Small local school districts not on board with Otter's budget loan option

By Damon Hunzeker
Times-News writer

Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter recently suggested an unusual idea for struggling school districts — allowing them to borrow from the state to compensate for budget holdbacks this year, and then paying the money back from next year's appropriations.

But next year, Otter could possibly recommend even larger budget holdbacks than the $40 million the Legislature is currently considering. So, for small school districts, the idea is comparable to maxing out a credit card before knowing if you have a job.

Regardless, of four local district superintendents, none appeared enthusiastic about the governor's borrow-now-pay-later option.

"I think we're in a situation where we're not going to have to borrow ahead. The state is still determining how they'll deal with it, though," said Andy Wiseman, Castleford school superintendent, referring to whether additional cuts will come during the current school year. "I guess if we had our preference, we'd rather just have the one holdback in the fall and construct a budget around that."

It's not as though all school districts are completely broke. If reserves are available, they'll probably use their own money.

Grassroots fundraising may become bigger portion of school funding picture

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — With February just around the corner it's time again for the Popplewell Elementary School Math-a-thon in Buhl.

The yearly fundraiser that brought in nearly $40,000 last year provides critical dollars for sports and music equipment and classroom supplies.

As Gov. C.L. "Butch"

Otter and the Idaho Legislature consider cutting public school funding for the second straight year, grassroots fundraisers at the school district level may become an increasingly important piece of the funding picture. The state appropriation for schools had never decreased prior to fiscal year 2010,

Murder suspect Leon in a coma

Jerome man already deemed unfit to stand trial for 2008 slaying

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

JEROME — A Jerome man accused in 2008 of shooting his wife and murdering her companion is in an induced coma, suffering organ failure and pneumonia, and remains incompetent to stand trial, court records show.

Fortino Leon, 74, was committed after his arrest about a year and a half ago but never tried. He was charged on July 14, 2008, with first-degree murder, aggravated battery and aggravated assault in the death of Javier Zavala-Paniagua, 22, and the shooting of his ex-wife, Maria Abigail Leon, 41, outside a house at 221 Fifth Ave. E. in Jerome.

Since then Judge Jason Walker has periodically ordered Leon's continued commitment and monitoring by the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare as Leon has not been competent for trial.

But on Thursday Walker temporarily suspended IDHW's monitoring of Leon "because the defendant is presently in a medical hospital in an induced coma suffering from pneumonia and organ failure," the judge wrote in court records.

If Leon's condition improves he could be returned to a state hospital and placed back under IDHW supervision, though he may never be ambulatory again, according to court records.

Maria Leon and Paniagua had a child together, she recently told authorities. About a year after the shooting the Leons, who have a teenage son, were granted a divorce giving Maria the couple's house on Avenue F and full custody of their son.

The Jerome County prosecutor on the case, Paul Kroeger, confirmed Tuesday that Leon remains committed and in a coma at an undisclosed hospital.

Jonathan Bruce, president of the Twin Falls City Youth Council, stands at a site of a proposed BMX dirt-bike park along Blake Street South near Rock Creek Canyon Tuesday in Twin Falls. The organization is hoping to build the park within a year.

Twin Falls teens plan to build BMX park

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

Sure, Twin Falls has a skate park now.

But what if you've got a taste for something more — something with a little extra dirt to it?

The Twin Falls City Youth Council has the answer.

High-school-aged members of the council, reorganized about six months ago, have embarked on their first major project. Members voted this month to pursue building a BMX dirt-bike park off of Blake Street South near Rock Creek Canyon.

They selected the project because it should be fairly straightforward and provide a safe, new venue for Twin Falls teens.

"Right now we don't have anywhere for guys like me to go," said Sam Rasmussen, chairman of the council committee focused on the project, and a fan of BMX, which stands for bicycle motocross.

Right now, Rasmussen and another council member are using free computer software to design the approaches and jumps for the dirt-mound course, which they hoped to build on city-owned land picked out with the help of Parks and Recreation Director Dennis Bowyer.

Weird weather leads to region's avalanche danger

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

HAILEY — It's been an unusual year for weather around the Wood River Valley, with an early snow followed by a cold dry spell, and recently, day after day of snowfall.

Add it together and you get severe avalanche danger, primarily in the backcountry, where countless avalanches have been triggered by human activity.

However, danger is also present at ski resorts, proven by the death of Ketchum resident Tim Michael, who was killed Friday by an avalanche through in-bounds territory on Bald Mountain. His is the first such death at Sun Valley Resort in decades, said resort spokesman Jack Sibbach.

In part, that's because the resort's ski patrol monitors and mitigates conditions on the mountain daily.

"Some of these guys are called in at one, two in the morning," Sibbach said of the ski patrol.

Among the tools the ski patrol uses are hand-placed explosive devices to bring down snow from unstable slopes, explosives shot from a gun to trigger falls on hills that can't be skied to, and ski cutting, a technique of skiing across a hill to test its stability.

Ski patrols also dig to learn more about what is under the topmost snow. "If you ever dig a pit in your back yard, you'll see different layers of snow," Sibbach said, describing how, like a tree's rings, the layers tell experts about recent weather history, predicting the avalanche danger.

This season began with snow in November, followed by a week or two of extremely cold, dry weather.

"That creates very weak snow on the ground; the

MORNING BRIEFING

Pat's Picks

Three things to do today

Pat Marcantonio

● Give blood at the American Red Cross blood drive from noon to 6 p.m. today and Wednesday at the Burley Armory, 2000 E. Main St. Information: 678-9840.

● A few spots remain for the College of Southern Idaho Art Department San Francisco Cultural Field Trip the week of March 11. You'll see the "Tutankhamen – The Golden Age of the Pharaohs" exhibit, San Francisco Museum of Modern Art, San Francisco Symphony, and you'll have time to explore the city by the bay. Whew. The $400 cost includes bus fare, hotel accommodations and tickets to all events. Information: Mike Youngman, 732-6754 or myoungman@csi.edu.

● I love old movies, but it's more fun watching them with a bunch of people. So find a great classic, call over your buddies and indulge. Don't forget the popcorn. My recommendations: "The Maltese Falcon," "Adam's Rib," "To Kill a Mockingbird" and "The Letter" with Bette Davis.

Loan

Wiseman said he isn't certain how the district will contend with holdbacks but that it will likely use $40,000 to $60,000 from the general, or carryover, fund.

"We'll try to absorb it. I guess that's why you have a reserve — to deal with unanticipated expenses or, in this case, budget holdbacks," Wiseman said.

Castleford's current balance is about $400,000.

In June, Kimberly district's general fund was $755,000. Since then, the district has used about $200,000 to fill the gap from what the state withheld this school year.

"We were able to keep our programs about the same, but we didn't add anything," Kimberly Superintendent Kathleen Noh said, estimating that the district lost about $300,000 in state appropriations last year.

Murtaugh's balance is more than $500,000, Superintendent Michele Capps said, adding that she expects the district to use about $200,000 from the fund in the upcoming school year.

"It wouldn't help us at all," Capps said, referring to the idea of borrowing against next year's appropriations. "We're just going to cut back on everything."

In Filer, Superintendent John Graham said he didn't have the fund balance available but said he expects the district to use some of it — probably $100,000 to $200,000 — depending on what the Legislature ends up doing.

"At this point, we're basically looking at a combination of this year and next year," Graham said, estimating that the district lost about $200,000 last year and could lose as much as $750,000 if state reductions approach a rumored 10 percent for the next school year.

"If we borrowed it now, we'd still have the same problem next year," Graham said. "These are uncharted waters across the whole nation ... $750,000 is unheard of, and you're not going to get that by saving on a textbook here and there, so major decisions will have to be made."

Some of those decisions could include maintenance reductions, fewer supplies, older books, furlough days, salary freezes, and — though all of the superintendents said they intend to avoid it — personnel cuts.

"Basically, you're starting in the hole," Graham said. "We'll me making reductions ... but there's a limit to what you can do this year. We don't want to lose staff, and right now, our staffing is set."

Noh was the only official who didn't completely dismiss the Otter option.

"We haven't made any decisions about how we're going to meet this challenge. We want to talk with staff, the community, the board. But it's a little early because we don't know what the rules will be," she said. "I think it'll take a number of solutions ... I just hope we'll be able to keep all of our programs"

Park

"We wanted to make it out of dirt because it's the most available resource, obviously," Rasmussen said.

Other youth are talking to the city's planning and zoning staff to see how to proceed with the site, said Jonathan Bruce, the youth council's president.

"A lot of us have done 4-H in the past, but Youth Council deals a lot with the city, and so it's pretty much a new concept for all of us,"

Bruce said. "It's a lot of fun. We enjoy it."

Working through the steps other developers have to follow is part of the education city officials hope to pass on to the teens, said Twin Falls City Councilman Lance Clow. The youth meet once a month — every second Monday at 4 p.m., before the regular council — as a way to learn about meeting procedures, city processes and even how tricky it will be to fund their bike park. A fundraiser is in the works.

"They can obviously come to the city and say, 'Do you want to put this on as a project?'" Clow said. "Everybody thinks things are cheap until they start finding out how much things cost."

The group is now up to nine members after a recent recruiting pitch at Canyon Ridge High School, Bruce said. A similar visit to Twin Falls High School is in the works.

The BMX park would replace some jumps in a more questionable area down in the canyon, Bruce said, and could be finished in about a year if everything goes right.

Then, the youth council will move to its next project. Two other ideas, a memorial for fallen city police officers and a "divorce reduction campaign," may be picked up in the future.

"Those two ideas will definitely stay in the back of our minds for years to come," Bruce said.

Fundraising

important because it helps supply classrooms with equipment we may not get otherwise," Popplewell teacher Michael Rush said.

Funding from the math-a-thon has traditionally provided the school with extra equipment. But this year the money raised may be spent elsewhere, said PTN President April Jaynes.

"With cuts in funding expected down the line I suspect money raised could help cover the cost for things cut out by the school," Jaynes said.

Schools around south-central Idaho face similar situations.

Gooding School District Superintendent Heather Williams said activities requiring transportation are always on the chopping block because the costs add up quickly.

She cites fundraising by parent-teacher organizations, private donations and a supplemental levy for providing funding for events such as field trips but said anything outside the realm of basic education costs "are on the chopping block."

"We're utilizing every source of funds we can," Williams said.

Twin Falls School District Superintendent Willey Dobbs said the district is in conversation with its parent-teacher organization on how it can help cover costs for teacher supplies that may be eliminated by funding cuts.

"The cuts are a certain. We're just not sure where the reductions will take place," Dobbs said.

"Without solid figures we're not sure what will happen but the consensus is that things may change. For our district, we're talking $300,000 in holdbacks (this fiscal year) and fundraising may be needed for some of the extras."

Minidoka District Superintendent Scott Rogers said fundraisers aren't going to solve district funding woes.

Rogers said schools need to learn to operate on slim budgets and be slow to ask residents for more money.

"If it's tight for school districts it's tight for families," Rogers said. "The danger in increased fundraising is that it is essentially a tax shift."

Rogers said his district is exploring creative ways to "weather the storm."

"We're looking at ways we can compress activities and programs, not eliminating them. For instance, maybe FFA doesn't go to the national convention but to the state convention instead, or we decrease the number of traveling basketball games from 18 to 16," he said.

"We're going to do all that we can to provide a solid education with opportunities but at the same time understanding that no one group can take the brunt of budget reductions."

Even without increased fundraising Rogers said the district "is leaving no stone unturned," in trying to find revenue sources and ways to cut spending.

snow crystals change and become ... cohesionless," said Janet Kellam, director of the Sawtooth National Forest Avalanche Center.

"It's like having a foundation under your house made of glass chips."

Although the new snow will eventually compress and strengthen the base layer, steeper slopes are very dangerous in the meantime.

"We have had many human-triggered avalanches in the backcountry, but people are triggering them from a distance," Kellam said. "The weaker layer is collapsing below them at a safe place, but it's like dominoes, it travels across under the snowpack and then on the steeper slopes it produces an avalanche."

Although neither the cold temperatures of December nor the layering of 25 inches of snow in a week or two in January are unusual, together they are fairly odd, said Travis Wyatt, meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Pocatello.

"It's more or less the timing," he said, noting that in the region, the Wood River Valley was hit hardest by recent snow. "It is abnormal to get all that snow at once."

Kellam advised that anyone going into the backcountry should visit the avalanche center's Web site, sawtoothavalanche.com, for information on current conditions.

Sibbach and Kellam said

all those enjoying winter sports should be prepared.

"Even inbounds, ski with a partner, keep them in sight. Carry avalanche equipment, beacons, and make sure you know how to use them," Sibbach said. "Wear a helmet, and if you don't have one, consider purchasing a helmet."

Locals set on saving Thousand Springs await results of their work

Area support played a role in Friday announcement

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

An aggressive local effort to save Thousand Springs State Park helped contribute to last Friday's announcement by Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter that he would no longer suggest merging the state Parks and Recreation Department with two other agencies.

After Otter initially suggesting a merger in his budget proposal, he and Parks Director Nancy Merrill said the agency would instead wean itself off of the state's general fund to produce a $4.5 million budget savings.

The announcement came one day after a local group of business representatives, private citizens and public officials submitted its recommendation to Merrill for use when she appears before the Legislature's Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee on Monday. One month of work distilled into a single page, the sheet contains the group's advice for cutting about $29,000 from the park's operating budget and producing nearly $43,000 more in revenue.

Magicvalley.com

READ the recommendations of the Thousand Springs stakeholder group.

