Students say job loss, economy made them enroll

By Damon Hunzeker
Times-News writer

It's getting crowded on campus, but for many College of Southern Idaho students, going to school is much easier than finding a job.

With 8,516 students, CSI's spring semester enrollment has increased by more than 1,000 students since the same time last year, and students are spending more time on campus. Nearly 800 more students are registered full-time this semester than last spring.

Jeff Fox, CSI's executive vice president, attributed much of the increased enrollment to economic conditions. A lot of students seemed to agree.

After the Twin Falls Dell call center closed last month, Heather Urie's job went with it. So at 29, she went back to school in the nursing program.

"I've been looking for other jobs, but there's nothing available that I'd qualify for," she said. "There are no computer jobs around here, but there's nursing jobs galore, and with the new hospital, there's going to be even more nursing jobs."

Urie said her classes aren't crowded but that it was difficult to register for a convenient schedule.

"All of the good times were unavailable," she said. "I ended up with a Saturday class."

Norma Artega, also an RN student, currently works as a nursing assistant. "I take care of old people," she explained, but said she's going to school out of necessity.

"I have a job, but the economy is worsening enough to where we'll have to go to school to have money," she said.

Abel Avila, 19, moved from Pocatello after losing his job from a business he declined to name.

"I had a job, but that company just broke down, and it made me come back to school," he said.

Ricardo Trevizo, an 18-year-old studying diesel mechanics, lost his job on purpose.

"I quit to come to college," he said. "I worked for a year until I had enough money for college."

Most of the students who were interviewed, while not complaining about class sizes, said increased enrollment has caused problems in other campus locations.

Tax cheats, others shorting Idaho $250M

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Whether through cheating or ignorance, taxpayers are shorting Idaho by about $250 million annually at a time when Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter and lawmakers are cutting budgets for public schools and other state agencies.

Idaho Tax Commission Chairman Royce Chigbrow told members of the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee on Wednesday this uncollected tax gap undermines faith in the system and is unfair to people who are following the law.

His agency says not all of the $250 million is collectible, but figures it could probably bring in an additional $64.5 million — if it had more staff and a few policy changes. Some are politically difficult, like collecting more taxes on Internet sales or going after out-of-state owners of Idaho homes after they sell their property for a profit. Bills aimed at doing both have stalled in recent years. Chigbrow says the basic rule is, for an additional $1 million investment in staff, his employees could bring in $10 million more.

"With greater enforcement, compliance moves up automatically," he told

Parents 'willingly gave children' to U.S. Baptists

By Frank Bajak
Associated Press writer

CALLEBAS, Haiti — Desperate parents in this struggling village perched above Haiti's earthquake-flattened capital gave their children away willingly — and blindly — to American missionaries who promised to bus the kids to a better life.

The stories they told The Associated Press on Wednesday contradict claims by the Baptist group's leader that the children came from orphanages and distant relatives. But they also attest to the abject misery of a country that was the hemisphere's poorest before the Jan. 12 quake.

In the capital, Port-au-Prince, an investigating judge questioned the males among the 10 missionaries,

Sheriff Carter's POST status to be decided today

Carter accused of insubordination, falsifying time card while working under former sheriff Tousley

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

Twin Falls County Sheriff Tom Carter said it will break his heart if the Idaho Peace Officer Standards and Training Council votes to decertify him today in Meridian, but no matter what happens he plans to finish his term and then run again for another four years.

Carter was accused of insubordination and falsifying his time card when he was a sergeant working for former sheriff Wayne Tousley. He was allegedly dishonest about 11 hours split between three work days, according to a POST investigation.

After being fired by Tousley in 2007, Carter defeated him in the 2008 November election. Sheriffs in Idaho do not need to be POST certified, and Carter's lawyer, Keith Roark, has described the matter as a political witch hunt against Carter.

The POST Council — which includes 15 members from county, city, state and federal law enforcement and associations — is slated for a closed-door executive session today before voting on whether to decertify Carter. The decertification was initially planned for last November, but was postponed.

Census Bureau begins 2010 effort

By Damon Hunzeker
Times-News writer

It's one of the few things the federal government does that's actually in the Constitution — counting people.

The U.S. Census Bureau has opened a regional office in Idaho Falls and will begin accumulating information about residents April 1.

"The census will affect every resident of Twin Falls pretty much every time they walk out the door. Over $400 billion in federal funds are distributed each year based on census data," regional spokeswoman Stacy McBain said, citing programs such as unemployment insurance, road construction, and emergency services. The same thing applies to cities other than Twin Falls, it should be noted.

Census data also determines how you vote — by establishing legislative and congressional district boundaries, as well as the apportionment of congressional seats and Electoral College representation.

Twin Falls residents, however, like much of Idaho, are skeptical about the census and its related privacy issues, McBain said.

Legally, she pointed out, the Census Bureau can't share respondent answers with any other government agency, and all census workers take an oath for life but it can also decertify them when they commit a crime or violate the POST code of ethics.

In Carter's case, POST officials have come to differing recommendations since beginning the decertification investigation in 2006.

Most recently, in a detailed 22-page report from July 2009, POST hearing officer James Desmond said Carter violated county policies and the law enforcement code of conduct.

"Thomas P. Carter's conduct demonstrates a patent disregard for the principles and standards of the Law Enforcement Code of Conduct," the July report reads. "Carter's decertification as an Idaho Peace Officer is therefore warranted."

But at least two other POST officials came to a different recommendation in May 2008, according to a POST report that Carter's spokeswoman, Lori Stewart, provided the Times-News access to on Wednesday.

A POST investigator and a manager recommended Carter not be decertified, according to that report. The investigator wrote, "Even though Carter admitted to violating the policies in question, there are enough questions as to intent and history of this going on in the past with other supervisors, I feel he should not be decertified."

A manager for the POST Office of Professional Responsibility also stated that Carter should not be decertified.

The same 2008 POST report also noted, however, that "the investigation has disclosed information which could warrant a consideration of decertification." Former POST Director Jeff Black made no recommendation on that report.

Carter and Stewart said on Wednesday they didn't find it inappropriate or unethical that Stewart provided the Times-News with the 2008 POST report rather than Carter himself or his lawyer. After 28 years of being certified by POST, Carter said he now just wants the vote to be over with. The investigation has lasted more than three years and has been a stress to Carter, he said.

"I'm just really tired of worrying, I'm tired of it hanging over my head," Carter said Wednesday night, adding that he hopes the POST Council considers the 2008 report too. "It breaks my heart if they take it."

to keep information confidential — including, for instance, whether an enumerator notices marijuana plants growing in someone's backyard, McBain noted.

"Even if President Obama or the FBI wanted your information, the Census Bureau would turn them down," she said, "and we have the Constitution to back us up."

The Constitution requires only that the government count the people. The 2010

Census, while short compared to previous years, asks for your phone number, your race — specifically whether you're of Latino origin — whether you rent or own your residence, who lives with you, and whether you sometimes stay elsewhere.

The relative conciseness — 10 questions — makes it easy to fill out, and the bureau is trying to increase response rates from the 2000 census. Idaho matched the nationwide response rate of 67 percent that year. At 75 percent, Twin Falls well exceeded the average, but smaller towns in the area were well below the average. The response rate in Filer, for instance, was 35 percent.

"One of the things we're emphasizing is the need to mail back the responses, especially if people don't want an enumerator showing up," McBain said. "The more people who mail back their forms, the fewer tax dollars will be spent gathering the data by sending people out. An enumerator can be sent to each household as many as 10 times."

If potential respondents refuse to fill out the form, an unspecified fine is possible but, McBain said, both the government and the public prefer to avoid it.

"If somebody refuses, they'll usually get the information from a neighbor," she said. "The census is a portrait of America."

For every person who refuses to respond, McBain said, Idaho loses $1,400 each year until the next census is taken a decade later.

CLINTON REGRETS ACTIONS OF AMERICANS HELD IN HAITI

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton said Wednesday that the attempt to bring undocumented children out of Haiti by 10 American missionaries now detained in the country was "unfortunate" and that they should have followed proper procedures.

Clinton told reporters at the State Department that the Americans should not have taken matters into their own hands by bringing children from earthquake-ravaged Haiti to the Dominican Republic and should have followed proper adoption procedures. She said U.S. officials were in discussions with Haitian authorities about how to resolve the case.

"The Haitian nation acted to protect children who were being removed from their country without appropriate documentation," she said. "We have worked with the Haitian government over the last two-and-a-half, three weeks to help facilitate and transport children who are properly documented as having an adoptive family or guardianship waiting."

The Tax Commission is facing a proposed fiscal year 2011 budget starting next July of $31.9 million, about $200,000 less than the original appropriation for the current year that's now being trimmed back through a series of holdbacks.

Since last year, the commission has gotten about $2 million to hire 74 temporary tax auditors to go after tax cheats, including a $1.5 million infusion of reserves backed by Otter in late 2009. Otter is recommending the agency get another $1.5 million in fiscal 2011 to keep the auditors on board.

The temps were charged with bringing in an additional $17 million in revenue this year; Chigbrow says they are ahead of schedule and could bring in about $20 million by July.

"We are well on our way," he said. "It's money well invested."

Auditors are investigating people who haven't filed tax returns, prompting suspicions that they've joined the ranks of tax dodges amid an economic downturn that appears to be rippling tax collections.

For instance, the Tax

Commission has recorded a 21 percent increase in underpayments, a 30 percent spike in non-filers and a 49 percent jump in underreporting, in addition to nearly a third more bankruptcy filings in 2009 — all developments that will likely reduce state revenue.

To help meet holdbacks ordered by Otter over the last year, Chigbrow's agency hasn't filled 30 vacant positions and has ordered about 20,000 furlough hours for its roughly 400 employees. Amid tough budget times, it's also opted not to purchase upgrades to tax-collection software it's been using since 2002 to find more money, though that's an expense that can't be delayed forever.

"We will be coming to you in future budget years to ask you to protect your investment," Chigbrow said.

He did take some heat from budget panel members who questioned including auditors among the ranks of Tax Commission employees who must take furloughs to help meet budget cuts ordered by Otter. He says the agency tried to get by without, by reducing copier expenses and reducing out-of-state travel to a minimum.

Idaho Power rewarding CSI for building’s efficiency

By Damon Hunzeker
Times-News writer

Even the carpet is efficient. Representatives from Idaho Power Co. and the College of Southern Idaho toured the college's new Health Sciences and Human Services building Wednesday as the utility company prepares to reward CSI with financial incentives of about $75,000 for the building's energy-efficient design. The $21 million, 72,270-square-foot structure north of the college's main Twin Falls campus was built to be environmentally sustainable and technologically advanced. The department serves 700 students and 14 different programs in the health-care industry. Because of new space and equipment, three new degrees will be offered: medical coding, surgical first assisting, and dental hygiene. Dr. Mark Sugden, instructional dean of the department, and physical-plant director Allen Scherbinske discussed some of the building's unique design that contributed to its gold certification by LEED (Leadership in Energy and Environmental Design), a ratings system developed by the U.S. Green Building Council. Before the tour, Scherbinske pointed out that the random carpet design was even part of the overall goal of efficiency. "If you spill something, you can just pull a section up and slap a new one down without having to match anything," he said. Much of the building looks and works like a hospital or dentist office. But instead of real patients, the beds are occupied by computerized mannequins that look like startled robots awaiting upgrades. The dental chairs are occupied by disembodied heads with realistic, yellowing teeth. The mannequins, which cost about $40,000 each, allow students to work on "patients" that exhibit symptoms and respond to treatment without having to worry about accidentally killing them. "You'd think the students would be kind of joking around. It's not like that at all ... They're as serious as if it were a real human being," Sugden said in a simulated hospital room that includes a skeleton wearing a rubber mask with a metal spike pierced through its nose. The building features numerous large windows, lights that turn off automatically in vacant rooms, a complicated water system that minimizes and filters runoff, ventilation that provides fresh air based on the number of occupants, as well as a heating and cooling system that maximizes solar and geothermal power. "I was extremely impressed," said Chris Pollow, an Idaho Power energy engineer. "They really did everything possible to make this cost-effective and to save energy. I saw things I've never even heard of before." The money, part of two different incentive programs, will be used to offset some of the costs associated with implementing the building's pragmatic design. Damon Hunzeker may be reached at dhunzeker@magicvalley.com.

Rupert council moves meetings, backs fighter jet squadron effort

By Coreen Hart
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — The Rupert City Council on Tuesday tabled a discussion of electrical rates, but agreed to change its meeting dates and passed a resolution to support the Mini-Cassia Women's and Children's Shelter. Pam Harris, director of the women's and children's shelter, said the organization is seeking grant funding, to which the city resolution gives the council's backing. "It is to support all the utilities and bring on another employee in the women's shelter," Harris said. "Our numbers are picking up and we need more funding." A second council resolution lends city backing to a request by the Association of Idaho Cities, to locating an Air Force F-35 fighter squadron at Mountain Home Air Force Base. Councilman Todd McGhie touted the potential benefits of bringing the fighters to the state. "If they can do this, it will bring with the squadron about $2 billion to the state of Idaho," McGhie said. "Mountain Home has made the short list waiting approval in Congress. We have the most uncontested air space, which allows them to utilize the maximum amount of fuel for better flying; more flying days than any other location in the United States. The F-35 squadron is a perfect fit for the state of Idaho." Darryl McCall of the Mini-Cassia Veterans said he received a call Monday night, and understood that the selection was down to Mountain Home AFB and a base in Oregon. City electrical rates came into discussion, but any further discussion or action was again tabled. The council agreed to proceed slowly in order to hold a series of informational meetings for electrical users, and plan more discussion during the Feb. 23 meeting. "If I am not mistaken we are going to hold our base rate the same and then (add) a 3 percent increase on the rate for residential (customers), Council President Mike Brown said. Possible uses for the vacant Pershing School also came under discussion. Mini-Cassia veterans are seeking a permanent work area, and would like to open a soup kitchen. Council members also mentioned the need for a meeting place for a quilters' group and other civic groups. Beginning with the Feb. 23 meeting, the council will meet at 7:30 p.m. on the second and fourth Tuesday of each month, after it agreed to change meeting times on Tuesday.

IDWR waters down payroll for holdbacks

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

BOISE — The state agency that manages the lifeblood of agriculture is facing the task of managing the same resource with fewer workers. Gary Spackman, interim director of the Idaho Department of Water Resources, gave his budget presentation on Wednesday to the Joint Finance Appropriations Committee. Amid the downturn in state funding, IDWR has slashed its payroll by 48 employees in the past two fiscal years, a mix of 27 full-time jobs and 21 temporary jobs. That includes administrative personnel, too. "I am essentially trying to leave one layer of management open to reduce the impact on staff who are doing the work of the department," Spackman told JFAC, noting that the agency has fewer than 200 employees. With the recommended 7.5 percent budget holdbacks for this fiscal year, the agency is looking at losing $367,200 from its general fund, along with another reduction of $151,900. The impact of state cuts includes four fewer people working on water rights, no administrator for water management, and employees taking on extra clerical and data-entry tasks. Spackman didn't discount the idea of fee changes, when Rep. Maxine Bell, co-chairwoman of JFAC, asked about the possibility. "It concerns me the cuts that this economic downturn has put on your budget," said Bell, R-Jerome. "Is your fee structure adequate? ... Is there any way there can be more income derived?" Spackman said there are some areas that don't generate much revenue. "There are some functions we perform that take a lot of effort for which we receive almost no fees," he said. For example, when people submit applications to file a water right with the agency's bank, there is no fee. Those applications have increased, too, Spackman said. There also aren't any fees for dam safety inspections, he said. "Those are just some examples where fees could be increased," Spackman said. Bell noted that the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation is facing fee increases. "If we're going to look at more of a fee for our state parks, it appears that this is an area too," she said of IDWR. All the cuts proposed for this fiscal year and fiscal year 2011 amount to a reduction of 24.6 percent, Spackman said. At the same time, though, the agency is also focusing on long-term plans. Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter has recommended $1 million in federal stimulus for the next budget to go toward the Comprehensive Aquifer Management Plan. The state's water board recently approved putting $1.2 million in the payments coming from the Pristine Springs agreement toward CAMP as well. Approved in 2009 as part of the state's water plan, CAMP has an estimated cost of $70 million to $100 million during its first decade to pay for recharge, ground-to-surface water conversions and other projects. A one-time contribution from the water board of $566,000 to IDWR's general fund will help offset the impact, Spackman said. That funding will "reduce the impact on the staff and give the department some time to adjust to the 7.5 percent holdback," he said. Staff writer Ben Botkin may be reached at bbotkin@magicvalley.com.

Motivational guru charged in Ariz. sweat lodge deaths

By Felicia Fonseca
Associated Press writer

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. — Motivational speaker James Arthur Ray was arrested Wednesday on manslaughter charges after three people died following a northern Arizona sweat lodge ceremony he led last year.

Ray was taken into custody on an indictment at his attorney's office in Prescott and later led into the Yavapai County jail in Camp Verde wearing blue jeans, tennis shoes and a dark jacket. His bond was set at $5 million, and his first court hearing was scheduled Thursday.

Ray's attorneys said Wednesday he surrendered to authorities but that the charges were unjust and they were confident he would be exonerated in court. If convicted, he faces a minimum of 3 years and a maximum of 12½ years on each count.

"This was a terrible accident, but it was an accident, not a criminal act," Ray attorney Luis Li said. "James Ray cooperated at every step of the way, providing information and witnesses to the authorities showing that no one could have foreseen this accident."

Ray has built a multimillion-dollar empire as a self-help superstar who teaches people about financial and spiritual wealth, and uses free seminars to recruit followers to more expensive events. He soared in popularity after appearing in the 2006's Rhonda Byrne documentary "The Secret" and he promoted it on "The Oprah Winfrey Show" and "Larry King Live."

