Low-tech lowering

"It's a good use of the building for the people in the community."

Downtown T.F. ball drop slips into sixth year

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

It wasn't the neon, gloss and glitter of New Year's Eve in Times Square when Twin Falls dropped the ball to usher in 2010, and Dave Woodhead's moldy oldie pickup with a rope attached to the ball was decidedly low tech.

There was also no priceless Waterford Crystal ball in Twin Falls, rather a two-foot-wide metal ball that Warehouse District bar owner Woodhead bought for $14 at an auction a dozen years ago. He said he's not sure, but the ball is probably made of copper.

Unlike the throng of New Yorkers and millions of television viewers around the world that see the crystal ball slowly lowered from a 77-foot-tall pole in the Big Apple, between 30 and 40 locals, many of whom were bar patrons, witnessed the ball drop 80 feet in 20 seconds leading up to midnight when Woodhead slowly drove his 1961 Ford Econoline pickup forward, allowing the rope to lower the ball from one of the grain elevators at the corner of Fifth Avenue South and Shoshone Street that are commonly known as "The Silos." A pair of spotlights made it more dramatic.

However, the sixth annual re-enactment of the century-long New York tradition brought out fewer spectators than it did in some previous years, possibly due to bad weather.

"Some years a lot of people turn out," said Woodhead.

that lowered the ball includes a rope with a pulley inside the grain elevator.

"We have to go up five flights of spiral stairs to do that," Woodhead said.

Earlier, a few people inside the nearby Depot Grill chuckled about the impending ball drop.

"Everybody stands out there and freezes and it goes kerplunk," said Depot waitress Sandee Carlgren.

The people outside were more impressed.

"This is my first year here and it's awesome," said Amber Burgess.

"This is amazing," said Molly Eickhof.

"It's been awesome. It's going to be a tradition for me now," said Natasha McNeeley.

the grain elevators. He partnered with Russ Tremayne and Paul Smith to start the nonprofit group that purchased the structures that date to 1916. Preservation Twin Falls also built a park at the site of the grain elevators that opened last May.

"It's a good use of the building for the people in the community," Gilbertson said.

Charities pleased with holiday giving

By Damon Hunzeker
Times-News writer

Despite the recession, or maybe because of it, Magic Valley residents were feeling charitable this holiday season.

The Salvation Army conducts two types of fundraisers during the holiday season — through the red-kettle bell ringers and appeals sent by mail — both of which brought in more money than last year.

"Our mail appeal was just a little higher. Our red kettles increased by 5 percent," Maj. Ed Patterson said. "We were expecting 10 percent more from the kettles ... but we feel good about the results in the respect that we were a little higher than last time."

In Burley, the Mini-Cassia Christmas Council assisted 575 families and raised $10,000 in cash for meat certificates.

"We mark them for meat so they don't spend it on things we don't want them to spend it on," said Verlee Frost, council president. "We actually had a good year. We always have less for men than we do for the women ... so we had a few people we weren't able to give coats to. But every Christmas box had a quilt or a baby blanket in it. Sometimes that's all families want — just blankets to keep them warm."

Sharon Breshears, executive director of Valley House homeless shelter in Twin Falls, praised the community.

Man faces multiple fraud charges

Suspect allegedly used fake check in Idaho

By Holbrook Mohr

JACKSON, Miss. — The way court records tell it, Ronnie Lee Owen was a fugitive who crossed the country using fake driver's licenses and phony checks to buy thousands of dollars in goods, including cars, in nearly a dozen states.

His luck apparently ran out in south Mississippi when Biloxi Police Officer Douglass DeGeorge pulled him over in March and became suspicious about his nervous demeanor and shaking hands, according to federal court records.

The officer ran Owen's license and found he was wanted in at least eight states on fraud or similar charges, according to an

Airport pat-downs often have little value

By Michael Tarm
Associated Press writer

CHICAGO — With all the screening technology at U.S. airports, the last line of defense is still the human hand: the pat-down search.

But aviation experts say the pat-down is often ineffective, in part because of government rules covering where screeners can put their hands and how frequently they can frisk passengers. As a result, even if the man accused of trying to blow up a Detroit-bound U.S. jetliner on Christmas Day got an airport pat-down, it probably wouldn't have found the explosives authorities say were hidden in his crotch.

"To have people hold up their arms and just pat them — like I'm really going to carry a bomb there," said industry analyst Michael Boyd, arguing that pat-downs were often of little value. "You know where you're going to put it, and no one's going to go there."

Most travelers at U.S. airports never get a pat-down when they pass through security. A metal detector must be set off first and then screeners would need to find out what triggered the alarm. That often amounts

M.V. officers make handful of DUI arrests

Times-News

At least 15 Magic Valley motorists stepped into the new year on the wrong foot, as area law-enforcement agencies made a handful of driving under the influence arrests on New Year’s Eve and early New Year’s Day.

Twin Falls Police Sgt. Arnold Morgado said city officers made six DUI arrests Thursday night.

DUI arrests by the Twin Falls Sheriff’s Office and the total number of county jail intakes were not immediately available Friday.

The Jerome County Sheriff’s Department reported six jail admissions for DUI, with two made by sheriff’s deputies and four by Jerome city police officers.

The Mini-Cassia Criminal Justice Center in Burley reported one intake for DUI from an arrest in Cassia County.

The Blaine County Detention Center reported two admissions for DUI.

The Gooding County Jail reported no DUI intakes.

wind farm in an agricultural preservation zone at roughly 225 E., 4700 N. The 860-acre project has been in the works for a little while, said Kathy Henslee with the company. But she couldn’t say much more about it on Thursday.

“We’re just going to wait and see what happens,” Henslee said.

Farther up in the county’s northern tip, Half Moon LLC plans to erect the 14-turbine Payne’s Ferry Wind Park.

The LLC is also involved in at least two of the three requests for permit changes. The P&Z in February granted the Pilgrim Stage, Thousand Springs and Oregon Trail wind parks more time to start construction. Now, the developers behind the three will ask for slight modifications; two want to add slightly to the number of turbines allowed, while the third would simply add more property to its 360-acre footprint.

This month’s wind requests are the first since that February meeting, county Planning and Zoning Planner Laura Wilson confirmed. But wind developers have stayed busy in the region.

Electric utility Idaho Power Co. submitted a few new sales agreements with small Magic Valley wind farms for state approval during the second half of the year. And construction started in the fall on the 16.8-megawatt Tuana Springs wind project, which could be in operation this spring.

The wind requests will comprise the second of two public hearings the P&Z plans this month. A hearing on a handful of other requests, including two canyon-rim setbacks and a proposal by SeaPac of Idaho to build a retail nursery near Filer, will take place at 7 p.m. Jan. 14.

Pat-down to screeners just lightly tapping on a passenger’s arms, legs and clothes.

But even if they go ahead with a pat-down, it likely would not turn up something nonmetallic, small and well-hidden.

Unlike the frisking of suspects conducted by police — which involves officers running their hands firmly up and down the body, including sensitive areas like the groin, buttocks and breasts — the pat-downs at airports usually involve, well, patting down.

A flood of complaints by women prompted the Transportation Security Administration in 2004 to list “dos” and “don’ts” on pat-downs, including barring screeners from touching female passengers between their breasts. The TSA hasn’t publicly released that list.

But a report by the Government Accountability Office, which said federal investigators were able to smuggle liquid explosives and detonators past security at U.S. airports, appeared to prompt some changes last year in pat-down policies.

In one instance cited in the report, an investigator placed coins in his pockets to ensure he’d receive a secondary screening. But after a pat-down and use of a handheld metal detector, the screener didn’t catch the prohibited items the investigator brought through a checkpoint.

The TSA last year decided to permit what it describes as “enhanced pat-downs” that include breast and groin searches. But these could be done only under limited circumstances and only after the use of metal detectors, less invasive pat-downs and all other tools had been exhausted.

Still, even in those cases, screeners must use the back of their hands when touching the groin area and breasts, according to the TSA.

“This new procedure will affect a very small percentage of travelers, but it is a critical element in ensuring the safety of the flying public,” the agency said in a statement on its Web site.

Since the Dec. 25 incident, some have been calling for more pat-downs at airports. But sensitivities on all sides mean any push for more frequent, thorough pat-downs would likely meet fierce resistance.

“People just wouldn’t stand for it. You wouldn’t. I wouldn’t,” said Gerry Berry, a Florida-based airport security expert.

Fearful of lawsuits or allegations of molestation, many screeners at airports would be the most resistant of all, said Boyd.

“You’ll have people yelling, ‘He grabbed me! He groped me!’” he said. “You don’t want that job!”

TSA spokesman Greg Soule declined to discuss the agency’s pat-down rules or any directives to airports, including whether the agency has ordered stepped-up pat-downs at U.S. airports since last week.

“Pat-downs are one layer of security in a multifaceted security system,” he said.

The TSA, he added, was aware of concerns surrounding pat-downs.

“I would say that security is TSA’s No. 1 priority while balancing the privacy of all passengers,” he said.

It’s possible that pat-downs may become more frequent in airports as the use of full-body scanning machines expands. The high-tech machines are in use at a handful of airports; the TSA just bought 150 and plans to buy 300 more. But passengers can opt for a physical pat-down instead of being scanned.

Fraud

affidavit filed by Secret Service Agent Martha Jahnke.

The car Owen was driving, a red 2000 Volkswagen Jetta with a paper license plate from Delaware, was purchased with a fake check in Idaho under the alias Ronald Odum, court records said.

Police allegedly found two fake Tennessee driver’s licenses and another from Indiana in Owen’s wallet and fake checks, a computer, a printer and blank check paper in the car.

The checks had real bank routing numbers on them, allegedly obtained from a Web site that lists those numbers, court records said.

A federal judge set a Jan. 13 trial date for Owen in U.S. District Court in Gulfport after months of legal wrangling, in which Owen tried to have evidence thrown out, including an alleged confession. Owen also sought a psychiatric evaluation, though the judge found no competency problems.

Now Owen, who is in his early 40s, wants to get rid of his lawyer and represent himself. U.S. District Judge Sul Ozerden on Tuesday set a hearing on that request for Jan. 6.

Owen’s attorney, public defender John Weber III, did not immediately respond to a message from The Associated Press.

Owen allegedly passed fake checks in California, Colorado, Idaho, Kentucky, Louisiana, New Mexico, Ohio, Oregon, Tennessee, Utah and Washington, court records said. Warrants have been issued for his arrest in eight of those states, although court records did not identify the states.

Owen admitted using a computer to make the checks and said that he wrote them to buy products, mainly at Walmart stores, then returned the items for cash the next day, Jahnke’s affidavit said.

Owen is also wanted in Washington, where he was arrested in 2007, after allegedly being found in possession of another car purchased with a stolen check and 12 counterfeit Kentucky driver’s licenses.

“None of the licenses had the same license number, and had different dates of birth,” court records said. “Further investigation, including a search of the defendant’s computer showed that over 650 checks were prepared on the computer, some of which were written to car dealerships.”

U.S. Attorney Donald R. Burkhalter said Wednesday that bar rules generally prohibit prosecutors from commenting on pending cases.