"I think us understanding that the community was willing to work with us was able to allow our agency to state that we're still going to keep parks open, (and) we're going to work with communities to do so," said Jennifer Wernex, the agency's communications manager.

Otter hadn't proposed closing any parks. But Thousand Springs and the Land of the Yankee Fork state parks were picked in November by the state Parks and Recreation Board as two to close if Otter or legislators ordered more budget hold-backs. Local efforts sprang up to preserve both.

The recommendations for Thousand Springs near Hagerman suggest saving from the seasonal budget by using volunteers for grounds-keeping and cleaning duties, as well as park hosts at three units to help with maintenance and fees. The Brother Speed Motorcycle Club has already volunteered to mow Niagara Springs, the site of the group's annual Memorial Day celebration.

The extra income would largely come from installing fee boxes at park units that don't have them and then aggressively marketing the park and collecting fees. The group also encouraged legislators to consider paying outside vendors a handling fee to sell park passes, and suggested IDPR consider charging more for shelter rentals.

Debbie Dane with Southern Idaho Tourism, who steered the local effort, said she thinks completely separating Parks from the general fund will still be a challenge. But she shared her relief at the decision to preserve the agency and said the group is waiting to see what happens next.

"We at least stopped the closure, and now we have some time to be proactive going forward," Dane said.

Dane's group acknowledged it will be tricky to maintain any sort of volunteer effort in the long term. But for the moment, Idahoans appear to be rallying to save all the state's parks and the agency, Wernex said.

"That same situation is echoed throughout the state," Wernex said. "Every park plays a role in the economy of the community that it is alongside."

Livestock waste rule clears Senate committee

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

BOISE — The Senate Agricultural Affairs Committee unanimously passed on Tuesday a proposed rule that would regulate where livestock manure can be stockpiled by third-party handlers.

The rule proposal came about in part from a dispute in rural Filer between a farmer and neighbor over a stockpile of manure near the neighbor's property.

"Inside the industry, we have dubbed this the good neighbor rule," said Bob Naerebout, executive director of the Idaho Dairymen's Association, testifying in support of the measure.

The rule, if it becomes a reality, would put setbacks in place for livestock waste stockpiles that are greater than 50 cubic yards and in place longer than 30 days. The setbacks are: 300 feet from a neighbor's residence; 500 feet from a hospital, school or church; 100 feet from a domestic or irrigation well; 100 feet from state surface waters; and 50 feet from a public highway.

Sen. Bert Brackets, R-Mountain Home, chairman of the committee, suggested that the issue of agricultural waste is broader than simply third-party handlers of livestock waste.

"It still seems to me we have a gigantic hole," he said, adding that one example could be complaints about haystacks or other types of waste.

Brian Oakey, deputy director of the Idaho State

Department of Agriculture, said narrowing the scope of the rule proposal has helped gain a consensus in the industry.

While waste storage is already regulated for confined-animal feedlot operations, this rule is intended to set requirements in place for third parties who bring waste onto their properties.

Temporary staging sites for manure could still be in place within the setback areas, provided the waste is only kept there for up to 30 days. After 30 days, violators would face a fine of up to $3,000 for each offense.

Sen. Bert Brackets, R-Rogerson, welcomed the committee's vote. He has a sister who lives near the dispute in Filer, but he stressed that the issue is much broader for the state than one conflict.

"It's much larger than that," said Brackets, who is not on the committee. "It's not an isolated incident."

Rep. Stephen Hartgen, R-Twin Falls, said he was pleased that the committee's vote was unanimous.

"It is a reasonable rule and I don't think it will be abused," said Hartgen, who has been involved in the rule-making process.

The House Livestock Rules Subcommittee approved the rule last week, and it still needs approval by the full House Agricultural Affairs Committee.

What part of England is British Columbia, eh?

Sam Cooke famously told us that he didn't know much about history, biology, a science book or the French he took, but here's a subject about which Idahoans know even less: British Columbia.

They're our neighbors, you know, and starting Feb. 12 they're hosting the Winter Olympics. Or hadn't you heard?

According to the Idaho Travel Council, British Columbia is Idaho's largest single foreign source of tourists — you've seen all those motor homes with blue-on-white license plates headed south. They're Canadians, but they talk like us.

By contrast, relatively few Idahoans venture north. For us, British Columbia somehow smacks of slackness, liberalism and rampant hockey.

But if you've traveled through southeastern Idaho and northern Utah much, you'd be astounded how familiar the Creston Valley north of the Idaho-British Columbia border looks.

In the years after The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints renounced polygamy, thousands of Mormons moved to southeastern British Columbia to practice plural marriage. There are mainline, monogamous Saints living there too, but Canadian law isn't too fussy about tracking down polygamists.

Shoot, there's even a Bountiful, British Columbia that looks like a miniature version of Bountiful, Utah. Creston (population 4,826) could be Preston (4,682), and Kimberley (population 7,289) could be, well, Kimberly (5,820). Folks are mostly farmers, just as they are in southeastern Idaho and Northern Utah, and conservative. The member of the Canadian Parliament from southeastern British Columbia is a Conservative who has been re-elected four times (the northernmost congressional district in Utah hasn't elected a Democrat since 1978; Idaho's 2nd Congressional District has been Republican since 1993.)

DON'T ASK ME

So why are we so wary of these Canucks, and why aren't we going to their big party next month?

Mostly, I think, because they're too nice. Other visitors to our little corner of the world tend to fall into two categories: Californian and not.

Californians think they own the place and everybody else keeps bugging us for directions to the Evel Knievel jump site.

Not British Columbians. These are folks who honk before they pass you on a two-lane road and never leave chewed-up gum under the table at truck stops.

Too good to be true, really.

Years ago I was driving my son to the Boise airport, and we picked up a stranded British Columbia motorist who was walking down the side of the road between Glens Ferry and Mountain Home carrying a gas can. I took him into town, we found a service station and he bought just enough gas to get his station wagon to Mountain Home. Then I drove him back to his car. Headed back to Twin Falls a hour and a half later, I saw the same fellow walking down the road toward Mountain Home in the westbound lane. I stopped, flagged him down and asked what happened.

"A liter of gas sure don't take you as far as a gallon, eh?"

Steve Crump may be reached at 735-3223. Hear him on KLLX-1310 at 8:30 a.m. on Friday.

Shoshone hosts Capital for a Day today

Times-News

Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter will bring his monthly "Capital for a Day" tour to Shoshone today from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. The public can meet with Otter, members of his cabinet and other senior state officials at the Shoshone Community Center, 201 S. Beverly St. Otter also will join Shoshone Mayor J.R. Churchman, other state and local leaders and community members for lunch at the center.

"Shoshone is a south-central Idaho crossroads. It's where the Snake River Plain starts rising toward the Sawtooths; it's a major rail hub; and it's bisected by the Little Wood River, and by U.S. 93 on its route between Arizona and Canada," Otter said in a press release.

"Shoshone retains a strong sense of history and our immigrant culture, as well as our agricultural heritage. I'm glad to be bringing Idaho's seat of government to Shoshone, and I look forward to hearing from the people of Lincoln County."

Medical assistance increasing for Afghan refugees

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

BOISE — For some Afghan refugees coming into America, medical benefits were increased from six months to eight months under a federal law in 2009.

For Idaho lawmakers, it's not a concern because the state's not required to pick up the tab.

A subcommittee of the House Health and Welfare Committee on Tuesday unanimously approved moving forward with a proposed rule that will bring the state's policy in line with the eight months of medical benefits that the federal government provides for Afghan refugees who have worked for the military as translators.

The eight months of assistance comes to Afghan refugees who are not eligible for Medicaid, which already covers refugees such as children and parents of children.

"It is 100 percent funded by the federal government," said Rep. Sharon Block, R-Twin Falls, chairwoman of the House Health and Welfare Committee.

The federal government increased the length of assistance to match the eight months of assistance provided to Iraqi refugees who have worked as translators.

"It's not an unfunded mandate," said Rep. Steven Thayne, R-Emmett, a member of the committee.

The subcommittee's recommendation now goes to the full House Health and Welfare Committee for approval.

Refugees have come into

Twin Falls through the College of Southern Idaho Refugee Center from across the globe, including Iraq and Afghanistan.

This fiscal year, which started in October for the federal government, between 300 and 400 refugees are expected to come into Twin Falls.

Ron Black, director of the refugee center, couldn't be reached for comment.

Obama’s speech to tout plans to revive economy

By Jennifer Loven
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — President Obama will try to pivot past rocky times for the nation and himself tonight in his first State of the Union address, offering a skeptical public repackaged plans to energize the economy, stem a tide of red ink and strengthen anti-terror defenses.

He'll also be trying to revive his own “yes we can” image.

One year into office, and a week after pledging to do better at “speaking directly to the American people,” Obama faces urgent challenges as he stands before lawmakers gathered in the Capitol and a prime-time television audience at home for the constitutionally mandated ritual of U.S. governing. The country has lost more than 7 million jobs since the recession began two years ago, unemployment is stuck at 10 percent, and the government is grappling with a record $1.4 trillion deficit.

Obama’s presidency is troubled as well. The percentage of Americans giving him a thumbs-up has fallen precipitously, from 74 percent when he took office to 56 percent now. He hasn’t had a breakout legislative or diplomatic victory, and he’s failed to break Washington’s partisanship as promised. Then last week, an upset Republican victory in a Massachusetts Senate race threw Obama’s signature domestic priority, a sweeping health care overhaul, into jeopardy and shined a spotlight on economic angst now being taken out on him.

Obama will be using one of the presidency’s loudest and grandest megaphones to press several themes. They will be fleshed out in greater detail afterward as the president travels to Florida on Thursday and New Hampshire on Tuesday for jobs-focused appearances and when he submits his 2011 budget to Congress on Monday.

Republican Gov. Bob McDonnell of Virginia will deliver a televised response tonight, two months after putting his state in GOP hands in one of the party’s major recent election victories.

HOW TO WATCH

On television

President Obama delivers his first State of the Union address at 7 p.m. tonight on these television stations:

KMVT-DT Channel 11.1
KIPT-DT Channel 13.1
KIPT-W Channel 13.4
KXTFD Channel 35.1
KTFTHD Channel 38.1
KSAW Channel 51

On the Web

- The White House is streaming the speech at www.whitehouse.gov/live.
- Facebook users will be able to watch the State of the Union speech on that site, thanks to an official White House application that combines the video feed with status updates.
- CNN is cooperating with Facebook to cover the speech online beginning at 6 p.m. MST, and the GOP’s response will be shown next to comments from Facebook users.
- C-SPAN will show the video on its site and accompany it with a transcript based on closed captions in near-real time.
- YouTube will air the speech live on its Citizentube channel. Also, the site will stream suggestions from its users on how to improve the economy, as well as on schools, climate change and national security. YouTube is calling it “Your State of the Union,” and the whole show will start at 6 p.m. MST.
- Hulu will stream the entire event online.
- Ustream will carry CBS News coverage of the speech, accompanied by the obligatory Ustream chat as well as its SocialStream feed with updates from Twitter, Facebook and Myspace.
- MobiTV users will also be able to access video coverage from ABC News NOW, FOX News, and MSNBC.

EPA, Simplot reach deal on Portneuf pollution

The Associated Press

BOISE — The Environmental Protection Agency has reached an agreement with the J.R. Simplot Co. to staunch the flow of phosphorus blamed for fueling algae blooms and other water pollution problems in the Portneuf River in eastern Idaho.

The agency announced Tuesday modifications requiring the company to spend millions of dollars to make operational changes at its Don Plant in Pocatello, including installing a high-density liner over the massive pile of waste blamed as the main source of phosphate leaching into the groundwater.

The Portneuf River has struggled with pollution problems for decades, mostly with the explosive summer growth of aquatic plants and algae that sap aquatic life and choke off the river’s oxygen supply. EPA researchers say problems from excessive levels of phosphorus and other nutrients degrade the stream and water quality from Pocatello as far downstream as the American Falls Reservoir.

EPA researchers say 80 percent of the phosphorus entering the river daily — or about 1,200 pounds — originates at the Simplot facility.

The modifications announced Tuesday will be added to a pollution control plan approved in 1998 for the Superfund site. But when that plan was approved, arsenic was the chief pollution culprit at the plant.

Simplot’s Don Plant, on the western outskirts of Pocatello, produces dry and liquid fertilizers from phosphate ore mined 90 miles away and employs more than 300 people.

Company spokesman David Cuoio says Simplot has already taken steps to manage and stem the flow of phosphate pollution, including installing monitoring wells, drilling extraction wells to reduce the flow of contaminated groundwater and replacing equipment and structures identified as a risk.

AROUND THE NATION

LOUISIANA Four men charged in phone scheme at senator’s office

NEW ORLEANS — A hero of conservatives who bruised the liberal group ACORN by posing as a pimp on hidden camera is now accused of orchestrating an attempt to tamper with phone lines at Democratic U.S. Sen. Mary Landrieu’s office inside a federal building.

It’s not clear what James O’Keefe, 25, and three other suspects were trying to accomplish Monday at the New Orleans office of Landrieu, who has been criticized for securing more Medicaid benefits for her state in exchange for her support on health care legislation.

It sounded like a Watergate-style operation, but federal officials have not yet said why the men wanted to interfere with Landrieu’s phones, whether they were successful, or even if the goal was political espionage. All four have been involved in conservative politics in the past.

A staff member in the office told the FBI that two of the suspects, including the son of an acting U.S. Attorney, wore white hard hats, tool belts and fluorescent vests and said they needed to fix a problem with the phone system.

