Clinging to hope for Haiti

Minidoka Co. family close to relief, adoption efforts

RUPERT — Corrie McArthur has had very little sleep this week. She's been on the phone each day and night, reassuring adoptive parents that their Haitian children are still OK.

McArthur is the director of International Adoption Facilitator LLC, (IAF). She helps smooth the way for Americans and Canadians to adopt Haitian children. Since the catastrophic Jan. 12 earthquake, the number of orphans in Haiti has soared, but McArthur is focusing on the care of the 225 children already in her program.

Thirty-five of those children already have adoption petitions started and have met their future parents.

The adoption project is much more than a job for McArthur. She and her husband, Larry, have adopted two 8-year-old Haitian sons, Isaac Erlando and Trey Olivier, and also have a 4-year-old biological daughter, Ava Lauren.

Critical point

Alternate route under crucial construction phase

By Damon Hunzeker

Sometime next year, it'll be easier to avoid Twin Falls.

Construction crews from W.W. Clyde, a Utah company, are excavating tons of dirt from the Rock Creek Canyon area near the southern stretch of Pole Line Road. The three-span bridge will eventually link a highway from Blue Lakes Boulevard to the U.S. Highway 93/30 junction.

The new highway, which will comprise four lanes in the urban section, along with sidewalks on either side, and two lanes in the rural stretch, as well as two additional lanes to be added later, has been talked about for nearly 20 years.

"The bridge is the critical section of the entire road ... In 1991, the Twin Falls County commissioners sent their first letter of support for an alternate route," said Nathan Jerke, spokesman for the Idaho Transportation Department. "It was planned as a way to allow traffic that has no plans to stop and shop in Twin Falls to get around the city streets and free up congestion on Blue Lakes and Addison."

After the first phase was completed in 2006, plans were halted for the $26.6 million project — funded by

H&W starts furlough days

Jump in food stamp demand seen

By Damon Hunzeker

Times-News writer

Employees of the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare will be taking four hours of unpaid time off every other Friday starting today, which also means four fewer hours for the public to apply for food stamps.

The decision to close the doors at noon, which will continue through at least the current fiscal year, was prompted by budget holdbacks from the state. Essential services, such as crisis-response for mental-health issues and child-protection calls, will be unaffected.

The numbers aren't tracked on a regional basis, but in the past two years, statewide applications for food stamps — one of the few services frequently used on Friday afternoons — have increased dramatically. Tom Shanahan, spokesman for IDHW, said the food-stamp demand traditionally follows economic fluctuations closely.

"We look at food stamps as a good barometer, because it's the one thing you can't live without," he said. "You can go without some medical help, but food stamps show how close people are to poverty."

The department experienced an increase after Sept. 11, 2001. Demand eventually decreased until 2007 — when applications for food stamps peaked at 94,000 and leveled off at 85,000 later in the year. In September 2009, however, applications reached 154,106 — and, by December, the number increased to 179,694.

"It's kind of unbelievable, really," Shanahan said.

John Hathaway, regional director in the Magic Valley, said the furlough days, though seemingly insignificant on the surface, will cause some obvious delays.

"Food stamp applications, applications for Medicaid — those are things that will have to wait until Monday," he said. "We don't anticipate a huge problem with it, but there will be some inconvenience, no doubt about it."

Regarding his staff, those who will be overtly affected, Hathaway said they'd prefer furlough days over layoffs "simply because of the workload they have right now."

Shanahan estimated that processing each food-stamp application typically takes about 10 days in order to complete all of the verification and paperwork required for qualifying applicants, adding that the department is currently processing 9,000 per month, compared to an average of 5,700 per month two years ago.

"For us, the change will make things harder to process," Shanahan said. "It puts a lot of pressure on staff."

It doesn't always take 10 days, though. About 25 percent of all food stamp applications are categorized as "expedited" and processed much faster.

"If we have an emergency situation — a family literally without food — we process them in one day," Shanahan said.

More campaign ads — and maybe confusion

Court decision gives power to big business

Analysis

WASHINGTON — There'll be a lot more special-interest money in political campaigns. And maybe even more confusion for voters trying to sort out who is behind the increasing clamor of TV messages.

The Supreme Court's 5-4 decision Thursday to allow corporations and unions to spend freely on elections seems certain to boost the political power of big business and labor. And perhaps diminish the clout of the political parties.

State squeezes $1 million for aquifer plan

By Ben Botkin

Times-News writer

BOISE — Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter wants to use $1 million in federal stimulus funding for the Comprehensive Aquifer Management Plan.

With the state facing revenue shortfalls in its general fund, there's a strong awareness among area lawmakers that getting $1 million is better than none at all. Contributions from water users are expected to supplement that amount under the plan.

Otter in 2009 signed legislation authorizing CAMP as part of the state's water plan.

The CAMP plan came about because of a diminishing aquifer and high volume of lawsuits. And $1 million, which is to be supplemented by the private industry, will be a step toward an estimated cost of $70 million to $100 million during its first decade to pay for recharge, ground-to-surface water conversions and other projects.

There's also draft legislation in the works that would allow water districts to collect water user contributions. Part of Otter's $1 million proposal includes involvement from private industry.

"We've been told that the water users and other industry partners are willing to pay," said Wayne Hammon, Otter's budget chief. "They wanted a show of faith by the state."

Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, said that the CAMP is critical for the long term future of the Magic Valley. Because the state's general fund is so tight, he said it makes sense to use federal stimulus funding.

While there will certainly be questions about the funding level, he said, getting funding for the program this year to get it going is a step in the right direction and better than getting nothing at all.

CAT Fund calamity

Indigent health-care costs skyrocket

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

BOISE — The numbers are grim.

The Idaho Catastrophic Health Care Fund faces increased cases and higher costs as more people turn to the state to help them with medical costs.

The Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee heard a presentation on Thursday about the CAT program, which covers medical costs for residents unable to pay. The CAT fund picks up the tab on cases that exceed $11,000, with counties covering the first $11,000 for each case.

"Our numbers continue to change and I'm almost fearful that our numbers are somewhat optimistic," Roger Christensen, chairman of the CAT board, told JFAC members. "A program like this is very sensitive to downturns in the economy."

Christensen estimated the CAT fund will need $30 million for the next fiscal year — $10.4 million beyond the $19.6 million in general funding that Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's budget proposal seeks.

Wayne Hammon, Otter's budget chief, said work on the budget proposal that was underway in November and early December wasn't able to factor in the updated figures from December.

"It will have to be addressed," Hammon said. "We don't have a solution yet."

For the current fiscal year, Christensen estimated the CAT fund will need an extra $9 million to cover its claims. If the claims are not paid this fiscal year, the only other option is to push the bills into the next fiscal year, he said.

Already in fiscal year 2010, which began in July, the CAT fund had paid $19.1 million for 837 claims

— Roger Christensen, chairman of the CAT board by the end of December. Only halfway into the fiscal year, that's more than two-thirds of the $26.4 million cost of claims filed in fiscal 2009.

Twin Falls County is no exception.

In fiscal 2009, it had 155 cases at a cost of $3.2 million. So far this fiscal year, the state has paid $2.2 million for 105 cases from Twin Falls County.

"I think a lot of it is more people qualify because of their income," said George Urie, Twin Falls County Commission chairman. "Health costs are up too."

Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, and co-chairman of JFAC, asked if anything besides the economy can be attributed to the increase in claims and dollars.

Christensen said that besides the economy, there are other random factors that can affect the claims.

"It's a little bit like the lottery," he said. "It's hard to determine when someone gets into an accident, when someone has a catastrophic illness. It's a very difficult thing to project."

Route

the federal government — and revised.

The overpass onto the new U.S. 93 alternate route was eliminated from the design.

"At that time, revenue for the department started falling, and it was more about maintaining existing roads than expanding the entire highway system," Jerke said.

Then, last year, Congress passed the stimulus bill, resulting in dormant plans revived anew — including the overpass, which will allow traffic to flow without the obstruction of a stop sign or traffic signals around a 60-mph curve near 2400 East and 4100 North.

Drivers will be able to merge over the alternate route into traffic without stopping.

The addition to the plan will cost and another $3.1 million, paid for by the general fund that includes both state and federal money.

The original bid planned for the entire project to be completed in 18 months, beginning in September 2009 and, Jerke said, is expected to be finished in January 2011.

"It will also increase safety by taking traffic off of city streets and eliminating the need for drivers to stop for pedestrians," Jerke said.

Bids for the overpass construction will be open Feb. 9.

Court

Its impact will be felt immediately. This year's midterm House and Senate campaigns already are under way.

The decision also opens the door for more challenges to already weakened campaign finance laws. The Supreme Court may be asked to go even further and let corporations and unions coordinate with campaigns or donate directly to them.

It's too early to say which political party Thursday's ruling benefits more. But Democrats, who draw a lot of support from less-wealthy unions, seemed glum, while Republicans, who tend to be backed by big-spending corporations, celebrated.

"It is a major victory for big oil, Wall Street banks, health insurance companies and the other powerful interests that marshal their power every day in Washington to drown out the voices of everyday Americans," said President Obama, striking a populist tone.

But Sen. Mitch McConnell of Kentucky, the top Senate Republican, said: "For too long, some in this country have been deprived of full participation in the political process. Our democracy depends upon free speech, not just for some but for all."

Former House Speaker Newt Gingrich, who is eyeing a presidential bid in 2012, said in an interview with NPR that the ruling "makes it easier for pro-free enterprise conservatives who are critical of government" to find the money to run.

The ruling lowered the six-decade wall separating corporations and unions from candidates for president and Congress, allowing the wealthy entities to spend as much as they want from their general treasuries to run advertisements advocating the victory or defeat of candidates at any point before elections.

It's likely to prompt businesses and labor to dole out unfathomable amounts of money in campaigns nationwide. The goal: elect the people who will do their bidding, while defeating those who won't.

And that means these special interests now will hold even more sway over elected officials than they already do, and certainly more than the average person. As has long been the case in politics, whoever has more money has more clout — and potentially more access to power.

Jonathan Bartsch, a consultant who works with the CAMP committee, agreed.

"I think that the governor's piece in terms of a million dollars shows a great confidence in the plan," he said.

Sen. Chuck Collier, R-Twin Falls, said he's hopeful that CAMP can continue, adding that it's a tough year for the budget.

"Implementation will be a work in progress," he said.

Rep. Jim Patrick, R-Twin Falls, agreed, adding that most of the money will be coming from the water users. "We need something ongoing," he said of the funding.

Rep. Bert Stevenson, R-Rupert, said that the CAMP program will be an ongoing process between the state and water users.

"It's one of those things that will take a long time to work out the details," he said.

Machine politics? It happened in Magic Valley

Richard J. Daley. Tom Pendergrast. William M. Tweed. They're all the embodiment of big-city political machines — bosses with almost limitless power.

Couldn't happen in rural Idaho, could it?

It did, according to Montana State University historian Michael Malone, and two Magic Valley politicians were the bosses.

"Sen. (Frank) Gooding's conservative organization gained a firm and lasting grip upon the GOP (in 1920) and scored one victory after another," Malone says in his biography of Gov. Ben Ross, "C. Ben Ross and the New Deal in Idaho."

Gooding, of course, was the powerful south-central Idaho stockman who established both a city and a county and was elected governor in 1904. He died in 1928, and his successor — former Gooding Mayor John Thomas — took over his organization.

That meant for a decade, the Progressives — a big part of the Republican coalition at the time — were shut out of government, with the exception of GOP Sen. William Borah, a staunch opponent of both Gooding and Thomas.

The "Gooding-Thomas machine," as Malone calls it, stayed in power because the Republican majority in the Legislature repealed the direct primary election in 1919, leaving it to party conventions to nominate candidates.

That action would prove the Gooding-Thomas organization's undoing in 1930 when Ross — the Democratic mayor of Pocatello — campaigned against "the machine" and its refusal to offer property tax relief.

YOU DON'T SAY

Steve Crump

"The Republican Party was able to hold sway in Idaho from 1920 to 1930 only because its opposition was divided," Malone writes. "The Democrats and the Progressives held the majority of votes between them and might have triumphed through fusion."

Gooding was a political boss in every sense of the word. Abrasive and opinionated, he didn't tolerate views different from his own.

Finally, after Gooding's death, Lewiston lawyer Byron Defenbach — a Progressive — launched a bid for the GOP gubernatorial nomination. He didn't succeed — the Gooding-Thomas organization was still powerful enough to install John McMurray of Oakley as the Republican nominee.

But McMurray was swamped in the 1930 election by Ross, who promised a graduated income tax to temper property taxes, the return of direct primary elections and a nonpartisan judiciary.

Eventually, Ross got all three. And Thomas lost his Senate seat to Democrat James Pope in 1932.

Thomas would return to the Senate, appointed by Republican Gov. C.A. Bottolfsen in 1940 to succeed Borah, who died in office. Thomas won a special election for the seat and was elected to a full term in 1942, but died in 1945.

Child porn case closes with defendant's death

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

A 79-year-old Twin Falls man who was accused of possessing "copious" amounts of child pornography has died, closing the pending criminal case against him.

Charges filed last week against John Alma Rose included 11 felony counts of possession of sexually exploitative material involving children.

Rose died Sunday at his home before he was to be arraigned Tuesday on the felony charges in Twin Falls district court.

Before his death, Rose pleaded not guilty in the case, which unfolded after Twin Falls Police served a search warrant on Rose's home on 3500 North Road in Twin Falls County. There they seized evidence, including two computers and "two lined notebooks with noted pornography sites."

Prosecutors are going to file an order to dismiss the charges, according to court records that assert Rose possessed the illegal material nearly a year ago, on Feb. 19, 2009.