Donations

“As far as families being taken care of with gifts and food, it was just awesome,” she said. “It was more than we expected. The generosity of everyone bringing in canned goods, paper products and bedding was amazing.”

While it may seem as though charities would receive fewer donations during such a long recession, all of the organizations agreed that contributions tend to increase when so many people visibly need help.

“When the economy is this bad, people step up. That’s when people see that it can happen to anyone, and all of our clients’ needs were met” Breshears said. “Because of that, we’re able to offer a hand up to people who have found themselves homeless and need a safe environment to re-focus and regain their self-sufficiency and dignity.”

Each organization, while accustomed to familiar applicants, saw a lot of people who hadn’t applied for help in the past.

“We actually had less families apply, but the families were bigger, and there were more new families,” Patterson said. “We appreciate the community’s contributions, and it’ll really help us going into next year. There will be continued help needed.”

But that’s something to think about in the next pay period.

“It was a year when we got what we needed and a little more. We don’t have to beg for things, and we have what we need,” Frost said, adding that she’s noticed something different in the last couple of years.

“There are a lot of people very concerned about our wages and think we’re getting paid for this. We are not. If I got paid, I wouldn’t be doing what I’m doing. I don’t want a job where I get paid for this kind of work,” she said.

Castleford Community Center opens

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

CASTLEFORD — If the mantra, "Good things come to those who wait" is true, the city of Castleford should see blue skies ahead. After decades of planning and fundraising, and more than a year of construction, the Castleford Community Center is ready to open. Today the Castleford Men's Club will host a public open house and ribbon-cutting ceremony at the center on Main Street across from Castleford School. Spread throughout the sizable building, at more than 6,000 square feet, is a kitchen, office space and a multipurpose room with a half-court basketball floor. "I feel really good and excited about the opening," said Castleford Men's Club President Rick Rodgers. "We've already got calls coming in from people wanting to use the center for a variety of events. It's exciting to see it all come together." The club raised several hundred thousand dollars for the building, which is by far members' biggest undertaking. Every year the club sponsors youth groups, sports and provides scholarships to graduating seniors. The center is expected to be used by civic and youth clubs and for private events, such as weddings and parties. Member and past president Michael Graybeal said the project "took just over a year to build and over $300,000," but would still be a dream if not for the generosity of area residents and businesses. "The money we raised, through our annual auction — to the outpouring of support we saw in volunteered labor, equipment and supplies — all came directly from the community. We couldn't have done this without that support, no way," Graybeal said. The club's ultimate goal was to provide Castleford youth a place of their own but the project grew, as did the building, to provide space for city government offices and Castleford Quick Response. Each entity will contribute to the building's utility fees. The city offices must be moved in accordance with a federal mandate surrounding the city's new water treatment center. Graybeal said the club expects the city to make the move within the month. The 18-man, all-volunteer Castleford Quick Response contributed to the center's construction, said President Oscar Flores, but the exact amount was unknown. "It's going to be great to have a facility all of our own," Flores said. "We were grateful to have been provided space for our rigs at the fire department and at the school, in the ag shop, but now we'll be able to have our command center, equipment and space for monthly trainings under one roof. It's great." Quick Response has already moved its two vehicles to the center and Flores said the group will begin operating out of its new space within the coming weeks. Rodgers said the club will landscape the building's exterior this spring but for now, is simply enjoying the center. "This project shows Castleford is a very tightly knit community that knows the value in sticking together and working together. I think our community can be an example to other cities facing challenges, that those challenges can be overcome by coming together," Rodgers said.

BSU's Petersen inks new 5-year deal

By Dustin Lapray
Times-News correspondent

PHOENIX — Bronco fans can relax: Chris Petersen is in Boise to stay. Boise State athletic director Gene Bleymaier announced Friday that the Boise State head coach signed a tentative contract to remain at the helm of the Bronco program until 2014. The details of the deal will not be released until the next meeting of the Idaho State Board of Education, which must approve the contract since Boise State is a state university. There are always rumors about other schools wanting to steal away Petersen. For Bleymaier to keep him in Boise for the next five years is huge for the continuity of the program. “We’d like to think that Coach Pete will be with us at Boise State throughout his career in coaching,” Bleymaier said. “A four-year record of 48-4 is just unprecedented. We couldn’t be happier with coach and his staff and what they’ve done for our university and for our football program. We want nothing more than for that to continue.” Petersen came to Boise State after the 2000 season as the offensive coordinator and was promoted to head coach after the 2005 season when Dan Hawkins left for Colorado. Since taking over the program, Petersen has provided miraculous results. He has three undefeated regular seasons (his team lost three games in 2007). The deal has been in the works for months and was agreed upon sometime last week. Petersen said they wanted to announce the deal before the Fiesta Bowl so that it might not take away from the players who brought him here.

Bronco O-line more consistent

By Dustin Lapray
Times-News correspondent

PHOENIX — The 2008 season was rough for the Boise State offensive line. Every week a new combination of linemen littered the starting lineup. But this season that bulky carousel of players came to a halt and five guys became a consistent unit.

They averaged about a yard more per rush than in 2008 and only let defenses sack their southpaw quarterback five times all season. The team averaged 194.5 rushing yards per game, about 50 yards more than in 2008.

“We wanted to run the ball better,” BSU offensive coordinator Bryan Harsin said. “That started in the offseason. Those guys took it to heart. They’re O-linemen, that’s their job. It’s important to them.”

Eleven linemen played in 2008. The older players graduated last season, leaving a pair of juniors and a multitude of sophomores and freshmen in the ranks this year.

“We had a lot of experience with each other from last year,” center Thomas Byrd said. “We had a chance to get used to people playing in the same positions. We just had the need to sell out for technique and really pay attention to what (offensive line coach Scott) Huff told us.”

Huff has a young group of linemen, no seniors, just a bunch of underclassmen trying to figure out a hierarchy. To Byrd’s left, Will Lawrence slugs it out at left guard. Lawrence, in his first season as a starter, was the

“The winning was really a bonus. Knowing it’s your last game, I’ll be honest with you, I’m kind of interested in this retirement business. I ain’t got to set my alarm no more, I’ll get up when I’m darn good and ready, then like I say, go out and look for a job.”

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — Bobby Bowden rode only a few bouncy steps on his players’ shoulders, then hopped off.

“I thought it was about time to get down,” he said.

Time to say goodbye. As a winner, too.

Jermaine Thomas ran for 121 yards and two touchdowns, MVP E.J. Manuel threw for 189 yards and ran for another score and Florida State knocked off No. 18 West Virginia 33-21 Friday at the Gator Bowl in the final game of Bowden’s storied 57-year coaching career.

“The winning was really a bonus,” Bowden said. “Knowing it’s your last game, I’ll be honest with you, I’m kind of interested in this retirement business. I ain’t got to set my alarm no more, I’ll get up when I’m darn good and ready, then like I say, go out and look for a job.”

Bowden finished with a 389-129-4 record, and most importantly to him, a 33rd consecutive winning season. Next week, Jimbo Fisher takes over at Florida State, which finished 7-6 for the third time in the last four years.

That run of mediocrity was the 80-year-old Bowden’s downfall — he wanted to stay at least one more season, but was essentially forced into retirement after Florida State offered him a lesser role for 2010. But on this day, none of that mattered to the Florida State faithful, which serenaded him with “Bobby! Bob-by!” chants throughout the day, saving their loudest cries for the very end.

With 1:39 left, Bowden trotted down to the Florida State band

Pryor leads Buckeyes past Oregon in Rose Bowl

By Greg Beacham
Associated Press writer

PASADENA, Calif. — Ohio State’s bowl woes are over, thanks to a sturdy defense and a quarterback who finally played up to his enormous potential.

Terrelle Pryor passed for a season-high 266 yards and two touchdowns, rushed for 72 more and threw a 17-yard scoring pass to DeVier Posey with 7:02 to play, ending the No. 8 Buckeyes’ three-game BCS skid with a 26-17 victory over No. 7 Oregon in the Rose Bowl on Friday. Posey had eight catches for 101 yards, and Brandon Saine caught an early TD pass for the Buckeyes (11-2), who put together a remarkably fluid offensive performance in their first trip to Pasadena since 1997.

That offense relied on Pryor, the sophomore quarterback who has had a hard time matching his enormous hype. With a Rose Bowl effort that evoked memories of Vince Young’s breakout performance in the same stadium four years ago, Pryor shook off his early mistakes and led the Buckeyes confidently through a tense fourth quarter.

CSI men open 2010 slate against Idaho Select

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

This time it counts.

The College of Southern Idaho men’s basketball team opens the 2010 portion of its schedule this afternoon against the Idaho Select. The 10-5 Golden Eagles faced Idaho Select in a close-fought scrimmage on Oct. 24. Now, 10 weeks later, the teams meet again.

Idaho Select, a squad comprised of former collegiate players at Boise State, College of Idaho and Northwest Nazarene University will give the Eagles a good nonconference test in today’s 5 p.m. affair.

“That’s a good ball club,” said CSI head coach Steve Gosar. “They put five guys on the court that all can step out and shoot the ball and pass it. That’s makes it a tough test for us defensively.”

The Eagles last played Dec. 20, topping No. 7 Three Rivers (Mo.) Community College 78-73 in Las Vegas.

After a short Christmas break, CSI spent this week getting back in game shape.

“They’re starting to look like their pre-Christmas selves,” said Gosar.

Hopefully with a couple improvements. The Golden Eagles have struggled to keep large leads and have faded down the stretch in many games. Three of their five losses are by three points

Tebow ends career with sweet win

NEW ORLEANS — Tim Tebow rose above all the distractions caused by coach Urban Meyer’s uncertain future and capped a storied college career with his finest performance.

It was the best in BCS history, too.

Tebow threw for a career-high and Sugar Bowl- and Florida-record 482 yards and three touchdowns, ran for 51 yards and another score, and fifth-ranked Florida overwhelmed No. 4 Cincinnati 51-24 Friday night in the Sugar Bowl.

For Tebow and the Gators (13-1), this certainly was The Big Easy.

Florida’s most anticipated season ever ended in New Orleans instead of Pasadena. It came against Cincinnati (13-1) instead of Texas. It was about redemption instead of perfection.

None of that mattered in the Louisiana Superdome.

Tebow wouldn’t let it. He completed his first 12 passes, led the Gators to scores on their first five possessions and finished with 533 total yards — more than anyone in Bowl Championship Series history. He passed former Texas star Vince Young’s record of 467 yards set against Southern California in the 2005 Rose Bowl.

The Bearcats lost their bid for a perfect season and surely will spend the next year listening to questions about whether they belong in the big games against the biggest boys.

Florida, meanwhile, became the first school in the Football Bowl Subdivision to win 13 games in consecutive seasons.

Tebow and his teammates had hoped to repeat as national champions, but a 32-13 loss to Alabama in the Southeastern Conference title game knocked them out of the title picture. The Gators spent the last four weeks regrouping from the disheartening loss.

Things got worse when Meyer announced his resignation last Saturday, three weeks after being rushed to the hospital because of chest pain. Meyer changed his mind the following day, and instead said he would take an indefinite leave of absence.