The Oct. 8 sweat lodge ceremony was intended to be the highlight of Ray's five-day "Spiritual Warrior" event at a retreat he rented near Sedona. He told participants, who paid more than $9,000 each to attend, that it would be one of the most intense experiences of their lives.

Motivational speaker James Arthur Ray, foreground, is led into Yavapai County jail in Camp Verde, Ariz. on Wednesday. Ray was arrested on three counts of manslaughter for the deaths of three people at a sweat lodge ceremony he led in October 2009.

some began feeling ill, vomiting and collapsing inside the 415-square-foot structure. Despite that, Ray urged participants to push past their physical weaknesses and chided those who wanted to leave, authorities and participants have said.

Two people — Kirby Brown, 38, of Westtown, N.Y., and James Shore, 40, of Milwaukee — passed out inside the sweat lodge and died that night at a hospital. Liz Neuman, 49, of Prior Lake, Minn., slipped into a coma and died a week later. Eighteen others were hospitalized.

Neuman's daughter, Andrea Puckett, said Wednesday she was pleased with Ray's arrest and praised the authorities for the depth of their investigation.

"It helps that he is, for now, being stopped from doing what he's doing, from harming anyone else, and that's the biggest relief for me and my family right now," said Puckett, of Bloomington, Minn.

Ray's attorneys have said he took all necessary safety precautions and wasn't aware of any medical problems until the ceremony was over.

Brown's mother, Ginny, said Wednesday from her home in Westtown that she would have liked to believe the deaths were accidental but that everything that Ray did during the "Spiritual Warrior" event almost made them inevitable.

"One of the things that horrifies me after we found out Kirby had died was to see how he behaved, to really yield his true character," she said. "This wasn't just a horrible accident. His own conviction in his omnipotence and his own seduction of money and wealth made him delusional."

Authorities said they quickly determined the deaths were not accidental and focused their investigation on Ray. They conducted hundreds of interviews that reached into Ray's past ceremonies and events, including one in which a man fell unconscious during a 2005 sweat lodge ceremony at the same retreat near Sedona.

Bill sparks debate on tax exemptions in Idaho

BOISE (AP) — A state legislator wants to waive sales taxes for homeless shelters, saying they need all the help they can get in a tough economy.

Boise Democrat Branden Durst's bill passed in the House Revenue and Tax Committee Wednesday. The legislation would save a handful of major shelters in the state about $15,000 a year until 2012.

"The situation is dire for Idaho's homeless," said Durst, who told lawmakers the measure would "provide temporary tax relief to those who need it the most." The exemption would apply to blankets, toilet paper and other basic goods that shelters need to operate.

Durst argues that the bill would ultimately save the state money because privately funded nonprofit shelters help those who might otherwise take advantage of taxpayer-funded services.

The bill passed unanimously, but not without Republicans first asking Durst some tough questions.

Rep. Jim Clark, R-Hayden Lake, said he's heard from constituents who think tax exemptions are a bad idea when the state is already strapped for cash. When Clark talks to constituents at home, he said, "all we ever hear about is, What are we going to do about these exemptions?"

The state has dozens of sales tax exemptions and exceptions worth some $1.7 billion annually in 2010, according to the Division of Financial Management.

Legislators approve new grazing lease rules

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — Legislators on Wednesday approved new state grazing lease rules aimed at helping resolve more than a decade of conflict that has pitted environmental groups against Idaho and the state's traditional ranching interests.

The rules will govern how contested lease auctions are held; set out new categories of leases for conservation, recreation and even communication sites, in addition to those for grazing or cropland, and ease the process for allowing multiple leases on the same state parcel, provided there is no conflict.

State House and Senate Resource committees approved the new rules, which were drawn up by the Idaho Land Board last year, on Wednesday. The rules go into effect immediately.

George Bacon, head of the Department of Lands, said he was optimistic they will help end strife that began in the 1990s when environmentalists bid for leases, only to lose even after offering more money than ranchers.

Groups such as Western Watersheds Project, which seeks to end public-land grazing, have taken Idaho to court and won, on grounds the Land Board is constitutionally required to get maximum income from 1.8 million acres of state endowment grazing land for public schools.

Idaho has repeatedly lost money on grazing lands but in 2008 reported a profit of $213,358 on revenues of $1,570,109.

Bacon called the new system "more transparent, and it makes it more honest." He said the new rules are also aimed at reducing costly paperwork that has cut into endowment income in recent years.

"The old process was resulting in administrative inefficiency for the department, uncertainty for the lease applicants and litigation for both of them," Bacon said.

The Idaho Cattle Association objected to the rules but eventually agreed after demanding several changes Wednesday. Among those changes were provisions to forbid lease bidders from saying they'll graze an allotment without actually intending to do so; requiring Idaho to renew expiring, uncontested leases when there were no concerns about past management, and dumping a plan let the Land Board decide rental rates.

Association President Carl Ellsworth, who runs a ranch in Leadore in central Idaho, said his group can live with the new rules, at least for now.

"I think the changes in the rules give enough flexibility to our traditional users and allow the Land Board to look at other options," Ellsworth said.

He declined to comment on a possible state constitutional amendment that some in his group have discussed as a means of better preserving the ranching industry's access to grazing leases. Such an amendment would have to win two-thirds of the state House and Senate to make the November 2010 ballot.

The rule changes won by the cattle association could be grounds for a Washington state environmentalist to refile claims stemming from a grazing lease lawsuit. Gordon Younger sued Idaho in U.S. District Court after he was the high bidder on seven Idaho leases, but still lost to livestock owners. He later settled the case for $50,000 in legal fees — and a provision that called for the Legislature to approve these new rules.

Idaho is failing to collect taxes while cutting education

Sometimes the logic that Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter and the Idaho Legislature use to cut state government eludes us. Lawmakers are preparing to slash state spending dramatically in both the current budget year and in fiscal year 2011. The Legislature’s revenue projection committee recommended a budget of $2.29 billion for next year. That’s 6.9 percent less than the governor’s forecast, which was in turn $83 million less than state economist Mike Ferguson’s estimate.

And yet the state is foregoing $250 million in tax revenue because it won’t spend the money to collect it.

Tax Commission Chairman Royce Chigbrow told the Legislature’s Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee Wednesday that Idaho is losing that quarter of a billion dollars in taxes that haven’t been paid.

These are not new taxes, mind you. These are taxes that Idahoans legally owe under the current code.

Getting that money requires auditors and investigators, but the state has cut Chigbrow’s audit staff and obliged those still on the payroll to take furloughs.

And that’s just the tip of the iceberg. Welfare and Medicaid fraud investigators at the Idaho Department of Health and Welfare have been furloughed too.

Partly as a consequence, at the tax commission there’s been a 20 percent increase in “no pay and partial pay returns,” Chigbrow said, a significant decrease in the quarterly estimated payments required by law, and suspicious filings and non-filings.

Meanwhile, lawmakers are preparing to slash the state public school budget by as much as $130 million.

That’s outrageous. For starters, Otter should have exempted the tax commission and the fraud investigators at Health and Welfare and the attorney general’s office from furloughs. The state can’t recover money when the folks who do that job are sitting at home on the couch.

On top of that, this budget year the tax commission has eliminated 10 jobs and held 30 more open. A year ago, the agency laid off 47 temporary auditors and collectors who helped generate $7.5 million annually. That was seven times what was saved by the layoffs.

In all, 58 people lost their jobs at the tax commission a year ago. Those layoffs, furloughs, reduced wages and operating cost reductions saved all of $1.1 million.

(Since then, the agency has hired 31 temps who’ve recovered $5.8 million, according to Chigbrow.)

So here’s a thought: Job One in an economic downturn ought to be for the state to collect the revenue to which it’s entitled by law. And the resources should have been in place to do that before a single state employee was laid off.

House should pass Senate health bill

A message to House Democrats: This is your moment of truth. You can do the right thing and pass the Senate health care bill. Or you can look for an easy way out, make excuses and fail the test of history.

Paul Krugman

Last month’s Republican victory in the Massachusetts special election means that Democrats can’t send a modified health care bill back to the Senate. That’s a shame because the bill that would have emerged from House-Senate negotiations would have been better than the bill the Senate has already passed. But the Senate bill is much, much better than nothing. And all that has to happen to make it law is for the House to pass the same bill, and send it to President Obama’s desk.

Right now, Nancy Pelosi, the speaker of the House, says that she doesn’t have the votes to pass the Senate bill. But there is no good alternative.

Some are urging Democrats to scale back their proposals in the hope of gaining Republican support. But anyone who thinks that would work must have spent the past year living on another planet.

The fact is that the Senate bill is a centrist document, which moderate Republicans should find entirely acceptable. In fact, it’s very similar to the plan Mitt Romney introduced in Massachusetts just a few years ago. Yet it has faced lock-step opposition from the GOP, which is determined to prevent Democrats from achieving any successes. Why would this change now that Republicans think they’re on a roll?

Alternatively, some call for breaking the health care plan into pieces so that the Senate can vote the popular pieces into law. But anyone who thinks that would work hasn’t paid attention to the actual policy issues.

Think of health care reform as being like a three-legged stool. You would, rightly, ridicule anyone who proposed saving money by leaving off one or two of the legs. Well, those who propose doing only the popular pieces of health care reform deserve the same kind of ridicule. Reform won’t work unless all the essential pieces are in place.

Suppose, for example, that Congress took the advice of those who want to ban insurance discrimination on the basis of medical history, and stopped there. What would happen next? The answer, as any health care economist will tell you, is that if Congress didn’t simultaneously require that healthy people buy insurance, there would be a “death spiral”: healthier Americans would choose not to buy insurance, leading to high premiums for those who remain, driving out more people, and so on.

And if Congress tried to avoid the death spiral by requiring that healthy Americans buy insurance, it would have to offer financial aid to lower-income families to make that insurance affordable — aid at least as generous as that in the Senate bill. There just isn’t any way to do reform on a smaller scale.

So reaching out to Republicans won’t work, and neither will trying to pass only the crowd-pleasing pieces of reform. What about the suggestion that Democrats use reconciliation — the Senate procedure for finalizing budget legislation, which bypasses the filibuster — to enact health reform?

That’s a real option, which may become necessary (and could be used to improve the Senate bill after the fact). But reconciliation, which is basically limited to matters of taxing and spending, probably can’t be used to enact many important aspects of reform. In fact, it’s not even clear if it could be used to ban discrimination based on medical history.

Finally, some Democrats want to just give up on the whole thing.

That would be an act of utter political folly. It wouldn’t protect Democrats from charges that they voted for “socialist” health care — remember, both houses of Congress have already passed reform. All it would do is solidify the public perception of Democrats as hapless and ineffectual.

And anyway, politics is supposed to be about achieving something more than your own re-election.

America desperately needs health care reform; it would be a betrayal of trust if Democrats fold simply because they hope (wrongly) that this would slightly reduce their losses in the midterm elections.

Now, part of Democrats’ problem since last month’s special election has been that they have been waiting in vain for leadership from the White House, where Mr. Obama has conspicuously failed to rise to the occasion.

But members of Congress, who were sent to Washington to serve the public, don’t have the right to hide behind the president’s passivity.

Bear in mind that the horrors of health insurance — outrageous premiums, coverage denied to those who need it most and dropped when you actually get sick — will get only worse if reform fails, and insurance companies know that they’re off the hook. And voters will blame politicians who, when they had a chance to do something, made excuses instead.

Ladies and gentlemen, the nation is waiting. Stop whining, and do what needs to be done.

OTHER VIEWS

Here’s what Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

... a bleak January for Otter

Post Register, Idaho Falls

At first glance, the stories appear unrelated: On Friday, Post Register reporter Nick Draper broke the news that Idaho Falls City Councilwoman Sharon Parry had signed onto Democratic gubernatorial candidate Keith Allred’s campaign. Four years ago, Parry chaired current Republican Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter’s electoral efforts in Bonneville County. What a difference one term can make.

“He lacks the connection that a governor should have with the state’s citizens — that connection is critical for great leadership,” Parry, a longtime Republican, told Draper.

On Sunday, Idaho Statesman reporter Cynthia Sewell detailed how the Otter administration has spent nearly $70,000 since June on seven ceremonies celebrating road repairs. Those photo-ops came at a time when the governor’s office was planning an unprecedented midyear holdback to public schools, continued reductions for higher education, and the phase-out of public television, the Parks Department and the state agency that enforces human rights laws.

At a time when “every penny counts,” the Otter administration spent thousands on ribbons to be cut and travel and lodging expenses for state officials.

Rigby Republican JoAn Wood, who chairs the House Transportation Committee, felt so strongly about the “governor’s signature events,” as Otter’s office labeled them, that she took to repeating herself. “I am appalled. I am appalled,” Wood told Sewall.

She’s not the only one. Aspects of Otter’s governance the past 12 months have alienated friends and foes alike.

Otter’s repeated attempts to raise the fuel tax angered his conservative base. That same ham-fisted, inconsistent and ultimately unsuccessful effort irritated moderates who agreed with Otter on the need for additional road and bridge repair funding.

The doomed effort to kill Idaho’s Parks Department peeled off outdoors enthusiasts.

The planned death of public TV motivated former Superintendent of Public Instruction Jerry Evans, a Republican, to go public with his distaste for that idea.

And the governor’s insistence that public schools endure a $135 million cut next year is amazing to those who understand that in reaching this conclusion Otter is: A) underselling his chief economist’s budget forecast by $83 million; and B) ignoring a Tax Commission report that details how a $10 million investment in auditors would result in a $65 million net gain in unpaid income taxes next year.

Even current Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna, not exactly a liberal, describes Otter’s proposed budget as harmful to the 275,000 Idaho children who attend public school.

Respected former Republican State Sen. Laird Noh of Kimberly was the first to leave Otter’s fold, having signed on with Allred at the onset of his campaign. Given this recent news — Parry’s defection and the $70,000 spent superfluously at a time when everybody else is pinching pennies — we ought to be wondering one thing: Who’s next?

THE LIGHTER SIDE OF POLITICS

Doonesbury

By Garry Trudeau

Mallard Fillmore

By Bruce Tinsley

The fat cats behind the first lady’s anti-obesity drive

Behind every seemingly good deed in the Obama White House, there's a deep-pocketed, left-wing special interest. Take first lady Michelle Obama's crusade against childhood obesity. Who really benefits from the ostensible push for improved nutrition in the schools? Think purple - as in the purple-shirted army of the Service Employees International Union. Big Labor bigwigs don't care about slimming your kids' waistslines. They care about beefing up their membership rolls and fattening their coffers.

Mrs. Obama earned a State of the Union address shout-out from her hubby for taking on the weighty public policy issue of students' physical fitness. The East Wing is now in full campaign mode -leaning on the nation's mayors, traveling with the surgeon general and meeting with Congress and cabinet members to reauthorize the Lyndon Johnson-era Child Nutrition Act, which provides government-subsidized meals to more than 30 million children. It's part of the Obama administration's self-proclaimed "cradle-to-career" agenda for America's youth.

Michelle Malkin

For decades, school administrators have criticized this Great Society relic for outgrowing its initial conception. The program was originally created to use up post-World War II food surpluses. In the late 1970s, New York principal Lewis Lyman skewered it as a federal "boondoggle" in a seminal essay for the education journal Phi Delta Kappan. But Democrats demagogued the GOP's responsible attempts at financial reform during the Clinton years as "starving the children."

While spending on youth nutrition and wellness have ballooned, so have the kids. Nearly one-third of U.S. children are now overweight or obese. The feds spend $15 billion a year on nutrition in schools; the White House wants at least a $1 billion increase this coming fiscal year.

The well-intended program to feed poor kids has morphed into an untouchable universal entitlement with a powerful school-lunch lobbying coalition of Department of Agriculture bureaucrats, food-service industry executives and union bosses. Enter the SEIU. Headed by the White House's most frequent visitor, Andy Stern, the powerful labor organization representing government and private service employees has an insatiable appetite for power and growth. Working alongside the first lady, the SEIU unveiled a major ad campaign this week demanding reauthorizing and funding increases in the Child Nutrition Act.

What's in it for Big Labor? SEIU Executive Vice President Mitch Ackerman explains: "A more robust expansion of school lunch, breakfast, summer feeding, child care and WIC (the federal Women, Infants and Children nutrition program) is critical to reducing hunger, ending childhood obesity and providing fair wages and healthcare for front line food service workers."

There are 400,000 workers who prepare and serve lunch to American school-children. SEIU represents tens of thousands of those workers and is trying to unionize many more. "More robust expansion" of the federal school-lunch law means a mandate for higher wages, increased benefits and government-guaranteed health insurance coverage (the more luxurious the better now that SEIU has negotiated its Cadillac Tax exemption from the Democrats' health care takeover bill).

The SEIU's front group, "Campaign for Quality Services," is clamoring for "the right to sick days and training" for school food-services workers. Never ones to let a crisis go unexploited, SEIU sent its members to lobby in front of Chicago public schools last year and scare parents into supporting their labor agenda. They accused the school system of "putting our kids at risk" during flu season by resisting the SEIU's sick day coverage demands. "Without sick days, I can't take a day off, so I have to bring germs to school," an SEIU janitor lamented.

Along the same lines, they are casting food-services workers as indispensable saviors. The union has rallied behind P.R. efforts casting them as superheroes "serving justice, and serving lunch." Opposing the union means opposing children's health. SEIU propaganda features New Jersey school cafeteria workers like Leslie

Williams of Orange, N.J., lamenting: "I love my work, but it's getting harder to prepare nutritious meals on the low budget we're working with. ... It breaks my heart to see a child who's hungry. As I see it, part of my job is to make sure the kids are well-fed."

Actually, that's the primary job of parents. Mom? Dad? Remember them? But the more responsibility we demand of parents, the less power and influence SEIU bosses are able to grab. Unionized school dietician and nutrition jobs are booming. And in addition to school breakfast and lunch, the SEIU is now pushing subsidized dinner plans and summer food service to create a "stronger nutrition safety net." Translation: Perpetual employment for big government and its public employee union au pairs.