According to an FBI affidavit, O’Keefe was already sitting in the waiting area and recorded the men on his cell phone when they walked in.

A federal law enforcement official said one of the suspects was picked up in a car a couple of blocks away with a listening device that could pick up transmissions. The official spoke on condition of anonymity because the information was not part of the FBI affidavit.

OKLAHOMA Man accused of killing wife, kidnapping girl

OKLAHOMA CITY — A woman found beaten to death in a motor home recently sought a protective order against her estranged husband, an ex-convict who was charged Tuesday with killing her and kidnapping her 7-year-old daughter.

Comanche County prosecutors charged Lester William Hobbs, 46, with first-degree murder and kidnapping in the killing of Tonya Hobbs and disappearance of her daughter, Aja Daniell Johnson.

Hobbs’ body was discovered Sunday inside Lester Hobbs’ motor home in Geronimo, a small town about 100 miles southwest of Oklahoma City. Lester Hobbs and the missing girl, who is not his biological daughter, were last seen by relatives Saturday evening.

“He has gone from being a person of interest in this case to a criminal defendant,” Comanche County District Attorney Fred Smith said.

The medical examiner’s office has not determined the official cause of death, but charging documents show Tonya Hobbs suffered blunt force trauma to her body.

NEW HAMPSHIRE State’s 231-mph wind gust is no longer world record

CONCORD — First the Old Man, now the Big Wind.

New Hampshire’s Mount Washington has lost its distinction as the site of the fastest wind gust ever recorded on Earth, officials at the Mount Washington Observatory said Tuesday. The concession came three days after the World Meteorological Organization posted a snippet on its Web site saying a panel of experts reviewing extreme weather and climate data turned up a 253 mph gust on Australia’s Barrow Island during Cyclone Olivia in 1996.

That tops the 231 mph record set atop Mount Washington on April 12, 1934.

“It’s obviously a big disappointment. Having the world record for over six decades was such a part of the soul of this organization and for fans of Mount Washington around the country,” said Scot Henley, the observatory’s executive director.

Sunday liquor sales excite Nampa business owners

NAMPA (AP) — Nampa restaurant and bar owners are excited to start serving hard liquor on Sundays, hoping booze sales will boost their bottom lines.

Restaurants and bars can start serving liquor by the drink in Idaho's second-biggest city Sunday. The Nampa City Council voted 3-2 to lift a ban on Sunday by-the-drink sales in December.

Bar and restaurant owners say the new law will keep customers from migrating to Boise to drink and dine and draw new customers interested in having gin, vodka or a scotch with lunch or dinner. Some council members also said allowing liquor sales will make the city more attractive to major restaurant chains.

B.J. McDougal, owner of Winger's Grill and Bar in Nampa, said many would-be customers from a hotel nearby have gone to Meridian or other neighboring counties on Sundays to get liquor with their meals. He believes the new law will boost food sales as well.

"In this economy we'll take anything we can get," Aaron Vogel, owner of Elliott's Sports Pub and Grill, told the Idaho Press-Tribune.

But Linda Jeanes, owner of Hong Kong Restaurant and Lounge, said the law likely won't affect her sales because most of her Sunday customers are religious.

State audit suggests replacing old Idaho prisons

BOISE (AP) — The Idaho Legislature's government watchdog office says it costs more to operate some state prisons than it would to replace them with newer, more efficient facilities.

The report from the Office of Performance Evaluations, which examined layout, maintenance and staffing issues of each prison, was presented to a legislative committee Tuesday.

Of the state's nine prisons, the Pocatello Women's Correction Center was the least efficient, the office found, in part because it has small cell blocks and requires more correctional officers to monitor inmates. Replacing that prison would save Idaho 18 percent — about $1.3 million — over 50 years, according to the report.

The report also said the state could also enhance security and save money by replacing some units at the Idaho Correctional Institution in Orofino and the Idaho Maximum Security Institution and Idaho State Correctional Institution in Boise. Replacing all the projects would net the state about $1.7 million a year for the next 50 years, analysts found.

Office evaluator Carrie DeLong Parrish told lawmakers that she knew it was hard to consider investing money in new prison buildings during a tight budget year. Still, Parrish said, lawmakers should consider planning those replacements now, possibly by using deferred financing in which loan payments on building the prisons don't begin until they're actually occupied.

But Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter said he'll oppose any efforts to significantly renovate or build new prison facilities while the state budget is struggling.

"It is unwise and unfair to the report said.

More than half the prisons don't have enough staffers to ensure that inmates are continuously monitored, the report found. National correction standards call for continuous monitoring to protect inmates, guards and the public.

Compounding problems, the analysts found, are mandatory furloughs and other emergency moneysaving efforts made as the Correction Department tried to absorb statewide budget cuts and comply with mandatory zero-increase budgeting. The furloughs total about 80,000 hours — the equivalent of 39 layoffs.

Full-time benefits for lawmakers a credibility issue

Back in November, if you were a state employee who worked part-time and you didn't have a spouse with health insurance, you had basically three choices:

- Quit your job.
- Feed your kids ramen and Spam.
- Cross your fingers that you won't get sick.

That's because the state raised premiums for part-time workers manifold, to the extent that some just couldn't afford the honor of working for the people of Idaho anymore.

Premiums for less-than-full-time employees insuring themselves, a spouse and children jumped to $382 a month, while full-timers pay $109 for themselves and their families.

But the increase didn't apply to all part-timers on the state payroll. Legislators have full-time benefits at more affordable rates.

So we're with state Sen. Shawn Keough of Sandpoint, the second-ranking Republican on the budget-writing Finance Committee, when she suggests that maybe what's good for a 25-hour-a-week state worker ought to be good for a 25-hour-a-week lawmaker as well.

“We ought to have that discussion,” she said recently. “I don't think we should shy away from it.”

Keough is one of 18 legislators who don't accept the state insurance package, which costs taxpayers $8,440 a head per year. She's insured through her employer.

Not all lawmakers have an alternative available like Keough's, but some do. They should use them.

Or they should be willing to be treated the same as a part-time state liquor store clerk in Twin Falls or a half-time social worker in Coeur d'Alene.

Whenever the subject of compensation and benefits comes up, legislators argue that they're underpaid as it is — $16,116 annual salary, plus housing and travel — and work full-time hours or more.

They're right. But when those 105 Idahoans filed their nominating petitions, they knew exactly what they were getting in for.

Other part-time state employees, most of whom hired on back when the health insurance premium was affordable, weren't as lucky.

Our view:

It's tough out there for part-time state employees these days — except for legislators.

Health care reform? Not that big a deal

No matter what the players involved in the health care reform fight want for the bill, they're all united in one respect: They want you to believe this is the biggest thing in the world. Republicans want you to believe it's a dangerous proposal that will wreck a sixth of the economy. Democrats want you to believe it's a marvelous bill that will fix the health-care system. The news media frequently take both claims at face value.

Ezra Klein

It's time for some real talk on health care reform. By the standards of what Congress generally does in a year, this bill is very big. But by the standards of the health care system, it's not that big at all. It goes two-thirds of the way on covering the uninsured. It makes a courageous, but insufficient, start on cost control. This is the beginning, not the end, of reform.

Let's begin by breaking down the numbers. The $900 billion price tag is repeated with the regularity of a rooster's crow. That's a shame, as the number is, somewhat impressively, misleading in both directions.

On the one hand, that $900 billion is stretched over 10 years. But people don't think in 10-year increments. They don't pay taxes once a decade. Put more simply, the bill will cost an average of $90 billion a year.

But that number is meaningless without context. Ninety billion is a lot more than you probably paid for, say, your house. But is it a lot of money in the context of national health-care spending? Not really. In 2008, we spent $2.3 trillion on health care. Ninety billion is about 4 percent of that. In other words, a drop in the bucket.

On the other hand, the bill wouldn't really kick in until 2014. There are two reasons for this. First, it takes a bit of time to set it up. Second, it's an effort to make the price tag, which is measured over 10 years,

By the standards of what Congress generally does in a year, this bill (health care reform) is very big. But by the standards of the health-care system, it's not that big at all.

look lower than the true cost. To get a more accurate annual figure, look at a year in which the bill is fully operational. In, say, 2016, the bill's spending will be about $150 billion. According to the Center for Medicare and Medicaid Services, total health care spending that year will be about $3.7 trillion. The bill will account for less than 4 percent of it.

So that's really what we're talking about here — a health care expansion that's a slight fraction of overall spending. Let's go even further: It's an expansion that most people won't notice in 10 years. According to the Congressional Budget Office, the Senate bill will change the insurance of about 40 million people by 2019, about 30 million of whom would have been uninsured. The other 10 million will come from the employer or individual markets in search of more affordable options. About 8 percent of the country will still be uninsured, though that falls to 6 percent if you exclude illegal immigrants. Ninety percent of Americans will be exactly where they'd otherwise be.

What about the cost control?

It's the same story, but more so. Although the bill solves most of the coverage problem, it accounts for a mere fraction of the cost problem. A new report by the centrist policy group Third Way estimates that the legislation will save more than $800 billion over the next 15 years. But the savings amounts to no more than a rounding error given the tens of trillions of dollars we're going to spend over that period.

Importantly, though, it's a rounding error in the right direction. The bill is thick with efforts to move toward cost control, if not efforts to actually impose cost controls. The excise tax, the Medicare Commission, the pilot programs to change how hospitals are paid and most of the other proposals are designed to bear fruit in the future. The excise tax initially applies to very few plans but would hit more as premium costs rise. The payment reforms have to pay off as pilot programs before being considered for Medicare-wide use.

Some pundits respond to all this by flippantly demanding that the White House build more cost control into the bill. Putting aside the fact that this is Congress' joint, not the administration's, consider the difficulty of just one of the cost controls: The excise tax, which is too small as it is, remains only because the administration fought tooth and nail for it. Other efforts at cost control were unceremoniously dumped from the bill.

Consider again the $2.3 trillion we spent in 2008. Given the current rate of growth, in 2028, we'll spend $8.9 trillion on health care. Imagine, however, that we got really serious about cost control and cut $200 billion next year. If costs were to grow at the same rate, we'd still be spending $8.1 trillion in 20 years. Imagine, then, that we didn't cut a dollar — but got cost growth down to 5 percent. In that case, that $2.3 trillion would only be $6.1 trillion in 2028. That's actually manageable.

But changing the growth of the health care system is a lot harder than just cutting a few dollars here or there. It requires us to change how doctors practice medicine, or how much medicine people buy or how much they need — or maybe all three.

The U.S. needs health care reform

If ever a country needed health care reform, our country does, but it is impossible to get the correct news out about it with the wealthy insurance companies that control the news stations that put false news out there for the people to get a clear understanding of what the health care will really do.

What would senior citizens do without Medicare? Health care reform is not taking our freedom away from us but giving everyone a chance to belong to Medicare, plus getting control of the insurance companies so they can't rip us off and drain our government fund.

My daughter lives in Canada. She had cancer and because of the wonderful health care, she has been cured. This plan works very well for Canada and would work well for us, but the insurance companies are going to do all in their power to stop it, and any congressman or woman that is against it is working for the insurance companies.

Goodwill program offers mentoring for Magic Valley youth

Here in the Magic Valley, Goodwill Industries is offering youth a pathway out of crime and toward a better future.

The program, known as Goodwill “GoodGuides” is aimed at 12- to 17-year-olds and provides them with tools and resources for success in order to help them make positive choices and plan for their futures. Through the use of trusted adult mentors, the program helps these young people build career plans and skills.

The basic idea is that if we can keep these youth out of trouble now, they will be less likely to face even greater hardships down the road, including such risk factors as school failure, juvenile delinquency, family violence and other challenges.

Goodwill GoodGuides is funded through a $19.1 million grant to Goodwill Industries International from the U.S. Department of Justice. I am happy to say that Easter Seals-Goodwill Northern Rocky Mountain is one of 56 community Goodwill agencies in 38 states that will receive funding from this grant to provide career-focused youth mentoring so that youth can build career plans and skills as they prepare for school completion. Goodwill is an especially good match for this program because of its long history of helping people find jobs, and its emphasis on building strong families.

January is National Youth Mentoring Month and organizations nationwide are working to raise awareness. Here at Easter Seals-Goodwill, we ask that you carefully consider the important role you or someone you know can make in the life of a Magic Valley teenager. If you would like to mentor youth in your community or know of a youth that could benefit from these services, please contact 736-2026 or tristrans@esgw.org.

Five myths about hawks and doves

Since the botched Christmas bombing plot, many of the president's Republican critics have tried to portray him as soft on national security. Democrats get nervous when the conversation turns to these questions; they're used to being unfavorably stereotyped as doves — or worse, wimps — while the GOP is portrayed as hawkish and strong on defense. But a look back at the past 60 years finds plenty of Democratic hawks, Republican doves and any number of curious crossbreeds.

1. Most Republican presidents have been hawks.

While Republicans often talk like hawks, they don't usually end up governing that way. Dwight Eisenhower, who was elected president on the strength of his reputation as a war hero, fought to cut military spending and ended his presidency with an address warning of a "military-industrial complex."

Richard Nixon broadened operations in Cambodia and Laos and authorized a brutal bombing campaign against the North Vietnamese. But there was another side to Nixon. From his presidency's start, he hoped to undercut the antiwar movement by ending the conflict. "The president should become known next year," said Chief of Staff H.R. Haldeman in 1970, "as 'Mr.

Julian E. Zelizer

Peace.'" Through Nixon's Vietnamization policy, the United States gradually withdrew its forces from Vietnam and ended the draft.