Florida quarterback Tim Tebow (15) is stopped after a first down run by Cincinnati’s Drew Frey (26) in the first half of the Sugar Bowl in New Orleans, Friday.

No one knows how long he will be away or whether he will return at all.

Meyer didn’t look like his fiery self against his alma mater. Then again, Tebow & Co. made this a stress-free game for every Gator.

OUTBACK BOWL

AUBURN 38, NORTHWESTERN 35, OT
TAMPA, Fla. — Pat Fitzgerald reached into Northwestern’s bag of tricks one more time, hoping to pull out the perfect play to give his team a dramatic victory over Auburn in the Outback Bowl.

“I’ve had it in my back pocket for four years, and people tell me I’m too conservative. So I said, ‘What the heck. We’re here to win, so let’s go,’” Fitzgerald said after a version of the old fumblerooskie failed in overtime, leaving the Wildcats with a 38-35 loss on Friday.

“And I’d do it again,” the 35-year-old coach said. “Next time I’d score, though, and we’d be celebrating.”

Wes Byrum kicked a 21-yard field goal in overtime, and Auburn (8-5) overcame several mistakes, including a costly pair of penalties, that gave Northwestern chances for their first bowl victory in 61 years.

On the game’s final play, the Wildcats sent backup kicker Steve Flaherty onto the field seemingly to try to force a second overtime.

But with regular kicker Stefan Demos on the sideline after being injured earlier in the overtime, Fitzgerald had no intention of trying to tie the score.

“I just kind of felt like the stars were aligned there when we lost Stef,” Fitzgerald said, adding the “modern-day fumblerooskie” was one of coach Randy Walker’s favorite plays at Northwestern.

Walker died of an apparent heart attack in 2006, and Fitzgerald was promoted as his replacement.

CAPITAL ONE BOWL

NO. 11 PENN ST. 19, NO. 13 LSU 17
ORLANDO, Fla. — Collin Wagner kicked a 21-yard field goal with 57 seconds left to lift No. 11 Penn State to a 19-17 win Friday over No. 13 LSU in a sloppy Capital One Bowl played on a muddy mess of a field courtesy of a driving rainstorm.

The Nittany Lions (11-2) gave up a 13-point lead in the second half after Stevan Ridley’s 1-yard touchdown run put LSU (9-4) ahead 17-16 with 12:49 left.

But quarterback Daryll Clark led the Nittany Lions on the game-winning, 12-play drive in crunch time. Penn State had two critical third-down conversions to help set up Wagner’s game-winner — one of four field goals on the day for kicker.

Penn State coach Joe Paterno got his record 24th bowl win and handed Les Miles his first loss in five bowls as LSU coach.

No. 4 Purdue beats No. 6 West Virginia

WEST LAFAYETTE, Ind. — Jajuan Johnson had 25 points and 10 rebounds, and No. 4 Purdue beat No. 6 West Virginia 77-62 on Friday in a matchup of unbeatens.

Robbie Hummel scored 18 points and E’Twaun Moore added 15 for the Boilermakers, whose largest lead was 26 points.

Purdue (13-0) completed its nonconference scheduled and is one of five unbeaten teams in the nation. The Mountaineers (11-1) were bidding for their first 12-0 start since the 1957-58 season.

Purdue handled West Virginia’s star guard combination of Da’Sean Butler and Devin Ebanks. Butler scored 17 points on 5-of-14 shooting. Ebanks scored 11 points on 3-of-7 shooting.

Purdue led 37-32 at half-time and outscored West Virginia 14-2 in the first 3:26 of the second half to take control.

NO. 19 NEW MEXICO 68, DAYTON 66

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Dairese Gary scored seven of his 18 points in the final two minutes to help No. 19 New Mexico beat Dayton 68-66 on Friday night.

Darington Hobson added 15 points, eight rebounds, and seven assists for New Mexico, while Roman Martinez added 17 points and six rebounds.

The Flyers (10-3) held a brief 37-36 lead early in the second half on London Warren’s breakaway dunk.

New Mexico (14-1) quickly answered as Martinez hit consecutive 3-pointers.

NO. 20 TEXAS TECH 76, MCNEESE ST. 75

LUBBOCK, Texas — Mike Singletary scored 27 points as No. 20 Texas Tech rallied to beat McNeese State.

Singletary gave Texas Tech (11-2) its first lead of the game, 64-62, with 8:47 remaining in the game. For about five minutes neither team could pull ahead by more than one point. Then Patrick Richard hit a 3-pointer as the shot clock expired with 3:22 remaining to put the Cowboys up 73-71.

Nick Okorie got a layup and a free throw on Texas Tech’s next possession to go up 74-73.

Knicks edge Hawks in OT

ATLANTA — Nate Robinson scored 11 of his 41 points in overtime in a dramatic return to New York’s lineup, and the Knicks beat the Hawks 112-108 on Friday night for their second win in Atlanta this season.

Playing for the first time since Dec. 1, Robinson entered the game with 3:01 remaining in the opening period. He made 18 of 24 shots from the field, came within four points of his career high and had eight assists.

Robinson had 30 points in regulation and then dominated the overtime by scoring 11 of the Knicks’ 13 points. Three of his baskets in the extra period gave New York a lead, including a three-point play with 2:09 remaining for a 108-105 advantage.

Wilson Chandler added

24 points for New York.

MAGIC 106, TIMBERWOLVES 94

MINNEAPOLIS — Rashard Lewis scored 21 points, and Matt Barnes added 17 to help the Orlando Magic snap a three-game road losing streak with a 106-94 victory over the Minnesota Timberwolves on Friday night.

Jonny Flynn led Minnesota with 23 points, Kevin Love added 17 points and 10 rebounds, and Al Jefferson had 14 points and 10 rebounds.

The Magic, who have won five of six overall, won despite below-average scoring nights from Vince Carter and Dwight Howard. The two entered the game averaging a combined 36.5 points, but Carter was held to 12 points and Howard had nine.

“We’re excited to get this message out,” Petersen said. “We don’t want this to take away the reason we are here for this great experience, to make this about this contract, but we’re so appreciative and humbled by the whole situation.”

Bleymaier said the timing was also vital because of the recruiting season. With so much turmoil among other programs across the country, with coaches like Brian Kelly and Rich Rodriguez bailing on programs they built, it was important to put recruits’ minds at ease.

“It’s critical,” Bleymaier said. “The recruiting season is in high gear right now. We don’t want any questions about who’s going to be heading this program, not only at the top, but with the whole staff. We did address the assistant coaches in this negotiation. We want to keep this whole staff together.”

The last time Petersen signed a deal he made sure his assistant coaches also got raises. Petersen inferred that the case was the same on New Year’s Day.

“I am appreciative of this opportunity ... to stay here as long as possible,”

Petersen said. “I don’t think about it just for me. I think about it for our coaches as well. The longer we can keep our crew intact, the better for Boise State.”

Bleymaier said no other school had contacted him “recently” to talk to Petersen, but said he would be naïve to think his head coach wasn’t often in consideration for other jobs.

The thing about Petersen is that he’s not just a football coach. He’s embraced his role as an ambassador for the school. His influence on the community and the attention his team draws to the university are immeasurable.

Bowden’s first Mountaineers team in 1970.

“It’s got to be memorable,” Bowden said. “It’s my last dadgum ballgame after 57 years of coaching.”

Bowden leaves as major college football’s second-winningest coach. Joe Paterno earned his 394th victory Friday in the Capital One Bowl as Penn State beat LSU 19-17, now the official winner of the back-and-forth race to be the game’s all-time win leader, something that wasn’t lost on Bowden.

Paterno could win No. 400 next year. By his own math, Bowden’s already beyond that benchmark.

“How about them 22 wins I got at South Georgia previous six games.

Pryor’s career at Ohio State has been about his inadequacies as much as his strengths, and he has been hammered by critics in the Big Ten and elsewhere for numerous flaws in his game. Yet with Ohio State nursing a two-point lead in the fourth quarter, he took charge during a 13-play, 81-yard drive eating up more than six minutes — part of the Buckeyes’ 41:37 total time-of-possession advantage.

Pryor converted a third-and-13 play near midfield with about nine minutes to play on a remarkable 26-yard catch by tight end Jake Ballard, who leaped high to snatch it. After another third-down conversion, Posey made an impressive TD catch, turning both directions and snagging Pryor’s pass away from his body before tumbling over the goal line.

After Oregon’s Morgan Flint missed a 44-yard field goal, Pryor drove the Buckeyes one more time, finishing with emphasis by gaining a first down with a 12-yard run right after Oregon called its final time-out.

LeGarrette Blount scored an early touchdown for the Ducks, but the once-suspended tailback also fumbled out of the end zone in the third quarter, ending a potential scoring drive.

“I just wanted to lead the team as best I can,” Pryor said. “The defense helped out a lot.”

Indeed, Ohio State’s defense did much of the work, largely reducing the Ducks’ high-flying, no-huddle offense to ineffectiveness. Jeremiah Masoli passed for just 81 yards, while LaMichael James rushed for 70 — but a series of big plays and kick returns by Kenjon Barner kept the 96th Rose Bowl close until Pryor took control of the final minutes.

“We have an up-tempo defense and they run, they hit and they prepare,” coach Jim Tressel said. “Terrelle did a heck of a job.”

Oregon (10-3) made a remarkable comeback from its season-opening loss to Boise State to win its first Pac-10 title since 2001, but the Ducks haven’t won the Rose Bowl since the game’s third edition in 1917, back when the Granddaddy of Them All was a toddler.

Masoli’s 1-yard TD run put Oregon up 17-16 early in the third quarter, but the Ducks’ powerful offense never scored again. Oregon ran for 179 yards, the second-most allowed by Ohio State this season, but the Ducks were one-dimensional. Oregon, in its first Rose Bowl since 1995, had scored at least 37 points in its or fewer, with two setbacks coming in overtime.

Gosar said his team has worked on scenarios to “build a lead, keep a lead and extend a lead.” The players have also spent time at the free-throw line, where they’ve struggled in recent losses. Minimizing turnovers will also be pivotal to how they finish the season.

Sturm's OT goal gives Bruins 2-1 win at Fenway

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Bruins provided their own unique finish to Fenway Park's history of memorable endings.

In the stadium where Ted Williams hit his 521st homer into the bullpen in the last bat of his career in 1960, and Carlton Fisk waved his homer fair down the left field line, winning Game 6 of the 1975 World Series, Marco Sturm's overtime goal Friday gave the Bruins a 2-1 victory over the Philadelphia Flyers in the Winter Classic.

Sturm's heroics certainly doesn't measure up to those. But for the winners of the first NHL game in baseball's oldest stadium, it was a moment they won't soon forget.

"It's probably going to be my most memorable goal ever and I'm going to enjoy it," Sturm said.

The rink ran from the left field to right field foul lines, primarily across the infield, with the center dot at second base — the spot where Dustin Pedroia makes his double-play pivot.

When Sturm scored at 1:57 of overtime, teammates poured off the bench and surrounded him behind the net where short left field would be for baseball games.

Despite the loss that ended the Flyers' four-game winning streak, coach Peter Laviolette was excited to be a part of the NHL's third annual New Year's Day outdoor game.

