GOODBYE, ADDICTION

MEAGAN THOMPSON/Times-News
Christina Parks, 28, center, sits with fellow Jubilee House graduates Stacia Wall, 20, left, and Lisa Flores, 38, after the women received their certificates for completing one year in the Twin Falls nonprofit's drug addiction rehabilitation program. 'This is a big day for me because I've never actually really completed anything in my life,' Parks said.

Local women start new lives with Jubilee House graduation

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

Christina Parks' parents weren't happy when she was born; they wanted a boy.

As she grew, they told her what a disappointment she was to them.

"I tried to be the boy they wanted," she said, but no matter how hard she tried, she couldn't please them.

Feeling alone, she started smoking marijuana at age 10. That led to harder drugs, and eventually prison.

But that was another life.

She's a different person today, 28-year-old Parks says, thanks to Jubilee House.

On Thursday, Parks and two other women graduated from a 12-month-long, Christian-based rehabilitation program at the Twin Falls facility.

Part of the success of the four-phase program, said Executive Director Kathryn Bausman, is breaking down myths that the women carry with them — myths such as they are not worth anything, that nobody cares.

Parks, who grew up thinking that nobody cared about her, found just the opposite after starting the program at Jubilee House in 2009.

"From what she was then to what she is today, there are not enough good things to say about it," Parks' parole officer, Lisa Murray, said

Murray was one of about 100 people who came out to support the graduates. The other graduates were Lisa Flores, 38, and 20-year-old Stacia Wall.

Robbie Knievel proposes 2011 canyon jump

Daredevil to meet with local officials Monday

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

Robbie Knievel, the son of daredevil Evel Knievel who has followed in his late father's footsteps, will be in Twin Falls on Monday to propose jumping the Snake River Canyon.

The jump would tentatively take place on the Fourth of July weekend in 2011, according to Knievel spokesman Jeff Lowe.

It would come about three years shy of the 40th anniversary of Evel Knievel's failed 1974 attempt to jump the canyon on what was basically a large rocket.

Robbie Knievel will make his pitch for the jump Monday afternoon at a private meeting organized with the help of the Twin Falls Area Chamber of Commerce.

Shawn Barigar, the chamber's president and CEO, said he was approached by Knievel's representatives a few weeks ago about the idea. The meeting will give the daredevil a chance to share his thoughts and hear feedback from local officials, Barigar said.

Police worried by spread of incense that induces high

Substance causes bad reaction in 2 users, official says

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — A new substance marketed as herbal incense in the Magic Valley is being smoked by people seeking a legal marijuana-like high, an area law-enforcement official says.

Mini-Cassia Drug Task Force Commander Sgt. Dan Renz said the substance, commonly known by brand names such as "Spice" or "K2," first showed up in Mini-Cassia at the end of 2009.

"This is being sold in our area in smoke shops, and we've had two people that I know of who have ended up in the emergency room after smoking it," Renz said.

Twin Falls Police Department Lt. Craig Stotts said he knows of one smoke shop in Twin Falls that sells the substance, but is unaware if any Twin Falls residents have been hospitalized after using it.

"This is something we are concerned about, and we will be watching it," Stotts said.

Blaine Co. schools to borrow against bond for building projects

Judge Elgee allows district to tap into school levy for $5 million

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — The Blaine County School District is on the verge of being able to borrow $5 million to jump-start two major construction projects.

Fifth District Judge Robert Elgee on Wednesday granted judicial confirmation to the district's plan to borrow money on future revenues from a $59.8 million plant facilities levy voters approved in October.

Borrowing the money in a zero-interest loan from the state will allow the district to build a cafeteria at Bellevue Elementary School and start construction of a maintenance facility this summer, district Business Manager Mike Chatterton said.

It will also allow the district to install fire sprinkler systems and new lighting, and replace existing doors and windows with more energy-efficient models that also upgrade security.

The district will be able to cut construction costs by leveraging currently reduced project costs due to the recession, Chatterton said.

Judicial confirmation is a process government entities can use to enter into long-term debt by asking a judge to confirm a project as an "ordinary and necessary" expense of the entity's operations. Otherwise, the district would have been required to gain voter approval for the early borrowing on the levy, under Idaho law.

The district must now wait out a 42-day appeals

Knieval

A local government and business interests have been invited, though it wasn't clear this week how many plan to attend. The meeting is definitely on the calendar of the city of Twin Falls, which has worked to acquire the Knieval jump site. Officials there will wait to hear Robbie Knieval's proposal before sharing any thoughts on the idea, spokeswoman Julie Pence said Friday.

A camera crew shooting a reality TV show about Robbie Knieval will also stop in town this weekend, Lowe said.

Many have talked over the years about another jump attempt, but none of them happened. In 1994, two Los Angeles disc jockeys even pitched strapping a statue from a restaurant chain to a rocket and sending it over the rim. In 2008, Daniel LaBelle, president of Chicago-based Rocket Man Productions Inc., announced tentative plans for a stunt competition, the winner of which would get to jump the canyon.

The younger Knieval visited the Magic Valley several times in the 1990s, seeking permission to repeat his father's stunt while making it clear he could wait for the right time.

"I want to make sure everybody is happy about it first," he told the Times-News during a 1993 stop in Twin Falls.

Two face charges in cattle deaths

Times-News

Two more men are charged with theft in connection with the deaths of three pregnant cows and their calves, court records show.

The livestock were allegedly taken illegally during Jan. 30-31 on private property near 3200 N. 1500 E. in Twin Falls County.

On Wednesday, Brian Lee Erdmann, 35, appeared for a walk-in arraignment on charges including six felony counts of grand theft in connection to the animals' deaths.

That followed the arraignment last month of Christopher J. Richardson, 24, who appeared in court on a summons charging six counts of grand theft.

A third defendant, Brent A. Rathbun, has also been charged with six counts of grand theft and a summons has been issued, though court records show he has not appeared in court yet for an arraignment.

According to a probable cause affidavit filed by the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office, Rathbun allegedly told authorities in February that he, Erdmann and Richardson had been together in a pickup truck chasing cows. When one of the pregnant cows was struck, Richardson allegedly tried to cut its calf out and cut his thumb, according to the court record.

One of the cows was shot, according to court records, and it's unclear how the third met its demise. Each breed cow was valued at $1,050, with each calf's estimated worth at $200, court records state.

Completion of work delayed on Washington Street North

Times-News

Completion of roadwork on Washington Street North between Addison Avenue and Filer Avenue in Twin Falls has been delayed until mid-July, setting the project back one month.

Poor weather, repairs to leaky water lines and concerns about protecting fiber optic lines all contributed to the delay, the city said in a press release. Originally, the project was scheduled for completion in mid-June.

Two lanes remain open, with intermittent stop-and-go traffic on Washington Street North. The city is advising truckers who would normally travel down Washington Street North to use Blue Lakes Boulevard while construction continues.

Construction is also proceeding on Falls Avenue West, which is only open to local traffic. It is scheduled for completion in late summer or early fall.

centers in Alaska and Washington, she wound up at Jubilee House.

Now she's a changed woman, she says.

Besides breaking down myths, accepting responsibility and learning to build positive relations, the women of Jubilee learn something about God.

"The whole God thing was a struggle for me at first," Wall said. "But after coming here I realized I couldn't do it without God. God is so good, and I'm thankful he didn't turn his back on me."

"You've got to put Jesus first before anything," added Flores.

The women admit they still have temptations for their addictions, but Jubilee House has given them the tools to help them stay on course.

"It's about replacing something bad with something positive," Flores said, noting that she can call her counselors any time she needs to hear a positive voice.

Two of the women now live on their own and have jobs, which is what the fourth phase is all about — helping them to transition back into society.

Bausman said since the nonprofit facility opened in 2008, its success rate has been phenomenal — all 10 of its graduates are walking the path of recovery. She fears for its future, however, because grant funding is drying up and donations have shriveled.

The program costs about $1,000 per woman, per month, Bausman said. The house can take between seven and 10 women at a time. Her goal: get 1,000 people to donate $10 every month.

"That would be more than enough for us to stay open," she said.

Like the graduates who've seen miracles happen in their own lives, Bausman said, "I believe that God can help us do it."

The district has also process which ends in mid-June. Sun Valley Mayor Wayne Willich had testified earlier that the district should have told voters of its intent to borrow on future levy funds prior to the October election. But he did not file an objection to judicial confirmation within the two weeks Elgee allowed him to do so.

"If anyone were to appeal now they would have to appeal to Judge Elgee to overturn his decision, and the chances of that happening are unlikely," Chatterton said.

The district has already hired five engineering firms and four architectural firms for that project, and is in the process of contracting with heating and ventilation companies.

"All are local, so we're making good on our pledge to hire local," Chatterton said.

Person still sought in burned body case

Times-News

Authorities are still looking for a person of interest in the case of a dead man found inside a burned vehicle last month, Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loeb confirmed Friday.

A Twin Falls County sheriff's deputy found the body of county resident Tyler Thoroman, 21, in the burned vehicle on April 18 in the backwaters area of Salmon Falls Dam.

The case is being considered as a possible homicide, Loeb said Friday, adding he didn't know when the investigation will be completed.

Authorities asked the public for information on April 20 about both the then-unidentified body and an unidentified "person of interest."

The person of interest is described as possibly a Latino or American Indian male who is 5 feet, 10 inches, to 6 feet tall, with a medium build and wearing a plaid shirt, blue jeans and a brown bandanna. He had yet to be found as of Friday, Loeb said.

The burned car was found about 1 1/2 miles west of milepost 7 on U.S. Highway 93.

The sheriff's office can be reached with information at 735-1911.

Incense

People seeking a high are rolling the incense, which is legal to sell and possess in Idaho, and smoking it, Renz said. He said the herbal mix is sprayed with chemicals that mimic the effects of marijuana and are mainly manufactured in China.

Because it's labeled "not for human consumption," the substance isn't regulated by the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. It has been banned in several countries, and several U.S. states have passed or proposed legislation to ban its use.