2. Americans consistently prefer hawkish leaders.

Many presidents have promoted alternatives to military force and remained popular. John F. Kennedy rejected military advice to strike Cuba during the missile crisis and, in 1963, signed the Limited Nuclear Test Ban Treaty. "I realize that the pursuit of peace is not as dramatic as the pursuit of war," he said that year, "but we have no more urgent task." Kennedy enjoyed an average approval rating of 70 percent.

Despite being stereotyped as doves, Democrats have often waged effective campaigns against Republican hawks. Johnson's devastatingly effective television advertisement, the famous "Daisy" mushroom cloud ad, warning voters that GOP presidential candidate Barry Goldwater would lead the nation into nuclear war.

3. Republican presidents believe in the use of overwhelming military force.

Traditionally, Republicans have not been interested in using all-out force. Since early in the Cold War, they have argued that Americans can win wars without requiring great sacrifice from the citizenry, they've advocated airpower over ground troops, and they've supported a limited professional Army rather than a draft. They have wanted to win, but cheaply, quickly and without long-term commitments.

4. George W. Bush was the ultimate hawk.

Cheney and the neocon advisers of Bush's first term pushed an aggressive response to the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks. The resulting "Bush doctrine" endorsed regime change and led to two wars and the cessation of diplomatic relations with hostile regimes, among other things.

By his second term, Bush began to back away from some of his positions. He played down threats of military action against countries such as North Korea and Iran. By some accounts, Cheney became extremely frustrated with the growing influence of Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice and with the president's shift away from a harder position against terrorism and toward greater cooperation with allies. Cheney's ally, Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld, was replaced by Robert Gates, who argued that the war in Iraq was not working and that changes to strategy were needed. And after Bush ordered a "surge" of troops in 2007 to stabilize conditions in Iraq, he agreed to a schedule for withdrawing troops and turning power over to the Iraqis.

5. Democrats may pretend to be hawkish but remain dovish at heart.

To the contrary, hawkish Democrats have a proud tradition. Harry Truman worked with a Republican Congress to create the Cold War national security state in 1947 and 1948. In promoting what came to be known as the Truman doctrine, whereby the United States committed to helping anti-communist forces worldwide, he used bellicose rhetoric, following Sen. Arthur Vandenberg's advice to "scare the hell out of the American people."

Most recently, Obama has authorized sending more troops to Afghanistan. The sight of a Democrat ramping up a war started by a Republican goes to show that, however dovish or hawkish members of the two parties may sound on the public stage, what they do when it comes time to govern is a different matter.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Rowdy high school basketball fans need to show some class

Calling out Twin Falls Bruins and Minico Spartans student section fans:

I attended Friday night's (Jan. 22) Jerome/Twin Falls boy's basketball game in Jerome and witnessed what everyone else did — a loud, offensive, bunch of punk boys sitting directly behind the Bruins' bench. They found it necessary to berate obscenely individual Jerome players throughout the game. I found it amusing and disturbing; amusing, as the group, combined, was as athletic as Elmer Fudd (they say if you can't be an athlete, you can be an athletic supporter — also known as jockstraps), and disturbing because the Twin coaches, players and surrounding fans encouraged it with their silent consent (or maybe they agreed with it?).

All it would take is one word from the Bruins head coach or their players and these mouths would shut up and let all in the gym enjoy the game.

What is class? Can you teach it, coach it or learn it? The Bruins players themselves played with class and skill and I was impressed. But that part of their crowd will make every non-Bruin in the state happy if and when they run into a hot team come state playoff time and get beat. Win with class, lose with class. Rolling in the mud only gets you stinky and, truly, stupid is as stupid does.

I mention Minico because its home crowd is reportedly "10 times worse" than Twin's (quote from its athletic director/head football coach when asked about the classless behavior of his student body at a home basketball game was, "That's just what we do here," as he made no attempt to inter-vene or discipline.)

Kinda makes the Tigers' football '08 miracle victory and last year's spanking of the Spartans all the sweeter. But at Jerome, we'll let our players do our talking on the field/court, not "athletic supporters" from the stands.

Last note, although the Jerome student body stood game-long and made a lot of noise, they didn't drop to the Bruins' tactics and single out opposing players. I know because I was sitting close enough to see/hear. There is a big difference between supporting your team and tearing down opponents. Figure it out — maybe you can learn class.

Haiti’s children on their own on capital’s shattered streets

By Vivian Sequera and Ben Fox
Associated Press writers

PORT-AU-PRINCE, Haiti — The children with no names lay mute in a corner of the General Hospital grounds Tuesday, three among thousands of boys and girls set adrift in the wake of Haiti’s earthquake.

“Hi, Joe, how are you?” the American doctor tried, using a pet name the staff had given a boy of about 11.

There was no response.

“Joe,” “Baby Sebastian” and the girl who didn’t even have a nickname hadn’t spoken or cried since they were brought in over the previous 48 hours — by neighbors, passers-by, no one knows who.

“Sebastian,” only a week old, was said to have been taken from the arms of his dead mother.

They’re lucky: Haitian-born Dr. Winston Price and the staff were treating them for infections and other ailments. Hundreds of thousands of other hungry and thirsty children are scattered among Port-au-Prince’s squatter camps of survivors, without protection against disease or child predators — often with nobody to care for them.

“There’s an estimated 1 million unaccompanied or

Haitians surge toward the gates of a food distribution point Tuesday in the Cite Soleil neighborhood of Port-au-Prince.

orphaned children or children who lost one parent,” said Kate Conradt, a spokeswoman for the aid group Save the Children. “They are extremely vulnerable.”

The U.N. children’s agency, UNICEF, has established a special tent camp for girls and boys separated from their parents in the Jan. 12 quake, and who are in danger of falling prey to child traffickers and other abusers. The Connecticut-based Save the Children has set up “Child Spaces” in 13 makeshift settlements. The Red Cross and other groups are working to reunite families and get children into orphanages.

The post-quake needs of Haiti’s children have outrun available help. Some youngsters have been released from hospitals with no one to care for them — there just aren’t enough beds.

“Health workers are being advised to monitor and send separated/unaccompanied children to child-friendly spaces,” the U.N. humanitarian office said in its latest situation report.

The plight of the young is poignant even in a country where the U.N. estimates a third of the 9 million population needs international assistance in the quake’s aftermath. “We still have a huge distance to go,” said John Holmes, the U.N. relief coordinator.

That was evident in Port-au-Prince’s streets, alleys and crumbled doorways, where handwritten messages begged for help. In the Juvenat neighborhood, a group of 50 families hung a white sheet from a doorway, with this plea scrawled in green: “We need food assistance, water and medicine.”

It was evident, too, among the thousands pressing against Haitian police at a food-distribution site in the Cite Soleil slum. They swung sticks to beat back the crowd.

Brazilian troops in armored personnel carriers controlled a tightly packed line of earthquake survivors waiting for food in the broiling sun by firing pepper spray and training their guns on the jostling, rowdy crowd. The line stretched between the partially collapsed National Palace and entirely destroyed Supreme Court.

“There’s an estimated 1 million unaccompanied or orphaned children or children who lost one parent. They are extremely vulnerable.”

AROUND THE WORLD

LEBANON Pilot in Beirut crash made ‘fast and strange turn’

BEIRUT — The pilot of a doomed Ethiopian Airlines flight made a “fast and strange turn” minutes after takeoff from Beirut in a thunderstorm, Lebanon’s transportation minister said Tuesday, revealing new clues about the plane’s few minutes in flight.

The minister cautioned, however, against making any conclusions about the cause of the crash, saying it was far too early and investigators still need to find the black boxes.

All 90 people on board the plane bound for Ethiopia’s capital, Addis Ababa, were feared dead from the crash, which happened at around 2:30 a.m. Monday. A second day of rescue operations using sonar-equipped boats and divers turned up only a few body parts, extinguishing hope of finding any survivors.

Search teams scoured the sea floor trying to find the bulk of the wreckage as well as the black box and flight data recorder, which are critical to determining the cause of the crash.

WASHINGTON Toyota halts U.S. sales of Camry, 7 other models

Toyota suspended U.S. sales of some of its most popular vehicles — including the best-selling car in America, the Camry — to fix sticking gas pedals that could make the cars accelerate without warning.

In another blow to the world’s No. 1 automaker, Toyota Motor Corp. said Tuesday it would halt some production at six assembly plants beginning Feb. 1.

The company said it would stop selling eight models of cars and trucks. The suspension comes after a recall of the same models last week involving 2.3 million vehicles.

Toyota has said it was unaware of any accidents or injuries due to the pedal problems associated with the recall, but could not rule them out for sure.

“This action is necessary until a remedy is finalized,” said Bob Carter, Toyota’s group vice president and general manager.

The automaker said the sales suspension includes the 2009-2010 RAV4, the 2009-2010 Corolla, the 2007-2010 Camry, the 2009-2010 Matrix, the 2005-2010 Avalon, the 2010 Highlander, the 2007-2010 Tundra and the 2008-2010 Sequoia.

Over 1,500 GM, Chrysler dealers appeal closures

By Dee-Ann Durbin
Associated Press writer

DETROIT — More than half of the nearly 2,800 dealers General Motors Co. and Chrysler Group LLC want to close are appealing those decisions, the group handling the appeals said Tuesday.

The American Arbitration Association said 1,550 dealers filed the paperwork needed to contest the closures by the midnight Tuesday deadline. The group said that number could go higher as more appeals arrive in the mail.

Meanwhile, Chrysler is weighing a federal lawsuit to stop the appeals, with sources close to the automaker saying the appeals process could cost it hundreds of millions of dollars. The sources asked not to be identified because a decision hasn't been made.

The association didn't give a breakdown of the number of dealers appealing at each automaker. GM and Chrysler said they won't have exact numbers until later this week. Arbitration hearings are expected to begin in late February or early March and are supposed to be wrapped up by June 14.

Chrysler shut down 789 dealers in June in an effort to make the remaining dealers more profitable, although around 80 percent of them remain in business selling used cars or vehicles from other brands. GM has told 2,000 dealers it will revoke their franchises in October.

Congress passed a law last month requiring an appeals process for dealers.

Both companies say they need to make the cuts to keep the remaining dealers healthy. That way, they can invest in better showrooms and more advertising and do less discounting. The automakers also argue that the federal government signed off on the dealer closures when they were included in the viability plans that automakers submitted to get federal bailout money.

But affected dealers say the automakers have acted unfairly. Ethel Cook's family owned a Chrysler Jeep dealership in Little Rock, Ark., for five generations before it was forced to close in June. The family still runs a parts and service operation but is appealing to reopen the dealership.

Cook said Chrysler gave her 25 days to unwind her operations. After Congress passed the law, she had another 25 days to decide whether to appeal.

Apple tablet could write new chapter for e-books

By Jessica Mintz
Associated Press writer

SEATTLE — The company whose CEO proclaimed in 2008 that people don't read anymore may now be poised to sweep in and school the electronic book reader market.

That company is Apple Inc., and its CEO, Steve Jobs, was predicting Amazon.com Inc.'s Kindle would never take off. But if Apple's talks with publishers are any indication, its "latest creation," set to be unveiled Wednesday, could upend the fledgling e-reader industry in much the same way its iPod redefined digital music.

E-readers had been around since the beginning of the last decade, but in 2007 the Kindle advanced the concept by enabling books to be downloaded wirelessly rather than having to be plugged into a computer. Amazon has tried to push the device further into the mainstream by selling it for $259, down from the debut price of $399.

Analysts say the Kindle is the top-selling e-book reader, though Amazon won't say how many it has sold.

Electronic books make up an estimated 3 percent to 5 percent of all book sales, but publishers and authors worry about Amazon's growing clout. The company has been selling electronic versions of top hardcover titles for $9.99, and publishers fear that consumers who get used to such low prices will demand to pay less for paper books, too.

Enter Apple. The company won't comment on what it plans to unveil Wednesday in San Francisco, but it appears likely to be a tablet — a one-piece computer with a big touch screen, probably larger than an iPhone but smaller than a laptop. While most attention has been paid to the device's possibilities as a Web-surfing and video-watching machine, a multi-purpose tablet from Apple also could be the publishing industry's welcome challenger to the Kindle.

Amazon currently sells e-books for people to read on the iPhone and iPod Touch, which is essentially an iPhone without the phone. People with Kindles can download a free program to the iPhone that enables them to read an e-book, put it down and resume it at the same page on either device.

Economy delays centre opening

JEROME — When Dragt Construction broke ground on the much anticipated Heritage Centre in June 2008, the company fully expected to be near completion by now.

That was before a recession and more importantly, a delay in the construction of the St. Benedict's Family Medical Center nearby.

"Sometimes, it's smarter to hold off than to keep forcing development," said Lori Dragt, owner of Dragt Construction. "With the hospital delay, everything changed. If there were shovels in the ground (for the hospital) it would be different."

Dragt expects the building to be complete around June and remains optimistic the company's $2.7 million investment will come out ahead.

"We didn't anticipate the market and the conditions we saw," she said. "We decided to wait for the market to recover, and we expect that as it does, tenant interest will pick up."

However, the area's office real estate market may not be completely to blame. Many newer office complexes in Jerome and Twin Falls have healthy occupancy rates, rents remain stable and concessions

Buyers more confident than expected

By Courtney Schlisserman
Bloomberg News writer

WASHINGTON — Consumer confidence rose in January to the highest level since September 2008 as the labor market improved and Americans became more upbeat about their immediate future.

