T.F. County Sheriff's Office, M.V. emergency responders train today with National Guard

There was an unknown agent making people very sick on Wednesday in Twin Falls — at least in a training scenario.

Officers waiting outside a Twin Falls home in question didn't know what was to blame, but millions of dollars worth of equipment parked outside would solve the mystery.

Methyl parathion, an insecticide, was the culprit.

This scenario was part of federally funded training, which authorities from the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office, the Magic Valley Emergency Response Team (MVERT), Twin Falls County Department of Emergency Services, and the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality received Wednesday from the Idaho Army National Guard 101st Weapons of Mass Destruction Civil Support Team.

H&W: Cuts won't impact child-safety services

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

BOISE — Officials with the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare on Wednesday told lawmakers the state's role in promoting the safety of children will not be reduced despite coming budget cuts.

Michelle Britton, administrator of the agency's Division of Family and Community Services, told the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee child-safety measures will

"They repeatedly said we'll focus on safety first and those services will be provided. That was heartening news."

— Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert

come first and not be jeopardized as it deals with budget cuts, but added the division will have to work harder as caseloads increase.

"No, we're not in any risk of harm coming," she said, when asked if child safety may be lost as budget cuts are made.

The state's $55.8 million budget for child welfare, foster care and assistance in fiscal 2011 represents a $2.3 million reduction from its initial 2010 budget. To make up the difference, 25 positions within the division would remain vacant.

Budget reductions come at a time when Health and Welfare has increased adoptions of children while also decreasing the number of children in foster care.

Between 2007 and 2009, for example, the number of Idaho children in foster care decreased from 3,421 to 3,031. Adoptions through the agency increased from 1,185 in 2007 to 1,564 in 2009.

"Permanency for children today is unequivocal," Britton said, explaining that it benefits the children and

Judge rejects Johnson's bid for freedom after claiming innocence for '93 homicides

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

GOODING — A judge has slammed the door on Robert Terry Johnson's attempt to get out of prison, saying the convicted murderer has offered nothing to show he is actually innocent.

Johnson, 40, and his cousin, Thomas Petersen, 40, are both imprisoned for fixed life terms in Boise for the first-degree murders of Connie Allen and Rickie Mangum in September 1993, at the couple's home north of Gooding.

The cousins pleaded guilty to two counts of first-degree murder and skirted possible death penalties more than a decade ago.

Johnson filed a petition for post-conviction relief last year in July, asking for his conviction to be overturned. That was just as Petersen from his prison cell said he is fully responsible for the murders — both in letters to the Times-News and an affidavit filed with the court in Johnson's case.

Johnson claims he wouldn't have pleaded guilty to murder had he known Petersen would later take responsibility for the killings. Johnson also asserts in his petition that he was a drunk-en victim of Petersen's, forced to go on the burglary and killing spree at the couple's home.

But 5th District Court Judge John Butler was unconvinced, stating that Johnson "failed to allege facts to establish his innocence."

Butler declined to even give Johnson a hearing, dismissing the inmate's petition on Jan. 15 with prejudice, meaning it cannot be re-filed.

"The alleged confession of Petersen does not establish the actual innocence of the petitioner since the petitioner pled guilty to first-degree murder predicated on the felony murder rule," Butler wrote in his 23-page deci-

New regulations for livestock waste proposed

'Good neighbor rule' would set requirements for third parties who bring waste to their properties

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

BOISE — The Capitol is much too far away from rural Filer for state lawmakers to smell whiffs of livestock manure stored there.

Even so, a conflict that arose between a farmer and neighbors irked over the odor of nearby livestock manure in rural Filer last year was referenced on Wednesday in a hearing of the House Livestock Rules Subcommittee. The conflict led to a proposed rule that would regulate where livestock manure can be stockpiled by third-party handlers.

While confined-animal feedlot operations are already regulated in where they can store waste, this rule is intended to set requirements in place for third parties who bring waste onto their properties.

"When manure is removed and given to a nearby farmer, once that leaves the dairy it's no longer regulated under the dairy's rules," said Rep. Stephen Hartgen, R-Twin

Stevens pleads guilty to vehicular manslaughter

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

HAILEY — Nearly a year after Bert Redfern died in a March 10 car crash on Idaho Highway 75 in Hailey, a Twin Falls man has pleaded guilty to misdemeanor vehicular manslaughter for the fatal crash.

Cody Stevens, 29, of Twin Falls, had been charged with felony vehicular manslaughter. On Tuesday, just weeks before his district court trial was set to begin, he pleaded guilty to the misdemeanor, which carries a penalty of up to a year in prison and a $2,000 fine.

The prosecutor's office previously alleged Stevens was either under the influence of drugs or alcohol, or was grossly negligent in causing Redfern's death. They alleged he had been involved in four crashes on that day, two prior to the fatal crash and one immediately afterward.

According to court documents, Stevens allegedly left his job in Jerome after a 12-hour shift at 6 a.m. March 10, and drove north. In Lincoln County, he was allegedly reported as a reckless driver after he got close enough to "rub mirrors" with the reporting party at about 7:20 a.m. At about 9:45, he allegedly hit a tree south of Bellevue, telling police he swerved to avoid a deer.

After leaving his totaled truck in Bellevue and renting a truck in Hailey, Stevens returned to a Bellevue body shop. He then headed toward Ketchum when he allegedly caused the noon-time collision that resulted in Redfern's death. He then allegedly flipped his rental truck onto a curb in downtown Hailey, where police took him into custody.

Stevens failed two sobriety tests, court documents allege, and appeared increasingly intoxicated as police questioned him. He reportedly said he had taken Lexapro, an anti-anxiety and anti-depressant drug,

Falls, in a presentation to the subcommittee. "... I sort of think of this as a good neighbor rule."

While the Filer case played a role, it wasn't the only factor, said John Bilderback, section manager of dairy and CAFO programs for the Idaho State Department of Agriculture.

"It was really more the straw that broke the camel's back," he said of the Filer case. "There's always been complaints about manure stockpiling in areas we couldn't be regulating."

The rule, if it becomes a reality, would put setbacks in place for livestock waste stockpiles that are greater than 50 cubic yards and in place longer than 30 days. The setbacks are: 300 feet from a neighbor's residence; 500 feet from a hospital, school or church; 100 feet from a domestic or irrigation well; 100 feet from state surface waters; and 50 feet from a public highway.

Temporary stockpile staging sites could still be in place within the setback areas, provided the waste is only kept there for up to 30 days. After 30 days, violators would face a fine of up to $3,000 for each offense.

Rep. Donna Pence, D-Gooding, sided with Rep. Mack Shirley, R-Rexburg, in a split 2-1 vote to send the proposal to the House Agricultural Affairs Committee.

Pence said the rule will help avoid situations like what happened in Filer, adding that the 30-day staging period for temporary sites offers a good balance.

Rep. Ken Andrus, R-Lava Hot Springs, chairman of the subcommittee, cast the lone dissenting vote after airing concerns about the rule affecting farmers after homes are built next to their land.

"That's the thing that's the clincher for me," he said.

For Richard Edwards of rural Filer, the rule change would mean that manure stored on neighboring property an estimated 100 feet from his house would have to be moved another 200 feet away.

"In the state of Idaho, there's no law against it," he said. "It stunk last summer."

As for the farmer in rural Filer, Billy Blass Jr., he said he'll do whatever the rule change requires. But like Andrus, he voiced the same concerns about farmers who were there before their neighbors were affected.

"If you want setbacks and protections, you should be in town where you have restricted covenants," he said.

In his view, moving a large pile of manure an extra few hundred feet away won't necessarily remove the odor that far away.

"It stinks the same," he said.

floor, what appears to be a bomb device near the door to the basement, and an unknown, potentially dangerous substance on the bottom floor.

The scenario involved a real chemical sample, as well as a $6 million ALS, or Analytical Laboratory System truck from the guard's support team that allowed authorities to determine what exactly the chemical was. A handful of other response vehicles and equipment from the county, MVERT and the guard filled much of the parking lot across from the jail during the training.

From the ALS, Sgt. 1st Class Gene Luze slipped his hands into a pair of gloves hooked into a box and held the sample used in Wednesday's scenario. The equipment lets first responders learn what their dealing with — such as smallpox or anthrax — quickly and on site, he said.

The vacant house used in this scenario across from the jail wasn't really manufacturing drugs and is owned by the county.

Shoshone Council sells police car, discusses Otter visit

Times-News

The Shoshone City Council on Tuesday agreed to sell a nine-year-old police cruiser to the highest bidder, Pedro Garcia.

Garcia's $1,700 bid for the 2001 Chevrolet Impala far surpassed a rejected $250 bid offered Dec. 15, the other time the city attempted to sell the vehicle by sealed bid. The Kelley Blue Book places the value of the car between $2,700 and $3,615.

City Clerk Mary Kay Bennett said the council also discussed problems with the city sewer lift station and repairs that are covered under warranty for materials.

In another matter, the council discussed amending the budget to expend grant funds to complete a portion of a sewer project that was not budgeted.

The council also discussed Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's planned "Capital for a Day" upcoming visit to Shoshone Wednesday. The public will be able to meet with Otter and other state officials from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at the Shoshone Community Center on the Lincoln County Fairgrounds.

Stevens was taken for blood testing at St. Luke's Wood River Regional Medical Center, and he was later taken back to the hospital after becoming increasingly unresponsive and incoherent during police questioning, according to court documents.

However, tests done on blood taken from Stevens after his arrest came back negative for intoxicants, according to court documents. Stevens was not charged in any of the other alleged crashes that day.

A civil case for wrongful death is pending against Stevens, filed by Redfern's widow, and Stevens' plea to misdemeanor vehicular manslaughter can be used against him in that case.

The county case has been sent back to the magistrate court, and a sentencing hearing has not yet been scheduled.

Region to get federal help for energy bills

By Damon Hunzeker
Times-News writer

An increasing number of Magic Valley residents are turning up their heat but then struggling to pay for it. It could soon be easier for some of them to foot their heating bills, though.

The U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) has released $490 million in funding for the Low Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP) to pay heating and electricity bills. The funds released Wednesday supplement basic LIHEAP funding that states already receive. It follows the release of $2.6 billion in October.

From the $490 million, according to HHS, Idaho will receive $2.46 million. Local services are provided through South Central Community Action Partnership (SCCAP), but Ken Robinette, the executive director, said he hasn't seen the contract yet and doesn't know how much will be apportioned to the Magic Valley. He said he anticipates signing a contract by the end of the week.

"I know it's definitely coming in at a very good time," Robinette said. "This money from the president works in a two-fold system. Eighty-five percent is used as bill payments for qualifying customers. Those usually include the working poor, low-income households, and the disabled. The other 15 percent will be used for our weatherization program to improve insulation."

Robinette said SCCAP's three offices — in Twin Falls,

Burley, and Jerome — have been overwhelmed with new applications for assistance.

"Our staff is backed up with clients all day long trying to qualify. We've already processed about 1,300 more applications right now than at this same time last year," he said, estimating that the average 5,000 annual applications will "far exceed 7,000 this year."

People accustomed to paying a certain rate have seen their bills go up significantly for two reasons — rate increases from utility companies and because, Robinette pointed out, "December was really cold."

The program provides a one-time benefit per year, and the recipient never sees a check — the money goes directly to the utility company.

"They just have to manage their energy conservation and ask themselves if they really need the heat turned up that high," Robinette said. "For some people, 72 degrees is fine, but some folks, especially the elderly and infirm, need higher heat."

The funds will be available as soon as Robinette signs the contract, he said — emphasizing that, while some emergencies are handled on an individual basis, people need to contact one of the three SCCAP offices in order to be processed.

SUV, motor home catch fire near Bliss

By Eric Larsen
Times-News writer

Flames destroyed a Glens Ferry man's SUV on Wednesday and damaged the recreational vehicle pulling it down the steep grade on U.S. Highway 30 between Hagerman and Bliss.

Hagerman Rural Fire Protection District Chief Tim Peterson responded first in his command truck after a 3:34 p.m. emergency dispatch sent him to the scene near mile post 175 in Gooding County. Peterson found the towed Jeep Liberty fully engulfed in flames, with a running fuel fire seeping down the grade from the SUV's ruptured gas tank.

Peterson said the driver — identified by Gooding County Sheriff Shaun Gough as Robert Glenn, of Glens Ferry — and his passenger were clear of the 2005 RV as he ran down the grade to fight the fuel fire with a fire extinguisher. Before Bliss Rural Fire Department could respond with a fire engine, the flames jumped to the back of the RV, where it caused significant damage to the rear of the vehicle, but didn't breach its interior, Peterson said.

"The closet wall held it back," he said. "But the SUV's a total loss."

Officials from the Hagerman Police Department, Gooding County Sheriff's Office and Idaho State Police provided traffic control along the highway as the Bliss and Hagerman fire crews controlled the blaze within 10 minutes. Bliss Rural Fire Department Chief Jerry Vander Wüst said his crew spent about three hours responding to the fire.

Vander Wüst said the fire melted the asphalt roadway under it, and said firefighters were fortunate to have law enforcement on scene to shut the area down.

Peterson said the short wait for backup while he fought the fuel fire "seems like you wait forever," and spoke of the difficulty of fighting a vehicle fire.

"Anytime a vehicle's on fire at all, it's pretty much a total loss," he said. "If a vehicle catches fire and you have a truck with an open hose parked next to it, you might save it. If not, you're not going to."

A call to Glenn's residence was not answered and the cause of the fire was undetermined Wednesday night.

Buhl trustees complete review of school budgets

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — When Byron Stutzman was promoted to superintendent of the Buhl School District in July one of the first projects he tackled was redrafting the fiscal year's budget.

During Monday's school board meeting trustees accepted that amended budget, totaling more than $7.82 million in the general fund.

Stutzman told the Times-News the document is "a good, solid budget we can work with."

Both he and district business manager Brian Bridwell essentially started from scratch in amending the extensive document.

At issue was a lack of understanding of how former superintendent Margaret Cox developed the original budget, which was accepted by the board prior to her July 1 resignation.

Stutzman said the task was to formulate "the finer parts of the budget." While broad figures were published and filed with the state Cox didn't draft how those figures were determined.

In prior years Bridwell always played a part in developing the yearly document. But Cox drafted this year's budget on her own. Bridwell said he is pleased to be back in the loop.

"We are absolutely in a better place," he said. "I'm allowed to the jobs I was hired to do."

Board Chairman Jim Barker said the current budget is "more accurate and based in reality."

"After Margaret retired we thought it would be a good idea to have those new administrators go over the budget," Barker said. "You could say the board and Dr. Cox had a philosophical difference about how the budget should be done."

Barker said the board's action in accepting the new budget should resonate with district patrons.

"I feel we are on much firmer ground and have a great understanding for the revenues and expenditures within the district,"

Barker said.

Barker said getting the district's financial house in order was a must, not for just developing future budgets, but to have a better planning field for proposed funding hold-backs from the state. If enacted, the district would lose about $140,000 in state revenue.

The district has about a month and half operating expenses in reserves, or about $1.5 million.

"There are even darker days expected in terms of educational funding," Barker said. "We need to be prepared."

