Six more environmental groups have joined a lawsuit objecting to a U.S. Forest Service decision to allow the state to land helicopters in the Frank Church River of No Return Wilderness to dart and collar wolves.

In an amended complaint Tuesday, Wilderness Society, Idaho Conservation League, Sierra Club and others joined a federal suit filed Dec. 31 by Western Watersheds Project and the Wolf Recovery Foundation. The groups' main goal is to stop the landings, which they argue violate federal law, are unnecessarv and were fast-tracked through the Forest Service without proper scrutiny.

Driggs, this Spud's for you

ere's another item for your bucket list you know, stuff you should do before you kick the bucket:

Take in a show at the Spud Drive-in in the eastern Idaho town of Driggs.

The Spud is prominent for several reasons. For starters, it's the smallest drive-in (capacity is 150 vehicles) in the state, and it's located in the smallest town in Idaho (1,291) that still has a drive-in theater. And at 6,109 feet elevation, it's the highest remaining drive-in in America.

The 57-year-old theater is listed on the National Register of Historic Places. It has a 1946 cab-over Chevy truck Old Murphy by name – parked near the movie screen with a two-ton "potato" in the bed, and at the snack bar the speciality of the house is the Gladys Burger.

The Spud was built in the spring of 1953 by Ace Wood and opened in July. It was a state-of-the-art facility back then, using window-mounted mono-speakers to broadcast the audio, and twin carbon-arc reel-to-reel projectors. Today, audio is transmitted through FM stereo to your car's radio.

The Spud is one of 10 remaining drive-in cinemas in Idaho, including the Motor-Vu and Grand-Vu in Twin Falls.

There are fewer than 400 drive-ins left in the United States, and the Spud may be one of the next casualties. Driggs is booming thanks to the growth of nearby Jackson, You DON'T SAY Steve Crump

Legislator proposes animal cruelty bill

By Ben Botkin Times-News writer

BOISE - Sen. Tim Corder introduced legislation on Thursday with a dual purpose of clarifying the state's animal cruelty laws and preparing for future growth anticipated from poultry and dairy farmers relocating to Idaho in the years ahead. The proposal, introduced in the Senate Agricultural Affairs Committee, comes at a time when tighter poultry regulations in California are expected to cause farmers to look elsewhere, bringing potential growth to Idaho. "This is a big puzzle," R-Mountain Corder, Home, said of the state's agricultural needs. "This is a piece of it."

Another piece is additional legislation Corder plans to introduce that would give the Idaho State Department of Agriculture more oversight in enforcing agricultural regulations, including those concerning confined-animal feedlot operations and poultry operations.

The animal cruelty bill is written to include birds in the definition of animals, which currently isn't in place now. That change would make cockfighting a felony. The law currently only makes dogfighting a felony.

It's also written in a way that defines companion and production animals. from dairymen, cattle pro- organization has be a proactive way to prepare for additional farmers who may come to Idaho, Corder said. While California's regulations have driven farmers elsewhere, Corder said the intent of the bill is for Idaho to be ready for growth, not attract out-of-state farmers.

"We're not encouraging or discouraging," he said. "We're preparing."

A large chicken-broiler plant is proposed for Cassia County, where commissioners recently approved changes to their county's ordinance that allow poultry companies to house up to 4.2 million birds in each facility, if they are four miles apart.

Corder's bill also gives 25 percent of fines to the local prosecutor's office and 25 percent to the ISDA.

That will provide resources to prosecutors and the ISDA for enforcement, Corder said. Corder stressed that a variety of input was received

Federal agency denies protections for tiny pika

By Mike Stark

Associated Press writer

SALT LAKE CITY -Climate change might be wiping out some populations of the American pika, a is not threatened by climate relative of the rabbit, but not enough to warrant legal protection for the tiny mountain-dwelling animal, according to a decision released Thursday. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service posted its decision on a Web site stating that while some pika populations in the West are declining, others are not, so it would not extend Endangered Species Act protections.

The pika would have been the first animal in the continental United States listed because of the effects of global warming. Although potentially vulnerable to climate change in some parts of its range, pikas will have enough high-elevation habitat to prevent extinction, the agency said.

"We acknowledge there is going to be some decline at some locations, but the pika is widespread enough, across a range of habitat, that it appears it would not threaten the long-term survival and existence of the species," said Larry Crist, supervisor of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service office in Utah.

Greg Loarie, an Earthjustice attorney who worked on lawsuits pressing for protections for the pika, said science clearly points pika has run out of room to toward dramatic reductions run and populations have in populations in the coming decades because of warming temperatures.

"To conclude this species change strikes me as an impossible gamble," Loarie said.

The pika lives mostly in high, rocky mountain slopes in 10 Western states.

The animals are wellsuited for alpine conditions. but as temperatures warm they're forced to move upslope. In some places, the tists said.

Submarine veterans receive donations

Times-News

The newly formed Magic Valley Trout Base chapter of United States Submarine Veterans Inc. recently received a $600 donation from Credit Professionals of Magic Valley.

"We've been in existence for about a year with 19 member sub veterans who served from World War II up to the present," said membership record-keeping officer Rick Rowe. "The money will help get our group established, raise money for a charitable foundation and build a parade float."

United States Submarine Veterans Inc. has chapter bases across the country dedicated to honoring all submarine sailors who answered their nation's call to service.

Credit Professionals of Magic Valley was formed in 1930 with the dual goal of educating people about the extension of credit and as offering support to community programs and organizations. But the January 28 presentation to the submarine veterans group will probably be one of the few remaining times this will happen.

"Our membership has dwindled over the last few years and it was decided to discontinue operations by distributing any remaining funds through donations," said Credit Professionals past president Terri Rowe. "We've always supported anything to do with the military."