The Conference Board's confidence index increased to 55.9, higher than the median estimate in a Bloomberg News survey, from a revised 53.6 in December, a report from the New York-based private research group showed Tuesday. The figure reached a record low of 25.3 in February 2009.

A brighter outlook may encourage Americans to spend, adding fuel to an economy that's received its biggest kick from production gains. Consumer spending that accounts for about 70 percent of the economy has been limited by companies' reluctance to hire after two years of job cuts.

"It's a slight improvement, and given where consumer confidence has been the last four, five months, a slight improvement is a nice take-away," said Mark Vitner, a senior economist at Wells Fargo Securities in Charlotte, N.C. "It appears labor market conditions are not getting any worse, and that's a plus."

Economists forecast confidence would rise to 53.5 from a previously reported 52.9 for December, according to the median of 67 projections in a Bloomberg survey. Estimates ranged from 50 to 57. The index, which has increased the last three months, averaged 45.2 for all of last year.

Delta posts small loss during fourth quarter

ATLANTA (AP) — Delta Air Lines Inc., operator of SkyWest Airlines, sees signs that corporate travel demand is picking up as it closed the books on a turbulent 2009 by posting a $25 million loss for the final three months of the year.

The fourth-quarter loss reported Tuesday by the world's biggest airline was equivalent to 3 cents a share. In the year-ago quarter, Delta lost $1.4 billion, or $2.11 a share. Revenue rose 1 percent to $6.8 billion from $6.7 billion. Excluding special items, Delta lost 27 cents per share. Analysts surveyed by Thomson Reuters were expecting a loss of 24 cents a share on revenue of $6.86 billion.

Delta, based in Atlanta, said system capacity will be down 3 percent to 5 percent in the first quarter of this year. A spokeswoman said that prediction is based on reductions already made. Delta previously said that capacity, as measured by available seats times miles

Improvement district's donation jeopardized

Debbie Dane, director of Southern Idaho Tourism, asked the Twin Falls City Council on Monday for $5,000 from $100,000 in municipal grants.

Only $4,000 was left over after the council divided the money among seven other community organizations — and $1,500 of the remaining money was earmarked for the business improvement district.

Here's where the debate begins.

City Councilmen David

Johnson and Will Kezele offered to give Southern Idaho Tourism $2,500, plus the $1,500 that was earmarked for the business improvement district's Quilt Walk.

Councilman Lance Clow said the $1,500 dedicated to the Quilt Walk should go to the improvement district.

"If we give them the $4,000, it will be well spent," Johnson said.

Southern Idaho Tourism was thought to be helping with the Quilt Walk, but Dane said uncertainty over the improvement district prompted the tourism board to table any action until later.

Kezele mentioned the petition to dissolve the Business Improvement District, saying that there may not even be a Quilt Walk.

End result: Southern Idaho Tourism received all the $4,000. And the future of the improvement district remained in question.

"It was futuristic. Once the hospital gets in there, the need for medical office buildings will be there," said Commercial Realtor Steve Di Lucca, SIOR, with Westerra Real Estate. "Right now, that just isn't the case."

While the opening date has been pushed back, the Heritage building's legendary facade was not scaled back. The Spanish-Colonial styled structure features a complete wrap around terrace and pair of towers that made the North Side Inn a distinctive landmark a century ago, when it was built to cater to prospective investors for the new territory.

"We didn't name it the 'North Side Inn' because we want to get away from the North-Side, South-Side stuff and instead want to focus on the history and legacy of the entire area," Dragt said.

The 13,500 square foot, three-story office complex is one of the largest undertakings for the company and one that will hopefully move Dragt into the future.

"Our bread and butter and first love is dairy construction," Dragt said. "But we're hoping this building will be a showcase for our work."

Heritage Centre is within the largest planned unit development in Idaho, Crossroads Point Business Center, a development near the intersection of U.S. Highway 93 and the Interstate 84 interchange north of Twin Falls.

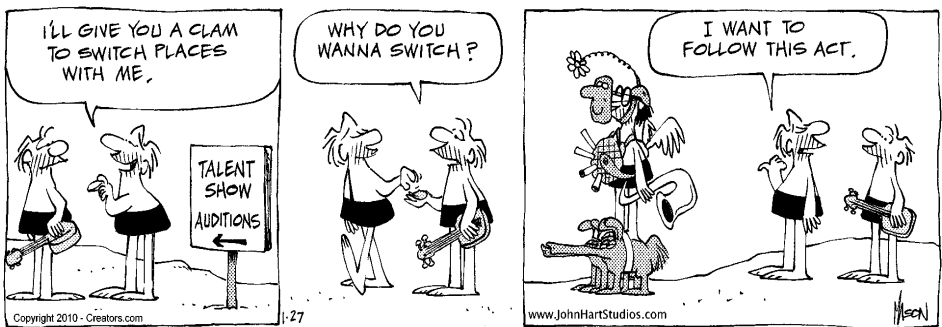

Crossroads Point owner Arlen Crouch said that while lot prices have declined about 20 percent,

NO WHEAT? NO PROBLEM

Celiac sufferers find growing variety of gluten-free foods

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

When Ray Wiman started adhering to a gluten-free diet five years ago after being diagnosed with celiac disease, he learned wheat is in just about everything.

Many store-bought french fries are off-limits to the Twin Falls man, as many companies dust the potatoes with flour to keep them from sticking together. Canned tomato soup often uses flour as a thickener, and dehydrated mashed potatoes have gluten, too — a discovery made too late. Wiman's Thanksgiving dinner made him sick for three days.

Gluten is a protein in wheat, rye, barley and other grains. People with celiac disease react poorly to gluten, causing intestinal problems, chronic diarrhea, fatigue and other symptoms. The only effective treatment is giving up gluten, but celiac patients in south-central Idaho have plenty of options for wheat-free alternative foods.

Pat Corle, president of the Celiac Support Group of Magic Valley, said since Mercia's Natural Foods closed in 2009, she's had to widen her shopping for gluten-free foods. No problem: An increasing number of Magic Valley retailers are adding gluten-free foods to their shelves, and some — like WinCo Foods — will special-order products.

A downtown Twin Falls kitchen store is offering its first gluten-free cooking class this spring, and Susan Biermann, owner of The Nutrition Center in Burley, reports increased interest from gluten-wary shoppers.

Ray and his wife of 50 years, Rose Wiman, tried several store-bought gluten-free breads but weren't satisfied with any of them. They tasted "heavy and icky," Rose said.

So she started making her own. She sought out gluten-free recipes and tweaked them until they fit her and Ray's liking.

Mike Hayes, general manager of Maxie's Pizza & Pasta in Twin Falls, said his restaurant introduced a gluten-free 10-inch pizza crust last week. Before it offered its own, Maxie's encouraged customers with celiac disease to bring in their own wheat-free crusts

COOKING CLASS

Chef Joe Szerwo will teach a cooking class dubbed "Gourmet and Gluten Free," 7-9 p.m. March 18 at Rudy's — A Cook's Paradise, 147 Main Ave. W. in Twin Falls. Cost is $40. The class menu includes GF pancakes, GF Fried Chicken with Braised Endive, GF Sorghum Flour Rolls, GF Chocolate Cake and GF Southwestern Ham Pudding. Register: 733-5477.

CELIAC SUFFERERS UNITE

The Celiac Support Group of Magic Valley meets at 7 p.m. on the fourth Tuesday of each month. Locations change month to month, so watch the "To Do For You" calendar in the Healthy & Fit section, Mondays in the Times-News. Information: Pat Corle, 731-9079.

GLUTEN-FREE SHOPPING

You don't need to special-order gluten-free food, or make it all from scratch. Health food stores and retail grocers carry gluten-free foods. Although this isn't meant to be a comprehensive list, it offers a good idea of what is available in south-central Idaho.

BREAKFAST:

- Bob's Red Mill Cinnamon Raisin Bread Mix, $5.29 for 22 ounces at Stokes in Burley. Other varieties include hot cereal, chocolate cake, all-purpose baking flour and brownie mix.

- Gluten-Free Cafe Fettuccini Alfredo, $4.79 for 9.2 ounces at Fred Meyer in Twin Falls.

DESSERT:

- Betty Crocker Cookie Mix, $4.49 for 19 ounces at Stokes. Other varieties include Brownie Mix, Yellow Cake Mix and Devil's Food Cake.
- Namaste Foods Chocolate Cake Mix, $8.49 for 26 ounces at The Nutrition Center.

A vegetarian gluten-free pizza made by Mike Hayes is ready for the brick oven. 'It's a comfort food for most people,' Hayes says. 'They've grown up with it.'

Why some days are worth more than others

In a past column, I touched on one of the most interesting tips for saving at the grocery store: You can save even more money by shopping certain days of the week. Sound surprising? It's true.

Many supermarkets, especially large chains, run dual sets of sales each week. A typical week-long cycle may begin on Thursday and run for seven days. Then, when Sunday comes around, a second sales flyer hits the newspapers. This supplemental set of sales typically runs for four days, Sunday through Wednesday.

If your store runs dual sales cycles, the best days to shop are the days that both sets of flyers overlap — typically, Sunday through Wednesday. These are better shopping days because two different sets of sales run in the store simultaneously.

Sometimes those two sales actually overlap, offering different types of promotions on the same products. If this happens, simply shopping the days that the two sales overlap lets us enjoy bigger benefits.

COUPON QUEEN

Here's an example: During a recent sale, a brand of crackers was on sale for $2.19, Buy One, Get One Free in the weekly, seven-day flyer. On Sunday, the store's four-day sales flyer came out, and the same brand of crackers was on sale "Buy Two, Get Two Free." During the same week, both of these sales overlapped for four days.

My shopping radar always goes up when I see something like this, because I know this sale's going to be fun! When an item is BOGO on one sales cycle and simultaneously Buy Two, Get Two Free on the second sales cycle, how many are we buying, and how many are we actually paying for?

In this case, we'll buy one

... and get three more free.

Let me explain. Anytime you're dealing with BOGO sales, it's important to remember that the free item still counts as a "purchase." And that purchase qualifies as something you've "bought" toward the second sale.

So, let's break this down. I buy one package of crackers, and I get the second package free. The BOGO sale is done. But the second sale on the same brand of crackers is Buy Two, Get Two Free. The first two packages that are scanned qualify as "buying" two (even though the second package is technically free) and the next two packages of crackers will also ring up free as part of the second sale. If it seems a little confusing, don't worry — the register handles both sales automatically.

After everything was scanned, I paid $2.19 for all four packages of crackers.

When stores run dual sales flyers, they're also trying to drive more traffic to the store on days when it isn't as busy, which are typically earlier in the week. And, that second sales flyer usually has more deeply discounted items and prices than the week-long flyer. In addition to enjoying two sets of sales, shopping the lesser-trafficked days does give us another advantage: shorter checkout lines.

Want one final tip? Because of the higher traffic the store enjoys at the end of the week, items like meats and produce will be reduced to clear once those busier shopping days pass. These items are still of fine quality, but the store is going to have new stock to place out as the end of the week approaches again, so it will reduce the previous week's stock to make room for what's coming in. I never tire of going to the store and seeing the same hamburger patties that were $4/pound reduced to $2/pound as soon as the weekend has passed!

Dessert wines add a sweet touch for Valentine's

By Michelle Locke
For The Associated Press

OAKVILLE, Calif. — What's the grown-up version of candy hearts? Perhaps a sweet little bottle of dessert wine.

Sweet wines don't get the same sort of press as the big guns — chardonnay and cab — but they have a place at the table, especially at this time of year when romance is in the air, and possibly on the menu.

And you don't have to wait for dessert, says Greg Allen, winemaker at Dolce, the Napa Valley winery that is devoted to producing a single dessert wine of the same name.

"As an aperitif, I love it with blue cheese," he says. "And having it with Maine lobster is a wonderful treat."

Dessert wines come in various styles. Many are late harvest wines, which means the grapes are left on the vine until the sugar levels increase dramatically, then the grapes are pressed and fermented to produce a wine with residual sugar, hence the sweetness. Some, like Dolce, also involve allowing a particular kind of mold, known as botrytis, to develop. This further concentrates the grape sugars and flavors.

This is a labor-intensive and tricky process. You have to have just the right amount of rain — it doesn't happen every year, but it did this harvest — followed by painstaking picking; sometimes only a few grapes are selected from a cluster.

The result is a golden, silky wine with notes of pineapple and caramel. Dolce costs around $85 for a half-bottle. Still, everything's relative. Compare that with the hundreds of dollars you can spend on Chateau d'Yquem from France, generally held to be the king of dessert wines and the inspiration for Dolce.

The good news is the wine is rich enough that a little goes a long way, says Allen. "It's not a quaffing wine. It is something that is sublime and has a very lengthy texture on the palate and you want to be able to enjoy that."

Port also falls into the category of dessert wines. Here the sweetness comes from adding a spirit, often brandy. Portuguese producers and their supporters assert that true port hails from Portugal. Still, a number of domestic producers, including Swanson Vineyards in the Napa Valley, are making what are called port-style wines. These usually are higher in alcohol content than regular wines, around 18 to 19 percent, and are a traditional way to end a meal. Ports also happen to be good with dark chocolate, a plus for Valentine's Day.

Swanson, which makes dessert wines in limited quantities and sells them through its wine club or at the winery's Rutherford tasting room, has a port-style wine, Arsene, which is made from petite sirah grapes, fortified with brandy and aged in French oak for 13 months. It sells for $75 for a 750-milliliter bottle.

