By now, Clyde Thompson's son and grandson should be back in the United States.

In fact, only two of 10 U.S. Baptists imprisoned in Haiti were not freed on Wednesday.

For the families of Laura Silsby and Charisa Coulter, the long ordeal isn't over. But for Thompson and his wife, Shirley, Wednesday was a day of relief.

"We're really glad to know that they're released," Clyde

Thompson, of Amarillo, Texas, said of his son Paul, a pastor at Eastside Baptist Church in Twin Falls, grandson Silas and their peers.

The Baptists, arrested more than two weeks ago while trying to cross the Haitian border into the Dominican Republic with a busload of children, won provisional release from Judge Bernard Saint-Vil. All but Silsby and Coulter were allowed to board a plane Wednesday evening and return home without any bail or other conditions.

The group said it was on a humanitarian mission to rescue orphaned victims of last month's devastating earthquake. But aid groups and Haitian officials determined many of the 33 children they carried were not orphans, and had in fact been handed over to the group by distressed parents. The group had been charged with child kidnapping and criminal association.

Saint-Vil told the Associated Press on Wednesday that he decided to release the group after parents testified they voluntarily handed over their children. He still wants to question Silsby and Coulter, the co-founders of New Life Children's Refuge, about their visit to Haiti in December.

Coulter earlier Wednesday briefly received treatment at a hospital, then was taken back to jail. Saint-Vil said he had asked for Coulter to be hospitalized because of her diabetes.

Returning home are three members each of the Twin Falls church and Central Valley Baptist Church in Meridian, as well as two residents of Kansas and Texas. Paul Thompson, 43, was accompanied by his son Silas, 19, and church member Steve R. McMullin, 55.

The eight — looking bedraggled and sweat-soaked — walked out of the jail escorted by U.S. diplomats

Seniors, senators blast plan to cut campsite discounts

Proposal would drop discount to 10 percent off

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

The U.S. Forest Service is considering allowing private companies that manage many of its campgrounds to charge more to senior citizens and people with disabilities, cutting a long-running discount as the nation grows older.

For years, people holding lifetime Senior and Access passes or the previous Golden Age and Access passes were entitled to 50 percent off the cost of staying at campgrounds managed by concessionaires. But in December, the federal agency proposed shrinking the fee discount to 10 percent. Concessionaires would also have to offer a 10 percent discount to those groups at "standard amenity recreation fee" day-use sites they operate.

Forest Service representatives argued in a public notice that the change is necessary to keep concessionaires from raising fees for other campground users and ensure access stays fair for all Americans. Agency staff said Tuesday it may be some time before a decision is made.

The number of senior citizens in the U.S. is expected to rise to more than 20 percent of the nation's overall population over the next decade, driven by the baby boomer generation, and dis-

Police seek leads in shooting of Gooding officer's home

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

Without any arrests yet in the drive-by shooting of a Gooding police officer's residence in December, Idaho State Police Det. Gary Kaufman requested leads from the public on Wednesday.

The incident left an unidentified officer's home along Fifth Avenue in Gooding riddled with bullets on Dec. 20, though no one was hurt. To prevent any conflict issues, Gooding police requested that state police handle the investigation.

"Usually when an officer is a crime victim of something this serious, an outside agency is requested to investigate," said Kaufman.

"At this time we have no definite suspects and no eye witnesses and we would like the public's help," said Kaufman.

$30M DISCUSSION

MEAGAN THOMPSON/Times-News

Jaden Birge, 8, right runs from Hunter Moller, 7, in a game they made up during a 'free time' activity Wednesday afternoon in the gymnasium at the Boys and Girls Club of Magic Valley in Twin Falls. City officials this week said discussions of building a $30 million city recreation center to expand recreational opportunities for residents are in their infancy stage.

T.F. Council weighs in more on rec-center idea

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

Twin Falls city officials made clear this week that talk about building a community recreation center is just that — talk.

But there certainly is a lot of discussion going on.

Six years after a failed bid by the city and several other organizations to secure a grant for a $40 million recreation center, the city's Parks and Recreation Commission announced it intends to explore what it would take to construct and operate a similar large-scale facility. The project is one of many listed on a new long-term Parks and Recreation plan drawn up by the commission, and is also a goal in the city's comprehensive plan.

The idea has intrigued people who participated in the 2004 attempt, such as Salvation Army Maj. Ed Patterson. But members of the Twin Falls City Council on Tuesday evening took time to say they aren't eager to rush into the idea, though it is worth discussing.

Council members who spoke seemed concerned that city residents think the center is already a done deal. In fact, after news of Parks and Recreation's plan broke last week, city spokeswoman Julie Pence called the Times-News to say a center wasn't going to happen. City Manager Tom Courtney clarified Tuesday evening staff are not opposed to the idea but wanted to make sure people know it's in its infancy.

At Tuesday's meeting, Councilman Lee Heider and others on the council found the idea a "worthy discussion," but one that first requires a close exploration of the costs involved. Aside from construction, Councilman Lance Clow wondered what the ongoing operations and maintenance costs would be.

Also on Tuesday, Mayor Don Hall referred to "several partners" interested in talking to the city about a center. On Wednesday, he clarified there have been no recent formal talks, but he's certainly heard interest from the community.

The council also wondered how the issue relates to other long-term planning discussions going on, including talk on the city Pool Advisory Board about how, when and if a replacement bubble should be purchased for the city pool in as soon as five years.

Councilman Trip Craig, the council liaison for both the pool board and the parks commission, questioned if the pool and parks committees should combine their efforts or if talk of forming a recreation district should enter into the discussion. The board has also mentioned the thought of building a retractable ceiling for the pool, he said, but that could cost a couple million dollars.

These discussions come as city staff are putting together a five-year plan looking at projects, operating costs and other details. Hall suggested some of the funding and project discussions should happen during strategic planning later this fall after the long-range plan is complete.

Proposal would crack down on exposing children to drugs

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

BOISE — Area lawmakers plan to propose legislation that cracks down on adults who expose children to hard drugs.

Under the proposal, it would be a felony to expose children to methamphetamines, cocaine or heroin. Local law enforcement officials and prosecutors say it's a tool that's needed to help child protection and add teeth to the existing state laws.

For a first offense, a conviction would bring up to three years in prison and a fine as high as $5,000. A second offense would bring up to a decade in prison and a fine of up to $25,000.

Rep. Sharon Block, R-Twin Falls, has been working with police and prosecutors on the proposal, which also has support from Rep.

Jim Patrick, R-Twin Falls, and Rep. Rich Wills, R-Glenns Ferry. Block said the proposal would help deal with the state's problem of adult drug abuse that hurts children and sets them up for a lifetime of addiction.

Haiti

just after dusk. They waited until they were safely inside a white van before flashing smiles and giving a thumbs up to reporters.

The group took off in a U.S. Air Force C-130 cargo plane late Wednesday night. Officials from the U.S. Department of State and the U.S. Embassy in Haiti who spoke on the condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to talk to the media confirmed that the Americans were on board.

Gary Lissade, the attorney for American Jim Allen, said he expected the charges against the eight to be dropped.

Clyde Thompson told the Times-News he believed the Baptists planned to take a military flight to Miami. Paul's wife, Renee, is taking her other son back to an airbase in Omaha, Neb., and Clyde Thompson said he believed the couple would meet up somewhere around Kansas.

It was "extremely difficult" to keep track of how his son and grandson were faring, he said.

"We could get a message about how they're doing every once in a while, but it wasn't enough for us," he said.

Family and friends of the group were hesitant to get their hopes up Wednesday after past disappointments. McMullin's family could not be reached Wednesday and Eastside officials deferred comment to the Meridian church.

"We've been let down so many times," said Paul Rodriguez, missions director of the Magic Valley Baptist Association, of times when it seemed the group would be released.

Mark Browne, pastor of Paul Congregational Church, is a former Eastside pastor who has known Paul Thompson for years. He welcomed the news and said he hopes attention can be refocused on how best to help the people still suffering from the earthquake.

"They obviously went on their own expense to do something good in that country. It's a great disappointment that they ran into trouble," Browne said of the missionaries.

"I'm very glad that (Thompson's) going to be home safe. I really appreciate his hard work trying to help people in a desperate situation."

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Drugs

"Eighty to 85 percent of the children in foster care are there because of drug and alcohol abuse," said Block, also chairwoman of the House Health and Welfare Committee. "These children have been abused and neglected."

Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loeb said the existing injury to child law is less specific, while the legislative proposal simply requires proof that a child was exposed to drugs.

"Under the injury to child statute you would have to show that the exposure is likely or may cause great bodily harm or death, and it would be very difficult to get scientific testimony from a doctor to the level that you'd need in court," he said. "This eliminates that whole hurdle and just says clearly that it's a felony."

Lt. Craig Stotts of the Twin Falls Police Department said about 10 percent of drug arrests in the city involve children. He said the department's hope is if the proposal becomes a law it will be a deterrent and encourage parents to seek treatment.

Patrick and Wills said the change would give courts a way to address the problem of drug abuse.

"It's needed to help protect the kids," Patrick said.

Discounts

discounted campsites make up a growing portion of camping-fee revenue.

Other hospitality, travel and recreation companies have largely adopted a 10 percent discount in the face of the generational growth, the Forest Service argued. The agency estimates that senior pass holders would pay perhaps $4 to $5 more per site under the new plan. Other campers already pay an extra $1.50 to cover the discount; that would increase by as much as another dollar without any changes.

In south-central Idaho, the proposal would mostly affect campgrounds in the Sawtooth National Recreation Area, which often attract out-of-state campers, said Sawtooth National Forest spokeswoman Julie Thomas.

"It's a travel destination," Thomas said.

A comment period on the proposal ended Feb. 1, but people are still weighing in — including Idaho's four-member congressional delegation. On Friday, Sens. Mike Crapo and Jim Risch and Reps. Mike Simpson and Walt Minnick made public a letter to U.S. Forest Service Chief Tom Tidwell questioning the need for and timing of the cuts. They noted Tidwell has recently received general funding increases and $650 million in federal stimulus funds for capital improvements and maintenance.

Groups such as the Western Slope No-Fee Coalition have criticized the change as benefitting private corporations on public land. But the industry has backed the proposed rules, playing up the advantages private contracts bring to the public sites.

"Campground operation is not an inherently governmental function," wrote Derrick A. Crandall, president of the American Recreation Coalition, in his public comment letter.

said she would like to see an arrest.

In December, Scanlon told the Times-News that she may have heard gunfire, but did not feel she was in immediate danger.

Asked almost two months later how she feels that no arrest has been made, Scanlon said "it makes you kind of nervous ... I would like to have it ended."

Authorities say it is not likely connected, but there was another shooting in December that left a bullet in a business on the 400 block of Main Street.

The business shooting happened around the same time as the residential shooting, and that case has a person of interest, Perry confirmed.

Perry said evidence is still being processed from the business shooting and no one has been arrested in the case, which his department continues to investigate.

Kaufman said both his agency and Gooding Police Department are communicating about the two cases. "We are keeping in close contact with their investigator on it and if a connection can be established we will deal with it."

In December, Gooding Mayor Duke Morton told the Times-News the shooting of the officer's home was unexpected and he said that "as a city, we are very concerned."

Asked Wednesday for his thoughts, Morton said "we're proceeding as we should."

Kaufman said he would like to hear from anyone who may have witnessed the residential shooting on Fifth Avenue. Call state police with information at 324-6000 or 800-524-7277.

Legislator proposes lifting charter cap

Proposed bill aimed at tackling potential Race to the Top issue

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

BOISE — Sen. John Goedde wants to have a bill ready, just in case.

So on Monday in the Senate Education Committee, Goedde, the committee chairman, introduced legislation that would lift the state's yearly cap on charter schools to pave the way for the creation of more schools tailored to meet the needs of underserved student populations.

Those groups include students with interests and needs difficult to meet in a traditional academic setting, including low-income students, minorities, at-risk students and students with disabilities.

Current state law allows only up to six new charter schools to open each year in Idaho. Goedde's bill would allow more than six, provided the Charter Commission approves the petition and the school is aimed at serving limited, underserved student populations. The state's limit of one new charter school opening per year within the boundaries of an existing school district would remain intact.

Goedde, R-Coeur d'Alene, said he's pursuing the bill in case it's needed to help with the state's application for the federal Race to the Top grant competition in the months ahead. He wants an official letter in writing from the U.S. Department of Education to confirm Idaho's charter school cap will not be a hindrance in the application.

If nothing definitive is received from the federal government toward the end of the session, Goedde said the bill will get a full hearing.

The cap — and whether to lift it — has been a widely discussed issue in education circles, particularly after the federal government initially seemed to indicate that states with artificial caps would be at a competitive disadvantage for the competition for a slice of $2.35 billion in federal dollars for innovative education ideas.

Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Luna has also clarified in recent months that the cap is not an issue for Idaho in the competition for federal dollars. The federal government defines a "cap" as limiting the percentage of charter schools to less than 5 percent of all public schools in a state. Idaho law limits how many new charter schools can begin, but charter schools in the state already reach beyond the 5 percent mark.

"I think there are some who want even further clarification," Luna told the Times-News. "We've requested clarification a number of times and we are just referred back to the initial guidance. ... That tells us that the cap we have on our charter schools is not going to put us at a competitive disadvantage."

The federal application issue aside, Luna said the bill would be a good way to provide added flexibility for more charter schools to serve unique populations of students.

Opponents of unchecked charter school growth say charter schools pull students away from traditional public school districts, and often cite the decline in enrollment and state funding the Gooding School District saw when North Valley Academy opened in 2008. Supporters argue that charter schools provide another choice for parents and students, with the state funding following the child.

Rep. Stephen Hartgen, R-Twin Falls, and a member of the House Education Committee, said having a bill ready for later in the session if needed to help the federal application is good preparation. He said he leans toward the argument for openness in school choice.

"It seems to me that we ought to look for ways to expand choice rather than restrict it," Hartgen said.

Heyburn plans hour power outage

Shoshone council accepts grant funds

The Shoshone City Council voted Tuesday to accept a $10,000 federal matching grant for improvements to bring the city park into Americans With Disabilities Act compliance.

The city held a required public hearing because its budget had to be opened to accept the funds. City Clerk Mary Kay Bennett said the city had not planned for the grant when the current budget was approved.

In other business, the council voted to put $80,000 in USDA grant funds toward sewer improvements.

The council also discussed putting curbs and gutters around the Lincoln County Community Center.

The city of Heyburn is planning a one-hour power outage beginning at 4 p.m. Sunday. Upgrades to the city's substation will be made during the outage.

Heyburn to discuss street fixes at open house

The city of Heyburn will host an open house on Feb. 25 to discuss proposed 21st Street improvements from 500 West Road to 600 West Road. The open house will be held from 12:30 to 6:30 p.m., at the Heyburn City Hall, 941 18th St.

T.F. man sentenced to probation for child porn crimes

Times-News

A Twin Falls man was placed on probation Tuesday for child pornography crimes.

Jeremy Lee Kiesig, 33, pleaded guilty on Dec. 4 in Twin Falls 5th District Court to enticing children over the Internet, and four counts of possession of sexually exploitative material. That was after he was charged in September with 24 counts of possessing exploitative material, and a count of enticing children over the Internet.

Kiesig's sentence Tuesday from Judge Randy Stoker includes two to four years in prison, which were suspended, and five years of probation.

The case unfolded in 2008 through an undercover operation over the Internet by the Twin Falls Police Department.

According to court records, police said, "Kiesig was under the belief that he was going to meet with a 14 year old girl, drink rum and have sex."