Renz said that when taken internally, the substance increases the user's heart rate and can cause other, less frequent effects including loss of consciousness, paranoia, hallucinations and psychotic episodes.

"Some of these effects are not typical of marijuana use and are more typical of LSD use," Renz said.

Dawn Dearden, spokeswoman for the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration, said Thursday the substance is on the DEA's radar. The agency already sees indications it may become a significant problem both in the U.S. and internationally.

"Although it is too early to say what parts of the United States are seeing more activity with these products, it is fair to say the problem is widespread," Dearden said.

She said the DEA is collecting information on and scientifically evaluating the products to determine whether they should be classified as a controlled substance. "Anytime you put an uncontrolled or unregulated drug, or drug with unknown effects, into your body, you are taking a risk," Dearden said.

Wendell council puts off new lift station

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

WENDELL — While the Wendell City Council acknowledged the need to install a new lift station in its sewer system, the $50,000 it would cost is money that Wendell just doesn't have, council members said.

Public Works Director Bob Bailey recommended replacing the pump system in the Lewiston Street lift station because of breakdowns and ongoing costs to maintain and repair it.

"The money just isn't in the budget. Right now there is a new pump and check valve working but it gets fixed a lot," he said. "With the straw and other materials, rags and towels (in the sewer system), it just creates an environment where the valves can't close all the way."

When the lift station fails, a flashing red light alerts the city; Councilman Barry Brown lives across from the lift station and, being aware of the issue, keeps watch for the light.

"I do call ... several times," Brown said, adding that within an hour an on-duty public works employee arrives to fix the problem.

City administrators know they've been lucky in catching the breakdowns.

"It's averted disaster many times," Bailey said. "When the station shuts down completely the waste in the line backs up and we could have a spill."

The possibility of installing a new pump with updated electronics was studied by Twin Falls-based J-U-B Engineers. Engineer Rob Hegstrom told the council that moving forward on the pump replacement would take some pressure off the city.

The new pump would be submersible and equipped to handle the level of waste coming down the line.

"This should eliminate the problem," Hegstrom said.

The upgrade isn't included in the city's other ongoing sewer project: construction of a new $12 million treatment facility.

While some main sewer lines in town will be replaced, the Lewiston

Street lift station won't.

"I guess it would be better if it were included," Mayor Brad Christopherson said.

In the meantime, the city will wait until it finds funding for a replacement.

"The bad thing is that the money isn't in the budget," Bailey said.

State posts largest decline in jobless rate in 25 years

Times-News

A surge in hiring across most of the economy sent Idaho's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate down three-tenths of a percentage point to 9.1 percent in April. It was the rate's largest one-month decline since 1983, but it still leaves the unemployment rate far higher compared to last year.

According to the latest unemployment report released Friday by Idaho Department of Labor, the unemployment rate in south-central Idaho remained mostly unchanged compared to the previous month.

Obama sends Congress small business lending bill

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The Obama administration has sent Congress a proposal to create a $30 billion support program to unfreeze credit for the nation's small businesses.

The $30 billion fund would provide support to small and medium-sized banks with assets under $10 billion to encourage them to increase lending to small businesses.

Obama outlined the effort in his State of the Union address in January. Initially the administration planned to obtain the resources by tapping leftover funds in the financial bailout program. Officials said Friday that the new effort has no links to the unpopular Troubled Assets Relief Program.

In remarks to reporters at the White House, Obama says that the program had been expanded to include a new state small business credit that would support efforts by state governments to provide loans to small businesses.

"This state initiative, which was designed with the help of governors and members of both the House and the Senate, will help expand lending for small businesses and manufacturers at a time when budget shortfalls are leading states to cut back on vitally important lending programs," Obama said.

An administration official said many states have their own programs to support loans to small businesses but these programs have faced cutbacks because of severe budget shortfalls in many states because of the recession.

Going the extra step for CUSTOMER SERVICE

Nine Months Later covers cost of crib recall

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

After the U.S. Consumer Protection Safety Commission announced the recall of Simplicity's full-sized cribs on April 29, Twin Falls' retailer Nine Months Later followed procedure by posting the information in the store.

The store also informed customers after CPSC reported that a 1-year-old child from Massachusetts suffocated after becoming trapped between the crib mattress and frame in 2008.

According to a release from CPSC, the agency was aware of 13 other incidents caused by the tubular metal mattress-support frame bending or detaching from the crib structure.

"Usually, when there is a recall, the manufacturer will send parts to repair the issue or handle refunds or product returns related to the recall," said store owner Conni Walker.

While recalls are common, retailers picking up the costs are a rarity.

"Our number one priority is child safety," Walker said. "Our cost is a few thousand dollars, but it is the right thing to do."

She said the store sold about nine cribs involved in the recall.

The cribs, manufactured in China, were also sold through larger retailers and priced between $150 to $300. Nine Months Later is allowing its customers to apply the purchase price for the cribs they bought toward the purchase of a new crib.

"It was scary," said customer Brooklyn Reese. "I was upset because my four-month-old son used the crib."

Reese didn't want to think about the possibility of her own child being harmed and although her Simplicity crib wasn't causing any trouble she Connie Walker, owner of Nine Months Later in Twin Falls, stands next to a crib the store carries with a secure, mesh-styled crib frame. The store was recently notified of a large recall involving Simplicity/SFCA brand cribs. Since the manufacturer is no longer in business, the store is giving customers a refund, with the amount being applied to the purchase of a new crib.

"It was way nice of them because they aren't really responsible and they didn't have to do it. They could have said, 'Well, the company is out of business and there isn't anything we can do,' but they didn't."

— Brooklyn Reese, a customer of Nine Months Later who bought a Simplicity crib from the store that was later recalled took advantage of Nine Month Later's offer.

"It was way nice of them because they aren't really responsible and they didn't have to do it. They could have said, 'Well, the company is out of business and there isn't anything we can do,' but they didn't. But there was no way I was putting my baby in it again, no way."

Naturally, extending extra customer service will likely pay dividends down the road. Reese said she's already a frequent shopper at the store but is even more committed for years to come.

It's a lesson learned for the small local retailer as well. The frame design used by Simplicity was for mass-production and the cribs they carry now are all built with a mesh-styled mattress frame.

"These are much safer," Walker said.

In regard to Simplicity, the company had been plagued with recalls. In 2007 CPSC recalled 1 million cribs sold over a ten-year period. Simplicity dissolved and it's corporate successor SFCA was hit was by several recalls before shutting down last year.

After Thursday's wild ride, market fragmentation may get regulator review

By Nina Meht and Chris Nagi
Bloomberg News writer

NEW YORK — Federal regulators reviewing Thursday's stock plunge will try to determine if the five-fold increase in the number of American equity exchanges has left them unable to manage the biggest surges in volume.

Almost 1.3 billion shares traded on U.S. markets in a 10-minute span starting at 2:40 p.m., six times the average, sending prices lower on platforms from New York to Kansas City. Nasdaq said it canceled transactions in 286 stocks where swings grew too wide. Federal agencies began inquiries after more than $700 billion in value was erased in an eight-minute span.

While most of the losses were reversed as the pace of trading slowed and exchanges were able to match buyers and sellers, the 998-point plunge in the Dow Jones Industrial Average raised concerns that the United States was entering another financial crisis. The Securities and Exchange Commission will try to determine if market participants accidentally or maliciously derailed trading, according to two people familiar with the situation. Lawmakers plan to hold hearings next week.

"Markets aren't supposed to work this way," said Jamie Selway, managing director of White Cap Trading in New York and a former chief economist at NYSE Arca, a unit of NYSE Euronext. "There was a mad rush for the exits. We just don't know whether it was accidental or intentional."

Thursday's rout showed how the fragmentation of the U.S. equity market may suppress demand when it's needed most, especially when the New York Stock Exchange attempts to calm trading, said James Angel, a finance professor at Georgetown.

NYSE Euronext Chief Operating Officer Larry Leibowitz said the Big Board prevented a bigger decline.

While the first half of the intraday plunge probably reflected normal trading as concern increased that Greece's credit crisis will spread, the selloff snowballed because of orders sent to venues with no investors willing to match them, Leibowitz said in a Bloomberg Television interview.

Ten Minutes Is All It Takes

About 1.3 billion shares traded on U.S. markets between 2:40 p.m. and 2:50 p.m. Thursday — almost six times the average for a 10-minute span over the past two years. Federal regulators reviewing the baffling stock plunge will try to determine if the proliferation of exchanges has left them unable to manage the biggest surges in trading volume.

EDITORIAL

Effective Mike Simpson deserves GOP renomination

Two years ago, we said editorially that Rep. Mike Simpson was the best congressman Idaho’s 2nd District has had since Orval Hansen four decades ago. Simpson hasn’t done anything since to change our opinion.

He’s capable, open-minded and tough on Idaho issues — and he deserves renomination in the May 25 Republican primary over state Rep. Russ Mathews, M.C. “Chick” Heilesen and Katherine Burton.

In the 91-year history of the 2nd District, only two congressman have served longer than Simpson and just one — Pocatello Republican Hamer Budge, a member of the Appropriations, Rules and Interior committees during the Eisenhower administration — has been as influential. (After Budge left Congress, he chaired the Securities and Exchange Commission.)

Simpson also sits on the Appropriations Committee and is the ranking Republican on its Subcommittee on Interior, Environmental and Related Agencies — an absolutely critical position for Idaho.

But his effectiveness extends beyond the House Republican Caucus. In the most bitterly divided Congress in generations, Simpson doesn’t just pay lip service to working with the majority Democrats — he actually does so. That’s why his Central Idaho Economic Development and Recreation Act stands a good chance of passing Congress this year.

Simpson knows as much about nuclear energy issues as anyone in Congress, and he isn’t waiting for the country to elect a Republican president to fix what he’s sees wrong with Obamacare. He favors targeted reforms to the massive health care law as soon as possible.