Cede the children, feed the state.

Defending the long gray line

I've had high hopes for Adm. Mike Mullen ever since I learned that his mom was an assistant to Jimmy Durante and his dad was a Hollywood press agent whose clients included Bob Hope, Ann-Margret, Phyllis Diller, Jimmy Stewart, Carol Burnett and Dyan Cannon.

That's a dream USO tour.

On Tuesday, the craggy chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff showed that a lifetime in the military has not knocked all the showbiz pizzazz out of him

"I cannot escape being troubled by the fact that we have in place a policy which forces young men and women to lie about who they are in order to defend their fellow citizens," Mullen said during the Senate Armed Services Committee hearing on dropping the archaic "don't ask, don't tell" policy. "For me personally, it comes down to integrity — theirs as individuals and ours as an institution."

In heartfelt testimony to the senators, Mullen said: "I have served with homosexuals since 1968." Acknowledging that they face death daily, he said that "putting individuals in a position that every single day they wonder whether today's going to be the day, and devaluing them in that regard, just is inconsistent with us as an institution."

In 1993, when Bill Clinton tried to do the right thing by allowing gays and lesbians in the military to be themselves, a predecessor of Mullen's, Colin Powell, directed the embarrassing public and retrograde rebellion by the generals against it, leading a conga line of heavy brass over to the White House to tell the president not to exercise his authority as commander in chief and order an end to one of the last vestiges of discrimination in the armed forces. Powell helped shape the gutless compromise that those who protect our country must live by a code of honor even while they're legally bound to be less than honest.

Still traumatized by the 1993 pummeling Clinton endured, the Obama White House is inching forward, like soldiers under attack crawling on their bellies through the dirt, trying to avoid friendly fire from gay groups that want the law changed now and hostile fire from conservatives that want the law left alone.

Before Admiral Mullen and Secretary of Defense Bob Gates even made their opening statements, John McCain went on the attack against overturning the policy. Noting that gays and lesbians had served "admirably" and even given their lives, he said: "I honor their sacrifice, and I honor them." Just as long as they deny their identity and pretend to be something they're not.

The conservative senator who has always been known for honor and clarity cited "vast complexities" as a reason not to change the hypocritical policy, whatever that means, as well as the fact that "the Senate vigorously debated it in 1993." (One complexity was our failure to realize that, with two wars in the Middle East, we might need some talented gay translators fluent in Arabic and Farsi.)

Yeah, nothing's changed since 1993.

Even Powell now admits that "we definitely should re-evaluate it." And Roland Burris, the Illinois senator, reminded his colleagues that it took Harry Truman to integrate the services: "At one time, my uncles and members of my race couldn't even serve in the military, and we moved to this point where they're some of the best and brightest that we've had — generals and even now the commander in chief is of African-American heritage."

McCain jumped on his even-keeled fellow Republican, Bob Gates, and accused him of usurping Congressional authority by saying the military was pre-emptively preparing for a repeal of the law. I guess the former war hero doesn't believe in military readiness.

The Arizona senator said the law was "imperfect but effective," even though Admiral Mullen's military journal, Joint Force Quarterly, called it a "costly failure" and denied that the cohesion of the forces would be hurt if gays and lesbians could be open about their sexuality, as they are in Britain and Canada.

Three years ago, McCain told a group of college students that he would drop his objections on the issue "the day that the leadership of the military comes to me and says, 'Senator, we ought to change the policy.'"

But, on Tuesday, when that day came, McCain ignored the top brass and found his own military emeritus. He waved a letter at Gates and Mullen, saying it was "signed by over 1,000 former generals and flag officers who have weighed in" against changing the policy.

Senator Saxby Chambliss of Georgia said that if they began to loosen one restriction, others might unravel, leading to a louché atmosphere brimming with "alcohol use, adultery, fraternization and body art." Don't ask, don't tat.

In 1993, Sam Nunn, the conservative Georgia Democrat who was the leader of the Armed Services Committee, famously gave lawmakers a tour of a submarine and its showers to show what close quarters sailors endured, implying that it would be impossible to separate the men from the men if gays were out.

So it was a welcome sign of how things have changed that the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, who stepped up to torpedo the hypocrisy, is an admiral.

The TV You Love...For Less

They may look alike, but not all TV services are created equal.

Sure, the actual TV content isn't much different from one provider to another, and most of us enjoy the same shows and channels. DIRECTV's comedies aren't any funnier than those on DISH Network, their dramas aren't any more action-packed than ours. The difference between DISH Network and DIRECTV isn't visible on screen – but it jumps right out at you on your bill.

Lower prices

With DISH Network, you'll still get the entertainment you love but you'll pay less than with DIRECTV or cable. In fact, right now you can save $180 in your first year with DISH Network. Our popular package with over 120 favorite channels is now just $24.99/mo for twelve months (with Agreement). HBO and Showtime are free for 3 months, plus you'll get free Standard Professional Installation and free upgrades to DVR and HD DVR receivers. And because DISH Network has the lowest all-digital prices available every day nationwide, your savings will continue long after the promotional period is over.

Technology that can't be beat

Price is a compelling reason to switch, but DISH Network is also attractive because our exclusive features are simply outstanding. We are the industry leader in technology and offer award-winning DVRs with no equipment to buy. The DISH Network sophisticated dual-tuner receivers double your DVR power with Multi-Room View technology: one box that connects to two TVs so that you can record a show in one room and watch it in another. You can't get this from DIRECTV.

Exclusive features

Our enormous hard drives – the biggest in the business – let you create your own video library which you can manage anywhere, anytime with our advanced DISH Remote Access. It's the industry's most comprehensive remote DVR manager. This is such a popular feature that we've recently created a separate iPhone™ “app” just for remote DVR access.

The most HD

DISH Network delivers over 150 HD channels – more than cable, more than DIRECTV – and our 1080p HD technology provides the best HD picture available anywhere. If you haven't made the leap to HD yet, no problem: our standard-definition selection is equally comprehensive and includes an impressive Latino lineup, the most International channels and thousands of video-on-demand options.

Reliability

You'll enjoy peace of mind with our signal which is 99.9% reliable, and support you can get in our Welcome Center created especially for new DISH Network customers. The results are clear: in a recent survey by the American Customer Satisfaction Index,* DISH Network gets the lowest number of consumer complaints.

Councilman says Sun Valley's economy among worst in U.S.

Study prompts calls to hire financial consultant

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

KETCHUM — Sun Valley City Councilman Bob Youngman has been busy since he was elected last fall — busy wondering what is wrong with the resort community's economy, and busy seeking ways to turn the downturn around.

On Monday, he brought a presentation to the Ketchum

City Council that was heavy with details about exactly how bad it is.

"The performance we see here is on par with one of the worst performers in the United States," Youngman said.

He said that — accounting for losses in local option taxes and a decline in annual growth of between two and five percent in Ketchum and Sun Valley — the cities have seen a return of about negative 200 percent in the last 15 years, or about $225 million to $375 million less.

"All that money is gone, it's down the river, it'll never come back," he said. "To allow this to happen is negligent on the part of both the government and the community."

He compared the Sun Valley/Ketchum area to similar Western resort economies, including Vail, Colo.; Aspen, Colo.; Steamboat Springs, Colo.; Breckenridge, Colo.; Jackson

Hole, Wyo.; and Park City, Utah.

"Is the (tourism) industry the problem? The answer is no, it's something else," Youngman said. Although all these resort towns have had downturns in the last few years, all have fared better than Sun Valley and Ketchum, with Vail and Aspen leading the pack.

Most people don't fly into Aspen, he said, so a distant airport isn't a major component of the problem. In that city, moderately priced condominiums have been converted to higher-end condos, and economy hotel lodging has been booted in favor of luxury lodging. Although the number of beds is down, the amount earned by the resort and the city is up.

Obama pushes energy plan GOP may support

By Matthew Daly and Phillip Elliott
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — President Obama on Thursday pushed energy proposals designed to attract political allies and opponents alike, calling for increased spending on ethanol production and new technology to limit pollution from the use of coal.

Obama has begun tailoring his energy policy to GOP-supported ideas, starting in his State of the Union address last week with calls for offshore oil drilling opposed by environmentalists and a bigger role for nuclear power.

The first-term president has begun promoting his energy policy as a job-creating boost to the economy.

"Now, there's no reason that we shouldn't be able to work together in a bipartisan way to get this done," Obama said during a bipartisan meeting with governors in the White House's State Dining Room. "It's good for our national security and reducing our dependence on foreign oil.

It's good for our economy, because it will produce jobs."

He spoke as the White House released presidential task force recommendations calling on both Washington and the private sector to spend more money on biofuels like ethanol. The group said the nation likely will fall short of goals Congress has set for creating more environmentally friendly energy.

At the same time, the Environmental Protection Agency issued a new rule requiring U.S. companies to produce at least 13 billion gallons of renewable fuels this year — up from about 11.1 billion in 2009. The congressional goal is 36 billions gallons of renewable fuel by 2022.

EPA Administrator Lisa Jackson said the new rules would reduce oil dependence by million of barrels a year and "help bring new economic opportunity to millions of Americans, particularly in rural America."

In his meeting with the governors, Obama also announced a new task force

Ameristar Casinos narrows losses in 4Q

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

Ameristar Casinos, which owns and operates Cactus Petes and Horseshu casinos in Jackpot, Nev., said Wednesday that the company narrowed its loss in the fourth-quarter, but missed analysts expectations.

During the quarter, the casino operator recorded a loss of $63.3 million, or $1.10 a share, compared with a loss of $101.1 million, or $1.77, during the fourth-quarter last year.

Excluding one-time items, Ameristar earned 11 cents a share, a penny short of Wall Street's expectations.

Home is where your small business tax deduction is

Many people who received buyouts and severance packages last year used the money to start home-based businesses. Now, they'll want to take tax deductions for their home offices.

The deduction for using part of your home for business purposes — popularly known as the home office deduction — used to be something scary. It was widely believed that taking the deduction would automatically land you an IRS audit. Tax advisers say that's no longer the case, especially since there are so many businesses being run out of homes, garages and apartments. But if you don't follow the rules and try to take too big a deduction, you could still draw the attention of IRS employees.

GET TO KNOW THE IRS RULES

IRS Publication 587, Business Use of Your Home, spells out the rules under which you can take a deduction for using your home as your office, manufacturing facility or warehouse.

Your home office should be used:

- Exclusively and regularly as your principal place of business, or
- Exclusively and regularly as a place where you meet or deal with patients, clients or customers in the normal course of your trade or business.

"Exclusively" refers to the requirement that the part of your home that you use for business cannot be used for any personal reason. The IRS doesn't require that it be a complete room in a house, or that the space you use be partitioned. It does require that your home office or workspace be a "separately identifiable space."

If your computer and papers are spread out on the dining room table and you put them away when it's time to eat, you can't take the deduction. But if you have a corner of your family room that is clearly a home office, and your kids don't use it to do their homework, then you can qualify for the deduction.

The structure that you use the deduction for doesn't have to be the one you live in. A garage, shed or barn that you use as a studio, for manufacturing or for storage can also qualify. But, you can't also park your car in the garage, or house your lawn mower and other gardening equipment in the shed.

Obama prescribes election plan to Democrats: Lead

By Ben Feller
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — In a blunt election prescription for his own skittish party, President Obama on Wednesday implored Democratic leaders to swing big, be honest with an angry public and expose any obstructionism by Republicans.

“We still have to lead,” Obama told Democratic senators in a pep talk that unfolded on live TV.

That line alone revealed how much the political dynamic has changed in just two weeks, as Senate Democrats watched their voting numbers slip from 60 to 59 in a special Massachusetts election that sent shudders through the party. That one vote cost them the muscle to overcome Republican stalling tactics, forcing the Democratic president to adapt in hopes of salvaging this year and his agenda.

His advice: Get results, and this year’s midterm elections will work out fine.

Let policy be our politics, Obama told the senators, and make sure everyone knows about petty acts by the opposition.

Obama’s mission is to stiffen the resolve of his own party as he pursues an agenda that is consistent — creating jobs, overhauling health insurance, regulating Wall Street — yet is also cast in more personal, real-life terms.

So Obama went into detail in offering tactical guidance to a room full of senators with decades of election experience, including a handful who face difficult campaigns this year and got most of the camera time with Obama.

The president said lawmakers should do more business in the public eye; tell voters honestly that some problems will take a long time to solve; stop listening to cable TV shows that obsess about Washington’s politics; make a case for health care reform without getting bogged down by insider minutia, and call out Republicans when gamesmanship holds up votes.

Obama said he’s still confident the American people will re-elect leaders who do the right thing and explain it well. The 2010 agenda is be the topic Thursday when Obama meets with Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, D-Nev., and House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif., at the White House.

ANOTHER BLOW FOR TOYOTA

Auto maker faces U.S., Japan probe on Prius brakes

By Yuri Kageyama
Associated Press writer

TOKYO — Toyota faced fresh doubts about braking problems in its prized Prius, with complaints ballooning to about 180 in the U.S. and Japan, as the automaker sought to salvage its tattered reputation amid massive global recalls over gas-pedal problems in eight other models.

In Washington, U.S. Transportation Secretary Ray LaHood startled the public with a comment, which he later retracted, that Americans should park their recalled Toyotas unless driving to dealers for accelerator repairs.

Toyota, scheduled to report quarterly earnings later today, declined comment on LaHood’s remarks. It also said it will explain the Prius braking problems. Details were not immediately available.

Doubts about Prius brakes are growing rapidly amid Japanese media reports that Toyota has been repairing electronic problems with the brake systems in cars that went on sale from last month. That raised the question of what was being done to fix the problems in thousands of new Prius cars already on the roads.

The remodeled gas-electric Prius hybrid, which went on sale in the U.S. and Japan in May 2009, was not part of the most recent recall over gas pedals, numbering about 4.5 million vehicles around the world.

Japan’s transport ministry has ordered the company to investigate complaints of brake problems with the hybrid. LaHood has said his department was looking into brake problems.

“We are asking Toyota to look into the matter, including possibly making a recall on the Prius,” Transport Minister Seiji Maehara said.

The problems with the Prius are another blow to Toyota in the U.S. — its biggest market — and an embarrassment in the automaker’s loyal home market of Japan.

Company officials had repeatedly said cars in Japan weren’t covered by its overseas recalls because they used Japanese supplier Denso, hinting the world’s biggest automaker was doing a better job maintaining quality control in Japan.

The Prius, the world’s best-selling hybrid vehicle, has been extremely popular in Japan because of government incentives that made green cars tax-free.

“The latest Prius troubles have really damaged Toyota’s brand. Uncertainty over the Prius troubles will only prompt more consumers to dump Toyota,” said Roichi Saito, auto analyst with Mizuho Investors Securities Co. in Tokyo.

Toyota spokeswoman Ririko Takeuchi said Thursday the automaker was aware of 77 complaints in Japan about braking problems for the Prius — just a day after the Japanese government had confirmed 14 complaints. About 100 complaints over Prius brakes have been filed in the U.S.

Toyota shares tumbled on the Tokyo Stock Exchange, falling 3.5 percent Thursday morning to 3,280 yen ($36).

In the U.S., harried dealers began receiving parts to repair defective gas pedals in millions of vehicles and said they’d be extending their hours deep into the night to try and catch up. Toyota said that would solve the problem — which it said was extremely rare — of cars unaccountably accelerating.

Confusion the winner in Illinois governor primaries

The Associated Press

CHICAGO — The primary election that was expected to launch a political battle in President Obama’s home state instead left Democrats and Republicans squabbling among themselves Wednesday over governor’s races that were virtually tied.

Gov. Pat Quinn claimed victory in the Democratic primary over Comptroller Dan Hynes, despite a margin of less than 1 percent. He got a congratulatory telephone call from Obama on Wednesday.

“It’s time to end the fighting,” Quinn said as he thanked voters at a Chicago train station. “I don’t believe we are benefiting in Illinois, certainly in the Democratic party, by having fighting.”

Hynes has not conceded, but scheduled an “important announcement” about the race this morning. His campaign did not return repeated messages seeking more information.

On the Republican side, Sen. Bill Brady led by just a few hundred votes over Sen. Kirk Dillard. Dillard said a victory by Brady, a downstate conservative with little support in the Chicago area, would hurt the GOP’s chances of reclaiming the governor’s office.

“If he’s the nominee, he’ll have a much, much more difficult time than me beating Pat Quinn,” Dillard said Wednesday at a Republican “unity” break-fast.

Illinois Republicans hope to capture the governor’s post as well as Obama’s former Senate seat by exploiting Democratic turmoil and scandal, including the arrest and ouster of former Gov. Rod Blagojevich.

GOP victories in an increasingly Democratic state would be another blow to Obama, already stinging from the Republican victory in a Massachusetts special election for Edward Kennedy’s former Senate seat.

Intelligence official: US believes Mehsud is dead

WASHINGTON (AP) — U.S. counterterrorism officials believe Pakistani Taliban leader Hakimullah Mehsud is dead following a missile attack last month, a senior intelligence official said Wednesday in the strongest signal that Washington has offered about the militant’s fate.

Neither Pakistan nor the U.S. has officially confirmed the death of Mehsud, who commands an al-Qaida-allied movement that is blamed for scores of suicide bombings and is suspected in a deadly attack on a CIA base in Afghanistan late last year.

Mehsud’s death would be the latest successful strike against suspected terrorists by the U.S. and its allies. The U.S. has recently stepped up attacks from unmanned aircraft in Pakistan, and a closer collaboration with Yemen has led to recent airstrikes there. President Obama highlighted the increasing success of such attacks in his State of the Union address last week.

The U.S. intelligence official, speaking on condition of anonymity to discuss sensitive security matters, said the conclusion that Mehsud is dead represents the best collective information of U.S. intelligence agencies. Since the attack, authorities have said they were growing increasingly confident Mehsud was dead. The official would not say what evidence the U.S. had gathered.