A good dessert wine is "always a good conversation starter," points out Mike Jellison, president at Swanson Vineyards. "When you have a really good dessert wine, there's so much to talk about, the taste, the flavor. You can't help but smile."

Jellison sees more producers adding sweet wines to their portfolio, though there's still a limited audience for these styles of wines. Some people blame that on the cheap, not very good dessert wines they feel have given the whole category a bad name.

"Sweet wines are so overlooked," says Karen Page, who with husband, Andrew Dornenburg, wrote "The Flavor Bible," and "What to Drink with What You Eat." "They often get no respect, except by those in the know."

Some affordable (under $30) recommendations from Page and Dornenburg:

- Moscato d'Asti, sweet semi-sparkling wines from Italy that also are low in alcohol, which can be a good thing at the end of dinner. There are many good producers; one to try is Vietti.

- Ice wines, made with grapes that have been allowed to freeze on the vine. These wines can be expensive, but Canadian vintner Jackson-Triggs makes a number of reasonably priced bottles.

- Alcyone, a red dessert wine from Uruguay. This runs in the $20 to $30 range and has overtones of the campfire classic, s'mores — hints of chocolate, marshmallows and a bit of spice. "It's one of the most beguiling wines we've ever tasted," says Dornenburg.

Super Bowl calls for super nachos. Pile it on!

By Ryan King
For The Associated Press

If you're going to do nachos for the Super Bowl, they'd better live up to the hype of the big event. And so we give you a platter of double-layered nachos that combine ground beef and black beans with heaps of tomato, cheese, scallions, olives and jalapenos.

Whatever recipe or toppings you use to build your nacho platter, be sure to assemble them in layers of chips and toppings. This minimizes the number of naked tortilla chips left on the bottom of the plate.

This recipe also includes a batch of guacamole. To save time, you could substitute purchased guacamole, or leave it out entirely and spoon salsa over the finished nachos.

BEEF AND BEAN LAYERED NACHOS

Start to finish: 30 minutes. Servings: 8.

For the nachos:
2 tablespoons canola oil
1 medium yellow onion, diced
6 cloves garlic
1 pound ground beef
1 teaspoon paprika
1 teaspoon chili powder
2 teaspoons dried oregano
14-ounce can black beans

1-pound bag tortilla chips
3 cups shredded Mexican-blend cheese
6 scallions, chopped
3 medium tomatoes, cored and diced
15-ounce can pitted black olives, sliced
1/4 cup jarred jalapeno slices

For the guacamole:
3 avocados, pitted and skinned

Juice of 1 lemon
1/4 cup olive oil
3 tablespoons sour cream
Salt and ground black pepper, to taste
1/4 cup chopped fresh cilantro

Heat the oven to 350 degrees.

In a large saute pan over medium-high, heat the oil. Add the onion, then saute until the onion is translucent, about 5 minutes. Add the garlic, beef, paprika, chili powder and oregano. Saute for about 7 minutes, then add the beans and set aside.

On a rimmed baking sheet, arrange half of the tortilla chips in a single layer. Top with half each of the cheese, scallions, tomatoes, olives, jalapenos and beef mixture. Top with a second layer of tortilla chips, then repeat layering with remaining topping ingredients.

Bake for 10 minutes, or until the cheese has melted.

Meanwhile, in a medium bowl combine the avocados, lemon juice, olive oil, sour cream. Use a potato masher to mash the ingredients until chunky smooth. Season with salt and pepper.

When the nachos are done, sprinkle with cilantro, then serve with guacamole.

Win $5,000 in Idaho Potato Commission's recipe contest

Times-News

If you have a flair for preparing healthful fare, now is your time to shine. The Idaho Potato Commission is rewarding resourceful home cooks for innovative, money-saving Idaho potato recipes in its new "Watching Waistlines & Wallets" recipe contest.

Beginning this week, consumers may submit their original potato recipes on idahopotato.com for a chance to win the $5,000 grand prize. Recipes will be judged on use of Idaho potatoes as the main ingredient (fresh, frozen or dehydrated); use of no more than 10 ingredients; originality and taste; ease of preparation; overall healthfulness; and cost to make.

"Idaho potatoes, which cost around 25 cents each, are the perfect main ingredient for just about any meal," Frank Muir, the commission's president and CEO, said in a press release.

"Not only are they low-cost and versatile, they are loaded with important vitamins and minerals."

The contest ends March 31. One runner-up receives $1,500, and five honorable mentions get a prize pack, including $100 in cash.

Contest guidelines and instructions: idahopotato.com.

Though Mike Hayes has washed his hands, he takes an extra precaution by wearing gloves before starting to build a gluten-free pizza.

Gluten

so they could enjoy pizza with their families. Now, Maxie's orders pre-made gluten-free crusts — it lacks the facilities to safely make them itself — and prepares them in a sanitized area to avoid cross-contamination with flour.

Any pizza on the menu is fair game, he said; you won't find gluten in any of Maxie's toppings, sauces and cheeses.

Hayes said the gluten-free crust is drier than typical wheat-based crusts — Maxie's compensates with extra sauce — but he added that it doesn't matter to someone who hasn't been able to enjoy pizza for years.

"They think they're in heaven," he said. "To them, they think it's ideal."

And pizza isn't the only gluten-free food on Hayes' mind.

"We're actually toying with the idea of doing some gluten-free pasta," he said.

Besides Maxie's, other restaurants are willing to make accommodations, Ray said. Five Guys Burger & Fries in Twin Falls recently made him a bun-free burger wrapped in lettuce, and steak house menus have plenty of options for him.

So even if he can't indulge in breadsticks or traditional sandwiches, he is far from hungry.

"I eat probably as good as anybody else," he said.

Make your own

Rose Wiman of Twin Falls has been making gluten-free food for her husband, Ray, for five years. She has experimented with several kinds of bread and flour to find the best substitutes for wheat-based foods. Here are two of her favorites.

ROSE'S GLUTEN-FREE FLOUR MIX

1 1/2 cup sorghum flour
1 1/2 cup potato starch
1 cup tapioca flour

Sift ingredients together. Use for any recipe that calls for gluten-free flour.

GLUTEN-FREE FLAX BREAD

1 1/4 cups of Rose's Gluten-free Flour Mix (or other gluten-free flour)
1/4 cup garfava flour
1/2 cup potato starch
1/4 cup cornstarch
1/4 cup flaxseed meal
2 1/2 teaspoons xanthan gum
2 teaspoons active dry yeast
1 teaspoon salt
2 eggs

2 egg whites
1 cup water or milk
2 tablespoons vegetable oil
2 tablespoons honey
2 teaspoons vinegar

Combine flours, flax, starches, gum, yeast and salt, and set aside. Combine wet ingredients in a mixer, then add dry ingredients. Scrape sides of the bowl and mix on medium for four to five minutes.

Pour into 9-by-5-inch pan and let rise for about an hour and a half. Bake at 350 degrees for 40 minutes. (Adapted from Recipezaar.com.)

Julia's 'The Way to Cook' comes out on DVD

By Bill Daley
Chicago Tribune

Hand it to Julia Child: She was an innovator when it came to getting the "why" of food out to the public.

She did it by writing cookbooks and articles, shooting popular television series and hamming it up onstage and in demonstration kitchens across the country.

No medium or method was too far-fetched or high-tech.

That's why it seems so fitting to find Child's 1985 six-part video series "The Way to Cook" now re-released as a two-DVD set ($24.95).

Now, some five years after her death at age 91 and after 2009's movie, "Julie & Julia" highlighted her life, one now can watch "The French Chef" do her thing on a laptop just about anywhere in the world. She would have liked that.

It's amazing, too, how fresh Child and the series' format seem to be. Back in 1985, releasing a "book" of six video cassettes with a 64-page recipe booklet seemed rather daring and expensive. Who would want six hours of videotape when a good cookbook could suffice? (Child's masterful "The Way to Cook" cookbook did indeed cover much the same territory in 1989.)

Well, we know what the answer today would be.

This wasn't fancy television. There was Julia in a studio kitchen with a camera operator and the ingredients for whatever dish she was making. Numbers displayed in the upper corner of the screen allowed viewers to fast-forward directly to the recipe they wanted to watch. That's all that was needed, and it worked.

There is something of an of-the-moment feel to the segments, a quality one can find often today, with all those homegrown video clips on the Web where a man or a woman faces a camera and does his or her thing.

What also shines forth on these DVDs is Child's practical approach to cooking, her belief that mastering one technique or one basic recipe would lead to other skills and other delectable dishes.

 Willow, Wardrop, and Soldier Cattle & Horse Allotments
 Livestock Grazing Management Project

The U.S. D.A. Forest Service, Sawtooth National Forest, Fairfield Ranger District is seeking public comments specific to a proposal to authorize continued livestock grazing on the Willow Creek, Wardrop, and the Soldier Creek Cattle & Horse (C&H) Allotments consistent with existing management. The project consists of three allotments located on the Fairfield Ranger District, Sawtooth National Forest approximately 15 miles north of Fairfield, Idaho.

The purpose of this comment period is to provide an opportunity for the public to provide early and meaningful participation on a proposed action prior to a decision being made by the Responsible Official. All comments received in response to this solicitation, including names and addresses of those who comment, will be considered part of the public record on this proposed action and will be available for public inspection.

Willow, Wardrop, and Soldier C&H Allotments Proposed Action Report, dated January 2010, summarizes and explains the project and can be obtained by contacting the Fairfield Ranger District at (208)-764-3202 or at the Fairfield Ranger District Office (address below).

How to Comment and Timeframe

Written, facsimile, hand-delivered, oral, and electronic comments will be accepted for 30 calendar days following publication of this notice in the Times-News Newspaper, Twin Falls, Idaho. The publication date in the newspaper of record is the exclusive means for calculating the comment period for this proposal. You should not rely upon dates or timeframe information provided by any other source.

It is the responsibility of persons providing comments to submit them by the close of the comment period in accordance with 36 CFR 215. Those who provide comments during this comment period are eligible to appeal the decision under the regulations. Individuals and organizations wishing to be eligible to appeal must provide the following information:

1. Name and Address;
2. Title of the proposed action;
3. Specific comments on the proposed action, along with supporting reasons that the Responsible Official should consider in reaching a decision;
4. Signature or other verification of identity upon request; identification of the individual or organization who authored the comments(s) is necessary for appeal eligibility;
5. For multiple names or multiple organizations, a signature must be provided for the individual authorized to represent each organization, or for each individual that wishes to have appeal eligibility, and
6. Individual members of organizations must submit their own comments to meet the requirements of appeal eligibility as an individual, comments received on behalf of an organization are considered as those of the organization only.

Written comments must be submitted to: Fairfield Ranger District, Attn: Mike Dettori, District Ranger, P.O. Box 189/102 First Street East, Fairfield, Idaho 83327. The office business hours for those submitting hand-delivered comments are: 8:00 am - 4:30 pm Monday through Friday, excluding holidays. ## THE FAMILY CIRCUS

By Bill Keane

“What part of your face hasn’t been kissed yet?”

DEAR ABBY: I am a 16-year-old girl and I fight with my mother almost daily. It makes me sad and upset all the time, and I don’t know what to do. The last fight we had was over something so dumb I don’t even know why I dragged it out for so long. I said things I didn’t mean — things that were hurtful and cruel.

No child should ever treat a parent like I treat my mom. I take her love and kindness for granted, and never tell her how much I really do appreciate her. What I said to her in anger made her cry.

How can I tell or show my mom how sorry I am and how much I love her and admire her, and how can I stop myself from exploding and saying things to her that I don’t mean?

— UPSET IN INDIANA

DEAR UPSET: The most direct way to make amends would be to hug your mom and apologize for flying off the handle and saying things you didn’t mean. Tell her you love her and will try hard to do better because you are ashamed of your behavior and know it wasn’t justified.

It’s important to understand that the average person can experience frustration that leads to anger multiple times a day. Anger is a normal emotion.

The challenge that everyone faces is how not to deny the feeling, but to express it in ways that are productive for ourselves and not hurtful to others. One way to accomplish this is recognizing what pushes our buttons. What provoked you? Were you under pressure? Or were you angry about something else so you “dumped” on an innocent party (in this case, your mom) because she was handy?

In my booklet, “The Anger in All of Us and How to Deal With It,” I explain that one of the unhealthiest ways to deal with anger is to deny or repress it. However, because most of us have been trained from early childhood to suppress anger, many of us need to learn to express it appropriately.

The Anger booklet can be ordered by sending your name and mailing address, plus a check or money order for $6 (U.S. funds) to Dear Abby — Anger Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, IL 61054-0447. Shipping and handling are included in the price.

In it are suggestions for managing anger, including how to express anger in constructive ways, such as a few well-chosen words that will make your point. It takes maturity to identify and verbalize negative emotions instead of “lashing out” and saying — or doing — something you’ll regret.

Being able to calmly say, “When you do (blank), it makes me angry,” before flying off the handle will earn you respect from others. If you resort to name-calling, the other person hears only the “static” and doesn’t get your message. The first step in controlling anger is to recognize that the emotion is building, to understand that there are healthy and effective ways to express it, and to diffuse it before you lose control.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 8x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Concepts Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"A walled hole where fruitless vines embrace
Their parent skeletons that yet survive
In evil thorns."
— Edwin Arlington Robinson

In today's deal from the NEC Cup, some pairs played four hearts, and some opted for three no-trump. The no-trump game was an unhappy spot as the cards lay. On a diamond lead the normal play in hearts of leading low to the ace left South down three when the defenders could establish both their spades and diamonds.