Filer Council readies bid process on sewer project

By John E. Swayze
Times-News correspondent

FILER — Construction bids for Filer's $12.5 million membrane bioreactor sewer treatment facility will be opened at 2 p.m. today.

The Filer City Council was told earlier this month that extending the bid deadline from Jan. 7 until today would give bidders additional time to set their costs, thus allowing city officials to make better-informed selections.

Rob Hegstrom, of J-U-B Engineers of Twin Falls, repeated those benefits at Tuesday's City Council meeting and outlined details on how the bid process would proceed.

"Bids will be accepted right here in Council Chambers," Hegstrom said. "We'll announce the low bid on Thursday and then review the math on everything before turning them all over to you."

Filer Mayor Bob Templeman also announced the council committee assignments for 2010 at Tuesday's meeting. Councilman Bob Parent was chosen council president and liaison for issues concerning streets, water and recreation. Councilman Don Barkley will act as council representative for the city police and fire departments.

Councilwoman Suellen Lammers was appointed as representative for planning and zoning, sewer and the 2010 U.S. Census. And newly elected Councilman David Gaither will take on urban renewal, rural development and library concerns.

"I'd also like to see the council become more involved this year with events like National Day of Prayer, Arbor Day and our own Filer Fun Days," Templeman said. "We need to help the Kiwanis and other groups come up with ways each of these can grow and be improved."

The Filer City Council will hold its next public meeting at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 2, in the Filer City Office on Main Street.

Shoshone schools miss out on Race to the Top

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — The Shoshone School District will lose out on possible federal grant funding because the union representing the district's teachers didn't endorse participation in the federal Race to the Top grant program, despite support by the Idaho Education Association.

School trustees on Jan. 12 discussed the Shoshone Education Association (an affiliate of IEA) declining to sign off on district participation in the competitive federal grant program that encourages and gives financial rewards for improving student achievement.

School trustees and Superintendent Mel Wiseman declared their support.

"My understanding is we cannot participate without all three signatures, so no the district will not participate," Wiseman said.

"They (local union) just said they had more questions about the grant," he said.

Wiseman said teachers' union support for the federal program varies by district.

The state has applied for the Race to the Top grant and school districts are encouraged to participate. The program in Idaho and across the nation is funded from $4.35 billion that the U.S. secretary of education has set aside out of the $100 billion of stimulus funding that is earmarked for education.

In other business, the board approved a brochure and application for the superintendent search process.

Wiseman has announced his intention to retire in July.

“The people of Massachusetts have spoken. We welcome Scott Brown to the Senate ...”
— Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, after Republican Scott Brown won the Senate seat held by the late Edward Kennedy

EDITORIAL

Idaho can't afford not to have Human Rights Commission

Maybe Idaho can do without a Commission on Hispanic Affairs, a State Independent Living Council, a Council for the Deaf and Hard of Hearing or even state-funded public television.

But it needs to keep the Human Rights Commission.

Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter wants to phase out the five agencies over four years as a budget-saving move. There’s a strong case to be made for saving each of them, but none as compelling as the Human Rights Commission.

That’s because Idaho has an image problem across America. Market researchers who ask New Yorkers or Floridians or Californians about Idaho hear the word “potato” first. The next word they hear is “racists.”

We owe that, of course, to Richard Butler and his Aryan Nations, who established a community in the Idaho Panhandle and vented their racist spleen to a national audience.

They’re mostly gone now, but their stigma endures. We can see the headlines across the country now: “Idaho joins Alabama, Arkansas and Mississippi in nixing rights commission.”

Why does that matter? It matters because the standard in the private sector nowadays is zero tolerance of anything that hints of racism. Companies make decisions about whether to invest, expand or relocate expecting their employees will be treated equally under the law.

The HRC is one of the best ideas Phil Batt ever had. In 1969, the state senator — and future governor — spearheaded the effort to set up a commission to administer state and federal anti-discrimination laws and investigate complaints of discrimination based on race, color, religion, national origin, sex, age or disability.

Batt, who was a Canyon County farmer, employed Latino migrant farmworkers and saw first hand the obstacles they and their families faced. By creating the HRC, the Legislature sent the message that Idaho would demand respect for everybody.

And so it has. The HRC investigates complaints by anyone who claims to be aggrieved by a discriminatory practice in employment, housing, education and public accommodations. Its 11 employees handle an average of 500 cases a year, and serves as the Idaho enforcement agency of the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

The state spends $596,400 a year on the HRC. That’s 0.00025 percent of the budget.

Could it spend less and still function? Probably. As Batt clearly understood, the commission’s greatest asset is simply the fact that it exists in Idaho.

What made Massachusetts see red?

You can bet that political strategists in both parties will be parsing the meaning of the Massachusetts senatorial struggle for some time to come. If there was a slam dunk left in American politics, it should’ve been the Democrats’ ability to easily retain a Senate seat they’d held for 57 years in what has become essentially a sea-blue state. Instead, they lost.

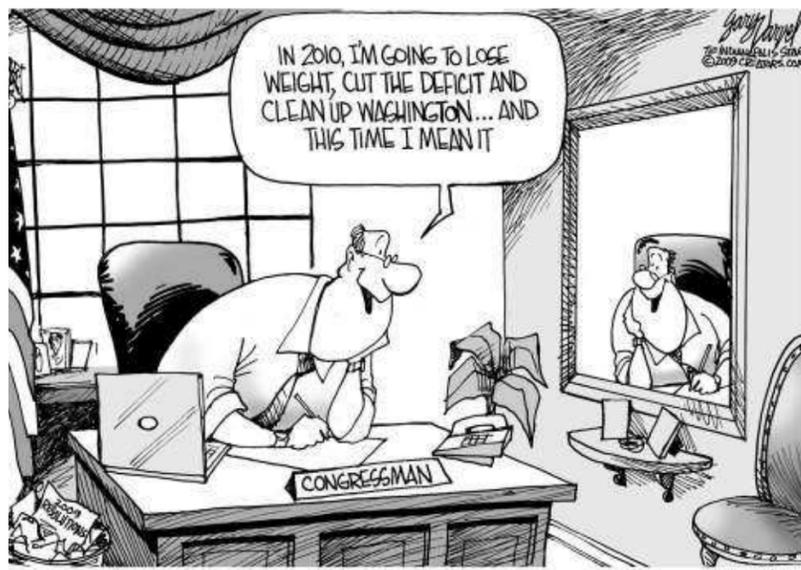

Tim Rutten

Given its importance in the issue of the moment, the Massachusetts vote is going to be analyzed as a referendum on President Obama’s health-care reforms. Increasingly, it does seem as if this first-year president made a profound strategic mistake by pressing forward on health care while simultaneously trying to contend with the worst global economic crisis since the Depression, exit one war in Iraq and gear up to fight another in Afghanistan.

Truth to tell, the president and his surrogates have done a lousy job selling the electorate on reform. Social Security and Medicare are our most popular social programs because they have two crucial attributes: they cover everybody, and their benefit to the individual can be explained in one declarative sentence. By contrast, the benefits of health-care reform are diffuse. In this nation of 300 million, only 30 million people are without health insurance. That’s a scandal and, frequently, a tragedy for the uninsured. In political terms, however, the problem is that most of what the other 270 million will gain from reform seems marginal and remote.

But if the lessons gleaned from Massachusetts stop with health care, something far more profound and potentially disruptive will have been missed. There is a deep and increasingly restive anger stirring in the country. Its focal points at the moment may seem to be healthcare and “big government,” but if there were a Republican in the White House, they might just as well be tax cuts and “limited government.” The fact is that the president and both parties’ congressional delegations have approval ratings under 50 percent.

Much of the disaffection in Massachusetts came from self-described independents. That’s significant because independents are concentrated in middle-class suburbs where physical and economic security are overriding preoccupations. Today, those anxieties are both real and justified, though not as critiques of Obama’s first year.

The truth of the matter is that, if you adjust for inflation, the average income of American males has not grown in real terms since the 1970s. Most families have compensated for that by sending mom to work outside the home. (The simultaneous push for equality by the women’s movement masked the fact that significant numbers of women now in the workforce were drafted by economic necessity.)

The mass unemployment that followed Wall Street’s meltdown upset even that precarious balance, and the situation is even worse than the unemployment figures suggest. According to work done by Harvard professor Elizabeth Warren, who chairs the congressional panel appointed to oversee the bank bailout, 20 percent of all Americans are either jobless, underemployed or simply have given up looking for work. One out of every eight Americans is on food stamps, and one out of every eight U.S. mortgages is in default or foreclosure. The wholesale flight of American employers from the responsibility of maintaining traditional pension plans forced tens of millions of 401(k) participants into the equity markets to secure their retirements. The crash erased $5 trillion from their accounts.

Scolds would have you believe that middle-class Americans were complicit in the financial collapse because of their profligacy. Warren points out that the numbers state a different case. “By the early 2000s, families were spending twice as much (adjusted for inflation) on mortgages than they did a generation ago,” she wrote recently, “for a house that was, on average, only 10% bigger and 25 years older. They also had to pay twice as much to hang on to their health insurance. ... Families today spend less than they did a generation ago on food, clothing, furniture, appliances and other flexible purchases, but it hasn’t been enough to save them.”

As employers have come to regard their employees as little more than another fixed expense, layoffs have become a routine tool for manuring quarterly profits. Thus, even those lucky enough to have full-time jobs have little security in their current positions — in which, as the current productivity numbers show, they’re forced to work ever harder for less — and none about their future, including retirement. This shift of economic risk onto the backs of the middle class has allowed the top 5 percent of income earners to amass a share of the country’s wealth unmatched for a century.

There’s the real source of the country’s anger.

OTHER VIEWS

Here’s what Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

... Otter’s weak leadership

Idaho Mountain Express, Ketchum

The contrast couldn’t be starker.

The primary theme of Idaho Gov. Butch Otter’s State of the State message (last) week was a call to cut the budget and wait for better times to come calling.

One state over, Washington Gov. Chris Gregoire’s message was a call to try new things to get the state’s economy going.

Otter gave lots of lip service to innovations by businesses, but showcased no new initiatives or partnerships to create more jobs. He called for more deep cuts in education, phasing out funding to public television, eliminating the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation, closing state parks and delaying spending on a new livestock research center near Twin Falls ...

Otter said his administration had listened to a lot of people around the state. ... Otter simply is averse to risking any personal political capital in trying to dig the state out of its economic ditch.

The governor left it largely to private businesses and non-profits to come up with ways to get the state going again and to keep education afloat while his vision calls for state government to keep plodding along in the same old, slow way, but with less to spend ...

Gregoire ... called for bringing in $2 billion in new capital investment ...

Contrast this with Idaho, which simply raised unemployment taxes with no corresponding tax credit for job creation ...

... the governor’s fuzzy reception

Lewiston Tribune

Whatever Gov. C. L. “Butch” Otter’s reasons are for cutting public television’s budget, saving money isn’t one of them.

The governor proposes to eliminate the agency’s $1.5 million state subsidy during the next four years. Coming up with an extra $426,000 next year won’t do much to plug Idaho’s budget deficit — which requires about $175 million from reserves and more than $100 million in budget cuts.

But that cut will set in motion the following:

Almost immediately, public television will be forced to cough up $1 million to $2 million to the feds. During the last decade, federal grants helped pay for public television’s network of translators. If Idaho public television no longer can afford to maintain that equipment, it must return some of the money.

What money it does have will be redirected toward essential missions. Complying with federal mandates — such as building in the capacity for local digital emergency alerts — trumps plans to build a more powerful transmitter at Pocatello.

To pay those up front costs, the effects of the first year’s budget cut will be magnified. Public television studios at Pocatello and Moscow would be closed. So would the studio in downtown Boise that allows live coverage of the Legislature over the Internet and on public television. Not to mention about 20 of the agency’s 54 full-time workers who would lose their jobs.

Eventually, transmission to Moscow and Twin Falls would come under review. Service to Coeur d’Alene, Lewiston, Pocatello and Idaho Falls would continue, but the programming would be Boise-based.

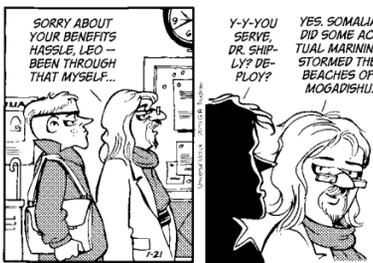

And why is that?

Because the governor’s plan envisions a market-based public broadcaster. Idaho public television generates $4.4 million from private sources — almost two-thirds of its budget. But 82 percent of those contributions come from individuals and corporations in the Treasure Valley. The Idaho Falls/Pocatello market generates 7 percent of that total. Northern Idaho is good for about 4 percent.

Otter is returning to the idea of public television for the people able to pay for it. That’s not saving money. That’s walking away from a legacy and leaving behind the economically-stressed communities of rural Idaho ...

Massachusetts election shows Americans want no part of a leviathan

When I was in college, I was assigned "Leviathan," by Thomas Hobbes. On the cover was an image from the first edition of the book, published in 1651. It shows the British nation as a large man. The people make up the muscles and flesh. Then at the top, there is the king, who is the head and the mind.

When the Pilgrims left Britain to come to America, they left behind that metaphor as well. For these settlers, and the immigrants who have come since, the American nation is not a body with the government as the brain. Instead, America has been defined by its vast landscape and the sprawling energy of its entrepreneurs, scientists and community-builders.

Please don't release guilty ones from prison

On Jan. 3, you ran an article about the two ruthless young men that raped, tortured and murdered my nephew, Ricky Mangum in Gooding, Idaho.

Peterson and Johnson both pleaded guilty to these crimes and now are recanting their stories and say Johnson is not guilty of the murders, but did rape Connie Allen and now wants paroled. I beg the citizens of Gooding, Twin Falls, Burley and Rupert to contact the Gooding County judge, prosecutor and defense attorney and let them know no one is safe if people like Johnson are released to roam the streets of our cities.

The horrendous crimes these two committed against Ricky Mangum and Connie Allen should never happen and these two should never be released from prison.

Congress must take steps to reduce debt

With absolutely no credible plan or process to reduce the national debt being offered by Republicans or Democrats in Congress, the move is still on to increase the statutory debt limit once again so that the federal government's usual borrowing and spending sprees can continue uninterrupted. This need to raise the debt limit to almost unfathomable heights and so frequently exposes the continuing fiscal irresponsibility of most members of Congress.

The national debt now stands at precisely $12,304,190,796,463 and is climbing rapidly. More than $7 trillion is held by the public (both foreign and domestic investors) and the rest by intra-government bodies. It is now approximately 90 percent of the size of the annual gross domestic product for our nation. Congress is set to begin debate on increasing the debt limit by $1.2 to $1.8 trillion, significantly adding to the already overly burdensome national debt for generations to come.

Several proposals are in the works to pacify people into thinking that real deficit reduction is taking place. In order to alleviate the devastating consequences of unsustainable spending, Congress needs to take immediate steps to commit itself to reduce unconstitutional spending before it continues on with the regular financing of government operations.

Please call Rep. Simpson and let him know that you are unwilling to destroy future generations' chances at financial freedom by continuing the very unsound economic policy of increasing indebtedness. Urge him to resist raising the debt limit and then to take action to restore a limited federal government under the Constitution by ending unconstitutional programs.