Brown demands to be sworn in to Senate earlier than planned

By Glen Johnson
Associated Press writer

BOSTON — Massachusetts Republican Scott Brown changed course and demanded he be sworn in to replace the late Sen. Edward M. Kennedy on Thursday, an accelerated timetable that conservatives had been clamoring for and one that Democrats quickly accepted — and had already been moving to accommodate.

Brown said he wanted to be present for unspecified votes, and his swearing-in would give the GOP 41 votes in the Senate — the precise number it needs to sustain a filibuster of Democratic initiatives.

Jim Manley, a spokesman for Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid, said he expected a ceremony at 5 p.m. today.

“If that’s what he wants to do, I expect he’ll be sworn in as early as (Thursday) afternoon,” Manley said.

The demand reversed Brown’s earlier declaration that he did not want to be sworn in until Feb. 11, a grace period he said he needed to hire a staff and prepare for his new responsibilities.

That timetable was reiterated Tuesday morning on Brown’s Facebook page.

The change also followed criticism from conservative radio hosts and newspaper columnists about what one dubbed a “three-week victory lap” since the state senator staged an upset to win the Jan. 19 special election to replace Kennedy, who died of brain cancer. The conservative-leaning Drudge Report immediately linked to Brown’s demand letter, generating such traffic that would-be readers could not open it.

“While Sen.-elect Brown had tentatively planned to be sworn into office on Feb. 11, he has been advised that there are a number of votes scheduled prior to that date. For that reason, he wants certification to occur immediately,” Brown counsel Daniel Winslow wrote in a letter to Gov. Deval Patrick, a Democrat.

“As he is the duly elected U.S. senator from the commonwealth of Massachusetts, he is entitled to be seated now,” Winslow added.

The attorney demanded action by 11 a.m. Thursday, so the certification could be forwarded to Senate officials in time for Brown to be sworn in Thursday afternoon.

Interim Sen. Paul Kirk, appointed by Patrick to temporarily fill the seat, plans a final speech on the Senate floor at about 3:45 p.m. to “discuss the urgent need to move beyond political polarization.”

Hours before Winslow’s letter, Secretary of State William F. Galvin delivered official copies of the election results to the Governor’s Council. And Patrick’s staff announced the governor would sign Brown’s election certificate in the council’s presence — as is required by law — during a ceremony at 9:30 a.m. Thursday.

After Winslow released his letter, the governor reiterated his plan to hold a midmorning ceremony.

“This will ensure that

Sen.-elect Brown’s request to receive the final paperwork by 11 a.m. tomorrow is fulfilled,” Patrick spokesman Kyle Sullivan said in a statement.

Brown planned to resign his state Senate seat and immediately head to Washington once he received the certification, according to senior adviser Eric Fehrnstrom. The Senate had votes Thursday but then was out of session until Monday.

One vote where Brown would make a difference is the Senate’s consideration of union lawyer Craig Becker to become a member of the National Labor Relations Board.

Can Republicans win control of Congress?

By Liz Sidoti
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Just weeks ago, it seemed inconceivable the Republicans could win control of Congress this fall.

Not anymore.

Almost by the day, Republicans are sensing fresh opportunities to pick up ground. Just Wednesday, former Indiana Sen. Dan Coats announced he would try to reclaim his old seat from Democrat Evan Bayh, who barely a year ago had been a finalist to be Barack Obama’s running mate. And Republicans nationwide are still celebrating Scott Brown’s January upset to take Edward Kennedy’s former seat in Massachusetts.

A Republican takeover on Capitol Hill is still a long shot. But strategists in both parties now see at least narrow paths by which the GOP could win the House and, if the troubled environment for Democrats deteriorates further, possibly even the Senate.

“Democrats have got their hands full trying to navigate through unprecedented economic turmoil and two wars,” says former Sen. Bob Kerrey, D-Neb. He suggests the gloomy talk within the party is overstated and the Democrats are still likely to retain control, but he adds: “There’s no question that there’s anger out there.”

With nine months to go, 2010 is shaping up in one sense to be a traditional midterm election for a new president: The out-of-power party is poised to gain seats in both houses. The question now is whether it will be a historic election with Republicans actually seizing power in Congress.

The Republicans would have to gain 40 seats in the 435-member House, ten in the 100-member Senate — a tall order no matter how upset voters are. But still. ...

In the Senate, two Democratic seats are all but gone.

North Dakota’s Byron Dorgan is retiring, and the Democrats don’t have anyone to challenge the Republican, Gov. John Hoeven. Democrats also failed to recruit their top candidate in Delaware. Vice President Joe Biden’s son eschewed a run against Republican Mike Castle. New Castle County executive Chris Coons, a Democrat, got in the race Wednesday but he’s expected to face an uphill battle.

For a GOP takeover, incumbent Democrats also would have to lose in Colorado, where appointed Sen. Michael Bennet hasn’t run statewide and faces a primary; Nevada, where Senate Majority Leader Harry Reid is unpopular but has a hefty bank account; Arkansas, where Sen. Blanche Lincoln suffers from representing a GOP-leaning state; Pennsylvania, where party-switching Sen. Arlen Specter is extraordinarily vulnerable, and Illinois, where a dogfight is certain for President Obama’s old seat.

Republicans would have to hold on to all the Senate seats they have now, hardly a sure thing. And the GOP also would have to beat incumbents in New York, where no Republican has emerged to challenge appointed Sen. Kirsten Gillibrand, and Connecticut, where Democrat Richard Blumenthal is comfortably leading all GOP contenders in polls.

If all that somehow happens, the tipping point could be either in Indiana or in California.

Bayh

“Every state is now in play,” California Sen. Barbara Boxer said one day after the Massachusetts election. It was a frank recognition that no Democrat is safe — not even a three-term liberal with bunches of money in a solidly Democratic state.

Not coincidentally, when Obama had a televised question-and-answer session with Democrats on Wednesday, the senators given prominent face time included Boxer, Reid, Bayh, Bennet, Lincoln, Gillibrand and Specter.

“It would be surprising if Democrats lost power,” says former Sen. Bob Graham, D-Fla. “But anything in politics is possible. And if the economy’s still in the tank 60 days out of the election, it’s going to be difficult for Democrats.”

In the House, Democrats hold a 256-178 advantage with one vacancy. But 49 Democrats are in districts that Republican presidential candidate John McCain won in 2008. And many are freshmen who rode into power on Obama’s coattails in an election that saw a voting surge by minorities and youths. Obama won’t be on the ballot this time, and he has a poor track record so far when it comes to turning out his 2008 backers for fellow Democrats.

Possible bellwethers: A GOP wave could be in the offing if Democrats like John Salazar in Colorado, Zack Space in Ohio, John Spratt in South Carolina or Ben

House Republicans have their own challenges.

In more than 50 districts, divisive GOP primaries are certain to drain bank accounts and force Republicans into taking positions that could be troublesome come the general election. In many cases, “tea party” candidates are running to the right of establishment-endorsed Republicans, casting them as too moderate for the party and too cozy with Washington. In other races, Republican candidates are dropping out to run as third party candidates who could siphon votes from the eventual GOP nominee.

To understand why incumbents are nervous, look no further than the persistent 10 percent unemployment rate, the country’s bitterness over Wall Street bailouts and voters’ anti-Washington fervor.

Obama’s party, controlling both the White House and Congress, is likely to feel that fury the most. And it’s defending far more seats than the Republicans.

The Democrats already have faced one monumental setback this year, the GOP Senate victory in the Democratic bastion of Massachusetts. That outcome further energized Republicans and demoralized Democrats. It also fueled hope among Republicans and fear among at least some Democrats that another 1994 may be ahead.

“Something’s happening out there,” said former House Speaker Newt Gingrich, the galvanizing Republican who helped unite the GOP that year when it swept to power in Congress on President Bill Clinton’s watch. “The economy hurts. People are unhappy.”

Norwegian ski team trains for Olympics in Sun Valley

SUN VALLEY — Barbie Crandlemire pointed her cross-country skis down the hill overlooking Trail Creek on the Sun Valley Golf Course.

As she did, three slim men in red suits started uphill, covering the climb quicker than she made her descent.

"They're amazing," Crandlemire said. "They stand out among the other skiers."

The men are members of the Norwegian Nordic cross-country ski team, which traditionally fields the fastest Nordic skiers on earth. Their cardinal-red uniforms have punctuated their appearances on the cross country trails at the Sun Valley Nordic Center during the past week as the team prepares for the 2010 Vancouver Olympic Games, held Feb. 12-18 in Vancouver, British Columbia.

asked Pal Gunnar Mikkelsplass, who won a silver medal at the 1988 Olympics in Calgary. "Because of the bad weather, of course!" he joked, gesturing to the blue skies above him.

The Norwegians, who trained here prior to the 2002 Olympics in Salt Lake City, decided Sun Valley offered the perfect mix of world-class grooming, good weather and seclusion from media and competitors as they prepare for the Vancouver games.

Sun Valley's ski trails sit 3,000 to 4,000 feet higher than the Olympic venue, giving endurance athletes a competitive edge when they return to lower elevations to compete. And racers get four more hours of light in which to train than they would back home in the Land of the Midnight Sun.

"It's perfect here. Very good," said Tord Gjerdalen, who is headed to his second Olympics. "And the people are really nice and polite, always saying, 'Hello.' At home, they just put their head down and keep going."

The presence of the athletes has electrified visitors to the Sun Valley Nordic Center. The sight of racers gliding by the Sun Valley Club brought conversation to a standstill Sunday evening during a sendoff for local Olympians, sending onlookers scurrying to the windows, cameras in hand.

Others, like cross-country skiing enthusiast Nello Busdon, Sun Valley Mayor Wayne Willich and Sun Valley City Councilman Nils Ribi, have happily engaged the Norwegians in conversation around the Norwegians' watering station outside the Sun Valley

Ketchum Ranger District announces winter elk closure

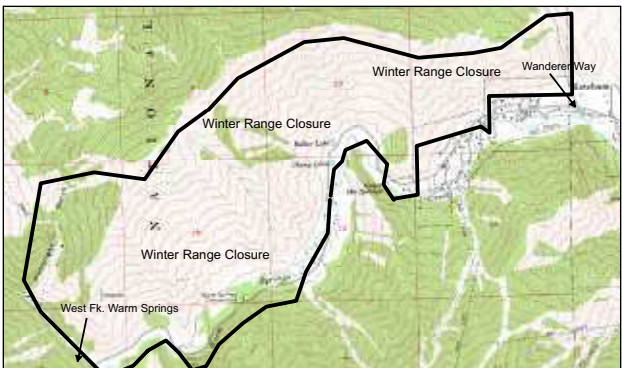

Times-News

The Sawtooth National Forest's Ketchum Ranger District has once again closed an area in the Warm Springs drainage to protect wintering elk and deer.

All National Forest lands from the West Fork of Warm Springs east to Ketchum and north of the Warm Springs road within the drainage were closed Tuesday. The closure will be posted with signs at normal access points.

"This is a yearly closure that is routinely implemented when the presence of wintering big game animals and snow depth indicate that the protection is warranted," said Range Technician Bill Whitaker in a press release. "The closure keeps the animals from expending energy in trying to avoid humans."

Visitors who see any wintering animals in the backcountry should keep their distance and allow the animals a wide berth. Information: 622-5371.

Strap your child on for outdoor adventures

Active parents who want to take their young children hiking, snowshoeing, or cross-country skiing have many choices in the category of kid carriers. A neat new option, the Boba carrier from NAP Inc., is made in Boulder, Colo.

The $99 Boba is a soft-structured carrier, meaning it has no supporting frame. It is essentially a piece of rectangular fabric with foam shoulder straps and a waist belt. All the outer fabric is made of organic cotton.

Boba carriers let you carry a kid close to your body. They work on your front or back, and can hold kids from about 15 pounds to more than 40 pounds.

I've used my Boba (www.bobababycarrier.com) for a few months with our 2-year-old boy. Charlie and I not only hike with the carrier, but we can even slowly run on trails near my home.

When Charlie is secured on my back, the carrier's tight fit and low center of gravity keeps him close. He doesn't bounce too much. He is comfortable for an hour or more, and after a few minutes the pack carries so well that I can forget my 25-pound kid is on my back.

The Boba has no snaps or buttons. Its simple design includes adjustable shoulder straps and a padded belt.

A unique touch, there are foot straps attached to the waist belt where a kid's feet can be secured. The kid can push off and slightly stand for some self support. This allows for a "healthy sitting position" for the child, NAP Inc. touts.

Charlie didn't use the foot straps much. Usually, when I put his feet in the straps he would immediately pull them out. But he was comfortable with his legs dangling. Getting a squirming kid situated in the Boba is a bit difficult at first. You can't see where the straps are if its on your back, and you're reaching and cinching things up with a kid balanced on your back, unless you have some help. After a few tries on our own though, Charlie and I had it nailed.

A potentially sexist comment: I did not feel silly wearing the Boba.

Kid carrier backpacks are fine, and we use them all the time. But some of the soft-side and sling-type carriers my wife has are too feminine for me. Our Boba is gender neutral, low profile and good looking on a mom or a dad.

The Boba comes only in one size and the company says it is designed to fit most parents between five and six feet tall. I am 6-foot-1, and the carrier did feel slightly small for me. The shoulder straps were extended to their max and almost too short, but they worked.

For the passenger, the carrier is said to accommodate kids from 1 to 4 years old. It is well made and may have the strength to carry a 45-pound, 4-year-old kid. But with no frame support, that would be a serious haul for most parents.

I plan to use our Boba with Charlie for at least another year. By then, William, our new baby boy, will be ready to pop in and take his place. We'll hike, and maybe run, the same paths along the creek near our home. Charlie will be on foot by then. William will be secured in the Boba, in a hands-free piggy-back ride as we move unencumbered down the trail.

Hunting trip takes wounded Colorado soldiers to Kansas

By Monica Springer
The Garden City Telegram

GARDEN CITY, Kan. — Soldiers who have been injured spend weeks and months in physical therapy trying to overcome their injuries. And for some, a weekend of hunting and bantering with fellow servicemen helps in the healing process, soldiers said.

The second annual Heartland Heroes Hunt brought 13 soldiers and their families stationed at Fort Carson, Colo., to Garden City for a weekend of hunting and camaraderie.

In all, about 50 people came to Garden City and western Kansas for a weekend of healing, said Tim Telinde. Telinde's step-daughter, Mackenzie Nix, started Heartland Heroes Hunt last year as her senior Buff Project.

The event will become a yearly tradition in Garden City, Telinde said.

It's a tradition that Dave Sterling, from northern California, and Ronald Ryker, from Texas, decided to come back for this year.

Sterling and Ryker were two of several wounded servicemen who came last year from Fort Riley and attended this year and helped with the event.

Sterling lost his right hand in Iraq in 2004 due to a rocket propelled grenade.

Ryker was shot in the calf in Iraq in 2003.

Sterling said the weekend was about healing and learning that having an injury doesn't place limitations on servicemen.

"You'd be surprised what you can do," without a hand or part of a leg, Sterling said.

Sterling spent more than five months in Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, D.C. undergoing treatment and physical therapy.

Ryker was flown to Germany for treatment from Iraq, then flown back to Fort Riley for physical therapy. He said it took 45 days after he was shot to be able to walk on crutches.

Sterling and Ryker, both in the Army, were two of about 30 people who hunted east of Garden City on Saturday morning.

They split up into four groups, then methodically walked through the field looking for birds. Ryker said he cannot run because of his injury and still has trouble walking.

The servicemen walked through the snow in single degree weather on Saturday in search of pheasants. Of the 300 pheasants released at Beavers Game Farm the group shot a little more than 200 birds.

Brandon Daggs, originally from California and now stationed at Fort Carson, spent months without mobility after a form of cancer was found in his throat during his tour in Iraq.

He endured radiation and chemotherapy and lost a good portion of his body weight.

He described the weekend of hunting as amazing.

"It was fun to get out there with the boys," he said.

Now in remission, he said the group of hunters had only planned to hunt on Saturday afternoon. But during lunch Saturday the group decided to go back out into the field.

"It was a really good day," Daggs said. "There's a lot of compassion, hospitality, camaraderie and brotherhood."

The soldiers who took part in Heartland Heroes this year were all male. While they were hunting, their wives had manicures and massages in Garden City and their children completed activities from local businesses.

Daggs said it's good for families to get off of the military post and leave life's stresses behind for a weekend.

"It's nice to put the stresses of the world behind us and enjoy the beautiful Kansas countryside," Daggs said.

Ryker said the soldiers and servicemen aren't the only ones whose lives change after completing tours overseas.

"Our struggles are their struggles," he said of families of servicemen.

The weekend was rejuvenating for Daggs, who said on Saturday night that he's emotionally healthier.

"A lot of soldiers have seen dark days. Minds have been set free and we're completely engulfed in this amazing experience," he said.

Amateur astrophotographers give pros a run for their money

The biggest telescopes on remote mountaintops and in space certainly produce dazzling images of the universe. But amateurs' best celestial images still hold their own.

The pros have the edge on recording faint targets, because light-gathering power increases with the size of a telescope's diameter. For example, NASA's Hubble Space Telescope, which is four times wider than the College of Southern Idaho's 24-inch telescope, gathers more than 16 times more light. With their ability to gather more light, larger ground-based telescopes can take shorter exposures, giving atmospheric motion less time to blur fine detail.

There is a workaround for amateurs, however. Inexpensive web cam-style cameras capture hundreds of short exposures, which sophisticated software sifts through to display rare gems when the atmosphere is unusually steady, which are then stacked into a final image. This "lucky imaging" method has produced shots with sharpness that compares favorably with professional photography.

Also, the larger the telescope, the smaller the area of sky it sees. That's fine for professionals, who typically want to examine a single small target in great detail. Amateur telescopes are better suited to capture panoramic views of large targets like nebulae or close galaxies.