Most significantly, we believe, he’s kept his focus on entitlement reform — basic changes that could rescue Social Security and Medicare from the fiscal train wreck that’s in our future.

We like Simpson because he’s a straight shooter and a thinker who adheres to Harry Truman’s maxim:

“It is amazing what you can accomplish if you do not care who gets the credit.”

Would that we could find more politicians like Simpson.

There’s no fooling Mother Nature

There is only one meaningful response to the oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico and that is for America to stop messing around when it comes to designing its energy and environmental future. The only meaningful response to this man-made disaster is a man-made energy bill that would finally put in place an American clean-energy infrastructure that would set our country on a real, long-term path to ending our addiction to oil.

Thomas Friedman

That is so obviously the right thing for our environment, the right thing for our national security, the right thing for our economic security and the right thing to promote innovation. But it means we have to stop messing around with idiotic “drill, baby, drill” nostrums, feel-good Earth Day concerts and the paralyzing notion that the American people are not prepared to do anything serious to change our energy mix.

This oil spill is to the environment what the subprime mortgage mess was to the markets — both a wake-up call and an opportunity to galvanize a constituency for radical change that overcomes the powerful lobbies and vested interests that want to keep us addicted to oil.

If President Obama wants to seize this moment, it is there for the taking. We have one of the worst environmental disasters in American history on our hands. We have a public deeply troubled by what they’ve seen already — and they’ve probably seen only the first reel of this gulf horror show. And we have a bipartisan climate/energy/jobs bill ready to be introduced in the Senate — produced by Sens. John Kerry, Joe Lieberman and Lindsey Graham — that would set a price on carbon and begin to shift us to a system of cleaner fuels, greater energy efficiency and unlock an avalanche of private capital to the clean energy market.

American industry is ready to act and is basically saying to Washington: “Every major country in the world, starting with China, is putting in clear, long-term market rules to stimulate clean energy — except America. Just give us some clear rules, and we’ll do the rest.”

The Kerry-Lieberman-Graham bill is an important step in that direction. It is far from perfect. It includes support for more off-shore drilling, nuclear power and concessions to coal companies. In light of the spill, we need to make this bill better. At a minimum, we need much tighter safeguards on off-shore drilling. There is going to be a lot of pressure to go even further, but we need to remember that even if we halted all off-shore drilling, all we would be doing is moving the production to other areas outside the U.S., probably with even weaker environmental laws.

Somehow a compromise has to be found to move forward on this bill — or one like it. But even before the gulf oil spill, this bill was in limbo because the White House and Senate Democrats broke a promise to Sen. Graham, the lone Republican supporting this effort, not to introduce a controversial immigration bill before energy. At the same time, President Obama has kept his support low-key, fearing if he loudly endorses a price on carbon, Republicans will be screaming “carbon tax” and “gasoline tax” in the 2010 midterm elections.

Bottom line: This bill has no chance to pass unless President Obama gets behind it with all his power, mobilizes the public and rounds up the votes. Responding to this oil spill could well become the most important leadership test of the Obama presidency. The president has always had the right instincts on energy, but he is going to have to decide just how much he wants to rise to this occasion. Needless to say, it would be a lot easier for the president to lead if more than one Republican in the Senate was ready to lift a finger to help him.

Our dependence on crude oil is not just a national-security or climate problem. Some 40 percent of America’s fish catch comes out of the gulf, whose states also depend heavily on coastal tourism. In addition, the Chandealeur Islands off the Louisiana coast are part of the Breton National Wildlife Refuge. It is one of our richest cornucopias of biodiversity.

As the energy consultant David Rothkopf likes to say, sometimes a problem reaches a point of acuity where there are just two choices left: bold action or permanent crisis. This is such a moment for our energy system and environment.

If we settle for an incremental response to this crisis — a “Hey, that’s our democracy. What more can you expect?” — we’ll be sorry. You can’t fool Mother Nature. She knows when we’re just messing around. Mother Nature operates by her own iron laws. And if we violate them, there is no lobby or big donor to get us off the hook. No, what’s gone will be gone. What’s ruined will be ruined. What’s extinct will be extinct — and later, when we’re finally ready to stop messing around, it will be too late.

Legislature damaged schools, public services

An opinion written by Reps. Stevenson and Bell claimed that cuts in Idaho’s budget were brought on by difficult economic times. The reality is, however, the meat-ax budget cuts were as much a political calculation as a result of the hard economic times.

One of the most critical decisions by the Idaho House was that there would be no attempt to find revenue sources to ease drastic cuts upon the education system and other government branches. This in spite of the fact that opportunities were evident to collect additional revenue which would have had virtually no impact on the state’s economic recovery, wouldn’t have imposed new taxes on the average citizen, and would have been virtually unnoticeable by the man on the street.

It’s estimated Idaho could have collected over $100 million more by collecting taxes already due, or delaying tax cuts put into the budget during better times. Among revenues available for collection were $60 million from an approximate $250 million owed the state in back taxes, but not collected. An estimated $30 million could have been collected of $84 million owed by participating in an interstate Consortium established to collect sales tax on Internet transactions. An additional $10 million could have been saved by delaying tax cuts targeted for the benefit of insurance companies.

READER COMMENT

If the entire $100 million was collected, it wouldn’t have eliminated budget cuts for education and state agencies. However the level of cuts would have been less severe and therefore more easily absorbed by the economy, by continuing to provide modest levels of service in every county. But the suggestions mentioned for raising legitimate, vital revenue were dismissed out of hand, with the exception of a token amount of money committed for auditors to collect a portion of unpaid taxes.

Why the House, staffed by Ms. Bell and Mr. Stevenson, would refuse to pursue funds owed to the taxpayers, is unknown. One possibility is an economic calculation to attract out-of-state companies looking for low energy costs, low taxes and yes, low wages.

Another possibility is that House members have little respect for the educational institutions and state agencies they oversee, and considered the climate an opportunity to slice budgets and subsequently spill “crocodile tears.” Finally, the possibility exists that the elected Idaho House leadership decided there would be no attempt to increase revenues and members of the House meekly submitted to their demand in spite of future consequences.

Regardless of the rationale, there’s little reason to hold one’s breath and believe that future legislative sessions will reverse the internal damage to our schools and other vital branches of state government. If you agree, then it’s time to change the legislator allegedly representing your values. My name is Scott McClure and I’m running for Idaho House Seat 26A against incumbent Bert Stevenson. If you think the legislature made wrong-headed decisions about Idaho’s educational future, I would appreciate your vote in November.

Scott McClure, a Jerome Democrat, is a candidate to represent Jerome and Minidoka counties in the Idaho House of Representatives.
(Editor’s note: Bert Stevenson of Rupert and Maxine Bell of Jerome are Republicans who represent District 26 in the Idaho House.)

Real loser in the British election is the economy

LONDON — The stock markets are slumping. Athens is in flames. The vultures of the bond market are circling. And what does one of the most heavily indebted of the major industrial economies vote for? Stalemate, dither and indecision.

The British general election has left the country in a worse position than ever. Even without the final results, it's clear David Cameron's Conservative Party has fallen short of the majority it needs to govern effectively.

Whether Prime Minister Gordon Brown manages to hang on in a coalition with the Liberal Democrats, or whether Cameron forms a minority administration, doesn't make much difference.

Matthew Lynn

This was a phony election, fought between leaders who could only squabble over who could dig their head deepest into the sand. The real election, in which Britain faces up honestly to its problems, is still some way off.

Not until the markets force reality on the British will any clear policies emerge.

But the real loser is the British economy. The election was fought against a backdrop of a financial crisis.

The markets have been thrown into turmoil by the Greek debt crisis — not because Greece is a significant part of the global economy, and not because its $382 billion of government debt is enough to bring down the financial system even if the country does default. But because Greece is a symbol of a wider sovereign-debt crisis. Governments everywhere have borrowed too much, with little idea of how they will close their budget gaps.

At more than 11 percent of gross domestic product, the British deficit is the largest in the Group of Seven nations. If any country should have been voting for a strong government it was this one. But the government that emerges from this election isn't going to be in a position to fix anything. A deal between the Labour Party and the Liberal Democrats would be an alliance between losers. It would be propping up an unelected prime minister. The idea that Britain should spend a year arguing about different systems for electing their politicians is absurd. They might as well spend a year discussing whether Dickens was a better writer than Shakespeare.

The alternative is for Cameron to govern alone. There is no need for him to form a coalition: The Liberal Democrats didn't do well enough to merit a share of the government; and his party won't be in the mood to make concessions when it doesn't have to.

If Cameron does govern alone, he won't be able to do anything. He ran on a timid manifesto that didn't lay out the stark choices facing Britain. Cameron's minority administration won't have the strength to make many difficult decisions. Nor will it have the mandate to stand up to the opposition those decisions would provoke. Stalemate won't work for Britain. At some point, the country will have to tackle its addiction to debt. It has just postponed the day of reckoning at the cost of making it more painful when it arrives.

LETTERS OF THANKS

NRA committee thanks banquet supporters

The Mini-Cassia Friends of NRA Committee would like to extend a big thank you to all who attended this year's fund raising banquet on April 17 at the Rupert Elks Club. A special thanks goes out to all sponsors, underwriters and people who donated services and merchandise. Thanks to our auctioneer, Carl Van Tassel, for a great job. Fifty percent of the funds generated from this event stay in the state of Idaho and are dispersed through a grant program in support of the shooting sports. Several local organizations are beneficiaries of these grants. Again, many thanks to all who supported the banquet, and we hope to see you at next year's event.