Thyroid medication back order leads to difficulty

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have been on Armour Thyroid for many years, but all of a sudden, I cannot get it. Of course, I have Synthroid as an alternative. Well, I have tried it and just can't handle it. Why, all of a sudden, is Armour Thyroid on back order no matter where I check? Are the drug companies not making enough money on it? It's a lowcost drug. No one I have talked to seems to know the answer. I was hoping you might be able to answer this because I would imag-

DEAR READER: According to Forest Laboratories, the manufacturer of Armour Thyroid, there is a critical backorder situation. The company is unaware, at the time of this writing, of

when the product will be available. And, as would be expected, it recommends that patients contact their physician for substitute treatment until restocking occurs. You can check on the status of the drug by calling (866) 927-3260.

Armour Thyroid is a natural porcine-derived preparation for thyroid hormone replacement that does not contain gluten or lactose. It contains two thyroid hormones, T3 and T4. Synthroid is a synthetic T4 hormone reported to be identical to that produced in the human thyroid gland. Many people are able to take the product without experiencing negative side effects. As with any drug, precautions must be taken, and adverse reactions are possible. With hormone supplements, the most common side effects are those related to taking too much. Common reactions include nervousness, anxiety, insomnia, muscle weakness, diarrhea, abdominal cramping, insomnia, irritability and a great deal more. There is the potential for interaction with other drugs taken, food consumed and specific medical conditions a person might have. This, as well as all medication, should be monitored carefully by a physician. Perhaps your physician can alter the Synthroid dosage to find a level that you can tolerate until your Armour product becomes available.

To provide related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report "Thyroid Disorders." Other readers who would like a copy should send a selfaddressed stamped No. 10 envelope and a $2 check or money order to Newsletter, P.O. Box 167, Wickliffe, OH 44092. Be sure to mention the title.

deputy director of Washington's state parks for a decade before that, doesn't think it can.

"They tried it back on the East Coast, and they only opened up for the summer because that's when the people were there," she said this week. Otherwise priorities can become skewed toward "those things that produce a fee."

That's a sobering assessment both for the state park system and for Thousand Springs State Park, which Magic Valley public officials and economic development specialists are trying to rescue from possible closure.

Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter recommended that the Legislature zero out funding for the Idaho Department of Parks and Registration in the 2011 budget, which would have meant shuttering some state parks. He later relented and accepted a "business plan" proposed by Parks and Recreation Director Nancy Merrill.

This isn't an issue unique to Idaho. Across America, states battered by the Great Recession and looking for ways to make state parks self-support-

Of the seven state-park systems that are not tethered to general funds, Oregon finances its parks with money from the state lottery. Maryland uses a 0.5 percent tax on all real estate transactions to fund its parks. Similar initiatives exist in Missouri, which dedicates a small fraction of the sales tax to parks, and Texas, which applies an extra tax to sporting goods and recreational equipment.

But no state park system is completely independent of the taxpayers.

According to Time magazine, nonprofit organizations and individuals can help ease the burden for parks, saving states money by volunteering for typically salaried jobs, such as trail maintenance and trash patrol.

Rich Dolesh, chief of public policy for the National Recreation and Park Association, told Time that additional funding alternatives for state parks could include transferring certain operations to municipal governments and increasing park-generated revenue for everything from campsites to dog-walking permits.

Another option: outsourcing services such as fee collection, campground administration, general maintenance and security to private firms for less than what it currently costs state park employees to manage.

Some state parks are seeking partnerships with independent vendors, who pay franchise fees to operate certain facilities owned by the state. Parks may also opt to solicit sponsorships from corporations and other private sources.

Merrill's blueprint for sustainability includes greater use of volunteers and setting up a onestop shop for fishing and hunting licenses and boat and trailer registration.

Good ideas, but we're doubtful Idaho's state park system can survive without the state.

Child slavery in Haiti is common – and legal

hen a Haitian man walked up to Noel Ismonin, a pastor from Ottawa working in Haiti, and offered to sell him an orphan boy for $50, he refused and managed to rescue the child.

That story, repeated on television and in newspapers around the world last week, galvanized attention to a horrid problem that seemed to arise full blown from the rubble of the earthquake in Haiti. Up to 1 million children are orphans of the earthquake, and unscrupulous traffickers are snatching them and selling them into slavery.

Joel Brinkley

This week, in fact, Haiti arrested 10 Americans and accused them of kidnapping and human trafficking. The police chief, Frantz Thermilus, angrily asserted: "What surprises me is that these people would never do something like this in their own country." Well, Mr. Police Chief, what surprises me is that you sanction child slavery in your own country. In Haiti, even at the best of times, hundreds of thousands of children are enslaved each year - starved, abused, beaten and raped. And it's perfectly legal.

Anyone with even the slightest knowledge of Haiti knows that the country is desperately poor. The nation has "the highest rates of infant, under-5 and maternal mortality in the Western Hemisphere," UNICEF says. "Diarrhea, respiratory infections, malaria, tuberculosis and HIV/AIDS are the leading causes of death."

Only about half the nation's children attend school. Most of the rest are child laborers, and "as many as 2,000 children a year are trafficked to the Dominican Republic, often with their parents' support," UNICEF adds. (Trafficked is a government euphemism for being sold into slavery.)

Over the last century, or longer, crushing poverty has institutionalized another form of slavery that is commonplace, expected - lawful. Every year, thousands of desperately poor Haitian families hand their young children over to wealthier families in Port-au-Prince or other towns with the supposed agreement that the child will be fed, clothed and educated in exchange for working around the house. That's not the way it usually works.

There's even a term for these children: restaveks, from the French words "reste" and "avec," which means "rest with," or "stay with." The vast majority of these children, as young as 6 years old, are turned into house slaves.

It's not a secret; everybody in Haiti knows. One former restavek, Jean R. Cadet, wrote a book about his experiences and started a foundation dedicated to stopping the practice. Cadet's biography notes: "As a restavek he lost his childhood as he worked from sunup to sundown. Like in its most recent report: countless others, he dressed in rags, slept on the floor and endured countless beatings." Nearly two-thirds of the children given away as restaveks are girls, and it's no wonder they are preferred. Child rape in these homes is commonplace.