Big telescopes can take mosaics to cover large targets. But there are so few giant telescopes that competition to use them is fierce, and their time is best spent doing science, not art.

Finally, most of what we know about distant celestial

Rather, their light is dissected into its component colors, which reveals the object's speed toward or away — via the Doppler effect — the telescope, along with its temperature, rotation and chemical composition. So even when a big telescope is pointed at a photogenic target, it's rarely for the purpose of taking its portrait. Amateurs are under no such constraints.

Home defense is all about planning

Originating from English Common Law of the 1700s — when a man's home was considered to be his castle — Castle Doctrine laws in the U.S. allow law-abiding citizens to respond with force, even deadly, to protect themselves and their family from assault within their home.

SHOOTING THE BULL
Rich Simpson

Be aware that the use of such force should be a last result, comes with tremendous possible repercussions — including your own potential incarceration, as acts of self-defense cannot continue after a threat is abated — and that not all states have adopted this law and provisions within the law vary from state to state.

Idaho law specifies that the use of force, even homicide, is justified while defending one's home against "tumultuous entry." Wisdom strongly suggests that anyone considering the need to exercise this right of self-defense should study in detail the provisions in force in their particular state.

After making the personal decision to assume responsibility for defending my home and family, I asked a number of law enforcement officers to list the four primary tools needed for home defense. Here are their recommendations:

Courtesy photo

Have a plan

All the respondents suggested that I establish a locked-door policy in my home, whereby each family member is required to lock the door immediately upon entering or leaving the house.

We were encouraged to inventory our home and select a safe room that we would retreat to when confronted by a home invader. They also insisted that all the outside doors and the safe room door have a quality primary lock and dead-bolt backup.

We were also instructed to select and practice a simple retreat command so that we would react with practiced ease during a real emergency.

Have easy access to a cell phone

Since a land line can be disabled by cutting the outside wires or by the intruder taking the phone off the hook, each safe room should be equipped with a freshly charged cell phone.

This allows you to place your 911 call immediately. From the safe room, you should shout out to the intruder that you are armed and the police are on the way. This act is usually sufficient to cause all but the most calloused assailants to leave without further incident.

Let there be light

To a man, each officer recommended that I purchase a stout, high-quality flashlight. The new high-intensity tactical lights, though pricey, provide enough lumens to clearly illuminate and identify anything that goes bump in the night as either friend or foe.

Many of these lights allow you to select between an intense steady beam or pulsating strobe effects. Either is sufficient to temporarily blind and disorient a subject its pointed at.

Have a defensive firearm

Contrary to popular opinion, the hands-down home-defense weapon of choice was a short-barreled repeating shotgun.

Because of the danger of overpenetration within a home from buckshot or slugs, the officers insisted on the use of light upland game loads featuring No. 7 1/2 or No. 9 shot.

These loads are highly effective and will not blast through adjacent walls or exit the home, endangering innocent persons. Please understand that you will be held strictly accountable for every shot you fire.

So when the enemy's at the gate, who is going to guard the threshold of your castle? If you think the task is going to rest on your shoulders, know the law and be prepared.

Rich Simpson may be reached at rsimpson29@hotmail.com.

Telescope class nears in T.F.

Did you buy a new telescope recently, only to find it has more knobs and adjustments that you bargained for and you still can't figure it out? Then, the Magic Valley Astronomical Society is holding an event for you.

The annual "So, I Got A New Telescope For Christmas. Now What?" class is scheduled to begin at 7 p.m. Feb. 13, at the Herrett Center's Rick Allen Community Room on the College of Southern Idaho campus in Twin Falls.

MVAS spokesman David Olsen says members will be on hand to teach participants how to operate telescopes of all kinds. Owners are encouraged to bring their telescopes and instruction manuals.

The event is free and open to everyone. Membership in the MVAS will also be discussed.

Colo. groups say climate change endangers skiing

DENVER (AP) — Colorado's $2 billion winter sports industry and millions of acres of forests are threatened as climate change causes "oddball winter weather" in the state, business and conservation leaders said Tuesday.

Bark beetles have been able to infest about 3 million acres of pine trees in Colorado without long bouts of subzero weather to kill them, said Joe Duda of the Colorado State Forest Service.

Shorter winters and warm weather that brings rain rather than snow spell big trouble for Colorado's ski areas, said Auden Schendler of the Aspen Skiing Co.

Aspen Skiing has taken steps to become more energy efficient and help cut fossil fuel emissions, which produce greenhouse gases and heat the atmosphere, Schendler said.

"What matters most is getting people in Washington to know that we care about this," Schendler said.

The ski company's chief executive has talked to White House officials and members of Congress. David Dittloff, a regional coordinator with the National Wildlife Federation, said the environmental group has flown hunters and anglers to Washington and worked with American Indian tribes and businesses to promote legislation to reduce greenhouse gases.

"The health of wildlife populations and many species depend on us," Dittloff said.

The economic benefits of Colorado's wildlife total about $3 billion annually, including hunting, fishing and wildlife watching, Dittloff said.

The environmental group released a report Monday on climate change titled "Odd-ball Winter Weather: Global Warming's Wake-up Call for the Northern United States."

Schendler said erratic weather — shorter winters, rain in the spring instead of snow — has been a wake-up call for the ski industry. Colorado's ski areas don't start making money until March, said Schendler.

"If you lose March in the ski industry," Schendler said, "you go out of business."

The warmer weather also makes it tougher to make snow, he said.

A big part of the solution is to replace coal-fired power plants with cleaner-burning fuels, Schendler said. He criticized Rep. John Salazar, D-Colo., for joining a congressional caucus on coal.

Salazar represents western Colorado, which includes Aspen and other ski resorts.

"We think he shouldn't try to fund-raise in Telluride or Aspen," Schendler said of Salazar.

The congressman joined the new caucus for representatives from coal-producing states because his district includes 3,000 workers in the industry, said Eric Wortman, Salazar's spokesman.

Salazar wants to explore technology aimed at making coal production cleaner, including capturing carbon dioxide emissions, Wortman said.

Salazar voted against a bill targeting climate change that passed the House but hasn't been considered in the Senate.

Salazar thought the bill was too expensive, Wortman said.

Ophelie David, of France, celebrates as she takes first place in the skier X finals at the Winter X Games at Buttermilk Mountain outside Aspen, Colo., on Jan. 31.

On Monday the National Wildlife Federation released a report on climate change titled 'Odd-ball Winter Weather: Global Warming's Wake-up Call for the Northern United States.'

Wood River Valley holds sendoff for Olympians, Paralympians

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

SUN VALLEY — Morgan Arritola had already tried on her Olympic uniform. But the hundreds of people who showed up Sunday at the Sun Valley Nordic Center to see her off to the 2010 Vancouver Olympic Games in British Columbia helped reinforce Arritola's status as an Olympian to the 23-year-old Ketchum resident.

Kids and adults alike lined up to have Arritola sign posters, and to wish Arritola well as she prepared to leave for a competition in Canmore, Alberta and on to Olympic training camp to train for the games, held Feb. 12-28.

"I really appreciate all your support," said the Community School graduate who moved to the Wood River Valley from Salem, Ore., as a high school freshman. "I've even had people cheering for me when I run down the bike path."

Arritola, who started skiing with the Sun Valley Ski Education Foundation at age 16, will represent the United States as part of the Nordic cross-country ski team. As will Simi Hamilton, 22, who moved to Sun Valley from Aspen, Colo., two years ago to be on Sun Valley's Olympic Development Team. Hailey's Graham Watanabe, 27, a SVSEF alum who won a spot on the U.S. Snowboard Cross Team.

Both Hamilton and Watanabe were at competitions on Sunday.

Bellevue resident Dick Fosbury, who won a high jump gold medal at the 1968 Summer Olympics for his famed "Fosbury flop," attended the event, wearing the white jacket and ski cap he will wear while carrying the Olympic torch in Vancouver.

Fosbury, president of the World Olympians Association, reminded the audience that Arritola and the others would represent not only their country but also Sun Valley.

"We are really starting to put Sun Valley on the map — not just in alpine skiing but Nordic skiing, the Paralympics ... we've got it all," he said.

Six Paralympians who have trained at Sun Valley will likely join 1,200 athletes competing in the 2010 Vancouver Paralympic Games that follow the Olympics, said Marc Mast, who heads up the Wood River Abilities Program.

The athletes include alpine skier Elitza Storey, who grew up in Sun Valley, and Andy Soule, a Texan who trained in Sun Valley on a sit-ski after losing his legs in an explosion in Afghanistan.

Storey's brother Slater Storey will serve as a guide for Mark Bathum, a blind alpine skier who has been training in Sun Valley this winter. Other athletes include Nordic skiers Greg Mallory, Chris Klebl and Sean Halsted.

"The support of the community has been amazing," Bathum said. "We get stopped every day on the hill with words of encouragement."

Sending three Olympians from the Sun Valley Ski Education Foundation's 12-member Olympic Development Team is "pretty amazing," said Don Wiseman, SVSEF executive director, as he watched people congratulate Arritola.

"Our goal is to give these athletes a chance to be on the U.S. Ski Team. And we do it because we're a ski town," he said. "We had a dry spell for a while, but now our kids are kicking butt everywhere they go. And Morgan and the others are having a pull-up effect on our other youth. We have more in the pipeline now than four years ago."

Eight-year-old Sarah Feltman, a student at Woodside Elementary School in Hailey, was among those doing a little Olympic dreaming Sunday evening.

"I think it's just amazing that Morgan gets to go to the Olympics," she said as Arritola signed a poster for her. "When I grow up, I hope that I can get good enough to go too!"

Norwegian Olympian Tord Gjerdalen said the Sun Valley Nordic Center offers every kind of training the Norwegians could want in preparing for the 2010 Vancouver Olympic Games in British Columbia. He added the grooming is much better than that in Norway.

Club, talking about mountain biking, golf and airline connections.

"They're like Norse gods to us," said Steve Haims, a Nordic center instructor.

Sun Valley skier Joann Levy stood at the crossroads of two trails one afternoon, waiting for a glimpse of a racer. That's all she got as the skier blazed by her.

"You can't pick up any tips from them, they go so fast," she said. "But the guys are so handsome. And the women are beautiful!"

Sun Valley resident Robert Disbrow and his wife, Kim Kawaguchi, received some training tips Monday morning as they skied with champion sprinter Eldar Ronning and Martin Sundby after bidding $5,000 on the opportunity at the Galena Lodge Benefit and Auction.

Norwegian coach Steinar Mundal then taught them how to double pole by bending their knees and taking short pole strokes.

The 15-member contingent, which will train in Sun Valley until Sunday, includes a chef who is cooking up salmon, spareribs, Thai food, "really good American beef," according to Ronning, and, yes, lutefisk.

The group also includes

24-year-old Petter Northug, who coaches hope will follow in the ski tracks of Nordic legend Bjorn Daehlie, an eight-time Olympic gold medalist.

Known for a ferocious finishing kick, Northug has eight World Cup wins and is favored to win four gold medals in Vancouver.

Norwegian-born Jon Engen, a three-time Olympian who now coaches at Sun Valley Nordic Center, says the Norwegians train at a higher level than he did a couple decades ago as a weekend athlete training without much team support.

"They're professionals. Each one is working on something very specific and we may not even be able to see it," he said. "As national chairman for the Cross Country USSA, I work with the U.S. Ski Team and when I watch (the Norwegians) I'm thinking: What can I see that could be useful for our program so we can not only match these guys in their red suits but surpass them? How can we develop athletes like them?"

The secret isn't something that American skiers can easily attain, said coach Audun Svartdal.

"It's tradition."

Turkey hunt applications now being accepted

The application period for spring turkey controlled hunts runs through March 1, the Idaho Department of Fish and Game recently announced.

Spring turkey seasons start April 15 — some controlled hunts open later. Leftover tags for spring turkey controlled hunts go on sale April 1.

Commissioners also removed the waiting period to use a second turkey tag, which now may be used after the general tag has been used on the second day of the turkey season.

The daily bag limit remains one bearded turkey per day in the spring and one turkey of either sex per day in the fall. In units 1, 2, 3 and 5, five turkeys of either sex may be taken in a single day during fall seasons. No more than two bearded turkeys may be taken per spring. A hunter may harvest as many turkeys as they have legal tags for during the year.

Commissioners also extended a statewide youth turkey hunt to start a week before the general season opener and run from April 8-14. They added a late season hunt from Nov. 21 to Dec. 31, on private lands in units 13, 14, 15 and 18.

Other changes include additional spring and fall controlled hunt opportunities, with 25 added youth permits in hunt 9012, 25 added regular permits each in hunts 9013 and 9014, and 50 added in hunt 920. Fall controlled hunt 9020 has been added in Units 54 and 55. Commissioners also expanded the hunt area for hunt 9016.

Check with Fish and Game offices or vendors for new controlled hunt numbers, or online at fishandgame.idaho.gov/cms/hunt/rules/turkey/.

Hunters may apply for controlled hunts at any hunting and fishing license vendor, Fish and Game office; with a credit card by calling 800-824-3729; or online at fishandgame.idaho.gov/apps/ch/apply.cfm.

The nonrefundable application fee is $6.25 per resident and $14.75 per nonresident. An additional fee is charged for telephone and Internet applications.

Partridge season opening dates pushed back

The Idaho Fish and Game Commission, during the Jan. 28 annual meeting, changed the season opening and limit on chukar and gray partridge, and changed turkey rules.

The season for chukar and gray partridge will open statewide on Oct. 1, with a daily limit of six birds and 12 in possession.

Commissioners also changed pheasant shooting hours on opening day to a half hour before sunrise statewide — except at C.J. Strike, Fort Boise, Montour and Payette River wildlife management areas, where it will open at 10 a.m., including youth hunts.

Commission hears salmon forecast, big game summary

The Idaho Fish and Game Commission heard some encouraging news about the coming salmon seasons.

The preseason spring and summer Chinook salmon run forecast predicts about 160,000 adult hatchery fish and almost 30,000 wild fish to cross Lower Granite Dam, Idaho Fish and Game fisheries head Ed Schriever told commissioners.

The forecast predicts the bulk of the fish will head up the Snake and Salmon rivers, and enough are expected to run up the Clearwater River to support fisheries there. Fish and Game expects to propose Chinook salmon seasons on the same waters in Idaho and in the boundary water fished in recent years, Schriever said.

In a review of preliminary big-game hunter harvest reports, data show fewer tags sold but improved hunter success for deer, elk and pronghorn, big game manager Jon Rachael told commissioners during their annual meeting on Jan. 28.

The result so far show a:

- 5 percent decline in deer tags sold, but hunter success increased to 34 percent from 33 percent in 2008.
- 6 percent decline in elk tags sold, but hunter success increased to 20 percent from 19 percent in 2008.
- 5.6 percent decline in pronghorn tags, but hunter success increased to 47 percent from 44 percent in 2008.

Elk numbers across the state's 29 elk management zones are holding steady, with some exceptions. Twelve zones are meeting objectives for female elk numbers, nine are above objectives and eight are below. Five zones are meeting bull elk objectives, 15 are above the objectives and nine are below.

Monitoring results show mule deer in good condition in most of the state, which portends better than average winter survival. Preliminary figures for the total deer harvest is about 42,000 animals — about 24,000 mule deer and about 18,000 white-tailed deer.

Idaho Watershed Initiative awards restoration grants

The Idaho Watershed Initiative has awarded $227,000 in grants for nine restoration proposals.

Funding was approved for nine proposals, including these area recipients:

- Marc Brackett — upland restoration project in Brown's Bench area of Twin Falls County.
- Lava Lake Land and Livestock — stream and upland restoration project in Blaine County.
- Conservation Inc. — stream restoration projects on two private ranches along Silver Creek.
- Idaho Bureau of Land Management — Aspen restoration project in the Burley BLM district.

- BLM — Shrub-steppe restoration project in Minidoka County.

The nine proposals provide $1.2 million in leveraged matching funds. They will benefit 40,346 acres and more than two miles of stream bank.

The Idaho Watershed Initiative is a pilot program funded by Idaho Fish and Game that seeks partnerships to leverage funding for watershed scale restoration projects. This grant program covers the state fiscal year 2010. It funds proposals for restoring watersheds, providing healthy forests, shrub-steppe and wetland landscapes.

Idaho F&G director says wolf hunts went very well

BOISE — The Department of Fish and Game says the first legal wolf hunt in the lower 48 states in years was a major 2009 milestone.

Director Cal Groen told the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee on Tuesday, "The department and the state did that first wolf season very well!"

In all, some 25,700 Idaho residents bought wolf tags, with another 684 people from outside the state purchasing a chance to shoot one of the big predators. That brought in about $400,000.

Groen says another big step for the agency was getting U.S. Forest Service permission to land helicopters in the Frank Church River of No Return Wilderness to help count wolves.

Environmentalists have sued over the landings, saying they violate the law that created federal wilderness areas in 1964.

2nd Time Around at the Whistle Stop in Shoshone is the headquarters for the Lincoln County Chamber of Commerce, Lincoln County Historical Society and visitor center.

More than Shoshone antique store also houses chamber, historical society, visitor center

By John Plestina
Times-News writer

SHOSHONE — When it comes to attracting tourism and operating a small business, sometimes the movers and shakers in a small community wear more than one hat.

Shoshone's Payson Reese has taken on multiple roles as vice president of the Lincoln County Chamber of Commerce, co-chair of the Lincoln County Historical Society with Jann Thomsen and manager of 2nd Time Around at the Whistle Stop, an antique store owned by his mother, Claudia Reese.

When Claudia Reese opened the antique store at the corner of U.S. Highway 93 and South Rail Street East in July 2008, Payson Reese invited the chamber, historical society and Shoshone's visitor center to set up shop with him in an attempt to entice more tourists traveling along U.S. Highway 93 to stop in Shoshone.