Many helped carry out Arbor Day events

On behalf of the Twin Falls County Parks and Waterways Department and County Parks Tree Board, I would like to thank all of the people involved for their dedicated hours of planning and participation of the Arbor Day Parade and Tree Planting Ceremony at Centennial Waterfront Park. This is truly a team effort and could not be accomplished without everyone's participation. Special thanks for their generous donations to Jim Teffer (JT Landscapes), Windsor's Nursery, Tomato's Italian Grill, Mountain View Spraying, ConAgra Foods, Gary Jensen (WCFI), Walt Coiner (Hollyberry Nursery), Dave Jones (Twin Falls Highway District), Becky Cammack (BC Window Cleaning), Dave Keisig (College of Southern Idaho Horticulture Club). As always, thanks to Commissioner George Urie for the reading of the Arbor Day Proclamation and Commissioner Terry Kramer for the master of ceremonies duties at the Arbor Day Parade. Last, but not least, thanks to the queen and anyone else I failed to mention.

Grateful for Sewing Center's generosity

On behalf of the College of Southern Idaho Refugee programs, I would like to thank Larry Himple and the Twin Falls Sewing Center for their amazing generosity. At the Refugee Center, we often receive donations from the community which help to supplement the basics available to refugees just starting out. We recently received a sewing machine that, while in good condition, required some work to be usable. I took the machine to Twin Falls Sewing Center to get an estimate. Larry was fabulous! When he found out the machine was going to a refugee, he told me that the only cost would be for parts; he would provide all labor and time free of charge. What a blessing! The total cost of having a working, functioning sewing machine cost us a grand total of $6.34! It is generosity and kindness such as this that makes the Magic Valley live up to its name. Thanks!

Blood drive donors, helpers thanked

Our Burley Community Blood Drive held on April 12 and 13 was a great success. We received 117 pints of blood and we are so grateful for our many donors. We are thankful to the Burley Armory for allowing us to hold our blood drives in its facility. Culligan Water always donates our cooler and water. The Burley Kiwanis helps us set up and donates money for our treats. Pat Hansen and Kevin Mower made delicious cookies for us.

Our volunteers were Lorna Claunch, Edith and Jacob Cole, and Alberto Castro and Ashley Barlow. The Burley LDS West Stake full-time missionaries came and helped us take down.

It takes a lot of helpers and donors to make our blood drives successful. Thanks so much to you all.

Homeowners thank caring firefighters

We want to express our extreme gratitude to the heroic efforts put forth by the Twin Falls fire department Station 2 and accompanying stations in saving our home on March 31; for coming back and checking

We also want to thank our many neighbors for their offers of assistance, their prayers and expressions of kindness. We truly are blessed to live in such a great neighborhood and such a great city.

Finder thanked for returning wallet

On April 30, I left my wallet in a shopping cart or dropped it in the parking lot at Winco Foods. I didn't realize it was missing until the next day, so when I called Winco, I wasn't very hopeful that it would be turned in and was shocked to find out it had been.

I just want the person who anonymously returned my wallet — including all of the cash, gift cards, driver's license, and credit and debit cards — to know that you are proof that there are still good, honest people among us! May the act of kindness be paid back to you again and again. God bless!

Shelter plans ‘Stop the Violence’ conference

By Judy Albertson
Times News writer

The Mini-Cassia Shelter for Women and Children will host a Stop the Violence day conference from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. May 25 at Morey's Steakhouse, 219 E. Third St. N. in Burley. Registration will be from 8 to 9 p.m. and costs $50 at the door, including a meal. Or, register before May 14 and pay $45. Seating is limited.

The theme of the conference is “Domestic Violence and Mental Illness.” Domestic violence and sexual assault service providers, victim-witness coordinators, victim advocates, mental health providers, clergy leaders and other similar professionals are urged to attend.

“It’s open to professionals and the public as well. The purpose of the conference is to educate the community about domestic violence and mental illness, and how the two are related,” said Pam Harris, the shelter’s executive director.

Though the event was started about 10 years ago, Harris said the group missed a couple of years. This will be the conference’s eighth year.

Topics will be:

- Serious and persistent mental illness and serious mental illness.
- Personal trauma, physical and emotional reactions involved with Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD), introduction of logotherapy.

- Logotherapeutic principles while applying to all aspects of PTSD.

“Logotherapy is a new concept in treating (PTSD) victims such as domestic-violence victims or war veterans,” Harris said.

Speakers will include:

- Richard Neu, who has a B.S. in psychology and was a former adult felony probation and parole officer, former psychosocial rehabilitation specialist and now serves as the mental health court coordinator for the Fifth Judicial District.

- Tom Nielson is a LSPC, ACADC, domestic violence evaluator, psychosexual evaluator, former clinical supervisor for adult mental health in Twin Falls and is a current program manager for the division of Medicaid overseeing licensing and credentialing.

- Rev. Dr. Alice Long has a doctorate of ministry, emphasis of Franklian Psychology and is a graduate of the Theological Foundation in logotherapy. She has 30 years of counseling in childhood abuse and PTSD involving many areas, including veterans in combat.

The second graders at Paul Elementary School have always got their noses in a book, it seems.

The 20 students, taught by Mary Frances Cozakos, have read 7,614 books as of May 4.

Cozakos has taught at the Paul school for 22 years. She does the reading project every year, but said she can’t remember having a class that has done this well.

“I really believe it is the most wonderful thing. It’s amazing to me,” she said.

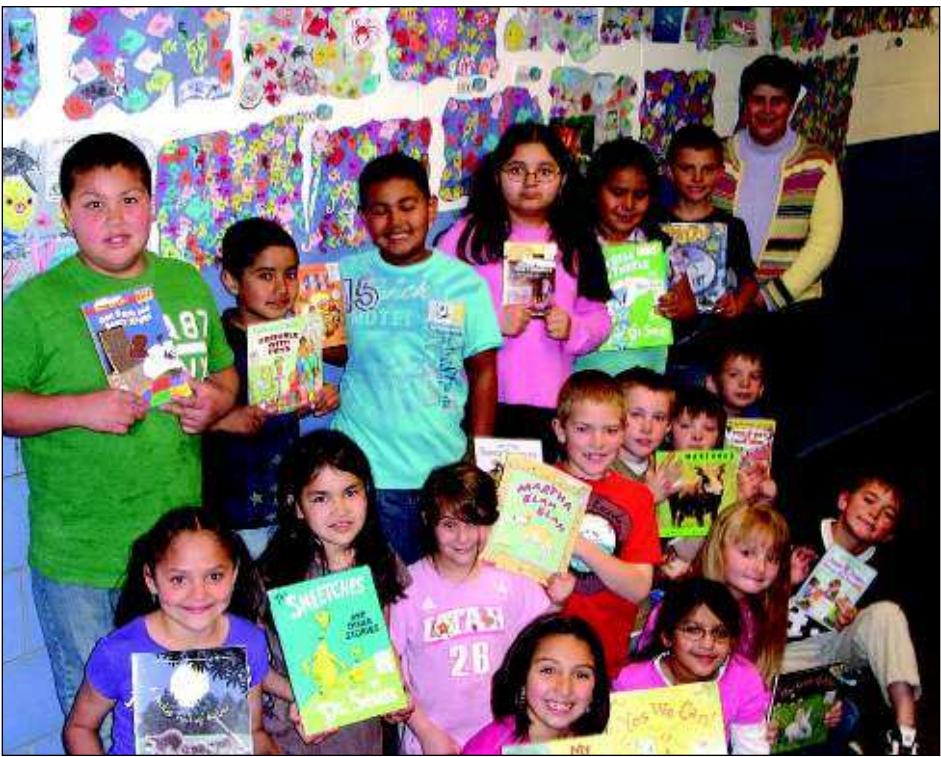

The school has a reading program, but Cozakos does her own thing, selecting a theme for each year. This year the theme is “Dive Into Learning,” and the children color a fish for every book they read.

“My room is full of fish and we’re out in the hall,” she said.

Cozakos doesn’t set goals — the program starts at the beginning of the year and continues until school is out for summer. She’s not sure why this year’s students have excelled.

“They came in reading from the beginning,” she said. “They read in the morning, sometimes at lunch and recess.

“They take a book home every night, then test on it in the morning. If they don’t pass — 60 or better — they have to read it again. It’s senseless to have all the skills of reading but not know what they read.”

The testing program for the books is available to the school over the Internet, allowing teachers to track the children and see what progress they are making.

The children receive no rewards, just the pleasure of knowing how much their class has read, Cozakos said.

The students get books from the library, and Cozakos also lets them read over 1,000 books of her own. The books are at all reading levels, from below kindergarten to 12th grade.

“Yertle the Turtle” by Dr.

Seuss currently tops the class’ list of favorites, Cozakos said. Students have also just started “Diary of a Wimpy Kid,” which she said is “the new craze in kids’ books.”

Cozakos said she’s noticed a definite improvement in her students’ reading over the year.

“It’s nice to see them grow,” she said.

Problems exist, there’s no denying it

Complacency is the enemy of all law enforcement officers. But the main issue that leads to complacency is denial. I’m not talking about the river that runs through Egypt, I’m talking about denying a problem exists.

Denials can start when the belief that something can’t happen affects an officer’s or citizen’s mindset. We have already seen some things we thought could never happen to the United States, such as the Sept. 11 attacks, the Oklahoma City bombing and even Pearl Harbor.

Another denial aspect I would like to talk about is school-based violence.

What do we spend on school safety when it comes to active shooters? We might have the occasional S.W.A.T. team training or practice drills in school, but what we are denying is the ability for our schools to prevent the violence in the first place. Allowing teachers and even bus drivers to carry concealed firearms with proper approved training can be the key factor in preventing violence from coming to our schools. It is a well-known fact that the terrorists have plans to use our schools as targets for their murderous ways. If you don’t believe that, look up the 2004 hostage incident in Beslan, Russia. Bin Laden promised that would be coming to America. I should add that Israel has dealt with this issue by allowing parents, trained in firearm use, to ride on school buses and even be at the schools.

Am I trying to scare you? Yes I want you to be aware and be ready for the worst event you could imagine and train yourselves on what to do. Police train all the time for scenarios that might seem far-fetched, but the rule is train for the worst situation so you can easily handle things if the situation is smaller.