Police say in court records that Rose "confirmed" he had downloaded child porn and also denied it.

Rose had allegedly told authorities that "other people had come to his trailer and downloaded pornography in the past," according to a police report filed in court.

But police assert Rose also allegedly "confirmed that he had downloaded child pornography to his computer." And, "Mr. Rose quickly followed it up, saying he deleted it afterward."

The case against Rose was first filed on Dec. 1, but by the end of the month prosecutors had dismissed most of their charges against him. Then about a week before Rose's death, prosecutors re-filed all of the charges.

Rose's obituary says he served in the military, and was a cattle rancher: "John always had a good story to make you laugh. He will be greatly missed by his family and friends."

Child sex charges against McGuire dropped

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

JEROME — Three child-sex allegations against a Jerome man were dropped Tuesday, but 62-year-old Leon McGuire may again face the felony charges in the future.

McGuire was charged last May with two counts of lewd conduct with a child and two counts of sexual abuse of a child under the age of 16. Magistrate Thomas Borresen dismissed one count of lewd conduct with a child on June 9.

On Tuesday, Judge John Butler granted a motion by Jerome County Prosecutor John Horgan to dismiss the three remaining charges without prejudice, meaning they can be re-filed.

Jerome County Sheriff's Det. Rick Cowen said there is an ongoing investigation of McGuire, but said he couldn't offer further comment.

Jerome County Deputy Prosecutor Paul Kroeger said Thursday that he couldn't comment on any aspect of the case.

Court records allege McGuire sodomized an 11-year-old boy in September 2008, and state there may have been as many as four additional victims.

According to court records, McGuire pleaded guilty to lewd and lascivious conduct after he was accused of molesting an adopted son in 1984. He served six months in prison.

He did not immediately return a phone call from the Times-News on Thursday.

Auditor gives Jerome Co. positive report

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

JEROME — With just minor concerns noted, the audit report for the fiscal year that ended last Sept. 30, reported Jerome County in good financial health.

Auditor Dean Condie told county commissioners on Tuesday there are a few internal control issues stemming from receipts not matching deposits from the same time frames.

He said he had previously made recommendations for procedural changes that the county has implemented.

"We are required as auditors to report anything that has a probability of not being discovered," Condie said.

He reported total net assets at the end of the last fiscal year at $11,790,000.

"The county is really in a strong (financial) position," Condie said.

Commissioner Joe Davidson said tough economic times concern him for the coming year.

"We have tried to be very conservative in our decision making and we don't plan to change that," he said.

In other business, Jerome County Airport Manager Bonnie Dietrich told commissioners the county must fund 2.5 percent of a $126,530 federally mandated 10-year master plan for the airport. She said 95 percent of the funding would come from a grant from the Federal Aviation Administration and the remaining 2.5 percent from the state.

In another matter, commission Chairwoman Cathy Roemer asked to delay a discussion on a possible contract for a consultant to assist with the May vote on proposed lease-purchase funding of a new jail until Monday because Commissioner Charlie Howell was absent. Commissioners will discuss the matter at 3:30 p.m. Monday.

Rocky Mountain Corrections of Ketchum and Veritas Advisors of Boise have both submitted proposals to assist with voter education. RMC worked with the county as a consultant during the last jail election campaign.

WYOMING Officials: Lost skier died of hypothermia

JACKSON — A New York man who got lost while skiing at Grand Targhee Resort has died from hypothermia, authorities said.

The Teton County Sheriff Department identified the skier Wednesday as Edward Fitzgerald, 46, of Forest Hills, N.Y.

He got lost Tuesday night while skiing off the back side of Grand Targhee and ended up in the South Leigh Creek area, officials said.

“We’ve had several people get lost there before,” Teton County Search and Rescue coordinator Doug Meyer said. “It’s a hard place to get out of.”

Fitzgerald called a sheriff dispatcher in Idaho to report he had skied outside the boundary and had a global positioning device but didn’t know how to use it, authorities said.

After the initial calls, Fitzgerald was not able to re-establish contact with rescue personnel, Meyer said.

“We didn’t know where he was, and we were hoping he was going to call back again,” he said.

Search and rescue teams from Wyoming and Idaho and Grand Targhee ski patrollers set out to find him Tuesday night.

Patrollers found ski tracks that might have belonged to Fitzgerald and followed them for about an hour but eventually called off the search for the night because of avalanche concerns, rough terrain and poor visibility, according to the sheriff’s office statement. Other rescue personnel searched by snowmobile but also were unable to find Fitzgerald.

They resumed Wednesday morning and found Fitzgerald in a canyon at about 8:45 a.m. He was unconscious and unresponsive.

Fitzgerald was pronounced dead at St. John’s Medical Center in Jackson.

I D A H O Universities may get right to hire spouses

BOISE — The State Board of Education aims to undo a law forbidding Idaho university presidents’ spouses from being hired at the schools.

The board argues the law is hurting efforts to attract and retain leaders and stifling intellectual contributions of husbands or wives forced to abandon their own academic careers.

The ban has affected Laura Vailas, wife of Idaho State University President Arthur Vailas. The Ph.D nutritionist couldn’t apply for an $85,000 post at ISU recently, for fear of running afoul of Idaho’s bribery and corruption statutes, Mark Browning, an Ed Board spokesman, told the House Education Committee on Thursday.

Lawmakers agreed to schedule a hearing for the bill.

But some, including Rep. Bob Nonini, the Republican committee chair from Coeur d’Alene, said it could put Idaho schools at risk of nepotism charges. Idaho presidents took jobs with annual salaries of more than $300,000 knowing their spouses couldn’t go on the university payroll, he said.

“Now they want their wives going to work pulling down 70, 90, 100 thousand dollars?” he asked. “That bothers me.”

INL reactor faces uncertain future

IDAHO FALLS — U.S. Department of Energy has recommended that a historic nuclear reactor at the Idaho National Laboratory be reduced to an 8-foot concrete slab.

The Energy Department says that if the above-ground portion of the reactor is left intact, it could contaminate soil and groundwater in the region.

The Experimental Breeder Reactor-II began operation in 1964 to show that a breeder reactor could produce more fuel than it consumed. Scientists used the reactor for tests to show reactors could avoid the meltdowns experienced at Chernobyl and Three Mile Island. Nevertheless, the reactor was shut down by the federal government in 1994, amid concerns about safety and proliferation of nuclear power.

The Post Register reports that under the proposal, the underground portion of the reactor would be covered with cement and grout.

Caldwell teen charged with murder attempt

BOISE — A Caldwell teen accused by police of stabbing his stepsister at least 14 times has been charged with attempted murder.

Seventeen-year-old William Kenneth Ecker was arraigned on Wednesday in 4th District Court.

Police say Ecker grabbed his 14-year-old stepsister from behind Tuesday, covered her mouth and stabbed her repeatedly in the back, shoulders and head. Police say they found the girl lying in a pool of blood and Ecker walking toward her with a knife in his hand.

Police recovered a sixto seven-inch blade and blood-soaked clothes they say belong to Ecker. The victim was sent to Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise for treatment and released Wednesday.

Ecker’s preliminary hearing is scheduled for Feb. 3. He is being held in the Canyon County Jail on a $250,000 bond.

Ex-govs want to save human rights agency

BOISE — Two former Democratic governors and one ex-Republican lieutenant governor are among dozens of Idaho leaders who signed an open letter opposing Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter’s proposal to end state funding for the 40-year-old Idaho Human Rights Commission.

Former Govs. Cecil Andrus and John Evans, as well as former Lt. Gov. David Leroy, want to protect the agency from what their letter called “grave danger:” the loss of nearly $600,000 in state funding, two-thirds of its total budget, over the next four years.

Otter says the agency can save money by combining administrative services with five other agencies he hopes to cut off the state taxpayers’ dime, too. But those who signed the letter, sent Wednesday, implored the Idaho Legislature to fend off that plan, even as they try to fill a gaping budget hole.

The agency’s duties include investigating complaints of discrimination.

Over the counter sleep aids detrimental to the elderly

DEAR DR. GOTT:
Although I am in reasonably good health for an 87-year-old woman, I need some help in order to get a good night's sleep. I had been taking an over-the-counter sleep aid off and on for quite some time until I read that all the OTC aids contain diphenhydramine. I have heard that this drug can cause delirium and may lead to Alzheimer's in older adults.

The number of Alzheimer's cases is ever increasing, which leads me to ask why the FDA hasn't banned this ingredient. Should I be concerned about the Tylenol PM I have been taking?

Thank you for any advice you may be able to give me as I am truly concerned, but

Dr. Peter Gott

I do need help in order to get a good night's sleep.

DEAR READER: Tylenol PM contains 500 milligrams of acetaminophen (a pain reliever) and 25 milligrams of diphenhydramine, an antihistamine with sedating properties. Antihistamines may help control motion sickness and cough and induce sleep. Diphenhydramine is present in more than 80 different brands of similar products, including Somnex, adult and children's Benadryl, PediaCare

Children's Allergy and Simply Sleep. The ingredient is in the Food and Drug Administration's pregnancy category B, implying it is not expected to be harmful to an unborn baby.

The maximum dosage allowed in a 24-hour period is 300 milligrams, and most brands carry only a fraction of that amount. Overdose can lead to confusion, hallucinations, weakness, insomnia and possible seizures. Symptoms of overdose can include palpitations, headache, difficulty breathing, blurred vision and edema of the tongue and lips.

Older adults are strongly advised to check with their primary-care physicians before taking products containing the ingredient, as delirium and reduced cognitive skills have been reported. Until you get a definitive word from him or her, I recommend you hold off on all sleep aids.

As a point of information, melatonin is a hormone produced by a small gland in the brain. It is activated by darkness and causes the body to prepare for sleep. When our bodies are exposed to light, the melatonin is then converted into serotonin, which prepares us for activity.

As we age, the levels our bodies produce drop. This may lead to an increased risk of insomnia or even depression because serotonin aids in normal brain function. To combat this, I recommend you set the stage for a good night's sleep. If you ordinarily nap during the day, limit those naps to no more than 15 minutes at a time or eliminate them completely. Daily naps might necessitate using an alarm clock to prevent oversleeping. Be sure your bedroom is dark. Draw the shades, keep the room quiet without interruption such as music or television, and schedule yourself so you retire at approximately the same time each night. Don't drink or eat caffeinated or sugary foods or beverages for several hours before bed to prevent a burst of energy at an inappropriate time.

Your observation regarding products that could be detrimental to your health was an excellent pickup on your part. I commend you on remaining informed on such issues.

To provide related information, I am sending you copies of my Health Reports "Alzheimer's Disease" and "Sleep/Wake Disorders." Other readers who would like copies should send a self-addressed stamped No. 10 envelope and a $2 check or money order for each report to Newsletter, P.O. Box 167, Wickliffe, OH 44092. Be sure to mention the title(s).

Peter Gott is a retired physician and the author of the book "Dr. Gott's No Flour, No Sugar Diet," available at most chain and independent bookstores, and the recently published "Dr. Gott's No Flour, No Sugar Cookbook."

Denise Louise Kelsey

DECLO — Denise Louise Kelsey left our world to live with her Mom on Tuesday morning, Jan.18, 2010. She left while peacefully asleep at her home.

Denise was born in Long Beach, Calif., on Dec.17, 1964, to Larry and Jean Quatrone. She was raised in Southern California and thrived on the sun, friends and playing at the beach. In her grade school years, Denise was a Girl Scout and cheerleader and also played the flute. She was an excellent cartoon artist, a skill which later evolved into crafting homemade Neece's Pieces ornaments and magnets. Denise graduated from Lakewood High School in Long Beach in 1982.

When Denise was 19, she moved to Rupert for a new adventure and to be near her mother and siblings. She met Declo, Idaho, native Ron Kelsey in December of 1984, and they married just shy of two years later on Nov. 24, 1986. The two enjoyed fishing and camping together and exploring Idaho's outdoors. She was blessed with two boys, Shane Ryan and Kyle John, who are her pride and joy. The happy family enjoyed taking outdoor excursions and spending many long hours together in their fishing boat.

Denise worked for a variety of companies, including Boise Cascade, Riverview Meat Packing and selling Avon, but everybody knew her as a longstanding cashier at Walmart and, most recently, as a cashier at the Burley Chevron station.

Denise was an incredibly social person. She loved spending time around her friends and relaxing at family gatherings. She loved people, laughing and poking fun at life's idiosyncrasies. Denise always loved music, and she especially loved going to rock concerts with friends. She had a deep-rooted love for all animals and had always aspired to work in veterinary medicine. In 2008, she graduated with an associate degree from the College of Southern Idaho and was working toward earning her LPN license.

Denise is survived by her sons, Shane Ryan (fiancée, Renamarie Carter), 22, of Burley, and Kyle John, 19, of Declo; her father, Larry John Quatrone (Therese Wright) of Long Beach, Calif.; brothers, Joe (Rachel) Quatrone and Troy (Yvonne) Morfin; and a sister, Amber Dessel. Denise was preceded in death by her mother, Jean S. Morfin.

Chester Clyde Higgins

PALMDALE, California — Chester Clyde Higgins, 89, died Friday, Jan. 15, 2010, at his home with his family by his side.

He leaves behind his beautiful wife of 68 years, Margaret Pace Higgins; and three daughters, Kathie Haight of Palmdale, Calif., Lisa Hobson of Salt Lake City, Utah, and Heidi Porter (Brett) of Palmdale, Calif. Chuck also leaves behind 12 grandchildren and six great-grandchildren.

Chuck was born Dec. 23, 1920, in Burley, Idaho, to Clarence Higgins and Easter Ahlm and was the youngest of six children. His growing up years were spent in Burley and Twin Falls, Idaho; he graduated from Twin Falls High School in 1939. Chuck joined the Navy in 1942 and was a gunner's mate assigned to the Armed Guard on a Liberty ship and honorably discharged in 1945.