In four hearts Michael Barel won the club lead in hand and led a diamond to the 10 and East's jack. A heart return went to dummy's ace, and Barel crossed to hand in clubs, played two rounds of diamonds, ruffing, then ruffed a club, and played two rounds of trumps to West. That player fell from grace by taking his last trump and exiting in clubs, squeezing his partner in spades and diamonds. A spade exit by West would have broken up the position for the squeeze.

Could declarer have done better? Yes. Tom Hanlon, also in four hearts, won the club lead in hand and he too led a diamond to the 10 and jack. Back came the heart nine, but Hanlon won the heart ace, played the spade ace, ruffed a spade, then unblocked the top clubs. Now he played the diamond ace, ruffed a diamond, then ruffed a club. He had now reduced his hand to a losing diamond and the heart K-J-8. When he exited with his losing diamond, he had assured himself of two of the last three trump tricks. Contract made.

ANSWER: Your partner's hand is limited by his failure to make a two-club overcall initially. Does that mean you should pass now?
Passing is certainly reasonable,
but I might raise to three clubs, not so much because I think a club game is likely, but because we might make four spades if partner can give delayed support now.

Filer boys take control of SCIC

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

KIMBERLY — The balance of power could be shifting in the Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference.

Behind 19 points from Bryce Beard and 15 from Terrell Bailey, the Filer boys basketball team beat the two-time defending conference champs on their home floor Tuesday in the much-anticipated battle of the SCIC's unbeatens.

Filer's 55-50 victory was its fourth straight as it moves to 10-3 overall and 5-0 in league play.

"Kimberly's a good team and this was a good win for us," said Beard. "I don't think we've proven anything yet. Hopefully in time maybe we will, but for now it's all up in the air."

Beard's fourth 3-pointer with 4:30 to play put the Wildcats up 51-43, matching their largest lead of the game. From there, Filer showed poise and control down the stretch.

"We're doing a really good job controlling the game at the end and making teams come and beat us," said Filer coach Alex Wells. "That's showing our maturity that we're growing up as a team."

Kimberly (6-7, 4-1), which started the season with four straight losses but has won five of its last seven, showed its not going to surrender its role as SCIC bully without a fight. The Bulldogs used their size advantage inside to rebound on both ends, especially when Filer's Andrew Wright went to the bench. However, Kimberly struggled to convert its good looks inside.

"We didn't finish well around the rim," said Kimberly coach Marvin Mumm. "We had the ball at the rim numerous times and we didn't finish the shot. We should be able to do that against them, we have such a height advantage."

After trailing 28-24 at half-time, Kimberly made a push in the third quarter. Ethan Richmond's bucket with 2:37 to play in the period made it a two-point game, then he had a chance to tie it with a pair of free throws the next time down.

But Richmond missed both, and Beard went coast-to-coast for a lay-up, then came back with a 3-pointer on Filer's next possession to make it a seven-point game and shift all

Jerome girls cap perfect GBC run

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

JEROME — Frankie Carey's shot clanged off the iron and fell to 5-foot-1 guard Samantha Logan, all alone under the basket. The tiny senior put it back up and the ball fell through with less than a second left in the game as fans burst into raucous cheers.

It wasn't a game-winner, but Logan's second basket of the entire season capped a memorable night for the Jerome girls basketball team as the Tigers completed a perfect Great Basin Conference schedule with a 48-23 win over Burley on Tuesday.

On senior night in Jerome, the coaching staff gave Logan her first start and spent the last part of the game devising a way to get her on the score sheet.

"That made me feel really good to know that the coaches care like that," Logan said. "I didn't want to let them down so I really wanted to make sure I scored the basket. I was really excited when it went in and the whole student body exploded like that."

Aubree Callen led all scorers with 19 points for Jerome (18-1, 10-0 GBC), while Haylee Burnham scored 10. The Tigers went on a 14-1 run after Burley scored the first bucket of the game, and the Bobcats (10-9, 4-6) didn't sniff single digits again.

Callen hit a 3-pointer in the dying seconds of the first quarter that swung the momentum in Jerome's favor, sending the student section — a portion of which paid homage to the dance crew JabbaWockeeZ by wearing all black with white masks — into frenzy.

"I thought we played well for the first quarter. We had a couple breakdowns and then Aubree hits that 3 and I think the girls let down a little," said Burley head coach Gordon Kerbs. "But I'm proud of the way they fought, and in the second half they never quit."

"Jerome's just a good team, and when you get shots against them you've got to make them because you won't get many."

For the second straight game Jerome held its opponent to less than 20 points through three quarters, doing the same to Minico last Thursday.

"It starts in practice, with all those little things," Callen said. "Tonight everyone rotated well, and that was

TFHS girls shred Riverhawks, await coin flip

By Bradley Guire

George Washington will have a say in this year's district seeding.

The Twin Falls girls basketball team's 62-22 victory over Canyon Ridge Tuesday gave the Bruins a 5-5 Great Basin Conference record and the No. 3 seed to the tournament.

Or is it No. 4?

With Wood River's defeat of Minico to finish 5-5 as well, that's where the Founding Father comes in: the winner of a coin flip today gets the Riverhawks in the first round Tuesday, while the loser gets Burley.

The Bruins are looking forward to hosting the Riverhawks one more time to make it 3-0 in this season's cross-town rivalry.

"I want to win (the toss)," Bruin junior Alexin Clark said. Against Canyon Ridge, she led the team with 14 points and eight rebounds through three quarters of play. She wasn't focused on scoring a ton of points, she said, because the coaching staff had challenged her to step up her game on the boards and with assists.

"I think I've hit a peak at a good time," she said.

Taylor Williams followed her with six boards, while four other Bruins had at least three. Jazlyn Nielsen finished with 10 points, doing most of her damage in the first quarter. On

Rupert's Weimer tops Supercross Lites

Times News

Jake Weimer couldn't have asked for a better start to his 2010 season.

The Rupert native is no stranger to the winner's podium, but lately he's seen the top spot with even more frequency.

After the first three races of the AMA Supercross Lites West season, Weimer sits atop the point standings. The Kawasaki rider won the first three rounds of the series in Anaheim and Phoenix.

"So far, so good for me," Weimer told the AMA Supercross website. "I wanted to come out here and win, and that is what I have earned. I am really excited about this. This is a huge step in the right direction."

Weimer's latest win came last Saturday at Angels Stadium in Anaheim. He has won four of the last five Lites class races in that venue.

"Anaheim is probably the most stressful race of the year," Weimer said in a Kawasaki Racing Team press release. "There's so much hype and so many appearances leading into the race. Everyone is watching and you feel a behind win in Phoenix. Weimer was in third place with four laps to go when he made his move.

"At the beginning of the race I was excited and got my heart rate really high," Weimer said in a Kawasaki press release after the Phoenix race. "I was missing my lines and it was a tough track. ... At one point tremendous amount of pressure."

With his latest win, Weimer holds a 19-point lead in the point standings. That came one week after his come-from-behind win in Phoenix.

I thought maybe I could get second, and as the race progressed I started hitting good lines and I knew I could get the win."

Weimer, 22, cut his teeth at the Minidoka County Fairgrounds' dirt track. After winning numerous amateur titles, he turned pro in 2006. Last year he finished runner-up in the AMA Supercross Lites West standings. He was selected to Team USA, and helped it win the 2009 Motocross of Nations in Italy.

The AMA Supercross circuit continues this weekend at AT&T Park in San Francisco.

Li upsets Venus; Nadal out with knee

The Associated Press

MELBOURNE, Australia — Venus Williams was one service game away from holding up her end of a projected sisters semifinal at the Australian Open, until she stumbled in a flurry of errors and lost to No. 16 Li Na.

Li reached the Grand Slam semifinals for the first time with the 2-6, 7-6 (4), 7-5 quarterfinal win on Wednesday, giving China two players into the last four of a tennis major for the first time.

Venus Williams

"Best day of my whole life," Li said, grinning widely.

Zheng Jie was playing a semifinal against former No. 1-ranked Justine Henin in the other half of the draw.

"Good for both players. Also good for China's tennis," Li said. "Also good for the fans. Thank you."

The experts expected Venus Williams to beat Li and set up a semifinal with her sister and defending champion Serena Williams, who was playing her quarterfinal in the following match on Rod Laver Arena.

And when the seven-time major winner was serving for the match at 5-4 in the second, it seemed a formality.

But Li rallied, breaking Williams in that game and eventually forcing and then dominating a tiebreaker against the former No. 1-ranked American.

Williams held to open the third set, which then featured six consecutive service breaks until Li held to even it at 4-4. She broke Williams and then had her own chance to serve for the match, but didn't win a point in that game.

Williams returned the favor, losing four straight points on her serve to give Li a second chance to serve it out at 6-5.

Li, who had never gone beyond the quarterfinals at a Grand Slam, needed three match points, eventually converting it with consecutive forehand winners down the line.

The match featured a combined 110 unforced errors, Williams committing 53 of those. Williams had 11 double-faults — five in the third set — against Li's five in the match.

The pair hit 27 winners each.

Lakers top Wizards with late effort

WASHINGTON — The Los Angeles Lakers broke out of their road funk by showing the distracted Washington Wizards what hustling, focused, never-let-up basketball is all about, shooting 59 percent and forcing six turnovers during a crucial second-quarter run in a 115-103 win Tuesday night.

Pau Gasol and Kobe Bryant scored 26 points apiece for the Lakers, who had lost six of their previous eight road games and pulled to a 2-2 record midway through their current eight-game swing.

NEW YORK — David Lee had 28 points and 10 rebounds, and the New York Knicks rebounded from a lopsided beating by administering one.

Al Harrington scored 26 and Wilson Chandler had 20 despite a strained left groin for the Knicks, who were dealt the worst home loss in franchise history when Dallas beat them 128-78 on Sunday. New York was on the other end this time, scoring the first 15 points and leading by as many as 36.

defense, Mallory Jund stole four times, three of which happened during the Canyon Ridge's disastrous second quarter.

The Bruins gained small runs through the first quarter, but the Riverhawks kept the game within six points before it all fell apart.

Canyon Ridge committed 13 turnovers in the second quarter alone, with the bulk of them unforced via poor passing, ball handling or traveling.

The Riverhawks were held to one basket per quarter during the second, third and fourth, and two of those three came from Staci Baird. She led the team with 11 points and six rebounds as the Bruins held leading scorer Karly Hudelson in check.

“We played intimidated, and we didn’t take care of the ball,” Canyon Ridge coach Kim Wray said.

The Bruins hit a 35-point lead during the third, and the clock rolled through the whole fourth as the backups pushed the game to 40 late.

Rafael Nadal, who won last year’s final in five sets over Roger Federer, withdrew because of an injured knee while trailing Britain’s Andy Murray 6-3, 7-6(2), 3-0 in Tuesday’s quarterfinals.

Andy Roddick also needed a medical timeout — after the first set of his earlier match against No. 14 Marin Cilic. His sore right shoulder was making his fingers numb.

Roddick played on for another four sets. But, like Nadal, he was gone in the quarterfinals. Cilic advanced 7-6 (4), 6-3, 3-6, 2-6, 6-3 and will meet Murray in the semifinals.

Nadal tweaked his knee in the 11th game of a second set that had already been interrupted for nine minutes by fireworks related to Melbourne’s Australia Day celebrations.

DALLAS — Dirk Nowitzki scored 28 points, Jason Terry added 21 and the Dallas Mavericks held on late.

Carlos Delfino missed a running 10-footer in the lane before the buzzer.

Andrew Bogut hit his first nine shots from the floor and scored a career-high 32 points on 13 of 14 shooting. Delfino chipped in with 22 points for the Bucks, who dropped to 5-18 on the road.

Dallas led 108-101 before Delfino hit a pair of 3-pointers to bring within a point.

BOBCATS 114, SUNS 109

PHOENIX — Stephen Jackson scored 30 points and Charlotte scored nine of the first 11 points in overtime.

Jackson, who tied the game at 98 on a 3-pointer with 19.9 seconds remaining, hit a 20-foot jump shot on the Bobcats’ first possession of overtime to give Charlotte only its second lead of the game.

Raymond Felton had six of his 17 points in overtime as Charlotte stretched its lead to six. The Bobcats broke a three-game losing streak.

Nadal’s fall sent a murmur around the stadium, but he eased concern by playing a shot by instinct as he sat near the baseline.

He didn’t show any out-of-field signs of being hurt until calling for a medical timeout while serving at 0-1 and 15-all in the third set. He took a three-minute break while the trainer worked on his right knee. He played only 13 more points before quitting.

Murray was convinced he would have beaten Nadal anyway.

NFL heads toward labor showdown, salary cap issues

NEW YORK (AP) — Rich, powerful and more popular than ever, the NFL gets closer to a doomsday scenario every day.

Without a deal in the next five weeks to preserve the labor peace that has lasted since a bad month in 1987 — anybody remember scab football? — next season will have no salary cap. That means richer teams such as the Redskins and Patriots will be able to far outspend clubs such as Jacksonville and Buffalo for free agents, while the Jaguars and Bills might try to pinch pennies to stay in business.

And if no deal can be reached next season, that uncapped, maybe less competitive year will be followed by no NFL at all in 2011. Stay tuned as the nation's most lucrative and most watched sport heads into the Great Unknown.

"It looks very bleak to get a (deal) done before March of this year or the beginning of the new NFL season," says Titans center Kevin Mawae, president of the players' union.

"We're going to continue to try. ... Until we come to some terms of what's really important and what are the big issues in this deal it's going to be tough to get something done.