For the officers out there,

POLICEMAN
DAN
Dan Bristol

I’m taking what I learned from Lt. Col. Dave Grossman (Ret) and passing it on to you. Take your off-duty firearm with you wherever you can legally do so. You never know when that law enforcement right to carry a concealed gun (nationwide) might stop the next Columbine murderers.

For the people that might say, “Oh great a bunch of cops carrying guns all over, all the time,” I will say that you would be amazed how much crime gets detoured and reduced when people know a gun might present itself from anywhere. If it were ever reported, you would be pleasantly surprised. Besides, wouldn’t you rather see a cop with a gun than a bad guy?

Next week I will finish up this topic on denial and share some of the ideas I learned on reducing denial. That could be the first step in creating a brighter and safer future.

Many cats carry bacteria that causes cat-scratch fever

DEAR DR. GOTT: I have been diagnosed with cat-scratch fever. Could you explain the disease and its side effects? How long will it last, and what treatment is available?

DEAR READER: Cat-scratch disease (CSD) is the result of a bacterial infection known as Bartonella henselae. Surprisingly, about 40 percent of all cats carry the bacteria in their saliva at some point in their lives, with kittens being more likely to be infected than adult cats; however, neither commonly show any signs of illness.

ASK
Dr. Peter Gott

Most people contract CSD through bites and scratches; however, it is also possible to contract it by petting an infected feline and then rubbing your eyes.

Symptoms include fever, nausea, chills, headache, poor appetite, fatigue, vomiting and inflammation of the lymph nodes.

People with a compromised immune system such as HIV/AIDS, organ-transplant patients and those receiving chemotherapy are at greater risk of developing abnormal blood-vessel growths that resemble tumors after becoming infected. These masses can cause severe organ inflammation and lead to a host of other issues. In the healthy person, however, CSD should resolve on its own without treatment. If lymph-node involvement remains, a patient might require prescription antibiotics for up to a month.

The key is to have your physician make a correct diagnosis, receive antibiotics if appropriate, and take precautions at home by preventing all cats from licking a scratch or open wound on your body; avoiding rough play that might induce the cat to scratch; and washing your hands after playing with the animal. By all means, enjoy your cat, but take precautions to ensure your good health.

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am a 54-year-old male. I've had ED problems for about 10 years, resolved through the use of Viagra. But why? I do have low testosterone levels, for which I take injections, but for the most part I am healthy, fit, not overweight, a nonsmoker, a nonalcoholic-beverage drinker and, per my physician, do not suffer from any other cardiovascular problems. So why do I have blood-flow problems in this one department?

DEAR READER: Erectile dysfunction (ED) affects almost 30 million American men. Almost every man will experience difficulty achieving and maintaining an erection at some stage of his life. This is normal when the instances are infrequent.

Testosterone levels decline after about the age of 40. Low testosterone is identified as less than 300 nanograms per deciliter of blood. Symptoms, as I am sure you are aware, include ED, reduced libido, fatigue and mood swings, much the same as women going through menopause.

Testosterone replacement to bring deficient levels to within normal range can be accomplished through a skin gel, skin patch, oral tablets or injection.

The causes for impotence fall into three broad categories — an inadequate flow of blood, a nervous system dysfunction and hormonal abnormalities. Medical conditions that may contribute to the condition include arteriosclerosis in the lower portion of the body, prostate cancer, stress, anxiety, depression, diabetes, hypertension, liver disease, alcoholism and kidney failure. A great number of medications also have impotence as a side effect. Our bodies change as we age, and what was taken successfully in the past might not be so successful today.

Treatment options are varied. If you suspect a medication might be to blame, speak with your physician to determine if he or she will allow a trial period without the drug. There are a number of prescription medications available to enhance sexual performance or to combat impotence, including mechanical devices, such as vacuum pumps, and penile implants. Another important consideration is counseling for both you and your partner. If all physiological possibilities have been ruled out, you might consider seeing a sex therapist, psychiatrist or psychologist. You may have a degree of stress in your life you are unaware of, and certainly the perception of failure is a possibility. Sometimes just speaking with your partner or a third-party therapist will help alleviate issues and solve the problem.

Make another appointment with your primary-care physician. If you haven't had complete blood work performed recently, ask about scheduling it. Get your blood pressure checked and a complete examination. Give a therapist a try. Once you identify the possible source for the impotence, the faster you can get on with your life in a way you will approve of.

Vessel lowers vault onto ruptured well

ON THE GULF OF MEXICO (AP) — A BP-chartered vessel lowered a 100-ton concrete-and-steel vault onto a ruptured well in the Gulf of Mexico on Friday, an important step in a delicate and unprecedented attempt to stop most of the gushing crude fouling the sea.

Underwater robots guided the 40-foot-tall box into place. Now that the contraption is on the seafloor, workers will need at least 12 hours to let it settle and make sure it's stable before the robots can hook up a pipe and hose that will funnel the oil up to a tanker.

"It appears to be going exactly as we hoped," BP spokesman Bill Salvin told The Associated Press on Friday afternoon, shortly after the four-story device hit the seafloor. "Still lots of challenges ahead, but this is very good progress."

The containment vessel is lowered into the Gulf of Mexico at the site of the Deepwater Horizon rig collapse, Thursday.

By Sunday, the box the size of a house could be capturing up to 85 percent of the oil. So far about 3 million gallons have leaked in an environmental crisis that has been unfolding since a deepwater drilling platform exploded April 20, sending toxic oil toward a shoreline of marshes, shipping channels, fishing grounds and beaches. Eleven workers were killed in the accident.

The lowering of the containment device was a slow-moving drama playing out 50 miles from Louisiana's coast, requiring great precision and attention to detail. It took about two weeks to build the 40-foot box, and the effort to lower it by crane and cable to the seafloor began late Thursday night. After it hit bottom Friday afternoon, the crane gradually eased off to allow it to settle.

"We are essentially taking a four-story building and lowering it 5,000 feet and setting it on the head of a pin," Salvin said.

The task became increasingly urgent as toxic oil crept deeper into the bays and marshes of the Mississippi Delta.

A sheen of oil began arriving on land last week, and crews have been putting out floating barriers, spraying chemical dispersants and setting fire to the slick to try to keep it from coming ashore. But now the thicker, stickier goo — arrayed in vivid, brick-colored ribbons — is drawing ever closer to Louisiana's coastal communities.

"It appears to be going exactly as we hoped."

Victory Home asks for community's help

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

From mowing lawns to baking bread, the guys at Victory Home have done what they can to raise money for their treatment center.

Now they're asking for your help.

Victory Home, a Christian-based non-profit treatment home that has yet to receive grant funding and solely relies on goodwill donations, will today host an auction and dinner to raise money for a new roof.

"We're crying out to the community," said director Tony Lopez. "We don't charge for any of our services here, and don't get any help from the government or state. Everything here is volunteer."

Roofing materials, estimated at $7,500, will replace old shingling that was in place when Victory Home, in 2008, took over the building at 450 Third Ave. W., Twin Falls. The shingling and sheetrock is damaged, Lopez said, causing water to leak into the attic.

TCA Roofing of Twin Falls has opted to donate free labor, he said, but the facility needs to pay for the materials for the 7,200-square-foot roof.

Victory Home helps drug addicts and others to overcome their problems by teaching them skills, self-discipline and providing GED classes as well as prayer and Bible teachings.

Nine men going through rehabilitation currently live at the facility, though it can hold between 12 and 16, Lopez said. After about three months at the home, the men participate in service and

Churches' outreach extends to the links

By Ron Orozco
McClatchy Newspapers

FRESNO, Calif. — Churches and faith groups are connecting with the public through sport.

In some areas, golf ministries are giving people a way to have fun and build fellowship while learning more about churches and faith-based organizations.

"Just about anyone can play golf," says Dennis Hammond, president of the Christian Golf Club of Central California. The club holds monthly tournaments to help raise money for faith-based organizations. This year, proceeds are going to the Evangel Home, a Christian organization helping women and children.

"You don't have to be a gifted athlete to play golf," Hammond says. "All ages play, youngsters to grandparents in their 90s. You don't have to be a good player to have fun."

Faith leaders say golf ministries create opportunities for people to better understand what they do. It sometimes translates into new members, volunteers and donations. But they say they are mainly interested in helping people.

In the spring and summer months, when the weather is best for golf, ministry events are presented in California's Central Valley nearly every day.

On a recent Thursday, for example, Fresno/Madera Youth for Christ held its annual golf tournament — 110 golfers played through an afternoon drizzle at Fort Washington Country Club.

After play ended, everyone gathered in the club's banquet room, where Youth for Christ's executive director, Ed Kaczmarek, gave a presentation on how the faith-based organization helps needy kids and how donors can help.

"Golf reaches those who are business owners and community leaders — and it's a great group to reach," Kaczmarek says. "There's good camaraderie, good fellowship on the golf course."

"When you have a good day of golf, it lifts up your organization. There's a levity that brings warm fuzzies around your organization."

Clovis Hills Community Church presents a Twilight Golf League ministry. The ministry is designed for men and women — church members and nonmembers — to get to know each other outside of church.

"We know church can be intimidating for people who have never gone," says a Clovis Hills associate pastor, the Rev. Dave Love. "So many people have gone to church and had a bad experience. So we just try to lessen the stereotype that people tend to have."

The ministry's organizer, Rod Gleghorn, says he always tries to share his faith and tell others how they can get involved in church ministries.

"If you just go on Sundays, you just sit in the pews and don't get to know others," he says.

Richard Lee, who plays in the Clovis Hills league with his wife, Mickey, says he tries to listen on the course, hoping to zero in on people's needs. The Lees coordinate the church's Crown financial ministry, which trains people to apply biblical principles in money management.

"When you have a ministry, golf is another avenue for how you can meet other people," he says. "It is an outlet that is safe for everybody."

"You ask, 'What can we do to help you out?' You can't do that if you don't meet people."

"People need various avenues to come to church, and we just want to be an example to them," says Steve Melnyk, director of the recreational ministries for NorthPointe Community Church in northwest Fresno. "Whatever door they can come through, we just want to provide that opening."