Chuck and Margaret spent their early years in Ketchum, Idaho, and, in 1951, moved their small family to Southern California, where Chuck worked for Lockheed Aircraft. In 1953, he began his career with California Bank and spent the next 10 years in the banking business.

His love for Idaho and fishing brought him back home again in 1963, this time to Salmon, Idaho. Living in Salmon gave him many opportunities for camping, fishing and hunting.

In 1969, Chuck returned to banking, thus starting a 12-year career with Bank of Idaho/First Interstate Bank. He retired as vice president in 1981. After retirement from banking, he did consulting in Burley, Idaho, and Anchorage, Alaska; he retired a second time in 1986. Chuck was a member of the Elks, Lyons and American Legion. He enjoyed gardening and golf and was quite the handyman, and he could always tell a great story and a good joke. He will be greatly missed by his family.

Boyd W. Woodward

PAUL — Boyd Wright Woodward, age 93, of Paul, passed away peacefully on Wednesday, Jan. 20, 2010, at Bridge View Estates in Twin Falls, surrounded by his family.

Boyd was born Nov. 2, 1916, in Franklin, Idaho, the son of Cecil and Bertha Tryphena (Crandall) Woodward. He was the fifth of eight children. He attended schools in Franklin, graduating from Franklin High School in 1935. He continued his education at Utah State Agricultural College in Logan, Utah. He served a mission for The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints in England from 1936 until 1938. Upon his return, he joined his father and two brothers on a farm and dairy east of Franklin.

Boyd married Margaret Bodily on Jan. 30, 1940, in the Logan Utah LDS Temple. They would have celebrated their 70th wedding anniversary in 10 days. To this happy couple would be born eight children, six boys and two girls, or as Boyd would say 2½ dozen children. They farmed in Franklin until the spring of 1962. They then moved to Paul and set up the dairy and farm northwest of Paul.

Boyd was active in the LDS Church and served in many leadership positions. He enjoyed working with the youth.

Boyd and Margaret served as missionaries in the Tonga Nuku'alofa Mission in 1982 for 19 months. Boyd repaired the bicycle fleet and did maintenance for the mission home. He also did the shopping for the mission home.

He is survived by his loving wife, Margaret of Paul; his children, Rodger (Ruth), Arlen (Judy) and Dell (Zelma) all of Paul, Wayne (Gloria) of Tri-Cities, Wash., Joyce (Pete) Johnston of Twin Falls, Lyle (Kathy) of Reno, Nev., Ellis (Deon) of Spokane, Wash., and Elaine (Scott) Mackay of Drummond, Mont.; one sister, Ruth Jamison of Provo, Utah; 49 grandchildren; and 86 great-grandchildren. He was preceded in death by his parents; two brothers; four sisters; one grandchild; and three great-grandchildren.

The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Monday, Jan. 25, at the Emerson LDS Church, 127 S. 950 W. of Paul, with Bishop Cody G. Morgan officiating.

Burial will be in the Paul Cemetery. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 24, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley, and from 1 until 1:45 p.m. Monday at the church.

The family suggests memorials be directed to the LDS Church Perpetual Education Fund in care of Rasmussen Funeral Home, P.O. Box 878, Burley, ID 83318-0878.

“... all’s well that ends well, and maybe some good will come to the world because of it.”
— Frances Winchell, whose Jewish grandson caused a New York-to-Kentucky flight to be diverted after his praying ritual caused passengers to be alarmed

EDITORIAL

Do revenue estimates have to be political too?

As if Idaho didn’t have enough problems, now even the estimate of the amount of tax revenue the state will collect through the rest of the 2010 fiscal year and for 2011 has been politicized.

On Wednesday, the Legislature’s 18-member Economic Outlook and Revenue Assessment Committee voted to recommend that legislative budget writers set appropriations based on a 2010 revenue figure $69 million less than State Economist Mike Ferguson’s latest forecast. For 2011, the committee chose a figure more than $142 million under his prediction.

The vote was 13-5, with state Sen. Jim Hammond, R-Post Falls, joining the four Democrats in opposition, saying the committee’s revenue forecast was far to pessimistic.

“I really do believe that to some extent you can create your own negative self-fulfilling prophecy,” Hammond told the Spokesman-Review of Spokane, Wash. “By projecting no growth, that may be exactly what you get, because you frighten people out of making investments they were thinking of making in their businesses in terms of equipment, in terms of employees, in terms of expansion. You have to strike a balance there.”

The committee’s majority decided to go its own way because Ferguson has significantly overestimated the amount of revenue available to budget writers in the past two years.

Ferguson, who has worked for both Democrat and Republican governors over the past 25 years, is as close as there is to an iconic figure in the Statehouse. The Legislature used to accept his estimates verbatim.

“If Mike’s having difficulty, then times are tough,” Sen. Elliot Werk, D-Boise, the Senate’s assistant minority leader, told the Idaho Statesman. “I’m not seeing anyone around the country that’s doing a great job forecasting revenues right now.”

Unlike forecasts by Ferguson, the Idaho Tax Commission, the Associated Taxpayers of Idaho and a panel of economists from Idaho universities, the revenue assessment committee does not base its prediction on underlying factors, such as the sales tax, income tax or corporate taxes. All of the other forecasts were higher than the revenue assessment committee’s.

That makes its prediction more of a guess than the other assessments.

And there are politics at play in that forecast, Democrats and some moderate Republicans charge. They say the tax hawks in the Idaho House of Representatives — led by Majority Leader Mike Moyle, R-Star, and Assistant Minority Leader Scott Bedke, R-Oakley — are using the low forecasts as a pretext to cut state government more than is necessary.

Moyle and Bedke counter that they’re just trying to spare the governor the obligation of making mid-year budget cuts because Ferguson overestimated revenue.

Whoever is right, why doesn’t Idaho have a rational system for estimating revenue?

Washington and Utah, for example, reach a forecast agreement between the executive and legislative branches that’s as close of a consensus as state government can muster.

Revenue forecasting can never be a science, but at least it ought to factor in the opinions of all parties.

The jobs of state employees and the quality of education for Idaho’s kids are at stake.

Our view:
If the Legislature can’t even agree on a rational system for estimating tax revenues, what can it agree upon?

Restoring a culture of responsibility

“Culture” can refer to many things. But for those who work to advance freedom, the primary concern must be how culture shapes individuals who will guard and exercise that freedom.

A national culture that demands personal responsibility is especially vital. Indeed, the American culture rests on the twin pillars of liberty and responsibility, as F.A. Hayek observed in “The Constitution of Liberty.”

Edwin J. Feulner

“When men are allowed to act as they see fit,” Hayek wrote, “they must also be held responsible for the results of their efforts.”

A free economy and limited government cannot exist apart from a culture of responsibility. Such a culture prizes individuals of strong, noble character. It also encourages institutions that model and nurture good character. These are all around us: families, religious congregations, schools, neighborhood and business associations, trade unions, civic and service clubs. Boy Scouting and Little League, too.

These “little platoons,” as Edmund Burke called them, introduce individuals to the values and ideals of the larger society. They pass the culture of responsibility down through the generations.

Sadly, the culture of responsibility has not fared well. We’ve witnessed a coarsening of public life, a loss of respect for good character and personal virtue and a loss of shame for actions that once brought disrepute.

For example, some say it’s unrealistic to expect young people to abstain from sexual relations until marriage, arguing they can’t live up to that standard. But no one is hurt more by lowered cultural expectations than the young and the children they bring into the world as the result of their decisions.

Fatherlessness is a problem of extraordinary proportions in America: Nearly four out of 10 children are born to unwed mothers. Among black children, it’s seven out of 10.

Children born outside marriage have a much more difficult time getting ahead, research shows. They’re more likely to end up dependent on welfare or in prison. They’re more likely to repeat the cycle of out-of-wedlock childbearing when they reach adulthood.

It’s a vicious circle. As dependence on the welfare state grows, freedom and responsibility erode. An entitlement mentality spreads. And all too often, the welfare state encourages an unhealthy individualism that shrugs off the responsibility to be our brother’s keeper, leaving it to distant bureaucrats instead.

Economic policy also can erode a culture of responsibility. Many individuals, institutions and policymakers made many poor decisions leading up to the market failures that triggered the recession.

Government remains heavily involved in trying to address those failures and restore the economy. But the dangers of this intrusion are more apparent with each passing day.

When government seeks to protect individuals from the bad consequences of their decisions, it sets aside a vital discipline underlying our economic system. As economist Allan Meltzer commented: “Capitalism without failure is like religion without sin.”

What does it communicate, for example, to the 96 percent of Americans who do pay their mortgage on time when the government rescues those who don’t?

We can still restore a culture of responsibility. We should begin by taking responsibility for our own actions. If we seek freedom, let it begin with each of us modeling self-government in our own lives.

For its part, government should pursue policies that promote personal responsibility. The historic welfare reform act of 1996 required recipients to look for work. It promoted marriage. The success was dramatic: Welfare rolls were cut in half and poverty among black children dropped to the lowest level ever recorded. We must not accept the undoing of those reforms.

Finally, our leaders should be able to explain how freedom and responsibility yield economic as well as moral benefits. A market-based economy depends on virtues and values that bring stability, even harmony, to a multitude of competing interests. The true purpose of free exchange is to make friends of enemies.

Freedom requires a society based on families, schools, churches and neighborhoods — not the “nanny state.”

Our society will be genuinely compassionate when it encourages all of us to look after the welfare of our neediest neighbors. And to do so because we understand our moral obligation, not because the state forces us to pay for social programs that so often do more harm than good.

We not only can halt the drift of the culture. We can build a society that recognizes our most precious resource is the human spirit — and that a spirit of creativity and enterprise can flourish only in a climate of freedom.

Unfunded benefits dig states’ $3 trillion hole

Everyone seems to know the current path of federal fiscal policy is a deathtrap over the long term. What’s peculiar is the relative inattention to the balance sheets of state and local governments.

Hidden behind accounting fictions, the politically unspeakable reality is that public employee pension systems are under-funded by more than $2 trillion. Add more than $1 trillion in unfunded health-care benefits for retired public employees, and state governments face protracted structural deficits ranging from challenging to insurmountable.

Unfunded promises are the equivalent of government debt. The burden of promises made by state governments to their employees — effectively an invisible wealth transfer from future taxpayers to current and prospective public-sector employees — amounts to about one quarter of U.S. gross domestic product. The strength and durability of the current economic recovery are unknowable; that state and local governments, which employ one in nine workers, will be a drag on that recovery is certain.

Ultimately, mathemati-

cally unsustainable trends must reverse. As with New York City in the late 1970s, eventually the federal government may get involved in redefining the services state and local governments provide, the benefits paid to public employees and the burdens on taxpayers. States cannot kick the can down the road ad infinitum.

The starting point for addressing the long-term policy challenge is recognizing the math. Government accounting standards make a series of benign assumptions about the future and ignore the actual market values of pension investment portfolios. By those standards, public pension plans are 88 percent funded. Unfortunately, government accounting rules create economic fictions.

If we tweak one variable and use estimated real market values of pension investment portfolios for Dec. 31, 2009, pensions are about 75 percent funded. Using the more conservative standards imposed on every corporate pension plan, state plans are only about 60 percent funded, which translates into a shortfall of more than $2 trillion relative to the funding that should exist today.

The severity of the problem and the short-term focus of the interested parties create powerful incentives for elected officials and others to avoid doing the math. In New Jersey, some of us for years publicly and repeatedly suggested that the real shortfalls were multiples of official government actuarial figures. Over time, those draconian assessments regrettably proved to be correct. But leading local newspapers showed zero curiosity about the limits of government accounting and refused even to publish the warnings on the grounds that readers would be confused.

In theory, exceptional investment returns could cover any funding gap. But beyond the improbability of sustained returns above historic norms, a skeptic might argue public pensions frequently tend toward an investment process heavily geared toward reputational risk control — which means averting political criticism — under the nominal guise of prudent investment management. Although it may be counterintuitive, systems geared toward perceived safety and political risk avoidance may in fact increase investment risk.

My impression is that too many fiduciaries think they can play it safe professionally by mimicking the investment decisions of their peers in other states. Consultants, in turn, tend to be too sensitive to the herding instincts of their clients, reinforcing the trend to invest in ways that are only perceived to be safe.

The investment risk is a perpetual pattern of arriving late in the game to asset classes. Late arrivals create adverse crowding effects that dilute returns. But individual managers avoid what they believe is the greatest risk: failing in isolation. The perception of safety is strongest for investment strategies that have produced recent success and enjoy widespread institutional support. In fact, investment risk is often lowest when perceived risk is highest.

GEORGIA Edwards admits daughter of former lover is his child

ATLANTA — Former Democratic presidential candidate John Edwards admitted Thursday that he fathered an out-of-wedlock child with a former campaign videographer, confirming rumors and reports that had been swirling around the former North Carolina senator for months.

"I am Quinn's father," Edwards said in a prepared statement, referring to Frances Quinn Hunter, the toddler he fathered with the videographer, Rielle Hunter. "It was wrong for me ever to deny she was my daughter and hopefully one day, when she understands, she will forgive me."

Edwards, 56, has been married for more than three decades to Elizabeth Edwards, 60, an attorney who played a high-profile role in his political campaigns and who has been diagnosed with cancer.

The couple had four children together, the eldest of whom, Wade, died in a car accident in 1996. The couple's two youngest children are not yet high school age.