"The experience is once-in-a-lifetime," he said. "Bruins, Flyers, 40,000 fans on a perfect day, you couldn't ask for anything better for the game of hockey."

As the minutes ticked away, it looked like the Bruins might end up like many teams that faced Roger Clemens in Fenway: scoreless.

Danny Syvret gave the Flyers the lead at 4:42 of the second period with the first goal of his career. And with less than 5 minutes left, goalie Michael Leighton's scoreless streak had gone over 150 minutes and the sellout crowd of 38,112 had little to cheer.

"For a while there, I didn't know if they were going to ever find out how these fans were going to react if we scored a goal," Boston coach Claude Julien said.

But then Mark Recchi, a former Flyer, tied it on a power play when he deflected Derek Morris' shot past Leighton with 2:18 left in the third period. Sturm capped the comeback when he tipped in a pass from Patrice Bergeron for his team-leading 14th goal.

"It was a phenomenal day," Bergeron said. "It was a nice ending."

OPINION

“Somebody screwed up big time.”
— Sen. Kit Bond of Missouri, in announcing hearings this month as part of the investigation into the attempted Detroit jetliner bombing.

Cassia farmers go to great lengths to save a stranger

CHEERS: To Cassia County residents Jeff Chatburn and LeRoy Robinson, for plucking a downed pilot from the top of the Cotterell Mountains in the dead of night.

Thaddeus Bryce Fickel of Hermiston, Ore., was flying a fixed-wing single-engine Cessna 172 when it crashed below the ridge of the mountains at 6:45 p.m. on Dec. 23.

Robinson said he and Chatburn had heard radio traffic on the scanner and knew that Mini-Cassia Search and Rescue had located Fickel on the east side of the mountains. They then decided to try and make it up the other side in Chatburn's Massey-Ferguson tractor.

“I knew on the Malta side (where the plane crashed) it was too steep for Search and Rescue to make it up,” Chatburn said. “There are only three trails over there. So with a little coaching from my wife I went to see if I could help.”

Robinson said he had tried to make it up the hill in his pickup but had gotten the truck stuck about half way up before getting onto Chatburn's tractor.

When they reached the top they could see Search and Rescue's lights below so they knew they were in the right area. A Cassia County deputy sheriff made a cell phone call to them and guided them in to the crash site about 10:30 p.m.

Fickel was cold, but not seriously injured.
“ it was blowing awfully hard and was really cold,” Chatburn said. “I was really glad we went.”

Chatburn and Robinson represent the best of Idaho spirit.

JEERS: To gubernatorial candidate Rex Rammell, for his ham-fisted efforts to drag The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints into his campaign.

“In order to motivate my fellow elders in the LDS church, I have invited many to attend meetings to discuss Joseph (Smith's) prophecy and how we can help save the Constitution,” he said last month. “Some people, LDS and non-LDS, think it is inappropriate for me to hold such meetings. I think that is ridiculous.

“I have and will hold meetings with all kinds of groups in Idaho. I will speak to each group on matters that are of interest to and directly affect them individually. As such, it would only be appropriate for me to address Joseph Smith's prophecy with people who believe he was a prophet.”

In a statement, the church made clear it wants no part of that gambit.

“The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is politically neutral and does not endorse or promote any candidate, party or platform,” spokesman Kim Farrah said. “Accordingly, we hope that the campaign practices of political candidates would not suggest that their candidacy is supported by or connected to the church.”

The Mormon church has a long history of being scrupulously nonpartisan. Rammell knew that, and should have respected the tradition.

CHEERS: To just-retired 5th District Judge Barry Wood for 23 distinguished years on the bench, including 15 as a district judge.

He spent 10 years as administrative judge of the district, and in 1999 succeeded Daniel Hurlbutt as the presiding judge of the massive Snake River Basin Adjudication.

Wood presided over some of south-central Idaho's highest-profile cases, including the trial of Bellevue teenager Sarah Johnson, who was convicted of killing both of her parents, and a landmark ruling tossing out the state's rules for conjunctive management of water that was later overturned by the Supreme Court.

Through it all, he earned a reputation for fairness and thorough knowledge of the law.

South-central Idaho has had more than its share of extraordinary jurists over the past 30 years — Lloyd Webb, Monte Carlson, George Granata, Hurlbutt and current Idaho Supreme Court Justice Roger Burdick, to name a few. Wood certainly earned a place on that list.

We look forward to setting a new record next year as we celebrate 100 years of Scouting.

T.F. basketball show a high-flying success

On Nov. 18, 2009, the Habitat for Humanity of Magic Valley hosted the Harlem Ambassadors professional show basketball team for a night of high-flying slam dunks, hilarious comedy and feel-food family entertainment.

The Harlem Ambassadors would like to extend a special thank you to event organizers Linda Fleming and Bob Forster, who planned and promoted the game. The Habitat Hoopsters proved to be an energetic, enthusiastic and challenging team, and we thank all the players for their good sportsmanship.

The event would not have been possible without the support and generosity of the local community sponsors, the Habitat for Humanity of Magic Valley members and the event volunteers. The Harlem Ambassadors thank the community of Twin Falls for its warm hospitality and look forward to returning to Twin Falls in the future.

Theater owners help feed the needy

We would like to thank a local business for helping our economically disadvantaged families and kids.

Nov. 14, 2009, marked the 26th anniversary of Interstate Amusements'

“Can of Food Movies,” which collects food for immediate holiday distribution through South Central Community Action Partnership. The owners of that business are Larry and Kim Roper. Interstate Amusements provided three feature movies shown all day for families in exchange for a couple of cans of food.

The generosity of the community was also apparent, as many who attended the movies exceeded the required number of cans needed for admission. Beta Sigma Phi, and the College of Southern Idaho Baseball team and Rodeo Club volunteered with boxing more than 5,000 pounds of food collected, representing 2,408 movie tickets.

Over the years, Larry and Kim Roper have given so much enjoyment to so many people without once asking for anything in exchange. We are truly blessed to have them in our community!

Subdivision pitches in to assist refugees

Thank you to the generous residents of Woodland Hills subdivision in Twin Falls!

I am a College of Southern Idaho honors student who did a donation drive in my neighborhood for the Refugee Center. I asked my neighbors to put their donations on their porches for me to pick up and got an overwhelming response.

The CSI Refugee Center helps hundreds of immigrants coming into the Magic Valley by providing them with places to live, job opportunities and basic living necessities. There is a huge need for warm clothing, cooking utensils, furniture and appliances. The amazing kindness of my neighbors has helped to meet many of those needs by donating.

Thank you so much! Your items are helping people in great need of a new start here in the Magic Valley. I hope you are all blessed for your generosity. It's a privilege of live in such a giving community.

Obama's calm about terrorism unwarranted

WASHINGTON — I was walking through a deserted downtown on Christmas Eve with a friend, past the lonely, gray Treasury Building, past the snowy White House with no president inside.

“I hope the terrorists don't think this is a good time to attack,” I said, looking protectively at the White House, which always looks smaller and more vulnerable and beautiful than you expect, no matter how often you see it up close.

I thought our guard might be down because of the holiday; now I realize our guard is down every day.

Maureen Dowd

One thrilling thing about moving from W. to Barack Obama was that Obama seemed like an avatar of modernity.

W., Dick Cheney and Rummy kept ceaselessly dragging us back into the past. America seemed to have lost her ingenuity, her quickness, her man-on-the-moon bravura, her Bugs Bunny panache.

Were we clever and inventive enough to protect ourselves from the new breed of Flintstones-hardy yet Facebook-savvy terrorists?

W.'s favorite word was “resolute,” but despite gazillions spent and Cheney's bluster, our efforts to shield ourselves seemed flaccid.

Obama's favorite word is “unprecedented,” as Carol Lee of Politico pointed out. Yet he often seems mired in the past as well, letting his hallmark legislation get loaded up with old-school bribes and pork; surrounding himself with Clintonites; continuing the Bushies' penchant for secrecy and expansive executive privilege; doubling down in Afghanistan while acting as though he's getting out; and failing to capitalize on snazzy new technology while agencies thumb through printouts and continue their old turf battles.

Even before a Nigerian with links to al-Qaida tried to blow up a Northwest Airlines jet headed to Detroit, travelers could see we had made no progress toward a technologically wondrous Philip K. Dick universe.

We seemed to still be behind the curve and reactive, patting down grannies and 5-year-olds, confiscating snow globes and lip glosses.

Instead of modernity, we have airports where security is so retro that taking away pillows and blankets and bathroom breaks counts as a great leap forward.

If we can't catch a Nigerian with a powerful explosive powder in his oddly feminine-looking underpants and a syringe full of acid, a man whose own father had alerted the U.S. Embassy in Nigeria, a traveler whose ticket was paid for in cash and who didn't check bags, whose visa renewal had been denied by the British, who had studied Arabic in al-Qaida sanctuary Yemen, whose name was on a counterterrorism watch list, who can we catch?

We are headed toward the moment when screeners will watch watch-listers sashay through while we have to come to the airport in hospital gowns, flapping open in the back.

In a rare bipartisan success, House members tried to prevent the Transportation Security Administration from implementing full-body imaging as a screening tool at airports.

Just because Republicans helped lead the ban on better technology and opposed airport security spending doesn't mean they'll stop Cheneying the Democrats for subverting national security.

Before he left for vacation, Obama tried to shed his Spock mien and juice up the empathy quotient on jobs. But in his usual inspiring/listless cycle, he once more appeared chilly in his response to the chilling episode on Flight 253, issuing bulletins through his press secretary and hitting the links. At least you have to seem concerned.

On Tuesday, Obama stepped up to the microphone to admit what Janet Napolitano had first tried to deny: that there had been “a systemic failure” and a “catastrophic breach of security.”

But in a mystifying moment that was not technically or emotionally reassuring, there was no live video and it looked as though the Obama operation was flying by the seat of its pants.

Given that every utterance of the president is usually televised, it was a throwback to radio days — just at the moment we sought reassurance that our security has finally caught up to “Total Recall.”

All that TV viewers heard, broadcast from a Marine base in Kaneohe Bay, was the president's disembodied voice, talking about “deficiencies.”

Citing the attempt of the Nigerian's father to warn U.S. authorities six months ago, the president intoned: “It now appears that weeks ago this information was passed to a component of our intelligence community but was not effectively distributed so as to get the suspect's name on a no-fly list.”

In his detached way, Spock was letting us know that our besieged starship was not speeding into a safer new future, and that we still have to be scared.

Heck of a job, Barry.

December casualty-free for Americans in Iraq

By Michael Hastings
Special to The Washington Post

BAGHDAD — No Americans died in combat in Iraq in December, a milestone for the U.S. military, the top U.S. commander in the country said Friday.

“December was the first month that the U.S. had zero battle casualties in Iraq,” Gen. Ray Odierno announced at a news conference after a ceremony to mark the change of the Baghdad command’s name from Multi-National Force-Iraq (MNF-I) to United States Forces-Iraq (USF-I).

The ceremony, held at Camp Victory, on Baghdad’s outskirts, represented a turning point in the almost seven-year-long war, symbolizing the transition from a U.S.-led force that was primarily engaged in combat operations to an all-U.S. contingent that will focus on “advising and assisting” Iraqi security forces in preparation for the drastic drawdown of U.S. troops from roughly 110,000 to 50,000 by August 2010.