Melnik says creativity counts, but so does faith. He says, "I think God leads stuff, and we just follow."

Graham prays at Pentagon, says Islam got a pass

By Pauline Jelinek
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Evangelist Franklin Graham prayed on a sidewalk outside the Pentagon Thursday after his invitation to a prayer service inside was withdrawn because of comments that insulted Muslims.

"It looks like Islam has gotten a pass," he told reporters. "They are able to have their services, but just because I disagree ... I'm excluded."

In 2001, Graham, the son of famed evangelist Billy Graham, described Islam as evil. More recently, he said he finds Islam offensive and wants Muslims to know that Jesus Christ died for their sins. The Pentagon's chaplain office called those comments inappropriate and, at the request of the Army, withdrew Graham's invitation to attend a multi-denominational "National Day of Prayer" service that was held in the Defense Department auditorium.

He came anyway, arriving in the Pentagon parking lot just before 8 a.m. — his party of a half dozen people forming a circle on the sidewalk and praying.

They stood there for about five minutes, heads bowed, as people arriving for work passed by — a man with a briefcase, one on a bike, a woman carrying breakfast pastry in a bag and another man carrying a skateboard.

Then the group walked to the Pentagon's Sept. 11 memorial roughly a couple of hundred feet away, where media had gathered because it's one of the few places where cameras are allowed on the Pentagon property. There, Graham held a news conference that lasted nearly twice as long as the prayer.

Asked why he had come, Graham said it was to pray for the men and women serving at the warfront, including his son, who he said had already been wounded in Iraq and now serves in Afghanistan.

He said he doesn't believe "all religions are equal" and that there is only "one way to God" — and that is through Jesus.

Asked if he still believes Islam is evil, he said: "I believe the way they treat women is evil, yes I do." And, can he understand how some of his comments would be offensive to Muslims? "Oh, I'm sure," he said. "But I find what they teach and what they preach and what's on the Internet — I find that to be offensive, too."

Another moment in the news conference, he said people shouldn't be offended because it's simply a disagreement in what people believe.

Graham said many American Christians "feel we are losing our freedoms while people of other faiths are gaining their freedom. It's a perception, whether it's right or wrong."

While Graham spoke outside, some 80 people attended a service inside the Pentagon that included Roman Catholic, Jewish, Muslim and Protestant chaplains.

‘Busy Mom’s Bible’ fits well in any schedule

By Karris Golden
The Courier

WATERLOO, Iowa — Although I’m something of a collector of sacred texts, I’m not often dazzled by new editions.

Too often, makers of new additions of popular religious texts assume the reader will adapt to the form. As a result, I believe that may be why many are bought only to wallow unused on the shelf.

That’s often true of products made for women — especially moms. Women’s study Bibles and devotionals, for example, sometimes start the user at a deficit, making the user believe she must carve out time from a packed schedule.

Zondervan “Busy Mom’s Bible,” available at major booksellers, is an exceptional and well-done volume. Based on the assumption that every mom is busy, this Bible is designed to suit a variety of schedules.

Books are supposed to be used, so it follows they must be useful. This book meets the challenge, starting with its design. This volume is less than one-inch thick and weighs less than two pounds. Zondervan included its best-selling, most-read New International Version of the entire Old and New testaments.

As a result, it functions well as an everyday Bible. The thought starters allow you to “dip into God’s word for a minute of refreshment.”

Carefully planned features add dimension to the “Busy Mom’s Bible.” If you have more time to spend with the book, there are 52 “thought starters” on color inserts throughout, which offer suggestions for “going deeper.” These pages focus on general topics like “Overcoming Obstacles,” “Raising Your Kids” and “Stewardship.”

Each includes the “word to take with you today,” based on an accompanying reflection and verse. You also can go to the five-minute “reflect and pray” and the 10-minute study and study index.

The pages also have more subtopics. For example, under “A Woman of Character,” you can focus on subtopics like “A Life of Purpose,” “Valuing Mentors” and “Words that Build.”

If “Busy Mom’s Bible” has a flaw, it’s a small one: The cover is made from luscious, two-toned Italian leather, so you may cringe at the prospect of tossing it in a purse or diaper bag.

Mother’s Day out of control

West Virginian Anna Jarvis is universally credited with coming up with the idea for an American Mother’s Day in 1908. What isn’t as widely remembered is that nine years after the first official Mother’s Day in this country, Anna Jarvis became the nation’s most publicly outspoken opponent of — what else? — Mother’s Day.

This is roughly akin to Santa dissing Christmas, or Punxsutawney Phil being a conscientious objector to Groundhog Day. This is Henry Ford urging the automobubbling public to park their Model T’s, or Wilbur and Orville Wright coming back from Kitty Hawk and saying, “Never mind. They’ll just start charging people extra to check their luggage.”

By all accounts (i.e., Wikipedia), Jarvis led a six-year campaign that eventually led to President Woodrow Wilson making Mother’s Day an official national holiday in 1914. Her concept was a day to honor mothers in general — and her own mother in particular — in quiet, intimate and deeply personal ways.

Within a few years, however, the commercialization of Mother’s Day soured Jarvis on the whole idea. She hated Mother’s Day greeting cards, which she felt were the lazy person’s way out of writing a personal, heart-felt letter. She protested — literally — the growing influence of florists and jewelers on the holiday. In 1948, the same year that she died, records show that she was actually arrested while protesting against Mother’s Day commercialization.

VALUE SPEAK

It was as if the Easter Bunny had been jailed for protesting the coloring of Easter eggs.

Jarvis’ fight against Mother’s Day lasted four times longer than her fight to make it a national holiday and consumed whatever fortune she had accumulated in life. To her dying day, she is reported to have said that she regretted the creation of Mother’s Day because “it became so out of control.”

I know. In an era that features “Bad Girls Club,” “Desperate Housewives” and “Girls Gone Wild,” it is difficult to put the words “Mother’s Day celebration” and “out of control” in the same sentence. But let’s just assume for a second that Jarvis was on to something. Let’s assume that the estimated $2.6 billion Americans will spend this year on Mother’s Day flowers and the $1.53 billion they will spend on other miscellaneous Mother’s Day gifts and the $68 million they will spend on greeting cards is — well — you know — out of control.

Is there a better, more under-control way to honor mothers on Mother’s Day?

A few months after my mother died, I spent a few evenings with my father sorting through some of Mom’s things. It had taken him that long to reach the point where he felt he was ready to face the feelings and emotions that surely would come. We smiled a lot and we both shed a few tears as we made our way through a box of precious things that Mom, for one reason or another, had decided to hang on to.

Among the keepsakes and souvenirs within that box were a dozen or so Mother’s Day cards from her children and grandchildren. Keep in mind that Mom had eight children and 54 grandchildren — she had received hundreds of Mother’s Day cards through the years. But for some reason, she chose to save these particular cards.

After examining them, it became clear why they were treasured. It had nothing to do with the design or intrinsic value of the card itself. In every case there was a hand-written message — sometimes in childish scrawl, sometimes in careful adult script — that expressed profound feelings. There were no cards that just said, “Love, Kathy” or “Love ya, Mom!” or even “Happy Mother’s Day!” The cards she cherished were cards that explained, in the giver’s own hand and words, why SHE was cherished.

So, OK — I’m not fully on board with Anna Jarvis. I’m not saying you shouldn’t buy the Mother’s Day flowers and gifts. Heaven knows, the economy needs that multi-billion dollar jolt right about now. But don’t let your money do your talking for you.

Don’t assume the mother you honor will know how you feel by the simple fact of your gift. Tell her, in your own words, why you love her. Your message doesn’t have to be long and flowery — it just has to come from your heart. Write it. Speak it. Text it. Pray it. But for heaven’s sake, share it.

Those words, expressing those tender emotions, are what makes Mother’s Day so sweet.

And not quite so out of control.

fundraising efforts.

Lopez said it takes about $3,500 a month to operate the facility, and members try to raise between $500 and $700 a week. They do this by mowing lawns, washing cars, selling tamales and even baking bread.

Besides raising money for the home, the activities help teach members responsibility and other life skills.

“It gives us the tools we need to become productive citizens,” Dan Watson, a recovering meth user, said. “In the four months I’ve been here, it’s changed my life dramatically.”

Watson used to wake in the mornings with a craving to get high, he said, but since coming to the home he is learning to overcome his addiction. He’s also found Jesus.

“It certainly turned my life around,” he said of the experience. Watson understands he’s not fully recovered, though, and plans to stay at the home indefinitely.

Lopez said he’s grateful for the community’s help so far, and hopes it will help with the roof. Foods and other items for today’s event have been donated by area businesses.

“We’ve been hearing that representatives of different churches and organizations plan to come out,” he said. “A lot of people find it hard to give, especially now when times are tough. But we hope to see the community get involved.”

Police: No criminal intent in bus bomb scare

By Kathy McCormack
Associated Press writer

PORTSMOUTH, N.H. — The words “bomb on the bus” heard from a cell phone set it all off: Downtown Portsmouth shut down, businesses and homes evacuated, sharpshooters and an armored vehicle rolling in.

The parked, New York City-bound Greyhound was surrounded for nine hours Thursday, until the man who took the call, an immigrant from the African nation of Burundi, finally emerged. Police now say their “appropriate” show of force so frightened the passenger that he refused to leave the bus until a family member helped talk him out.

“It wasn’t long before we realized he was scared. We didn’t feel it was criminal intent,” Portsmouth Police Chief David Ferland said Friday, a day after the bomb scare that shut down the heart of this bustling seaside community popular with tourists.

Authorities did not release the name of the passenger, who Ferland said will not face charges. Police say he was a native Swahili speaker who understood limited English.

Two of the 16 other passengers were charged with misdemeanors for their behavior after the bus was evacuated.

The ordeal on the bus, which was headed from Bangor, Maine, to New York, started Thursday morning when a passenger overheard “a strange man” speaking a foreign language on a cell phone, police said.