NEW YORK Toyota recalls 2.3M vehicles to fix pedal

NEW YORK — Toyota said Thursday it is recalling 2.3 million vehicles in the U.S. to fix accelerator pedals that can become stuck, the latest in a string of quality problems that have bedeviled the Japanese automaker.

The recall affects the 2005-2010 Avalon, the 2007-2010 Camry and the 2007-2010 Tundra, the 2010 Highlander, the 2008-2010 Sequoia, the 2009-2010 RAV4, the 2009-2010 Corolla and the 2009-2010 Matrix.

The Avalon, Camry and Tundra models — encompassing about 1.7 million vehicles — also were included in the 4.2 million-vehicle recall Toyota launched in late 2009 over concerns that accelerator pedals could become lodged under floor mats, causing sudden acceleration.

But Toyota said Thursday's recall is due to potential problems with the actual gas pedal mechanism, causing the accelerator to become stuck regardless of whether the vehicle contains a floor mat. Toyota said in certain rare cases, the gas pedal mechanism wears down, causing the accelerator to become harder to press, slower to return or, in some cases, stuck.

WASHINGTON Dems reject fast fix; health plan in doubt

Though reeling from a political body blow, House Democrats rejected the quickest fix to their health care dilemma Thursday and signaled that any agreement on President Obama's signature issue will come slowly, if at all.

Democrats weighed a handful of difficult options as they continued to absorb Republican Scott Brown's election to the Massachusetts Senate seat long held by Edward M. Kennedy. Several said Obama must forcefully help them find a way to avoid the humiliation of enacting no bill, and they urged him to do so quickly, to put the painful process behind them.

House leaders said they could not pass a Senate-approved bill, standing by itself, because of objections from liberals and moderates alike. Such a move could have settled the matter, because it would not have required further Senate action.

Bible citations to be pulled from gun sights

A Michigan defense contractor will voluntarily stop stamping references to Bible verses on combat rifle sights made for the U.S. military, a major buyer of the company's gear.

In a statement released Thursday, Trijicon of Wixom, Mich., says it is also providing to the armed forces free of charge modification kits to remove the Scripture citations from the telescoping sights already in use. Through multimillion dollar contracts, the Marine Corps and Army have bought more than 300,000

Trijicon sights.

The references to Bible passages raised concerns that the citations break a government rule that bars proselytizing by American troops in Afghanistan and Iraq, which are predominantly Muslim countries.

A spokesman for U.S. Central Command initially said the Trijicon sights didn't violate the ban and compared the citations on the sights to the "In God We Trust" inscription printed on U.S. currency.

On Thursday, however, Army Gen. David Petraeus, Central Command's top officer, called the practice "disturbing."

Meanwhile, New Zealand announced Thursday that they would remove the citations from the sights they have, and Australia, which also uses the sights, is assessing what to do.

PENNSYLVANIA Airliner diverted to Philly over teen passenger's prayer

PHILADELPHIA — A Jewish teenager trying to pray on a New York-to-Kentucky flight caused a scare Thursday when he pulled out a set of small boxes containing holy scrolls, leading the captain to divert the flight to Philadelphia, where the commuter plane was greeted by police, bomb-sniffing dogs and federal agents.

The 17-year-old on US Airways Express Flight 3079 was using tefillin, a set of small boxes containing biblical passages that are attached to leather straps, Philadelphia police Lt. Frank Vanore said.

When used in prayer, one box is strapped to the arm while the other box is placed on the head.

"It's something that the average person is not going to see very often, if ever," FBI spokesman J.J. Klaver said.

The teen explained the ritual after being questioned by crew members of the flight, which had left LaGuardia Airport around 7:30 a.m. headed for Louisville and was operated by Chautauqua Airlines, authorities said.

New York Jets quarterback Mark Sanchez throws a pass Thursday during football practice in Florham Park, N.J. The Jets play the Indianapolis Colts in the NFL AFC championship football game on Sunday in Indianapolis.

Sanchez in elite company

Jets rookie among final QB quartet featuring two MVP winners

By Barry Wilner

Associated Press writer

NEW ORLEANS — Brett Favre, Peyton Manning, Drew Brees — and Mark Sanchez?

Yep, the rookie from Southern Cal is keeping some heady company. He's gotten a whole lot further than some of the best quarterbacks in NFL history did in their first seasons, too.

The fifth overall pick in last year's draft is part of the NFL's final four, playing for a spot in the Super Bowl just like the game's career passing leader, the league's only four-time MVP, and the sport's most accurate passer.

Sure could be overwhelming.

"This feels right," Sanchez said confidently. "It feels good. It feels the way you dream it would feel just growing up. You get to go play at Indy again for an AFC championship your rookie year, that's unbelievable."

Maybe not. A rookie quarterback has gotten to the AFC title game in three of the last six years. The other two, Pittsburgh's Ben Roethlisberger and Baltimore's Joe Flacco, fell short of the Super Bowl.

Now Sanchez gets his chance.

"I think it's interesting that, you know, a rookie quarterback last year, Joe Flacco, AFC championship game," said New Orleans' Brees, who chuckles and changes the subject when asked about his first pro season. "A rookie quarterback this year, Mark Sanchez, AFC championship. I guess Roethlisberger, when he was a rookie, they went to an AFC championship. So there have been a bunch of rookie quarterbacks here over the last five or six years."

The theory that QBs fresh out of college should sit and watch died a while ago. Maybe it began to disappear with Manning, who never has missed a start since being the top selection in 1998.

Favre barely saw the field with Atlanta in 1991, throwing five passes (two were intercepted) before being traded to Green Bay. Brees came along 10 years later and had only one start for San Diego as a rookie,

FAMILY AFFAIR

MEAGAN THOMPSON/Times-News

College of Southern Idaho point guard Pierre Jackson (3) scrambles with Snow College players for a loose ball at half court Thursday night in the Eagles' home game.

Balanced effort leads CSI men past Snow

By Mike Christensen

Times-News writer

Just call it a family affair. A really tall family.

Contributors were plentiful as the College of Southern Idaho men's basketball team moved to 6-5 in Scenic West Athletic Conference play with a 99-85 win over Snow College on Thursday.

"We're starting to have confidence, being together like a family," said sophomore guard Byago Diouf, one of five Golden Eagles in double figures with 18 points.

"We made a pact to be like a family," said center Romario Souza, who added 11 points and six rebounds while taking two charges.

CSI came out a bit flat in the opening minutes and trailed 25-19. But the Golden Eagles (14-7) scored nine straight as part of 20-3 run, with Snow's only points coming on a 30-footer by Jordan Wood.

From there, CSI's lead dipped below double figures on just two brief occasions as the Golden Eagles soared to their third straight conference win ahead of Saturday's showdown with Salt Lake Community College.

"It was really nice to see those guys rally around each other and pick each other up instead of getting down on each other," said CSI head coach Steve Gosar.

Diouf, Souza and Pierre Jackson came off the bench to spark CSI and earn Gosar's praise.

After a quiet first half, Josten Thomas finished with 17 points and eight boards, while Chuck Odum scored a game-high 19. Center Kenny Buckner, in his first-ever season of organized basketball, had another solid outing with 15 points, nine rebounds and four steals.

Gosar said his team's recent play is all a matter of confidence and understanding.

"Our guys are comfortable out there," he said.

Reggie Shaw's 16 points led Snow (8-12, 2-8 SWAC), while Wood scored 15 and Mitch Frei 13.

Now CSI readies for Salt Lake, which is 2-0 against the Golden Eagles this season entering Saturday's 5 p.m. contest.

"Everyone is focused," said Souza. "We need this game."

Jerome girls clinch GBC title

Tiger defense holds Minico to one point in first quarter

By David Bashore

Times-News writer

JEROME — The Jerome defensive mantra of "single-digit" quarter lived up to its literal billing Thursday.

Haylee Burnham scored seven of her 10 points in the first quarter, and Jerome held Minico to a single foul shot as the Tiger girls basketball team wrapped up the outright Great Basin Conference regular-season title with a 37-24 win.

With Minico (13-5, 6-3 GBC) running a triangle-and-two defense to keep Aubree Callen in check, Burnham put herself in position to capitalize. Callen found her three times in the first quarter, once for one of Burnham's two 3-pointers.

"I want to come out and work hard," Burnham said. "We knew they wanted to shut down Aubree and Carrie (Thibault), so that's where I can step up and make myself a threat."

Callen scored seven points and had six rebounds and five assists.

Minico was led by Marlee Chandler's nine points. The Spartans played without key guard Brecka Fetzter due to illness. But it didn't really matter, as they shot a miserable 13.6 percent from the floor.

"We just couldn't hit the shots when we had them, and it's tough to come back from down 15 against a great team like Jerome," said Minico coach Joe D. Shepard. "They're a good basketball team, and they get great crowd support. Out here on their home floor they walk out feeling they can't be beaten."

Shepard said Minico, which is locked into the No. 2 seed for the GBC tournament, would use its games against Wood River and Rigby to tinker with defenses that might cause the Tigers trouble in the district tournament.

Tinley Garey also scored 10 points for Jerome (17-1, 9-0), which won its 36th straight home game and 15th in a row overall.

Jerome finishes the GBC schedule with a home game against Burley on Tuesday, before heading to Madison two days later. The Tigers know that trip will be their last before the state tournament — as long as they keep winning.

"It's a nice feeling to know we have one foot in the door at state," Garey said. "But it doesn't really matter, because you never know what can happen before that. We have to be ready to play hard every game."

Defending champ UNC struggles for wins

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — The front line looked imposing. The veteran leadership was there. And with an infusion of young talent, North Carolina entered the season looking ready to defend its national championship.

More than halfway through the season, that squad is nowhere to be seen. The Tar Heels (12-7, 1-3 Atlantic coast Conference) have lost three straight games for the first time under Hall of Fame coach Roy Williams and matched their loss total of the previous two seasons combined. Picked as co-favorites in the league along with rival Duke, the Tar Heels are sitting near the bottom of the standings and have the look of a team that would just settle for a win right now.

The frustration is evident, from the players' stunned looks during consecutive home losses to Georgia Tech and Wake Forest to Williams' comments after each game.

"I don't give a darn about what's going on," Williams said after Wednesday's 82-69 loss to the Demon Deacons. "I'm going to coach my rear end off tomorrow. It's up to them to come along with me, and that's the way it is.

"I'm going to ask them, 'Do you want to keep playing?' If they don't want to, we can figure out something for them to do. But we're going to keep playing."

There is no quick, easy explanation for why the Tar Heels are struggling like this.

North Carolina head coach Roy Williams puts his head down during a recent loss to Wake Forest in Chapel Hill, N.C.

Some of the young players pressed into key roles have struggled with consistency and intensity, while others haven't developed at all. The returnees from the team that romped its way through last season's NCAA tournament haven't been able to make up for those struggles, either.

Then there are the injuries, which have only exacerbated those troubles. Fifth-year senior Marcus Ginyard and junior Will Graves have missed recent games with sprained ankles, sophomore big man Ed Davis sat out the Wake Forest loss with his own ankle injury and 7-foot reserve Tyler Zeller could miss six weeks with a stress fracture in his right foot.

Along the way, North Carolina has lost to the elite (Kentucky, Texas) and the unranked (College of Charleston). The Tar Heels even suffered their worst loss under Williams (19 points at Clemson), then fell behind by 20 in the first half against the Yellow Jackets days later.

"It's very frustrating losing games that we shouldn't lose," freshman Travis Wear said. "It's kind of mind-boggling at this point that you've lost three (ACC) games and you're North Carolina."

It's still early and the Tar Heels have time to regroup, but the storied program ranked sixth in the preseason could be at risk of missing the NCAAs completely if things don't change soon.

"It's what young teams tend to go through, but it's really unusual for any North Carolina team," said Jay Bilas, a college basketball analyst for ESPN and a former Duke player. "In a way, it's kind of a reminder of the extraordinary success they've had there. North Carolina is not going to go through this very often when it's normal for other programs."

Perhaps some of these struggles should have been expected considering what the Tar Heels lost from the team that hoisted the trophy in Detroit. Four-year star Tyler Hansbrough graduated as the storied program's career scoring and rebounding leader, while juniors Ty Lawson and Wayne Ellington each jumped to the NBA. In addition, perimeter scoring threat Danny Green and valuable reserve Bobby Frasor also graduated.

Kansas State aiming higher with each win

MANHATTAN, Kan. (AP) — Bob Huggins quoted John F. Kennedy at his introductory news conference at Kansas State, telling anyone who'd listen there was no reason to shoot for second when first was available. You know, the kind of statement fans and supporters expect to hear from a new coach.

Frank Martin bought into it. Still does.

A former assistant to Huggins, Martin has the Wildcats reaching for No. 1 four years later, raising excitement and expectations to unprecedented levels in the Little Apple.

"That thought process never changed because he left," Martin said. "That's who we are. I'm not telling you we're better than the next guy, but that's how we prepare. We come in here every day and compete real hard, practice real hard and it's study real hard."

That approach led to one of the biggest wins in the program's history.

Fighting past a slew of personal issues and the type of pressure they've come to embrace, the Wildcats manhandled Texas on Monday night, riding their smothering defense and the energy of a raucous crowd to knock the Longhorns from the unbeaten ranks.

How they did it is a sign of how far Kansas State has come.

A year ago, an off night by guards Jacob Pullen and Denis Clemente would have been disastrous for the Wildcats. Those two went a combined 4 for 24 against the Longhorns, but the front line, led by Jamar Samuels' double-double, made up for it by scoring 46 of the team's 71 points against one of the best front lines in college basketball.

And Kansas State did it on a night three of its players could have had their minds elsewhere: freshman Martavious Irving had a death in the family a few days before, Jamar Samuels' mother had undergone surgery and Luis Colon's cousin was shot and killed in his native Puerto Rico the day of the game.