“In 2006, when I flew over Baghdad, I remember looking down on a city cloaked by darkness and gripped in fear,” Odierno said at the ceremony. “Today, when I fly over Baghdad, I see hope, with bright lights and busy traffic.”

Over the past two years, he said, there has been a 92 percent decrease in security incidents, a 90 percent decrease in high-profile attacks, a 94 percent decrease in civilian casualties and a 90 percent decrease in U.S. casualties.

Attacks have dropped from more than 200 a day two years ago to approximately 15 a day now, according to the head of the U.S. Central Command, Gen. David H. Petraeus, who also attended the ceremony.

The official name change took place in the headquarters of the multinational force, a former palace of Saddam Hussein’s overlooking a series of artificial lakes near the Baghdad airport. The hall was filled with hundreds of U.S. servicemen and women, U.S. diplomats, and a handful of Iraqi dignitaries and military officials.

In his speech, Petraeus said that the ceremony reflected “the continued transition of security responsibilities in Iraq as we enter a year during which the United States mission here will be changed and the U.S. forces will be drawn down.” He added, “It’s a time for reflection on past achievements and on the hard work that clearly still lies ahead.”

“Today is about the military,” said Robert Ford, a U.S. deputy ambassador in Baghdad. “The ceremony marks an important evolution in the role the Americans are playing in Iraq.”

BRAZIL Mudslide kills 17 people at resort

ANGRA DOS REIS, Brazil — A rain-loosened slab of hillside collapsed on three houses and an upscale waterfront lodge after New Year celebrations at an island resort near Rio de Janeiro, killing at least 17 people, Brazilian authorities said.

About 120 rescuers scrambled through mud and around toppled trees and large rocks to search for other survivors of the mudslide that also injured at least 10 people early Friday. Police helicopters and navy vessels were helping in the rescue efforts.

Ten people died earlier in the day from another mudslide elsewhere in the city of Angra dos Reis, and local authorities said nearly 80 mudslides were reported throughout the region, toppling trees and destroying power lines.

HAWAII Limbaugh: Tests show no ailments after chest pain

HONOLULU — Conservative talk radio show host Rush Limbaugh said Friday that tests show nothing wrong with his heart after chest pains hospitalized him earlier this week.

Limbaugh said at a Honolulu news conference that he was being released from The Queen’s Medical Center, where he was rushed Wednesday during a vacation. Doctors said he did not have a heart attack or heart disease.

“The pain was real, and they didn’t know what caused it,” Limbaugh said. Asked whether he was taking painkillers, Limbaugh said no.

RUSSIA Minimum price for vodka set

MOSCOW — The Russian government has set a minimum price for vodka that more than doubles the cost of the cheapest vodka on the market in an effort to fight rampant alcoholism.

The measure also is aimed at reducing the extraordinary number of deaths caused by drinking in Russia.

The minimum price of 89 rubles ($3) for a half liter of vodka (17 ounces) went into effect Friday, the start of the 12-day New Year’s and Orthodox Christmas holiday, when alcohol consumption is at its highest.

Police: Suicide bombing kills 88 in NW Pakistan

By Riaz Khan and Asif Shahzad
Associated Press writers

PESHAWAR, Pakistan — A suicide bomber detonated his explosives-packed vehicle in a crowd of people watching a volleyball tournament in northwest Pakistan, killing 88 people in the deadliest attack in the country in more than two months.

The attack in Lakki Marwat city on Friday appeared to be retaliation against residents who formed militias to drive militants out of the area and a meeting of anti-Taliban leaders being held nearby may have been the actual target, police said.

The blast underscores the difficulty Pakistan has had in stopping militants whose reach extends far beyond Pakistan’s lawless tribal belt and who appear increasingly willing to strike civilians as well as security forces.

The attack was not far from South Waziristan, where the army is waging an offensive against the Pakistani Taliban. That operation has provoked apparent reprisal attacks that have killed more than 500 people since October.

No group claimed responsibility for Friday’s blast, but that is not uncommon when large numbers of civilians are killed.

“The locality has been a hub of militants. Locals set up a militia and expelled the mil-chief Ayub Khan told reporters.

Khan said an anti-Taliban meeting of local tribal elders in a mosque close to the field where the tournament was being held was the real target of the attack, but the driver failed to reach it.

The bomber set off some 550 pounds of high-intensity explosives loaded in the car at the field, which lies in a congested neighborhood, Khan said.

Pakistan Taliban say they carried out CIA attack

MIR ALI, Pakistan (AP) — The Pakistani Taliban claimed Friday that they used a turncoat CIA operative to carry out a suicide bombing that killed seven American CIA employees in Afghanistan as revenge for a top militant leader’s death in a U.S. missile strike.

The announcement was nearly impossible to verify independently because it involves covert operations in a dangerous region. It is highly unusual for the Pakistani Taliban to claim credit for an attack in Afghanistan, and the proclamation followed indications the Afghan Taliban may have been involved in the attack.

CIA spokesman George Little could not confirm the account.

“There is much about the attack that isn’t yet known, but this much is clear: The CIA’s resolve to pursue aggressive counterterrorism operations is greater than ever,” he told The Associated Press.

Once-presidential phrase casualty of word war

DETROIT (AP) — In its annual effort to protect the Queen’s English, a Michigan university is insisting that “shovel ready” be buried, “tweet” be tossed and all “czars” be banished.

Lake Superior State University shamed those and several other words and phrases Thursday when it released its 2009 List of Words to Be Banished from the Queen’s English for Misuse, Over-use and General Uselessness.

It insists that “shovel ready,” incessantly invoked by the Obama administration to sell its $787 billion federal stimulus bill, dug its own grave. It forced its way into speeches and out of the mouths of the president and too many other politicians in past months.

“Stick a shovel in it. It’s done,” seethed Joe Grimm of Bloomfield Hills, Mich., in his nomination to the university’s Word Banishment Committee. Grimm is a visiting journalist at Michigan State University and a former recruiter and editor at the Detroit Free Press.

The exact age of the phrase isn’t known, but it had been a quiet favorite of economic development types for at least a decade — a fondness that led a utility company in upstate New York to secure the shovelready.com Web site in the late 1990s.

“Shovel ready” became a clarion call for the White House during the past year as shorthand for the kind of taxpayer-funded work projects that had been through the design and permitting process and were ready to launch.

Take up citation battle with a judge

Q: While trying to stop during a recent icy day, I started sliding through an intersection, even though I was going under the speed limit. A car was coming on the cross-street, so I decided to keep going, thinking I might cause a crash if I stopped in the intersection.

As luck would have it, an officer was nearby and ticketed me for driving too fast for conditions. Do I have a chance of getting the ticket dropped if I fight the citation?

A: I've said it many times before: you can always throw yourself upon the mercy of the court.

I see this ticket frequently during the winter. Driving under the speed limit doesn't excuse you from sliding through a stop sign, the occurrence of which tells me you were driving too fast for conditions while approaching the intersection.

Most times I see this citation the incident involves a crash, so be glad you missed that factor.

I'd add you got a break by

POLICEMAN DAN

not being cited for running the stop sign as well. Personally, I'd probably pay the ticket and be glad things didn't turn out worse.

While on this subject, I need to warn drivers that if ice and snow are on the ground, you can't drive like you normally do. When driving on slick roads, give yourself twice the travel time you normally would. One other thing — don't blame the roads for crashes. Roads don't cause crashes. Drivers who fail to exercise proper caution while driving on them do.

Q: I was involved in an accident in a parking lot. The officer didn't take a report even though the damage exceeded $1,500. I thought any accident that causes $1,500 or more in damage is reportable. Am I missing something?

A: First off, let's make a clarification: accidents are defined as an unforeseen or unplanned event or circumstance. A crash is defined as, to fall, land or hit with destructive force. We call them crashes because 99.9 percent are not unplanned because most are avoidable. Accidents are usually something you have in your pants from being involved in a crash.

Anyway, crashes that happen on private property, like a parking lot, are not reportable, regardless of the damage. Officers sometimes take the report, even though they are not required to. Citations cannot be issued with these types of crashes, so they typically become a matter for the insurance companies or civil courts to handle.

There are exceptions. If injuries result from a crash on private property, a report must be taken. If a vehicle is damaged and the other vehicle leaves the scene — also called a hit-and-run — a report on the crime is taken, as well as a crash report.

One last thing on crashes: in my opinion, inattentive driving causes most of them. This includes talking on cell phones, eating, checking the stereo, putting on or checking makeup, etc. So if you're doing any of these behind the wheel, think twice about your actions.

Officer down

Please put these officers, killed in the line of duty, and their families in your prayers. God bless them and all the officers that didn't get to spend the holidays with their families.

Is eating fish good for pregnant women?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I would appreciate your comments regarding a statement made recently by a naturalist advising against eating fish because of high levels of contaminants. If this is true, why doesn't the Food and Drug Administration provide more warnings and recommendations regarding this matter? I am a retired OB-GYN and have particular interest in the impact this may have on a pregnant woman and the fetus. Thank you for providing your opinion on this matter.

DEAR DOCTOR: You bring up an important issue that we sometimes choose to forget — there are contaminants in fish. But there are also contaminants in most of the food items we ingest. Everything is relative. The degree of risk depends on the amount eaten.

The most common contaminant is mercury. The recommendation set by the Environmental Protection Agency and the Food and Drug Administration is for a person to eat up to 12 ounces of fish (two average servings per week) of a variety low in mercury. Choices might include shrimp, salmon, catfish, pollock and canned light tuna. When albacore is chosen, the recommendation is six ounces per week because of the elevated amount of mercury in a single serving. Their guidelines indicate that young children, nursing mothers, pregnant women and those who may become pregnant avoid shark, tilefish, king mackerel and swordfish because of high levels of mercury.

ASK DR. GOTT

Fish and shellfish contain protein, selenium, vitamin D and other essential nutrients. They are low in saturated fats and contain omega-3 fatty acids, which may reduce the risk of heart disease. Fish is truly a healthful food far superior to many of the foods we eat regularly.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have read your articles about oil of oregano. I found it at a health store, but cannot find any information on how to use it. I went to the library and checked out several books on herbs, but no luck. Even the health-food store had no information on it. I am troubled by bouts of sinusitis and upper-respiratory problems. I don't know whether I should spray it in my nose or take it internally. Can you provide more information?

DEAR READER: Perhaps the reason no directions are placed on a container is because it is used for several medical purposes. In one of my columns, I responded to a woman who attempted to treat her rosacea, but found it was too strong. I recommended at that time she cut it with an equal part of a carrier, such as olive oil, before applying it to her skin. In your instance, I can only suggest you might want to dab a little (again, half strength) on a wet, warm washcloth and inhale the vapors.

Proponents claim oil of oregano is good for a variety of illnesses, including sinus disorders, because it has some antifungal and antibacterial properties; however, er, to the best of my knowledge, there have been no published trials for its related medical use.

Peter Gott is a retired physician.