Americans rally around their government, but most of the time they have treated it as a supporting actor in national life. Americans are an unusual people, with less deference to central authority and an unparalleled faith in themselves. They seem to want a government that is helpful but not imperious, strong but subordinate.

Over the years, American voters have reacted against any party that threatens that basic sense of proportion. They have reacted against a liberalism that sought an enlarged and corrosive government and a conservatism that threatened to dismantle the government's supportive role.

A year ago, the country rallied behind a new president who promised to end the pendulum-like swings, who seemed likely to restore equilibrium with his moderate temper and pragmatic mind.

In many ways, Barack Obama has lived up to his promise. He has created a thoughtful, pragmatic administration marked by a culture of honest and vigorous debate.

But his has become a voracious pragmatism. Driven by circumstances and self-confidence, the president has made himself the star performer in the national drama. He has been ubiquitous, appearing everywhere, trying to overhaul most sectors of national life: finance, health, energy, automobiles and transportation, housing, and education, among others.

The American people are not always right, but their basic sense of equilibrium is worthy of the profoundest respect.

If I were Obama, I would spend the next year showing how government can serve a humble, helpful and supportive role to the central institutions of American life. Even in blue states like Massachusetts, voters want a government that is energetic but limited — a servant, not a leviathan.

IDAHO 'Doom over gloom' as lawmakers set targets

BOISE — An Idaho legislative committee voted Wednesday to recommend a budget package based on a tax revenue forecast that was $70 million less than the one favored by Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter.

The GOP-dominated Economic Outlook and Revenue Assessment Committee's recommendation would set a spending package based on just $2.28 billion in tax revenue for the fiscal year ending June 30. For 2011, the 18-member forecasting panel also recommended a revenue target of $2.29 billion, about $60 million less than Otter's recommendation.

Agencies like public education already face the prospect of losing $28 million this year under Otter's plan. If the budget writers in the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee adopt the panel's dour recommendation, it would be forced to slash spending by another $110 million this year, a figure that could only be mitigated by using reserves now slated to be drawn down in 2011.

"There's clearly a lot of pessimism," said Mike Ferguson, Otter's chief economist, whose forecasts were dismissed as overly optimistic. "This is going to make for some very tough decisions."

December revenue collections came in about $12 million behind estimates that have been revised downward in the 18 months since Otter ordered the first in a series of painful holdbacks that cut the state budget by a fifth.

In the worst economy in 40 years, Sen. Russ Fulcher, a Meridian Republican on the forecasting panel, said he had no other choice but to prepare for a worst-case scenario.

High court upholds murder conviction

BOISE — The Idaho Supreme Court has unanimously upheld the double murder conviction of Dale Carter Shackelford, largely clearing the way for the former death row inmate to be re-sentenced for the crime.

Shackelford, of Ironton, Mo., was convicted in 2000 of shooting to death his ex-wife, Donna Fontaine, and her boyfriend, Fred Palahniuk, and then setting their bodies ablaze in the remote north-central Idaho village of Kendrick.

His complicated trial lasted more than a month, with Latah County prosecutors describing an elaborate scheme in which Shackelford and several of his lovers all plotted to kill Fontaine.

Second District Judge John Stegner sentenced Shackelford to death for the crimes.

But after his conviction, a U.S. Supreme Court ruling in a separate case found that juries, not judges, must determine if defendants are eligible for the death penalty. That ruling prompted Stegner to order a new sentencing hearing for Shackelford. The proceeding was delayed while Shackelford's post-conviction appeal was reviewed by the Idaho Supreme Court.

In his appeal, Shackelford contended that the lower court made several errors during the trial. In part, Shackelford said the judge wrongly allowed statements made by his co-defendants outside the courtroom to be used by prosecutors in the trial, and said the jury was given faulty instructions for determining his guilt.

But the Idaho Supreme Court found that although some errors were made in the case, they were all harmless to the outcome of the case.

ISU museum may take on fossil oversight from state

BOISE — Big energy projects awash in federal stimulus cash could accelerate discoveries of woolly mammoths and other ancient creatures in Idaho, so the state wants to put a different agency in charge.

Officials have recommended shifting oversight of such excavations from the State Historical Society to the Museum of Natural History at Idaho State University because the school has the expertise.

ISU officials in Pocatello support the move, but said it could mean new annual costs of $150,000 to hire a paleontologist, develop educational programs for students and help utilities choose locations for their projects.

With the school already slashing budgets to help Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter fill a budget hole, ISU lobbyist Kent Kunz worries about an unfunded mandate, especially if energy projects that require building roads and shifting mountains of earth really do yield a bonanza of old bones.

"We're really supportive of this," Kunz said Wednesday. "Our museum is a great repository of paleontological resources. We just need to figure out a way to pay for it."

House State Affairs Committee members Wednesday agreed to debate the shift at an upcoming hearing, though resolving funding could be tough.

WASHINGTON Toasty in Northwest? Blame it on El Nino

SEATTLE — Daffodils sprouting in mid-January — that can't be right.

But they and other spring flowers are popping up from their beds, thanks to a long-lasting stream of warm

Pacific air and a classic El Nino weather pattern. If this keeps up, weather experts say, parts of the Northwest could have their warmest January on record.

"We are amazingly above-normal," said Cliff Mass, professor of atmospheric science at the University of Washington. "I can see in my own garden, the bulbs are pushing up."

Crocuses, usually the first spring flower here, already are blooming. While the first green stalks of daffodils have emerged, gardeners say it will be at least a few weeks before they bloom — longer if there's a late winter cold spell.

Nevertheless, Caroline Ullmann found a solitary daffodil bloom in her north Seattle yard. "Such a brave little thing," she said in a Facebook posting.

Midweek in Seattle saw sunshine, April-like warmth and the usual threat of rain. Around most of the country, winter was being winter: California has been beset with heavy rain and snow, ice storms hit the Midwest, and the Northeast has been cold and snowy.

Sun Valley unveils events to draw visitors

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Several new events designed to lure visitors to Sun Valley will be unveiled in coming months as the Sun Valley/Ketchum Chamber and Visitors Bureau tries to lure visitors to Sun Valley.

The first — a nine-day Sun Valley Nordic Festival — kicks off Jan. 30 in a town that's rebranded itself "Nordic Town USA."

It will be followed by Marly in the Mountains, two days of lectures, concerts and ski races Feb. 26 and 27; Sun Valley Winter Sol Fest, which will feature two major concerts, March 5 and 6; a Sun Valley Bike and Music event in June and a Sun Valley Harvest Festival, which will take the place of the Sun Valley Food and Wine Festival, in September.

The chamber also plans to pump up the action at smaller existing events like its Town Plaza concerts.

"Our goal is to create vitality in the community," the Chamber's Executive Director Carol Waller told about 40 business people at a Marketing Summit

Tuesday afternoon at the Sun Valley Inn. "When you visit a town, you want to go to a restaurant that's busy. When you see a Ketch'em Alive concert on Tuesday night, you think, 'Wow! This is a fun town.'"

Waller acknowledged that even maintaining visitor levels in the present economy is a challenge, because many people are out of work and bargain prices being offered for cruises and other vacations are highly competitive.

And today's urban consumers are subjected to 5,000 ads a day versus 2,000 in 1970, said Bill Drake, of the Boise ad agency Drake Cooper.

The new "Fun Never Sets," which focuses on Sun Valley's world-class athletes and theater performers, is trying to make Sun Valley stand out. So are new campaigns like Sun Valley's Bucket List — a litany of things recommended to do while visiting the area.

Mountain biker Rebecca Rusch said she loves to tell people that she lives in Sun Valley, which she called "a world-class mountain bike

Retirement funds gain from surging financial market

By David Pitt
Associated Press writer

Millions of 401(k) accounts have made up lost ground over the last 10 months. Helped by a stock market surge and continued contributions, the question now is how to keep from backsliding when market momentum slows or reverses.

With the market up more than 60 percent since it hit its low in March, the rapid rise in the market has many believing that a sharp downturn, or a correction as Wall Street calls it, is likely. The last thing investors can stomach is the market reversing itself and snatching away more of their retirement money.

So, what to do now? Don't forget the fundamentals. Experts recommend revisiting the basic principles of investing, and offer some additional moves to consider.

A starting point for those who are heavily reliant on their 401(k) is to make sure their portfolio reflects their appetite for risk. This is a

TIPS FOR MANAGING YOUR 401(k) IN 2010

The Associated Press

Thinking about your 401(k) this year may mean preparing for a market downturn, perhaps inflation. The best strategy is to have the appropriate mix of stocks, bonds and cash and to periodically rebalance your investments. You might also want to consider the advice of these experts who say adding commodities or real estate can help diversify and hedge against inflation.

Art Hogan, chief market strategist, Jefferies Asset Management

- Protect against inflation by considering a commodity equity exchange traded fund such as Jefferies CRB Global Commodity ETF (CRBQ).
- Look at mutual funds with companies in the industrial, materials and energy sectors because they, too, will do well during inflation. Examples include metals, agriculture and energy companies.

Alan Skrainka, chief market strategist, Edward Jones

There are three important things to remember when investing for retirement:

1. Hold quality investments.
2. Diversify broadly.
3. Hold for the long term.

Dean Kohmann, vice president of 401(k) plan services at Charles Schwab & Co. Inc.

- Consider a target date fund because it automatically rebalance your portfolio based on how close you are to retirement.
- Consider rebalancing your account quarterly rather than once a year if you're concerned about volatility.

Severe weather hinders home construction

Agency to tighten credit requirements

By Alan Zibel
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The housing market remains a significant risk to the economy, according to data released Wednesday, as bad weather across much of the country hit the construction industry.

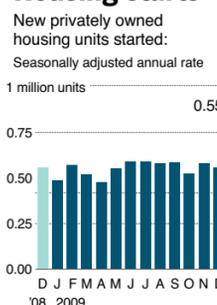

The Commerce Department said construction of new homes and apartments fell 4 percent in December to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 557,000 from an upwardly revised 580,000 in November. Applications for future projects, however, increased strongly as the industry ramps up for the spring selling season.

The results were lower than the 580,000 forecast by economists surveyed by Thomson Reuters and were led by declines of 19 percent in the Northeast and Midwest. Construction fell 1 percent in the West, but rose more than 3 percent in the South.

"Builders continue to be nervous about the employment situation and the number of foreclosures out there competing with them," said David Crowe, chief economist at the National Association of Home Builders.

future activity, rose 11 percent to an annual rate of 653,000, a far stronger showing than economists had predicted and the highest level of activity since October 2008.

December's cold weather, especially in the Northeast, was seen as the main reason for the divergent results.

Still, some analysts were more optimistic. Patrick Newport, an economist with IHS Global Insight noted that permits for single-family homes have increased

California firm wants to hire call center workers in Twin Falls

Officials with Redwood, Calif.-based Support.com, Inc., a provider of online tech support, said it plans to hire about 100 former employees from the shuttered Dell call center within 100 days.

That could be a problem for the Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency, which is marketing the former Dell call center to prospective tenants by promoting a skilled and ready workforce that was laid off by Dell.

But City Economic Development Director Melinda Anderson said the College of Southern Idaho can always train new workers.

"You have to remember that when Dell came here, we didn't have any trained call center workers," she said. "What we have is CSI, which does a great job of training them. It's our ace-in-the-hole."

Even if 100 employees become part of Support.com's payroll, it isn't going to be that big of a dent — considering that Dell laid off about 500 workers.

Jonathan Poretz, spokesman for Support.com, said the company is looking for full- and part-time employees who can work from home, providing Web based technology solutions.

The benefit to Twin Falls is that at least some of the former Dell employees who were looking elsewhere for work, now have an opportunity to stick around.

And the company has a reputation for growth, as more consumers and small

Aftershock drives more from Haitian capital

By Paul Haven and Mike Melia
Associated Press writers

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — A frightening new aftershock Wednesday forced more earthquake survivors onto the capital's streets to live and sent others fleeing to the countryside, where aid was only beginning to reach wrecked towns.

A flotilla of rescue vessels, meanwhile, led by the U.S. hospital ship Comfort, converged on Port-au-Prince harbor to help fill gaps in still-lagging global efforts to deliver water, food and medical help. Hundreds of thousands of survivors of Haiti's cataclysmic earthquake were living in makeshift tents or on blankets and plastic sheets under the tropical sun.

The strongest tremor since the Jan. 12 quake struck at 6:03 a.m., just before sunrise while many still slept. From the teeming plaza near the collapsed presidential palace to a hillside tent city, the 5.9-magnitude aftershock lasted only seconds but panicked thousands of Haitians.

"Jesus!" they cried as rubble tumbled and dust rose anew from government buildings around the plaza. Parents gathered up children and ran.

Up in the hills, where U.S. troops were helping thousands of homeless, people bolted screaming from their tents. Jajoute Ricardo, 24, came running from his house, fearing its collapse.

"Nobody will go to their house now," he said, as he sought a tent of his own. "It is chaos, for real."

A slow vibration intensified into side-to-side shaking that lasted about eight seconds — compared to last week's far stronger initial quake that seemed to go on for 30 seconds and registered 7.0 magnitude.

Throng again sought out small, ramshackle "tap-tap" buses to take them away from the city. On Port-au-Prince's beaches, more than 20,000 people looked for boats to carry them down the coast, the local Signal FM radio reported. But the desperation may be deeper outside the capital, closer to last week's quake epicenter.

"We're waiting for food, for water, for anything," Emmanuel Doris-Cherie, 32, said in Leogane, 25 miles southwest of Port-au-Prince. Homeless in Leogane lived under sheets draped across tree branches, and the damaged hospital "lacks everything," Red Cross surgeon Hassan Nasreddine said.

Hundreds of Canadian soldiers and sailors were deploying to that town and to Jacmel on the south coast to support relief efforts, and the Haitian government sent a plane and an overland team to assess needs in Petit-Goave, a seaside town 10 miles farther west from Leogane that was the epicenter of Wednesday's aftershock.

The death toll was estimated at 200,000, according to Haitian government figures relayed by the European Commission, with 80,000 buried in mass graves. The commission raised its estimate of homeless to 2 million, from 1.5 million, and said 250,000 people needed urgent aid.

With search dogs and detection gear, U.S. and other rescue teams worked into Wednesday night in hopes of finding buried survivors. But hopes were dimming.

"It's like trying to find a needle in a haystack, and each day the needles are disappearing," said Steven Chin of the Los Angeles County rescue team.

Rampage victims include suspect's relatives; weapons cache uncovered

By Vicki Smith and Dena Potter

APPOMATTOX, Va. — The victims of a gunman's violent rampage in central Virginia included the suspect's sister and brother-in-law, as well as two other adults, three teenagers and a 4-year-old boy, according to authorities who charged the alleged shooter with first-degree murder on Wednesday.

A 39-year-old security guard, Christopher Bryan Speight, surrendered to police at daybreak after leading investigators on an 18-hour manhunt following the slayings at a house in rural central Virginia where deputies found a mortally wounded man and seven bodies.

A bomb squad discovered a multitude of explosives at Speight's home, and crews were detonating the devices into the night.