When Reese opened the doors to the three organizations, the chamber finally had a telephone number and a central physical location where tourists could drop in for information. The chamber reorganized in 2008 after several years of inactivity.

Chamber President Patty Nance said the high-profile location was something the chamber needed.

"We've almost doubled our chamber membership since November," she said.

"We created a visitors' center for people. So many tourists come into the shop," Nance said.

With the move into the Whistle Stop, the chamber started the Lincoln County Christmas Council and moved all of the holiday activities in the Shoshone area under the one chamber-sponsored group.

"There was such a huge need this year and we think the need will be greater next year," Nance said.

The historical society celebrates its one-year anniversary this month and will move into a permanent location in April 2011, where it will occupy the first floor of the Lincoln County-owned Masonic Building in Shoshone. The Lincoln County Recreation District fitness center currently occupies the space and is slated to relocate in a little more than a year.

The new, spacious location will serve as a museum operated by the historical society.

The numbing side effect of chemotherapy

DEARDR. GOTT: During the latter part of 2007, I was diagnosed with metastatic bladder cancer. My doctors recommended chemotherapy treatments from November 2007 to May 2008.

I underwent surgery in June 2008 for removal of the bladder, prostate and two lymph nodes. In July, my kidneys failed, and that, too, was successfully treated. So far, so good. I'm doing fine and have regained my weight back to 216 pounds.

Unfortunately, the surgery has left me with numb feet — no pain, just numb. After several doctor visits, including trips to a neurologist, podiatrist and neurosurgeon, I have been told that this is a side effect from the chemotherapy.

I would like to know whether you or any readers could recommend something that might help me. I read your articles every day and hope there is something someone can suggest to improve my condition. I do realize that I have been blessed to overcome this medical condition with only numbness in my feet as a residual.

DEAR READER: Yes, you certainly have a lot for which to be grateful. To be a cancer survivor and to reverse or stabilize kidney failure is a testimony to your constitution and the superb care you received from your team of physicians.

Chemotherapy can cause anemia, fatigue, kidney and bladder irritation, hair loss, infection, nerve and muscle difficulties, an elevated risk of bruising and bleeding, and a great deal more. Not everyone on chemotherapy will have side effects. Some people may have mild problems, while others may develop complex, long-term consequences.

Chemotherapy drugs are intended to kill fast-growing cancer cells; however, because the drugs travel through the body, they can attack healthy cells as well. Damage to healthy tissue is the cause of side effects experienced. It is also the reason chemotherapy can

Holder says it was his decision to prosecute would-be airline bomber

By Richard A. Serrano
Tribune Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — In his first public defense of the arrest of the would-be Christmas Day airplane bomber, Attorney General Eric H. Holder Jr. said Wednesday that he personally made the decision to prosecute Umar Farouk Abdulmutallab and that no one in the Washington intelligence community objected that the al-Qaida operative should instead be turned over to military interrogators as a prisoner of war.

Holder also strongly applauded the work of FBI agents in Detroit, specifically those who spoke with the young Nigerian and have since been sharply criticized for reading him his Miranda rights against self-incrimination. The suspect initially stopped talking but since then, after meeting with his family while in custody, has begun to cooperate again.

Holder and the Justice Department declined to discuss whether the discussions may lead to a plea bargain for the operative, trained under the al-Qaeda branch in Yemen. A senior law enforcement official said the relatives came to this country because “they had faith in the U.S. justice system” and that, with their assistance, they helped the FBI “gain his cooperation.”

White House press secretary Robert Gibbs said Wednesday that while “Abdulmutallab has not been offered anything, the Department of Justice (would) take his cooperation into consideration.”

Holder, in a five-page response to the Republican Senate leadership that has been demanding his testimony on Capitol Hill, took personal responsibility for deciding to prosecute Abdulmutallab.

“I made the decision to charge Mr. Abdulmutallab with federal crimes, and to seek his detention in connection with those charges, with the knowledge of, and with no objection from, all other relevant departments of the government,” he said.

Holder did not say in his response who approved the decision to read Abdulmutallab his Miranda rights against self-incrimination. But FBI Director Robert S. Mueller said Tuesday it was a joint decision by the FBI counterterrorism division and federal prosecutors.

Republicans, who have been highly critical of the decision to arrest and to Mirandize Abdulmutallab rather than declare him an enemy combatant, said they were dissatisfied with Holder’s response and continued to press him to testify on Capitol Hill.

On Christmas night and into the morning of the following day, “the FBI informed its partners in the Intelligence community that Abdulmutallab would be charged criminally, and no agency objected to this course of action,” the attorney general said.

In the following days, including during a meeting with President Barack Obama and senior members of his national security team on Jan. 5, “high-level discussions ensued within the administration in which the possibility of detaining Mr. Abdulmutallab under the law of war was explicitly discussed.”

Under the law of war, there could have been a decision to stop the federal prosecution of Abdulmutallab and have the president declare him an enemy combatant. At that point, he would have been taken to the U.S. Naval Base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, or some other location and subjected to military interrogations and a possible trial by a military tribunal.

Study finds some in vegetative state have awareness

By Rob Stein
The Washington Post

Many of the patients were labeled with the same grim diagnosis: “vegetative state.” Their head injuries, teams of specialists had concluded, condemned them to a netherworld — alive yet utterly devoid of any awareness of the world around them.

But an international team of scientists decided to try a bold experiment using the latest technology to peek inside their minds to see whether, in fact, they were conscious.

One by one, the men and women were placed inside advanced brain scanners as technicians gave them careful instructions: Imagine you are playing tennis. Imagine you are exploring your home, room by room. For most, the scanner showed nothing.

But, shockingly, for one, then another, and another, and yet two more, the scans flashed alive exactly like any healthy conscious person’s would. These patients, the images clearly showed, were living silently in their bodies — their minds apparently active. One man could even flawlessly answer detailed yes-or-no questions about his life before his trauma.

“It was incredible,” said Adrian Owen, a neuroscientist at the University of Cambridge who led the ground-breaking research described in a paper published online Wednesday by the New England Journal of Medicine. “These are patients who are totally unable to perform functions with their bodies — even blink an eye or move an eyebrow — but yet are entirely

Scans show brain activations in, top, a healthy person as he answers ‘yes’ or ‘no’ to a question and, bottom, in someone whom doctors have deemed to be in a vegetative state.

“It was incredible. These are patients who are totally unable to perform functions with their bodies — even blink an eye or move an eyebrow — but yet are entirely conscious. It’s quite distressing, really, to realize this.”

— Adrian Owen, a neuroscientist at the University of Cambridge who led the ground-breaking research on the vegetative state and awareness conscious. It’s quite distressing, really, to realize this.”

While stressing that much more research is needed to confirm findings and refine the technology, Owen and other experts said the findings could provide profound insights into human consciousness — one of the most daunting scientific mysteries, and lead to ways to better diagnose and treat tens of thousands of brain injury patients. The technology also offers the tantalizing possibility of being able to finally communicate with some patients and ask, at the very least, whether they are in pain and need relief.

“This should change the way we think about these patients,” said Nicholas Schiff, an associate professor of neurology and neuroscience at the Weill Cornell Medical College in New York. “I think it’s going to have very broad implications.”

The research inevitably raised questions about patients such as Terri Schiavo, the Florida woman in a persistent vegetative state whose family dispute over whether to discontinue her care ignited a national debate over the right-to-die issue that eventually led to congressional intervention. Schiavo’s brother, Bobby Schindler, said the new study highlights the limits of medicine to provide an accurate diagnosis.

“They are completely unreliable,” Schindler said in a telephone interview. “I wish this could have been used on my sister to see what could have been done to help her.”

But Owen, Schiff and other experts stressed the research does not indicate that many patients in vegetative states are necessarily aware or have any hope of recovery. Many, including Schiavo, have suffered much more massive brain danger for far longer than the patients in this study.

“In some cases, the damage to the brain is so severe that it is simply inconceivable they could produce any responses,” Owen said.

As many as 20,000 Americans are in a vegetative state — meaning they are alive and awake, but without any sense of awareness, while 100,000 to 300,000 are in a related condition known as a minimally conscious state, in which they exhibit impaired or intermittent awareness.

Pakistan bombing draws attention to U.S. presence

SHAHI KOTO, Pakistan (AP) — The deaths of three American special operations soldiers in a roadside bombing in northwest Pakistan on Wednesday drew unwanted attention to a U.S. program of training local forces to fight the Taliban and al-Qaida — a little-publicized mission because of opposition here to American boots on Pakistani soil.

The killings were the first known U.S. military fatalities in nearly three years in Pakistan’s Afghan border region, where militants are being pummeled by U.S. missile strikes and struggling to regroup following the loss of a key stronghold in a recent Pakistani army offensive.

The blast also killed three girls at a nearby school and a Pakistani paramilitary soldier traveling with the Americans. Two more U.S. soldiers were wounded, along with about 100 other people, mostly students at the school. Several were left trapped, bloodied and screaming in the rubble.

The U.S. special envoy to Pakistan, Richard Holbrooke, said it did not appear the Americans were directly targeted by the blast, which he said was caused by roadside bomb. Local officials said the device was detonated by remote control, but at least one police officer said it was a suicide attack.

Witnesses said the vehicle carrying the Americans took the brunt of the explosion as their five-car convoy traveled along the road in Lower Dir, indicating it may in fact have been directed at the Americans. That would raise the specter of a militant informant close to the training mission.

Lower Dir is a base for militants belonging to the Pakistani Taliban. The Pakistani army claimed to have retaken the area from the militants last June in a widely praised offensive that also cleared the insurgents from the nearby Swat Valley.

The soldiers were part of a small group of American soldiers training members of the paramilitary Frontier Corps, Pakistan’s army and the U.S. Embassy said. The mission is trying to strengthen the ill-equipped and poorly trained outfit’s ability to fight militants.

Unlike Afghanistan and Iraq, Pakistan does not allow U.S. combat troops on its territory, making training local security forces an important part of ensuring that militants are not able to use the area as a sanctuary from which to attack American and NATO troops across the border in Afghanistan.

While not a secret, neither the Pakistanis or the Americans have talked much about the program because of the political sensitivity in Pakistan of accepting American assistance. While the government in Islamabad is closely allied with Washington, America is deeply unpopular among many Pakistanis, even those who recognize that fighting militants is in their country’s interest.

Giacometti sculpture sells in UK for record $104M

LONDON (AP) — A life-size bronze sculpture of a man by Alberto Giacometti was sold Wednesday at a London auction for 65 million pounds ($104.3 million) — the most expensive work of art ever sold at auction, Sotheby’s auction house said.

It took just eight minutes of furious bidding for about ten bidders to reach the hammer price for “L’Homme Qui Marche I” (Walking Man I), which opened at 12 million pounds, Sotheby’s said.

The sculpture by the 20th century Swiss artist, considered an iconic Giacometti work as well as one of the most recognizable images of modern art, was sold to an anonymous bidder by telephone, the auction house said.

Sotheby’s had estimated the work would sell for between 12 to 18 million pounds.

The sale price trumped the $104.17 million paid at a 2004

Auctioneer Henry Wyndam sells the sculpture ‘Walking Man I’ by Alberto Giacometti, at Sotheby’s auction rooms in London, Wednesday.

New York auction for Pablo Picasso’s 1905 “Boy With a Pipe” (The Young Apprentice). That painting broke the record that Vincent van Gogh had held since 1990, and its sale was the first time that the $100 million barrier was broken.

“L’Homme Qui Marche I,” a life-size sculpture of a thin and wiry human figure standing 72 inches (183 centimeters) tall, “represents the pinnacle of Giacometti’s experimentation with the human form” and is “both a humble image of an ordinary man, and a potent symbol of humanity,” Sotheby’s said.

The work was cast in 1961, in the artist’s mature period. It is rare because it was the only cast of the walking man made during Giacometti’s lifetime that has ever come to auction, Sotheby’s said. It was bought by Dresdner Bank in the early 1980s.

The last time a Giacometti of comparable size was offered at auction was 20 years ago. That sculpture was sold for $6.82 million, a record for Giacometti works at the time.

Former teen idol Garrett arrested on heroin possession charge

By Richard Winton
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Former teen idol Leif Garrett was released from jail Wednesday morning after having been arrested for possession of heroin by Los Angeles County Sheriff’s deputies on the platform of a commuter rail station in downtown Los Angeles, authorities said.

Garrett, a former ’70s star with a lengthy history of drug usage and arrests, was taken into custody about 11:20 a.m. Monday after deputies patrolling the Metro subway station discovered he was carrying black tar heroin, said Steve Whitmore, a sheriff’s spokesman. Garrett was about to board a train.

“He was sweating and shaking profusely,” Whitmore said.

Garrett, 48, told the deputies his condition was due to the fact that he “gets nervous around law enforcement because of his prior experience,”

Whitmore said. He denied having any drugs and allowed the deputies to search him, he said.

Garrett then informed the deputies that he was hiding black tar heroin in his shoe, Whitmore said.

Rachel Darrington

DECLO — Rachel Morgan Darrington, age 10, of Declo, returned to her Father in Heaven on Tuesday, Feb. 2, 2010. She died peacefully in her mother's arms after a long illness due to complications associated with metachromatic leukodystrophy.

Rachel was born to Fred and Emy Darrington on Aug. 24, 1999, in Salt Lake City, Utah. A triplet weighing in at just over three pounds, Rachel began life as a fighter and continued to defy the odds until the day she decided it was time to go home.

Rachel was a beloved daughter, sister, granddaughter, niece, cousin and friend. Everyone who knew Rachel was touched by her serenity, but Rachel was better known for her sense of humor. She loved to laugh, and those close to her had no problem making fools of themselves just to see her smile.

Rachel was blessed with much happiness in life. She enjoyed school and Primary and loved her teachers. She took numerous trips to Disneyland and rode all the rides. She enjoyed playing on a T-ball team, floating the Declo canal and much more.

Rachel is survived by her parents, Fred and Emy

Darrington of Declo; her brothers, Jack and Sam Darrington; and sister, Rebekah Darrington, all of Declo; her maternal grandparents, Mark and Loretta Peterson of Burley; and numerous aunts, uncles and cousins. She was preceded in death by her paternal grandparents, Leroy and Minnie Darrington; her sister, Hannah; and her triplet brother, Ryan, all of Declo.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, Feb. 6, at the Declo LDS Stake Center, 213 W. Main St., with Bishop Garth L. Searle officiating. Burial will be in the Declo Cemetery. Friends may call from 6 until 8 p.m. Friday, Feb. 5, at the Rasmussen Funeral Home, 1350 E. 16th St. in Burley, and from 10 until 10:45 a.m. Saturday at the church.

Rachel's family would like to thank the doctors and nurses at Cassia Regional Medical Center and Primary Children's Medical Center for their excellent care of Rachel and their sensitivity to the needs of Rachel and her family. They would also like to thank Rachel's teachers at Declo Elementary for the priceless friendship they extended to her.

Kenneth Walter Story

Kenneth Walter Story, 72, of Twin Falls, died Sunday, Jan. 31, 2010, at a local hospital.

To those who knew him, a message from his children:

Dad lived his life taking care of those who needed him. A veteran, he served his country for 22 years. He was always there the first couple of times one of us boys got in trouble; he showed us how to work for a living and how not to rely on a handout. He lost the long battle with cancer and other pain early Sunday morning.

I can't thank enough those that took care of him in his last hours. The last words said about my father came from a calused handed minister I had never met until Dad's last hours. He said he knew my father as a man that would give the shirt off his back if he felt you deserved it, but at the same time, one better not even touch a button on his shirt if not invited to do so.

He will be missed by his sons and daughters and a lot of grandchildren. Love you, Dad; Ken and David Story.

Wilma (Hildegard) Schlangen

COTTONWOOD — Sister Wilma (Hildegard) Schlangen, OSB, 94, died peacefully Monday, Feb. 1, 2010, at the Monastery of St. Gertrude in Cottonwood, Idaho.

Born the fourth of 13 children in Richmond, Minn., to Jacob and Catherine (Braegelmann) Schlangen on Dec. 6, 1915, Sister Wilma entered the Monastery of St. Gertrude on Sept. 14, 1937. She was professed there on March 21, 1939, and celebrated her Golden Jubilee on June 23, 1989. Two of her sisters were also members of St. Gertrude's.

Following her graduation from St. Benedict's Academy in St. Joseph, Minn., Sister Wilma worked on the family farm until age 21 when she and her older sister, Sister Florentine, joined St. Gertrude's. Five years later, their sister, Sister Cyrilla, also entered St. Gertrude's. Sister Wilma spent 10 years working in the monastery's kitchen, garden and laundry. In 1949, she began managing the laundry at St. Valentine's Hospital in Wendell, Idaho. 1950 marked a significant transition as her work nourishing the body was enhanced by the opportunity to nurture the soul. It began by managing a kitchen serving students and monks at St. Martin's College and Abbey in Olympia, Wash. For 10 years, she brought words of encouragement, acceptance and deepened spirituality to the 500 students and 80 monks there.

In 1959, she was called home to become head cook for St. Gertrude's. After a one-year home economics course in 1964, she moved to St. Benedict's Hospital in Jerome, Idaho, serving as dietitian until 1970. Once again she came home; once again she assumed responsibility for St. Gertrude's kitchen. Refreshed by a yearlong sabbatical, Sister Wilma came full circle to her starting point: caring for the Monastery's garden. Even after retirement in 2001, she contributed her insight and expertise to the domestic operations of St.

Gertrude, continuing to assist in food preservation and making raspberry jam, which is for sale in the Monastery's Book and Gift Shop.

Her large family, the monastic community at St. Gertrude's and her countless friends will long remember Sister Wilma as filled with zest for life, accepting them just as they were even while encouraging them to grow and keep a positive attitude, a person who strove to grow in gentleness and understanding. She was a woman of enduring strength physically and inwardly. Novices and guests who worked in the gardens with her or helped serve shortcake at the Raspberry Festivals say she worked circles around them. She inspired others by her groundedness, joyfulness, simple delight in everyday miracles and her unfailing commitment to the community's way of life and its broad spectrum of outreach to others. Above all she grew into a woman of prayer with a profound abiding awareness of God's goodness and mercy.