Domestic servitude is a common problem around the world, even in the United States. Police prosecute a dozen or more of these malefactors each year. But these cases are episodic, even unusual. Even in less developed countries, like Thailand and India, where domestic servitude is common, it is still illegal, and at least occasionally perpetrators are prosecuted. Not so in Haiti. Even the State Department gives Haiti a pass because, it says, "Haiti has had a weak government" since 2004.

The department's annual human-trafficking report chastises and penalizes countries whose efforts to fight human trafficking are deemed insufficient. But Haiti is put to the side as a "special case," along with Somalia, the world's most dvsfunctional nation, even though in no other country is child slavery known to be so commonplace.

Still, the department wrote "Haiti is a source, transit and destination country for men, women and children trafficked for the purposes of forced labor and sexual exploitation."

The majority of the victims it says are up to "300,000 restaveks," most of whom are "girls who are between 6 and 14 and work excessive hours, receive no schooling or payment and are often physically or sexually abused."

The police, it adds, "do not pursue restavek trafficking cases because there is no statutory penalty against the practice."

Of course most everyone in the world is watching with horror and sympathy as Haitians pull their dead from the rubble and try to reclaim their lives. The Haitians' own shameful practices do not give others license to traffic Haiti's children. But, if and when normal life returns, I hope the United States and other nations with influence in Haiti will push at last to end a barbaric practice that enslaves hundreds of thousands of children. How can they not?

Congress or no Congress, change is ahead for health care

't's now apparent that an overhaul of the medical care establishment won't emerge from Congress any time soon.

For employers trying to figure out health insurance mandates, penalties and taxes contained in the legislation, this impasse may be a good thing. It could unlock some hiring decisions otherwise clouded by benefit costs.

In a recent report, PricewaterhouseCooper's Health Research Institute points out:

"Flat is the new growth for many industries outside of health care. Consumers and businesses have less money to spend on everything, including medical care and treatments. The recession crushed prices throughout the economy with the exception of health care." While the rest of the economy went down in recession, health care costs increased 4.4 percent in 2008, reports the federal Center for Medicare and Medicaid Services.

Pricewaterhouse Cooper's Health Research Institute estimates costs increased 5.5 percent in 2009. Health economist Mark McClellan of the Brookings Institution said the legislative stalemate in Washington has prompted more communities to ask for help.

The December PricewaterhouseCooper report is called "Top 10 Health Industry Issues in 2010: Squeezing the Juice out of Health Care." It warns health care providers that even without sweeping federal legislation, change is coming.

The economic stimulus law, for example, included incentives for health care providers to upgrade their information technology. Hospital systems were offered incentives to use electronic medical records that can be read by different hospitals and physicians. Physicians were offered incentives to use electronic prescriptions.

In the next few years. those incentives will become penalties. For providers who treat Medicare patients, reimbursements will be cut if IT systems aren't up to par.

The Justice Department, meanwhile, is stepping up its hunt for Medicare fraud, which costs an estimated $68 billion a year. Medicare billing overcharge errors, worth an estimated $36.1 billion, are getting closer attention, as well.

Companies are looking for plans to improve the health of their workers.

Chronic diseases such as diabetes and hypertension consume the lion's share of the nation's $2.5 trillion in health care spending. Many cases of these diseases can be avoided with changes in lifestyle habits, and employers want to know which incentives will lead their employees to make those changes.

Democrats can't get their ambitious plans through a Senate where Republicans can now block action with a filibuster. But both parties have reason to work on a bill dealing with the cost of medical care, McClellan said.

A current budget law virtually demands it.

"As of March 1, physicians are scheduled to get a 21 percent reduction in payment rates for Medicare patients," McClellan said. "That's not sustainable very long. It will have an impact on access to care" for seniors.

Please get cell-phoners off our roads

have a new job for Steve Jobs. Now that Apple's latest "magical" and "revolutionary" product is set to hit the market, he can focus on helping us keep two hands on the steering wheel while we talk on the phone. Better that he solve America's obsession with driving while holding a cell phone to our ears than have government step in at the local, state or national level.

Surprisingly, in the gadget culture in which we live -BlackBerry, iPod, Kindle and now iPad - nothing hands free has been a hit in the market. People would be willing to go hands free, but no business has developed the right product. It's another of those gadget blind spots — like the failure of the high-tech industry to develop a universal charger.

We don't talk with phones to our ears because it feels or looks good. We do it because there is no wellfunctioning, comfortable, aesthetic alternative. It's gotten to the point that when you come to a fourway stop and look at other drivers, seeing others with one hand wrapped around a phone is the rule, not the exception.

So of course the government, with the best of intentions, is opening our car doors to legislate yet another aspect of our lives.

Last week, the U.S. Department of Transportation banned commercial truckers and bus drivers from texting while driving. That news broke on the same day that the Pennsylvania House overwhelmingly approved a ban on texting and talking on a handheld cell phone while driving (violations would result in a $50 fine). If tion of Transportation the state Senate does likewise, Pennsylvania would become the seventh state to outlaw drivers' use of handheld mobile devices. Last month, a similar ban in Philadelphia went into effect.

Instead, the private sector should act so that government need not protect us from ourselves. Especially where the slippery slope logic for regulation of cell phone usage could easily be extended to scanning the radio, adjusting the thermostat, raising the power window and consulting a GPS system — all commonplace disruptions in cars today. Why single out the mobile devices for regula-

Secretary Ray LaHood during a phone conversation on Thursday, he acknowledged that these are all distractions, while insisting that the "epidemic really comes because everybody has a cell phone and everybody has the bad habit of thinking that they can use them while they're driving. And you can't. You can't drive safely when you don't have

To that point, state Rep. Josh Shapiro, among the most ardent supporters of Pennsylvania's proposed ban, pointed out in an e-mail message that "cell phones - particularly handheld cells - are a leading cause of accidents on our nation's roadways. For example, the use of handheld cell phones is associated with the highest rate of secondary driver distraction non-traffic or roadway related distractions - and was among the highest frequency for crashes."