Even the Longhorns were impressed.

"Let's feel good for K-State," Texas coach Rick Barnes said. "I've been in the league for 12 years, been here when it wasn't so good. You've got to feel good if you know Frank Martin. He's worked hard. I think a guy that has had to do it the hard way. He's done a great job here."

He's not finished. Martin has instilled his chip-on-the-shoulder mentality since the day he took over for Huggins in 2007, relentlessly riding the Wildcats, screaming at them, pushing them to never accept failure or lack of effort.

Henin, Safina advance at Australian Open

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — Justine Henin beat No. 27 Alisa Kleybanova 3-6, 6-4, 6-2 on Friday to reach the fourth round of the Australian Open, staging another memorable rally in her first Grand Slam since she returned to professional tennis.

Facing two break points at 1-3 in the second set, it seemed as if Henin's dramatic second-round win over Olympic gold medalist and No. 5-ranked Elena Dementieva on Wednesday had sapped too much energy. After all, it was only the seventh match for the seven-time Grand Slam winner since she returned from 20 months off the tour.

But Henin managed to hold that game, beginning to hit the lines with her groundstrokes instead of just missing them, and in the next game converted her first break-point chance against Kleybanova. She broke again in the 10th game to level at one-set apiece, the Russian giving it to her with a double-fault.

Henin, unranked and playing on a wild-card entry, built a 3-1 lead in the deciding set and — apart from a momentary lapse when Kleybanova broke her in the fifth game — dominated the rest of the match.

Only two nights earlier, Henin had to save set points to finish off Dementieva in a tiebreaker, drawing on the experience of losing in similar circumstances to Kim Clijsters after holding match points in the Brisbane International final on Jan. 9.

That was Henin's first tournament since she quit while holding the No. 1 ranking in May 2008.

No. 2-seed Dinara Safina had an easier third-round match, advancing with a 6-1, 6-2 victory over Britain's Elena Baltacha in her first match on Rod Laver Arena since her lopsided loss to Serena Williams in last year's final.

Eighth-seeded Jelena Jankovic was upset 6-2, 6-3 by No. 31 Alona Bondarenko.

Jankovic made 40 unforced errors against 13 winners, contributing to her first loss in 10 meetings with Bondarenko. The 24-year-old Serbian hasn't gone beyond the fourth round at any of the majors since she lost the 2008 U.S. Open final — her only championship match at a major.

Another Belgian, Yanina Wickmayer, is into the fourth round after a 6-1, 6-7 (4), 6-3 victory against Serra Erani.

Roger Federer dispatched Victor Hanesku 6-2, 6-3, 6-2 in 99 minutes Thursday.

Cleveland Cavaliers' LeBron James (23) and Los Angeles Lakers guard Kobe Bryant glance at each other Thursday during the second quarter in Cleveland.

LeBron leads Cavs over Lakers 93-87

CLEVELAND (AP) — The Cavaliers haven't lost their holiday spirit.

Cleveland showed its Christmas Day win over the Los Angeles Lakers was no gift as LeBron James scored 37 points, including 12 straight down the stretch, and the Cavs, playing their first game without injured Mo Williams, beat Kobe Bryant and the NBA champions 93-87 on Thursday night.

J.J. Hickson grabbed a career-high 14 rebounds and Anderson Varejao made three free throws in the final 20 seconds as Cleveland swept the season series between the league's top two teams. That could give the Cavs home-court advantage if they meet the Lakers in June's NBA finals.

A lot can happen between now and then, but the win gave Cleveland confidence it might be able to survive despite losing Williams, their All-Star point guard who will miss at least one month with a shoulder sprain. Williams scored a team-high 28 in Cleveland's Dec. 25 win at Staples Center.

Bryant finished with 31 points but was only 4-of-15 in the second half as the Lakers lost the opener of an eight-game road trip. Pau Gasol scored 13 for Los Angeles.

Bryant surpassed 25,000 career points in the first half, but he was unable to match James in the fourth quarter as both teams turned to their superstars.

With the score tied 80-all, James hit a 3-pointer from the left side, and after a miss by Bryant, the reigning MVP dropped another jumper to put Cleveland ahead by five.

James then hit another shot to make it 87-80 with 2:48 left and the Cavs looked to be in control.

But Ron Artest hit a big 3 for the Lakers and Bryant made two free throws and a quick jumper to tie it 87-87 with 1:32 remaining.

James then blasted down the left side for a layup with 40.5 seconds to go, prompting chants of "M-V-P" from the raucous Quicken Loans crowd. After Gasol missed two free throws that would have tied it, the Cavs called a timeout and before play resumed, James was caught by cameras rapping to Eminem's song "Forever" before the ball was inbounded.

James then split a pair of free throws, but Varejao grabbed the rebound on the miss and was fouled by Artest. Varejao, a 66 percent shooter from the line, made both attempts for a 92-87 Cavs lead with 20.7 seconds left. Bryant misfired on an off-balance 3-point attempt and James saved the long rebound, flying into Cleveland's bench to make the save.

As Varejao went to the line again with 4.1 seconds left, James popped his maroon Cavs jersey, making sure everyone knew who came out on top.

Bryant went just 11 of 25 from the floor, not much of an improvement from his 11 of 33 effort against Cleveland last month.

Kimberly girls perfect again in SCIC

Times-News

For the fourth consecutive season, the Kimberly girls basketball team finished perfect in the Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference regular season.

The Bulldogs defeated Wendell 45-15 Thursday at home to make it 8-0 for this season and 32-0 since the start of the 2006-07 season. Senior Alex Pfeifferle was there for them all and present on the court against the Trojans as she and Whitney Carlton led the team with 12 and 13 points, respectively.

Carlton hit three shots from beyond the arc, while Pfeifferle nailed two treys.

The Bulldogs (15-1) will host Canyon Ridge Wednesday.

PRESTON 40, BURLEY 32
Cheri Preston scored 13 and Shawna Pace added 11, but it wasn't enough for the Burley girls basketball team on the road at Preston.

Burley sent the Indians to the line early and often in the Bobcats' 40-32 defeat. Preston was 18-for-26 from the charity stripe.

"The past few games, we've turned into a fouling team," said Burley coach Gordon Kerbs. "We're fouling off the dribble and putting people at the line. We had to play zone tonight because we can't play man defense without fouling right now"

After trailing 26-19 at halftime, Burley cut the deficit to three heading into the fourth quarter.

"We had an opportunity to get things done," Kerbs said, "but we missed shots from point-blank range. When you play Preston, shots are hard to come by and you have to take advantage."

The Shoshone boys basketball team is still undefeated following a 67-33 home victory over Challis Thursday in Snake River Conference North Division action.

Josh Olsen scored 16 points for the Indians during the first half, which helped his team maintain a 35-23 edge after one half. Skye Axelson scored seven of his dozen during the third quarter as they outscored Challis 27-5. Axelson and Justin Santana each had four assists. Olsen grabbed seven boards, as did Cody Race.

Shoshone (13-0, 3-0) visits Malta Wednesday to face Raft River.

Cooper came off the bench to score 19 points in limited action. Oakley also got 15 points from Payson Bedke and 10 from Hunter Wadsworth.

"I feel like tonight we were the most cohesive as a team that we've been all season long," said Oakley coach Tyler Matlock. "We're clicking as a team. We worked well in transition and we nearly had five guys in double figures, which means the ball is being passed around well."

Dane Janak hit four 3-pointers, as he and Tyler Briggs each scored 14 for the Hornets.

Declo coach Dee Lewis praised his team's defense, especially against American Falls' 6-foot-5 post Derek Taylor, who was held to six points.

NASCAR to relax some rules in effort to energize sport

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Have at it, boys.

NASCAR is relaxing some of its rules this season, and encouraging drivers to show more aggression and emotion, in large part to answer a growing fan sentiment that the sport had gone stale.

“There’s an age old saying that NASCAR, ‘If you ain’t rubbing, you ain’t racing.’” NASCAR president Mike Helton said Thursday. “I think that’s what the NASCAR fan, the NASCAR stakeholders all bought into, and all expect.”

The first change will be evident when the season opens next month at Daytona International Speedway, where restrictions on bump-drafting will be lifted and horsepower will be increased by the use of the largest restrictor plate since 1989.

NASCAR had been slowly tightening its tolerance on bumping at Daytona and Talladega — the two biggest and fastest tracks in the series, where the horsepower-sapping restrictor plates are used to control speeds — and it graduated into an outright ban issued the morning of the November race at Talladega. The edict sucked the drama out of what’s typically one of the most exciting races of the year, and was the final straw for many race fans who had grown tired of watered-down racing.

Even some drivers publicly complained, criticism that is usually frowned upon in NASCAR.

“Let us RACE,” Denny Hamlin tweeted after the Talladega drivers meeting, later adding, “We signed up to drive our cars. Not be told how to.”

He’s getting his wish.

“We will put it back in the hands of drivers, and we will say ‘Boys, have at it and have a good time,’” vice president of competition Robin Pemberton said Thursday.

The yellow out-of-bounds line that circles the bottom of those two tracks will remain, and Pemberton said the majority of drivers did not want that removed.

Another change coming this year will be an eventual switch from the rear wing to a spoiler on the back of the car, a design change that should both positively affect downforce and the aesthetic look that race fans prefer.

Also on tap is an organizational restructuring. The most prominent shuffle is the promotion of longtime Sprint Cup Series director John Darby into an oversight position, and NASCAR is actively looking for his replacement in a role that is effectively the top cop of the garage.

Darby’s successor could be in for a busy year, particularly if drivers answer NASCAR chairman Brian France’s call “to mix it up a little bit differently” going forward.

Seattle starting pitcher Felix Hernandez throws against the Los Angeles Angels during the first inning of a May 2009 game at Safeco Field in Seattle.

Hernandez, agrees to $78M, 5-year deal with Mariners

SEATTLE (AP) — Felix Hernandez and the Seattle Mariners have completed a $78 million, five-year deal that averts an arbitration hearing and keeps the young ace under contract through 2014.

General manager Jack Zduriencik called Thursday a great day for Seattle and for the pitcher, his wife and their two young children.

“This one was immense,” Zduriencik said, seated next to a constantly grinning Hernandez. “It’s rare when you can secure a guy like this. And it’s rare to have a guy with this kind of ability.

Hernandez, who could have become a free agent after the 2011 season, finalized his first big contract after taking a physical that was required to finish the deal.

“I just wanted to be here. I didn’t care about free agency,” Hernandez said, looking sharp in a black, three-piece suit, silver tie and diamonds in each earlobe.

“I’m here for five more years. I hope we make the playoffs (where Seattle hasn’t been since 2001) and the World Series for the fans. They need it. We got this out of the way, now my mind is ready to play baseball.”

The Mariners and Hernandez’s agents opened talks soon after he finished second in voting for last year’s AL Cy Young Award.

The 23-year-old righty was 19-5 last season, tied for the most wins in the majors, and made his first All-Star team. He had a career-high 217 strikeouts with a career-low 2.49 ERA.

Seattle and Hernandez’s agents exchanged proposed arbitration figures Tuesday, with Hernandez asking for $11.5 million and the Mariners offering $7.2 million.

Surging Seattle has made several major moves in an effort to return to the post-season for the first time since 2001: acquiring former Cy Young winner Cliff Lee from Philadelphia, signing All-Star third baseman Chone Figgins, trading for outfielder and designated hitter Milton Bradley and re-signing Ken Griffey Jr.

“We’re really close right now,” Hernandez said. “I think we’re going to make the playoffs this year.”

A long-term agreement with Hernandez was the Mariners’ top priority. Hernandez and Lee, signed through 2010, give Seattle one of baseball’s best pairs atop a rotation.

The new deal means Hernandez will be just 28 when he can become eligible for free agency.

The native of Valencia, Venezuela, dubbed “King Felix” soon after he arrived in the major leagues, is 58-41 in 4 1/2 seasons. He has averaged 14 wins and 183 strikeouts in his four full seasons in the big leagues, but his career was longer on potential than consistency until 2009.

how difficult it is to get back. I don’t care how good you are. I keep using Pittsburgh as an example, and the Giants a couple of years ago. You never know. Seize the moment.”

The Jets have done a lot of seizing recently, winning seven of eight, including four in a row, two in the playoffs on the road — about as difficult a challenge as a rookie quarterback could face. Sanchez met the hurdles thanks as much to the Jets’ strengths around him as to what he has achieved with his arm and legs.

Sanchez is 24 for 38 for 282 yards in wins at Cincinnati and San Diego. Those would be one-game numbers for Favre, Manning or Brees.

Can No. 1 seeds get to Super Bowl XLIV?

By Barry Wilner
Associated Press writer

For all the talk about the importance of home-field advantage in the playoffs, the cruel truth for top-seeded teams is this: The last time both of them made the Super Bowl was 1993.

The Colts and Saints can’t like hearing that. Plus, both of them lost at home late in the season, albeit not in critical games.

Then again, there is the history — or lack thereof — for these franchises in conference title games. The Saints are 0-1, a 39-14 loss at Chicago three years ago. The Jets, going back to the AFL days, are 1-2, the last a 23-10 defeat at Denver in January 1999.

Minnesota has won four NFC championships, but also has lost four, and surely wants to forget the 2000 NFC title contest, a 41-0 rout at the hands of the Giants.

Indianapolis beat New England 38-34 in an AFC championship classic three years ago, then took the Bears to win the Super Bowl — in Miami, where this year’s big game will be played.

But since moving to Indy in 1984, the Colts are 1-2 in conference title games.

The oddsmakers believe the Jets have run out of miracles and made them 7-point underdogs, while the Vikings are 4 1/2-point dogs at New Orleans.