Police also say in court records that Kiesig had "multiple sexually explicit images and images of known child victims on his computer."

Ketchum house fire causes $100K worth of damage

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

An early-morning fire Tuesday rendered a house in Ketchum's Warm Springs neighborhood uninhabitable, with about $100,000 in damage, according to the Ketchum Fire Department.

The home, at 100 Exhibition Blvd., was occupied by friends of the owners, said Ketchum Fire Chief Mike Elle.

"They had had a problem with the fireplace earlier in the evening, and woke up to smell smoke, called 911 and evacuated the building," he said.

The call came in just before 3 a.m., and 30 firefighters from the Ketchum Fire Department, Sun Valley Fire Department and Wood River Fire & Rescue responded to the scene, getting the fire contained by 3:40 a.m.

"The bulk of the damage was structural in nature, to the roof of the second floor over the area where the fire started," he said, noting that there was extensive smoke and water damage to other parts of the home.

Although an investigation into the fire is not complete, Elle said it was accidental, and likely caused by a problem with the firebox around the fireplace. "We're going to be looking at it for quite a while."

While working on the roof of the home to put out the blaze, one firefighter injured his knee; no other injuries were reported as a result of the fire.

Elle said although this fire was not chimney related, he recommends all homeowners with a fireplace have their chimney cleaned and fireplace inspected yearly to prevent accidental fires.

Sundown for sales tax exemptions? That's a great idea

On Tuesday, the state Senate Local Government and Taxation Committee unanimously agreed to support introduction of legislation proposed by Sen. Chuck Winder, R-Boise, to require the Legislature to review all sales tax exemptions at least every five years, and put a five-year expiration date on any new exemptions enacted after July 1, 2010.

Great idea, but do lawmakers have the political will to follow through?

“Bring ’em out in the light of day and see what they are,” Winder told the panel.

Winder’s is one of several bills pending in the Legislature that would review the millions of dollars in sales taxes that Idaho leaves on the table every year. The measures include a Democratic proposal that would make all state tax exemptions, credits and deductions expire on Jan. 1, 2012, unless specifically extended by state law, and would require all new exemptions to expire in five years. Another bill, suggested by Reps. Wendy Jaquet, D-Ketchum, and Grant Burgoyne, D-Boise, would set up a commission to review all existing sales tax exemptions at least every eight years for equity, fairness and more.

But history has shown that taking away a sales tax exemption is only a little less difficult than raising taxes in Idaho. “There is, in my opinion, a significant barrier to try to do that in that manner, because you have a tremendous amount of pressure from the people that enjoy the exemption, and no offsetting opinion particularly from the rest of the state,” Sen. Joe Stegner, R-Lewiston, told the Spokesman-Review of Spokane, Wash. “So it gives the impression that there’s just tremendous, wide support across the state for the exemption, when in fact you’re listening to a pretty small group of folks. Historically, the pressure has been so difficult, so great that we have not done a very good job of being able to analyze these.”

Existing exemptions and exclusions from Idaho’s sales tax, combined, exceed the amount the tax collects. That’s absurd.

In the next 16 months, thousands of Idaho public school teachers will have their pay cut, Idaho Department of Health and Welfare field offices will be closed and hundreds of public employees will be laid off or furloughed. Less of that would have to happen if legislators did their duty, stepped up and ended some sales tax exemptions Idaho’s conservative lawmakers are fond of proclaiming they often say “no” to taxation that doesn’t make sense.

Here’s their chance to prove it.

Our view:
In Idaho, you pay sales tax for your groceries but not for your spa day. That doesn’t make sense.

What do you think?

Both parties lose as Bayh leaves

The most striking part of Indiana Sen. Evan Bayh’s retirement announcement was his on-air job application. He’d be interested in managing a business, Bayh suggested, heading a university or maybe running a charity.

“I love helping our citizens make the most of their lives,” Bayh said, “but I do not love Congress,” bluntly assessing an institution he has known since he was 7 and his father became senator.

Teddy Roosevelt famously lauded

ed “the man who is actually in the arena,” who “if he fails, at least fails while daring greatly, so that his place shall never be with those cold and timid souls who know neither victory nor defeat.” What happens, though, when the arena is dysfunctional? The Senate, with its endless holds and 60-vote points of order, may be the epitome of a place that knows neither victory nor defeat.

“It’s a bad sign,” Republican Sen. Susan Collins of Maine told me about Bayh’s retirement. “The loss of someone like Evan speaks volumes about people’s frustrations with the Senate and our failure to work in a bipartisan fashion.”

Maybe the arena has shifted. Maybe, for the man — or woman — who wants to make a difference, politics is not the optimal venue. Maybe it’s easier to make your mark from the Gates Foundation than from a Senate seat. Maybe the chief executive of Google — your average Google vice president, even — wields more influence over people’s lives than an individual member of Congress. Maybe it’s a better use of time to promote scientific research than to slog from one quorum call to the next.

“The way Congress is working right now, I decided I could make a better contribution to my state and country on a smaller stage,” Bayh told me on Tuesday. “There are some ideologues in the Senate. There are some staunch partisans. The vast majority are good, decent people who are trapped in a system that does not let that goodness and decency translate itself into legislative accomplishments.”

When his father, Birch Bayh, was running for reelection in 1968, Bayh noted, Republican leader Everett Dirksen approached the Democrat on the Senate floor and asked how he could help. “It’s unthinkable today,” Bayh said. “One after another, the barriers to incivility get broken down. Senators actively fundraise against their colleagues, they campaign against their colleagues and that is not conducive to consensus-building if you know the people you have to work with want to do you in.”

Indeed, the Senate has been transformed even since Evan Bayh arrived in 1999. During the 106th Congress, from 1999 to 2001, there were fewer cloture petitions filed to end debate on filibusters than there have been halfway through the 111th Congress. Then, there were perhaps a dozen moderate Republicans. Now, except for Maine’s Collins and Olympia Snowe they are all gone.

Bayh, who speaks with the experience of a man with $13 million in his campaign account, attributed some of the changed atmosphere to the incessant demands of fundraising. “Back in my father’s day, the saying was that you legislated for four years and you ran for reelection for two,” he said. “If you’re constantly raising funds, if you’re constantly running for reelection, that affects how people behave.”

The optimist in me would like to see Bayh’s departure as the wake-up call the Senate needs. The optimist takes heart in the prospect next year of a larger cadre of centrist Republicans with political incentives to compromise rather than obstruct. The optimist looks at Virginia Democrat Mark Warner and Tennessee Republican Bob Corker trying again on financial regulation, Oregon Democrat Ron Wyden and New Hampshire Republican Sen. Judd Gregg gearing up on tax reform — and thinks: Someone’s got to keep at this.

“The forecast for this country is bleak if people are just going to say that the dysfunction has been institutionalized,” Warner told me. “I just can’t accept that.”

The realist in me watches the fervent Tea Partiers, tugging the Republican Party even further to the right, and the Republican congressional leadership, reaping the short-term rewards of obstruction — and worries.

“What I think Evan has been trying to communicate is that politics cannot be seen as a zero-sum game where one side wipes the floor with the other side,” Wyden told me. Until this happens, he said, “I think you’re going to see more good and thoughtful people say that they’re going to find other things to do.”

Global warming? More like global weirding

Of the festivals of nonsense that periodically overtake American politics, surely the silliest is the argument that because Washington is having a particularly snowy winter it proves that climate change is a hoax and, therefore, we need not bother with all this girly-man stuff like renewable energy, solar panels and carbon taxes. Just drill, baby, drill.

Skip to next paragraph

When you see lawmakers like Senator Jim DeMint of South Carolina tweeting that “it is going to keep snowing until Al Gore cries ‘uncle,’” or news that the grandchildren of Senator James Inhofe of Oklahoma are building an igloo next to the Capitol with a big sign that says “Al Gore’s New Home,” you really wonder if we can have a serious discussion about the climate-energy issue anymore.

The climate-science community is not blameless. It knew it was up against formidable forces — from the oil and coal companies that finance the studies skeptical of climate change to conservatives who hate anything that will lead to more government regulations to the Chamber of Commerce that will resist any energy taxes. Therefore, climate experts can’t leave themselves vulnerable by citing non-peer-reviewed research or failing to respond to legitimate questions, some of which happened with both the Climatic Research Unit at the University of East Anglia and the United Nations Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change.

Although there remains a mountain of research from multiple institutions about the reality of climate change, the public has grown uneasy. What’s real? In my view, the climate-science community should convene its top experts — from places like NASA, America’s national laboratories, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Stanford, the California Institute of Technology and the U.K. Met Office Hadley Centre — and produce a simple 50-page report. They could call it “What We Know,” summarizing everything we already know about climate change in language that a sixth grader could understand, with unimpeachable peer-reviewed footnotes.

At the same time, they should add a summary of all the errors and wild exaggerations made by the climate skeptics — and where they get their funding. It is time the climate scientists stopped just playing defense. The physicist Joseph Romm, a leading climate writer, is posting on his Web site, climateprogress.org, his own listing of the best scientific papers on every aspect of climate change for anyone who wants a quick summary now.

Here are the points I like to stress:

- Avoid the term “global warming.” I prefer the term “global weirding,” because that is what actually happens as global temperatures rise and the climate changes. The weather gets weird. The hots are expected to get hotter, the wets wetter, the dries drier and the most violent storms more numerous.
- Historically, we know that the climate has warmed and cooled slowly, going from Ice Ages to warming periods. What the current debate is about is whether humans — by emitting so much carbon and thickening the greenhouse-gas blanket around the earth so that it traps more heat — are now rapidly exacerbating nature’s natural warming cycles.
- Those who favor taking action are saying: “Because the warming that humans are doing is irreversible and potentially catastrophic, let’s buy some insurance — by investing in renewable energy, energy efficiency and mass transit.” We will import less oil, invent and export more clean-tech products, send fewer dollars overseas to buy oil and, most importantly, diminish the dollars that are sustaining the worst petro-dictators in the world who indirectly fund terrorists.

- Even if climate change proves less catastrophic than some fear, in a world that is forecast to grow from 6.7 billion to 9.2 billion people between now and 2050, more and more of whom will live like Americans, demand for renewable energy and clean water is going to soar.

China, of course, understands that, which is why it is investing heavily in clean-tech, efficiency and high-speed rail. It sees the future trends and is betting on them. Indeed, I suspect China is quietly laughing at us right now. And Iran, Russia, Venezuela and the whole OPEC gang are high-fiving each other. Nothing better serves their interests than to see Americans becoming confused about climate change, and, therefore, less inclined to move toward clean-tech. Yes, sir, it is morning in Saudi Arabia.

GOP regular: McCain is what he's almost always been

What has happened to John McCain? This month, the Arizona Republican reacted angrily when the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff came out for scrapping the military's "don't ask, don't tell" rule on homosexuals — even though McCain earlier said he'd follow the commanders' advice on the issue.

Before that, McCain voted against a bipartisan proposal for a deficit reduction commission, even though he initially was one of the measure's co-sponsors. The vote was a jab at President Obama, who had endorsed the idea to show that he was serious about reducing the deficit.

So has McCain, the Republican maverick who bucked his party's leaders to launch bipartisan legislation on campaign finance reform, turned back into a partisan conservative? Not really. He's always been a partisan conservative — most of the time.

Ever since he entered politics as a foot soldier for Ronald Reagan in the House in 1982, McCain has been a fiscal conservative, a traditionalist on social issues and a hawk on foreign policy.

Yes, he's broken with his party's majority on a handful of issues — campaign finance, climate change and immigration — but except for campaign finance, the breaks have never been radical or long lasting. His image as an independent has been exaggerated, often by those of us in the media who yearn for politicians to break ranks because it makes a good story.

Not surprisingly, that's McCain's story too. "I don't believe that I've changed," he told me last week. "I'm somewhat entertained by the notion that I have." In fact, McCain gave up most of his maverick ways beginning in 2006, when he decided to run for the Republican presidential nomination and found that he had to convince conservatives that he was still one of them.

That's when he reversed his position on then-President George W. Bush's big tax cuts; he had at first opposed them as a giveaway to the rich, but since 2006 he has wanted to keep them. And he made similar moves on other issues. Any voter who watched the 2008 presidential campaign knows that McCain ran as a thoroughgoing conservative.

His only excursion into maverickland was choosing Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin as his running mate. On gays in the military and other social issues, McCain has long been a more traditional conservative than his libertarian mentor, the late Sen. Barry M. Goldwater, R-Ariz. Critics have pointed to McCain's promise in 2006 to reconsider "don't ask, don't tell" if the military's leadership ever proposed a change — and accused him of hypocrisy when he attacked Navy Adm. Michael G. Mullen, chairman of the Joint Chiefs, for doing exactly that. But they have overlooked McCain's other, blunter statements of his views. "I remain opposed to the open expression of homosexuality in the U.S. military," McCain, the son and grandson of admirals, wrote in 2007.

That's still his position today. "It's my view that the rule is working," he told me. "Changing it was a campaign pledge by the president. It wasn't that there was any huge discontent in the military." If the leaders of the armed forces — not just Mullen — formally decide that a change is warranted, "I will pay close attention," McCain said.

But that's all. His vote against the deficit commission he once supported is harder to explain except as an act of party loyalty (Senate Republican leader Mitch McConnell asked for it) and as another way to take a swipe at Obama. He said it's because he feared a commission with a Democratic majority would recommend tax increases.

But McCain doesn't much like the Democrat who defeated him in the 2008 presidential election. And it's not simply because he lost the race. The two tangled even before the presidential campaign, when then-Sen. Obama briefly signed on to a McCain proposal for bipartisan ethics legislation — only to back out when Democratic leaders sponsored a different bill.

A furious McCain wrote Obama a letter that he then released: "I'm embarrassed to admit that after all these years in politics, I failed to interpret your [promises of bipartisanship] as typical rhetorical gloss . . . to make self-interested partisan posturing appear more noble."

During the campaign, McCain never hid his view that Obama, 25 years his junior, was too inexperienced to be president, or his anger at what he considered distortions of his positions by the Obama campaign. "I've always tried to be respectful," he said last week — and then swung vigorously into denunciation. "The president says he's serious about bipartisanship," McCain said. "But not once to my knowledge has there been a serious face-to-face negotiation where you start from scratch. . . . They figured they could just jam [their program] through and/or pick off one or two Republicans and call it bipartisan."

"There really has been no change in Washington," he said. "It's power politics . . . That was not the rhetoric that the president used during the campaign."

Democrats who once worked with McCain accuse him of simply being bitter about his election loss. Others note that McCain, 73, faces a challenge from the right in Arizona's Republican primary election in August; former Rep. J.D. Hayworth hopes to unseat the senator by branding him as not conservative enough. After an early poll showed that the race could be close, McCain started campaigning early, collected a pile of conservative endorsements, including Palin's, and now appears to have a comfortable lead.

But there's one more factor: McCain enjoys being an underdog. When Republicans were in the majority, he sometimes bucked the GOP leadership on issues he was passionate about. But when Democrats control the White House and Congress, and are pushing healthcare and energy bills he doesn't like, his instinct is to fight that power.

"What's the main issue of the day?" McCain said. "Healthcare — and of course I'm on the floor fighting. This is a fierce debate we're in, and I've enjoyed it. I've enjoyed watching American public opinion come our way. . . . I am a happy man."

If Republicans ever regain control of the Senate, McCain might turn unpredictable again. But for now, he's content to battle as the regular Republican he has almost always been.