"The players are more united than ever before, and we're preparing for a lockout."

And getting antsy about the future.

"From our standpoint right now, you not only prepare for the worst, that seems like the direction it's headed," Titans defensive end Kyle Vanden Bosch says.

"If players aren't prepared, if guys are in bad financial situations, it hurts our leverage as players."

The main issue, of course, is money — despite soaring TV ratings, an average franchise value of $1 billion and even a storybook Super Bowl featuring the hard-luck Saints and MVP Peyton Manning's Colts.

The NFL owners in 2008 opted out of their contract — called the collective bargaining agreement, or CBA — and have asked for significant givebacks from the players, including a reduction in salaries of nearly 20 percent.

That works out to about $800 million; overall NFL revenues are estimated at $6.5 billion.

Those owners say the agreement that will expire next year is far too favorable for the players, who get about 60 percent of the revenues actually used to determine the salary cap.

"What we're trying to accomplish here is to have an economic system ... that will allow us to look back 15 years from now and say that we, meaning the clubs and the players, were creative and thoughtful and laid the groundwork for the game to continue to grow," says NFL executive VP and chief counsel Jeff Pash.

"If we have the right type of structure, it will lead to better salaries and benefits for current and retired players, and a better and healthier game for fans."

The alternative?

A work stoppage similar to 1982 and 1987, when the union went on strike. Under labor law, the union has the right to strike and management has the right to lock out.

"Our focus is on getting a deal and we will have a deal," Pash says. "The only question is when."

Childress: No deadline for Favre

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. — Brett Favre hinted he'll decide about next season sooner rather than later, though with him that's famously been subject to change.

Even if the Minnesota Vikings must switch quarterbacks again, though, they're willing to wait for Favre's word.

Coach Brad Childress said Tuesday he doesn't have a deadline for Favre's decision, insisting the team can plan for both possibilities despite an obvious preference for early resolution.

"State of flux is generally not good. It's usually uncomfortable, but sometimes it pushes you to create as well," Childress said.

Childress spoke in the morning with the 40-year-old quarterback in the training room, where Favre was getting treatment on the left ankle he sprained during a hard hit in Minnesota's loss in the NFC championship game at New Orleans.

"Pretty beat up after that game," Childress said. "We didn't really have any meaningful conversation about what's next."

Tarvaris Jackson and Sage Rosenfels were supposed to compete for the spot, until Favre came after training camp in mid-August and set the scene for the storybook season for him and the Vikings that ended painfully short of the Super Bowl.

The Vikings won't pick until 30th in the first round of the draft, so it will again be difficult to find viable alternatives outside the organization.

"We'll just see what's there, and I'm sure we'll ably man that position one way or the other," Childress said.

Rosenfels is still under contract, and Jackson will be a restricted free agent if there's no new collective bargaining agreement between the league and the union as expected. Assuming that happens, there won't be a salary cap, either.

"Really, I think our numbers will be just fine if he comes back or he doesn't come back," Childress said. "I don't know. It's up to him, but it's not a deal where I need to put a gun at his head and say, 'I need to know in a week, two weeks, two months."

As they cleaned out their cubicles in the locker room on Monday, the consensus from players was that Favre can take his time too.

RAIDERS HIRE HUE JACKSON AS OFFENSIVE COORDINATOR

ALAMEDA, Calif. — The Oakland Raiders hired Hue Jackson as offensive coordinator on Tuesday, hoping the man who helped develop Joe Flacco in Baltimore can do the same for JaMarcus Russell.

Jackson is the second new assistant hired by the Raiders since the end of the season, joining defensive line coach Mike Waufle. While owner Al Davis has not yet committed to bringing Tom Cable back as head coach in 2010, he has hired two assistants with ties to Cable.

Jackson and Cable worked together on the staff at Cal-State Fullerton in 1990 and at the University of California in 1996. Waufle and Cable also worked together at Cal in the 1990s.

The Raiders have pointed out Cable's ties with the new coaches in their news releases announcing the hires. Cable is also at the Senior Bowl in Mobile, Ala., this week, although no final decision has been made on his status.

"We continue to evaluate the staff and make changes to get better achievement," senior executive John Herrera said. "It's still an ongoing process."

Jackson is expected to take over the play-calling duties from Cable, who did not have an offensive coordinator in his first full season as coach. Cable also coached the offensive line and admitted after the season that he might have been overextended.

"I'm hired as the offensive coordinator, and I'll be the primary play-caller," Jackson told the Ravens team Web site. "That's my role. It's a chance to go out and assist the head coach and be the best offense we can be."

TEBOW SHOWS PROGRESS ON SECOND DAY OF PRACTICES

MOBILE, Ala. — Quarterback Tim Tebow showed progress on his second day of Senior Bowl practices even though he might have been "a little under the weather."

South team coach Tony Sparano of the Miami Dolphins says the former Florida star was a little more comfortable and got the ball out of his hand quicker on Tuesday. Sparano says that improvement shows how smart Tebow is and how quickly he processes information.

Senior Bowl spokesman Kevin McDermond said Tebow "might be a little under the weather," but added that he doesn't have strep throat as had been reported. Tebow hasn't missed any practice time

Monday or Tuesday.

Tebow is trying to show NFL teams that he can be a pro quarterback during the week of practices, interviews and meetings leading up to Saturday's game.

NFL BRAIN INJURY COMMITTEE MEETS FOR FIRST TIME

PALM BEACH, Fla. — Hall of Famer Jack Youngblood jokes that he can't remember how many concussions he's had.

Then he gets serious, recalling the damage he's absorbed since he first started playing football when he was 12.

"What have I done?" Youngblood said. "I have to ask that question. You just don't know. We haven't defined it completely yet. That's one of the issues we're talking about here today."

Youngblood spoke during a break from the first meeting of the Mackey-White Traumatic Brain Injury Committee on Tuesday. The committee was formed by the NFL Players Association and includes professional athletes, past and current NFL players, doctors and researchers.

The group wants to open a dialogue on brain injuries in professional football, discuss the latest research and begin developing recommendations to keep players safer.

The committee was named in honor of two Hall of Famers — tight end John Mackey, who has been diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease, and defensive lineman Reggie White, who earned the nickname "The Minister of Defense" and died at 43 after retiring from the NFL.

49ERS' SMITH, FALCONS' WHITE ADDED TO PRO BOWL ROSTERS

San Francisco 49ers defensive tackle Justin Smith has been added to the NFL Pro Bowl roster in place of injured Kevin Williams of Minnesota, while Atlanta Falcons receiver Roddy White is replacing Sidney Rice on the NFC roster for Sunday's game in Miami.

Smith is one of five Niners on the roster, while White is the only Atlanta player.

Miller makes his 4th U.S. Olympic team

Hardly a surprise, Lindsey Vonn and Bode Miller lead a list of U.S. skiers earning spots for the Vancouver Games.

The announcement of the team was delayed until Tuesday to see if any extra spots opened up.

Some did and the Americans received four extra spots, bringing the total on the men's and women's teams to 22 skiers.

Vonn is rolling into Vancouver having won five straight World Cup downhill events this season. She also leads the overall standings.

The way she's been storming down the mountain, the 25-year-old Vonn could be a five-medal threat in Vancouver.

Miller made his fourth Olympics team. He captured two silver medals at the 2002 Games in Salt Lake City but got shut out in Turin.

Reigning Olympic champions Julia Mancuso and Ted Ligety also made the team. Mancuso won the giant slalom at the Turin Games in 2006 and Ligety captured gold in the combined.

The squad features nine skiers with Olympic experience and 13 newcomers. The list wasn't broken down into what events each would ski.

Like Miller, Sarah Schleper will be competing in her fourth Olympics.

For Vonn, Vancouver could be a chance at redemption. She crashed during a training run at the 2006 Games, slamming her right knee, back and head into the snow at nearly 50 mph.

Although she climbed into the starting gate soon after that harrowing fall, she didn't win any medals.

Since then, Vonn has won two overall World Cup titles.

ANIMAL RIGHTS GROUP UNHAPPY WITH WEIR WEARING FUR

Johnny Weir has set fur flying again. Friends of Animals has posted an open letter to the figure skater, criticizing him for having fox on one of his costumes and asking him to stop wearing fur. The animal advocacy group also contacted his costume designer, Stephanie Handler, on Tuesday.

"I totally get the dirtiness of the fur industry and how terrible it is to animals. But it's not something that's the No. 1 priority in my life," Weir said Tuesday night. "There are humans dying everyday. There are thousands if not millions of homeless people in New York City. Look at what just happened in Haiti."

"I tend to focus my energy, if there is a cause, on humans. While that may be callous and bad of me, it's my choice."

Weir loves fashion, and his costumes tend to be on the avant-garde — some would say extreme — side. When the three-time U.S. champion redesigned his free skate costume before nationals, he had Handler add a tuft of white fox fur to the left shoulder.

Weir said he thought the costume was "lovely" but Friends of Animals disagreed. Foxes are electrocuted or beaten, and their pelts are obtained by skinning the animals alive, said Anai Rhoads, spokeswoman for the group.

NBC HOPES TO RECOVER FOR OLYMPICS

NEW YORK — NBC's Conan O'Brien-Jay Leno fiasco has been a monumental disaster for the network, both for its public image and bottom line, as it prepares to pay an embittered O'Brien and his staff an estimated $45 million to abandon "The Tonight Show."

Next up: the Winter Olympics.

A solid Olympics performance in February could go a long way toward rehabilitating the network. The past few weeks of bad publicity haven't helped, though, and NBC's struggling prime-time ratings hinder its abilities to promote the Vancouver games, which begin Feb. 12.

NBC also knows going in that it will lose millions of dollars on the Olympics but insists that no corners will be cut that viewers will be able to see.

"The squabbling over late night has really overshadowed anticipation for the games," said Shari Anne Brill, an analyst for the Madison Avenue firm Carat USA.

But John Swallen, senior vice president of research for TNS Media Intelligence, cautioned against connecting NBC's other problems with interest in the Olympics.

"Ultimately, it's the competition and the personalities of the athletes involved in the competition that makes the difference between a ratings bonanza and a ratings disaster," Swallen said.

KEARNEY HEADLINES US OLYMPIC FREESTYLE TEAM

Jeret "Speedy" Peterson is hoping for "Hurricane" conditions in Vancouver.

The U.S. aerialist would love to do his signature jump on Cypress Mountain next month — in which he crams three flips and five twists in one frenetic 3.5-second leap — if only to bring a little spice to an event that's become a bit stale over the years.

"I definitely feel like it needs to have somebody push the envelope," Peterson said. "We've been doing the same tricks since '88 when it first became an Olympic sport."

Peterson would know. Vancouver will be his third Olympics. The veteran secured the spot by winning the Olympic Trials in December and will spearhead the U.S. Olympic Freestyle team that coach Jeff Wintersteen called much improved over the one that managed just a single medal in Turin four years ago.

"I think we're much stronger," Wintersteen said. "It's the Olympics and anything can happen."

It might have to if the U.S. wants to up its medal haul from Turin. Four years ago all 14 team members were ranked in the top 15 in their respective disciplines. This time around only 13 of 18 skiers can make the same boast.

"We're going to be as competitive as we can on a given day," Wintersteen said.

The best day might be the first. Women's moguls hits

Top point guards face off as BYU makes Pit stop

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — New Mexico's Dairese Gary knows he's facing one of his toughest assignments all season against BYU point guard Jimmer Fredette.

All Gary needs to do is stop BYU's scoring machine.

"You mean try to put a lockdown on him," Gary said, laughing. "He's been putting up a lot of points this year. He's a good player."

No kidding.

Fredette has fought mononucleosis over the past several weeks but scored 33 points in a 71-69 win at San Diego State last Saturday. His layup with 19.9 seconds to go gave the No. 12 Cougars (20-1, 5-0 Mountain West) the winning cushion.

He played 38 minutes, despite BYU coach Dave Rose watching for signs of fatigue.

"I was going to leave him out there until he started feeling bad," Rose said. "I expected him to tire and he never did, which was a great sign for us. We tried to rest him in the first half and the game kind of got away from us. He really settles us down."

Fredette also had 49 points during BYU's 99-69 win at Arizona on Dec. 28. Although he missed two games with his illness, his efforts have helped the Cougars win 15 straight, the second-longest active streak in the nation behind Kentucky's 19 in a row.

"He's terrific," New Mexico coach Steve Alford said. "He can score 40 on any given night. This is a very special talent. He's outstanding without the ball, definitely the catalyst of their team."

But Gary is no slouch, either.

He's a steady hand on a young team, guiding the No. 23 Lobos (18-3, 4-2) to three victories over opponents that were ranked when New Mexico played them this season — California, Texas A&M and Texas Tech.

Last weekend, Gary made his 83rd straight start and led all scorers with 17 points in an 82-64 win over

Colorado State.

Gary and Fredette, both juniors, are developing a friendly rivalry, and Gary said he's looking forward to "a fun game." But Alford called BYU the best team New Mexico has faced all season and seemed less certain that facing Fredette will be a joyride.

"We've watched about 10 game tapes. We're still trying to figure out how to guard him," Alford said. "He's a load. When you're faced with this kind of talent, it doesn't do any good to throw two or three guys at him because he'll pass the ball."

"But we feel like we've got a pretty good point guard, too, so it's a great matchup."

New Mexico's rabid fans are sure to be fired up. The game sold out Monday, the fifth of the season at The Pit, where a $60 million renovation project has reduced capacity from 18,100 to a smaller but raucous-as-ever crowd of 14,586.