NY JETS (PLUS 7) AT INDIANAPOLIS

Rex Ryan has the Jets believing they can achieve anything, and so far they have. Since he mentioned they were out of playoff contention after a Game 14 loss to Atlanta, the Jets have won four straight, twice on the road in the postseason.

In their 29-15 win at Lucas Oil Stadium to snap the Colts’ record 23-game regular-season winning string — including the first 14 this season — they benefited greatly from Peyton Manning sitting out much of the second half. Ryan knows his top-ranked defense will see plenty of Manning on Sunday.

With all the blitzing they do, the Jets are not great at sacking quarterbacks. They won’t likely rattle the four-time league MVP, and his supporting cast is deep and talented. While Jets cornerback Darrelle Revis is the best cover man in football and will be charged with shutting down

Indianapolis Colts quarterback Peyton Manning

Reggie Wayne, look for Manning to find other targets. Frequently.

New York’s best chance is for its No. 1-rated rushing game to dominate the ball and the clock. It could happen behind a superb offensive line, but the Colts shut down Baltimore’s staunch running game last week. If rookie QB Mark Sanchez has to win this game for the Jets, simply put, they won’t win.

New York’s impressive run figures to end here, but if the Jets are close in the fourth quarter, don’t count them out.

COLTS, 23-14

MINNESOTA (PLUS 4 1/2) AT NEW ORLEANS

The Vikings were a great team at home, a mediocre one on the road. Not that Brett Favre will be uncomfortable in the Superdome, where he earned his only Super Bowl victory and which the team he rooted for as a youngster growing up in Mississippi calls home.

Favre picked apart the Cowboys last week, and Dallas has a much better defense than New Orleans. The Saints, though, are very opportunistic, and will seize on any mistakes or bad decisions Favre makes.

Of course, if Adrian Peterson gets the running game going, it will open

New Orleans Saints quarterback Drew Brees

up the entire field for Favre, Sidney Rice, Visanthe Shiancoe and Offensive Rookie of the Year Percy Harvin.

Minnesota will need lots of offense against the potent Saints, whose receiving corps is deeper than even the Vikings! Although New Orleans doesn’t have a match for Peterson, it has three solid running backs in Pierre Thomas, Mike Bell and Reggie Bush. How sensational was a finally healthy Bush last week?

The matchup of Favre against Drew Brees is as spicy as a French Quarter etouffee. Both should find the end zone a few times.

The Vikes have a big edge on the defensive line, particularly with end Jared Allen, who had just one of the team’s six sacks against Dallas, but cleared the way for others to get to Tony Romo.

Winning in New Orleans isn’t an absurd idea for the Vikings. But the Saints’ saga deserves a Super ending.

Davis-White take early lead in ice dance at U.S. Figure Skating Championships

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Never mind those pretty dresses, tuxedos and bling that would make a socialite jealous. There’s a good ol’ rumble going on in American ice dancing.

Meryl Davis and Charlie White won the compulsory dance Thursday, striking the first blow in a juicy showdown with Olympic silver medalists and former training partners Tanith Belbin and Ben Agosto that could have ramifications all the way to the Vancouver Games. Granted, Davis and White’s lead is just 0.4 points heading into Friday’s original dance, but in a discipline where upsets seldom happen, this is big.

Davis and White scored an American-record 45.42 for their Golden waltz.

“Last year was really a turning point for us,” Davis said. “We really knew we were going to be able to put ourselves at the top someday and compete with anybody.”

No doubt about that.

Belbin and Agosto have been among the world’s best ice dancers for the better part of a decade now, and their dominance in the United States was unchallenged. But as they adjusted to a coaching change last season and some untimely injuries, Davis and White were quietly rising in international stature.

Davis and White won the U.S. title last year — Belbin and Agosto were out with Agosto’s back injury — and missed the bronze medal at the world championships by a mere .04 points, a razor-thin margin more suited for swimming than ice dancing.

Last month, they became the first American couple to win the prestigious Grand Prix final title. But Belbin and Agosto weren’t in Tokyo, either, sidelined by Belbin’s infected wisdom tooth.

That raised the stakes even higher for nationals. As reigning Olympic and world silver medalists, Belbin and Agosto will go to Vancouver as gold medal contenders.

Beat them, and Davis and White will be in the mix, too, along with Russian world champions Oksana Domnina and Maxim Shabalin and Canada’s Tessa Virtue and Scott Moir.

Research centers start year under new financial model

Tetonia, Parma facilities will rely heavily on contributions from industry groups

Times-News

University of Idaho research and extension centers at Tetonia and Parma began the new year under a new financial model that relies heavily on contributions from industry groups.

The new model comes after the Idaho Legislature reduced the research and extension center budget in 2009 by 17 percent, or about $4.7 million.

At Tetonia, which is critical to crops grown in south-central Idaho, such as potato and cereal variety development and the foundation seed program, agricultural industry groups contributed $120,000 to fund field operations through the end of harvest.

The Idaho Potato Seed Growers association contributed $65,000, the Idaho Potato Commission added $40,000 and the Idaho Barley Commission contributed $15,000 through harvest.

“We know it was a difficult process for many of our supporters that at times strained important relationships,” John Hammel, dean of the College of Agricultural and Life Sciences, said in a written statement.

The Treasure Valley Agricultural Coalition, which represents specialty and seed crops, mobilized supporters of the Parma center who contributed $65,000 to fund field operations through June 30.

A separate five-year agreement with tree fruit and table grape industry interests will contribute $30,000 a year to support operations at the center’s orchards and vineyards. Contributors included the Idaho Apple and Cherry Commissions, Idaho State

Horticultural Society Stone Fruit Committee and the Snake River Table Grape Association.

Facing a $3.2 million or 11.5 percent state budget cut, the college proposed late last spring a plan that would end funding for field operations by Dec. 31 at the Parma center and plans to seek alternative funding to support orchards, vineyards and field operations.

The plan was based on recommendations of a statewide

DEAD BRANDS

Owners of discontinued GM brands have few reasons to worry

By Dan Strumpf
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Pontiac? Goodbye. Saturn? So long. Saab? Off to the old junkyard in the sky.

Those are the three brands that General Motors Co. is shutting down as it remakes itself into a smaller, nimbler and — it hopes — profitable automaker.

But just because the brands are disappearing doesn’t mean their owners will be left out in the cold, even after the dealerships that sold them their vehicles shut their doors.

For owners wondering what the end of the brands means, here’s some answers.

Q: What happened to Pontiac, Saturn and Saab?

A: Shutting down Pontiac had been part of GM’s restructuring plan since early last year. It had hoped to sell Saturn to the auto dealership chain Penske Automotive Group Inc., but Penske abruptly backed out of the deal last autumn.

GM had planned to sell Saab to a Swedish race car manufacturer, but that deal also collapsed in late 2009. GM has begun dismantling the brand, though it is still hearing offers from other buyers.

Q: Should I be worried if I own one of those vehicles?

A: Owners of those vehicles have little reason to worry, at least when it comes to getting their cars and trucks serviced, GM spokesman John McDonald says. As it did when it shut down Oldsmobile in 2004, the automaker will continue to honor existing warranties on all Pontiac, Saturn and Saab vehicles. GM’s standard warranty is five years long.

Idaho’s December jobless revised down to 9.1 percent

Analysts anticipate jobless rate will rise

Times-News

The U.S. Department of Labor on Wednesday revised Idaho’s December unemployment rate downward a tenth of a percent to a seasonally adjusted 9.1 percent.

The revision held the rate steady from November at its highest level since May 1983. Using additional economic information gathered over the previous 10 days, the department determined that total employment was nearly 200 workers higher than originally forecast while the number of unemployed actually dropped from November to remain under 69,000.

It was the first time since April that the number of workers without jobs declined from the previous month.

Unemployment in south-central Idaho remained mostly unchanged in December compared with the previous month. The seasonally adjusted unemployment rate in the Twin Falls micropolitan area, which includes Jerome and other surrounding communities, rose one-tenth of a percentage point to 7.9 percent in December, according to Idaho Department of Labor.

Despite persisting job losses across much of the economy, Idaho’s total number of employed remained at just over 685,000 — the fewest number of employed since January 2005. While the gap in total jobs continued to close in December, it was only fractionally smaller than in November at a year-over-year loss of 5.3 percent.

Idaho Department of Labor analysts anticipate the jobless rate could rise further over the next few months before leveling off at or below 9 percent during the second half of this year.

Small businesses can still avoid a tax time train wreck

For some small business owners, income tax filing season feels like a slow-motion train wreck.

These are often owners who tend to be disorganized and unable to keep good records. Instead of keeping their companies’ books with a small business accounting program, they use a stack of overstuffed file folders or worse, boxes and shopping bags. They often end up spending hundreds of extra dollars paying their accountants to sort through the whole mess — provided the accountants will even agree to deal with it.

There’s another group of owners who end up in trouble at tax time. They haven’t been paying attention to things like letters from the IRS or state tax authorities. Or they don’t stay on top of filing deadlines. They don’t listen to the advice of their accountants. Tax season can turn out to be full of unpleasant and costly surprises.

SMALL TALK

These owners still have time to avoid a train wreck. And also avoid being in a similar situation a year from now.

Get organized

Tax time is pretty easy for small business owners who use accounting software to keep the books. At some point early in the year, they just e-mail records for the previous year to their accountants or tax preparers.

For the disorganized, the season can be torturous as they sort through piles of receipts, checks, credit card statements and invoices. It can also be extremely expensive if they hand the mess over to a CPA who’ll charge several hundreds of dollars an

Rates on 30-year home loans fall to 4.99 percent

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Rates for 30-year home loans fell below 5 percent this week but remained above last month’s record lows.

The average rate on a 30-year fixed mortgage was 4.99 percent, down from 5.06 percent a week earlier, mortgage company Freddie Mac said Thursday.

It was the third-straight weekly decline. The drop comes after interest rates fell in the bond market this week as concerns about the economy increased demand for the safety of government debt, which is closely tied to mortgage rates.

Obama steps up campaign against Wall Street banks

By Jim Kuhnhenn
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — President Obama stepped up his campaign against Wall Street on Thursday with a far-reaching proposal for tougher regulation of the biggest U.S. banks.

“We have to get this done,” Obama said at the White House. “If these folks want a fight, it’s a fight I’m ready to have.”

It was a stern, populist lecture from the president to Wall Street for what he perceives as its abandonment of Main Street. Obama said the government should have the power to limit the size and complexity of large financial institutions as well as their ability to make high-risk trades.

He said it was not appropriate that banks have been able to run these trading operations with the protections afforded to regular banking services.

“We have to enact commonsense reforms that will

The Dow Jones Industrials fell 213.27, or 2 percent, to 10,389.88, its biggest point and percentage drop since Oct. 30. The index is down 335.55 points, or 3.1 percent, in two days. That was the biggest point drop since the two days ended March 30 and the biggest percentage loss since June 16.
The broader Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 21.56, or 1.9 percent, to 1,116.48. The Nasdaq composite index fell 25.55, or 1.1 percent, to 2,265.70.
Bond prices rose as the stock market fell. The yield on the benchmark 10-year Treasury note, which moves opposite its price, fell to 3.60 percent from 3.65 percent late Wednesday.
The dollar rose against other major currencies, while gold fell. A rise in the dollar hurt commodity prices, which become more expensive for foreign buyers when the dollar strengthens.
The Russell 2000 index of smaller companies fell 11.25, or 1.8 percent, to 628.36. Four stocks fell for every one that rose on the New York Stock Exchange, where volume came to 1.5 billion shares compared with 1.1 billion Wednesday.

As channels open up, relief flows more quickly into Haiti

By Audra D.S. Burch, Renee Schoof and Jacqueline Charles
McClatchy Newspapers

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — On the ninth day, urgently needed aid streamed into Haiti's ravaged capital in quantities that relief agencies said is a clear sign of progress.

With more ways to get aid into the country, including the opening of the city's seaport on Thursday and a more efficient system of food and water distribution, recovery began to seem possible.

"I think we're beginning to turn a corner in logistics," said John Holmes, under-secretary-general for humanitarian affairs of the United Nations, which is coordinating food and medical help pouring into Haiti. "The aid is getting out."

Beyonce, Madonna join Haiti telethon

NEW YORK (AP) — Beyonce and Madonna have been added as performers to today's multi-network "Hope for Haiti Now" telethon, and Denzel Washington, Brad Pitt, Leonardo DiCaprio and former President Bill Clinton are among the participants.

A statement released Thursday said Beyonce would perform from London, and Madonna from New York City. The list of musical performers already includes such heavyweights as Bruce Springsteen, Alicia Keys, Stevie Wonder, Taylor Swift, Justin Timberlake and Keith Urban.

The two-hour telethon will be shown on all the major networks and a host of other channels. It will be broadcast from New York, London, Los Angeles and Haiti.

People can begin donating even before the start of the 6 p.m. MST concert via phone and text. Viewers can also download musical performances from the show via iTunes for 99 cents. Those profits will also be donated to Haiti relief.

Also Thursday, DiCaprio announced he was donating $1 million to the Clinton-Bush Haiti Fund, the relief effort led by former Presidents Bill Clinton and George W. Bush and one of the organizations benefiting from the telethon.

This week — as the U.N. coordinated 30 countries and 400 non-governmental organizations and relief agencies — more distribution points for food and water opened, along with new medical clinics. The roads have been cleared for trucks.

The U.S. military increased the capacity of the airport from 30 planes daily before the quake to 130, and three new airfields opened. The Port-au-Prince seaport, battered in the quake, opened for limited deliveries. Some relief agencies began shifting their focus to long-term relief and reconstruction.

Still, much more is needed as Haiti struggles to recover from an earthquake that killed as many as 200,000 and left up to 2 million living in the streets and in tent cities.