Speight had no weapons when he surrendered. He was wearing a bulletproof vest over a black fleece jacket, camouflage pants and mud-caked boots. Neither the sheriff nor a state police spokeswoman would disclose what Speight said when he gave up.

Speight was charged with one count of first-degree murder, but other charges are likely. He's being held at a jail in Lynchburg.

Murder suspect Christopher Speight, center, is led out of State Police headquarters in Appomattox, Va., Wednesday. Speight is accused of killing eight people and leading police on an overnight manhunt.

The suspect co-owned and lived in the home where some of the bodies were found Tuesday. David Anderson, co-owner of the Sunshine Market grocery store in Lynchburg, where Speight sometimes provided security, said Speight was worried that his sister and brother-in-law wanted to kick him out of the house. The two recently moved in with Speight, he said.

Speight's mother deeded the house to Speight and his sister in 2006, shortly before she died of brain cancer. His mother's obituary listed the daughter as Lauralee Sipe and her husband as Dewayne Sipe.

State police identified the Sipes, both 38, as two of the victims, along with 16-year-old Ronald Scroggus; 15-year-old Emily Quarles; 43-year-old Karen and Jonathan Quarles; 15-year-old Morgan Dobyns; and 4-year-old Joshua Sipe.

Police say Speight knew all the victims, but they did not outline the victims' relationships or discuss a motive. No court date has been set.

Their bodies are at the state medical examiner's office in Roanoke, where their causes of death will be determined.

Democrats see Mass. message: Jobs, jobs, jobs

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Severely wounded in Massachusetts, frustrated Democrats on Wednesday urged the White House to focus on jobs and the economy — not the health care overhaul that's now at risk — and pressed President Obama to more forcefully make their case against Republicans ahead of potentially disastrous elections this fall.

On the day after the improbable Senate election of Republican Scott Brown in Massachusetts, Obama and his Democratic Party raced to re-evaluate their midterm election strategy, adjust their health care approach and assuage an angry electorate. The embarrassing defeat to the GOP in a Democratic stronghold was a bitter end to the president's first year in office, and it triggered furious party soul-searching.

"I would like the Democratic Party as a whole including its leader, the president, to speak clearly about the differences and to define those differences," Sen. Robert Menendez of New Jersey, chairman of the Senate Democrats' campaign effort, told The Associated Press. And it's not just about Republicans and Democrats, he said: "We have to do a much better job of both engaging and delivering to independent voters."

Obama himself owned up to a failure to communicate.

In a year of hopping from crisis to crisis, he told ABC News, "we lost some of that sense of speaking directly to the American people about what their core values are and why we have to make sure those institutions are matching up with those values."

Sen. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., put it more simply, assessing the message Massachusetts sent. "Economy, economy, economy," she said.

"We need a jobs bill. We need short-term, focused strategies to create jobs, real fast," said Sen. Bob Casey, D-Pa. "If the dominant message isn't about jobs and spending, we'll be making a difficult challenge exponentially more difficult."

At the Capitol, Sen. Claire McCaskill, D-Mo., declared, "If there's anybody in this building that doesn't tell you they are more worried about elections today, you should absolutely slap them."

AROUND THE WORLD

WASHINGTON Dems could scale back health care bill

President Obama and congressional allies signaled Wednesday they may try to scale back his sweeping health care overhaul to keep parts of it alive in the wake of a stinging rebuke in the Senate race in Massachusetts.

A simpler, less ambitious bill emerged as an alternative only hours after the loss of the party's crucial 60th Senate seat forced the Democrats to slow their all-out drive to pass Obama's signature legislation despite fierce Republican opposition. The White House is still hoping the House can pass the Senate bill in a quick strike, but Democrats are now considering other options.

No decisions have been made, lawmakers said, but they laid out a new approach that could still include these provisions: limiting the ability of insurance companies to deny coverage to people with medical problems, allowing young adults to stay on their parents' policies, helping small businesses and low-income people pay premiums and changing Medicare to encourage payment for quality care instead of sheer volume of services.

Obama said the election results wouldn't sour his interest in passing a health care bill.

CALIFORNIA Evacuations ordered as new storm hits

LA CANADA FLINT-RIDGE — A third powerful Pacific storm pounded California with heavy rain and snow Wednesday, forcing evacuations of hundreds of homes below wildfire-scarred mountains, shutting a major interstate, knocking out power to thousands and unleashing lightning strikes on two airliners.

Fierce winds howled as forecasters warned of rainfall rates as high as 11/2 inches an hour on soil already saturated from two days of wild weather that caused street flooding in coastal cities, spawned a tornado and toppled trees, killing two people.

Even though police officers and sheriff's deputies were making door-to-door stops, some residents refused to comply with evacuation orders in Los Angeles-area foothill communities below the steep San Gabriel Mountains where 250 square miles of forest burned in a summer wildfire.

While most in the community appeared to be complying, officials in nearby Los Angeles reported only about 40 percent compliance by residents of 262 homes in that jurisdiction.

MICHIGAN Ex-Detroit mayor gets 90 days to pay $300K

DETROIT — Kwame Kilpatrick lost his job as Detroit's mayor and his freedom, in part, for telling lies.

A judge on Wednesday called Kilpatrick deceitful and self-serving while ordering him to come up with more than $300,000 for restitution to the city within 90 days or possibly face a return to jail.

"We are here because you committed perjury," Wayne County Circuit Court Judge David Groner told Kilpatrick. "You pled guilty and you agreed to pay $1 million in restitution, but you have not been responsible in paying it. You have not been credible in this courtroom and you, again, have not been honest to the city of Detroit."

The ruling is the latest legal setback for the convicted felon and one-time leader of the financially struggling city.

Perjury charges related to a text-messaging sex scandal and 2007 whistle-blowers' trial led to his 2008 guilty plea to obstruction of justice and no contest plea to assault.

BRITAIN Experts: Sitting too much could be deadly

LONDON — Here's a new warning from health experts: Sitting is deadly.

Scientists are increasingly warning that sitting for prolonged periods — even if you also exercise regularly — could be bad for your health. And it doesn't matter where the sitting takes place — at the office, at school, in the car or before a computer or TV — just the overall number of hours it occurs.

Research is preliminary, but several studies suggest people who spend most of their days sitting are more likely to be fat, have a heart attack or even die.

In an editorial published this week in the British Journal of Sports Medicine, Elin Ekblom-Bak of the Swedish School of Sport and Health Sciences suggested that authorities rethink how they define physical activity to highlight the dangers of sitting.

"After four hours of sitting, the body starts to send harmful signals," Ekblom-Bak said. She explained that genes regulating the amount of glucose and fat in the body start to shut down.

HOLLYWOOD Infection puts Charlie Sheen's wife in ICU

LOS ANGELES — Charlie Sheen's wife was admitted to a hospital Wednesday with a high fever and an infection following oral surgery, which might delay again a court hearing in a domestic violence case involving the actor, her lawyer said.

Attorney Yale Galanter said

Brooke Sheen was running a fever of 105 degrees when she was taken to Sherman Oaks Hospital early Wednesday morning and placed in the intensive care unit.

"She has an infection as the result of oral surgery earlier in the week," said Galanter. "They're concerned and trying to get it under control."

Brooke Sheen was at her home in Los Angeles when she developed a dental problem that required oral surgery.

Bring out the dogs

Lawmakers consider allowing hunters to use tracking dogs

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

BOISE — In the next hunting season, it may be legal in Idaho to use a blood-trailing dog to track down wounded big-game animals such as deer and elk.

The proposed rule, coming from the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, was heard on Tuesday in a subcommittee meeting of the House Resources and Conservation Committee. The four-member subcommittee, which covers fish and game, and outfitters and guides issues, unanimously recommended that the rule be sent to the full committee.

Sharon Kiefer, assistant director of the state agency, outlined the conditions that a dog can aid hunters tracking wounded big-game animals.

The dog must be on a leash and can only be used within the first 72 hours after the animal has been hit, she said.

There's no licensing requirement for the dog specifically, but hunters still have to be licensed and have big game tags the law already requires.

Rep. Fred Wood, chairman of the subcommittee, said the rule will need to be monitored after it's in place, noting the requirement for the dogs to be leashed.

Hunters in the Magic Valley stressed the change wouldn't remove a hunter's duty to make a good shot without needlessly wounding an animal.

State law currently allows dogs to be used for pursuing black bears and mountain lions, but not other big-game animals.

"I firmly believe that first and foremost the hunter has the ethical obligation to make a clean shot and this shouldn't be used as a tool to blaze away," said Jeff Frost, of Twin Falls, owner of Intermountain Taxidermy and Worldwide Adventures. "It's still the hunter's responsibility to place a good, clean shot."

Frost said the rule would be something he would fully support, as long as it's used legally and ethically.

Dan Hadley, of Twin Falls, sales manager at Red's Trading Post, said he wouldn't have a problem with the change, provided it doesn't result in hunters tracking an animal into someone else's hunting turf.

Garrett Simson of Twin Falls reels in a rainbow trout while ice fishing Jan. 14 at Dierkes Lake in Twin Falls.

Anglers catch their limit at T.F. lake

As the sun slid to the horizon, causing the afternoon's blue sky to fade to gray, Garrett Simson kept an eye on his fishing pole that moments before had quickly tipped toward the frigid water.

His breath noticeable in the late-afternoon cold, Simson waited for the next strike.

He didn't wait long. The pole's tip jerked again, and Simson ran to pick it up. The pole jerked a third time, and this time Simson jerked with it, setting the hook.

Not more than a minute later, a small trout lay unhooked on the ice that covered Dierkes Lake.

He didn't keep the fish. It was after 5 p.m. on Jan. 14, and Simson already had six rainbow trout in his bucket — two of them more than a foot long, the others measuring about 8 to 10 inches.

He had been at the Twin Falls lake since noon but was determined to make the most of his time on the frozen

WHAT YOU NEED

Besides warm clothing and a fishing license, you'll need several things as you venture onto the ice:

- Ice auger and drill
- Ice scoop and ruler
- Spikes for boots
- A sled to carry your equipment

BE SAFE ON THE ICE

Be sure to:

- Not venture onto ice that is less than 4 inches thick.
- Stay away from milky-colored ice; clear ice is strongest.
- Drill as you go; carry ice picks and bring rope.
- Be cautious of your surroundings and weather patterns.

Stay warm with these down puffy jackets

Visions of the Michelin Man might come to mind. But for untold thousands of winter lovers, horizontally-banded, ultra-insulated puffy down jackets have become the ubiquitous choice for the coldest of days.

I am one of these mini Michelin Men. In Minnesota, where temps regularly dredge to 20-below, a down-stuffed puffy is often the only viable defense against the cold.

This winter, I've been testing two new puffys, including the Flex Jacket from Sierra Designs and the Rab Microlight Alpine Jacket. They are puffys of different types, though both equally cozy in the snow.

Made for alpine climbing, winter hiking, and "fast and light" pursuits, the Rab Microlight weighs less than a pound. For stowing in a backpack, it scrunches down and packs into its own chest pocket.

But on your back, with panels of goose down ensconcing the body, you'd never know the Microlight Alpine was made with the minimalist in mind.

In my test, paired with just two layers underneath, the Rab jacket was warm to about zero degrees.

The Rab costs $150 to $200 on most retailer Web sites (its msrp is $215.) It has an insulated hood. There are two hand-warmer side pockets and a single zipped chest pocket. On the harshest days, the close-fitting Rab can be worn underneath a shell jacket for optimal warmth.

My gripes with the Rab jacket (<http://us.rab.uk.com>) are few. But watch out for its Pertex face fabric. It is not very durable and can rip. Another point: I often wished for more pockets on the Rab.

Internal pockets to store an extra hat and handwear were missed.

The second jacket tested this year, Sierra Designs' Flex Down Jacket, is a different type of puffy beast. It is warmer than the Rab. But it is bulkier and cannot be easily employed as a layer underneath a shell jacket.

Indeed, I felt like a true Michelin Man in the Flex Down Jacket, which retails for $249. The company (<http://sierra.designs.com>) calls it "supremely warm," and I would not disagree.

Like the Rab, it is insulated with 750-weight goose down. Unlike the Rab, its face fabric, a recycled polyester, is durable and tear resistant.

Sierra Designs borrows sleeping-bag tricks to let the jacket "move with you while eliminating dead heat-robbing dead air space." It seemed to work outside and in the extreme cold for me.

The jacket has an insulated hood, two zippered hand pockets lined with fleece, and big internal pockets for gloves, hats and other items. For transport, it packs down to about the size of a football if rolled tight.

Both the Rab and Sierra Designs jackets are solid performers. The Rab is more of a specialty item, with fewer features and a closer fit. The Sierra Designs jacket is versatile across a range of activities.

Each company makes its puffy available in men's and women's versions.

This winter, to stay warm, embrace your inner Michelin Man. Pull on a down puffy. You might never go back to the slim fit again.

Pawn shops are a good place to find classic guns

My parents would tell you that my obsession with quality firearms has been a lifelong affliction, but I know that it didn't seriously complicate my life until I was 16.

When I was a junior in high school, my friend Jerry and I were hired by the local skeet club to paint and maintain the trap houses and pull targets for the shooters. This job required that we keep the trap machines' hoppers stacked with clay targets and follow the shooters through the stations.

Each evening as the sun began to set, the shooters would case their guns and saunter over to the clubhouse for socializing. Occasionally if enough light remained, several of the older gents would linger behind and pull targets for my rag-tag companion and me. Until we had earned enough money to buy our own 870's, the kindly seniors let us bang away at the clays with their personal guns.

Although the club gun racks were flush with Browning Superposed and Beretta over-and-unders, the popular guns on the skeet ranges in the late 1960s were Remington 1100's and classic Browning Auto 5's. These were the guns that most often graced our unworthy sweaty hands.

Both of these shotguns were so wonderfully engineered and balanced that mere novices could smoothly swing those big white beads past the clays and crush them to powder with shocking regularity.

I was truly smitten and knew that my sporting life would never be fulfilled until I possessed a Remington 1100 and a Browning A5 of my very own.

During the intervening years, the cares, commitments and responsibilities of a career and family kept both models out of my grasp — until recently when I made the chance discovery. I uncovered a veritable treasure trove of once-loved but neglected firearms in local pawn shops and the musty corners of neighborhood gun stores.

As a result of cruising these quaint enterprises in Twin Falls, Burley and Pocatello over the past two years, I've been able to tuck classic scatterguns into my gun safe at bargain prices. I am now the proud owner of two Ithaca 37 pump guns, as well as a smooth-shucking Winchester Model 25 (the non-takedown version of the famous Model 12).

And just in case you're wondering, I am currently dotting on a minty Remington 1100 and a primo Japanese Browning Auto 5. Unlike the earlier Belgium-built A5's, this model can safely handle our modern steel shot loadings.

After some judicious price comparisons and labored haggling, I purchased all five of these shotguns for less money than you would slap down for a new run of the mill car or over-and-under by Benelli, Ruger, Browning or Beretta. Bargain shopping on steroids, I'd say.

Economically-challenging times demand ingenuity. Expand your gun inventory without breaking the bank — visit you local pawn and gun shops.

In Twin Falls, check out Jack's Pawn, Magic Valley Pawn and Loan, Snake River Pawn, Washington St. Pawn and Coin and, of course, Red's Trading Post.