The passenger called 911 after hearing someone on the other end of the phone shouting about “a bomb on

Montana, Idaho consider raising wolf hunt quotas

By Matthew Brown
Associated Press writer

BILLINGS, Mont. — Hunters in Montana would be allowed to kill nearly three times as many gray wolves this fall compared with last year’s inaugural hunt, under a proposal announced Friday by state wildlife officials.

Wolves in neighboring Idaho also face a potentially higher quota. And hunters there could be allowed to use traps, electronic calls and, in some regions, bait to increase their odds of a successful kill. Final details are pending.

The moves to put more wolves into hunters’ crosshairs come barely a year after the predators came off the endangered species list.

But a pending federal lawsuit could block the states’ wolf seasons. Wolf advocates — including the Sierra Club and Defenders of Wildlife — argue the hunts would be too aggressive, threatening the species’ long-term survival.

Ranchers counter that mounting livestock losses to wolves must be put in check through any available means, including hunting. State wildlife officials say last year’s seasons proved the animals can withstand significant hunting pressure without collapsing.

Montana wildlife managers are asking the state’s Fish, Wildlife and Parks Commission to approve a quota between 186 and 216 wolves for the fall hunting season. During the 2009 hunt, 72 wolves were killed; the quota was 75.

The commission will take up the proposal when it meets Thursday in Helena. A final decision is expected in July following a public comment period.

Montana Chief of Wildlife Ken McDonald says the changes would target wolves in parts of the state where the predators have menaced livestock producers and frustrated hunters. Wolves regularly attack sheep and cattle, while big game species like elk and deer are a mainstay of their diet.

“We’ve learned a lot over the past year,” McDonald said. “It’s our responsibility to address the fact that more than 200 sheep and about 100 head of cattle were killed by wolves last year and that wolves have depressed deer and elk populations in some areas.”

An archery-only wolf season also would be introduced. Stricter quota limits would be enforced for some backcountry areas, to concentrate hunting in areas where livestock attacks are more frequent.

Last year was the first time the animals had been subject to an organized public hunt in the Lower 48 states since they were nearly exterminated in the 1930s.

Hunting never stopped in Alaska, where wolf numbers never dipped to unsustainable levels. Wyoming briefly allowed the animals to be shot on sight two years ago, but the 320 wolves there have since been returned to the endangered species list.

There were at least 525 wolves in Montana last year. The number across the Northern Rockies — 1,706 — is still growing, though at its slowest rate in nearly 15 years.

The Idaho Fish and Game Commission meets in August to set the quota, season dates and other groundrules for the state’s 2010 hunt.

Jim Unsworth, Idaho Fish and Game deputy director, said the commission’s objective is to lower the population to about 520 wolves, a number in line with the state’s management goals.

the bus,” authorities said.

That call prompted authorities to evacuate buildings and streets and to surround the bus with a bomb squad and sharpshooters. A half-dozen federal agencies rushed to assist.

The caller was not identified and police refused to release a copy of the 911 tape or a transcript of the call. Police also said there was a report that a person on board saw a weapon, but no explosives and no weapons were found. It was not clear if the same person who claimed to see a weapon was the 911 caller.

The passengers remained on the bus for about two hours after the 911 call — apparently because they did not know what to do amid the massive police presence. At the time, the police spokesman said he wasn’t sure why the people weren’t moving from the bus.

Deadline extended for Little Wood dam project

BOISE (AP) — A U.S. Senate committee voted to extend the deadline to begin construction on a pair of hydroelectric projects in southern Idaho.

The move Thursday in the Senate Resources Committee affects projects on the Little Wood River and at the American Falls Reservoir.

The proposed extensions now move to the full chamber as part of a package of relicensing bills.

At the Little Wood River Ranch site, a private hydroelectric project is in the works about six miles west of the city of Shoshone.

Both it and the American Falls Reservoir project, where several modifications to the existing dam are planned, would get a three-year extension to begin construction, once this bill becomes law.

Sens. Jim Risch and Mike Crapo, Idaho Republicans, are backing the projects in Washington, D.C., saying they’ll create jobs and boost clean energy production.

Canada’s eager beavers build world’s largest dam

TORONTO (AP) — A Canadian-based ecologist said Friday he has located the world’s largest beaver dam in northwestern Canada using Google satellite technology.

Ecologist Jean Thie located the 2,788-foot dam using Google Earth and NASA technology while researching the rate of melting permafrost in the country’s far north.

Situated in northern Alberta’s Wood Buffalo National Park, which straddles the Alberta-Northwest Territories border, the dam stretches more than eight football fields long.

“I couldn’t believe it when I saw it — it’s a vast, vast area. There may be longer dams out there, but this, by far, is the largest I have seen so far. And, it would not have been possible to view it without something like Google Earth,” said Thie.

Thie told The Associated Press the detailed satellite program helped him conclude the dam was the work of beavers — which, incidentally, are the country’s national symbol.

Thie discovered the dam in 2007, but he said it only recently caught media attention after someone at a British paper spotted his findings on a blog and ran a story reiterating Thie’s claim that the dam is visible from space. Thie stakes that claim because he used satellite technology to detect the dam.

“It might be hard to believe, but there are a few things that are visible from space, and beaver dams are among the few animal-made structures that are,” said Thie.

U of I Foundation to sell land to Fish and Game

LEWISTON (AP) — The University of Idaho Foundation has decided to sell a 120-acre parcel on a northcentral Idaho mountain that’s home to bighorn sheep to the state Department of Fish and Game, not a Washington state resident who bid more money.

The foundation accepted a $122,100 bid from the state agency for the parcel on Craig Mountain, not the $126,000 bid from Steve Heitstuman during an auction in March.

Heitstuman protested and the foundation put the sale on hold late last month.

On Thursday, the foundation’s attorney, J. Frederick Mack of Boise, wrote Heitstuman’s attorney to tell him the sale to Fish and Game would proceed, the Lewiston Tribune reported.

Mack says the foundation was persuaded to take the lower bid because the agency will allow the university to conduct research on the property along with the rest of its holdings on Craig Mountain south of Lewiston.

“The foundation’s actions were consistent with its right to choose an offer that was lower than the highest offer it received,” Mack wrote.

Fish and Game already owns about 78,000 acres south of Lewiston that makes up its Craig Mountain Wildlife Management Area, where it aims to preserve wildlife and fish habitat along the lower Snake and Salmon rivers.

Today is Saturday, May 8, the 128th day of 2010. There are 237 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On May 8, 1945, President Harry S. Truman announced in a radio address that Nazi Germany's forces had surrendered in World War II, and that "the flags of freedom fly all over Europe."

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1541, Spanish explorer Hernando de Soto reached the Mississippi River.

In 1794, Antoine Lavoisier, the father of modern chemistry, was executed on the guillotine during France's Reign of Terror.

In 1846, the first major battle of the Mexican-American War was fought at Palo Alto, Texas; U.S. forces led by Gen. Zachary Taylor were able to beat back the Mexican forces.

In 1884, the 33rd president of the United States, Harry S. Truman, was born in Lamar, Mo.

In 1958, Vice President Richard Nixon was shoved, stoned, booed and spat upon by anti-American protesters in Lima, Peru.

In 1962, the musical comedy "A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum" opened on Broadway.

In 1970, antiwar protests took place across the United States and around the world; in New York, construction workers broke up a demonstration on Wall Street.

IF MAY 8 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: The dreams you have between now and the end of the month are attainable and you could even have a long sought after opportunity drop in your lap. Your judgment is sound, so this is a great time to make key decisions, to make a commitment or to put important changes, such as a new job or career, into motion. You might meet that special someone this summer or between September and Christmas — and if you are already in a relationship, it could become closer. Because people admire your talents, you will be able to make huge strides with your career this summer and because you are more astute about business tactics, you might improve your finances in November.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A new broom sweeps clean. You will find that new friends, attitudes or ideas help you do a better job in some segment of your life. It might be a good time to make a change that improves your love life.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Show a united front for the best success. Being supportive doesn't necessarily create dependence. You can stand by your man (or woman) and still maintain your own separate opinions and individuality.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Don't mistake togetherness for intimacy. Discussions will fare better than passions this weekend. Take your time about getting to know someone thoroughly before hopping headlong into a new relationship.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Set the stage to mesmerize your audience. Low lights and music could put someone in the mood for love later this evening. You are likely to appear in a flattering light at a public function.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Trust your heart in someone else's hands. This could be a good time to share private, intimate feelings with a special someone. Put two heads together to handle joint resources in the most profitable way.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Mercury might be retrograde but that doesn't mean that you won't get the message. You are actually thinking more rationally and intelligently than usual and can "sell" your ideas to others.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Small, insignificant tasks might seem unimportant to you, but could win you high praise. Concentrate your best efforts on making someone else the center of your attention. You might have a secret admirer.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Simplify complex issues. It could be a perfect time to examine your fundamental wants and needs. Learn to be more spontaneous although you may need to keep some things secret.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You will find that sincerity is the best tactic to counteract unfounded suspicions. It is perfectly natural if a special someone vacillates about making a decision. Give someone extra time.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Take a companion along to make your daily business a pleasure. A cherished hookup is willing to follow wherever you lead. Enjoy permanent relief from at least one liability in the week ahead.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Don't be surprised if you encounter déjà vu. A serendipitous chain of events could fatten your wallet or bring you in touch with someone special. Be respectful of those who help you on the road to success.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You can stand on your own two feet without stepping on anyone else's toes. You are a temporary expert at being independent without being ostentatious. This is a good time to experiment on the social scene.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"Martin, if dirt were trumps, what hands you would hold!"

— Charles Lamb

In the duplicate game at the Cavendish Club in Manhattan, the following hand produced much discussion. The computer analysis showed that four spades can be made — but the play is especially entertaining.

After West leads two rounds of clubs, declarer can succeed by ruffing, drawing precisely one round of trumps, then crossing to dummy with a diamond and playing on hearts. But imagine declarer takes the more normal line of playing both top trumps as East discards a discouraging heart.