OTHER VIEWS

Here's what Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

... partisan numbers

Idaho Statesman, Boise

Last Friday, the Legislature's Republican budget-writers clung to caution and threw Mike Ferguson to the wind.

In a party-line vote that sums up the 2010 legislative session, the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee accepted a set of low-end revenue forecasts for the next 16 1/2 months.

In essence, the number-crunchers on JFAC are operating on faith — or lack thereof. They are showing a complete lack of confidence in Ferguson, the state's longtime chief economist, who continues to forecast an uptick in state revenues.

It's worth remembering whom Ferguson works for, and whom he doesn't work for. He has spent a quarter century tracking the economy for the state's Division of Financial Management. He has worked in Republican and Democratic administrations, an objective arbiter in a high-profile role. He serves neither political party, nor their ideological interests.

It is possible that the Republicans are putting a damper on recovery by poor-mouthing the economy. When does prudence give way to self-fulfilling prophesy?

This tone has been building all session.

Gov. Butch Otter started things off five weeks ago, when he sided with GOP legislative leadership by refusing to budget the $83.4 million in revenue increases Ferguson has forecast (and continues to forecast) for 2010-11. The Legislature's economic outlook committee cut the forecasts even further establishing, on nearly a party-line vote, the revenue figures adopted by JFAC Friday. The 16 Republicans on JFAC endorsed these low numbers, $2.28 billion for 2009-10 and $2.29 billion for 2010-11. The panel's four Democrats voted no.

These partisan prognostications are no idle exercise. They decide how much money the state will spend on public schools, higher education, prisons and Medicaid — and how much will have to be cut from these budgets.

Let's hope the budgeting itself is done in a less partisan fashion. That's the least the Legislature could do for the state's 275,000 public school students, 66,000 college students and 201,000 Medicaid patients.

JFAC has a daunting task. Just to bring the 2009-10 budget in line with the new, lower revenue numbers, the committee will have to find $69 million in cuts — in the final 4+ months of the budget year. That challenge doesn't provide much free time for posturing.

The expectations game figures to be a recurring election-year theme. On the eve of Friday's vote, Democratic gubernatorial candidate Keith Allred urged JFAC members to avoid falling prey to "irrational pessimism," a phrase he has used to describe Otter's budgeting. Last week, House Democrats met with Ferguson, who said he saw no reason to revise his forecasts.

It's a strange session. Who could have predicted "irrational pessimism" would become a recurring talking point? And who could have predicted that sitting down with a state-employed economist would become a political statement unto itself?

... Idaho's legislative albatross

Lewiston Tribune

When a politician starts off denying he has a conflict of interest in a matter, it's because he can't see it. For everyone else, it's a conflict too obvious to ignore.

Such was the case recently when Sen. Jeff Siddoway, R-Terreton, launched into a tirade against Idaho Fish and Game Commissioner Tony McDermott of Sagle.

McDermott, who represents the Panhandle, was up for a confirmation vote. In the end, Siddoway, himself a former member of the Fish and Game Commission, persuaded nine of his colleagues to join him — including Lee Heinrich, R-Cascade but McDermott was confirmed.

Siddoway contends Fish and Game's wolf hunting quota of 220 was too low.

Siddoway is a sheep rancher.

"My objection has nothing to do with me being a rancher," said Siddoway. "It has everything to do with the responsibility a Fish and Game commissioner has . . . for the benefit of the hunters and fishermen of this state."

That's going to be a hard case for Siddoway to make.

Conflicts of interest are an everyday event in a citizen-legislature. A teacher comes to Boise and finds himself voting for public school budgets. A defense lawyer weighs in on drunk-driving laws. It comes down to whether a measure benefits that legislator's occupation generally or the lawmaker directly. State ethics laws leave it up to the individual to declare whether he has a conflict. He then can vote or ask to be excused.

Siddoway is not the only sheep rancher in Idaho although the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Wildlife Services reported a "sharp increase in sheep depredations" last year in Clark and Freemont counties "where three different wolf packs (Biscuit Basin, Middle Creek and Sage Creek) were responsible for 148 sheep killed or injured."

As a result, the Middle Creek and Sage Creek packs were removed.

Nor is this anything new. A year ago, Siddoway spearheaded a bill that put the interests of domestic sheep ahead of bighorns. But it's up to federal land managers not the state to decide how to keep bighorns from contracting a deadly form of pneumonia from their domestic cousins and that could mean moving sheep ranchers off their allotments.

Likewise, Siddoway's narrow vision blinds him to the big picture of wolf management. Wolves are living up to their reputation for swiftness and intelligence. They're not easy to kill. As of early February, Idaho hunters had taken 149. With deer and elk hunting seasons over and at the present rate of wolf kills, hunters probably won't get more than another 14 before the wolf season closes March 31. So it doesn't matter if the quota is 220 or 400.

Besides, Idaho was whistling past U.S. District Judge Donald Molloy's courtroom just to get a hunting season under way. A year ago, Molloy blocked state management of wolves in Montana, Idaho and Wyoming because he thought Wyoming's plan was too aggressive. In response, federal officials opted to maintain Endangered Species Act protection for Wyoming's wolves and Molloy left Montana and Idaho's hunting seasons alone for the time being.

Because Siddoway had his way last year, efforts to reach a collaborative solution to protect both bighorns and domestic sheep ranchers blew up, so grazers may wind up on the losing side.

Were Siddoway to have his way on wolves this year, Molloy might have rejected an Idaho hunting season outright, leaving the state with more wolves than it has today.

When a legislator becomes more advocate than lawmaker, his actions can boomerang.

First love, then came marriage-night arrests

LEWISTON — A marriage got off to a rocky start after the 21-year-old groom from northern Idaho was arrested twice on his wedding night and charged with assaulting his new wife in nearby eastern Washington.

Court records show Nathan Lewis of Lewiston was charged Tuesday in Asotin County Superior Court with second-degree assault and interfering with a report of domestic violence.

The Nez Perce County Sheriff's Office in Idaho says Lewis was married Sunday and later arrested for drunken and disorderly conduct in Lewiston.

Police say that after Lewis was released on bail, he assaulted his new wife at a home in nearby Clarkston, Wash. The bride told authorities she was slapped and choked during the altercation, the Lewiston Tribune reports.

Lewis is scheduled to be arraigned March 1.

GOP leaders back measure to help city utilities

BOISE — Some ranking Idaho Republican leaders say support is strong for a measure that would give cities operating their own electrical utilities the authority to sign long-term deals with major power suppliers.

Leaders from Idaho Falls and the city-owned utility have been lobbying state lawmakers to pass a resolution this year enabling the utility to complete a 17-year power supply contract with the Bonneville Power Administration.

That joint resolution was introduced in the House Revenue and Taxation Committee Tuesday, the same day House Assistant Majority Leader Scott Bedke, R-Oakley predicted few hurdles to passage.

"I don't know that there's any opposition that I've heard of," Bedke told The Post-Register. "I think that one's smooth sailing."

Inmate found dead in Canyon Co. Jail

CALDWELL — A 24-year-old inmate has been found dead in his cell at the Canyon County Jail in Caldwell.

Canyon County Sheriff's officials say an autopsy will be done to determine the cause of Eric L. Melchor's death.

Authorities say they found Melchor unconscious and not breathing at 4:19 p.m. Tuesday. Paramedics were not able to revive him, and he was pronounced dead at the scene.

The death is under investigation.

Melchor was being held in the jail on a felony charge of assault/battery on a law enforcement officer.

Boise loses bid for federal cash for streetcar

BOISE — The city of Boise has lost in its bid to get federal stimulus cash to help pay for a trolley system.

The federal government announced Wednesday the winning grants competing for $1.5 billion in transportation funding.

Boise had sought $40 million to help pay for a $60 million, 2.3-mile loop of track connecting several downtown districts.

Altogether, Idaho cities submitted seven applications for the money, and none of those won.

Cece Gassner, an assistant to Mayor Dave Bieter, says the city knew it faced long odds considering nearly 1,400 applications were submitted for consideration.

BLM looks to Audubon to map sage grouse habitat

CHEYENNE — The U.S. Bureau of Land Management is looking to Audubon Wyoming to map sage grouse habitat across the 11 states where the bird is found.

Sage grouse have been losing their sagebrush habitat for decades and now face listing under the Endangered Species Act. The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service expects to announce a listing decision next week.

New regulations resulting from an endangered or threatened species listing could substantially affect a variety of land uses across the West, including gas development and wind energy.

The BLM plans to award a contract for mapping sage grouse habitat to the Audubon Wyoming by early March. The contract amount has not been negotiated yet but won't exceed $100,000, said Chad Hepp, a BLM contracting officer in Denver.

Scientists: Teton Range bighorn herd at risk

JACKSON — The roughly 100 animals that make up the isolated Teton Range bighorn sheep herd are at risk of extinction because they no longer migrate from their tough high-mountain habitat during the winter and are genetically isolated, scientists said.

The herd used to migrate every winter from the high peaks of the Tetons to lower, warmer climes.

The herd stopped migrating after about 1950 as development and domestic sheep grazing increased at lower elevations, said biologist Aly Courtemanch, a University of Wyoming master's degree candidate working for the Wyoming Cooperative Fish and Wildlife Research Unit.

"Their winter range was taken over by houses and roads," she said.

Courtemanch and other researchers are using tracking devices and help from backcountry skiers to learn how the herd survives harsh temperatures and sparse winter habitat. It's the most recent effort of the Teton Bighorn Sheep Working Group, which formed in the early 1990s.

Public lands managers have closed some backcountry terrain to skiers, including Static Peak and Prospectors Mountain, to reduce the animals' exposure to humans.

Researchers say the sheep react badly to people. Given the lack of food during winter in the Tetons, a disturbance by a backcountry skier could cause sheep to burn enough calories to die.

S.C. Idaho fuel prices among highest in state

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

Motorists in south-central Idaho are once again paying more than the state and national average for fuel, according to AAA Idaho.

The average price at the pump for a gallon of regular-grade gasoline in Twin Falls, Burley and Jerome markets was $2.76 as of Wednesday

FUEL PRICES

Wednesday's average price for gasoline:

— 5 cents more than the average price in Idaho and 15 cents more than the national average. The average price during the same time last year was $2.71 per gallon.

Prices in Idaho demonstrated a fairly large range, said AAA Idaho Director of Public and Government Affairs Dave Carlson. Wednesday's average price in Coeur d'Alene was $2.55 per gallon, compared to $2.61 in Pocatello and $2.71 in Boise.

Carlson said fuel wholesalers receive inventories from a pipeline that originates in Salt Lake City, passes through Cassia County and then veers west through Boise and Pasco, Wash. Although south-central Idaho is closer to the source, it still continues to report some of the highest prices. "The wide range probably has as much to do with the weather as it does competition," Carlson said. "There are a lot of variables involved, so you can't really blame it on any one retailer. A lot of these guys are taking their queues from prices set by wholesalers or competing retailers."

Local fuel retailers did not immediately return phone calls from the Times-News.

U.S. pump prices dropped 13 cents since mid-January, averaging $2.61 on Wednesday, but Idaho's average price remained mostly unchanged during the same period. Motorists in Idaho are paying 10 cents more per gallon at $2.71 than the national average. Idaho started the year with an

Ater appointed to improvement district board

Gail Ater, owner of Gail S. Ater Counseling Services LLC in downtown Twin Falls, is now the newest member of the Twin Falls Historic Downtown Business Improvement District's board.

He was appointed Tuesday evening by a unanimous vote of the Twin Falls City Council.

One of three candidates interviewed by a city committee, Ater was recommended because he will make the BID board more diverse, said Councilman Lance Clow, one of the committee members.

Ater also had support from Scott Andrus, the business owner behind a current push to dissolve the BID, who in a letter to the city wrote that until the BID is undone he felt it important to promote solid candidates for its board.

Acquisition would change ownership of malls in Boise, Pocatello, I.F.

By Alex Veiga

Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — Simon Property Group Inc., the largest U.S. shopping mall owner, made a $10 billion hostile bid Tuesday to acquire ailing rival General Growth Properties.

The acquisition would allow General Growth, the No. 2 owner of shopping centers, including Boise Towne Square Mall in Boise and properties in Pocatello and Idaho Falls, to emerge from bankruptcy protection. General Growth filed for bankruptcy last year after buckling under the weight of billions in debt it racked up during a massive expansion effort fueled by cheap credit.

The move is Simon's second attempt at a major acquisition in three months. In December, Simon offered $700 million in cash and stock to buy more than 60 outlet shopping centers from another competitor, Prime Outlets Acquisition Co. The deal is pending.

John Deere reports jump in 1Q profit

By Josh Funk
Associated Press writer

Deere & Co. boosted its outlook for 2010 Wednesday after reporting a 19 percent jump in first-quarter profit, and the heavy equipment maker's shares spiked before the market opened.

Revenues tumbled 6 percent, yet the company said lower costs and better currency rates helped offset the "stubbornly weak" economy.

The maker of iconic green and yellow machinery said it earned $243.2 million, or 57 cents per share, during the quarter that ended Jan. 31. That's up 19 percent from $203.9 million, or 48 cents per share a year ago.

Analysts surveyed by Thomson Reuters expected profits of 19 cents on average, but Deere beat even the highest profit prediction of 38 cents per share.

Deere shares gained 6.7 percent to sell for $57.40 in premarket trading Wednesday.

Deere, based in Moline, Ill., said its revenue fell to $4.8 billion from $5.1 billion a year ago.

Industry output, home building data boosts hope

By Daniel Wagner and Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — The latest evidence that manufacturers are helping lead the economic recovery emerged Wednesday in a report that industrial production posted its seventh straight increase in January.

The report from the Federal Reserve showed gains in all three major categories: manufacturing, mining and utilities. It was the first such collective show of strength since August 2009. Manufacturing output rose 1 percent, led by a nearly 5 percent gain in auto production.

Manufacturing has been a major contributor to the early stages of the economic rebound. In the fourth quarter, for example, roughly two-thirds of growth came from a burst of manufacturing activity. Factories have been churning out goods for businesses that had let their stockpiles dwindle as a way to save cash.

Housing starts

A separate sign of strength Wednesday came in a Commerce Department report on housing construction. Home building posted a better-than-expected increase last month. Activity reached its highest point in six months.

Construction rose 2.8 per-

cent to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of 591,000 units. That was better than the 580,000 annual pace economists were forecasting.

Applications for building permits, a gauge of future activity, fell 4.9 percent to a rate of 621,000. That followed two months of sharp increases.

The construction gains raised hopes that the industry is starting to sustain its recovery from its worst slump in decades.

Still, analysts noted that most of the strength came from a jump in the volatile sector of apartment buildings. The much larger single-family category rose only slightly and didn't make up for a sharp decline in December.

Overall housing activity remains sluggish. And economists cautioned that a housing recovery could stall if the government's tax credits for home buyers expire as scheduled at the end of April. They also noted that the gains in industrial production, though encouraging, may provide only limited benefit to the broader economy.

"Unfortunately, activity in other sectors of the economy, such as housing and services, is still relatively weak," Paul Ashworth, an economist at Capital Economics, wrote in a research note.

Federal deficit at $430.69 billion through January

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The federal deficit through the first four months of the budget year is running at a record-breaking pace even though the deficit in January was slightly smaller than expected.

The massive tide of red ink reflects the continued fallout from a deep recession and a severe financial crisis. It highlights the formidable challenges President Barack Obama will face in trying to get the deficit down to more manageable levels.