Good hunting!

David Mozurkewich joins other volunteers in the annual Audobon Society bird count Jan. 3 in Annapolis, Md.

Tech takes flight with new wave of birders

By Meredith Cohn
The Baltimore Sun

BALTIMORE, Md. — Between dawn and dusk on a frigid day, Hal Wierenga and fellow birders combed greater Annapolis, Md., for canvas-back ducks, double-crested cormorants and dozens of other species as part of the 110th annual Audubon Society Christmas Bird Count. And they relied on nothing more than binoculars, decades of experience and an uncommon level of hardiness.

Despite a century of tradition, the count — and birding in general — is headed for change as some watchers abandon the worn pages of their field manuals and pencils for things decidedly more modern: electronic field guides and social networking sites.

Birders have armed themselves with iPhones that give them ready access to images, maps, sounds and Web sites such as eBird.com and mdosprey.org to record their latest sightings in real time.

Some conservationists believe more and faster information is contributing to a rise in the popularity of birding among younger people. But the gadgetry is getting a somewhat mixed reaction in other circles, especially on Bird Count day.

Wierenga remains on the fringe of the tech phenomenon. He sometimes uses a cell phone to tell other birders of special finds they may want to come see. Though others in his group frequent birding Web sites, and enjoy modern scopes and digital cameras, Wierenga discourages real-time technology during the count because he doesn't want birders leaving their posts to see someone else's find.

"I'll crack the whip if I need to," he said with a chuckle.

But elsewhere, birders such as Joan Townsend, a 49-year-old Washingtonian, are more fully embracing technology. She's been watching birds for 17 years and started using iBird on her iPhone this summer. It helps her identify birds and means she doesn't have to carry a paper field manual all the time.

The application is not faster than the book but is more convenient, she says. And because it has recorded bird calls, it's become welcome on her Nature Conservancy walks, where others enjoy hearing the sounds.

"I'm told that in mating season, male birds get territorial, and if I play a bird sound from the iPhone, it can make the male bird come and see who is invading. I haven't done that yet," Townsend said.

She logs onto mdosprey.org, a list-serve for Maryland birders that sends her alerts about what birds are where. That helps her plan outings, she said.

"I take the bird book when I go birding, but I have the iPhone with me all the time," said Townsend.

And she may become the norm. Justin Campfield, a spokesman for Audubon Guides, says the group now offers 13 electronic applications, including mobile field guides for birds, trees, mammals and wildflowers, for the iPhone and the iPod Touch. He said they are gaining in popularity for year-round birding.

The tech trend is still relatively new, but Campfield believes it is attracting a younger audience for a hobby long dominated by older people. A recent mobile advertising company survey showed 84 percent of iPhone users and 93 percent of iPod Touch users are younger than 50.

As for the annual bird count, Delta Willis, a spokeswoman for the Audubon Society, says more preliminary results are coming via Twitter.

As a sign birding is growing in popularity, the Bird Count has spread from its base in the United States and Canada to other countries, including Latin America. And around this nation, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service reported this summer that 48 million people watch birds. To be counted, a person has to travel at least a mile specifically to observe birds or has to closely observe and try to identify birds around home.

water, catching as many fish as he could before the sun set. Releasing the fish was just fine; catching them was the thrill.

"I come out whenever my wife will let me," the Twin Falls resident said with a chuckle. Lately, that's been two or three times a week.

Sometimes he travels to Magic Reservoir or Salmon Falls Dam. Mostly he comes to Dierkes Lake because it's closer to home and he usually has good luck. In all, he caught 14 fish that Thursday. He kept his limit — six — and released the rest.

Simson has been an angler most of his life, but started ice fishing only a couple of years ago after a friend introduced him to the sport. It extends his fishing opportunities once warm-weather angling has ended.

"It's different than regular fishing, because you have to be there for the strike (to set the hook)," he said as he watched his five poles — the maximum an Idaho ice fisherman may use at one time. Each pole hung over its own hole that Simson had drilled.

Indentations in the ice showed where previous anglers had drilled.

Another Twin Falls angler, Josh Corbett, stood a few yards away, waiting for the strike of a fish on his own poles. More anglers stood on the bank, lines dropped into holes on the ice near shore.

Corbett was on the lake more than once last week, and said he caught about 30 fish during his visits.

That Thursday, he didn't have as much luck as Simson. He caught only a couple of fish.

Corbett was using corn; Simson, a night crawler.

Like everything else, Simson said, fish slow down in winter. They eat less.

"You only have to use a smidgen of a worm," he said. Since noon he had used only one night crawler, breaking it off piecemeal.

Ice fishing is relatively inexpensive. An angler could get started for less than $100, Simson said.

Besides warm clothing and a fishing license, Simson brings a drill, auger, ice scoop, boot spikes, his fishing gear and a sled to carry his equipment.

For safety's sake, he tells his wife where he is going and about what time she should expect him home. If he goes outside of cell phone range, such as at Magic Reservoir, he always goes with a friend.

He's never had problems but knows there is always danger on the ice. He doesn't tread ice unless it's a good 6 inches thick, he said. He tests it by noticing where other anglers have been and drilling small holes to check thickness. And he usually doesn't go far from shore.

He doesn't need to. At Dierkes, he catches his limit — and then some.

As the sun slid farther toward the horizon, Simson was still on the ice waiting for his next catch.

Don't lend ski passes, Sun Valley officials warn

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

Time was when "Lester the Arrester" — Ketchum's city marshal during the 1950s and '60s — would escort skiers who tried to ride the lifts for free out to the desert south.

It was Les Jankow's "Get out of Dodge before sundown and never show your face around here again" method of dealing with scofflaws.

Those days are gone. But some skiers and boarders still try to get a free ride, often hiking up the mountain and changing their clothes in the woods in hopes lift operators won't recognize them, said ticket checker John Newcomb. Others simply ask acquaintances to let them borrow their ski pass.

Now Sun Valley officials are cautioning skiers and boarders not to share their ski passes — for their own protection, as well as Sun Valley's.

"It's fraud using someone else's pass," said ticket sales supervisor Joe Reali. "But it's also not too smart to loan someone your pass. There's more information on that than your name and picture. Loaning your pass could lead to identity theft."

Reali's warning follows a report from Vail that ski-pass fraud cases at Vail are on pace to exceed last year's. Vail Mountain identified 454 ski pass fraud cases during the 2008-09 ski season — almost double the amount of the previous year.

Ski pass fraud in Vail can carry a penalty of up to $1,000 in fines and 180 days jail.

Sun Valley officials haven't talked about making a concerted effort to arrest violators at this time. But Sun Valley does sometimes yank passes, Newcomb said.

Safety

resident said. "If it's not at least 5 inches thick, I'm not going out."

Watson — an avid angler who's competed in fishing tournaments across the country and written articles about the sport for outdoors magazines — said he hasn't fallen in the water once, because he adheres to strict safety rules while on the ice. No thin ice for him.

"I don't need to fish that bad," he said.

"The clearer the ice, the harder the ice," Watson said, noting that anglers should be wary of milky-colored ice, which often isn't as strong.

The best way to test for thickness is to walk slowly and drill holes.

Doug Megargle, regional fisheries manager for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, agreed with Watson's assessment.

"Ice is not uniform, so you should drill holes repeatedly as you go," he said. "Anglers should be leery about accessing ice less than 4 inches thick."

Megargle has fallen in the icy water more than once, and said it's a scary experience that, for some people, can turn deadly.

He never goes on the ice without his ice picks, and he recommends every ice fisherman have a pair.

The picks, which can be purchased for about $15 at sporting goods stores, are linked together with a coil and can be carried around your neck or close to your body. If you fall in the water, use them to spike the ice and pull yourself out. Chances are, you wouldn't be able to get a good hold on the ice without them.

"It's a real sad event, but it's really hard to get out if you can't gain enough traction to pull yourself out or if someone isn't there to help you," Megargle said.

He also recommends that anglers take rope with them, in case they need to help pull their buddies out of the water. Rescuers should stay away from the edge.

"As a last resort, get down on your belly and spread out your center of gravity," he said. "Crawl on your belly until you are able to get a hold of the person."

A noisy environment is no place to set up an ice-fishing shanty

By Eric Sharp
Detroit Free Press

SAGINAW, Mich. — Ice fishermen often blame slow fishing on decreased fish. Doug Deming asks, "Don't you think 500 guys dragging sleds over the heads of the fish in six feet of water might have something to do with it?"

Deming owns Fish Point Lodge on Saginaw Bay near Unionville, one of Michigan's best-known waterfowl lodges. In summer and winter, he offers guided fishing trips for walleyes, traveling over the ice in a closed Argo ORV that has rubber tracks like a tank and floats like a boat, allowing it to cross open leads.

This winter, he said, "The ice came early, then went away. Now it's come back, but it's still inshore in four to eight feet of water. And because of the economy, you have 15,000 unemployed guys out there every day."

"When a plane flies low over your head, what do you do? You look up. So why would fish ignore something going right over their heads and making a lot of noise? If you can find a place off by yourself and move around quietly, you'll get a lot more fish."

The crowd and constant movement of people on and off the ice probably was a major factor in the slow catch rate for perch when photographer Brian Kaufman and I talked to anglers on Lake St. Clair recently.

The air temperature was about 10 degrees, a 15- to 20-knot wind was nipping noses and fingers, and anglers fishing at Metro Beach Metropark and behind Gino's Surf Restaurant in Harrison Township were complaining that the few perch they were catching at midday were small.

But a few fishermen who got out early, when weather conditions were even more brutal, said they did fairly well until the crowds showed up.

Randy Atwood of Macomb Township said he caught 19 perch from eight to 10 inches behind Gino's from about 7:30 to 9:30 a.m. "Then there was a constant parade of people walking past, pulling sleds behind them, and it just shut down," he said.

Tony Paglia of Harper Woods, Mich., was sitting on a bucket in the boat basin at the Metropark. He was behind an island and out of the wind, where the sunshine made life pretty pleasant.

"I fish here a lot. Have for years," he said. "Normally, I do pretty good here, because this is the deepest water in the area. But I'm not getting much today. This is all we've been getting so far," he said of a perch that wouldn't stretch to three inches. "The bite is so light, you can hardly feel them."

Fishing patterns through the ice are similar to those in summer. Early on, the fish are shallow, in water anywhere from one to six feet deep, and they gradually move deeper as the water temperature and dissolved oxygen level drop.

They reverse that pattern as spring approaches, and by the time the ice melts, most species usually are back in the shallows, where they will spawn.

I'm fortunate to be able to ice fish at times and places when fewer people are on the ice, and over the years, I've verified that there's usually an inverse relation between the number of anglers and the number of fish caught.

That's not always true, but I'd say that 95 percent of the time, the best ice fishing happens when there's the least commotion.

Last winter, I was sitting in my portable shanty along a small break line in 14 feet of water where we often catch bass and walleyes in the summer on Lake Margrethe. The water was like crystal, and I could see a dozen walleyes idling around my lures, which they wouldn't touch no matter what I tried.

They stayed there for 45 minutes while I changed the sizes and colors of jigs and offered different natural baits. Then a snowmobile came by about 50 yards away, followed by a couple more. The machines kept buzzing up and down the lake, and within five minutes, the walleyes had disappeared.

Montana FWP eyes new antler-hunting rules

By Eve Byron
Independent Record

People no longer will be able to ride horses or motorized vehicles into Montana's Wildlife Management Areas to look for shed antlers for the first three days the areas are open to the public, under a proposal given tentative approval by the Fish, Wildlife and Parks Commission.

FWP Commissioners are concerned that the rush to collect antlers is pushing around elk and exhausting them, particularly at the Sun River Wildlife Management Area. Cow elk are pregnant when the WMAs open, usually around May 15.

However, the commission decided against instituting a proposed rule that limits people to two antlers per day, noting that many people come from far away for what's been called an Easter egg hunt for adults, and limiting their take didn't seem fair.

— antler hunter Jeff Knaff

That works for Jeff Knaff of Townsend, who said he's headed to Sun River on opening day for about 20 years.

"I think the walk-in rule is fine and dandy, because the elk were getting pushed around quite a bit by the horses," Knaff said. "But I wasn't going to go all that way from here to pick up two horns. It's public land, and once the horns are on the ground they're fair game. The FWP is supposed to protect wildlife, and I don't consider shed horns to be part of that."

"Just try limiting every little kid to two eggs at an Easter egg hunt. It just wouldn't work."

Horn hunting is one of Montana's favorite Wild West traditions, and the Sun River opening often is compared to the great Oklahoma land rush, with more than 200 people in vehicles, on horseback, on bikes and on foot, gathered at the main gate or along fences around the WMA.

At high noon, the gate is swung open, and hundreds of people pour forth, spreading out over the landscape to hunt for antlers.

WMAs that include big game winter range are generally closed to public entry from Dec. 1 to May 15, although some close earlier. The winter closures are intended to eliminate human disturbance when wildlife most need to conserve energy.

The rush on opening day is a management tool for FWP because the people push any elk remaining on the WMA into higher ground to calve, and it lessens their impact on foraging.

FWP Commissioner Ron Moody said it's become one of the institutionalized traditions of the whole outdoor experience, without anybody really paying attention to it.

The practice has grown to the point that he feels some regulations have to be put in place.

Montana has about 60 WMAs, but not all of them are closed to the public in the winter and not all of them are as wild on opening day as Sun River. But the new rules are being proposed statewide in an effort to be consistent.

A formal public comment period will run through Feb. 19, with a final proposal to be presented to the commission at its March 11 meeting.

Finding the essentials for surviving on the moon

Last fall, prospects for a future lunar colony got much brighter.

The biggest news was the LCROSS mission's visually unspectacular — but nonetheless dramatic — discovery of water amidst the soil of a permanently shadowed crater near the moon's South Pole. An astronaut needs about eight pounds of water a day, so with lunar transport costs exceeding $10,000 per pound, in situ water is literally worth its weight in gold.

Of course, there are other requirements in establishing a long-term human presence on the moon. The airless surface is continuously bombarded by both deadly radiation and micrometeorites. Lunar colonists will need substantial shelter that, again, won't come cheap.

Enter the Japanese space probe, Kaguya, which orbited the moon for 20 months before being deliberately crashed into its surface last summer. It returned a wealth of close-up images, high-def video, magnetic field measurements, and topographic data.

While poring over images of Oceanus Procellarum (the "Ocean of Storms"), Kaguya scientists found a black opening 200 feet wide, lying in the middle of a sinuous rille (a low valley thought to be the ceiling of a subsurface lava tube). From photos taken at various times, when sunlight shone into it at different angles, they estimate its depth at nearly 300 feet. Ironically, tentative plans for post-Apollo manned explorations included a Family addresses Parkinson's disease diagnoses

DEAR DR. GOTT: My father has recently been diagnosed with Parkinson's disease. Because we know so little about the condition, we would like to know what we might expect.

DEAR READER: Parkinson's disease (PD) is a progressive neurological disorder that occurs when neurons located in a portion of the brain become impaired or die. In healthy individuals, these cells produce a chemical known as dopamine that allows smooth, coordinated functioning of muscles and movement. When approximately 80 percent of the dopamine-producing cells are damaged, symptoms of Parkinson's appear.