Sister Wilma was preceded in death by her parents; brothers, Paul, Raymond and Benedict; sisters, Lidwina, Theresa, Sister Cyrilla and Sister Florentine; and three siblings who died in infancy. Sister Wilma is survived by Sister Cecelia and Sister Lucille.

The public is invited to join the sisters in the Monastery Chapel for a vigil service at 7 p.m. Friday, Feb. 5, and a Mass of Christian Burial at 1 p.m. Saturday, Feb. 6. Memorials may be made to the Monastery of St. Gertrude, 465 Keuterville Road, Cottonwood, ID 83522.

David Brown, Oscar-nominated producer of 'The Sting,' dies at 93

By Polly Anderson
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — David Brown, a film and theater producer who helped bring to the screen two of the 1970s' biggest hits, "Jaws" and "The Sting," has died. He was 93.

Brown, who was the husband of longtime Cosmopolitan editor Helen Gurley Brown, died Monday at his Manhattan home following a long illness, according to the Hearst Corp., which owns Cosmopolitan.

Brown came to Hollywood in 1953, in the waning years of the studio system, and remained active into the 21st century. As a producer, he was nominated for the best picture Oscar four times, for "Jaws," 1975; "The Verdict," 1982; "A Few Good Men," 1992; and "Chocolat," 2000.

"Yes, I've survived," he told The New York Times in 1999, when he was 83. "At a certain age you become cool, not cold. I kind of represent the new and old Hollywood."

In 1991, he and his former partner, Richard D. Zanuck, won the Irving G. Thalberg award, given at the Academy Awards for a producing career of consistent high quality.

David Brown poses in his office in New York in September 2006. Brown, a film and theater producer, died Monday at his Manhattan home. He was 93.

"It's a tough business. It has a lot of heartbreak in it," Brown said at the time.

He also earned a spot in popular culture history for encouraging his wife to write her groundbreaking 1962 book, "Sex and the Single Girl," that led to her fabled career at Cosmopolitan magazine, which Brown himself had worked at years earlier.

"I owe him everything," Helen Gurley Brown told Success Magazine in 2008. "(Without him,) I wouldn't be who I am or achieved what I did."

David Brown was credited with writing some of the formerly staid magazine's sizzling cover lines during his wife's 32 years at the helm: "The startling truth about sex addicts," "How to be very good in bed," "The terrible danger of a perfect sex partner."

"The extraordinary thing about Helen is that she's so unpredictable," he told The New York Times in 1995. "I've never had a boring moment with her." For her part, she once told the newspaper that "I look after him like a geisha girl."

Brown began his Hollywood career as a story editor at 20th Century Fox after years as a journalist, magazine editor and short story writer.

"David Brown was a force in the entertainment, literary and journalism worlds," Frank A. Bennack, Jr., vice chairman and chief executive officer of Hearst Corporation, said in a statement Tuesday. "We are very lucky at Hearst to have worked with him and his legendary wife, Helen, for many years. His expansive body of work will be enjoyed by people around the world for many centuries to come. He will be greatly missed."

He brought Elvis Presley to the big screen for the first time in "Love Me Tender," and was credited with talking George C. Scott into playing "Patton," according to Hearst.

He became a close ally of Zanuck, the son of Darryl F. Zanuck, the mogul who reigned over Fox from the 1930s until age and changing audience tastes brought him down in the early 1970s. Brown worked with the younger Zanuck when he followed in his father's footsteps as the studio's production chief.

Under pressure from the board of directors, Darryl Zanuck fired his son in 1970 in an effort to save his own job, but the maneuver failed and he soon followed him out the door.

Boise State inks 10 signees, promotes Kwiatkowski

By Dustin Lapray
Times-News correspondent

BOISE — Wednesday was a busy one for the Boise State football program. On the same day the Broncos inked 10 players to national letters of intent, BSU also promoted defensive line coach Pete Kwiatkowski to defensive coordinator. Kwiatkowski replaces Justin Wilcox, who was named defensive coordinator at Tennessee.

“We’re excited for Justin and really appreciative for what he’s done for this program,” BSU head coach Chris Petersen said. “He’s made us better. We felt this was the next step in his progression.”

Petersen called Kwiatkowski’s promotion a “slam dunk” hire.

“As much success as we’ve had on defense, and the unbelievable job that Justin has done, there’s three other guys — four with our graduate assistant — who have done a tremendous job,” Petersen said. “We feel awesome about Pete taking the reins and the rest of the guys stepping their game up.”

Petersen was also upbeat about a small, but talented recruiting class. He was quick to point out that though the newly signed recruits may be of a higher echelon than those of previous classes, they are still the same type of player

BSU has always sought.

“The pitch is always the same,” Petersen said. “We’re not trying to sell our place, this university. We try to present. We are looking for that match of the right student-athlete. This place is not for everybody and we want them to know that. We want them to know what they’re getting themselves into. We don’t try to go out there and say this is the greatest place in America — although it is — and you’re going to have the time of your life — although you probably will.”

Petersen said he’d never had a player commit as late as national signing day, but that changed Wednesday when Jeremy Ioane (pronounced “ee-oh-ah-nay”) of Honolulu, Hawaii, who chose BSU over Notre Dame.

“We think (Ioane) is going to be a heck of a player, a heck of a fit,” Petersen said. “We’re just excited to get him over here. ... Jeremy is going to be a very good fit here.”

BSU only has five available scholarships so Petersen said two or three of the new recruits will grayshirt. He expects a few players to leave the team, but called it a “fluid plan” that may change as the offseason progresses.

“We always will have guys leave,” Petersen said. “You’re going to have guys, whether

Minico beats top-ranked Twin Falls

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Fool me once, shame on you.

The Minico boys basketball team learned its lesson, and this time the Spartans hung on to their fourth-quarter lead and beat Twin Falls 64-58 on Wednesday.

Mark Leon scored 17 points and Shad Hubsmith had 14 for Minico, which moved to 13-5 overall and 8-1 in Great Basin Conference play.

The Bruins (15-2, 6-1), who rose to No. 1 in the state’s media poll this week, saw their 12-game winning streak snapped. Jon Pulsifer scored a game-high 24 points for Twin Falls.

“(Minico) played a complete game, they played a better game than us,” said Twin Falls coach Matt Harr.

“I think we played hard, but we didn’t play real smart.

“You have to give Minico credit, because they beat us tonight. I’ve said all along that I think they’re one of the best teams in the state. They’re well balanced, their guards are underrated and their size speaks for itself,” said Harr.

When the two teams met on Jan. 20 at Twin Falls, Minico allowed a 10-point fourth-quarter lead evaporate

Early run lifts Bobcats to win

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

A 10-point run late in the first quarter helped the Burley Bobcats build a comfortable lead that they did not relinquish in Wednesday’s 76-59 defeat of the Canyon Ridge boys basketball team in Twin Falls.

Burley trailed 12-11 midway through the opening period when shots began to fall, allowing the gap to grow. Neither team was able to drive the lane and produce points early in the game, so everyone took to the perimeter, hitting jump shots both inside and outside the arc instead.

“We were trying to get to Bill (Blauer) as much as we could,” Burley wing Alex Greener said. He praised the performance of Nelson Geary, who scored five points on a trey and a jump shot. Geary finished with three of Burley’s eight 3-pointers.

The Bobcats found success in feeding Blauer, who accounted for three layups and a putback during the second half. The 6-foot-6 post led Burley with 23 points and nine rebounds. Geary finished with 11 points, as did Karch Hinchley, and Greener put up a dozen.

Burley continued to balance its offense inside and outside the perimeter, for which Canyon Ridge didn’t have an answer.

“We started out sloppy on defense,” said Canyon Ridge post Austin Thomas, who grabbed 10 boards. “They were driving the middle for lots of points, we were trading baskets, and we couldn’t come up with a stop.”

The one area the Riverhawks excelled in was defensive rebounds. While they scored eight second-chance points, Burley only managed two points.

Kimberly girls advance to SCIC title game

Filer eliminates Wendell

Kimberly typically hasn’t played well at the College of Southern Idaho’s gymnasium. That all changed Wednesday.

Alex Pfefferle scored 26 and the Bulldogs hit a 24-2 run in the second and third quarters as they hammered Gooding 62-36 to advance to the Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference girls basketball championship game next Wednesday.

Kimberly (18-2) led 24-17 late in the second quarter, but a bucket seconds before the buzzer gave it all the momentum needed to surge to victory.

“I think we figured that the first-half jitters are done with and we can play basketball like we know how to,” Pfefferle said. “That’s good for us because with state around the corner, we need to be able to do that if we have a bad half.”

The Bulldogs clinched at least a state play-in appearance with the victory.

Gooding (12-9) got a good push early to keep the game close, but ran out of steam in playing its third game in as many nights. Kimberly’s pressure only compounded the Senators’ worries.

“They’re such a quick team, and we can’t match that,” said Gooding coach Luanne Axelson. “Then you have Pfefferle, who’s a great player, taking over and we didn’t have an answer for that. I think they were a little physically and emotionally exhausted having played three games.”

Brittany Wirth led the Senators with 20 points in the loss. Twelve of those

You just never know how the Jerome High School student section will outdo itself this time.

What started as an attempt to improve the atmosphere evolved into a revolving theme as Tiger fans try to become the sixth player at home games.

“We were just sitting around on a Monday night watching football, and we decided we wanted to do more,” said Jerome senior Ross Hillier, the unofficial-official ringleader — if anyone acts out, it’s his neck on the line, he said. “I think it started with everyone wearing cowboy hats one night, and it just took off.”

It’s taken great effect as the Jerome girls basketball team has won 37 straight home games and the boys, while struggling this season, have been especially tricky to play at home.

“Our fans are awesome, and they make it a great atmosphere,” said Jerome senior guard Aubree Callen. “It makes it intimidating (for opponents).”

The more inventive nights have come at girls basketball games, as many of the gung-ho participants play on the boys basketball team. Those games have seen coordinated efforts usually reserved for the college game.

CANYON CONFERENCE

Declo girls focused on earning state bid

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

Although Declo is the overwhelming favorite to win the Class 2A Canyon Conference girls basketball tournament, the Hornets are taking it seriously. “Very seriously,” said Declo senior Emilie Moore. The Hornets (15-5) have lost just one game since Christmas and swept through their conference schedule undefeated. The Canyon receives one state tourney berth, and it’s the Hornets’ to lose. “We have a big mental advantage because we’ve won,” Moore said. “We’re going in very focused knowing we’ve got to play our top game to win, and we plan on doing it.” But the tournament has already seen one upset, as Glenns Ferry stole a 49-48 win at Valley to open post-season play on Tuesday. The Pilots travel to Declo tonight for a game Hornets head coach Dennie Smyer said is critical, as tonight’s loser would have to win three straight games to get to state. Declo causes major matchup problems for its league foes in the post, led by Moore and Sydney Webb. Moore is 6-foot-4 and averages 8.9 points and 6.2 rebounds per game. Webb is 6-foot and averages a double-double with 12.7 points and 10.3 boards. “We’re pretty versatile,” said Moore, who is the only senior on Declo’s roster. “We have very good guards on the outside, so we’re a well-rounded team. We work together to get what the other team is giving us.” Glenns Ferry (6-15) could have its hands full with Declo’s post players tonight. In one game against the Pilots this season, Webb scored 39 points and grabbed 21 rebounds. In the other, Moore had 19 points and 10 boards. Valley (8-12) is still alive, and will visit the loser of tonight’s Declo-Glenns Ferry game on Monday in an elimination contest. “Valley has been there before and their guards have state tournament experience,” Smyer said. “Glenns Ferry has scored more points against us than a lot of teams and they can shoot the lights out if you don’t guard them.” The tournament championship is scheduled for Feb. 11. The winner will earn a spot in the Class 2A state tournament Feb. 18-20 at Kuna High School.

Richfield girls fend off Dietrich, take No. 1 seed

Times-News

Mirian Rivas scored 17 points and six rebounds and Teenie Kent added 13 and five steals as Richfield knocked off Dietrich Wednesday in a battle between teams sharing the No. 1 ranking in the state. Heidi Buckner, who finished with nine points, hit two critical 3-pointers as part of a 19-8 second-quarter spurt that gave the Tigers (16-2) control of the game. “This game was to tie for the (league) championship ... it was senior night for Teenie and Victoria (Hettenbach) so it was a huge night for us,” said Richfield coach Steve Kent. “It was, as always with Dietrich, a very intense game with super defense, and we were able to knock down our shots better than we did over there.” Ellie Dalton, Kelci Dalton and Moriah Dill all scored eight for the Devils (16-4). The result created a three-way tie atop the final Northside Conference standings between Dietrich, Richfield and Carey. Richfield won a three-way coin flip after the game and will take the No. 1 seed to the tournament, with Dietrich at No. 2 and Carey third. Richfield will play Monday against the winner of Saturday’s game between Camas County and the Community School. Dietrich will play Monday against the winner of Saturday’s game between Carey and Bliss. All the tournament games will be played in Carey.

in a 56-53 loss. The Spartans have watched that game film over and over. “We saw how many silly little mistakes we made. We thought if we could clean that up and make (Twin Falls) earn it, we’d have a good chance,” said Minico coach Mike Graefe. Minico broke the 30-30 halftime tie by hitting three consecutive 3-pointers to start the third quarter, as Leon, Miller and Hubsmith each hit from deep. With a five-point lead heading into the final period, Minico patiently spread the floor and moved the ball around, forcing the Bruins to foul. The Spartans went of 13 for 20 from the foul line in the fourth. Twin Falls never got closer than four points. “Over there we were forcing shots that we shouldn’t have when we had the lead,” said Minico’s Kevin Jurgensmeier, who had 11 points. “Tonight we calmed down and didn’t force anything. Playing them over there and getting so close boosted our confidence a lot because we knew we could compete with the best.” Minico was without Coltin Johnson, who sat out due to a team rules violation. Other players stepped up in his absence, especially Bronson Miller, who scored 11. Minico hosts Pocatello on Saturday and visits Mini-Cassia rival Burley on Wednesday.

Mickelson accepts McCarron's apology, won't use wedge

LOS ANGELES — Phil Mickelson won't be using the Ping Eye2 wedge that led a fellow player to accuse him of "cheating," even though he hopes others will use the controversial club to keep attention on what he calls a ridiculous rule.

"I won't be playing that wedge. My point has been made," Mickelson said Wednesday on the eve of his two-time title defense at Riviera. "But if these governing bodies cannot get together to fix this loophole, if players stop using this wedge — which would stop the pressure of the issue — then I will relook at it and put the wedge back in play."

The Ping wedge has grooves that no longer conform under a new USGA regulation, adopted by the PGA Tour. However, any Ping wedge made before April 1, 1990, is approved for play under a legal settlement from two decades ago.

Mickelson is among five players who have used the Ping wedge in competition this year.

Several players believe using the club goes against the spirit of the new grooves regulation, although Scott McCarron fueled the debate when he said of Mickelson and others, "It's cheating."

Mickelson hinted at legal action after saying he was "publicly slandered." He said McCarron offered him a sincere apology on Tuesday night, which he accepted.

"We all make mistakes, and we all say things we wish we could take back," Mickelson said. "I've done it a bunch in my career. And the fact that it's also not easy to come up and face that person, look them in the eye and apologize ... I appreciate him being a big enough man to do that."

Instead, Mickelson vented his anger at the USGA and its lack of transparency in developing the new rules for grooves. He has complained that his submitted wedges that fit the guidelines, only for the USGA to

Bowl win helps Idaho's recruiting class

MOSCOW (AP) — Going to a first bowl game for the first time in more than a decade paid off for Idaho in recruiting.

Coach Robb Akey said Wednesday that the surprising success of the Vandals in 2009 translated into more success in landing future players.

“After the Humanitarian Bowl, there was a different reception,” Akey said, of the victory over Bowling Green that allowed the Vandals to finish 8-5.

“It really helped us solidify the kids who had committed to us,” Akey said. “They decided this is where their home was going to be.”

Like most coaches, Akey

praised the speed, size and athleticism of his class.

He was particularly pleased to land four players from the Moscow area. They include 321-pound offensive lineman Spencer Beale of Lewiston, defensive end Jesse Davis of Asotin, Wash.; quarterback Justin Podrabsky of Lewiston and running back Jayson Washington of Moscow.

Podrabsky, who is 6-foot-6, has a rocket for an arm and leadership qualities, Akey said.

Idaho also signed 270-pound defensive end Maxx Forde of Woodinville, Wash., whose father, Brian, played for the New Orleans Saints.

The Vandals need to replace four offensive linemen and signed several blockers.

Offensive lineman Mike Marboe of Wenatchee is following in the footsteps of his father and grandfather, who played for the Vandals.

Offensive lineman Sam Tupua, from Palomar Junior College in California, weighs 374 pounds, but will likely shed a bunch of that, Akey said.

Akey is high on offensive lineman Charles Wiley, a 302-pounder from Grossmont College in California. He will immediately challenge for a starting job, Akey said.

Armauni Johnson from West Los Angeles College

should compete for a job at wide receiver, he said.

The Vandals signed running back Ryan Bass, a transfer from Arizona State who will redshirt next season.

“He was one of the top-recruited players on the West Coast two years ago,” Akey said. “He’ll bring some good speed to that position.”

Akey added that he plans to announce a new quarterbacks coach in two weeks. He must replace Jonathan Smith, who went to Montana.

Akey also said talks regarding a contract extension are continuing, although he declined to discuss specifics. Akey and his staff are the lowest paid coaches in the Western Athletic Conference.

Idaho State football adds 18 new players

POCATELLO (AP) — Idaho State head football coach John Zamberlin announced the signing of 18 incoming student-athletes and three grayshirts on national signing day.

