did not make a push to be included — again.

Baker and his team made a pitch to become a BCS bowl earlier in the decade, when Bowl Championship Series officials determined it wanted to expand from four games to five.

Instead, bowl officials from the Sugar, Rose, Orange and Fiesta, wanting to ensure they would host the lucrative championship game once every four years instead of once every five, came up with the idea of double-hosting.

The Cotton Bowl's new home in Arlington, Texas, has already landed some of the biggest sporting events out there: the NCAA men's basketball tournament and the Super Bowl.

Few bowls can match the history and tradition of the Cotton Bowl. It dates to 1936 and Baker and his crew like to boast that it has hosted seven games that decided national championships.

Even when it was being played in a second-rate facility, the Cotton Bowl has always been praised by participants as a first-rate operation.

And now it's being played in the Taj Mahal of football stadiums.

Ex-Montana coach Hauck eager for UNLV challenge

LAS VEGAS (AP) — Incoming UNLV coach Bobby Hauck said he's excited about generating enthusiasm for football and building a winning program. The former Montana coach said he doesn't know how long it will take.

"It's going to take some work and we're going to get at it ... immediately," Hauck said Wednesday as he was formally introduced by the university.

UNLV president Neal Smatresk said the Rebels aren't too far away from contending in the Mountain West Conference.

"Let's hope two years from now we all look like geniuses," he said.

Smatresk said UNLV faces tough conference foes in TCU, Utah and BYU, but he thinks the Rebels can reach the top third of the league.

The Board of Regents was set to approve Hauck's contract in an afternoon meeting, less than one week after he coached the Grizzlies in the Football Championship Subdivision title game.

The three-year deal will pay Hauck $350,000 annually, with some pay deferred and incentives for winning, bowl games and helping student-athletes graduate, Smatresk said.

Hauck, 45, said enthusiasm for his team will come if it's worth watching. He hopes to have a high-powered offense like the unit he coached in Montana, which averaged 35.8 points and 427.4 yards per game last season, mostly in the air.

"I'm a firm believer that you need to run the ball to win but you need to be able to throw it to put a few people in the seats," he said.

UNLV has not had a winning season since 2000, and went 5-7 in 2009 while losing by 20 points or more five times.

Hauck said in an interview that he has not had a chance to fully evaluate his team, but was excited to meet about 20 of his players on Wednesday.

He said one goal will be to win a Mountain West Conference championship. "It will be a challenge here to get it done," he said.

Smatresk said he thinks Hauck exudes an enthusiasm for football that will make players want to "run through walls" for him.

Hauck was 80-17 in seven seasons with the Grizzlies. He led Montana to three FCS national title games, including last week's 23-21 loss to Villanova.

playing time in a few games and was able to contribute a little bit, so I view it as a successful year. I'm excited to get going again for next year."

The southpaw's personal highlight this season came against the University of Montana-Western, in front of a homecoming crowd of 8,356. Wagner was benched after struggling in the first half, and Broadhead led the Saints to a 17-10 victory. He was 13-for-16 for 140 yards and two TDs, including the game-winning touchdown pass in the fourth quarter.

"It's fun to be part of the team and I go in and make the best of my opportunities when I get them," he said.

Considering the two former Spartans' situations, which is better — to play more and win less (Morgan and ISU) or play less and win more (Broadhead and Carroll)?

Ask the players, and they both agree: Playing time is nice, but nothing beats winning.

"I'd rather be in Dane's shoes and have team success," Morgan said. "How close you come with guys on the team, you don't think about yourself out there. I think team success is better than personal success."

Said Broadhead: "I'll take the wins any day. I've been on teams where we haven't been successful and it's kind of dreadful to go to practice every day when you're losing. I'd like to be playing more, but I would take the wins any day of the week."

IF DECEMBER 24 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: What is most important and dear to your heart has been shifting over the past year and you may develop different priorities — as well as an altered perspective. By the end of January you will find that ambition has become your byword, but the fact is that you will need to work hard to gather experience and earn recognition through the end of May. Don't neglect past obligations in August when people will be less likely to give you the benefit of the doubt or overlook infractions of the rules. But do look forward to the answers to your prayers, opportunities to improve your life and the realization of your fondest dreams in the fall of 2010.

HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The pitter-patter of reindeer feet on your rooftop may interrupt your sleep but there is plenty of time to sleep late tomorrow.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Take your time and stretch out the holiday. Stamping your feet won't make the clock hands turn any faster.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Tap into a reservoir of energy and pursue constructive activities. New goals may form that will keep your attention riveted.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): If you must head out on the roads allow plenty of time to arrive at your destination. Others could be impatient or hard to please.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Tune out your inner Ebenezer Scrooge. It doesn't matter if gifts are wrapped in newspaper or tied up with a glittering silver bow.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Tomorrow is another day. Don't feel isolated or left out if you can't touch base with the right people at the right time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You might find that people are annoyed by some holiday customs or are overly stressed by last minute changes to plans.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): That special someone may have you humming a joyous Christmas carol. You may not think alike, but you can accept each other's views.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Sing a holiday carol while you deck your halls. Take a break from daily routines and don't let past problems spoil today.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): No one appreciates your talents until they need you. You may feel left out of the games like Rudolph the Red-Nosed Reindeer.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Make memories of holiday cheer by taking photos or showing off your special talents. Your tact and diplomacy are valuable.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Jump right in and follow your impulse to act like a Christmas angel, spreading happiness wherever you go.

Today is Thursday, Dec. 24, the 358th day of 2009. There are 7 days left in the year. This is Christmas Eve.

Today's Highlight:
On Dec. 24, 1809, legendary American frontiersman Christopher "Kit" Carson was born in Madison County, Ky.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1524, Portuguese navigator Vasco da Gama - who had discovered a sea route around Africa to India - died in Cochin, India.

In 1814, the War of 1812 officially ended as the United States and Britain signed the Treaty of Ghent in Belgium.

In 1851, fire devastated the Library of Congress in Washington, D.C., destroying about 35,000 volumes.

In 1865, several veterans of the Confederate Army formed a private social club in Pulaski, Tenn., called the Ku Klux Klan.

In 1871, Giuseppe Verdi's opera "Aida" had its world premiere in Cairo, Egypt.

In 1943, President Franklin D. Roosevelt appointed Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower supreme commander of Allied forces as part of Operation Overlord.

In 1951, Gian Carlo Menotti's "Amahl and the Night Visitors," the first opera written specifically for television, was first broadcast by NBC.

In 1968, the Apollo 8 astronauts, orbiting the moon, read passages from the Old Testament Book of Genesis during a Christmas Eve telecast.

In 1980, Americans remembered the U.S. hostages in Iran by burning candles or shining lights for 417 seconds - one second for each day of captivity.

In 1994, militants hijacked an Air France Airbus A-300 at the Algiers airport; three passengers were slain during the siege before all four hijackers were killed by French commandos in Marseille two days later.

Ten years ago: Five hijackers seized an Indian Airlines jet, forcing the aircraft on a journey across South Asia and into the Middle East. (The eight-day ordeal resulted in the death of one passenger and India's release of three jailed pro-Kashmir militants in exchange for the rest of the hostages.)

Five years ago: Bearing gifts of praise and encouragement, Defense Secretary Donald H. Rumsfeld paid a surprise Christmas Eve visit to U.S. troops in some of the most dangerous areas of Iraq. Afghan President Hamid Karzai swore in a new cabinet. The international Cassini spacecraft launched a probe on a three-week free-fall toward Saturn's mysterious moon Titan.

One year ago: A man dressed in a Santa Claus suit shot his way into the Covina, Calif., home of his former in-laws and set it on fire, killing nine people (the attacker, identified as Bruce Jeffrey Pardo, committed suicide the next day). The Federal Reserve granted a request by the financing arm of General Motors Corp. to tap the government's $700 billion rescue fund, bolstering the automaker's ability to survive. Army Capt. Moussa Camara, the leader of a coup in Guinea, entered the country's capital, hours after saying his group would hold power until elections in two years. Nobel Prize-winning playwright Harold Pinter died in London at age 78.