This is the second most common neurodegenerative condition, following

ASK DR. GOTT
Dr. Peter Gott

Alzheimer's. About 4 million people worldwide are affected, with the disorder being more common in men.

Early symptoms are subtle, may occur slowly, and often include a decreased or total lack of the ability to smell. As the disease progresses, complications may escalate. Handwriting may appear cramped and difficult to read. Rigidity, lack of facial expression, postural instability, slowed thinking, memory loss, sleep disorders, constipation, urinary incontinence, visual hallucinations, dyskinesia (involuntary movements) and emotional changes may occur.

Depression affects quality of life and may be present in up to 70 percent of all sufferers. Difficulty swallowing affects about 75 percent of all individuals with moderate to advanced PD. Oddly enough, we've been led to believe that the condition is always associated with a tremor when, in actuality, almost one-third of all PD patients fail to have that symptom. When it occurs, it most frequently begins in a hand, although it can appear in a foot or the jaw.

Treatment includes new drugs that may assist in avoiding the complications associated with the long-term use of levodopa, which was introduced in the 1960s and considered the first effective medication for control. Debate remains regarding when to begin initial treatment. Delaying treatment until symptoms become severe is common practice since levodopa is effective only for a period of a few years, but there is a growing consensus that supports early treatment.

As a patient ages, he or she will likely experience difficulty with remembering to take medication. This contributes to a decrease in adherence to drug schedules. In this instance, a pill container listing the days of the week and times of day may come in handy. And it goes without saying that a caregiver will be required to set out and monitor the specific amount of medication prescribed.

Caregivers are an extremely important part of the picture, yet a great deal of auxiliary assistance may be needed at the appropriate time. A patient may benefit from medication; physical, occupational and speech therapy; exercise; massage; acupuncture; and herbs. In fact, almost 50 percent of patients admit to using alternatives such as grape-seed extract and vitamin B50 for control of tremors. Caregivers should realize that a coordinated, successful individual who may have been the primary breadwinner in the family will have difficulty adapting to something over which he or she has no control.

Frustration, anger and a feeling of hopelessness may result. The patient must remain as independent and active as possible for as long as possible. The services of an outside counselor might be appropriate.

If he isn't already, your father should be under the care of a neurologist with appropriate knowledge of Parkinson's. Ask his primary-care physician for a referral.

U.S. intelligence chief concedes errors in Christmas bomb case

By Robert Burns and Devlin Barrett
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — The nation's intelligence chief on Wednesday conceded missteps in the government's handling of the Christmas Day airline bombing attempt, but his comments about the failure to use a special federal interrogation team may have amounted to a misstep of his own.

National Intelligence Director Dennis Blair raised new questions Wednesday before a Senate panel about how well prepared the administration is to respond on short notice to domestic terrorist acts.

Blair suggested the High-Value Detainee Interrogation Group, also known as HIG, should have questioned the Nigerian airline bomb incident suspect before any decisions were made on whether to place him in the civilian court system.

"That unit was created exactly for this purpose," Blair told the Senate Homeland Security Committee. "We did not invoke the HIG in this case. We should have."

But the elite interrogation unit cited by Blair was designed by the Obama administration last year to deal with suspects captured abroad. And it is not operational yet, FBI Director Robert Mueller said Wednesday.

The HIG unit, which brings together experienced interrogators from across the intelligence agencies, is also led by the FBI, the same agency that questioned suspect Umar Farouk Abdulmutallab in the hours after he was taken into custody on a landed Detroit-bound airliner.

Several hours after Blair spoke, his office posted a brief note on its Web site saying his remarks had been misconstrued.

"The FBI interrogated Umar Farouk Abdulmutallab when they took him into custody," the statement said. "They received important intelligence at that time, drawing on the FBI's expertise in interrogation that will be available in the HIG once it is fully operational."

Abdulmutallab spoke for many hours to his FBI questioners, telling them he had been trained and equipped by al-Qaida operatives in Yemen, according to multiple law enforcement officials familiar with the case who spoke on condition of part my responsibility?" Blair told the Homeland Security Committee that he was not consulted on whether Abdulmutallab should have been questioned by the HIG unit to determine whether he should be charged in civilian or military court.

Some critics assert the government should have at least considered whether to delay placing the Nigerian in the civilian court system in order to press him for any useful intelligence before he gained the legal protections of a lawyer.

Many Republicans insist that major terror suspects such as Abdulmutallab should be tried in military courts because civilian courts do not have the capacity to handle such high-profile cases.

"It's crystal clear to me that somebody in the Department of Justice prematurely decided that they should treat this as a normal criminal case," Sen. Jeff Sessions, R-Ala., said after the hearing. "Obviously no care and time was spent on this one, it was just, 'Boom!' a decision made quickly — way too quickly in my view."

Blair said the decision to file criminal charges against the suspect in federal court was made by the FBI agent in charge on the scene, "consulting with his headquarters and Department of Justice."

"Seemed logical to the people there, but it should have been taken using this HIG format at a higher level," Blair said.

Experts may have found bones of English princess

LONDON (AP) — She was a beautiful English princess who married one of Europe's most powerful monarchs and dazzled subjects with her charity and charm.

Now an international team of scientists say they think they've found the body of Princess Eadgyth (pronounced Edith) — a 10th-century noblewoman who has been compared to Princess Diana.

"She was a very, very popular person," said Mark Horton, an archaeology professor at Bristol University in western England. "She was sort of the Diana of her day if you like — pretty and full of good works."

Horton is one of a team of experts working to verify the identity of some bones found bundled in silk at Magdeburg Cathedral in Germany.

Should the skeleton be positively identified as belonging to Eadgyth, it would be oldest remains of any English royal discovered so far. Experts say her closest competitors — the bones of various Saxon royals in Winchester Cathedral in southern England — are so hopelessly jumbled together that no single person can be identified.

"If (Eadgyth's) skeleton is intact then, yes, as far as I'm aware, it would be the earliest identifiable remains from Anglo-Saxon England," said Simon Keynes, a professor of Anglo-Saxon history at the University of Cambridge.

The skeleton was uncovered as part of a wider research project into Magdeburg Cathedral, about 90 miles west of Berlin. The elaborate 16th-century monument in which the body was found was long thought to be empty.

When archaeologists opened the monument in 2008, they found a lead coffin bearing her name and carrying a nearly complete set of bones wrapped in silk.

Horton said the skeleton belonged to a woman between 30 years and 40 years of age. But there is some doubt as to whether it is the late royal: Historians believe Eadgyth's body was moved several times — a common practice as far as the bodies of saints and royalty were concerned.

"The inscription (on the coffin) says she's been moved twice previously," Horton said, adding there's archaeological evidence of at least two more moves.

It was possible that the bones were lost and swapped with someone else's during any one of the moves, he said.

"Quite often they scooped up any old bones and put them in," he noted.

Tests will now be performed to figure out the age of the bones and where they come from, including strontium isotope analysis — a technique that measures the ratio of strontium isotopes in a person's tooth enamel to determine where they grew up.

Because different isotope ratios correspond to different kinds of geographic locations, the technique can help pinpoint where a person lived.

UN admits errors in warming report

WASHINGTON (AP) — Five glaring errors were discovered in one paragraph of the world's most authoritative report on global warming, forcing the Nobel Prize-winning panel of climate scientists who wrote it to apologize and promise to be more careful.

The errors are in a 2007 report by the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, a U.N.-affiliated body. All the mistakes appear in a subsection that suggests glaciers in the Himalayas could melt away by the year 2035 — hundreds of years earlier than the data actually indicates. The year 2350 apparently was transposed as 2035.

The climate panel and even the scientist who publicized the errors said they are not significant in comparison to the entire report, nor were they intentional. And they do not negate the fact that worldwide, glaciers are melting faster than ever.

But the mistakes open the door for more attacks from climate change skeptics.

"The credibility of the IPCC depends on the thoroughness with which its procedures are adhered to," Yvo de Boer, head of the U.N. Framework Convention on Climate Change, told The Associated Press in an e-mail. "The procedures have been violated in this case. That must not be allowed to happen again because the credibility of climate change policy can only be based on credible science."

The incident follows a furor late last year over the release of stolen e-mails in which climate scientists talked about suppressing data and freezing out skeptics of global warming. And on top of that, an intense cold spell has some people questioning whether global warming exists.

In a statement, the climate change panel expressed regret over what it called "poorly substantiated estimates" about the Himalayan glaciers.

A tree worker removes sawdust from Herbie, New England's largest and oldest elm tree, after it was cut down Tuesday in Yarmouth, Maine.

New England loses a big tree, and a little history

By David Sharp
Associated Press writer

YARMOUTH, Maine — Herbie, a massive tree that stretched 110 feet into the sky, captured the imagination of a town's residents and earned the title of New England's champion elm, was cut down Tuesday after a long battle with Dutch elm disease. It was more than 200 years old.

Assisted by a massive crane, a crew took the proud tree down, limb by limb, as residents and the tree's 101-year-old caretaker gathered to bid it farewell. Even with its massive limbs removed, the tree's 10-ton trunk was so heavy that it shook the ground when it fell with a thud.

Among those witnessing the tree's historic passing was Frank Knight, the town's former tree warden, who cared for the beloved American elm for a half-century.

"It's been a beautiful tree. I'm sorry to see it go. But nothing is forever," Knight said. "It's pretty near my turn. And it's just a fact of life that life is going to end. And that's for people, for trees, for everything. I thank the good Lord every day that we had him in his glory and beauty for so long."

Delayed for 24 hours because of a winter storm, the crew quickly set about dismantling Herbie in methodical fashion under steady snowfall. Its top limbs were 30 to 40 feet long, as big as typical trees. The final cut that brought down its trunk was made by a man wielding a 5-foot-long chain saw.

Afterward, Knight was greeted with a round of applause as he joined a crowd that gathered around the tree's stump. Steadied with a cane, Knight watched a state official count the tree's rings.

Herbie was originally estimated to be 240 years old. But a preliminary count of growth rings by Peter Lammert of the Maine Forest Service indicated it was 212. A precise age will be announced after the trunk is sanded smooth and examined under magnification, Lammert said.

Judging by the revised age, it's now believed Herbie sprouted around 1798, not long after the 13 original colonies gained their independence and shipbuilding had taken root on the shores of Yarmouth. Over the years, generations of residents passed under the shade tree.

The tree became well known among local townsfolk as one of a handful of large elms that survived after Dutch elm disease arrived in town in the late 1950s.

Knight, Yarmouth's volunteer tree warden, realized he couldn't save the town's elms, which were dying by the hundreds from the fungal disease. So he focused his efforts on one tree — the giant elm with a straight trunk and sturdy branches at the corner of East Main Street and Yankee Drive.

Nicknamed Herbie by resident Donna Felker and her friends when they were kids, the tree survived 14 rounds of Dutch elm disease, thanks to Knight's efforts. Knight oversaw selective pruning of Herbie's diseased limbs, as well as application of insecticides and injections of fungicide.

Over time, Herbie eventually became New England's greatest elm — believed to be its largest and oldest, and known as much for its resilience as its grand size.

Mary Ellen Bradford, who took her 4-year-old grandson to see Herbie's demise, said there was a sense of loss for many who live in Yarmouth.

"It's kind of a sad day, but we have great memories," she said. "We've always taken pictures of our kids in front of it, over the years."

While Herbie was big, it wasn't the nation's tallest elm. There's a taller one in Baltimore County, Md., and it's possible that a new champion elm, in Ohio, will be crowned this year by American Forests, which keeps tabs on big trees, according to Jan Ames Santerre, Maine's tall tree coordinator.

Charlie Daniels suffers mild stroke in Colorado

DURANGO, Colo. (AP) — Fiddler-guitarist Charlie Daniels said he suffered a mild stroke while snowmobiling in Colorado and has some stiffness and numbness in his left hand and arm.

Daniels, 73, suffered the stroke Friday just outside Durango, about 230 miles southwest of Denver. He was treated at a local hospital then airlifted to a Denver hospital, where he was released on Sunday.

In a posting on his Web site Wednesday, Daniels said he was starting physical therapy. He didn't say whether his playing had been affected but wrote, "I'm doing fine."

Another statement on the Web site says he doesn't plan to cancel any concerts. His next appearance is scheduled for Feb. 27 in Fort Pierce, Fla.

Daniels lives in Mount Juliet, Tenn., but has a home in the Durango area where he takes an extended vacation every year around Christmas, his spokeswoman Paula Szeigis said. Szeigis said Daniels has returned to the Durango home.

In his posting, Daniels said he was snowmobiling with friends when he noticed his left hand getting numb but thought it was because he had been gripping the handlebars for so long.

"But then I felt the left side of my mouth starting growing numb and my left foot started getting hard to control and I knew something was happening to me. I knew I'd better get back down the mountain and get some help," he wrote.

He said tests showed the stroke was caused by a blood clot in his brain.

"The fingerprints of God were all over my experience," Daniels wrote, because he wasn't far from the Durango hospital, which had only recently begun stocking the drug used to break up the clot. A plane was immediately available to take him to Denver.

Emeline Decker

BOISE — Emeline Decker, 93, passed away Friday, Jan. 15, 2010, at her home in Boise, Idaho, surrounded by her children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren.

Emeline was born Aug. 14, 1916, in Gothenburg, Neb., to Charles and Margaret Soller Burson. Her father passed away when she was a baby. She was reared in Nebraska with her time split between Hastings and Gothenburg, where she lived on a farm. It was during this time that she gained her lifelong love of reading.

After graduation from high school, she enrolled as a student at the University of Nebraska, where she completed two years of studies majoring in dietetics. After leaving college, she journeyed to California, where she married the love of her life, Robert Decker on June 27, 1939. During World War II, she and Bob worked in defense industries (she was a "Rosie the Riveter"!) before moving back to Nebraska. Near the end of the war, they moved to Boise and subsequently to Emmett, where she and Bob owned a real estate agency.

They lived in Emmett until 1967, when they moved back to Boise. In retirement, they once again moved back to Emmett and later to Gooding to be near family. After Bob's death in 1994, she continued to live in Gooding and then moved to Las Vegas, Nev., to enjoy the warm winters with easier access to travel. When age dictated, she moved back to Boise.

An avid reader, Emeline constantly had at least one book on her reading table. In fact, after her eyesight failed her, she continued to read via the Talking Books program. At the time of death, she had read more than 3,500 books by this means. She also was a dedicated knitter and quilter, knitting sweaters, socks, hats and scarves for children, grandchildren and friends for the past 50 years and quilts for the past 30. She served on library boards in Emmett and Gooding. She was a lifelong member of the Lutheran Church.

Emeline traveled the world extensively, always wanting to know what was on the other side of the mountain. She visited 47 states and 26 countries during her travels and completed eight cruises.