The newest area stake center of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints has a modular roof, a choice aimed to get the building finished two months earlier than the usual 12-month construction period.

TREND 2010: Chapel and billboard

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

Religion is never a dull topic in south-central Idaho, and in 2010 there'll be plenty to talk about.

As area churches aim to spark discussion about Jesus through a set of billboards, a local secular group intends to reach out to the community through service projects. New churches are being built to house their faithful, while other congregations seek to grow faith through the Internet.

Prayer and a new meeting place

Tom McGuire, left, of Bossier City, La., and Troy Allen of Arlington, Va., work on building a wall at Eastside Baptist Church in Twin Falls. The pair, along with others from Volunteer Christian Builders, visited the church during the summer to finish outside work on a new auditorium. The church expects the interior to be finished this summer.

Members of Eastside Baptist Church in Twin Falls say their prayers are being answered through a building project. A new 6,000-square-foot auditorium will be completed this summer.

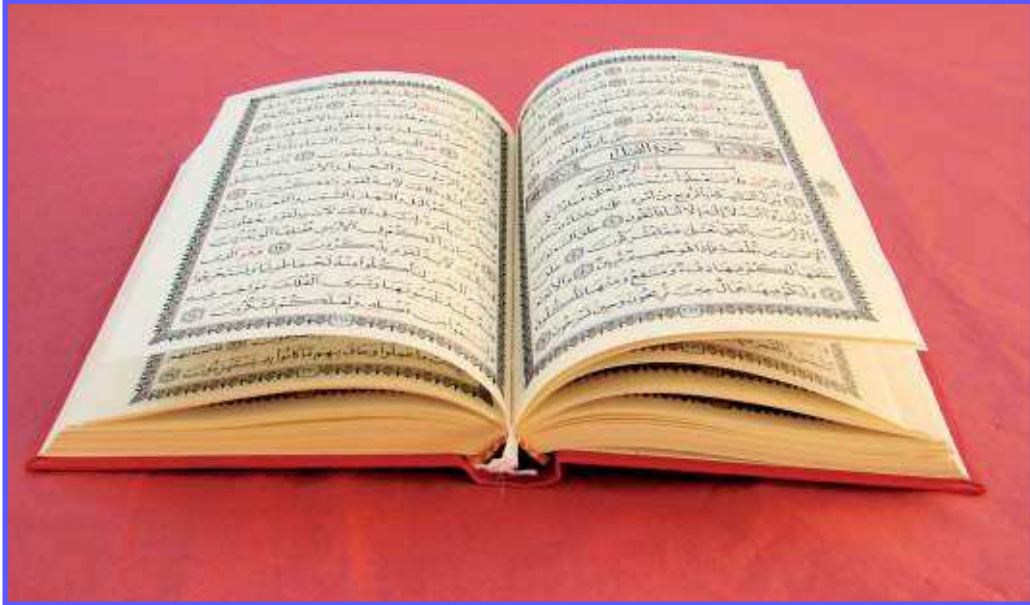

The 80-member church has been in need of a new building for some time, said Pastor Paul Thompson.

They were thrilled when a group of volunteers from Louisiana and Texas arrived last summer to build the walls and roofing. Another volunteer group will arrive in July to finish the inside of the building, Thompson said.

The facility will include a meeting room, kitchen, nursery and restrooms. Once complete it will be used as the church's general meeting place. The existing building will likely be used for other church functions, though Thompson said details haven't yet been planned.

Building cost is estimated at around $330,000, paid by donations from church members.

Muslims open to community

A picture of the Quran, used by Muslims worldwide. Muslims in the Magic Valley say they want others to learn more about who they are by inviting local Boy Scout and other groups to tour the Islamic Center in Twin Falls.

The Islamic Center in Twin Falls — known as a mosque to the 125 or so families who use it for worship — aims to better inform the community about what the facility is and who the people are who use it.

The group secured the building last year, after the city approved a zoning change to the house-like structure once used as a massage clinic.

Though the Muslims who use the building have felt welcome in the area, they say many people do not know about the center or its purpose. This year they'd like more people to visit the facility, said the center's spokesman Imad Eujayl, noting that Boy Scout and other groups are welcome to tour it.

Most of the center's Muslims are refugees from a number of countries, including Sudan, Iraq and Turkey.

The group conducts worship on Fridays. The facility will grow, they say, but it often takes years to fully entrench a center into community life.

Jesus on billboards

Jesus, it is hoped by area church leaders, will be more on the minds and tongues of people in 2010 once a set of billboards go up in Magic Valley.

Ten billboards that pose the question of who Jesus is will be placed at various spots in Burley, Jerome, Filer and Twin Falls, said Mike Smit, director of ministries for Twin Falls Reformed Church.

"Part of the thrust here is to bring some unity among evangelical churches in the area," he said.

The campaign is a joint effort by a number of area churches, which hope to accomplish at least three things in the new year: "It's to create the conversation of who Jesus is, get churches united around a common theme, and help congregations engage the conversation in culture," Smit said.

David Callen, member of Magic Valley Evangelical Free Church in Jerome, is chairman of the campaign committee. The billboards will be in place through January, he said.

If everything goes well, the billboards, which started going up Friday, will be the first of many throughout the year. Look for another set around Easter time, Callen said.

Artist priest finds God in abstract expressionism

By John Rogers
Associated Press writer

POMONA, Calif. — There's no steeple out front, no rows of pews inside, not even so much as a crucifix on display.

Still, this cramped little art studio in the middle of what, until not very long ago, was a street with as many broken dreams as it has potholes, is the closest thing to paradise Father Bill Moore has found. It's the place where the 60-year-old Catholic priest serves God by creating abstract paintings that he sells by the hundreds.

No ordinary preacher, Father Bill, as he's known throughout Pomona's fledgling arts district, long ago discarded his clerical collar in favor of a painter's smock. Only on Sundays does he trade it for holy vestments to deliver Mass at a local church or one of several detention facilities for youthful offenders.

All other times Moore is head of the Ministry of the Arts for the West Coast branch of his religious order, the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary. His job is to serve God by painting whatever comes to mind.

"That's Bill's gift, his talent, and we have to support that," says Father Donal McCarthy, who is the order's West Coast provincial and Moore's superior. "When you've got a creative person, you shouldn't stifle that creativity."

Leaders of the order, founded more than 200 years ago in France, know of no

Father Bill Moore touching one of his pieces of art Oct. 29, in his studio at the Pomona Arts Colony in Pomona, Calif. Moore is head of the Ministry of the Arts for the West Coast branch of his religious order, the Sacred Hearts of Jesus and Mary. His job is to serve God by painting whatever comes to mind.

other member whose only mission has been to paint. But then Moore, a child of the '60s who can quote the words of Jim Morrison, Bruce Springsteen and Jesus Christ with equal facility, has been a barrier-breaker since he ignored his provincial's order his freshman year of college to study either philosophy or theology. He majored in art instead.

"The next year, a letter came from the provincial saying all the students are now encouraged to major in subjects of their choice. I thought that was very cool," Moore recalls with a smile as he sits in the lobby of his modest studio sipping coffee. A copy of underground comic-book artist R. Crumb's "The Book of Genesis" sits on the coffee table and works by Japanese artist Kazumi Tanaka (a personal favorite) are displayed here and there.

Since early childhood, Moore says, he knew he had the calling — to be a painter. The call to be a priest came later.

"I was doing little abstract paintings when I was a little boy, like around 8, 9 years old," Moore recalls.

"My grandmother would just think they were the greatest things," he continues with a laugh. "The rest of the members of my family, they were, ah, kind of more like art critics."

Not that the art world has been all that harsh on him. Moore's works, which are often compared to those of abstract expressionist Mark Rothko, sell for more than $5,000 apiece, and he has been the subject of frequent shows at galleries throughout the Southwest. Any profits he makes from those shows go directly to his order.

Labyrinths have been known to the human race for more than 3,500 years and have been used in many different religious ways by many peoples. The Christian labyrinth, a path of seven circles, is cruciform (shaped like a cross). The use of labyrinths flourished in Europe throughout the 11th and 12th centuries. Medieval pilgrims unable to fulfill their desire to make a pilgrimage to Jerusalem used these sites, which were formed of stone and laid in the floor of the nave of one of the great Gothic cathedrals, as a substitute journey to Jerusalem. Monks, tourists, villagers mark Asian tsunami

PHUKET, Thailand (AP) — Buddhist monks in orange robes chanted on a Thai beach, an Indonesian mother mourned her children at a mass grave, and a man scattered flowers in now-placid waters to commemorate the 230,000 killed five years ago when a tsunami ripped across Asia.

An outpouring of aid that followed the Dec. 26, 2004, tsunami has helped replace homes, schools and entire coastal communities decimated by the disaster. But at Saturday's ceremonies, survivors spoke of the enduring wounds.

Thousands in Indonesia's Aceh province, which was hardest hit, held prayer services at mosques and beside the mass graves where tens of thousands were buried. The 167,000 people who died in Indonesia accounted for more than half the total death toll.

On Saturday's anniversary, Indonesian villagers briefly panicked when another strong earthquake struck deep under the sea off the eastern coast, officials said. Residents in Saumlaki, about 1,680 miles (2,700 kilometers) east of the capital Jakarta, said the magnitude-6.0 quake cut electricity, but there were no reports of damage or injuries.

In Thailand on Saturday, hundreds of residents and foreigners returned to the white-sand beaches on the southern island of Phuket. More than 8,000 people were killed along the country's shores. Buddhist monks in bright orange robes chanted prayers. Onlookers wept and embraced.

Former KKK leader ordained by black church

By Ron Jackson
The Oklahoman

MIAMI, Okla. — On Nov. 29, Oklahoman Johnny Lee Clary knelt before the Church of God in Christ's elders, who ordained him as a minister in what is one of the nation's largest black churches. The fact that Clary is white made the moment historic.

The fact that he is also a former Ku Klux Klan leader made it, at least in Clary's view, something divine.

"We're making history," said Clary, 50, of Miami. "We're building a bridge of racial reconciliation, and what better way to do that than with a former KKK leader ministering in a black church that boasts over 6 million members? I hope I can have a great impact."

Clary made a different kind of contribution to humanity as an angry teenager. He joined the Klan.

Ironically, his ordainment ceremony last month in San Diego shared some of the ritualistic acts of a long-ago Klan ceremony. Yet the two events now stand as the darkest and greatest moments of his life. "The worst thing I ever did was swear an allegiance to the KKK, vowing to hate all Jews and blacks and people of other races," Clary recalled. "I knelt before the Klan leaders as they sprinkled me with water. I then swore an oath to the KKK and the god of the KKK. But they can call their god anything they want, Jesus Christ or whatever. It doesn't matter. Because their god is not the God of the Bible. "Their god is Satan."

Clary rose through the ranks of the White Knights of the KKK, eventually attaining the status of an imperial wizard. He later quit the hate group after a falling out with another Klan leader.

Disillusioned, Clary reached for the Bible. The Word set him free, he said.

Clary soon began preaching to anyone who would listen. Television shows picked up his story, prompting him to appear on talk shows such as "The Phil Donahue Show," "Geraldo," "The 700 Club" and "Sally Jesse Raphael!" In recent years, he has traveled the nation evangelizing and has made annual trips to Australia.