“We’re excited about this recruiting class and all the work that went into it,” Zamberlin said. “We addressed our needs on the offensive line and defensive line, and increased our overall team speed.”

Those signed included a mix of 11 incoming freshmen and 10 transfers from junior colleges and other universities, including three from Hofstra University, in Long Island, N.Y., where that school’s football program was dropped after last season.

The class includes eight signees from Idaho, including hometown Pocatello High School fullback Wes Howard and brothers Ryan and Sean McElwain, both offensive linemen of Eagle High School. There are three signees from Capital High School in Boise. Other Idaho prep products include Salmon High School quarterback Riley Sessions and Mackay High School line-backer Kole Krosch, whose brother, Kelvin, is a Bengal receiver.

The Bengals signed seven from California, including one grayshirt, or a student-athlete who won’t enroll until 2011; two from New York and one each from New Jersey, Indiana and Washington.

The Idaho State recruits include 13 on offense — six linemen, three quarterbacks, two running backs, one full-back and one tight end. There are seven new defense recruits including three linemen, three linebackers and one defensive back.

Blue chippers flock to Florida

NEW YORK — This much is certain at Florida: Any doubts about Urban Meyer’s future with the Gators didn’t hurt their recruiting one bit this year.

Florida landed the top-rated recruiting class in the country Wednesday, the first and by far the busiest day of the national letter of intent signing period for high school football players.

“The key to recruiting is a lot like the keys to making a great sale,” said Meyer, who has won two national championships in five seasons with the Gators. “The first one is having a great product and we obviously have that here at the University of Florida.”

As usual, national signing day was mostly about the rich getting richer.

While Florida took the mythical recruiting national championship — all the notable ranking services had the Gators on top — Alabama and Texas, the teams that played for the BCS title last month, also loaded up for future runs.

Southern California and Tennessee withstood late coaching changes to land highly regarded classes. And Auburn showed it’s not about to concede the state of Alabama to Nick Saban and the Tide.

But the big winner was Florida, a program that seemed on the verge of disarray six weeks ago.

At the top of Florida’s class is Ronald Powell, a 240-pound defensive end rated the No. 1 prospect in the country by Rivals.com, ESPN, Scout.com, SuperPrep Magazine and MaxPreps all ranked Florida’s class No. 1.

UTAH GOES BIG IN TEXAS

SALT LAKE CITY — Utah’s recruiting efforts in Texas paid off for the Utes with eight commitments from the Lone Star State.

Coach Kyle Whittingham says the Utes have been trying to beef up their recruiting in Texas and it shows with the 2010 recruiting class. Utah also got eight players from California and seven are staying home in Utah.

Utah got 24 commitments, including 20 high school players and four junior college transfers. Five players are already enrolled. The Utes signed 12 offensive and 12 defensive players. One of them is Orem’s Joe Kruger, who’s the younger brother of Utah defensive lineman Dave and former Ute Paul Kruger — now playing for the Baltimore Ravens.

ANDERSEN WELCOMES SECOND USU CLASS

LOGAN, Utah — Utah State coach Gary Andersen has his second crop of future Aggies.

Andersen says the 2010 class features players who will be able to compete for spots this fall. Andersen says that’s a step up from last year, when he had just taken over the job.

In all, Utah State got 30 commitments. Eight of those are junior college transfers.

The Aggies got 11 players from Utah and six players from both California and four from Florida.

it’s medical issues, grade issues, discipline issues, you’ll have some turnover.”

BSU has one quarterback in the class in Grant Hedrick (6-1, 185, Independence, Ore.). He threw 39 touchdowns and only one interception his senior season.

While not all of the Broncos’ recruits are highly rated, Petersen said he chuckles at star rankings.

“So much of this comes down to gut feeling and instincts,” Petersen said. “We do a lot of homework to get that big picture together.

We don’t put the blinders on if kids are really just a great player, but we don’t think they don’t have the other characteristics we’re looking for. Our coaches do such a great job doing our own homework, our own evaluations, opinions and see if a kid has a legitimate interest in us. It doesn’t matter who else is recruiting them.”

BSU found linebacker Darren Lee (6-2, 203, Susanville, Calif.) without any fanfare. Lee will go first on an LDS mission.

“(Lee) is a Boise State football player, Boise State student athlete, all the way,” Petersen said. “The only thing that’s a bummer for us on our side is we’re not going to get him right away.”

Petersen’s staff seems to always find those diamonds in the grass, like cornerback Brian Douglas (5-9, 170).

“The first time I talked to Brian Douglas he was in the hospital just getting his appendix taken out,” Petersen said. “That’s our type of guy right there. ... You’re going to call us from the hospital?”

On the coaching side, Petersen must hire a new defensive assistant to help Jeff Choate and Marcel Yates assist Kwiatkowski.

“We’ll have a different energy, different feel to things,” Petersen said. “Change is healthy and change is a part of life. We’ve got to embrace that and move forward.”

Petersen said the team can get through spring ball without another assistant. He also said he didn’t try to talk Wilcox out of leaving BSU to join Derek Dooley in the Southeastern Conference.

“I don’t think going to the SEC from Boise State is more attractive, but that’s me,” Petersen said. “Everybody’s got different ambitions, goals. Boise State is real attractive for a lot of coaches.”

On one night most of the boys dressed up in ’70s-era leisure suits, with Hiller and Gus Callen mimicking Jerome coaches Brent Clark and Scott Burton all game long. It went over well with everyone, even the coaches, who found it hard not to laugh during the game.

For a game with Wood River, the students — except one — came decked out in hunters’ garb. That one, Preston Miller, dressed as the prey: a wolverine.

Last Tuesday against Burley took the cake, however, as the student section dressed in all black, with 16 of them sporting white masks akin to those worn by

DAVID BASHORE/Times-News

Jerome fans don JabbaWockeeZ masks for a game against Burley.

JabbaWockeeZ, winner of the first season of the “America’s Best Dance Crew” competition.

There’s an amusing backstory to that one.

Jerome athletic director Ty Jones, a board member with the Idaho High School Activities Association, holds to state tournament rules at Jerome home events. That means no masks and no face painting, even though it’s technically permissible at non-state events.

At a Jerome boys game in Burley, Hillier begged and pleaded to Jones to let them wear masks at the Burley-Jerome girls game. Jones said no, and came up with a plan to reinforce that.

He said that if Gordon Kerbs, Burley’s girls basketball coach and athletic director, approved the masks then it was OK, thinking that Kerbs — a member of IHSA’s sports-manship committee — would never sign off on it.

They had to wear name badges, but Kerbs approved. “That kind of backfired,” Jones said.

For what it’s worth, Kerbs probably wouldn’t have done it for just anyone.

“Ty is a good friend of mine, and I think there’s a great deal of respect between our two schools,” Kerbs said.

The students cheer for their own team rather than taunting the other. Jones doesn’t let them do anything they wouldn’t do to their own players. But they still find ways to push the envelope, like when Josie Jordan of Twin Falls stepped to the foul line, playing on her birthday.

The fans serenaded her.

There is a certain appeal to ragging on the other team, getting into the heads of opposing players. But these fans have figured out an equally effective means of playing mind games.

Make them wonder what you’re going to come up with next.

Colts vs. Saints

Rejection a motivator for many players

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — The overlooked, the underrated and the outright rejected have somehow landed in this Super Bowl — some with starring roles, too.

The New Orleans Saints wouldn’t be competitive, let alone NFC champions and in their first Super Bowl, without a number of players who fit those categories. The list starts with quarterback Drew Brees and includes Darren Sharper, Jonathan Vilma, Jeremy Shockey, Pierre Thomas and Marques Colston.

Same for the Colts. Indianapolis defensive starters Gary Brackett and Melvin Bullitt weren’t drafted. Neither was Jeff Saturday, the three-time All-Pro who snaps the ball to Peyton Manning. Two other starters, guard Ryan Lilja and defensive tackle Dan Muir, were picked up on waivers. DE Raheem Brock was selected in the seventh round by the Eagles in 2002, cut and signed by Indy. Pierre Garcon, the rapidly developing wide receiver, was a sixth-round draft pick.

“You’ve got to take advantage of your opportunities. Nothing’s given to you. You’ve got to take it and don’t let it go,” said Antoine Bethea, the Colts’ starting free safety and a sixth-round pick in 2006. “Myself, Melvin Bullitt, Jacob Lacey, Jerraud Powers — I think we’ve all done that. And that’s just the secondary, not even mentioning the guys on the front end. So whatever it is, whatever you need to do, you can’t relinquish the opportunity that you’re given.”

Brees was all but dumped by San Diego, then shunned by the Dolphins in 2006. Sharper, set adrift by Minnesota last year, signed a one-year deal at the veteran’s minimum with New Orleans. Vilma and Shockey were unwanted in New York despite some Pro Bowl seasons. Thomas wasn’t drafted at all, while Colston was — 252nd overall, in the final moments of the last round in ’06.

“Here we are trying to come back and find ourselves,” said Brees, who lost his starting job with the Chargers to Philip Rivers in great part because he injured his right shoulder in the 2005 season finale — his last game before entering free agency. Miami showed interest in him, then backed off on medical advice. The Saints had no such reservations.

“Sean Payton gets hired. I get brought in as a free agent with Scott Fujita,” Brees said. “Reggie Bush and Marques Colston get drafted. We bring in guys like Mark Simoneau and Scott Shanle. The list goes on of the guys we brought in that year as free agents.”

DEAR ABBY: You missed an important clue in the letter from "Must Choose in Maryland" (Nov. 30), who is considering moving to improve her daughter's school life. Abby, the child is only 7. She has been in public school for three years, so the private school where she "flourished" was PRESCHOOL.

Many children encounter problems when school becomes more difficult and grading is involved. Before moving and losing her "great job, wonderful friends and comfortable lifestyle," that mother should try more options.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

"Must Choose" should consider having her daughter tested for learning disabilities or physical problems. She needs to work with her daughter's school and teachers, and maybe employ private tutoring or counseling to find methods that improve the way her daughter learns. It's possible that if they move, they will only take their problems with them.

— FORMER PRESCHOOL AND PUBLIC SCHOOL TEACHER

DEAR TEACHER: I appreciate your offering your insight. Many readers pointed out how important it is for this mother to be proactive during any transition in her child's life. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: Most children are successful in school at age 4. Before uprooting her family, "Must Choose" should meet with the school's principal and teachers to determine exactly why her daughter "hates" school.

What criteria, other than her daughter's feelings, is she using as an indicator that the schools are awful? Test data, facilities, community support, teacher qualifications, etc. should be reviewed. Moving won't ensure a successful educational experience for her daughter. Understanding and dealing with what's at the root of the child's failure will.

— CAROL IN TEXAS

DEAR ABBY: "Must Choose" needs to examine her daughter's situation more carefully. In preschool, children generally learn social skills, with some introduction to letters and numbers. From kindergarten to second grade, classroom instruction in mathematical and reading skills carry expectations of mastery. Comparing the enthusiasm and success of preschool to grade school achievements is like comparing apples to oranges. Her daughter may be exhibiting signs of learning disabilities much before second grade because children develop at different rates. It is when they begin to learn to read and do mathematical computations that these difficulties are recognized.

I encourage this mother to talk with her daughter's teacher. She may find an ally there who is as invested in her daughter's social and academic success as she is — and not an enemy.

— JENNI

IN WARRENTON, MO.
DEAR ABBY: "Public" education should not automatically translate to "sub-standard." Good teachers in public or private schools encourage and support students at multiple stages of development.

"Must Choose" should spend time in her daughter's classroom to observe, volunteer and ask questions. If there's a problem, intervention needs to happen sooner rather than later. Open, honest and constructive feedback directed toward a solution is in order.

— EDUCATIONAL SOAPBOX, U.S.A.

THE FAMILY CIRCUS

By Bil Keane

2-4
© 2010 Bill Keane, Inc.
Dist. by King Features Syndicate
www.familycircus.com

"Sorry, Daddy. I'm all out of smiles for today."

IF FEBRUARY 4 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You are likely to get by with a little help from your friends in the year ahead. In April keep your eyes peeled for a helpful opportunity or offer that can improve your prospects. You seem to have a guardian angel watching over you then who will steer you clear of trouble, but don't be arrogant about your good luck or make sudden changes in June. That is a poor time to make job changes or get involved in a new romance. From late September through November you can start new projects, make key decisions, or accept opportunities with every expectation of long-term success.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): If you have bacon and eggs every morning, then continue to have bacon and eggs. Don't change the menu of romance, either.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Sidestep clashes over certain touchy subjects such as religion and politics. Pay attention to what you have in common.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Fight fire with a bucket of water, not more fire. Be considerate and gentle even if someone else is inconsiderate.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): The term "tendering an opinion" means you can't predict what tender feelings you might hurt when you state your views.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Console yourself with the thought that "all things eventually come full circle" if it seems that there is too much tension in your life.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Respect the rights and opinions of others. You might not agree with someone, but you can still be tolerant of differences.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Let others find their way. Give those in intimate connection extra space and assume they are smart enough to figure things out.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): The casual hookup that seems fascinating today might repel you next week. Ignore the allure of excitement.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): This isn't the time to make investments, major purchases or force an issue. Steer clear of commitments.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Although you might come to a conclusion about a work-related issue or a health problem, wait to take definitive action.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): This is not the right time to take a chance or throw your weight around; results are uncertain. Accept whatever comes with good grace.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Endeavor to create more intimacy rather than letting a minor clash of opinions cause distance. Acceptance makes the heart grow fonder.

Today is Thursday, Feb. 4, the 35th day of 2010. There are 330 days left in the year.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

1783 — Britain declares a formal cessation of hostilities with its former colonies — the United States of America.

1789 — George Washington is elected president of the United States.

1887 — The Interstate Commerce Commission is established to regulate the transport of passengers and goods across state lines by land and water.

1899 — Filipinos stage revolt against United States because independence is not granted.

1938 — Adolf Hitler assumes office of German war minister and names Joachim von Ribbentrop foreign minister.

1969 — China's representative in the Netherlands, Liao Ho-Shu, arrives in United States and requests political asylum.

1970 — U.S. President Richard Nixon orders all federal agencies to stop polluting the air and water.

1972 — Britain and nine other nations recognize East Pakistan as independent nation of Bangladesh.

1974 — Newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst is kidnapped in Berkeley, California, by the Symbionese Liberation Army.

1990 — Terrorists ambush bus carrying Israeli tourists in Egypt, killing nine people and wounding 20.

1992 — Rebel troops attempt overthrow of Venezuelan President Carlos Andres Perez. The coup leader, Hugo Chavez, wins the presidential elections in 1997.

1997 — In Israel's worst-ever military air accident, 73 soldiers die when two CH-53 Sikorsky transport helicopters ferrying elite troops to Lebanon collide in heavy fog and rain.

1998 — A 6.1-magnitude earthquake and subsequent tremors in Afghanistan's remote northeast kill at least 4,500 people.

2000 — Despite international opposition, Austria's president swears in new government that includes right wingers loyal to Joerg Haider — a man known for praising aspects of the Nazi era.

2002 — Argentina's government says it will completely sever the peso's link with the U.S. dollar within a few days, creating a key test for both the currency and a new economic crisis plan.

2003 — Both houses of the Yugoslav parliament vote to adopt a new constitutional charter, replacing the Federal Republic of Yugoslavia with a less binding union, known as Serbia and Montenegro, between its two constituent republics.

2004 — The Massachusetts high court declares that gays are entitled to nothing less than marriage and that Vermont-style civil unions will not suffice, setting the stage for the first legally sanctioned same-sex weddings in the U.S. by the spring.

2005 — Ukraine parliament confirms Yulia Tymoshenko as the country's new prime minister and gives the firebrand of the country's "Orange Revolution" protests the go-ahead to set the ex-Soviet republic on a new, westward course.

2007 — NATO-led troops kill a senior Taliban leader in a precision airstrike near a southern Afghan town overrun by militants. U.S. Gen. Dan McNeil takes over command of the 35,500-strong force of NATO-led troops in Afghanistan replacing British Gen. David Richards.

2008 — Egyptian forces seal the last of the breaks in the Gaza-Egypt barrier broken down by Hamas militants, ending 12 days of freedom for Gaza's 1.5 million Palestinians.

2009 — Armed Hamas police break into a Gaza warehouse packed with U.N. humanitarian supplies and seize thousands of blankets and food packages.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Alas! Our pleasant moments fly
On rapid wings away,
While those recorded with a sigh,
Mock us by long delay."
— Edward Coate Pinkney

Congratulations to the current world champion Nickell team. In their period of dominance in bridge at the start of the last decade, Meckstroth-Rodwell and Hamman-Soloway may have grabbed the headlines, but Nick Nickell, the captain, and Dick Freeman played their part too.

The late Dick Freeman had been a quiz kid on the radio and was a former tournament director known to be the fastest scorer in the world! Here he is, producing a nice line for his three-no-trump contract.

How likely is it that a competent defense will beat three no-trump by South, if they find the passive club lead? The point is that as long as East wins the second club and shifts to a spade, the defenders should find a way to cash their four spade tricks. Declarer will put up the king on the first round, and then West can underlead his queen, or East can unblock his jack under the queen.

It did not happen like that at the table. After a strong no-trump and a Stayman sequence, West led the club nine, which was either top of a sequence denying a higher honor, or from a 10-nine holding with a higher honor. East put up the club queen, and Freeman ducked impassively! He knew that the lead was top of nothing, but East did not. That player thought the layout was consistent with West's holding A-10-9, so he continued with the king, and Freeman now had 11 tricks rather than eight.

ANSWER: Your hand seems too good to pass three no-trump, despite the lack of an obvious fit. A simple raise to four no-trump should be quantitative (bid on if you have maximum, partner) since no suit has been set as trumps. The general rule is that if the last call was in no-trump, a raise to four no-trump is invitational, not Blackwood.