She is survived by her children, Tom (Janice) of Long Beach, Calif., Gail (Tom) Cushman of Boise and David (Debby) of Eagle. She had 10 grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren. Her grandchildren are Elizabeth (Cushman) Hume of Boise, Cole Cushman of Nome, Alaska, CPT Justin Decker of Honolulu, Hawaii, Jocelyn (Decker) Cherin of San Diego, Calif., Aaron Decker of Kansas City, Kan., Ann (Decker) Crawford of Atlanta, Ga., Laurie (Decker) Hands of Dallas, Texas, Dr. Jon Decker of Mill Creek, Wash., Lynne (Decker) Williams of Boise and 1st Lt. Joshua Decker of Honolulu, Hawaii. Emeline is also survived by her sister, Irene Richardson of Riverside, Calif.; and her brother, Bill Jobman of Portland, Ore. She was preceded in death by her brother, Charles Burson of Gothenburg, Neb.

A service was held Monday, Jan. 18, at Summers Funeral Home, 1205 W. Bannock St. in Boise under the guidance of Pastor Tim Pauls of Good Shepherd Lutheran Church. Burial was at Dry Creek Cemetery in Boise.

Thank you for the support from Bonaventure staff, Horizon Hospice, MSTI, the Talking Books program, and the many other friends and family who have assisted her in the past years.

In lieu of flowers, the family suggests donations to a local library to promote reading.

Pass-first Stennis helping CSI men be cohesive unit

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

Remember Reggie Miller's high-arching shots? They were the product trying to shoot over taller, older siblings as a kid.

D.J. Stennis' past-first approach to basketball?

Similar story.

Growing up in Las Vegas, the College of Southern Idaho freshman guard spent his summers playing with and against older, more talented players. The result: "I didn't shoot a lot," he said. "I'm not used to looking for my own shot."

The 5-foot-9 guard is averaging less than two field-goal attempts per game, but dishes nearly three assists despite playing only 15 minutes a game.

While Stennis is trying to strike a balance to "be aggressive, but not selfish" on the offensive end, he knows his teammates benefit from his sharing mentality.

"When you get everybody involved, they'll play defense and they'll rebound," he said. "So I'm just trying to make sure everyone is hungry?"

Rogers aims for 200th win as CSI women host Snow

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

Randy Rogers is used to winning. That's why he's only one victory away from reaching the 200-win milestone in just his eighth season at the College of Southern Idaho. But when you average 26 wins in your first seven seasons while claiming four Scenic West Athletic Conference crowns, sitting in the middle of the league standings just doesn't feel right.

"It feels like we're below .500," said Rogers. Far from it. While the Golden Eagle women are third in the SWAC at 6-4, they are 14-6 overall. And a win tonight over Snow College would make Rogers 200-55 overall at CSI.

The milestone is meaningful to Rogers, but he'd like something else even more. "We need a sweep," he said.

That means topping the Badgers (13-6, 4-5 SWAC) today and beating No. 2 Salt Lake Community College on Saturday.

Rogers

Why all the fuss?

There's just something about rivalries that brings out the worst in people. Twin Falls-Canyon Ridge appears to be no exception.

No, I'm not referring to the manner in which Twin Falls beat Canyon Ridge in the first boys basketball contest between the schools a couple of weeks ago. I have no issue there. Then again, I find mercy rules, and things of that ilk, every bit as counterproductive in the "life lessons" department as a lifetime supply of welfare checks.

David Bashore

What's mystifying about the Bruins 86-35 rout of their west-side neighbors is the amount of handwringing that followed. Talk of classlessness, running up the score and other shenanigans took on a life of its own in the rumor mill and on various Internet message boards in the aftermath. It's all largely unfounded, and serves as an excuse to denigrate a team with considerable success over the last season-plus.

Twin Falls head coach Matt Harr is a first-rate coach who preaches hard work, intense defense and impeccable fundamentals. He's generally regarded as one of the finest coaches around. He also was on the other end of a few beatings just two years ago, when the Bruins won only six games. He teaches his kids to play basketball the right way, and there's no question they do exactly that.

There's no disputing rivalry games are different. You always want to beat a rival, and you want to beat them badly if you can. Handing your rival a 51-point beatdown is every player's dream. Twin Falls achieved that dream the right way.

The Bruins pressed throughout the first half, and switched to a full-court man in the third quarter. That's the one thing that may have been unnecessary (though it turned out Twin Falls needed the full-court man to beat Highland last Friday), but Harr's track record has given him the benefit of any doubt. This is a team that's competing against itself because it hasn't gotten competition otherwise.

Did the Bruins showboat a bit? There's no other way to spin a backboard alley-oop attempt. Did they want to beat Canyon Ridge soundly? Of course. But not at the cost of their integrity.

The way the Bruins were playing that night, they could have named their own score. One player said it would have been nice to get 100. They would have gotten it if they really wanted to. But maybe they knew it would make them no better than Yates High School out of Houston, which pressed and trapped for 32 minutes as it tried to hang 200 on an opponent a couple of weeks ago — it ended up with 170 and far more grief than the endeavor was worth.

Bruin comeback

Twin Falls rallies from 10 down to get past Minico

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

Trailing by 10 early in the fourth quarter, the Twin Falls boys basketball team mounted a late comeback to defeat Minico 56-53 Wednesday at Baun Gymnasium in Twin Falls.

It was a meeting of two teams who stood undefeated in Great Basin Conference play at tip-off, but only one could stay that way. For a while, it appeared it would be the Spartans.

"This was a big game for us," said Bruin forward Brennon Lancaster, who led his team with 19 points, two steals and two blocks. "We haven't played a big game like that since Skyview."

Through three quarters, the Spartans chipped away at the Bruins, building a 30-26 lead at the half and a 42-34 lead to start the fourth, which was eventually extended to 10 early in the final period.

Then it all fell apart.

Lancaster's layup with 5:15 left tied the game at 45-45, and he was fouled by Coltin Johnson at the basket. Lancaster converted a free-throw attempt to take the Bruins' first lead of the second half.

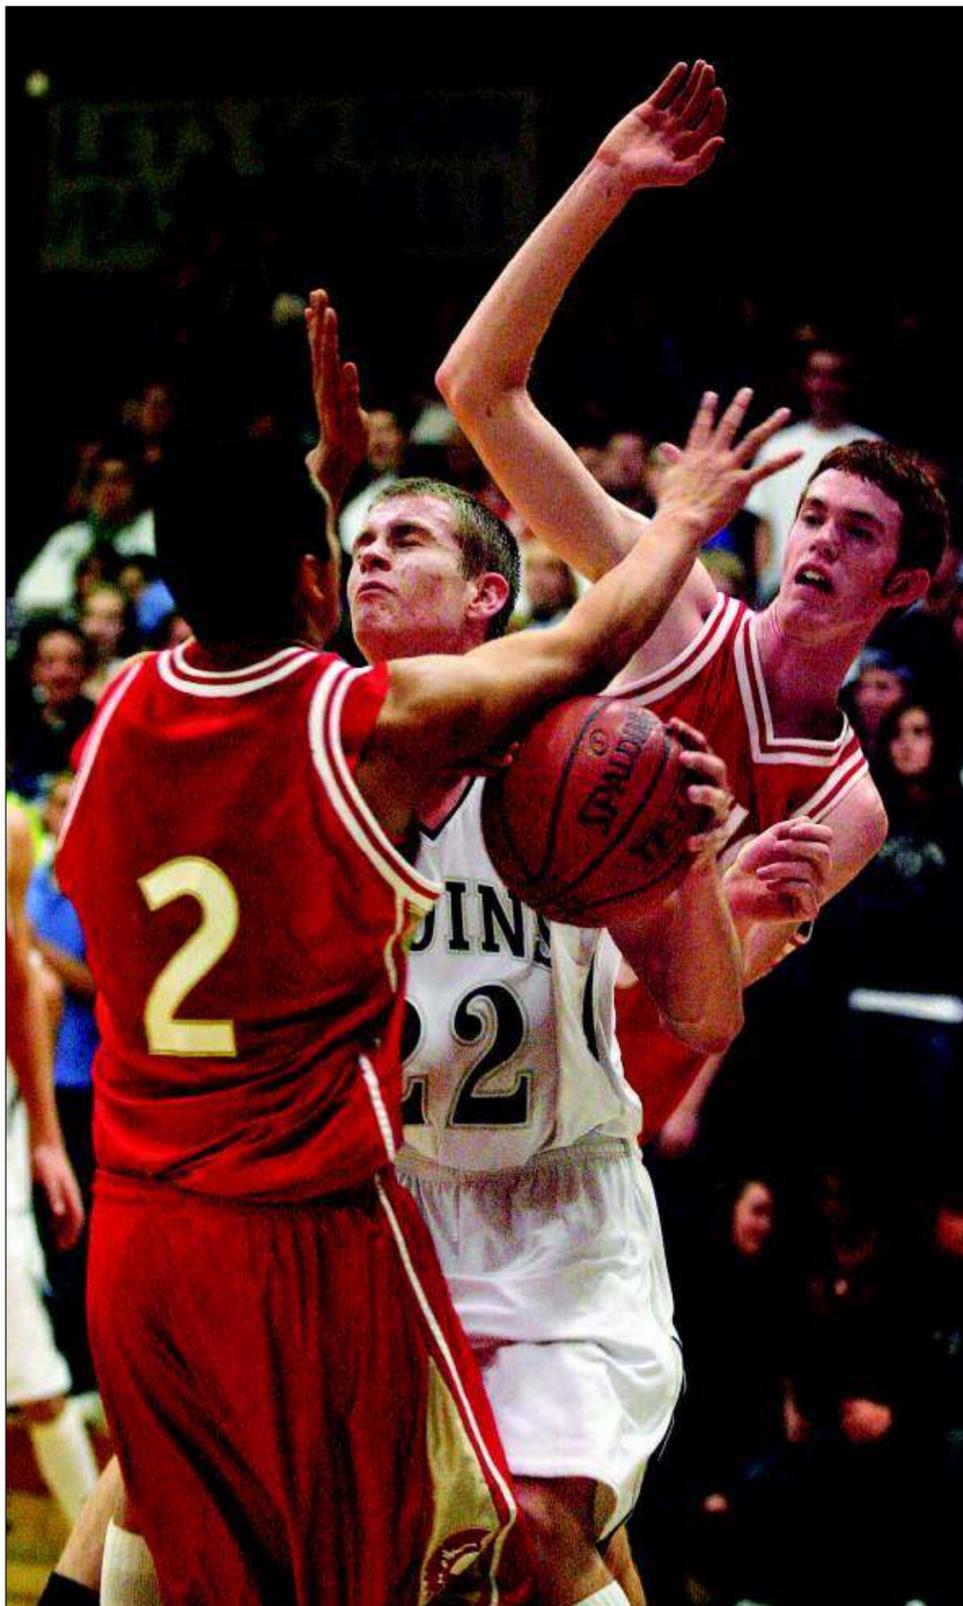

"Our strength was to run the floor, get them tired and get them in foul trouble," Lancaster said.

Minico got whistled nine times during the final quarter, which sent the Bruins to the line for 17 of their 34 free-throw attempts. Twin Falls connected on 14 of those, including Justin Pedersen's 6-for-6 performance.

"They outhustled us, and we didn't move the ball right," Spartan guard Mark Leon said.

Eric Harr's mid-range jumper shortly after Lancaster's three-point play was another important possession for the Bruins, marking the last lead change. Pedersen had a shot on the right side, but he swung the ball left to Harr, who had set up outside of the arc. Harr started to take a trey, but instead slipped past a Minico defender and pulled up for a jumper that put Twin Falls ahead 49-47 with three

Djokovic, Davydenko into 3rd round; Ivanovic out

By John Pye

MELBOURNE, Australia — Back on the court where he won his only Grand Slam title, Novak Djokovic overcame an early struggle against a journeyman Swiss player before advancing to the third round of the Australian Open.

The No. 3-ranked Djokovic had nine double-faults and 52 unforced errors in his 3-6, 6-1, 6-1, 6-3 win Thursday over Marco Chiudinelli, the Swiss player who was playing in his first Australian Open.

"I was well aware of his quality, and he played extremely well, especially in the first set and the start of the second," Djokovic said. "I was very lucky to get two sets to one up."

"This court is most special because I won my only Grand Slam here," the 22-year-old Serb said of Rod Laver Arena, where he beat Federer in the semifinals en route to the 2008 title. "It has the nicest possible memories."

Djokovic will next play Denis Istomin, who beat Michael Berrer of Germany 7-5, 6-3, 6-4.

Sixth-seeded Nikolay Davydenko, who rarely gets onto the center court at this stage of a Grand Slam, had a 6-3, 6-3, 6-0 win over Ukraine qualifier Ilya Marchenko in the low-key manner which has typified an 11-match winning streak.

The 28-year-old Russian doesn't have the profile of Roger Federer or Rafael Nadal, and he's never made a Grand Slam final, but nobody has been playing better of late.

Former No. 1-ranked Ana Ivanovic extended her run of poor results in a second-round 6-7 (6), 7-5, 6-4 loss to Gisela Dulko of Argentina.

In other women's results, No. 10 Agnieszka Radwanska of Poland advanced 6-0, 6-2 over Alla Kudryavtseva and No. 32 Carla Suarez Navarro had a 6-1, 6-4 win over German Andrea Petkovic.

BYU earns 14th straight win

PROVO, Utah — No. 14 BYU is a win away from reaching a program record.

The Cougars beat Wyoming 81-66 on Wednesday night, extending their winning streak to 14 in a row and moving within one victory of matching the best start school history.

And with two months still left in the season, coach Dave Rose doesn't want to hear about history or the possibility of his team getting complacent while romping through the early part of the Mountain West schedule.

"There was a test lurking tonight and we responded to it," Rose said. "There'll be a test lurking Saturday and hopefully we'll respond to that."

Tyler Haws scored a career-high 24 points and Jackson Emery added 15 points, five rebounds and four steals for BYU (19-1, 4-0), which plays at San Diego State on Saturday.

Senior Bowl is Tebow's NFL audition

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — Tim Tebow's NFL potential has been debated for years.

His throwing motion, arm strength and pocket presence have been dissected, examined and critiqued. His determination, leadership skills and work ethic have been commended, lauded and revered.

Some have little doubt he will be a star quarterback in the pros. Others believe he would be better suited at tight end or H-back.

The former Gators standout has made his intentions clear. Next week, at the Senior Bowl in Mobile, Ala., he gets a chance to prove to NFL scouts, coaches and general managers that he can be an NFL quarterback.

than the final score. He also ran for 51 yards and a score, and finished with more yards (533) than anyone in the history of the Bowl Championship Series.

“I've heard it once or twice,” Tebow said recently, when asked about people questioning his NFL prospects. “I'm excited about it. I've heard a lot of it. Kind of heard that since high school, though. People didn't think I could throw at Florida, and we did OK at that.”

“And going to the next level, just try to prove people wrong. That's my goal. It's fun. It'll be exciting. I just want an opportunity to be a quarterback at the next level and to get that chance.”

Tebow may have silenced some critics with his performance in the Sugar Bowl earlier this month. The 2007 Heisman Trophy winner completed 31 of 35 passes for a school-record 482 yards and three touchdowns in a 51-24 victory that was considerably more lopsided

RAIDERS INTERVIEW POTENTIAL ASSISTANTS

ALAMEDA, Calif. — Oakland Raiders owner Al Davis has started interviewing potential assistants for next season even while he continues to mull the fate of coach Tom Cable.

ESPN.com reported the Raiders interviewed Baltimore Ravens quarterbacks coach Hue Jackson about becoming the team's offensive coordinator.