Along the way he crossed paths with Bishop George McKinney, pastor of St. Stephen's Cathedral Church of God in Christ in San Diego and one of the church's 12 elders. The two met more than 15 years ago at a Christian event in Montgomery, Ala.

"Bishop McKinney and I became friends," Clary said. "One day he told me he would ordain me as a minister because the time was needed for racial reconciliation. ... Finally, after years of being sidetracked, I agreed the time was right. My mission is to bring people of all races together."

"The Bible says there is one church, one Lord, one baptism, and so there should be one people."

McKinney said Clary's dramatic turnaround is a testament that the Holy Spirit can even bring a heart filled with hatred, prejudice and destruction under control.

Building the kingdom

Enhanced building technology will help The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints construct chapels more quickly.

The church's newest building in the valley, a stake center on Orchard Drive in Twin Falls, is expected to house stake offices, three wards and about 1,500 members, said local church spokesman Terry McCurdy.

Most of the construction is the same as other chapels; but this one's roof is prefabricated and divided into three parts. That makes installation much easier and quicker.

"It's a new system the church is trying," McCurdy said, because it moves the process along about two months faster than a normal 12-month building project. The church expects to use the process in future projects.

This is the only LDS building in the valley under construction in 2010, McCurdy said, but it is needed because membership outgrew the former stake center on Harrison Street.

The $2.3 million facility will be dedicated in August.

WEIGH IN on the future: Take our survey about expected 2010 trends in worship and faith.

The Internet helping faith

After a struggle with declining membership for the past decade or so, 2010 looks to be a year of growth for Valley of Peace Lutheran Church in Hailey.

The main reason for growth, which has already started: A full-time pastor was installed at the church. Previously, the church was served by retired or part-time pastors, which fluctuated membership.

But the church also is developing a new Web site, which will include a link for prayer requests — something the former site did without.

"That's one of the things that attracted me to the area, their openness to use technology and to be creative in reaching out to a more rural community," said Pastor Steve Barkholtz, 43, appointed to lead the church last June.

His is not the only church to use the Internet for worship purposes. It has started to become a trend in recent years, and a number of Magic Valley churches have an online presence for prayer and worship, including Amazing Grace Fellowship and Immanuel Lutheran in Twin Falls. Other churches, such as Lighthouse Christian Fellowship and Eastside Baptist, keep members updated through their pastors' blogs.

And St. Ignatius Orthodox Christian Church, which professes the ancient Orthodox religion, has come online in recent years and uses new technology to spread its message of hope.

Walking their own way

The number of atheist or agnostic student groups on U.S. campuses has more than doubled in the past two years — from 80 to 162 — according to the Secular Student Alliance, the national organization for the secular student movement.

A new secular group formed last year at the College of Southern Idaho, with about 15 members. In 2010, members expect that number to grow as the group reaches to a broader community audience, said group adviser Brent Jensen. There's already an audience, he said.

"There's quite a few people around here who are interested in the secular-humanist view," Jensen said, noting he's met several people who share his beliefs but are afraid to openly acknowledge that due to their status in the community.

The response has encouraged the group to reach beyond the college campus. Besides celebrating Darwin Day on Feb. 12, the group plans to participate in community service, including volunteering for Habitat for Humanity and Safe House.

The rise of the secular student movement parallels that of the broader secular demographic in the U.S., the only population to have grown in every state according to the 2008 American Religious Identification Survey.

New You Day

We call it New Year's Day. And that makes sense because — well, it is New Year's Day — the first day of a new year. But my friend Henry has another name for it: New Henry Day. Because for Henry, New Year's Day will always be the day he became a new — and better — man.

The first New Henry Day occurred on Jan. 1, 2005. But in order to fully appreciate what happened that day, you have to know a little about what was going on with Henry during the days, months and years leading up to New Henry Day. Henry was a skilled and competent professional, respected by his colleagues and much-honored by his peers. Those who worked with him spoke highly of him, and even those who hadn't actually worked with him had heard of his talent, his good nature and his consummate professionalism.

He was at the top of the world, career-wise. But his personal life was spinning out of control. The most obvious thing was his weight. An athlete of some repute during his college days, he now weighed well over 300 pounds. His doctor warned him that if he didn't start losing weight, he'd soon be facing serious health issues. So he quit going to the doctor. When he felt poorly he prescribed his own medication — he was especially partial to Crown and Coke — which he took with increasing frequency, no matter how he felt.

As you might expect, his wife was not pleased with what she saw happening to her husband. She urged him to find another doctor. She urged him to exercise. She urged him to eat healthier and drink less. He, on the other hand, urged her to leave him alone.

So she did, taking their two children with her.

That was October 2004 — right around Halloween. The last two months of the year were long and painful for Henry. He was alone. He didn't feel well. He didn't sleep well. About the only thing he did well was drink, and that left him foggy and dazed much of the time. His colleagues wondered what was wrong — Henry was different, and not in a good way. When he showed up for work one December morning with alcohol on his breath, his boss took him aside and told him that things needed to change or he would undo all of the good work he had done.

As the new year approached, Henry was at the lowest point in his life. In poor health, unhappy and painfully alone, he knew his boss was right: things needed to change. Henry needed to change — and change now — or everything of any value in his life would be lost forever. In his loneliness he thrashed about looking for a lifeline, something he could cling to, something he could use to pull himself up out of the deep waters into which he had sunk.

At last he found his lifeline in New Year's Day — not the day itself, but the concept. While New Year's Eve may be heavily laden with the weighty baggage of a year full of decisions and choices, both good and bad, New Year's Day always dawns fresh and new. It is a clean page. A blank canvas. An empty spread sheet. Unsullied. Unmarred. Undeified. It is a day of new beginnings. A day to start over. A day of change.

In other words, New Henry Day.

Henry grabbed hold of the concept with both hands. His first act of 2005 was pouring the remnants of his last bottle of Scotch down the drain. His second act was a 20-minute walk around his apartment complex, which left him as drained as the Scotch. His third act was a call to his wife and children, to beg their forgiveness and one more chance.

A chance to change. I won't say it was all easy for Henry after that. It wasn't. There were ups and downs for him as he rebuilt his life, just as there are for all of us in the process of personal growth. But he did it. He changed. And now, five years later, he has his family. He has his health. His career is on the rise again. And if you ask him, he owes it all to New Henry Day.

Or, as I'm going to call it this year, New Joe Day. And I'm hoping you have a Happy New You Day, too!

SPCA finds animal skulls in Philadelphia home

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A report of dogs living in unsanitary conditions led animal control officers to a gruesome scene: remains of dozens of animals that appear to have been sacrificed in religious rituals.

The grisly discovery was made about 4 p.m. Sunday at a house in North Philadelphia.

After unsuccessful attempts to contact the homeowner on Christmas Eve, officials with the Pennsylvania SPCA obtained a warrant to remove the dogs from the home.

Inside, they found remains of dozens of animals that had apparently been sacrificed in religious rituals, Pennsylvania SPCA officer Wayne Smith said.

"Throughout the house, there was skulls of rams, sheep, what appeared to be a monkey, turtle shells, just numerous things," he said.

The two dogs that prompted the search were emaciated and are being treated by veterinarians.

"The whole house was covered in feathers from chickens that had been sacrificed," said George Bengal, director of law enforcement of the Pennsylvania SPCA. Most of the remains were farm animals but investigators also found skeletons they could not immediately identify.

There is no law against sacrificing farm animals for religious purposes, as long as it is done humanely, Bengal said.

"There are a lot of religions out there that still do animal sacrifices," he said. However, the killing of dogs and cats is illegal.

Smith said the homeowner, whose name was not released, contracted swine flu in Mexico and is not being allowed back into the U.S. When he does, Smith says the owner will face animal cruelty charges based on the condition of the dogs.

Authorities believe they are seeking more than one suspect in the case.

Stolen church safe held century-old gold chalices

NORTHVERNON, Ind. — A priest says the safe stolen from a southern Indiana church held golden chalices that date to its founding nearly 170 years ago.

A parishioner of St. Anne's Catholic Church near North Vernon found Monday morning that someone had broken in and taken the safe estimated to weigh more than 700 pounds.

The Rev. Jonathan Meyer says the safe didn't contain any money but instead held objects that have belonged to the church for much of its history.

Jennings County sheriff's Maj. Jerry Shepherd says more than one person was involved with the theft and that the department is looking for any attempt to sell the items.

Swastikas painted on Jewish temple, church in Wisconsin

OSHKOSH, Wis. — Black swastikas were found spray-painted on a Jewish temple and Methodist church in Oshkosh, and police say they're still looking for suspects.

The damage was discovered on Christmas Eve at B'Nai Israel Congregation and Algoma Methodist Church. Avi Stern, the president of the Jewish temple, says he doesn't think the attack was anti-Semitic since a church was also damaged.

Police Sgt. Andrew Lecker says the vandalism could be considered a hate crime, which would enhance the range of penalties.

Most of the vandalism has been cleaned up, and Stern says the healing has already begun. He tells WLUK-TV he's inspired that a number of strangers have called and e-mailed to pledge their support.

Pa. town tells church 'no' to homeless housing

SUGAR NOTCH, Pa. — Officials in a small northeastern Pennsylvania borough are questioning a church's plan to house a group of homeless men for a week.

Holy Family Church in Sugar Notch, Luzerne County, wants to house about 40 homeless men in January. The church got a notice from the borough saying that's a violation of local zoning laws punishable by a $500-a-day fine.

Borough Councilman Herman Balas said he's acting in the best interest of his constituents. He said some of the homeless men could be violent or drug users or have shady pasts.

Vince Kabacinski is director of VISION, a non-profit organization that coordinates the temporary shelter program. He says dozens of area churches participate.

Earl Lavern Taylor

Earl Lavern Taylor, 80, of Oakley, passed away on Dec. 29, 2009, at his daughter's home in Spanish Fork, Utah.

Earl was born on March 9, 1929, in the Oakley Basin of Idaho, to Theodore Rubin Taylor and Laura Blanche Hymans Taylor, and spent his younger years and attended school there.

Earl served in the military in the Korean War. He was a member of the Wahoo Riding Club in Salem, Utah, for many years and recalled those memories as some of his fondest. He always had a small "farm" of animals and enjoyed raising them; it kept him young and active.

The saying "A dog is man's best friend" was spoken for Earl; he had several close companions in his dogs and spent a lot of time with them. Earl loved spending time with his family every chance he got and made many good friends in Oakley who became a second family to him.

He married Lois Jean Davis in February of 1954 and they had three children. He later married Mary Carter and they had two children.

Earl's greatest joy was his family and he is survived by his five children, Ron (Ganene) Taylor, Kenny (Karen) Taylor, Pam (Leon) Peterson, Trent (Karen) Taylor, Todd (Wendy) Taylor, four stepchildren, 15 grandchildren, 14 great-grandchildren, 18 step-grandchildren, 19 step-great-grandchildren, one brother, Marvin Taylor, and three sisters, Pauline Coster, Merna Cooper and Norma Wright. He was preceded in death by his parents, Theodore and Laura, two brothers, Howard and Norman, and a great-granddaughter, Alex Gracie.