The world pledged nearly $1 billion in aid to Haiti after the quake struck. Tons of supplies were sent. Thousands of relief workers and soldiers hit the ground, working to make sense of a colossal natural disaster with a price infinitely higher than broken buildings.

But faced with a collapsed city, a broken port, a damaged airport and a staggering number of dead, dying and needy, much of the aid slipped into limbo, stuck between promise and delivery. Some planes carrying supplies were even turned away.

"Haiti has truly presented many more challenges than our other relief operations," said Cynthia Gutierrez-White, senior director of communications for the American Red Cross.

On Thursday, World Vision, in partnership with USAID, started distribution of 2,000 metric tons of food — enough to feed more than 94,000 individuals in Petionville, Delmas and Port-au-Prince. Air drops of food and water by C-17 aircraft continued, too, with 14,000 water bottles and 14,500 pre-packaged military meals for people in Mirebalais, about 25 miles northeast of Port-au-Prince.

The USS Carl Vinson is producing 100,000 gallons of potable water daily and water tanks are being installed in each zone of the city.

But relief officials warn there are still kinks in the effort and much to be done.

Some Haitians worry that even with the port's partial reopening, getting food to people regularly will be difficult.

"We have a huge distribution problem. I am not sure that all of the coordination that's being done is being done properly," said Bernard Craan, a Haitian businessman.

Male chorus to sing at CSI basketball opener

Andy Smithson, as Joseph, rehearses Monday night at the King Fine Arts Center for the Burley play 'Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat.'

More than the dreamcoat amazes in Burley production of 'Joseph'

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

A coat worn by Donny Osmond. Pyramids weighing 1,200 pounds. A jail cell that rises up from the floor.

All that, and a 40-child choir, are part of the Broadway-style production of "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat" being presented this week by the Mount Harrison Heritage Foundation at The King Fine Arts Center in Burley.

A TECHNICOLOR TALE

- What: "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat," presented by Mount Harrison Heritage Foundation
- Where: King Fine Arts Center, 2100 Park Ave., Burley
- When: 7:30 p.m. tonight, Saturday, Monday, Thursday and Jan. 29. A matinee will be at 2 p.m. Jan. 30.
- Cost: $10 for reserved tickets, $8 general admission and $5 for upper tier seating. For tickets, call 878-6868, or visit The Book Store in Rupert, or The Book Plaza or Welch Music in Burley.

"Joseph" tells the familiar story of the coat of many colors from the book of Genesis, and the music and lyrics were written by Andrew Lloyd Webber and Tim Rice. The production appeared on Broadway and was made into a movie starring Osmond in 1999. To put on their Burley version of the family-friendly classic, directors Julene Thurston and Cherie Hamilton drew on the tradition, but they've made some alterations. "There'll be some fun twists and turns," Hamilton said. She wouldn't elaborate, saying she wants audiences to be surprised by the changes, but suggested keeping your eyes and ears open during the scene in which Joseph becomes a servant to Potiphar. Overall, said stage manager Jason Rollins, the show is unlike anything ordinarily seen in Magic

Above: The play was unable to use a real camel, so Josh Thurston, inside the camel, and Nathan Baker will operate this fake one instead with the help of Keane Kloefer, left, and Eric Willis in costume.

Behind-the-scenes secrets of this 'Amazing' show

On stage

- How do you make a jail cell appear on stage, almost out of thin air? You could fly it onto the set, suspended by wires. But if you are already flying Joseph around the stage, there's not a whole lot of room left for additional rigs.
- Instead, stage manager Jason Rollins has created a whole new cover for the orchestra pit (the music isn't live for this production). The cover has a series of small holes for the bars of the jail cell that will rise up out of the stage to enclose Joseph at the end of the first act.
- "If you didn't look for it you wouldn't know it was there," Rollins said.
- What you will definitely notice are the giant pyramids.
- The construction crew had a vision to execute but had to go through several iterations before arriving at what you will see on stage. "Building a giant pyramid isn't easy, and building a giant pyramid that rolls?" Rollins said, describing how the half-ton structures needed handles and steps added to help the actors move around them. "These pyramids have evolved quite a bit from their initial conception."

Valley or Mini-Cassia.

"Normally with community theater you take what you get and work with it, but they have an excellent cast that's taking the show seriously and working hard to make it more of a professional production," he said, lauding the singing skills of the lead actors. "It's definitely worth your time, especially if you've never seen 'Joseph' before."

Family, youth activities start Cowboy Poetry Gathering

ROSS ANDRÉSON/Elko Daily Free Press
Too Slim, a Riders in the Sky performer, will return to the National Cowboy Poetry Gathering in Elko, Nev., this month. Catch the group at a 'Saddle Pals Family Show' on Jan. 30.

Elko Daily Free Press

ELKO, Nev. — Most out-of-towners are expected to arrive Wednesday to attend the bulk of the 26th National Cowboy Poetry Gathering, but the action actually begins Saturday.

“Many Elkoans prefer the slower pace and the smaller crowds early in the Gathering when they can participate in hands-on workshops or attend evening shows and visit with their neighbors,” said Darcy Minter, spokeswoman for the Western Folklife Center.

The early shows are all in the intimate G Three Bar Theater at the center, and the prices are a little lower than shows later in the week.

The Gathering begins at 7 p.m. Saturday with the “Great Basin Show Kick-Off” featuring Elko cowboy poet Waddie Mitchell, Great Basin poet Leon Flick and singer-songwriter Richard Elloyan. Tickets are $20.

Sunday is “Dinner and a Movie,” featuring the classic film “The Treasure of the Sierra Madre.” The movie — starring Humphrey Bogart and directed by John Huston — starts at 5:30 p.m.; tickets are $10. Chorizo sandwiches will be available for purchase.

Monday is a taste of the American Southeast with special guests from Florida and Louisiana. “Swamp Tunes and Cattle Tales” starts at 7 p.m. and features Florida “Cracker” cowboy poets Doyle Rigdon and Carl Sharp and high-energy tunes from Creole cowboy Geno Delafosse and French Rockin’ Boogie. Tickets are $20.

Tuesday is the “Classic Cowboy” show with poets Diane Tribitt, Jerry Brooks and singer-songwriter Dave Stamey. The show starts at 7 p.m., and tickets are $20.

Fun for the family

The Western Folklife Center recently added a new show geared toward the entire family. At 1 p.m. Jan. 30, parents may take their children to the Great Basin College Theater for the “Saddle Pals Family Show” with Riders in the Sky. Families can take in the zany antics of Ranger Doug, Too Slim, Woody Paul and Joey the Cowpolka King, as they celebrate more than 30 years performing classic cowboy tunes. Tickets are $13 for adults and $4 for students younger than 17.

The folklife center is also offering two youth workshops on Jan. 30. From 10 a.m. to noon, aspiring writers ages 10-18 can sign up for a writing workshop with authors Terri Farley, author of “The Phantom Stallion,” and Suzanne Morgan Williams, author of “Bull Rider”; participants will learn how to develop characters and a plot for their own western stories. From 1-4 p.m. that day, youth ages 10-18 can participate in basic leather tooling, learning how to handle tools and turn simple shapes into intricate designs. Each workshop is $25 and will take place at Flag View Intermediate School.

Fundraiser features musical impersonations

Times-News

In the mood for a little family-friendly music? Take the kids out for a musical variety show.

Music Comes Alive II is playing at 7 p.m. tonight and Saturday at Roper Auditorium in Twin Falls.

All proceeds go to costs associated with the Fifth Judicial branch of Court Appointed Special Advocates, or CASA. Its volunteers advocate for abused and neglected children during court proceedings.

The fundraiser is a first for CASA, said spokesman William Kezele, although other organizations have used the name Music Comes Alive for similar fundraisers. The 21 acts include Twin Falls Chamber Singers, The Rocky Top Cloggers, and impersonations of Frank Sinatra, Liberace, Sonny and Cher, Miley Cyrus and Elvis.

“A lot of the talent is out of Twin,” Kezele said.

Tickets are $5 and can be purchased at the door or at Mr. Gas locations and Everybody’s Business. Information: 324-6890.

Prize-winning Met soprano heads for Sun Valley

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Look for the Sun Valley Opera concert on Jan. 29 and 30 to be a jaw dropper.

“I feel sorry for anyone who misses it,” said opera co-founder Frank Meyer. “When Alyson Cambridge opens her mouth, mouths all over the room will drop. I saw this when I saw her at a private concert in Hawaii.”

American soprano Alyson Cambridge will present a salon-style concert Jan. 29 at the Sun Valley Club and Jan. 30 at Carol’s Dollar lodge.

She is the first to solo a Sun Valley Opera concert, and Meyer says that’s by design.

“It wouldn’t be fair to put anyone else on stage with her — she’s that good.”

Cambridge won the 2003 Grand Prize at the Metropolitan Opera

Soprano Alyson Cambridge performs in Sun Valley this month, her first time singing in Idaho.

National Council Audition Finals, a contest which is considered the most difficult singing competition in the U.S., said Mary Jo Helmeke, Sun Valley Opera’s executive director.

Since, Cambridge has graced the stage of the Met and other leading opera companies and symphony orchestras. Next month she performs in recital at Carnegie Hall. And in March she will perform in “Porgy and Bess” at the Kennedy Center under the direction of Plácido Domingo.

Her Sun Valley Opera concert titled “Young Love” will include her signature songs, including “Song to the Moon” from “Rusalka” by Antonin Dvorak. Other numbers will include “So in Love” from Cole Porter’s “Kiss Me Kate,” George Gershwin’s “They Can’t Take That Away From Me” and “Summertime” from “Porgy and Bess.”

“I have always been a musically inclined person,” Cambridge said. “I’ve also always been a total ham, a natural comedienne and an actress for friends and family. The marriage between music and theater has always appealed to me, and, in that way, opera has become the perfect fit for me and my voice.”

Sun Valley Opera named Cambridge its 2009 Artist of the Year as a new artist who has made outstanding advances in her career. The opera will show the film of the Metropolitan Opera National Council Audition, which was filmed as a reality show, on March 7 at the Community School Theater. Tickets for the Jan. 29 Diva Concert and Party begin at $125, at 726-0991 or www.sunvalleyopera.com.

Jan. 30 concert tickets can be purchased through Sun Valley Entertainment at www.sunvalley.com or from the ticket office at 1-888-622-2108. Tickets for Jan. 30 are $35 for general seating and $75 for preferred seating. There will be a no-host bar at the Jan. 30 concert.

Tickets go on sale for Arts on Tour's Laura Love show

Times-News

Tickets are now available for The Laura Love Band, Arts on Tour's fifth performance of the 2009-10 season.

It's set for 7:30 p.m. Feb. 12 in the College of Southern Idaho's Fine Arts Auditorium. Tickets are $23 for adults and $17 for high school students and younger.

Singer, songwriter, bassist and author Laura Love has fans throughout North America, Australia and Europe, promoters say. Billboard Magazine continually includes her CDs on its annual top-10 lists, and the first time she performed on the East Coast was at Carnegie Hall. Love has an extremely diverse appeal. She is an African-American funk bassist with an astonishing voice, who is equally influenced by blues and bluegrass, jazz, folk, gospel, reggae and country.

You'll find Love at the intersection of folk melodies from the British Isles and the rhythms of Africa. With her band, HarpersFerry, she sharpens her point that African-Americans were often part of the melange that has come to be known as American folk music, promoters say. In concert, she plays tunes that roam from her heartfelt originals to traditional spirituals to Civil Rights anthems to revved-up bluegrass tunes. She sometimes refers to her style as "folk-funk," "Afro-Celtic" or "hip-Appalachian."

Expect to hear everything from Love's soulful "Saskatchewan," an account of what life might have been like for her great-grandmother as she was released from slavery, to a barn-burning rendition of Wilson Pickett's "Mustang Sally."

Buy tickets at the CSI Fine Arts Box Office from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Mondays through Fridays, at csi.edu/artsontour or at 732-6288.

Twin Falls regional winners complete slate for Marona scholarship finals

Times-News

Vocalists, dancers, an actor and a composer competed Wednesday night at the Twin Falls regional of the Danny Marona Performing Arts Scholarship Fund competition.

In a field of 12, vocalist Tess Gregg took the first-place scholarship of $1,500; composer Andrew Bortz took $1,000 in second place; and vocalist Tyler "Tillie" Millican took $500 in third.

They will join pianist Kaylani Setoki, guitarist Alex Harper and vocalists Lili Early, Amber Wagner, Joseph Bosteder and Jene Johnson — winners from two other regional contests — at the competition's finals April 17 at College of Southern Idaho. First prize at the finals is a $5,000 scholarship.

Behind the scenes

Perhaps the most difficult element of making the show come off flawlessly was wrangling 40 children between the ages of 5 and 10. Not only did they have to learn their music and lyrics to be part of a choir, they also had to learn how to get on and off stage quickly, quietly and without blocking the other actors.

"There are no scene changes where you shut the curtain or black out the stage; it's all a continuous flow," said co-director Cherie Hamilton. So a dozen parents were enlisted to help keep the kids on track, and the older ones help guide the younger ones to their marks. "That's not a job for one person at all. That's a 15-man job to keep the children where they need to be."

Initially, all 40 got on and off from one side of the stage, but that simply took too long. So despite the props and set pieces on the other side of the stage, directors ended up sending half of the children to the left and half to the right.

"We had to get those kids off faster, because it was all congested on one side," Hamilton said. There isn't much time between the children's scenes, so when they aren't changing costumes in the cafeteria and the hallways backstage, they're headed back to their marks, which they've always made — so far.