The Treasury Department said Wednesday that the deficit for January totaled $42.63 billion. That left the total of red ink so far this budget year at $430.69 billion, 8.8 percent higher than last year when the deficit soared to an unprecedented level of $1.42 trillion.

Obama, in sending Congress a new budget plan on Feb. 1, projected that this year's deficit would hit $1.56 trillion and would remain above $1 trillion for three consecutive years. He forecast the 2011 deficit, for the budget year that begins next Oct. 1, would total $1.27 trillion.

The administration on Wednesday marked the GOP sees possible gain from health care summit

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Congressional Republicans see a chance for political gain in President Obama's televised health care summit next week, even though the president will be running the show.

Obama and the Democrats are certain to highlight a crucial element of their health care plan — extending coverage to more than 30 million Americans — at the one-of-a-kind event. By comparison, a Republican plan would only help 3 million more. But during a time of ballooning deficits, the GOP figures reining in rising medical costs — not coverage — could resonate with voters in an election year.

The Democratic health overhaul plan is estimated at some $1 trillion over 10 years, and Republicans will contrast their financial approach with that of the Democrats. So even on Obama's turf, the GOP thinks it can score a few political points.

“I think what we have to do is keep it on the policy and really continue to describe that we have listened to the American people, and anyone listening to the American people would say scrap this bill and begin again, and let's begin again by focusing on lowering costs,” Rep. Dave Camp of Michigan, who will be attending the summit as the top Republican on the House Ways and Means Committee, said Tuesday.

Republicans know they go into the half-day event Feb. 25 with built-in disadvantages. Obama dominated when he debated House Republicans at their retreat in Baltimore last month, and the White House would like to recreate that dynamic, capitalizing on Obama's speaking skills.

The president has already said he'll moderate the forum, and the location and staging at the Blair House guest residence are of the White House's choosing, giving Democrats home-court advantage. But Republicans say they have a different advantage: Polls show Americans side with them on the substance.

Hand-swabs may play bigger role at airports

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Air travelers may have their hands swabbed more often as part of a stepped-up effort to screen passengers for explosives, an Obama administration official said Wednesday.

Airports were told Wednesday that more passengers should be randomly screened for explosives before, during and after they go through metal detectors, the official said.

The screening could include swabbing travelers' hands or their carry-on luggage to check for traces of explosives, said the official, who requested anonymity to speak about security plans.

The heightened screening follows a Christmas Day attack on a Detroit-bound airliner. A Nigerian man accused of being trained by al-Qaida operatives has been charged with trying to blow up the plane with explosives hidden in his underwear.

Other security measures have been enhanced since the December attack. Heightened screening measures have been tested at five airports over the past month.

Judging stimulus: Jobless rate high, growth real

By Brett J. Blackledge and Jim Kuhnenn
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — Did the stimulus work or not? A year after Congress passed President Obama's huge economic revival plan, the results are mixed — and hardly final.

Despite Obama's bold promises, unemployment remains stubbornly high. But job losses have slowed dramatically.

And the nation's recent economic growth is real, even though the government has spent just one-third of the massive stimulus plan. The program — originally estimated at $787 billion but now priced at $862 billion — is to continue pumping federal money into the economy into 2011.

One year into the program:

— Many states and local governments owe their fiscal survival to the stimulus. But those governments are scrambling to find ways to fill the holes in the coming year.

— Thousands of road and bridge projects broke ground

Stimulus status: most project funds remain in limbo

More than 86 percent of the $226 billion devoted toward projects to rebuild the nation's infrastructure and build industries in the future have gone unspent.

with stimulus money, helping to keep the anemic construction industry afloat. But job losses still were significant, with as many as one in four construction workers unemployed.

Obama used Wednesday's one-year anniversary to offer his own assessment and, predictably, rated the effort an unprecedented success.

“There has never been a program of this scale, moved at this speed, that has been enacted as effectively and as transparently as the recovery act,” the president declared.

But the legacy of the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act is yet to be sealed.

In the next 12 months there will be a second wave of government spending, perhaps topping $300 billion. By this time next year, the country could have a better idea whether the program was a costly, debt-increasing blip that made ripples in the nation's economy, or a lifesaving jolt that shielded the country from a financial abyss.

Obama argued on Wednesday that the history already had been written. “One year later, it is largely thanks to the recovery act that a second depression is no longer a possibility,” he said.

How are others to judge the recovery program?

When Obama launched it last year, he cast the program as bigger and better than just an ordinary jobs bill. The program, he said, would provide lasting public works projects, improve education, save ailing state and local governments, offer relief to millions devastated by losing their jobs and homes and help provide much-needed health care.

Despite the broad range of those promises — and evidence shows that at least some of them have been kept — Obama's stimulus will forever be judged by jobs. By the time the stimulus program kicked in last April, the recession had cost the economy more than 6 million jobs. Since the program began, the nation has lost 2 million more.

Job creation became the administration's mantra. And the White House said the program would be held accountable with an unprecedented public report of every job linked to the stimulus.

Indeed, the jobs were documented one by one on a new government Web site, and the administration proudly pointed to more than 640,000 linked to the stimulus in the early months. It was the best evidence to prove that the stimulus was well on its way to fulfilling Obama's promise of 3.5 million jobs saved or created by the program.

But those counts were seriously flawed, including greatly exaggerated job claims, positions included that had nothing to do with the stimulus, and spending that had nothing to do with saving or creating jobs. It was a blow to Obama's efforts to prove the stimulus truly performed as promised, and it ended with the White House deciding to count jobs the old fashioned way — by estimating.

When Obama signed the stimulus law, the nation's unemployment rate was 7.7 percent. His administration had promised the program would stop the jobless rate from passing 8 percent. But weeks after the stimulus became law, that threshold was broken.

Students complained about prof charged in rampage

By Jay Reeves
Associated Press writer

HUNTSVILLE, Ala. — Students banded together to let administrators know something wasn't quite right about Professor Amy Bishop. She taught by reading straight out of the textbook, never made eye contact and liked to remind people constantly that she went to Harvard.

“We could tell something was off, that she was not like other teachers,” said nursing student Caitlin Phillips, who was among those who complained to administrators at least three times a year ago that the biology professor was unsettling and ineffective in the classroom. Some students also signed a petition against Bishop.

Students said they had no reason to think she might turn violent. But after Bishop's arrest Friday on charges of shooting to death three colleagues during a faculty meeting at the University of Alabama in Huntsville, the complaints add to the picture that has emerged of her as a brilliant but erratic figure.

While police have not released a motive for the shootings, colleagues said the 44-year-old neuroscientist was simmering with resentment over being denied tenure last March.

Her court-appointed lawyer, Roy W. Miller, declined to comment on the case. “It is just so premature,” he said. “I just got involved.”

Since the shooting, other disturbing behavior from Bishop has come to light.

In 1986, she killed her 18-year-old brother with a shotgun blast in Braintree, Mass., then demanded a getaway car at gunpoint from an auto dealer, authorities said. She claimed the gun went off accidentally, and she was never charged.

Rep. William Delahunt, D-Mass., the district attorney at the time, said Wednesday he has limited memory of the case. He spoke with The Associated Press in Israel, where he was traveling.

Current District Attorney William Keating said reports his office released this week show a “glaring” lack of communication between state and local police on the case.

Bishop and her husband were also scrutinized in 1993 after someone sent pipe bombs to a Harvard professor with whom she worked. The bombs did not go off and no one was ever charged.

Bishop

In 2002, Bishop was charged with assault, battery and disorderly conduct after a tirade at the International House of Pancakes in Peabody, Mass. Police said Bishop became incensed when she found out another mother had received the restaurant's last booster seat.

Innocent Judges free NC murder convict who served 16 years in prison

By Martha Waggoner
Associated Press writer

RALEIGH, N.C. — A North Carolina man who insisted he was innocent of murder through more than 16 years in prison was declared a free man Wednesday after a groundbreaking exoneration pressed by the nation's only statewide innocence panel.

Greg Taylor's shackles were removed and he was swept into the arms of his relatives, including a daughter and the son-in-law he met for the first time. Taylor said he was looking forward to a good meal and thrilled that he was no longer considered guilty of murdering a prostitute in 1991.

“To think all these years what this day would be like; 6,149 days and finally the truth has prevailed,” said Taylor, 47, after three judges agreed he didn't kill Jacquetta Thomas.

It took Superior Court Judge Howard Manning 5 1/2 minutes to read a ruling that meant Taylor wouldn't spend a 6,150th day behind bars. Of that ruling, just 60 seconds involved each judge's decision.

The three judges, appointed by the state's chief justice, heard six days of arguments and testimony at the recommendation of the North Carolina Innocence Commission, the only state-run agency in the country dedicated to proving a convicted person's innocence.

The judges ruled not only that Taylor was not guilty of the beating death of Thomas, but that he proved his innocence after a case that questioned the policies of state investigators and experts whose work put Taylor behind bars.

“Today was a great day for the North Carolina system of justice,” defense attorney Joe Cheshire said. “I never doubted this man's innocence.”

Unlike a trial, where the prosecution must prove a defendant's guilt, the defense was required to prove Taylor's innocence. The attorneys did that by taking apart almost every aspect of the prosecution's case, from proving there was no blood on Taylor's SUV to discrediting eyewitness testimony.

By the end, only a few prosecution witnesses held fast to their testimony, including a jailhouse informant who said Taylor confessed to him in the crowded jail cell they shared and a woman who said she saw the murder victim with Taylor and his friend, Johnny Beck.

But she also said she had suffered at the time from untreated bipolar disorder and had consumed several 40-ounce beers, a bottle of wine and five rocks of crack cocaine.

N.J. man tells police he tossed baby off bridge

WOODBRIDGE, N.J. (AP) — A man who snatched his infant daughter from the arms of her maternal grandmother while the child's mother was in court getting a restraining order against him told police he threw the baby off a bridge and into a frigid New Jersey river, prompting a massive search Wednesday beneath a busy parkway.

Search teams, including boats, dogs and helicopters, scoured the area beneath the Garden State Parkway's Driscoll Bridge in central New Jersey for any signs of 3-month-old

Zara Malani-lin Abdur. Acting New Jersey Attorney General Paula Dow called the incident "an example of a horrific case of domestic violence."

Authorities suspended the search after dark and planned to resume at daybreak Thursday.

Authorities say the girl's father, 21-year-old Shamsiddi Abdur-Raheem of Galloway Township, allegedly forced his way into the grandmother's East Orange apartment around 4 p.m. Tuesday, striking her in the face, choking her, and forcibly taking the baby, wrapped in a blanket and a pink and gray onesie, before fleeing in his vehicle. The 60-year-old grandmother, who police declined to identify, chased after Abdur-Raheem and was struck when she tried to stop him by throwing herself in the path of his van. She was treated for her injuries at a local hospital and released.

Abdur-Raheem was arrested four hours after the abduction in southern New Jersey, and allegedly confessed to police that he had tossed the child from the bridge before driving to consult with his Imam, who then drove him to the home of a relative who called police.

Abdur-Raheem faces charges of kidnapping, attempted murder aggravated assault and child endangerment when he is arraigned this morning in Superior Court in Newark. It was not immediately clear if he has retained a lawyer. He is being held at the Essex County Jail on $700,000 bail.

Cops: Imitation pot as bad as the real thing

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — There may be nothing like the real thing, but some industrious marijuana users have seized on an obscure but easily accessible substance that mimics the drug's effects on the brain — creating a popular trade in legal dope that has stymied law enforcement authorities.

The users are buying a product known as K2 — or "Spice," "Genie" and "Zohai" — that is commonly sold in head shops as incense. Produced in China and Korea, the mixture of herbs and spices is sprayed with a synthetic compound chemically similar to THC, the psychoactive ingredient in marijuana. Users roll it up in joints or inhale it from pipes, just like the real thing.

Though banned in most of Europe, K2's key ingredients are not regulated in the United States — a gap that has prompted lawmakers in Missouri and Kansas to consider new legislation.

"This isn't Jerry Garcia's marijuana," said state Rep. Jeff Roorda, a Democrat from the eastern Missouri town of Barnhart. "They've used chemicals to avoid creating something that's already illegal."

Authorities in Johnson County, Kan., discovered ex-convicts on probation smoking K2, and said it is spreading to high school students.

"This has become extremely popular," said Linda Weber, owner of The Vise smoke shop in the St. Louis suburb of St. Peters, who said she only sells to adults.

She said she sells about 60 packages a week, with suppliers calling her weekly to pitch new brands. She said she's keeping an eye on what state lawmakers decide, though, because "I definitely don't want to be selling it if it comes out that it's harmful."

K2 costs between $20 and $50 for three grams — similar to the street price of marijuana — but with the key advantages of being legal and undetectable in drug tests.

The key ingredients are believed to be the unintended result of scientific research on marijuana's effects.

Dr. John Huffman, a Clemson University organic chemistry professor, was researching the effects of cannabinoids on the brain when his work resulted in a 1995 paper that contained the method and ingredients used to make the compound. That recipe found its way to marijuana users, who replicated Huffman's work and began spraying it onto dried flowers, herbs and tobacco.

"People who use it are idiots," said Huffman, referring to K2 smokers.

A proposed bill in Missouri would make possession a felony punishable by up to seven years in prison — identical to punishments given to users of real marijuana. A similar bill in Kansas would make possession a misdemeanor punishable, with up to a year in jail and a $2,500 fine, also the same as marijuana convictions.

The products are sold widely, but authorities in other states contacted by The Associated Press, including Pennsylvania, California and Michigan, said they haven't heard of their use as a drug.

CSI men surging down the stretch

Eagles in SWAC title hunt after starting 3-5

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

His team was struggling. Struggling to get wins. Struggling to hold leads. Struggling to play as a unit. But even when the Golden Eagles were 11-7 overall and 3-5 in Scenic West Athletic Conference play, College of Southern Idaho head coach Steve Gosar believed it would all come together.

Gosar

“Our best basketball’s definitely ahead of us,” he said in early January. He was right.

In the last five weeks, CSI (18-8, 10-6 SWAC) rescued a season that appeared doomed for mediocrity. By going 7-1 in their last eight league games — including a 3-1 mark on the road — the Eagles are suddenly in the mix for a conference championship.

“It’s been nice seeing guys do what they’re capable of doing,” said Gosar. “As a staff, we knew our team had that ability, but we weren’t firing on all cylinders all the time.”

“Right now, the guys have recommitted themselves. To their credit, they recommitted themselves and knew they were better than what they were showing.”

First-place North Idaho College (22-4, 12-4) brings a No. 11 ranking to Twin Falls this week for games Friday (7:30 p.m.) and Saturday (5 p.m.) A CSI sweep would leave the teams level at 12-6 in SWAC play. If Salt Lake Community College (20-6, 11-5) loses at Eastern Utah (18-8, 11-5) on Saturday, CSI would be playing for a share of the SWAC crown next week when its hosts Colorado Northwestern and CEU.

Redshirt freshman forward Josten Thomas said the key to CSI’s turnaround is simple. “We’re just trusting each other,” he said. “That’s basically it — all five guys believing.”

While Gosar is thrilled with his team’s recent play, he has some perspective for his team.

“We’ve had a nice little run, but I don’t want our guys to get carried away. They need to think about what got them here. They’ve worked hard and really laid it on the line to get to this point.

Jerome grapplers claim district crown, earn 14 state bids

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Jerome will send at least 14 wrestlers to next week’s state tournament in Pocatello as the Tigers won their second Class 4A District IV wrestling title in a row on Wednesday at Minico High School.