I don't doubt his data. Though it's worth noting that a study released on Friday by the Highway Loss Data Institute found that the number of crashes in New York, California, Connecticut and Washington, D.C., did not decrease after a handheld cell phone ban was put in place. Which tells me that drivers themselves need to make changes, not necessarily that legislative action or government mandate is the proper route to eradicating the problem. If Steve Jobs can make a 9.7-inch screen into a work of art that can handle web browsing, music, pictures, movies and TV shows, not to mention e-books, documents and spreadsheets, than surely a comfortable, fashionable and safe handsfree device is easily within our grasp.

Secretary LaHood himself concurred with my pitch for a market-based solution. "I could not agree with you more," he told me as he recounted a recent speech he gave to representatives from the wireless industry. "I said, 'You're all very smart. You all know how to develop technology. Help us develop technology where people cannot use these devices while they're driving. Figure out a way to disable them when you're driving your car? So I am pushing the industry on

I'm thinking less about disabling mobile phones and more about bringing hands-free technology up to speed. We've got the brains and the technology to solve the problem free of government's heavy hand.

"I don't think I traveled," Jackson said this week. "Nobody thought I traveled. Even their fans thought I didn't travel."

This time, CSI (15-7, 7-5 Scenic West Athletic Conference) plans to leave nothing to chance as it pays another visit to CEU tonight (7:30 p.m., 1450 AM KEZJ).

Jackson said the goal is to "get it done" in Price and extend CSI's four-game win streak. Eastern Utah (14-8, 8-5), on the other hand, is struggling after starting 6-0 in SWAC play. Price's Golden Eagles have lost five of seven, including an 83-77 overtime loss in Twin Falls on

Expansion of men's NCAA tournament still possible

KANSAS CITY, Mo. – The NCAA has met with conference commissioners, university presidents and athletic directors about the possibility of expanding the men's basketball tournament.

So far, it's slow going. The NCAA started talking about expansion in the fall, along with numerous topics in all 88 championships, and hasn't gotten past the discussion stage yet. "It's still a work in progress, so there's no further developments or status from (the fall)," NCAA senior vice president Greg Shaheen said. "It's just a series of ongoing dialogues with interested parties, but nothing definitive to even analyze at this point." It certainly hasn't stopped the conversa-

Many coaches and administrators like the idea of expansion and believe its a necessary step to accommodate a growing game. There are more teams than ever -347 in Division I - more depth in the bigger conferences and more talent at the mid-major level.

Whether it's increasing the tournament field to 68 (four play-in games instead of one) or enveloping the NIT to make it a 96-team field, more teams are bound to add up to more excitement, the thinking goes.

"If you're talking about adding more teams, I don't think the games would change a bit," Texas Tech coach Pat Knight said. "They'd be just as competitive and I think you'd see more Cinderella stories, more teams people didn't think had a chance and there'd be a lot more upsets if the NCAA expanded the tournament."

Another argument is that a larger field would give teams from smaller conferences a better chance of getting in. Giving automatic bids to the regular-season and conference tournament champions would reward consistency while still allowing for surprise.

"That would add more relevance to the regular season, instead of just having big games being bracket busters and things like that," Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski said. "I could see it going to 96, but if they do, I would like to see the regular season champs reward-

Dunleavy drops coaching duties

LOS ANGELES – Mike Dunleavy stepped down as the Los Angeles Clippers' head coach Thursday, retaining his job as general

Assistant coach Kim Hughes will be the interim replacement for Dunleavy, who has led the Clippers to just one winning season since taking over the star-crossed franchise

The Clippers abruptly announced the moves in an afternoon news release, saying the decision was voluntary and mutual. Los Angeles (21-28) has lost five of six heading into Saturday's home game against San Antonio, with another once-promising season in danger of slipping away.

"It just seems clear that the team needs a fresh voice, and we hope that our players will respond in a positive way," Clippers president Andy Roeser said in a statement.

LeBron, Cavs win 10th straight

CLEVELAND - LeBron James scored 36 points - 17 on free throws - and Daniel Gibson added 12 after returning from the hospital as the Cleveland Cavaliers ran their winning streak to 10 with a 102-84 win over Dwyane Wade and the Miami Heat on Thursday night.

James started at point guard for Gibson and added eight assists and seven rebounds. A one-on-one showdown between superstars James and Wade never materialized as the Cavs controlled the game and attempted 36 free throws to 14 for Miami. Wade finished with 24 points on 11 of 26 shooting and Michael Beasley had 21.

decided against trying to drive the 10th green at Riviera and instead laid up with a 4-iron.

He made par, which never hurts. And then birdied three of his next four holes, one of them with a 65-foot putt, and he kept bogeys off his card during a cool, gentle morning for a 7-under 64 to build a one-shot lead Thursday over Andres Romero and Kevin Brandt Snedeker, coming off a runner-up finish last week at Torrey Pines, and Ricky Barnes were at 66. Steve Stricker had a 67, and David Duval and Ernie Els were in the large group at 68.

Phil Mickelson was 3 under midway through his round. He finished with three bogeys over his last four holes — the exception was a 6-foot birdie putt he missed - and wound up with a 72.

McIlroy in front at Dubai

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates — Northern Ireland's Rory McIlroy got off to a good start in his Dubai Desert Classic title defense, shooting a 4-under 68 for a share of the firstround lead.

Sweden's Alexander Noren, South Africa's Charl Schwartzel, India's Jeev Milkha Singh, Italy's Edoardo Molinari and Wales' Stephen Dodd also opened with 68s on the Emirates Golf Club's Majlis Course. Tom Watson shot a 73.

CALIFORNIA Second large quake in month hits off N. California coast

SAN FRANCISCO -Residents of Northern California's County were rocked by a magnitude-5.9 earthquake Thursday, but officials said there were no immediate reports of major injury or damage from the second large temblor to hit the area within a month.

The U.S. Geological Survey reported the quake struck at 12:20 p.m. about 35 miles northwest of the community of Petrolia and nearly 50 miles west of Eureka. The shaking was felt within a 150-mile radius, as far north as southern Oregon and as far south as Sonoma County, according to the USGS Web site.

Local officials and residents reported feeling a rolling sensation that caused items to fall from walls and shelves. Many said the movement didn't feel nearly as severe as the magnitude-6.5 quake that struck the region Jan. 9 and caused more than $40 million in damage.