Another behind-the-scenes challenge was getting everyone properly amplified. Hamilton gives credit to sound man Chad Harris, who had to bring in new mixing boards because the existing one could handle only 28 microphones — and that's how many are on the actors alone. There are more amplifying the choir.

"When something goes wrong, you can't pinpoint it immediately," Hamilton said, describing how one of the dozens of microphones would suddenly begin to screech during rehearsal. "To be able to run that much equipment is a testament to Chad Harris' skill. He's a supreme sound guy!"

In the closet

Perhaps one of the most exciting things for both the actors and costume designer Darla Burtonshaw is that many of the costumes are from the original Broadway show, rented by the Mount Harrison Heritage Foundation.

"We got a box on Saturday and it was really fun to pull them out and look at them. They told us whoever's name was in the label, they actually wore them," Burtonshaw said, describing pulling out pieces labeled "Donny Osmond."

As thrilling as it might be to wear a costume that once was on Osmond's back, using the originals posed some problems.

"Donny Osmond is a pretty small man," Burtonshaw said with a laugh. "Some of those costumes didn't fit particularly well, so we had to do a little altering"

In fact, the eponymous coat of many colors was so small it wouldn't fit the lead actor in the Mount Harrison production, so Burtonshaw had to make a new coat for him.

Burtonshaw said she was particularly impressed by the lavish Pharaoh costume, which is laden with artificial jewels and weighs about 25 pounds, and the construction method for the loincloths, which was so elaborate that she hasn't been able to copy it exactly.

There was some spectacular costume-making locally, too, Burtonshaw said. Don't forget to look at the minor characters during the scene in which the Pharaoh describes his dreams to Joseph, and you'll

Members of several Magic Valley choral groups, including Magichords and a group from Burley, belt out the national anthem in the 100 Man Chorus before a 2007 College of Southern Idaho men's basketball game in Twin Falls.

NEEDED: 100 GOOD MEN

Huge chorus slates annual CSI basketball game opener

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

Singing “The Star-Spangled Banner” prior to sporting events is a long-standing tradition evoking pride and patriotism. But get almost 100 men to sing it in barbershop style and the event is downright spiritual, said Fred Hodges of Buhl.

As a member of Magic Valley Magichords, Hodges already has a background in four-part harmony. But the 100 Man Chorus’ annual presentation of the national anthem at a College of Southern Idaho basketball game is a favorite for him.

“It’s very emotional and really moving,” Hodges said. “It’s something all us Magichords members look forward to.”

But Magichords singer Charles Lehrman said it takes more than that group to reach 100 singers, a goal never quite

SINGERS WELCOME

Willing to join forces with the chorus?
The 100 Man Chorus rehearsals are at 7:30 p.m. Feb. 9 and 16 at Twin Falls’ United Methodist Church, 360 Shoshone St. E. The group will sing “The Star-Spangled Banner” before the College of Southern Idaho’s Golden Eagles take on North Idaho College on Feb. 19. Information: 543-5480.

achieved. The first year they came close with 98 participants, and the last two presentations had more than 80 barbershoppers.

“We get men from Burley to Boise and all over the Magic Valley,” Lehrman said. “With that many men on the floor the sound is so tremendous. This is our fourth year, and we’re really hoping to reach 100 because it fills the entire gymnasium with sound.”

Despite the ambitious name of the 100 Man Chorus, singers need not be adults to take part, Lehrman said. In the past singers have ranged from just 10 years old to nearly 90. But, yes, they’re all male.

CSI head coach Steve

Gosar said the chorus’s coming is anticipated by staff and fans alike and a memorable event players enjoy. You don’t hear “Banner” in barbershop anywhere else, he said.

“It absolutely livens up the place,” Gosar said. “It’s a very classy way to start the game.”

Entertainer watches world’s rich and famous from piano bench

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — “Fourteen fingers.”

That’s been Joe Fos’ nickname ever since entertainer Robert Goulet quipped that Fos must have 14 fingers because he played so nimbly.

Now, decades later, Fos is still dazzling listeners at the wood-paneled Duchin Room in the Sun Valley Lodge where he’s marking his 30th year as pianist-in-residence.

And he’s still charming audiences at events like the Sun Valley Swing ‘n’ Dixie Jazz Jamboree, where he always draws the loudest applause during Pianorama for his intricate arrangements of such crowd pleasers as “The Theme from Doctor Zhivago.”

“I’m just afraid to touch the piano after he’s touched it,” said Boise State University vocal jazz director Jim Jirak.

“How he can play the piano so well and remain so humble is truly amazing,” said Bob Draga, clarinet player with Nashville’s Titan Hot Seven. “He’s one of the nicest human beings I know — just a sweetheart.”

Fos has seen the world from Aruba to the Great Wall of China, thanks to a recurrent gig on Crystal Cruise Lines during Sun Valley’s slack seasons. And he’s seen the world’s rich and famous from his piano bench, including Dick Van Dyke, Carol Lawrence, Art Linkletter, Julie Andrews, Bette Midler, Clint Eastwood, even tough guy Charles Bronson.

It wasn’t a world he envisioned as a youngster growing up in San Diego. All he cared about then was following in the footsteps of basketball great Wilt

KAREN BOSSICK/For the Times-News

Pianist Joe Fos reigns from a bench in Sun Valley Resort’s historic Duchin Room.

Chamberlain or baseball slugger Mickey Mantle, despite the fact that he didn’t top 5 feet.

But his mother made him practice the piano, and, though he did so grudgingly, it came easily for him. So easily that when football team members persuaded him to audition for a contest at Hotel del Coronado, the 14-year-old easily bested 150 other competitors.

His reward? An opportunity to play on Liberace’s TV show.

“I didn’t know who he was — I was a kid wanting to play baseball. But he came out in a fur coat — there was a candellabra on the piano — and he did a duet with me,” recalled Fos. “He was showy, impressive. He embellished everything with his hands way up in the air.”

Fos made his concert debut with the San Diego Symphony at 17 and won a scholarship to the Julliard School in New York after studying music at San Diego State College. After a painful gig with a Las Vegas act that got cancelled when the band leader got into a fight, he settled into playing luxurious hotels like the King James in Beverly Hills. He was entertainment director at the Westgate Hotel in San Diego in 1979 when owner Earl Holding fingered him to headline the music at Sun Valley Resort, which Holding had acquired two years earlier.

Fos didn’t think much of Sun Valley’s winters but eventually learned to ski well enough to handle Seattle Ridge, one of the easier portions of Bald Mountain. But he fell in love with Sun Valley’s summers.

He became a fixture playing for Sun Valley’s outdoor ice shows. And he was a frequent guest soloist with the Sun Valley Summer Symphony in its early days. He dressed up as a cow for the symphony’s “Carnival of Animals” benefit and Captain Hook for a “Salute to Hollywood” benefit — losing his hook, of course, when it came time to play the piano.

Fos says he has seen it all in his years of entertaining. He was playing on his “Sundown” TV show in San Diego when Russ Tamblyn jumped up on the piano and started dancing a number from the just-released “West Side Story.”

In Sun Valley, he performed in the televised “Disney’s Fantasy on Ice” where a touch of magic made Olympic gold medalist Nancy Kerrigan appear to skate across the top of his concert grand.

It was during a Cinco de Mayo party at a California nightclub that the woman who would become Fos’ wife saw him. Smitten by the way he played, she followed her heart to Sun Valley, marrying him 11 months later.

“I could feel his love coming out through the piano keys, escaping into the room,” said Patricia Fos.

Every fall and spring Joe and Patricia Fos head for Crystal Cruises where Joe performs on a 6-foot grand acrylic piano that the ship’s 1,200 passengers can see through. There’s no need to pack any sheet music since he plays by ear. And with his gift for improvisation, he makes up his own arrangements as he plays, his fingers moving over the piano keys like water cascading over a cliff.

Come winter and summer he’s back in the Duchin Room, playing selections from “Mamma Mia!” and “Phantom of the Opera,” as well as jazz and light classical arrangements from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Tuesdays through Saturdays.

“He still plays with all his heart,” said Patricia Fos, looking adoringly at her husband. “Even after all these years.”

2010 JEEP COMPASS SUV

FREEDOM, FUN & UTILITY!

RoadWorthy!
By Ken Chester, Jr.
Motor News Media Corp.

The Jeep brand expanded into new territory back in 2007 with the introduction of the Compass—an all-new modern-styled compact Jeep. The latest addition to the Jeep family has been engineered to deliver fun, freedom, utility, excellent fuel efficiency and Jeep 4x4 capability at a terrific value. The Compass SUV combines the packaging and functionality of a sport-utility vehicle with the performance, handling, fuel economy and price of a compact car or small pickup. The Jeep Compass shares much of its running gear with the Jeep Patriot and Dodge Caliber.

Offered in Sport and Limited trim levels and available in front wheel and all-wheel drive (Freedom Drive I) configurations, standard power for the Compass is generated by a 2.4L four-cylinder engine. A 2.0L four-cylinder engine is a newly available option. Torque for both engines is communicated to the ground through the standard Magna Driveline T355 five-speed manual gearbox, while a Jatco Model CVT2 continuously variable transaxle (CVT) automatic with AutoStick is an available option.

Freedom Drive I is a full-time, active four-wheel drive system with lock mode designed to give drivers year-round assurance, as well as the ability to handle rough weather and low-traction conditions. This active four-wheel drive system also features an electronically controlled lockable center coupling, giving drivers the ability to put Jeep Compass in four-wheel drive lock mode to handle deeper snow, sand and other low-traction surfaces.

Unlike other on-demand four-wheel drive systems that rely on pumps or viscous fluids to transfer torque, the Compass' system requires no front-to-rear slippage for activation. The state-of-the-art electronic four-wheel drive system anticipates the need for added traction and responds to wheel slippage by automatically transferring power to the rear wheels—operating only when needed.

Inside the cabin, Compass was updated last year with an all-new redesigned instrument panel, center console with split lid for added storage space and door trim panels. The all-new instrument panel features a smoother look while chrome accents brighten the new round heating, ventilation and air conditioning (HVAC) vents, shift bezel, door spears and cluster rings. The all-new center console and door trim panels features padded armrests for added comfort. New LED-illuminated cup holders make it easier to pace beverages in the right spot at night.

Starting with its incredible interior spaciousness, the driver enjoys a command-of-the-road seating position. Displays are large and easy to read, while knobs and switchgear are easy to find and operate. Flexible seating configurations include a front passenger seat that folds forward to create a table-like surface, while standard 60/40 fold-flat rear seats feature an available recline feature for added flexibility and comfort. The rear seatbacks fold forward to create a nearly flat load surface—increasing storage capabilities. The cargo area is equipped with UltraFloor—a durable vinyl floor that is both removable and washable.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Thou art a fool —
Indeed, the greatest of fools
thou art,
To be led astray by the trick of a tress
By a smiling face or a ribbon
smart."

— Paul Dunbar

Today's deal, from the World Teams finals at Maastricht, saw Lorenzo Lauria at the helm in four hearts.

On a spade lead you would seem to need trumps to play for no loser to have any real chance. However, the opening lead is the heart three, which goes to East's jack and your king. A diamond to dummy's king holds the trick, and when you lead a second heart from dummy, East follows suit with the remaining small spot. What next?

Lauria now had to decide whether West had led a small trump from his doubleton queen (where he might have had hopes of scoring that card if he had not led the suit) or whether he had led a singleton trump.

Lauria eventually guessed right for three reasons. The first was that East might have followed with the heart queen from a three-card suit at the first trick, thus making the doubleton-holding more likely. The second and more important reason was that if the finesse lost, a spade back would doom him. However, if he misguessed by playing trumps from the top, he could now revert to playing on diamonds. If the diamond 10 fell in three rounds, he would have two discards for dummy's spades. And the third reason was that to fall into a deeply laid trap of this sort in the heart suit often feels like a huge psychological blow. Better to give up on fractionally the best percentage line to avoid being fooled in this way!

ANSWER: Although your partner does not promise the world's fair when he comes in over a strong two-club bid, you have enough in diamonds to raise the ante to three diamonds. This is not so much because you hope to buy the hand, but because you want to rob the opponents of a round of bidding and would like to try to get a diamond lead against a final contract declared by West.

IF JANUARY 22 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: The coming 12 months may bring a big smile to your face. Your ambition to succeed may motivate you to work harder than usual during the next six to eight weeks, and if you avoid distracting romantic entanglements or a change in plan, you will accomplish much. During April your status soars to new heights as people in general will notice your best qualities and ignore your faults, making this a good time for a vacation or holiday trip. Next October an exciting opportunity may land in your lap or you may get an unexpected reward for a good deed performed in the past.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Extra enthusiasm will fuel your success in the business world. You can wrap up some deals or get the ball rolling in many directions.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Never back down from a fight or a challenge. Face up to mountains and you will find that they are merely molehills.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Chance encounters could lead to major improvements. If you work at it, a key relationship could change for the better.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You should think outside the box and refuse to be molded by circumstances. Give your wildest ambitions some free rein.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You can set such a pace that others might not keep up. When they can't, they'll fall behind and leave you far out in the lead.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your take-charge attitude is unlikely to offend anyone now, as others are prepared to like you and support your business efforts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It's easy to get what you want when you want it. But that may be because you aren't worried about other people's feelings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Extra competition may get the heart racing and palms sweaty, but that doesn't mean a new romance is on the horizon.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You can become a powerhouse of efficiency under these stars and may surprise yourself by finishing up a difficult project.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Where physical prowess and business sense are concerned, you are a winner — but with love and money you need more practice.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be a power player; produce with pride. Your desire to throw the dice and take a chance may grow by leaps and bounds.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Punching a time clock might be a pleasure. Your eagerness to get a job done will be reflected in the favorable results.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