“This team has worked together great,” said Nick Thorne, Jerome’s 130-pound champion. “We have some very, very good wrestlers. All together this year, we’ve put together one of the best teams I’ve seen.”

Jerome won the team title, although technically the district tournament isn’t over. Third and fourth-place matches in three weight classes were unable to finish on Wednesday due to the rule that disallows athletes to compete in more than five matches in a day. The remaining team points available, however, will not affect the final team standings.

Jerome has 313 points, second-place Minico has 248 and third-place Twin Falls has 193.5 points.

The Tigers had seven individual district champs, including Thorne, Eric Ayala (103 pounds), Kaden Luper (112), Jonathon Albers (135), Cody McCoy (160), Riley Argyle (189) and Layne Lasike (285).

Minico also qualified 14 for state. The Spartans’ individual champions were David Borden at 152 and Ramiro Riojas at 215.

Twin Falls will send at least eight wrestlers to state, with the possibility of three more with today’s matches.

Individual champions for the Bruins were Joe Hamilton (125), Will

Beard rips Bulldogs for 32 in Filer win

Wendell to face Kimberly for title berth

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

MEAGAN THOMPSON/Times-News

Filer’s Ryan Karel (4) drives to the hoop around Kimberly’s Nicola Schmid (55) Wednesday at the College of Southern Idaho.

Bryce Beard and the Filer boys basketball team weathered the storm. Then they went to work.

Beard hit seven 3-pointers and finished with a game-high 32 points as Filer routed Kimberly 70-56 Wednesday at the College of Southern Idaho to advance to the Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference Tournament championship game.

Kimberly (9-11) came out guns blazing in the first six minutes of the game, but went cold thereafter. Filer (16-4) kept up with the Bulldogs during their early spurt and then kicked its game into overdrive, hitting 14 3-pointers and locking down on defense.

Kimberly hit eight 3-pointers as it tried to get into a long-distance contest with the Wildcats, something that was right up Filer’s alley.

“We love that, especially when our shots are going in. And when they go cold that’s when we know we’ve got to get it in the hole,” said Filer senior Terrell Bailey, who drained five treys and finished with 18 points. “Playing here at CSI, with the different gym and all that, it’s a great experience. We love it.”

Filer stretched the lead to as great as 20 in the third quarter before working clock in the fourth quarter and allowing Kimberly to cut the gap to 12 on two occasions.

But the Bulldogs were simply overwhelmed by the resurgent Filer defense, which started a tide of momentum that swept its opponent away.

WHITE TAKES OLYMPIC GOLD ... WITH A MCTWIST

WEST VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — How ‘bout that! Putting on a show when he didn’t even have to, Shaun White capped his gold-medal night on the halfpipe with his signature trick Wednesday — the dangerous, spiraling Double McTwist 1260 during a victory lap that will go down as nothing short of epic. The redheaded shredder scored a 48.4 on the final run, even though he was already assured of defending his Olympic title with a score of 46.8 on his first trip. Getting ready to close the night, he debated with his coaches for a minute, then made the decision to go for it.

And he did — jerking his body around to milk the last half of the 3½ twists he crams into two head-over-heels flips.

An exclamation point on a spectacular day for the Americans at the Olympics, who already had golds from Alpine skier Lindsey Vonn and speedskater Shani Davis in the bag.

Declo wins district wrestling title

DECLO — They’re young, but they’re good.

Led by underclassmen, the Declo wrestling team won the Class 2A District IV wrestling championship Wednesday at Declo High.

A dozen Hornets earned spots in next week’s state wrestling tournament.

“What makes you a good champion is how you practice,” said Declo junior Justin Cameron, who won the 130-pound title. “If you practice hard and smart and work hard to reach your goals, then you’ll do good.”

Cameron was among four individual champs for Declo. Jaime Alonzo (103 pounds), Garrett Lindsey (140) and Nate Poulton (152) were the others.

Of Declo’s 12 qualifiers, six are freshmen.

“We’ve been watching them all through junior high and they’ve been good all the way up,” Cameron said. “The reason it’s good to have a

“There are certain areas that I’m not good at, but other people are,” said Kenney, who won his fourth district title. “It used to be that I was really bad at bottom, but after practicing and practicing it sort of evened everything out.”

The state wrestling tournament is Feb. 26-27 at Holt Arena in Pocatello.

CSI baseball on deck

This weekend: CSI hosts the Prairie Baseball Academy of Lethbridge, Alberta, in a five-game, three-day series. The two teams play a single game today and doubleheaders Friday and Saturday, with games starting at 1 p.m., each day.

CSI last week: The Golden Eagles went 3-1 in Henderson, Nev., to win the Coyote Classic tournament with two wins over No. 6 Central Arizona College and a split with Cochise (Ariz.) College, which swept No. 1 Southern Nevada.

Prairie Baseball Academy last week: This is the season-opener for the Dawgs.

Last meeting: The two teams split a four-game set in Twin Falls on Feb. 21-22, 2009.

New field: CSI will make its debut on the new turf at Skip Walker Field, after playing last season on a field riddled with dead grass due to a maintenance snafu that saw the surface sprayed with weed killer rather than fertilizer. CSI coach Boomer Walker said the maintenance crew took out about a foot of topsoil off the entire infield and trucked in new soil and sod.

Injury report: J.C. Paquin will miss at least the first three games of the series with a sprained ligament in his thumb, and is doubtful for Saturday. Chris Kerns is out with strep throat, and Trey Mohammed is out with an elbow problem.

Boomer says: “(Prairie has) always got some talented kids and their weather has been better than usual this year. I’m sure they’ve been outside and are ahead of where they were last year, and so are we. We hope to win all the games but we’re going to have to play well to win.”

On deck: CSI has a 13-day break after Saturday, before opening Scenic West Athletic Conference play by hosting Bryce Harper and preseason No. 1 Southern Nevada.

said Kimberly junior Brian Crane, who scored eight points. “They stepped up their game and we weren’t able to match it.”

Filer sat back in a relaxed half-court defense to start the game but quickly changed to a more aggressive half-court trap, which resulted in a number of turnovers and contested shots. Kimberly struggled under the sudden pressure and never really threatened to get back into the game despite cutting into Filer’s lead a handful of times.

The Wildcats, unbeaten in conference play and 2-0 in the district tournament will wait for Monday’s game between Kimberly and Wendell to determine which team they’ll face for the district championship and the automatic berth to the Class 3A state tournament in Meridian.

They will do so knowing that whoever comes to CSI next Wednesday will have to beat them twice, but they aren’t resting on that fact.

“We love the position we’re in, but it’s still one game at a time,” Beard said. “We know we have one more game (next) Wednesday back here, and whoever we get they’re going to be tough.”

WENDELL 48, BUHL 47

Gary Koopman scored 15 and Wendell held nearly blew a six-point lead with 90 seconds to go before holding on to eliminate Buhl 48-47 on Wednesday.

The Indians, who got 16 points from J.D. Leckenby, had two chances to win the game in the final seconds but Scott Harris’ free-throw-line jumper rimmed out and Matt Hamilton’s point-blank put-back was too strong.

Top seed Stricker ousted in first round at Match Play

MARANA, Ariz. (AP) — Steve Stricker took over for Tiger Woods as the No. 1 seed at the Match Play Championship, and then did something only Woods had achieved in the 12-year history of the event.

He lost in the opening round.

"History is showing in this event," Stricker said. "It can happen to anybody."

Ross McGowan of England, who only got into the 64-man field because Woods isn't playing, rolled in a 30-foot par putt on the 19th hole to become only the second No. 64 seed to win a match. The other was in 2002, when Peter O'Malley beat Woods in the first round.

It capped a wild day at Dove Mountain, even if the 32 matches were overshadowed by word that Woods, who has not been seen since revelations of his infidelity, will speak publicly on Friday for the first time in three months.

Even without being at the Match Play Championship, Woods' prints were all over the place.

"I guess everybody is going to get their answers," Sergio Garcia said after beating David Toms. "We'll see. I'm focused on this tournament here. That's a lot to worry about. I think he'll be OK."

Stricker was coming off a victory two weeks ago at Riviera, although recent form has no bearing over 18 holes of match play. Three days after he won at Pebble Beach, Dustin Johnson lost the first four holes and never had a chance against Camilo Villegas.

round. Lee Westwood controlled his match against fellow Englishman Chris Wood, Jim Furyk went 17 holes before beating Ryder Cup teammate Scott Verplank, and Martin Kaymer of Germany beat Chad Campbell, the first time

Campbell has failed to make it out of the first round.

Ryo Ishikawa made a sensational debut at this World Golf Championship.

The 18-year-old from Japan won the last three holes for a 2-up victory over Michael Sim of Australia in a match of rising stars. The signature moment came at the 17th, when Ishikawa hit from a fairway bunker to inside 2 feet for birdie.

Ishikawa advanced to the second round to face McGowan, who only learned he was coming to Arizona five days ago.

"I knew I had a good chance at the beginning of the day," McGowan said. "It is nice to win and get through for tomorrow. It was quite exciting when that one dropped on 19."

It was devastating for so many others.

Padraig Harrington, the No. 8 seed, couldn't make a putt and lost to Jeev Milkha Singh of India, who won his first match in three trips to Arizona. Henrik Stenson, who won this event in 2007 and was the No. 7 seed, didn't even get past the first hole. He conceded his match to Ben Crane because of flu-like symptoms.

The longest match belonged to Zach Johnson, who made a 3-foot par putt on the 21st hole to beat Francesco Molinari of Italy. His brother didn't make it, either. Even though Edoardo Molinari built a 4-up lead early on Stewart Cink, the British Open champion played what he called the best nine holes of his career for a 2-up victory.

The shortest day of work belonged fittingly to Mike Weir of Canada, who faced Alvaro Quiros of Spain, one of the biggest hitters in golf. Quiros didn't stand a chance — not many would have — against Weir's short stick. The Canadian opened with five straight birdies and made nine birdies in 12 holes for an 8-and-6 victory.

Millsap, Wiliams lead Jazz past Hornets

NEW ORLEANS — Paul Millsap scored 24 points on 11 of 13 shooting, and the Utah Jazz beat the New Orleans Hornets 98-90 on Wednesday night.

Carlos Boozer scored six of his 16 points in the last 3:06, helping Utah pull away after James Posey's 3-pointer had pulled New Orleans into a tie at 85. Boozer added 15 rebounds, and Deron Williams had 16 points and 10 assists for the Jazz, who shot 54 percent (38 of 70).

Rookie Darren Collison had 24 points and nine assists for New Orleans. Peja Stojakovic added 24 points, hitting 4 of 5 from 3-point range. Yet New Orleans struggled with its shooting overall, finishing at 38.6 percent.

Tiger will finally end his silence on Friday

MARANA, Ariz. (AP) — Tiger Woods will end nearly three months of silence Friday when he speaks publicly for the first time since his middle-of-the-night car accident sparked stunning revelations of infidelity.

However, his agent said Woods will not take any questions from a small group of media.

"This is not a press conference," Mark Steinberg said Wednesday.

It will be Woods' first public appearance since Nov. 27, when he crashed his SUV into a tree outside his Florida home. Woods' only comments since then have been made through his Web site.

"It will be good to see Tiger's face again, and see that he's actually out there somewhere," Stewart Cink said. "I think this is the beginning of the comeback process for him."

Woods is to speak at 11 a.m. Friday from the clubhouse at the TPC Sawgrass in Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla., home of the PGA Tour.

"This is all about the next step," Steinberg said. "He's looking forward to it."

Still, there was strict control over the appearance, typical of Woods' career.

Steinberg described the gathering as a "small group of friends, colleagues and close associates," who will listen to Woods apologize as he talks about the past and what he plans to do next. He said three wire services have been invited — The Associated Press, Reuters and Bloomberg — and he asked the Golf Writers Association of America to recommend pool reporters.

Only one camera will be in the room to provide live coverage via satellite. Steinberg said other writers with proper credentials could watch from a hotel ballroom more than a mile away.

"The first time out, he's better controlling it," Padraig Harrington said. "Over time, there will be questions. At the moment, the best thing is a more controlled environment and gradually ease his way back into it."

Steinberg said in an e-mail announcing the public appearance, "While Tiger feels that what happened is fundamentally a matter between he and his wife, he also recognizes that he has hurt and let down a lot of other people who were close to him. He also let down his fans. He wants to begin the process of making amends and that's what he's going to discuss."

The timing is peculiar. It will be held during the third round of the Accenture Match Play Championship in Arizona, sure to steal attention away from the first big event of the year. Accenture was the first sponsor to drop Woods when he became embroiled in the sex scandal.

BOISE — Anthony Thomas scored 15 points and Robert Arnold added 14 to lead Boise State to an 81-62 victory over Cal State Bakersfield on Wednesday night.

Boise State (12-14), which snapped a three-game losing streak, raced out to an 18-4 lead.

After trailing 38-25 at halftime, Bakersfield (7-19) closed the deficit to 43-38 with 14:30 remaining. Boise State responded with an 18-2 run over the next four minutes to put the game out of reach.

The Broncos made a season-high 12 three-pointers and shot a season-high 57 percent from the floor.

Justin Salzwedel and Paul Noonan each contributed 12 points for the Broncos, while Ike Okoye added 11.

OLYMPIC ROUNDUP

The Vonn-couver Olympics

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — Lindsey Vonn crossed the finish line, saw her time, then yelled and fell backward onto the snow.

Joy? Relief? Pain? All the emotions that come with being a gold-medal winner.

Despite a bruised right shin that made it painful to even wear a ski boot, Vonn dominated a crash-marred downhill to win the first of her five events at the Vancouver Olympics. (Or, as the hats seen in the crowd read: the Vonn-couver Olympics.)

“I gave up everything for this,” she said. “It means everything to me. ... I dreamed about what this would feel like, but it is much better in real life.”

Teammate and childhood rival Julia Mancuso was a surprising second, giving Americans the top two medals in an Alpine race for the first time in 26 years and starting a big day for the U.S.

Later, Shani Davis added a gold in 1,000-meter speedskating, and Shaun White defended his title in the half-pipe. At the end of the day, the U.S. led all countries with five gold medals and 14 overall.

Short-track speedskater Apolo Anton Ohno also had a good night, easily advancing through preliminaries of the men’s 1,000 and helping the United States move on to the 5,000 relay final. Both finals are Saturday, when Ohno can add to his cache of six Olympic medals and become the most decorated U.S. Winter Olympian.

WOMEN'S DOWNHILL

Since getting hurt in practice two weeks ago, Vonn spent more time with Austrian curd cheese smeared on her shin than being on the slopes. Several weather delays bought her time and kept her competition from getting too comfortable on this course.

She kicked out of the gate strong, building a quick lead and building on it. Just when it seemed she might lose control, she regained her form and kept charging toward the finish. A small bump just before the finish cost her a few ticks, but she still wound up winning by 0.56 seconds.

“I fought the whole way down,” she said. “It wasn’t a perfect run. I attacked, and I made it down.”

Maria Riesch of Germany, Vonn’s best friend and usual rival of late, finished eighth.

The course was tough, as evidenced by all the crashes. Swedish standout Anja Paerson went down hard, and another competitor had to be airlifted out. Yet another crashed across the finish line and disappeared under a logo of a skier; in trying to get up, she stuck out one ski, making for a bizarre image.

The only times Americans took gold and silver in an Alpine race both happened at the 1984 Sarajevo Games, with brothers Phil and Steve Mahre going 1-2 in the slalom and Debbie Armstrong and Christin Cooper doing so in giant slalom.

Vonn will be favored in two more races. It remains to be seen how much this event took out of her — or if it’s the start of a Phelps-like domination.