NFL.com reported the team interviewed recently fired New York Giants defensive line coach Mike Waufle, who held the same position in Oakland in 1998-2003, to replace Dwaine Board as line coach for the Raiders.

Both Jackson and Waufle worked on the staff at California with Cable in the 1990s, and Jackson was offensive coordinator at Southern California under current Raiders quarterbacks coach Paul Hackett.

Senior executive John Herrera denied a report in the San Francisco Chronicle that Davis has interviewed Jim Fassel and Marc Trestman as potential coaching candidates. Fassel and Trestman are former Raiders assistants who have been mentioned as possible successors to Cable if he is indeed fired.

INJURED BRADY OUT OF PRO BOWL, REPLACED BY SCHAUB

FOXBOROUGH, Mass. — Tom Brady has pulled out of the Pro Bowl after a season in which he played with rib and finger injuries. He has been replaced by Matt Schaub of the Houston Texans.

The NFL announced the change of AFC backup quarterbacks Wednesday. Brady and the rest of the New England Patriots had physicals after their 33-14 opening-round playoff loss to Baltimore on Jan. 10.

Brady played in all 16 regular-season games and completed 371 of 565 passes for 4,398 yards, 28 touchdowns and 13 interceptions.

Other Pro Bowl replacements announced Wednesday include New York Giants receiver Steve Smith replacing Arizona's Larry Fitzgerald on the NFC team, while San Francisco 49ers running back Frank Gore takes the place of injured Rams running back Steven Jackson.

The point is, if a team is running up the score, it'll be blatantly obvious to all observers. That wasn't the case when Twin Falls rolled up on Canyon Ridge, no matter what the score margin suggests.

Harr continued his rotation into the final period to make sure the tone was kept and emptied his bench as soon as he was satisfied that it was. His rotation policy happened to put the starters on the floor at that time. I have no problem with that. There's a message in there to finish what you start, and finish it well. They'll have to play four good quarters on three straight nights to win a state title in March.

There was no outcry when the Twin Falls football team beat Canyon Ridge 55-7 in October. I covered a state tournament game two years ago where the Lapwai girls basketball team beat Wallace 81-15. There was no mercy rule, and likewise there was no controversy. Lapwai was just that much better and everyone knew it, accepted it, and moved on.

If high school sports are about playing perfectly and winning all your games as well as you can, the Bruins achieved that. If they're about teaching life lessons, consider this: Does life kick you in the teeth 15 times without letting you get back up and then suddenly say, “OK, I'm going to ease off now so you can make this look a little more respectable”? Of course not.

Casey Petty, a Riverhawk player who suited up for Twin Falls last season, didn't seem too angered by the score margin postgame. He professed his respect for the opponent and the quality of team the Bruins are and he said they might be the best team in the state regardless of classification. He also talked about how his team could use the experience to get better in the future.

That's a lesson well learned. Canyon Ridge, a struggling team with young talent, will be better for having this experience. Its subsequent games suggest improvement is already evident.

It would be nice if the handwringers were as clued in as the players themselves.

He's not alone in that effort. In a recent players-only meeting, the Golden Eagles outlined some principles that each member of the team signed off on. It's an effort to be accountable for themselves and their teammates.

After two home wins last week in Scenic West Athletic Conference play, CSI (13-7, 5-5 SWAC) is looking to keep the ball rolling this week as Snow College visits for a 7:30 p.m. game tonight and Salt Lake Community College invades Twin Falls at 5 p.m. Saturday.

“We want to show everybody that we're believing in the new principles we came up with and that we're a tougher team mentally,” said Stennis.

Redshirt freshman guard Carrick Felix sees it as a matter of staying the newly plotted course.

“We've just got to continue to do what we're doing right now,” he said. “Things are finally coming together. We're playing as a family now.”

The Badgers (8-11, 3-7) are 0-2 against CSI this season, but have quality players in Jordan Wood (15.1 ppg), Reggie Shaw (12.3 ppg) and Melvin Haynes (12.1 ppg).

The bigger test comes Saturday against the Bruins (16-3, 7-2), who won 71-66 in a Nov. 19 visit to Twin Falls and claimed a 66-63 win over the Eagles Dec. 21 in Salt Lake City.

Salt Lake has four players scoring in double figures, including Collin Chiverton (15.2 ppg), Wil Carter (12.2), Darian Norris (11.5) and Jake Dastrup (10.8).

With two narrow losses to the Bruins, CSI's players are determined to break through the third time around.

“We know what's on the line and what we need to do to take care of business,” said Felix. “So it's all about just going out there and taking care of it now.”

SWAC leaders: The 6-foot-5 Felix is now second in the SWAC at 15.9 points a game. CSI forward Josten Thomas is just behind him, ranking third with 15.6 points. Thomas is second in rebounding at 8.5 per game.

On the slate: Tonight's other SWAC game is a battle for first place as North Idaho (18-2, 8-2) hosts Salt Lake. Saturday's games include Colorado Northwestern at Eastern Utah and Snow College at North Idaho.

Women

While the Bruins (17-1, 9-0 SWAC) are unbeaten in SWAC play, they aren't untouchable. SLCC narrowly edged Snow 68-67 last Saturday and has had a few other scares in league play, having to rally from 24 points down to beat CSI 66-62 Dec. 12 in Salt Lake City.

But before the Eagles worry about Salt Lake, they have to face a dangerous Snow team in today's 5:30 p.m. contest. The Badgers played CSI to a 79-75 game in their first visit to Twin Falls on Nov. 21, and the Eagles needed a Maddy Plunkett buzzer-beat to top Snow 79-77 Dec. 11 in Ephraim, Utah.

The balanced Badgers have five players averaging between 8.6 and 13.3 points per game, including Sammie Jensen, Tara Gehring, Amanda Farish, Abbie Beutler and Linsey Hodgkiss.

After dropping three straight SWAC games, CSI beat Eastern Utah and Colorado Northwestern last week, showing renewed energy in the 105-66 win over CNCC, which saw Plunkett set the program's single-game scoring record with 37 points.

“We're better when everybody's excited for each other,” said Rogers.

Freshman guard Kylie Hardison agrees.

“We have to come out together as a team,” she said. “That's the biggest thing, just playing as a team.”

Hardison has seen her role fluctuate from game-to-game but averaged 7.5 points in last week's two wins.

“I just try to concentrate on hustling, giving a lot of effort,” she said.

Her minutes ebb and flow now, but her scoring touch should earn her an ever-increasing role during her CSI career.

“She's one of my top three to take an open shot, because she shoots the ball really well,” said Rogers.

More on Saturday: CSI is 0-2 against Salt Lake, which is led by Haley Holmstead's 23.8 points a game. But Rogers likes having the Bruins as the favorite for their 3 p.m. meeting on Saturday. “I think we're a scary team,” he said. “I kind of like being the underdog. It's been a long time since we've been the underdog.”

Injury update: Rogers said sophomore All-American Shauneice Samms should be fully healthy for tonight's game. She sat out the CNCC win to rest a sprained ankle. ... Redshirt freshman point guard Kiki Lockett remains sidelined with plantar fasciitis and could face season-ending surgery.

NEWSPAPER IN EDUCATION

IF JANUARY 21 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Keep your nose to the grindstone for the next several months and you will end up with a bag full of money. Your passion for perfection can make you a workaholic for a few weeks between now and the end of March, but your paycheck will reflect your efforts. You might be in the mood for a quick trip or vacation in August, but responsibilities may prevent you from escaping routines. Listen for the sound of opportunity knocking in October when a small favor or bit of advice from a friend can set you off in a more beneficial direction or a chance encounter can improve your life.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): If you follow the example of your peers who are highly organized, you can use your enormous energies to get much accomplished.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Put one foot after the other. Climbing the ladder of success requires unflinching enthusiasm. No one can beat you to the top if you maintain a steady pace. Work hard while your energy is peaking.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You might need to understand the incentive to prevail. Knowing that you can outdo someone helps you excel at your tasks today.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Whistle while you work. The talking heads are anxious to see enthusiasm in action and you have the talent to lead by example.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Work your fingers to the bone. If you want to show someone you are sincere it is best to take action to prove it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): There may be a few moments today when you can be proud of your thriftiness. You are accurate with the checkbook.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You have high standards and expect your loved ones to have them, too. You have a fine eye for detail and aptness.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): If you are completely absorbed by a crucial project or business venture, your loved ones might feel left out in the cold.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Tackle the things that matter most. Ignore petty selfishness and be generous with your time and talent.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You might not be able to think through a puzzle by yourself, but a trusted companion may offer clear and valuable advice.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Concentrate on getting the job done. Put romantic notions on the back burner while a major enthusiasm is burning brightly.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): No one owns you or your time. But when there is a big job to be completed you may be expected to act like a team player.

Today is Thursday, Jan. 21, the 21st day of 2010. There are 344 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On Jan. 21, 1910, shortly before 11 a.m., the Great Paris Flood began as the rain-swollen Seine River burst its banks, sending water into the French capital for more than a week.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1793, during the French Revolution, King Louis XVI, condemned for treason, was executed on the guillotine.
In 1858, Felix Maria Zuloaga became president of Mexico upon the ouster of Ignacio Comonfort.
In 1861, Jefferson Davis of Mississippi and four other Southerners resigned from the U.S. Senate.
In 1915, the first Kiwanis Club was founded, in Detroit.
In 1924, Russian revolutionary Vladimir Lenin died at age 53.
In 1950, former State Department official Alger Hiss, accused of being part of a Communist spy ring, was found guilty in New York of lying to a grand jury. (Hiss, who always proclaimed his innocence, served less than four years in prison.) George Orwell (Eric Blair), author of "Nineteen Eighty-Four," died in London at age 46.
In 1954, the first atomic submarine, the USS Nautilus, was launched at Groton (GRAH'-tuhn), Conn. (However, the Nautilus did not make its first nuclear-powered run until nearly a year later.)
In 1968, the Battle of Khe Sanh began during the Vietnam War as North Vietnamese forces attacked a U.S. Marine base; the Americans were able to hold their position until the siege was lifted 2 1/2 months later. In Greenland, an American B-52 bomber carrying four hydrogen bombs crashed, killing one crew member and scattering radioactive material.
In 1970, the Boeing 747 went on its first commercial flight as Pan Am passengers traveled from New York to London.
In 1976, the supersonic Concorde jet was put into service by Britain and France.

Ten years ago: The grandmothers of Elian Gonzalez traveled to the United States to plead for the boy's return to Cuba.

Five years ago: A car bomb outside a Shiite mosque in Baghdad killed at least 14 people; a suicide bombing at a Shiite wedding south of the capital killed at least seven people. The body of Megan Leann Holden, a college student whose abduction was captured on a surveillance videotape as she was leaving her clerk's job at a Wal-Mart, was found in western Texas. (Johnny Lee Williams Jr. later pleaded guilty to capital murder and received consecutive life sentences.)

One year ago: In a whirlwind first full day in office, President Barack Obama showcased efforts to revive the economy, summoned top military officials to chart a new course in Iraq and eased into the daunting thicket of Middle East diplomacy. The Senate confirmed Hillary Rodham Clinton as secretary of state.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"Thou dost leave
The world's mad turmoil and incessant din,
Where none in others' honesty believe."
— Albert Pike

When this deal came up at the Dyspeptics Club, West rejected the idea of leading from his heart queen against four spades, although this lead is scarcely more dangerous than the trump lead he selected.

South won in dummy and passed the diamond queen. West took the trick and belatedly shifted to hearts, choosing the three. East won and decided to return the suit. The contract made, and there was much gnashing of teeth. Who was most to blame for the defensive fiasco?

Today's lesson is that it is not sufficient to select the right suit, but you must also select the right card. There is a time and a place to confuse declarer, but more important is to let partner know what is going on.

Upon winning the diamond king, West should realize that the only chance to set the contract is if East has the heart ace. To suggest to East that he return a club upon winning the heart ace, West should lead back a high heart, either the queen or the nine. If West leads a low heart, as happened at the table, one can hardly blame East for returning a heart, playing West for precisely king-third of hearts.

Curiously, the defense is only a little easier on the initial heart lead when West will lead a low card, of course. Now the club shift still looks right, but one could understand a defender electing to continue the attack on hearts.

ANSWER: Your partner has forced to game and has shown long clubs and four spades. The simple way not to mislead your partner about what you have is to give preference to three clubs. Your trump spots suggest you have the equivalent of three-card support, and since your call is economical, it will give your partner a chance to describe his hand further at a convenient level.

DEAR ABBY: "Happy Being Me in Massachusetts" (Nov. 20) is a large girl whose mother told her "heavy women are not desirable." Well, I was a size 18/20 and weighed more than 200 pounds when I met my husband while out with mutual friends. He's good-looking, smart, witty, affectionate and passionate. He's everything a woman looks for in a life partner.

He had never dated a plus-size woman before, but he was smitten from the moment he saw me, and pursued me from the start because he thought I have a beautiful face and a great personality. We have one child and another on the way, and he finds me as appealing now as he did the night we met.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

No woman should ever "settle" for a partner, and "Happy" should not do so just because her mother thinks she's "too heavy." That mother is trying to pass her low self-esteem issues along to her daughter, and I hope "Happy" is savvy enough to brush it off. Big girls can be sexy, too, because there's nothing sexier than confidence.

- MICHELLE IN MICHIGAN

DEAR MICHELLE: The letters of encouragement in support of "Happy" have far outweighed her mother's negative stance.

Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I met my first husband when I wore a much smaller size. As the years went on, my size increased. He ended up leaving me for a smaller girl.

After our split, I moved home and the first words out of my mother's mouth were, "You need to work on yourself because you're not going to find someone new looking like you do." It was extremely hurtful, but beyond that, it was WRONG.

Less than a year after my divorce, I was in a healthy relationship with a man who loved me for myself. We married, have a baby and are living happily ever after. The size of my jeans has never mattered to my hubby - only the size of my heart.

- BIG JEANS BIGGER HEART

DEAR ABBY: In the past, I admit I was one of those men who wouldn't look twice at a large girl. Then I met my wife. She wasn't exactly petite, but it didn't matter. She truly is the girl of my dreams.

We have both gained some weight over the years, but size really doesn't matter. "Happy's" mother is wrong. The right woman can always find the right man.

- LUCKY MAN IN ALBUQUERQUE

DEAR ABBY: I attend dances every month that support women of size. I met my dream man at one of them a few months ago. He is kind, supportive, handsome and loves my body. (And I love his!) Because society says that a larger woman isn't attractive doesn't mean EVERYONE thinks so. When I started going to functions for plus-sized women at the age of 26, I found a whole new world where I was accepted and welcomed.

"Happy" should get on to her Web browser and look for "Big Beautiful Women" groups in her area. Love is out there - for ALL body types.

- LARGE AND IN LOVE

DEAR ABBY: My mother, who is big, wonderful and loving, made me appreciate large women. My wife was small in high school and "blossomed" later. I love my "big gal wife" and support her in every way possible. If she wants to change her appearance, then I want her to do it for herself. And if she's happy the way she is, I'm OK with that, too. "Happy Being Me" just needs to be confident in her own skin and she will find "Mr. Right" not "Mr. Right Now."