RICHMOND – A storm expected to dump up to 2 feet of snow in parts of the Mid-Atlantic, including Washington, D.C., was already pelting the Southeast with heavy rain Thursday. Virginia's General Assem-

The photos, released by NASA Thursday, paint a Pluto that is significantly redder than it had been for the past several decades. To the layman, it has a yelloworange hue, astronomers say it has about 20 percent more red than it used to have.

The pictures show icy frozen nitrogen on Pluto's surface growing and shrinking, brightening in the north and darkening in the south. Astronomers say Pluto's surface is changing more than the surfaces of other bodies in the solar system. That's unexpected because a season lasts 120 years in some regions of Pluto.

Self-help guru makes court appearance in sweat lodge deaths

CAMP VERDE - Selfhelp guru Iames Arthur Rav says it was all a tragic accident when his followers began collapsing one by one in a sweat lodge at his retreat, with three of them dying. As unfortunate as the ordeal was, he says the participants knew about the risks the ceremony presented.

Prosecutors say it's a blatant case of manslaughter by a man who recklessly crammed dozens of people in a 400-square-foot sweat lodge and chided them for wanting to leave, even as people were vomiting, getting burned by hot rocks and lying lifeless on the ground.

The two sides will be on display in coming months now that prosecutors have charged Ray with manslaughter in a case that could send him to prison for more than 35 years. The 52-yearold Ray said nothing during his first court appearance Thursday, and his lawyer Newly released Hubble entered a not guilty plea.

Sale between Idaho Power, Raft River approved

Times-News

The Idaho Public Utilities Commission said Thursday that it approved Idaho Power Company's sale of electrical distribution facilities valued at $44,000 to Raft River Rural Electric Cooperative, headquartered in Malta.

The sale includes about 1.45 miles of feeder line and 30 power poles in southern Owyhee County. The line was once used to serve Idaho Power customers in northern Nevada, but it now serves only Raft River customers.

In early 2001, Raft River purchased Idaho Power distribution facilities in Nevada, but did not buy a small portion of the distribution line on the Idaho side of the border. Because the line is used for wholesale transmission transactions, Idaho Power must assess Raft River institutions that target more than 60 percent of their small business lending to lower-income rural and urban communities can qualify as CDFIs.

"These institutions operate in areas where unemployment is way above the national average," said Treasury Secretary Timothy Geithner. "This program ... is a very powerful way to make sure that we're starting to open up the credit channels ... where it's most needed."

The banks will pay only 2 percent interest on the investments, lower than the 5 percent that large banks were required to pay under the bank bailout or Troubled Asset Relief Program.

The initiative is the latest in a series of proposals by the Obama administration to spur more lending to small businesses. On Tuesday, President Barack Obama promoted a separate effort to shift $30 billion in TARP funds to a small business lending program.

And Obama's budget also includes a proposed $5,000 tax credit for small businesses that hire new workers. The administration has shifted its focus to the economy and jobs from health care reform in the wake of a surprising Republican victory last month in the race for a Massachusetts Senate seat.

Administration officials said about 60 banks and thrifts, and 150 credit unions would be eligible for about $500 million to $1 billion of investments under the CDFI program. CDFIs will be able to apply by the end of the month.

In addition, other small banks are worried about the "stigma and restrictions" that come with TARP and are reluctant to receive funds from it, the administration officials said. That's why the $30 billion effort announced Tuesday will be a new program that requires approval by Congress. It would use funds from the TARP repaid by the large banks.

a transmission rate established by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC).

A recent increase in those rates significantly exceeds the costs associated with the feeder line and power poles.

Raft River, which is not regulated by the commission, serves customers in Idaho, Nevada and Utah.

The commission conducted a public hearing the proposed sale on Jan. 12. Representatives from both Idaho Power and Raft River were present. No one testified in opposition to the sale.

The commission directed Idaho Power to file accounting entries related to the transaction, closing documents and the pole attachment agreement immediately following the close of the transaction.

Law official: Airline bomb suspect flips on cleric

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON – The Nigerian suspect in a failed Christmas Day airliner bombing turned against the cleric who claims to be his teacher and has helped the U.S. hunt for the radical preacher, a law enforcement official said Thursday.

Umar Farouk Abdulmutallab, the 23-year-old Nigerian who faces terrorism charges in the Christmas bombing, has been cooperating with the FBI for days, providing information about his contacts in Yemen and the al-Qaida affiliate that operates there.

His information about U.S.-born Yemeni radical Anwar al-Awlaki is significant because it could provide fresh clues for authorities trying to capture or kill him in the remote mountains of Yemen. Al-Awlaki has emerged as a prominent al-Qaida recruiter and has been tied to the 9/11 hijackers, Abdulmutallab and the suspect in November's deadly shooting rampage at Fort Hood, Texas.

The law enforcement official would not say what information Abdulmutallab provided, but al-Awlaki himself said in a recent interview that he and Abdulmutallab had kept in contact.

A senior U.S. intelligence official said al-Awlaki represented the biggest name on the list of people Abdulmutallab might have information against. Both spoke on condition of anonymity to discuss the sensitive ongoing investigation.

Abdulmutallab's cooperation with U.S. authorities is at the center of a political dispute in Washington. Democrats say it proves the Obama administration was correct to handle the case as a criminal matter. Republicans accuse the administration of leaking details for political purposes. Abdulmutallab agreed to cooperate after FBI agents flew to Nigeria and returned to the U.S. with Abdulmutallab's family members. In a federal prison outside of Detroit, Abdulmutallab's father and uncle persuaded him to cooperate with the FBI, according to a U.S. official briefed on the talks who also spoke on condition of anonymity to discuss the ongoing case.