“I have what I want, and I’ll just keep fighting every day,” she said. “It’s definitely a huge relief that I finally did it.”

SPEEDSKATING

Davis didn’t come close to a medal in his first two events at these Olympics, but he came through in the 1,000, an event in which he holds the world record. With an impressive final kick, he edged South Korea’s Mo Tae-bum, who won the 500 and whose early pace Davis struggled to match.

Davis even shared the podium with Chad Hedrick again after the other American hopeful took the bronze. Davis and Hedrick had a nasty feud at the 2006 Turin Games, but both appeared in good spirits after Wednesday’s race. Davis and Hedrick finished second and third in the 1,500 in Turin.

“When you’re a world champion or an Olympic champion, you get this little thing on your back called a target,” said Davis, the first male skater to win this event a second time at the Winter Games. “To go out there and win the 1,000 meters twice is truly amazing.”

SHORT TRACK

Ohno easily advanced through the preliminaries of the 1,000, staying on course to surpass Bonnie Blair as the most decorated U.S. Winter Olympian.

Ohno, who won his sixth Olympic medal in the 1,500 Saturday, was third most of the way. Then, in the closing laps, he moved up to second before using a smooth inside move to take the lead over China’s Liang Wenhao.

From there, Ohno cruised to the finish line well ahead of the others to advance to the semifinals later Wednesday.

Ohno also joined J.R. Celski, Simon Cho and Travis Jayner in qualifying for the 5,000 relay final on Saturday.

Wang Meng of China easily won her second consecutive gold medal in the women’s 500 meters. She led all the way after surviving a restart and a false start in the four-woman final.

Wang cruised home well ahead of Canada’s Marianne St-Gelais, who took silver. Arianna Fontana of Italy earned the bronze.

MEN'S HOCKEY

With an assist on Finland’s opening goal in a 5-1 victory over Belarus, Teemu Selanne matched the record for most career points in the Olympics.

Selanne has 20 goals and 16 assists in five Olympics. Also with 36: Valeri Kharlamov of Russia, Vlastimil Bubnik of the former Czechoslovakia and Harry Watson of Canada.

There were initial concerns Selanne would not be able to play because of surgery last month for a broken jaw. He returned Feb. 1 and played seven games for Anaheim.

Defending champion Sweden shook off a slow start as Mattias Ohlund and Loui Eriksson scored in the second period to help beat Germany 2-0.

The Swedes did not have a shot on net until midway through the scoreless first period in their Vancouver Games opener.

WOMEN'S HOCKEY

So much for Canada’s first real test.

Meghan Agosta had three goals and two assists, Hayley Wickenheiser became the leading goal-scorer in Olympic history, and Canada routed the toughest opponent in its preliminary-round group, beating Sweden 13-1.

St. Louis Cardinals hitting coach Mark McGwire talks to the media during spring training Wednesday in Jupiter, Fla.

McGwire returns, offers fresh apology

JUPITER, Fla. (AP) — Mark McGwire’s first day on the job began with a wrong turn into the media room instead of the spring training clubhouse. It ended with another apology for steroid use.

The St. Louis Cardinals’ new batting coach spent time in the batting cage with hitters, sat in on a lengthy staff meeting and then answered questions from reporters for more than 15 minutes. He left more than six hours later Wednesday, but not before signing several autographs.

The 46-year-old McGwire seemed at ease in his first extended media availability since admitting a month ago that he used steroids and human growth hormone during his remarkable home run power surge in the 1990s. Echoing remarks he made in January, several times he asked for forgiveness as he seeks to rehabilitate a tarnished image.

“It’s something I regret,” McGwire said. “I can’t say I’m sorry enough to everybody in baseball and across America, and whoever watches this great game.

“I think people understand how truly sorry I was for what I did.”

McGwire refused to back off his assertion, much criticized, that steroids allowed him to recover from injuries and stay on the field, but didn’t help him break Roger Maris’ single season home run record in 1998. McGwire said it was the evolution of his swing and not a body enhanced by drugs that enabled him to hit 70 homers that year, smashing Maris’ 37-year-old record of 61, and 65 more in 1999.

“Like I’ve said, people are going to have their opinions,” McGwire said. “Listen, it got me the opportunity to get out there and get more at-bats, and I got the chance to play.”

Still, he said, he felt he owed it to the Maris family to call them before his steroids admission became public, saying it was the “right thing to do.” He said Pat Maris, Roger Maris’ widow was “upset and disappointed.”

McGwire said his team was a source of instant understanding after his confession. Especially manager Tony La Russa, a staunch supporter over the years who persuaded Cardinals’ management to back McGwire’s controversial hire last November as Hal McRae’s replacement.

“He’s the best, he’s like a second father to me,” McGwire said. “He’s seen me grow as a person, he’s seen me grow as a hitter.”

Answering critics who accused him of stopping short of full disclosure last month, McGwire countered that he “spoke from my heart.” He expressed no regrets from his many interviews and said more than once that he hopes the issue will die down soon.

“It took a lot to do what I did,” McGwire said. “I spoke the truth. Let’s move on and turn this into a really positive thing.”

Alternative treatment for Tourette's syndrome

DEAR DR. GOTT: My adult son suffers from Tourette's syndrome and obsessive compulsive disorder. Because it is a mild case, it doesn't warrant some of the medications and side effects that are used to treat TS, but daily life can be miserable. Do you know of any supplements or alternative treatments that are now being used to lessen his symptoms?

DEAR READER: I must admit your question took me to my reference material before I could proceed with an answer. Tourette's syndrome is a neurological disorder characterized by involuntary movements and vocalizations known as tics that are classified as simple or complex. Simple tics are brief, repetitive movements that involve a limited number of muscles. These may include eye blinking, head or shoulder jerks, facial grimacing and more. Vocalization includes grunting, sniffing, throat clearing and other sounds. Despite popular belief, vocal tics are uncommon, occurring in less than 15 percent of sufferers. Complex motor tics involve a greater number of muscles and may include shoulder shrugging, head twisting, hopping or jumping, inflicting bodily harm by punching oneself and touching things. Verbal tics may include the use of profanity and the repetition of words or phrases. Some TS sufferers find the compulsion to repeat words or phrases a specific number of times before the urge subsides. Tics can vary in type and severity; stress or periods of excitement can exacerbate them. The disorder typically presents from early adolescence into teenage years, but before the age of 18. The condition can be chronic and symptoms can last a lifetime, yet most people experience their worst symptoms during their early teens. Improvement can occur in the later teens, continuing into adulthood. A diagnosis of TS is made following verification that both motor and vocal tics have been present for at least one year. Most people do not require medication for control of symptoms. Neuroleptics, such as haloperidol and pimozide, are often prescribed when medication is necessary.

Psychotherapy may be effective in helping a person cope with the social and emotional aspects of the disorder. The national Tourette Syndrome Association (TSA) is an appropriate resource for learning more about the disorder and current treatment recommendations. They have published a brochure of alternative therapies but warn that there are many unsubstantiated claims about See DR. GOTT, Sports 7

Conservatives unveil manifesto in effort to jump-start resurgence

By Steven Thomma
McClatchy Newspapers

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — A group of conservatives unveiled a statement of principles called Constitutional Conservatism on Wednesday that reaffirms their belief in limited government and a strong national defense — but also chides members of their own coalition for straying from their beliefs.

“Through the Constitution, the Founders created an enduring framework of limited government based on the rule of law,” says the statement from a group that includes former Reagan administration Attorney General Edwin Meese and American Conservative Union leader David Keene.

“Each one of these founding ideas is presently under sustained attack. In recent decades, America’s principles have been undermined and redefined in our culture, our universities and our politics ...” the statement says. “The federal government today ignores the limits of the Constitution, which is increasingly dismissed as obsolete and irrelevant.”

The group, which met near George Washington’s home, hoped that its Mount Vernon Statement would help focus the movement on core ideas at the moment that Republicans are hoping a backlash against the Democrats might be paving the way for a conservative resurgence.

However, while conservatives oppose Democratic President Obama’s expansion of the federal government, the call for Constitutional Conservatism also is an alternative to Republican George W. Bush’s “compassionate conservatism?”

Many conservatives balked at the rapid rise in nondefense spending under Bush, and at the expansion of unchecked government power in the name of fighting terrorism after the 2001 attacks.

It appeared to step back from the fiery anti-government talk heard in some wings of the “tea party” movement.

“The conservatism of the Constitution limits government’s powers but ensures that government performs its proper job effectively,” its statement says.

“It refines popular will through the filter of representation. It provides checks and balances through the several branches of government and a federal republic.”

Former U.S. Attorney General Edwin Meese III, chairman of the Conservative Action Project, signs the Mount Vernon Statement during a ceremony at Collingwood Library and Museum in Alexandria, Va., Wednesday.

They have also received many case reports that certain environmental and chemical additives may worsen symptoms, and they welcome more anecdotal information to determine whether this (and other claims) is a possibility worth further investigation.

Interestingly, most people with Tourette’s also suffer from learning and behavior disorders such as obsessive compulsive disorder and attention deficient disorder. About 60 percent have ADD, 50 percent have OCD, 23 percent have learning disorders, and 15 percent have oppositional behavior or conduct disorders. OCD generally presents as obsession and/or compulsions of hand washing, counting or many other manifestations.

Lucille Clifton, National Book Award-winning poet, dies at 73

By Nick Madigan
The Baltimore Sun

BALTIMORE — Lucille Clifton, a National Book Award-winning poet and a finalist for the Pulitzer Prize, died Saturday at Johns Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore after a long battle with cancer and other illnesses. She was 73.

Clifton had been ill with an infection, her sister, Elaine Philip, told the Buffalo News. She had undergone surgery to remove her colon on Friday, but the exact cause of death remains undetermined.

In 2001, Clifton won the National Book Award for "Blessing the Boats: New and Selected Poems, 1988-2000."

She was also the first black woman to win the Ruth Lilly Poetry Prize award, in 2007, among the most prestigious awards that can be won by an American poet. It included a $100,000 stipend.

"I like the short, distinctive music that the poems make," Christian Wiman, editor of Poetry magazine and one of the three judges who selected the winner, told the Baltimore Sun in 2007. "It's admirable how simple and clear the surfaces are. But when you study her best poems, they keep opening into depths of complexity."

Clifton, who published 11 poetry collections and more than 20 children's books, was a finalist for the Pulitzer Prize for poetry in 1988.

Thelma Lucille Sayles was born June 27, 1936, in Depew, N.Y., a small town outside Buffalo. Her mother, who wrote poetry, encouraged her creativity and she began to compose stories and poems as a child. She was the first person in her family to graduate from high school and, in 1953, she won a scholarship to Howard University, where she majored in drama.

She left Howard after two years and in 1955 attended Fredonia State Teachers College in New York.

The poet and her husband, Fred Clifton, a philosophy professor at the University at Buffalo, moved to Baltimore in the 1960s and had six children. He died in 1984.

Clifton was the second woman and the first African-American to serve as poet laureate of Maryland, a position she held from 1979 to 1985. She also was poet-in-residence at Coppin State College from 1971 to 1974.

Besides her sister, Clifton is survived by her three daughters, a son and three grandchildren.

Climbing is passion for Kimberly woman

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

When Diana Lincoln-Haye was invited by a friend to rock climb last spring, the one thing on her mind was rappelling. She was nervous, wondering if she could do it. But after learning how to rappel properly — there’s a right way and wrong way to climb, she said — the fear left her and she spent the rest of the season on the rocks, literally.

Diana Lincoln-Haye poses after her first climb in April 2009 at Steinfels Dome at the City of Rocks. The area offers an abundance of climbing opportunities, she says.

“Now I love rappelling,” the 53-year-old Kimberly resident said. It boosted her confidence. With 14 climbs under her belt, Lincoln-Haye is growing her skills by learning how to ice climb. In mid-January she was one of nine women nationwide to attend an all-women ice climbing clinic, Chicks with Picks, in Ouray, Colo. She was instructed during the two-day event by world-renowned climbers Kitty Calhoun and Caroline George. “It was amazing,” she said. “They got us right into it. We were all climbing within a couple hours, and the next day we were climbing vertical pitches.” She attended the clinic through a scholarship offered by the program. Nineteen women had submitted applications for the scholarship — in memory of Karen McNeill who died in 2006 while climbing Alaska’s Mt. Foraker — said the program’s Head Chick Kim Reynolds. Lincoln-Haye was one of two applicants selected to attend the January clinic. Reynolds said the event, held four times a year, is open to women of all ages. Women may either apply for a scholarship or sign up as a paying customer at www.chickswithpicks.net. You don’t need to know how to rock climb in order to ice climb, she said. Though some of the same techniques are used, ice climbing is its own beast.

“They’re both in the vertical world,” Reynolds said. Lincoln-Haye enjoys both, but rock climbing offers more venues and a longer season. Besides the adrenaline rush that climbing provides, it’s a good way to make friends and boost confidence. “It’s a great thing for women,” she said. “It gives us an idea of how much more we can do than we initially believed we could.” She said women make good climbers because, unlike men, they have to rely more on technique rather than upper-body strength. Her son also climbs, but so far she hasn’t been able to get other family members to join her on the rocks. Her husband, Stan Haye, however, is reconsidering. He said he’s thinking about taking a climbing course this spring. Climbing isn’t Lincoln-Haye’s only outdoor adventure. She’s tried skydiving, parasailing, kayaking and wants to try ballooning at the Grand Tetons. Her first ice-climbing adventure took place in May 2002 in Alaska with her son, Nathan. She also served a medical mission to Nepal last September-October, where she trekked village-to-village at about 12,000 feet. Stan said he’s not too concerned about his wife’s climbs, because she surrounds herself with the best instructors. He envisions her one day becoming an instructor herself, he said. “She’s a great woman, and just loves to do all kinds of outdoor stuff,” he said. She enjoys horseback riding and photography, among other things. “But I would say this is the big passion in my life right now,” she said of climbing. Next month she hopes to climb in Moab, Utah, and late this summer she wants to tackle Elephant Perch in the Sawtooths above Stanley. “You either love it or you don’t,” she said. “I love it.”

Break out the binoculars to see brightest asteroid

On Jan. 1, 1801, Giuseppe Piazzi discovered the first asteroid, Ceres. Through his 3-inch telescope it appeared as a mere speck of light, indistinguishable from the background stars but for its apparent motion among them night by night. While Ceres — 600 miles wide — is the largest of the main belt asteroids, it isn't the brightest. Vesta, discovered in 1807 by Heinrich Olbers, is 330 miles wide, but outshines Ceres because it is closer to the sun and has a brighter surface. Vesta is brightest every 16 months, as the faster-moving earth passes between Vesta and the sun, an event known as opposition. When opposition falls around late April, Vesta is also closest to the sun in its elliptical orbit, making it brighter still. Tonight, Vesta is in opposition. While not as close as it will be at its next opposition, in May of next year, it is barely bright enough to be seen without optical aid. Furthermore, it's near a bright star tonight, so it's easy to know where to look. To find it, locate the stars of Leo's head, a reverse question mark high in the east around 10 p.m. The point of the question mark is Regulus, Leo's brightest star. Count two stars up from Regulus to the second brightest star in the pattern, Algieba. Vesta will lie on a line between Algieba and 40 Leonis, a faint star just to the lower right. Algieba's glare may drown out Vesta, so use binoculars to improve your chances. To verify that you've seen Vesta, look again tomorrow night; Vesta will have moved to the upper right of Algieba. It will remain the third brightest object in the binoculars' field of view (after Algieba and 40 Leonis) for most of the next week. Next week: Prospects for Venus watchers in 2010.