Funeral services for Earl will be held at the Oakley LDS Church, Monday, Jan. 4, at 11 a.m. A viewing will be held one hour prior to services at 10 a.m. Interment will be in the Basin Cemetery following services. Services are under the direction of Hansen Payne Mortuary.

An endangered desert tortoise sits in the middle of a road in the proposed location of three BrightSource Energy solar-energy generation complexes in the eastern Mojave Desert several miles from an old mining and railroad townsite called Ivanpah, Calif., in September 2008. The Oakland, Calif.-based BrightSource Energy has been pushing for more than two years for permission to erect 400,000 mirrors on the site to gather the sun's energy. It could become the first project of its kind on U.S. Bureau of Land Management property, leaving a footprint for others to follow on vast stretches of public land across the West.

Rare Calif. tortoises could stand in the way of giant solar energy complex

By Michael R. Blood
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — On a strip of California's Mojave Desert, two dozen rare tortoises could stand in the way of a sprawling solar-energy complex in a case that highlights mounting tensions between wilderness conservation and the nation's quest for cleaner power.

Oakland, Calif.-based BrightSource Energy has been pushing for more than two years for permission to erect 400,000 mirrors on the site to gather the sun's energy. It could become the first project of its kind on U.S. Bureau of Land Management property, leaving a footprint for others to follow on vast stretches of public land across the West.

The construction would come with a cost: Government scientists have concluded that more than 6 square miles of habitat for the federally threatened desert tortoise would be permanently lost.

The Sierra Club and other environmentalists want the complex relocated to preserve what they call a near-pristine home for rare plants and wildlife, including the protected tortoise, the Western burrowing owl and bighorn sheep.

"It's actually a good project. It's just located in the wrong place," said Ileene Anderson of the Center for Biological Diversity, a Tucson, Ariz.-based environmental group.

The dispute is likely to echo for years as more companies seek to develop solar, wind and geothermal plants on land treasured by environmentalists who also support the growth of alternative energy. In an area of stark beauty, the question will be what is worth preserving and at what cost as California pushes to generate one-third of its electricity from renewable sources by 2020.

The Bureau of Land Management has received more than 150 applications for large-scale solar projects on 1.8 million acres of federal land in California, Nevada, Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado and Utah. In California alone, such projects could claim an area the size of Rhode Island, transforming the state into the world's largest solar farm.

BrightSource Energy wants permission to construct three solar power plants on the site that together would generate enough power each year for 142,000 homes, potentially generating billions of dollars of revenue over time.

The sun's power is used to heat water and make steam, which in turn drives turbines to create electricity. Built in phases, the project would include seven, 459-foot metal towers, a natural gas pipeline, water tanks, steam turbine generators, boilers and buildings for administration and maintenance. Each plant would be surrounded by 8-foot high steel fencing.

The site has virtually unbroken sunshine most of the year, and is near transmission lines that can carry the power to consumers.

In November, federal and state biologists reviewing the plan proposed that the company catch and move the tortoises and preserve 12,000 acres elsewhere, a proposal that could cost BrightSource an estimated $25 million.

John Kessler, a project manager for the California Energy Commission, said there is disagreement with BrightSource over what the company would pay for long-term maintenance for the land that would be purchased, and the company also believes the cost of buying it should be less.

The company declined to comment directly on those issues.

Texting while driving, smoking target of '10 laws

By Scott Bauer
Associated Press writer

MADISON, Wis. — Texting while driving, smoking in public and cooking with artery-clogging trans fats will be that much harder under a bevy of state laws that took effect around the country on Friday.

Faced with huge budget shortfalls and little extra money to throw around, state lawmakers exercised their (inexpensive) power to clamp down on impolite, unhealthy and sometimes dangerous behaviors in 2009.

Even toy guns were targeted.

Among the most surprising new laws set to take effect in 2010 is a smoking ban for bars and restaurants in North Carolina, the country's largest tobacco producer that has a history steeped in tradition around the golden leaf.

Starting today — stragglers get a one-day reprieve to puff away after their New Year's Day meals — smokers will no longer be allowed to light up in North Carolina bars and restaurants. There are exceptions for country clubs, Elks lodges and the like, but the change is a dramatic one for North Carolina, whose tax coffers long depended on Big Tobacco.

Virginia approved a similar law that took effect Dec. 1, but it's more accommodating to smokers because it allows establishments to offer areas in which to light up as long as they have separate ventilating systems.

Not including Virginia and its partial ban, smoking will be banned in restaurants in 29 states and in bars in 25, according to the American Lung Association.

And 12 more states — including Florida, Michigan and Arkansas — have passed laws requiring manufacturers to make their cigarettes less likely to start fires, leaving Wyoming as the only state without such laws, according to the Coalition for Fire-Safe Cigarettes.

America's roads should be safer in 2010, as bans on texting while driving go into effect in New Hampshire, Oregon and Illinois. According to the Governors Highway Safety Association, that will make 19 states that have outlawed the practice, not including six states that prohibit using hand-held cell phones while behind the wheel.

Teen suicidal thoughts may be linked to late nights, study says

By Simeon Bennett
Bloomberg News

Late nights may make teenagers more prone to depression and suicidal thoughts by depriving them of sleep, according to a study by researchers at Columbia University.

Teens whose parents let them go to bed past midnight were 24 percent more likely to be depressed and 20 percent more likely to have contemplated suicide than peers whose parents set bedtimes at or before 10 p.m., the researchers said today in the journal Sleep. Earlier set bedtimes may be protective because they increase the likelihood of getting enough sleep, they said.

The study is the first to show that sleep deprivation may cause depression and suicidal thoughts in adolescents. Previous research has shown a link, though the relationship wasn't clear because insomnia can be a symptom of depression.

"Our results strengthen the argument that lack of sleep can cause depression as opposed to simply being a symptom of depression," James Gangwisch, the study's lead author and an assistant professor at the university's medical center, said in an e-mail. "Adequate quality sleep could therefore be a preventative measure against depression and a treatment for depression."

About 4,400 Americans between the ages of 10 and 24 commit suicide each year, making it the third-most common cause of death in the age group, according to the Atlanta-based Centers for Disease Control and Prevention.

Gangwisch and colleagues studied data from 15,659 U.S. students, who were in grades seven to 12 between 1994 and 1996, and their parents. Seven percent of the teens were found to have depression and 13 percent said they seriously contemplated suicide during the preceding 12 months. The association was stronger for girls and older children, according to the study.

Teenagers whose parents said they should go to bed at 10 p.m. or earlier slept for 8 hours 10 minutes on average, 40 minutes more than those with bedtimes set at midnight or later, the researchers found. That's less than the nine or more hours of sleep for adolescents recommended by the American Academy of Sleep Medicine, a joint publisher of the journal.

KENTUCKY U.S. mine deaths hit record low of 34 in 2009

FRANKFORT — The number of miners killed on the job in the United States fell for a second straight year to 34.

That's the fewest since officials began keeping records nearly a century ago. It's down from the previous low of 52 in 2008.

U.S. Mine Safety and Health Administration documents show 18 of the deaths occurred in coal mines, down from 29 in 2008. Sixteen were in gold, copper and other types of mines, down from 22.

Most involved above-ground truck accidents on mine property, though some deaths resulted from rock falls and being struck by machinery.

UTAH Crews contend with 19 pythons at trailer fire

ST. GEORGE — Crews responding to a trailer fire in southern Utah had another factor to contend with: snakes.

Kristeen Checketts, the animal control officer in St. George, says there were about 19 pet pythons in the trailer when it caught fire Thursday morning at an RV park in town.

Once the fire was put down, Checketts and firefighters began pulling out snake after snake, most in cages and some up to 18 feet long.

Checketts says 11 survived. The snakes' owner tried to revive another by massaging it and blowing into its mouth through a plastic pipe.

Fire Capt. Jason Whipple says the accidental fire started with a heat lamp in one of the snake cages.

The activities proposed comprise a project for which a Finding of No Significant Impact on the environment was published on December 15, 2009. PUBLISH: January 2, 2010

IF JANUARY 2 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Right now you may need extra exercise or sports to distract you from pie-in-the-sky ideas or romantic misconceptions. However, in late March the cosmic weather improves and you can succeed at anything you put your mind to doing. Not only is your business expertise flourishing, but you may have added opportunities through your social connections. During March, put cherished plans into motion and they will fulfill their promise. Hook up with other people for wise, beneficial advice or heartfelt support. You will have better business judgment than usual during May.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): The New Year is here. Rather than having one foot in the past and one foot in the future commit to a positive course of action.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Life is like a box of chocolates and you can't predict what will be in the center of the one you choose until you take a bite.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your crystal ball could be fogged up and can't tell you what tomorrow will bring. This isn't a good time to make major purchases.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Keep the wheels turning forward. Apply the oil of politeness to keep the mechanisms of friendship running smoothly.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be willing to display your competency in a variety of areas. Extend a hand in friendship to someone and show off your talents.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You may feel as though some part of your life has been like traveling on the Yellow Brick Road. You can relax safely with family.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Relax after a busy week. Put business matters aside until Monday and rivet your attention on lighter and more enjoyable pastimes.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Communicate. If you rely on secrecy or refuse to share your thoughts, you might leave someone with the wrong impression.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your street smarts will help you make unbeatable decisions but you may need the well-considered advice of a certain someone.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Build bridges; don't try to swim the channel against the current. You might understand what someone has been saying all along.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Even when your lips are sealed, there is a positive "buzz" about you. Your reputation gets a shot in the arm from an unknown source.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Make a necessary change. Some of the goals that you previously thought highly important could now seem insignificant.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

*"Hope is a subtle glutton;
He feeds upon the fair;
And yet, inspected closely,
What abstinence is there!"*
— Emily Dickinson

The spade queen was led against four hearts. After declarer won with his ace, he drew trumps. The contract appeared to hinge on finding the club queen onside, since declarer surely has three top losers in the other side-suits — one spade and two diamonds.

However, giving himself an extra chance, South first tried a low diamond toward dummy. As no honor appeared from West, declarer tried the effect of inserting the eight. When this forced East to take the trick with the king, declarer was home. A low spade from East to West's 10 was followed by the club 10. South won, then led the diamond queen to knock out the defense's diamond ace. At this point South had established two winners in his hand, on which to discard dummy's losing clubs.

Declarer's diamond play looks illogical, as if he were creating an extra loser for himself. But in practice his maneuver was unlikely to cost since he was going to have two top losers in the suit anyway, whatever he did. Had the diamond eight lost to the nine, South would still have lost only two diamond tricks, and there was always the club finesse in reserve. (Notice there is also a second-degree assumption here: East could not have the ace and king of diamonds as well as the club queen. If he did, given that he also held the spade king, he would surely have opened. So leading to the diamond eight was not likely to cost the contract.)

ANSWER: Your partner has shown a 5-6 hand pattern (or conceivably a strong 5-5 with good clubs and bad spades), and your four trumps are enough to commit the hand to game. With no controls in the red suits, I think a simple jump to five clubs is adequate. (With a first- or second-round red-suit control, you might bid four clubs to give partner space to show his hand.)