Knit two together Explore fiber

artists' social scene

By Melissa Davlin Times-News writer

When Ilse Hylton was a child in Germany during World War II, spinning was a necessity, and knitting was a chore. Her grandmother taught her how to spin wool from the family's sheep and stitch her own socks during shortages in the country. Socks still aren't her favorite. Now, though, knitting, weaving and spinning are pleasures for the Twin Falls woman. Hylton gets together with other crafters once a month to share their wares – and it's a scene with plenty of potential for pleasure. Hylton is one of the many southern Idaho knitters, crocheters, weavers and other fiber artists who use the craft as both a creative outlet and a social activity. Whether the crafters get together weekly or yearly, in person or online, they use their friendships to spur creativity.

Feeling a tad lonely as winter wears on? Don't crochet in seclusion.

BURLEY Matt Davenport, creator of several musical reviews, has done it again. His Saturday-night program in Burley promises to live up to others that folks have seen at the King Fine Arts Center, such as On Broadway!, One Enchanted Evening and 4 Score.

Davenport's Red Hot Hollywood performance on Saturday will be the third event of the Mini-Cassia Community Concerts sea-

Davenport has written and produced shows for Hersheypark, SeaWorld, Country Tonight/Pigeon Forge and Busch Gardens in both Tampa Bay, Fla., and Williamsburg, Va. His "American Rhapsody" was a part of the International Gershwin Centennial Celebration. His emphasis is on quality renditions of familiar melodies delivered with razzle-dazzle dramatizations. In 2009 the Matt Davenport Productions team employed 180 performers and visited 14 cities.

That's just a thumbnail sketch of an intensely busy man and his organization.

An assistant to Live on Stage Inc., press and publicity manager Mark Ross coordinates the company's touring schedule.

"Altogether they will make 50 stops this season," Ross said. "Burley is our first stop on this second leg of spring. Our booking com- show. In this case, nearly are looking forward to it."

Matt Davenport Productions Inc. will present a review of Hollywood's music memories in Burley on Saturday, with a cast of 11 performers singing, dancing and recreating magical movie memories by Gene Kelly, Astaire and Rogers, Julie Andrews, Donald O'Connor and Judy Garland.

The Red Hot Hollywood performance starts at 7:30 p.m. Saturday at the King Fine Arts Center at Burley High School, 2100 Parke Ave. Admission is by season ticket, or purchase a single ticket at the door for $20.

You can still buy Mini-Cassia Community Concerts season passes at the door. Three concerts remain this season, including a March 12 show by Buffalo Rome, a rock/country group, and concert organist Aram Basmadjian's April 12 concert, his second in Burley.

Season prices are $40 for adults, $20 for students and $110 for families (all children living at home over age 5). The passes are also good at community concerts sponsored by the series' Boise and Idaho Falls counterparts, as seating allows, with no limit on the number of concerts.

The Mini-Cassia concert series doesn't pre-sell or discount the single-concert tickets. There are no reserved seats, so show up early for the best choices.

At one point, they contributed to a national record-breaking attempt to knit the world's longest scarf from natural fibers. Their contribution consisted of camel, llama, dog, silk, alpaca, yak, mohair and buffalo fibers, plus wool from seven breeds of sheep, she said. Knitters, weavers and spinners of all ages come to the monthly meet-

"We're trying to have a learning experience at each one," Hoem said.

Not all social stitching is in person. Twin Falls knitter Sherie Tanner gets many of her hat and scarf patterns online ravelry.com, a social networking site for crocheters and knitters. Although she doesn't post much, she takes advantage of patterns other users have posted.

Tanner doesn't chat much while she knits - she specializes in intricate lace knitting, which requires a lot of concentration and stitchcounting. Once a year, though, she goes to a lace knitters retreat in Boise, where she takes classes and shares ideas with other fans of the specialized craft. At one point, Tanner belonged to a knitting guild, but it dissipated a few years ago.

Other long-standing fiber arts groups exist in town. Gloria Hann, a member of the Snake River Weavers Guild with Hylton, said that group has been together since the 1960s. Although she wrote a book on weaving and has been making garments for years, she still learns from the meetings with other members.

"I think it's all a give-and-take all the time." Hann said. "I don't think we ever end learning when you're working on a craft. I think your learning goes on."

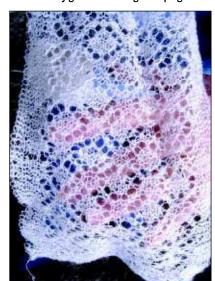

That kind of camaraderie is enough to make anyone consider picking up needles.

Relish evocative lessons in food novel

have a confession to make: I am an armchair chef.

I collect cookbooks like some people collect seashells. In addition to actual recipe books, I also have quite a number of food memoirs ("At Grandmother's Table," "Tender at the Bone," "Let Us Eat Cake") and novels with food playing an integral part of the story ("La Cucina." "Like Water for Chocolate," "Crescent"). I am undoubtedly drawn to this genre because I love to eat – and cook – almost as much as I love to read.

Knowing there are many other book and food lovers out there, I approached Tom Ashenbrener, owner of Rudy's — A Cook's Paradise in downtown Twin Falls, with the idea of offering a cooking class based on a book. He agreed, and on March 11, local chef Brian Peck and I will present a literary-gastronomical evening featuring the novel "The School of Essential Ingredients" by Seattle author Erica Bauermeister.

The book tells the story of Seattle restaurant owner Lillian, the monthly cooking classes she creates and conducts for a small group of students, and the evocative lessons that food teaches about life. Readers not only vicariously enjoy the simple epicurean indulgences, but come to know the personal dramas, musings and memories of the students and their relationships with each other.

There is Claire, a shy young woman trying to discover who she is underneath her identity as mother; Carl and Helen, a longmarried couple whose past contains secrets the class would never suspect; Tom, an attorney, who is trying to rebuild his life after a terrible loss; colorful Antonia, an Italian kitchen designer searching for a connection in the city; and Chloe, an insecure twenty-something on the brink of a new life.

"One of the essential lessons in cooking is how extraordinary the simplest foods can be when they are prepared with care and the freshest ingredients," Lillian tells them the first night.

The book does not contain recipes. Rather, it deliciously describes the ingredients, techniques and tastings as the dishes evolve and the students savor their creations. Many times, I felt I was eavesdropping on their conversations, and my mouth watered.