Snow sneakers: A strange low-top option for winter use

Dubbed an "arctic slip-on," the Fairbanks Snow Sneakers are a strange low-top option for winter use. Made to protect from the snow and cold, the shoes have waterproof leather uppers and felted wool lining. The tough outsole tread is said to have been inspired by snowmobile tracks. The shoes slip on and off easily, no lacing required. They are warm for average winter tasks like running errands or shoveling the walk. The company notes that design cues were taken from the winter chukkas of the Alaskan Inuit. But a replacement to winter boots these are not. I would not recommend the Sorel shoes for anything beyond the most basic activities in the outdoors. In my test, loose snow came right in when walking on a trail. The shoes' opening at the ankle is large and loose. And at only four inches high, a lot of snow can spill inside.

THE GEAR JUNKIE Stephen Regenold

On ice and packed snow, the "snowmobile tread" outsole was fine for traction. But being rubber, the tread was far from slip-proof. Overall, the Snow Sneakers' fit was loose and uncomfortable. Around my ankles, the big opening felt strange and too large for my foot. At the same time, they were too short in my regular shoe size. My toes banged against the front of the shoe as I walked a trail. At $90, the Sorel Fairbanks Snow Sneakers are not worth the price. They are warm. I wear them around the house on winter days as slippers. But the company (www.sorel.com) has some work to do on this model before I will take to wearing an "arctic slip-on" outside.

Pray for wind this weekend. Snowboarders and skiers hope to harness the wind for some wild rides at the Kite Soldiers Snowkite rally in Fairfield. The event is expected to bring some of the best riders from around the globe, along with sponsors and spectators, said Trisha Smith, the event's director of operations. Riders will get an opportunity to enjoy some backcountry snowkiting, compete in a poker run, enjoy free kite clinics and a kite giveaway and play in what is believed to be the world's only backcountry snowkite terrain park — a park comprised of six rails, one kinked rail and natural wind-blown features that will be sculpted into jumps and giant quarter pipes. The rider-judged Rail Jam contest is made for spectators. Snowkiting — where riders harness themselves to a giant kite, letting it pull them over the snow and through the air — is one of the fastest growing extreme sports today. The kite can take a rider up a mountain or across a flat snow-covered plain, allowing the rider to harness the power of the wind. The Camas Prairie provides the perfect setting for the sport, said Fairfield City Council member James Kreyssig. "Wind, rolling hills and a spacious area void of trees and power lines are major components of this sport. I understand people as far away as Europe have heard of Camas County and will be attending this month's event," Kreyssig said. This weekend's event is being put on by Snowkite Soldier, a snowkite instruction and guiding organization owned by Andrew "Monty" Goldman. The business has been featured in "Men's Journal," "National Geographic Magazine" and other publications. Goldman said his event has grown from portable boom boxes to one of the premiere snowkite events in the world. "Some of the riders will fly hundreds of feet in the air; others will reach speeds in excess of 60 miles an hour and all riders will kite through a 14-mile course up thousands of feet to nearby mountain peaks," Goldman said. "And then there's the infamous Poker Run, which takes snowkiters through a series of five checkpoints where they collect poker cards. Those who finish with the top poker hands will take home thousands of dollars in prizes at the awards party celebration Saturday night."

Bill would let trappers, hunters take roadkill

License-holders could salvage hides without penalty

By Betsy Z. Russell
The Spokesman-Review

BOISE — Rep. Dick Harwood, R-St. Maries, says a constituent of his in North Idaho complained that when he found a bobcat dead in the road near his place, Idaho Fish and Game threatened him with arrest if he picked it up. "He wrote me, said you're letting a $200 hide lay there on the road," Harwood said. So Harwood on Monday proposed legislation to allow people with trapping or

"Sometimes Fish and Game comes out." When Fish and Game recovers a road-killed carcass, on occasion usable meat is donated to the poor, Harwood said. Sometimes, road-killed carcasses are among the items sold at Fish and Game's annual auction of confiscated or found furs and hides, an event known as "The Fur Sale." Harwood said he's heard some resistance from Fish and Game officials to his idea, because "they're a little worried about people running it over to get the hide." "But I hit a dog once and it cost me $2,000 just to fix my car, so I don't think that'll be that much of a problem," he added. The House Resources Committee agreed unanimously to introduce the bill, but several members said they had questions about its wording. The measure doesn't actually mention roadkill, though its statement of purpose does. Harwood said he was advised that by using the word "salvage," he had covered that. "I'm sure we all have a lot of questions about this," said Rep. Fred Wood, R-Burley, a former state Fish and Game commissioner, but he moved to introduce the bill and the rest of the committee agreed. Now the bill can be scheduled for a full public hearing in the committee.

Deer inspire man to manage wildlife

By Carrie Ann Knauer
Carroll County Times

WESTMINSTER, Md. — Some men dream about having more time to go hunting on the weekends, but E.W. Grimes, of Westminster, said hunting and managing deer populations keep him in the woods at least three or four days a week.

“I’ve been actively managing deer most of my life, from high school back in the ’70s, because it was always really cool to get bigger, better deer than anybody else,” Grimes said.

His main job is being a construction contractor, but nearly 30 years ago, he started offering his deer management services as a side job, consulting with landowners and hunting camps about how to get a better herd on their land.

“I was just fueled by a passion of the whitetail deer,” Grimes said.

Eight years ago, Grimes learned about the Quality Deer Management Association, a national group dedicated to the philosophy of quality deer management, a practice that involves carefully studying the deer population of a location and thinning the herd by culling specific ages and sexes of deer. The goal is to obtain population equilibrium, more in harmony with nature, Grimes said.

“You actually have a lower population and you create a hunting atmosphere that keeps your hunters interested, so you don’t lose that interest and you use them as a management tool,” Grimes said of the technique.

He started attending meetings in York County, Pa., of the Mason-Dixon Chapter, which was the closest one at the time. As he became more familiar with the information and the way the programs are run, he decided to found a Maryland chapter five years ago. He’s also the president of the Bachman Valley chapter, and consults to a group in the Chester River area on the Eastern Shore.

Three years ago, Grimes started a monitoring program of the deer at Hashawha Environmental Center in Westminster, about a mile from his home in Bachman Valley. Grimes said he places three cameras in the 380-acre park, and baits the area with corn every two days so that the deer will gather in front of the camera.

The camera is triggered

by infrared sensors, he said, and stores digital photographs on a card that he can download at the end of the study.

The study lasts three weeks, he said. He dismisses the first week of data, since it is a time for the deer to find the site and get comfortable with it. The next two weeks provide the data for the actual count, where he tries to determine how many fawns, does, antlerless bucks and mature bucks are visiting that site.

Grimes said it is exciting to review the pictures — even if there are 2,800 of them per study — to see the deer and other animals that trigger the camera. Sometimes he will see raccoons, foxes or even birds that trigger the camera, he said. While he knows there are coyotes around the Union Mills area, he’s yet to see one in the shots, he said.

Grimes said he sends all of his data to the Maryland Department of Natural Resources, which is grateful to see what deer populations are like at various locations. QDMA also likes to work with farmers and hunter co-ops to put a management plan in place for a large land area, Grimes said.

Farmers benefit by seeing a reduction in crop yield losses from deer, Grimes said, and hunters benefit by having healthier herds and bigger bucks.

“What the really cool part about it is you watch change, or whether there is any change. That’s the really cool part about it,” Grimes said. “When you can measure the progress, and actually be able to see it, then that’s what makes it worthwhile.”

Grimes is so enthusiastic about the Quality Deer Management Association that he works with local high schools to share the experience with them. QDMA provides educational materials for schools to help students learn how to identify the sex and maturity of deer, so that they can assist in the categorized counts from the camera’s pictures.

“Any time you can get the kids involved, it’s awesome,” Grimes said.

Ice fishing for winter family fun

By Anne Harnish
Lancaster Farming

KLEINFELTERSVILLE, Pa. — Except for the occasional crack of expanding ice and the sounds of geese, fishing on the ice in the middle of a lake can be a serene way to experience the unique beauty of winter.

It takes a special kind of family to enjoy spending time together outdoors on the grayest, coldest days, patiently waiting for fish to bite. But, with the right kind of preparations, there is plenty of fun to be had ice fishing for hungry bass, perch, catfish, sunfish and crappies, which swim under the ice even on the coldest of days.

At Pennsylvania’s Middle Creek Wildlife Management Area, ice-fishing can only take place during a few weeks, or even days, of winter. The ice must be at least four inches thick and solid to allow for fishing on the refuge’s large lake, which also plays host to thousands upon thousands of migratory birds like snow geese and tundra swans in late winter and early spring.

On Feb. 1 former dairy farmer Mark Peachey pointed out a bald eagle flying solo overhead as his three sons — Kevin, 10, Jason, 14, and Josh, 16 — set up their three fishing holes on the ice, one spot for each boy. Peachey said he often takes his entire family north to Sayers Lake in Centre County to go ice fishing, but on this below-freezing day, his sons wanted to spend the early evening hours ice fishing closer to home.

Peachey, formerly from Mifflin County, Pennsylvania, has seven homeschooled children ranging in age from 7 months to 19 years old and enjoys doing outdoor activities with them. He now works in the construction industry, but after he left the family dairy farm he decided to become a beekeeper, as a way “to stay connected to ag.” He places his 30 beehives on several produce farms, later selling the honey to local families. He and his wife usually prepare any fish they catch in a light batter of flour and cornmeal and fry it in butter.

Ten-year-old Kevin Peachey, left, fishes Feb. 1 at Pennsylvania’s Middle Creek Wildlife Management Area despite the cold weather. He and his 16-year-old brother Josh, right, called their dad Mark Peachey as he was driving home from work to ask if he’d take them ice fishing for the evening.

Learning to ice fish online

There are some kids who love cold weather. Just ask 12-year-old Henry Giroux, from Ephrata, Pa. According to his mother, Linda, he wants to move to Minnesota, with its cold weather and plentiful lakes.

Henry also loves to fish, and does a lot of summer fishing, so his budding interest in ice fishing is perfect for him. He likes to play computer games and surf the Internet, too. In fact, that’s where he went first to learn how to ice fish — an online site called YouTube.com where he watched some ice-fishing videos.

On Sunday, he and his mother drove out to Middle Creek to ask questions and observe the experienced ice-fishers. On Monday, Henry brought his own fishing equipment, chipped a hole through the ice and happily fished away, thoroughly oblivious to the freezing temperatures.

A good-natured and bundled up Linda Giroux happily obliges her son’s new hobby, laughing that she has “learned to take books along on the fishing trips, so she can read during any long waits for the fish to bite.” And though she doesn’t think her husband would enjoy the cold, Henry’s younger sister only missed ice fishing this day because of a prior obligation.

Camaraderie on the ice

Middle Creek Wildlife Management Area, experienced ice-fisher Rob Geist is a friendly face with a helping hand. Geist, from Denver, Pa., has been fishing Monday afternoon through several small ice holes he augured earlier. He tracks movement below the ice with a sonar “fish-finder” that he adapted for ice-hardiness with a small wooden box setup. He’s been fishing since he was a kid, and ice-fishing since his early 30s. He “knows the ice” at Middle Creek and said this is one of the more available spots for ice-fishing because it freezes more quickly and stays frozen longer than other lakes nearby.

Ice fishing is a great activity for anyone who has an interest.

For families or individuals who want to start the sport, Geist said safety is the most important thing to be mindful of. He always tests the thickness of the ice first, and takes a rope along in his bucket, just in case.

navigational features that my basic $150 Garmin GPS has to offer. I won’t be shedding my compass, but it will be nice to have all those other navigational tricks up my sleeve.

Get more involved

The strength of any group is dependent not only upon its size and organization, but also by how well its membership is informed. For those reasons, I’m rather dogmatic in my belief that all sportsmen should be involved with one or more formal sporting organizations.

Not only do you benefit from the camaraderie and expertise of like-minded sportsmen, you join your voice and dollars with theirs to provide a more unified front to help preserve and protect the unique rights and liberties that we enjoy as Americans. Politicians here and abroad are earnestly engaged in schemes to usurp those rights from us. We must be ever vigilant to protect them.

If you are not currently a member of the NRA and a local sporting/conservation group, I would invite you to consider joining one. The Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation, Sportsmen for Fish and Wildlife, Ducks Unlimited, the Nature Conservancy, S.C.I., as well as local fishing, shooting, and archery clubs are but a few of the groups providing the manpower, finances and expertise that benefit species and give us a united voice here and in Washington D.C.

Gear up

As a shooter and hunter, you are well aware of the skyrocketing costs and diminishing availability of weapons and shooting supplies. It pays to be able to reload your own centerfire ammunition. Local retailers and online businesses carry all the tools and components needed to get you rolling your own ammo. It’s fun, economical, and allows you to tailor ammo specifically for your weapons.

You may also want to stock up on clips and magazines for your firearms. With politicians waiting for the opportunity to reinstate Bill Clinton’s expired assault weapons/magazine ban, the days of plenty may soon be coming to an end.

Become a missionary for the cause and consider inviting new people, especially young people, into the sport. The more, the merrier. Like the musketeers of old, we can parade the banner “All for one and one for all.”

Good shooting!

Embattled Afghan Taliban rely on human shields

MARJAH, Afghanistan (AP) — Taliban fighters holding out in Marjah are increasingly using civilians as human shields, firing from compounds where U.S. and Afghan forces can clearly see women and children on rooftops or in windows, Afghan and U.S. troops said Wednesday.

The intermingling of fighters and civilians also has been witnessed by Associated Press journalists. It is part of a Taliban effort to exploit strict NATO rules against endangering innocent lives to impede the allied advance through the town in Helmand province, 380 miles (610 kilometers) southwest of Kabul.

Two more NATO service members were killed in the Marjah operation Wednesday, the alliance said in a statement without identifying them by nationality.

Their deaths brought to six NATO service members and one Afghan soldier who have been killed since the attack on Marjah, the hub of the Taliban's southern logistics and drug-smuggling network, began Saturday. About 40 insurgents have been killed, Helmand Gov. Gulab Mangal said.

During Wednesday's fighting, Marines and

A different ISAF patch is attached to the backpack of a U.S. soldier of the 1st Battalion, 17th Infantry Regiment, 5th Brigade, 2nd Infantry Division, Wednesday in the Badula Qulp area west of Lashkar Gah in Helmand province, southern Afghanistan.

Afghan troops "saw sustained but less frequent insurgent activity," mostly small-scale attacks, NATO said in a statement.

NATO spokesman Brig. Gen. Eric Tremblay told journalists in Brussels that most of the objectives have been achieved. "Perhaps the pocket in the western side of Marjah still gives freedom of movement to the Taliban, but that is the extent of their movement," he said.

This is the biggest offensive since the 2001 U.S.-led invasion of Afghanistan, and a test of President Barack Obama's strategy for reversing the rise of the Taliban while protecting civilians.

As Marines and Afghan soldiers press their offensive, they have been forced to hold their fire because insurgents are shooting from inside or next to mud-walled compounds where civilians are present — and restraint slows their advance.

Brig. Gen. Mohiudin Ghori, the brigade commander of Afghan troops in Marjah, said in some cases women and children may have been ordered to stand on a roof or in a window of buildings where Taliban fighters are shooting.

Ghori said troops have to decide between firing on insurgents among civilians, or advance much more slowly to keep women and children out of the crossfire.

"They are trying to get us to fire on them and kill the civilians," Ghori said.