DEAR ABBY: I'm writing in response to "Stuck for an Answer" (Oct. 9), whose wife found a box of letters written by her late mother to her father. She didn't know whether to read or destroy them.

If Mom had wanted the letters destroyed, she would have already done it. As a genealogist and historian, my advice is to keep them in a safe place for future generations. I have correspondence between my great-grandmother, her daughters and their daughters that dates back to the 1870s and extends through the 1940s. I also have her diaries, her daughter's autograph book from high school graduation in 1880, and diaries written by her granddaughter that date from the time she was 16 until her death at the age of 90 in 1998.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

I am sure my great-great-grandfather never thought I'd be reading the letter he wrote to his brother during the Civil War in 1865, mentioning all the women in the city he was going to spend some time with! Abby, "Stuck's" wife should cherish the letters she found, even if she never reads them. They are precious heirlooms for future generations that will teach them about the impact of World War II on young love.

- HISTORICALLY SPEAKING

DEAR HISTORICALLY: I suggested to "Stuck" that reading the letters would allow his wife new insight into her parents' early life. Many readers agreed and offered personal anecdotes. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: My dear friend "Zack's" father left him letters he had exchanged with Zack's mother during World War II. In one of them was the information that Zack had a half-sister in Italy! If he had not read those letters, he would never have known about this member of his family.

"Stuck's" letters have survived 60 years. He can rightfully suppose that his mother-in-law saved them with the intent of passing them on. Those letters have tremendous historical significance. There are few firsthand documents like these remaining. I'm sure the World War II museum in Washington, D.C., would love to have them. Every firsthand story helps us construct our history. Can you imagine what we would have missed if 15-year-old Anne Frank's diary had remained unpublished?

- WELL-READ IN NEW YORK

DEAR ABBY: My mother asked if my sisters and I wanted to read the letters Dad had sent her during the war. We declined because we felt the letters were private. Mom requested that they be buried with her when she died. When she passed away, we could not immediately locate them. Then, just before interment, my sister found the letters. The funeral director allowed us to seal them in a box to be placed in the ground with Mom's burial urn. They are now, once again, close to her and Dad, and everyone finds that knowledge comforting.

- BEVERLY IN ALBANY

DEAR ABBY: When our parents died 22 years ago, we also found letters he wrote her while in the Army. My sisters and I pored over them - laughing, crying, learning new things about them. It allowed us a glimpse into something we never thought we would see - our parents as a young couple, newly in love and afraid about the war. The letters are a family treasure. Of all the things we have acquired since their deaths, they remain the most precious of all.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"First love is only a little foolishness and a lot of curiosity; no really self-respecting woman would take advantage of it."
— George Bernard Shaw

Should West have selected a suit other than a spade for his opening lead against six clubs? After all, his partner had bid and rebid spades, yet the opponents had still climbed to slam, so surely spades was the one suit declarer had covered in this deal from a recent U.S. Summer Nationals.

Luckily for declarer, West settled for the mundane spade lead, reasoning that partner might have doubled for an unusual lead if that were called for. South tried dummy's queen — if by a miracle the spade king was onside, both of South's losing diamonds could be shed. But East covered with the king, and after ruffing, declarer next led a club to the queen. On the spade ace, South correctly discarded the heart four, not a diamond.

At this point, the only chance for the contract was a 3-3 heart break. Since dummy's only entries were in trumps, declarer delayed drawing a second round of clubs until the ace and king of hearts were cashed. Then after a trump to the jack came a heart ruff, East and West both obligingly following suit.

Dummy's last entry, the club eight, was the access to the 13th heart for a diamond discard, and declarer could now claim his precarious slam.

One further thought: if East had doubled the slam, would West have worked out that he was expected to lead a diamond, not a heart? I think so; the argument might reasonably have been that if East had heart tricks, they could hardly get away.

ANSWER: The range for a non-forcing response of one no-trump to an overcall of one spade is 7-11. With a balanced 5-6 points, you can pass. (Game will not make if partner cannot start by doubling the opponents, then bidding a suit.) Equally, to jump to two no-trump requires a full opening bid, since an overcall could easily have fewer than 10 high-card points. So this hand is a normal maximum for a call of one no-trump.