Marisa de los Santos, author of "Love Walked In" (and a favorite author of mine), described Bauermeister's book beautifully: "A delicate, meltingly lovely hymn to food and friendship. Lillian's kitchen is a place where the world works the way it should. You'll want to tuck yourself into one warm corner of it and stay all day."

I agree. I had a hard time leaving the book when it was time to vacuum the living room, or head to bed. And I sighed with pleasure as I turned the last page and headed to the kitchen.

So what could be better than cooking, eating and talking — about the great book, the delicious food, the perfect wine and the good times that come when all three are combined with friends old and new!

For information about the book and class, call Rudy's at 733-5477, go to www.cooksparadise.com or e-mail me at jukaker@gmail.com. Class is set for 7-9 p.m. March 11, and the cost is $35. The evening's menu: handmade pasta, Tom's Pasta Sauce, pumpkin ravioli, peasant bread and chocolate biscotti.

Judi Baxter owned and operated Judi's Bookstore in downtown Twin Falls from 1978 to 1992. From 2000 to 2004 she wrote a twice-weekly column for Publisher's Weekly's online edition called "Reviews in the News."

Want to meld a desire to perform with community service and giving? Joining the newly forming theater company OutCast may be for you.

A.J. Hoffman of Buhl, one of three founding members, touts OutCast as a "fun and exciting way to participate in theater with the added bonus of supporting the worthy charities of this community."

Other founding thespians include Erica Littlefield of

"I'll direct the first While all three founders OutCast production, and although we don't have a particular show in mind yet I ing will be a collaborative effort with actors and others in production ... and will give each person the space they need to connect with their character," Hoffman said. "As a director I look forward WETCo., and she's looking to giving actors flexibility in presenting each character in at the way they want to."

OutCast founders also say they'll pick only scripts that resonate with the company. OutCast isn't genre-specific yet, and Hoffman said they'll wait to hear from interested parties before deciding what kind of theater to produce.

So does Magic Valley have enough talent or audience to support another theater company?

Camille Barigar, a member of Twin Falls' Random Acts of Theatre, says yes.

Random Acts produces theater geared for mature audiences, for example, while the Dilettante Group of Magic Valley produces family-friendly musicals. So if OutCast finds a niche it will likely succeed.

"Every company has a different slant," Barigar said. "If they have a different bent then there really is room for everyone."

Renowned photographer to display at Herrett Center

Times-News

An artist described as one of the most influential teachers and critics of American black-and-white photography, David Vestal, will display some of his photographs from Feb. 16 to March 27 at the College of Southern Idaho Herrett Center's Jean B. King Gallery, an announcement said.

Vestal, who is 86 this year, will display 55 photographs he took from 1938 until 1997. He admits he's not much for long, breathless artist's statements. For following: "I photograph them without fuss." what I want to show you. I have some craft but no set of

It's time for dads and daughters to plan their annual Valentine "date". Jubilee House announces the fifth annual Jubilee Father Daughter Ball, THE father-daughter event of the year.

Designed to be both a father-daughter bonding opportunity as well as a fund raiser, the Jubilee Father Daughter Ball has become an important annual ritual for local dads and daughters. "Dads love the opportunity to show their daughters how much they are valued, and as they get older, to teach them how they are to be treated by the opposite gender." said Diane Stevens, organizer of the event. "And what girl doesn't love to dance with her dad?" Dance tunes are selected specifically for dads and daughters.

In addition to dancing, the attendees will be treated to desserts, entertainment, a dance lesson, and father-daughter themed silent auction packages.

Dress is as casual or as dressy as each couple would like it to be. "We see and welcome everything from western casual to tuxes and gowns" said Stevens. "When they ask, I tell the dads to let their daughters decide how dressy the evening should be." The theme this year is "My Dad Is A Star!". (Rock Star, Frisbee Star, Harley Star, BBQ Star, Star of My Heart....etc.)

For more information call Diane Stevens at 316-1292.

"Climate/Control," a temporary outdoor installation of a bonfire structure made out of cast logs by artist Jan Cox, on display through

FEB. 15, at the site of Sun Valley Center for the Arts' future home (Second Avenue and Fourth Street). The logs were made in an icehouse in Ketchum. Cox used huge cardboard tubes (the kind used for casting concrete) to mold the ice logs, which are 10 inches in diameter and up to 10 feet long. The logs weigh several hundred pounds apiece and were stacked into a bonfire structure by a small crane. Battery-powered LEDs light up the structure to give the illusion of a cool fire. The structure will be left on the site to melt naturally. Cox is also coordinating another installation project, "Cool," near her home with five artists creating ephemeral outdoor artwork. # Sun Valley Center for the Arts offers photography class

Times-News

If you're ready to take your digital photography beyond auto focus, here's a weekend workshop in Hailey to take you beyond the basics of exposure, manipulation of depth of field and shutter speed.

Photographer Dev Khalsa will teach metering, ISO, lens choice and composition. By the end of the workshop, students will be able to control how motion and depth of field affect their photographs and know how to use their cameras in manual mode.

"We will focus not only on the technical aspects of photography, but also take the time to look more closely at our surroundings and to translate light into new and interesting images," Khalsa said in a class announce-

"The Arts and Craft of Photography" meets 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. March 5-6, and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. March 7, in Hailey. Cost is $145 for Sun Valley Center for the Arts members and $195 for others, plus a $15 supply fee. All students must have a digital SLR that can be used in manual mode. Registration deadline is Feb.

2010 GMC ACADIA CROSSOVER

By Ken Chester, Jr. Motor News Media Corp.

ngineered to provide an ideal balance of style, size and capability, the GMC Acadia crossover continues to win over customers in the American marketplace. Offering three rows of seating for upto sight the Acadia combines the capability of an SUV with carlike driving characteristics. Its contemporary styling represents the new face of GMC design. Creatively sophisticated, the Acadia is smartly organized, crisp, mannerable and smooth.