Journalists embedded with the Marines have seen such cases: a neighborhood is alive with children, then the next minute the streets are empty and gunshots ring out. As the troops advance, children reappear, peering and grinning through half-closed doors.

Rocket-propelled grenades have been fired from behind groups of civilians, who scamper away as the Marines point their weapons toward the source of fire. Marines have come under fire in poppy fields as they are being tended by farmers.

"I myself saw lots of people that were shot, and they were ordinary people," said Afghan soldier Esmatullah, who did not give his rank and like many Afghans goes by one name. Taliban "were firing at us from people's homes. So in returning fire, people got shot," he said.

NATO has confirmed 15 civilian deaths in the operation. Afghan rights groups say at least 19 have died.

Israelis say Mossad behind Dubai hit

JERUSALEM (AP) — Israeli security officials said Wednesday they were convinced the Mossad was behind the assassination of a Hamas commander in Dubai and harshly criticized the spy agency for allegedly stealing the identities of its own citizens to carry out the hit.

Names released by Dubai matched seven people living in Israel, raising questions about why the agency would endanger its own people by using their passport data as cover for a secret death squad.

At the same time, some Israeli experts said the Dubai evidence pointed to a setup to falsely blame Israel.

A vague comment from Israel's foreign minister, who neither confirmed nor denied Mossad's involvement, only added to the spy novel-like mystery surrounding the slaying of Mahmoud al-Mabhouh, who was found dead Jan. 20 at a luxury hotel near Dubai's international airport.

"Israel never responds, never confirms and never denies," Foreign Minister Avigdor Lieberman said in Israel's first official comment on the affair, then added: "I don't know why we are assuming that Israel, or the Mossad, used those passports."

Some senior Israeli security officials not directly involved in the case were less circumspect, saying they were convinced it was a Mossad operation because of the motive — Israel says al-Mabhouh supplied Gaza's Hamas rulers with their most dangerous weapons — and the use of Israeli citizens' identities.

The officials, who spoke on condition of anonymity because of a government order not to discuss the case, characterized the operation as a significant Mossad bungle.

If it develops into a full-blown security scandal, that could harm Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu politically.

Some compared the case to another Mossad embarrassment during Netanyahu's previous term as prime minister, the failed attempt to kill Hamas leader Khaled Mashaal in 1997. Two Mossad agents posing as Canadian tourists were captured after injecting Mashaal with poison, and Israel was forced to send an antidote that saved Mashaal's life. Today Mashaal is Hamas' supreme leader.

Still, there was praise for the Dubai operation from some analysts who noted the major difference between it and the Mashaal case is that the latter failed and the former achieved its goal — the assassination of a Hamas commander.

The primary goal of the system is to provide a single, integrated, time and cost effective mechanism for providing a comprehensive emergency notification system, which, through use of all available current technologies to provide for the widest possible dissemination of emergency messages to the public within targeted, geographically defined notification areas.
Secondary goals include:
1. To provide an integrated mechanism for intra and inter-agency notifications for use in maintaining coordination between the various agencies involved in specific incidents.
2. To incorporate feedback loop mechanisms which provide a means for disseminating survey vehicles and collect responses into a common database for display and analysis.
3. To provide a mechanism for citizens, customers and other relevant persons to request and receive information about the County, its operation and the services it provides.
4. The primary objective will be to utilize currently existing technologies across all relevant media to form a single, integrated system offering which fulfills the stated goals.

B. System Requirements

The proposed system shall meet the system requirements specified in this section. These requirements are the minimum requirements. The Offeror shall provide detailed information concerning its ability to meet these requirements and describe any additional features and functionality its system is capable of providing.
The system must, as a base, provide a means of alerting/notifying persons and/or departments/agencies within the County, other jurisdictions, agencies or organizations, the media and the public through as wide a range of communications methodologies as possible. The proposed system must, at a minimum, meet the following requirements:
1. The system shall have the capability to make notification by telephone call (land line or cellular), wireless text message, fax, or email.
2. Cell Phones - The system must be capable of providing alert notification through both text messages to text messaging capable cellular telephones, and/or voice notification at the user's discretion.
3. Pagers - The system must be capable of providing alert notification through text messages to text messaging capable pagers.
4. PDAs - The system must be capable of providing email and text messages to text messaging capable PDA devices.
5. FAX - FAX notifications must be capable of accepting various types of attachments, including word processing and spreadsheet documents generated by common programs including Microsoft Word and Microsoft Excel. A mechanism must be included for reporting upon the success/failure of each notification.
6. E-Mail - The system must be capable of issuing both text and HTML based notification messages to recipient's email.
7. Single point entry, including automatic voice to text translation - The system must provide for a single entry of alerts or notifications, from which all media/methodologies derive their input.
8. GIS Mapping - The system must be capable of fully integrating with the BullBerry Systems Inc., Insight mapping software currently installed in Cassia County. This integration must include direct launching of notifications from within the BullBerry's Insight software without having to access the notification vendor's interface. This integration also requires the full use of all GIS and telephone number data within the BullBerry platform.
9. Grouping - The system must be capable of creating notification "groups" to which alerts or notifications will be sent. These will be defined by the using entity as applicable. The system must be capable of creating, storing, and managing unlimited numbers of groups or predefined CALL-LISTS.
10. Interagency Notifications - Other than grouping which will be utilized for intra-agency communications, the system must provide a means by which to designate notifications destined to other emergency agencies or organizations for status reporting, etc. These may be local, county, state or federal agencies or organizations.
11. Targeting - Other than the various forms of groupings described above, the system must incorporate a targeting mechanism for alert notifications such that despite the grouping, then only provide notification to the targeted classification within that group. Targeting capabilities should include at a minimum, the ability to target only agencies by type (i.e. Law enforcement, Fire/Rescue, Medical, etc.), agencies involved in a specific incident, and/or geographically by county, city or zip code.
12. Survey / Situation Report Mechanism - In order to aid emergency managers in decision support for damage assessment and resource allocation, the system must incorporate Automated Surveys by which operations personnel can both issue survey information, and retrieve the results of those surveys.
a. The Survey system must be capable of automatically creating voice based question/responses for use with interactive voice based telephone surveys.
b. Responses to survey forms from each of the various media must be consolidated into a single survey response file which can either be viewed on-line, or alternatively downloaded in a format such that the information can be imported into the County's own presentation or analysis applications. The minimum formats to be considered for importing data are EXCEL based spreadsheets, and Microsoft Access databases.
13. System Administration
a. The system shall be capable of using virtually any source of telephone data to build call lists. Such sources shall include local telephone listings, commercially available databases, private listings, or E911 database supplied by the local telephone company. Databases shall include residential, business, and unlisted telephone numbers.
b. The system must provide a means (usually via the internet) by which the public can "register" to receive notifications from the system, and the capability to designate which method(s) of notification they prefer. This mechanism should include the user's ability to include "quiet hours" where notifications will not be sent via designated media.
c. The system must provide a means for maintaining (creating, updating, deleting) user information files, and include the ability for users to update various fields of the file (i.e. telephone numbers, e-mail addresses, etc.).
d. The system data and data files (i.e. telephone numbers, email addresses, etc.) shall be updated, at a minimum, on a monthly basis, to coincide with base map updates.
e. The system telephone number databases shall not be available, sold, or otherwise provided to telemarketers or other solicitors.

d. The system shall re-call busy, no-answer, and operator intercept telephone numbers upon request.
e. The system shall provide the ability to repeat messages when requested.
15. Mapping
GIS Mapping - The system must be capable of fully integrating with the BullBerry Systems Inc., Insight mapping software currently installed in Cassia County. This integration must include direct launching of notifications within the BullBerry's Insight software without having to access the notification vendor's interface. This integration also requires the full use of all GIS and telephone number data within the BullBerry platform.

PUBLISH: February 4, 11, 18 and 25, 2010

DEAR ABBY: You asked female readers if we have anything to add to your advice to "Hot Flash Hilda" (Dec. 16), whose husband says she's "mean" and "freaky" because she doesn't want to snuggle when she's having a hot flash. I have had 18 years of menopause. I told my older son once that menopause constitutes justifiable homicide, and he'd better tread carefully.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

Hilda should tell her husband that hot flashes are like claustrophobia. You're heating up from the inside out and have no way to escape. There are times when my skin actually hurts. Maybe if she uses "justifiable homicide" it will get through to him.

— LINDA IN MESA, ARIZ.

DEAR LINDA: When I printed the question from "Hilda," I had no idea that menopause was such a hot topic and that I'd not only receive responses from women, but also from male readers. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: My wife has also been dealing with hot flashes. Her comments to me fell on deaf ears until my doctor prescribed a niacin-based drug for triglyceride issues. He failed to advise me to take an aspirin shortly before taking the niacin. When I took the niacin for the first time, I had an instant understanding of what hot flashes were and what my wife had been subjected to for several years.

— GETS IT NOW
IN GEORGIA

DEAR ABBY: My husband also didn't understand my need for distance during a hot flash. So I took him to a spa for a day of couples pampering and suggested he get into the sauna to relax.

When he was good and hot, I joined him and suggested we "snuggle." He exclaimed, "But I'm all hot and sweaty!" I smiled and said, "You're having a hot flash." That's when he finally got it.

Now he not only gives me space during a hot flash, but offers me a cool drink of water or a chilled cloth to put on my neck for the duration of the "heat wave."

— DIANE IN SUSANVILLE, CALIF.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for that reply! Men need to try and understand what women feel during a hot flash. A 450-degree oven about sums it up. I bought books on the subject for my husband, but have yet to give them to him. I most certainly will now.

— MICHELE IN WURTSBORO, N.Y.

DEAR MICHELE: Another way to educate a clueless spouse is for both of them to consult the wife's gynecologist or their primary physician to discuss what the hormone changes may be doing to her body and psyche.

DEAR ABBY: When my hubby and I first married, he was always the warm one; I was always freezing. At night he'd snuggle me in bed until I was comfortable.

Years later, he was diagnosed with cancer. Radiation therapy caused his body temperature to drop while I, coincidentally, was going through menopause. Now I would wrap my legs around his, snuggling him until we were both comfortable.

One night, while we were all entangled, he exclaimed, "Oh, my God, we've turned into each other!" He's been gone 10 years now, and what I'd give for one more snuggle.

— BONNIE IN GREENFIELD, WIS.

DEAR ABBY: On a recent trip to Rome, my husband generously sprinkled fresh peppers in his food (while the waiter shook his head). Heat seared through his body. His eyes were glassy, sweat beaded on his forehead and he gulped the whole carafe of water. I looked at him and said, "Welcome to MY world."

IF FEBRUARY 18 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: The year ahead gives you the breathing space to develop comfortable routines and settle into a secure pattern without fear of upsets. Avoid making important decisions or taking on extra responsibilities between now and mid April while your judgment is temporarily out of kilter. During June, your popularity sky-rockets and you can successfully interview for a new job or make a key career change — and romance could be waiting in the wings. In October, you may be torn two ways about an important matter. Trust and that good friends and shrewd counselors will help you make a wise choice when you reach this cross-road and beneficial opportunities appear.

HOROSCOPE

Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Put your heart behind everything you do and promote dynamic change. Your network of business associates could undergo a subtle change and provide the opening you need to show off your skills.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Listen intently. Those with impressive opinions, who act on the strength of their convictions, may alter your perspective about money or possessions. You may learn ways to manipulate finances.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A fresh sense of purpose and a new cycle of accomplishment separate you from the herd. Your strength lies in your magic way with conversation and ability to adjust to quickly shifting scenarios.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Move forward. Launch business initiatives that require public acceptance and helpful publicity. Important new contacts may give you a boost, so you can climb a bit higher on the ladder of success.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): New friends or companions could brighten some hours and break you out of a mental rut. Inventive ideas and a fondness for research may help you in your work or merely fascinate and delight your mind.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Streamline your surroundings; do away with clutter that is bogging you down. Some of the clutter may be mental baggage that is acting like a ball and chain. Clear your mind of extraneous minutiae.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): It will be easy to incorporate change into your long-term objectives. Communications with those in home and family could be accentuated; you must adapt to notable emerging situations.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Find a safe haven. Work, career or business is in the spotlight, but don't be so busy that you forget to get necessary rest. Your home is your castle and you might want to raise the drawbridge today.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Think things over and talk things through. Verbal exchanges or online conversations may take on new significance. The light bulb that goes off in your head could improve your net worth.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Wasting time worrying about the past is counterproductive. Take action where it counts to ensure your dreams come true. You are mentally on the same wavelength as your closest friends.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Be devoted to your passions. You may want to put a creative touch of individuality on everything you do, but working too quickly can leave you dissatisfied. Anything worth doing is worth doing well.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Keeping the peace may be more important to you than having your way. Others will admire your ability to remain unruffled in the face of opposition and to get to the point without being offensive.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"You may fool all the people some of the time; you can even fool some of the people all the time; but you can't fool all of the people all the time."

— Abraham Lincoln

Some players hate to go down in a contract they might have made by using a technically sound line. Others would always rather go for what they consider the best practical line and not worry about looking silly. Consider today's deal from the finals of the Yeh Brother's Cup last year as a classic example of the two different approaches.

Both Souths reached three no-trump after North had opened a Precision club, keeping East out of the bidding. Both Wests led an attitude spade three. (The smaller the card, the more they liked the suit.)

For the Dutch, Bas Drijver preferred to play the best technical line (hoping that spades would be 4-3 or that there would be a doubleton double-honor in the East hand to prevent the defenders from running four tricks there). He therefore rose with the spade ace and knocked out the heart ace. When the spade suit refused to run for the defenders, he had his nine tricks.

By contrast, the Swedish declarer, true to his nature, went for the psychological line of ducking the first spade. If spades were continued, he would be no worse off and might be much better off. (Consider East with an initial holding of the doubleton spade queen, for example.) Alas for him, East could see that his partner had a near Yarborough and realized that his only chance was to find the club queen in the West hand. He shifted to a club at trick two and defeated the game by two tricks.

ANSWER: Had East passed one heart, you too might have passed. Game can hardly be good if partner does not have enough to double. But once the opponents have competed, you should raise to two hearts obstructively. Do not let the opponents have a clear run if you can impede them with little or no risk.

In 1970, the "Chicago Seven" defendants were found not guilty of conspiring to incite riots at the 1968 Democratic national convention; five were convicted of violating the Anti-Riot Act of 1968 (those convictions were later reversed).

In 1977, the space shuttle Enterprise, sitting atop a Boeing 747, went on its maiden "flight" above the Mojave (moh-HAH'-vee) Desert.

In 1984, Italy and the Vatican signed an accord under which Roman Catholicism ceased to be the state religion of Italy.

In 2001, auto racing star Dale Earnhardt, Sr. died from injuries suffered in a crash at the Daytona 500; he was 49.

Ten years ago: Iranians voted in an election that gave reformers a majority in the parliament, long a bastion of hard-liners. Announcer Bob Hite Sr., whose rich voice introduced "The Lone Ranger" on radio, died in West Palm Beach, Fla. at age 86.

One year ago: President Barack Obama launched a $75 billion foreclosure rescue plan aimed at saving homes. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton began a two-day visit to Indonesia. Eric Holder, the nation's first black attorney general, said in a speech to justice Department employees marking Black History Month that the United States was "a nation of cowards" on matters of race. Pope Benedict XVI received House Speaker Nancy Pelosi at the Vatican, telling her that Catholic politicians had a duty to protect life "at all stages of its development." The remnants of New York's Shea Stadium were demolished.