Upgrades and enhancements for 2010 include: available 20inch chrome-clad wheels; USB connectivity in center console, enabling stored audio files to play through the audio system and battery charging for some handheld devices, Yukon Denali-style roof rack; and available Cashmere interior.

Offered in SL, SLE and SLT trim levels, the Acadiais powered by an enhanced version of the sophisticated 3.6L V6 engine with variable valve timing (VVT). This prime mover uses gasoline direct injection technology to help produce more power, greater fuel economy and increased towing capacity. Available in front and all-wheel drive variants, torque is transferred to the ground through an advanced Hydra-Matic 6T75 electronic six-speed automatic transmission

The GMC crossover features a body-frame integral design. that enables lower step in heights and generous interior space. The integral structure is reinforced in numerous areas with high-strength steel, including a still steel cross-car beam welded across the floor between the B-pillars, It also uses dual phase steel in select areas, such as the lower engine compartment rails.

Suspension hardware includes coil-over-MacPherson struts, direct acting stabilizer bar and a full perimeter isolated engine cradle in front; linked H-armindependent suspension and coil springs with twin tube shock absorbers mounted on an isolated subframe at the

and refinement. A carlike "low and away" instrument panel enhances the feeling of openness in the front-row seats and provides a commanding view out of the windshield. The instrument panel and other interior elements feature highquality, low-gloss materials and tight tolerances.

Acadia can be configured for seven or eight passengers, including two front bucket seats, a 60/40 split secondrow bench (three passengers) or two second-row captain's chairs (two passengers) and a 60/40 split third row bench seat (three passengers): Leather seating surfaces are GM's industry-first Smart Slide feature is standard on all second row configurations, allowing quick and easy access to the third row seating area. The second-row seat cushion flips up while the seatback slides forward, effectively compressing the space occupied by the seat. It operates with one hand and enables adjustable fore/ aft positioning of the secondrow seat. When adjusted rearward, the second-row seat provides more legroom for taller passengers, when more cargo-carrying capacity. adjusted forward, it provides more storage space.

Hand grips in the 'A' and 'B' pillars facilitate entry and exit,

DEAR ABBY: Our oldest daughter is being married soon. When we pulled out our wedding album to show her our pictures, my motherin-law, "Edith," started laughing and said she hoped our daughter's wedding would be better than ours was. Then she said our wedding had been "an embarrassment," and she wished she hadn't invited any of her friends to it!

Abby, her son and I have been married more than 25 years. This was the first time Edith has ever mentioned my "awful" wedding. My fatherin-law tried to shut her up, but she went on and on about how she should have stepped in and "helped,"

DEAR $\mathbf{A}$ BBY Jeanne Phillips

My husband and I think his mother should apologize, but she says we are being "too sensitive." My daughter is upset about it too.

We want Edith to be a part of our daughter's wedding and festivities, but what kind of role should I allow her to have? I'm still angry and very, very hurt.

MOTHER OF THE BRIDE IN MISSISSIPPI DEAR MOTHER OF THE

BRIDE: Could your motherin-law have had one too many when she came out with her insensitive and rude revelation? Face it, had she truly wanted to "help," it would have been as simple as TWIN FALLS Duplex wishop. Falls her volunteering to do so.

While an apology should be forthcoming, don't expect one. In labeling you "too sensitive," Edith was blaming the person whose face she had slapped for reacting, While your wish to have her be a part of your daughter's wedding is laudable, the role I strongly recommend she play would be a nonspeaking one such as providing "something old, something new, something borrowed or something blue." PERIOD.

DEAR ABBY: My older brother, "Gabe," 51, lives in another state. He calls me and my other brother often, asking our advice and opinions on everything - work, parenting and his relationships. His current relationship is like all the others have been. He either picks the wrong person or he IS the wrong person.

What concerns me is that after torturing my brother and me for hours at a time, Gabe then calls our 70-yearold mother. He subjects her to long, circular conversations and never takes any of our advice.

Despite our requests for him to stop burdening us all, especially Mom, Gabe persists. Mom is losing sleep, and she's very upset because Gabe is unhappy and because he talks to her long into the night. She doesn't want to hurt his feelings, but she's reached her limit.

Gabe sought professional help a few years ago, when he was having the same problem with a different woman. After three years of therapy his therapist - a priest - refused to treat him because it seemed like Gabe wasn't listening.

What can Mom do to get some peace but spare his feelings? I believe my brother has an emotional disorder, but he refuses to get help or take medication.

OVERWHELMED IN NEW JERSEY DEAR OVERWHELMED:

Gabe may indeed have an emotional problem. He may also be self-centered and in love with the sound of his own voice.

You and your brother need to impress upon your mother that her health must come first. And she needs to impress upon Gabe that her bedtime is (blank) p.m. and she will not stay up beyond that time. If necessary, she should unplug her phone to make sure her sleep isn't interrupted.

As long as Gabe has you, your brother and your mother to drain to the point of exhaustion, I hope you realize he won't seek the professional help he needs, so all of you need to finally draw the line.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

"Some people are so fond of ill luck that they run halfway to meet it."

Friday, Feb. 5, 2010

Douglas Jerrold

Today's deal shows Geir Helgemo declaring a delicate three notrump in a teams contest. The diamond five was led, and dummy's 10 took the first trick. Try to play it yourself before looking at the East-West cards.

It is important to remember that at teams or at rubber bridge, making the contract is paramount. At pairs, one should maybe consider trying for overtricks — but not today.

The point is that if clubs break in unfriendly fashion, the contract might be at risk. Imagine that after dummy's diamond 10 holds, you cash the two top clubs. You will be in trouble if the queen does not fall, since although a third round of clubs sets up the suit, the opponents may find the killing switch to a heart. Declarer has only eight tricks, and communication between the North and South hands is terrible. Declarer will need to guess the position very well to come home now. But can you see a way to bring home nine tricks without guessing, or relying on good luck?

At the table the game contract was wrapped up in no time at all. At trick two Helgemo simply called for the club jack from dummy! Now the defenders could do whatever they wanted, but they could not find any way to give declarer a problem. He had created entries back to his own hand to drive out the diamond ace and collect another diamond trick, his