Now declarer plays the diamond queen and a second diamond. If West ruffs in, the defense is over. If he takes his last trump and plays a third club, declarer can ruff, run the diamonds, and take a heart finesse. If West plays back a club immediately, declarer can ruff and lead his third diamond to bring about the same ending.

But there is a defense. West must discard, let's say a heart, on the second diamond. Declarer now takes the heart finesse and cashes the heart ace. If West ruffs in, he can only collect his trump tricks.

So West discards a second time, and South tempts him again by leading a low heart, and West must discard a third time. Declarer ruffs his heart loser in dummy, but when he exits with a top diamond, West can ruff in, cash his spade queen, and lead a club. South ruffs, but must concede trick 13 to East's heart king.

ANSWER: It is not clear that there is a right answer. Both double and an overcall of one spade are sensible, and both might work. But be aware that this hand, while close to a maximum for a one-spade overcall, is certainly not outside the range for the call. Bid one spade, expecting to be able to bid hearts or double for takeout at your next turn, thus showing extras.

Kimberly shines at first Meet of Champions

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

The Fourth District Coaches Association Meet of Champions gave the best area racers a chance to prove they were indeed the best on the track, or in the field.

Kimberly's Ethan Richmond showed he deserves top billing.

Richmond won both hurdle events and helped Kimberly to two relay wins, giving one of the top performances at Friday's inaugural meet at the Jerry Kleinkopf Track Complex at Twin Falls High School.

Richmond blasted through the field in the 110 hurdles in a time of 15.3 seconds; sailing over each barrier with grace and ease.

"My coaches have been telling me to lean into my hurdles, so when I got out there I just told myself to lean into them and run hard," Richmond said. "It's a season-best, so I'm really excited to see where I can go with what's left of the season."

Mere minutes after cruising through the hurdles, he ran the lead leg of Kimberly's 4x200 relay and was first to the exchange zone to give the Bulldogs a lead they held to the end.

"It's a tough turnaround but my teammates need me. It's all about the team spirit,"

Richmond said.

Buhl's Whitney Amoth has had no one but herself to contend with for most of the season — both a good thing and a bad thing, she conceded.

Amoth — who holds the state's best shot put mark regardless of classification, according to the track and field website www.athletic.net — took care of the shot put before setting a three-inch personal record in the discus, winning at 115 feet, 4 inches.

"Last season discus was an afterthought because I was so good in the shot," she said. "This year I've been really trying to just work on the work ethic and work harder. I put a lot of pressure on myself, and I'm working on keeping my composure."

"When I threw 42 feet (in the shot put earlier to set the state's best mark), it kind of hung over me, and I got into a slump. To be throwing well before districts and state is exciting."

Other athletes threw down their season bests as well. Cade Powers of Raft River upped his best in the high jump to 6 feet, 6 inches, while teammate Braden Ottley increased his Class 1A-best discus toss to just under 162 feet.

PLAYING FOR IT ALL

Buhl teammates congratulate Dylan Brooks, second from left, as he crosses the plate after the Indians' second home run of their game against Kimberly Friday afternoon in Buhl.

Buhl baseball reaches SCIC title game

By Michael Cole
Times-News writer

BUHL — J.D. Leckenby may get the headlines, but Matt Hamilton reminded Kimberly that he's the dangerous bat in Buhl's lineup.

Hamilton went 3-for-3 with two home runs and four RBIs as Buhl topped Kimberly 8-2 Friday to reach the Sawtooth Central Idaho Conference championship round.

"I was just swinging where the ball was," said Hamilton. "Both of the balls were on the outside and I just wanted to put the ball in play. The ball just lifted really well and I guess the warm weather helped."

Kimberly's offense kept ace pitcher J.D. Leckenby busy, picking up seven hits. Nick Dame had a double for Kimberly's only extra-base hit.

"They did a good job putting the ball into play," said Hamilton. "I think that is the best anyone has hit Leckenby all year."

Kimberly pitcher Sam Bourgeois maintained composure against Buhl's bats despite allowing five runs after five innings. Bourgeois had trouble with both Hamiltons in the Buhl lineup — Jack Hamilton went 3-for-4 with two doubles.

"Sam did a great job today," said Gonzales. "They are used to scoring five runs every inning. He keeps the ball down and his location and curve ball were great."

Kimberly's two runs came in the sixth inning as the Bulldogs capitalized on base runners.

Buhl coach Brady Swallow huddled up his players in the middle of the sixth and told them to win the inning. And win the inning is just what the Indians did. Markus Lively, who went 3-for-3, started the inning off with a single and soon scored when Dylan Brooks smashed a Bourgeois pitch over the left-field fence. The third run came off a double by Cader Owen.

Leckenby shut the door on Kimberly in the top of the seventh but not without the Bulldogs adding two more hits. Leckenby finished the game giving up two runs and seven hits.

The Indians await the winner of Monday's game, as Kimberly hosts Wendell in an elimination game.

"We want to be back at Buhl on Wednesday," said Gonzales. "When we play them we are only going to get better. Our team has a short memory and we will be ready on Monday."

WENDELL 12, FILER 4

Wendell rolled past Filer

12-4 on Friday, eliminating the Wildcats and advancing the Trojans to Monday's elimination game with Kimberly.

Wendell's bats caught fire, especially in the fourth inning. Nolan Stouder smacked a two-run home run and teammate Taylor Peterson had three RBIs off a single and a double.

Wendell pitcher Gary Koopman had 15 strikeouts and four RBIs at the plate with a double and a triple.

Golden Eagles split with CSN, clinch SWAC No. 2

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

Didn't we see this last weekend?

The College of Southern Idaho softball team found itself slipping into a dangerous pattern after again splitting the first double-header of a four-game series with a Scenic West Athletic Conference opponent, this time with the College of Southern Nevada Friday at Eagle Field in Twin Falls.

The Golden Eagles won 6-1 before falling 13-3 in a six-inning run-rule loss. They did the same thing one week ago against Western Nevada: crushing their opponent in Game 1 while failing to show up for Game 2. In each instance, Game 2 was marked by multiple errors and a lack of timely hitting.

"It was just mental," said center fielder Marie Williams. "We weren't in it. We get up when we're hitting, and when we don't, the whole team gets down. (Friday), we couldn't get out of it."

As usual, the Eagles got the job done in Game 1, connecting 10 times against CSN pitchers Shelby Medrano and Jesslyn Bley. They trailed 1-0 until the bottom of the fourth, when a couple of rallies led them past the Coyotes. Williams hit 2-for-4 with one run and one RBI, while Lyndi

Shirley serious contender at MVS

By Linda Brittsan
Times-News correspondent

A dream night for a driver and his crew at Magic Valley Speedway would be to unload the car, get in a few practice laps and then maybe grab a quick snack from the concession stand. After making a few minor adjustments, the car qualifies well and has a good finish in the heat race. The driver then wins the main event and poses for a photo standing next to a still pristine car and addresses the fans with a brilliant victory speech.

Time for the reality check.

Budweiser Super Stocks driver Daniel Shirley well knows how unpredictable a day at the track can be. Going in with the usual high hopes last Saturday at MVS, Shirley's outing wasn't exactly a nightmare, but

Westwood takes lead at Sawgrass

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press writer

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. — Lee Westwood tries to peak for the biggest tournaments. And while he doesn't put The Players Championship in his top five, it's big enough that he is playing some of his best golf going into the weekend.

Westwood ran off three straight birdies to start his back nine Friday on his way to a 7-under 65 to build a one-shot lead over Heath Slocum, Francesco Molinari of Italy and Ryuji Imada.

"As you get older, it gets harder to peak all the time when you want to," said Westwood, a 37-year-old Englishman. "You have to pick and choose your ones, and you want to play well in the biggest tournaments. And this is one of the biggest tournaments."

There's a chance it might finally start playing like one.

Westwood was at 12-under 132, the lowest score to lead after 36 holes at The Players Championship since 1994, when Greg Norman was at 14 under on his way to setting the 72-hole record.

But as the wind picked up and the temperatures rose late in the afternoon, there were signs that the TPC Sawgrass was starting to get firm after two days of relatively soft conditions.

Tiger Woods and Phil Mickelson will be around for the weekend, which is about all that could be said for golf's two biggest stars. Woods overcame one tee shot that flew off to the right at a 45-degree angle and gave him double bogey for a 1-under 71. Mickelson flirted with the cut line late in the day until making a tough chip for birdie on the 16th. He shot a 71.

They were at 3-under 141, nine shots behind.

That might be too far back on a course where there already have been 73 rounds in the 60s, the most after two days on the Stadium Course since 1993. But with more heat and more wind, the final two days could be unpredictable.

"Because the character of the course is changing so much from the morning to the afternoon, the guys that are 2-, 3-, 4-under par are in the tournament," Mickelson said. "Because if they shoot 6-, 7-, 8-under par, they're going to move right up the leaderboard. And it's going to be difficult for the leaders to pull away."

CSI takes two at Eastern Utah

Times-News

The start was ugly but the day ended effective anyway.

The College of Southern Idaho baseball team swept Eastern Utah Friday in Price, Utah, winning 8-3 and 8-1 to move to 33-20 overall (22-15 Scenic West).

Tyler Vavra picked up the win for the Golden Eagles in Game 1, though coach Boomer Walker wasn't thrilled with the intensity, or lack thereof.

"It was actually a game where I felt like we played really uninspired," he said. "It was just kind of a blah game."

CSI had more energy in Game 2 as Parker Morin hit his second home run in as many weeks and Mike Wesner, Blake Lively and Kyle Beverley each had doubles.

Mike Renner struck out 10 in seven innings of work to pick up his seventh win of the year.

"We played much better," said Walker. "We just kind of woke up. We had around 12 hits and it was just a much better game for us. That is what we were looking for as a coaching staff."

CSI and CEU will play a regular-season-ending doubleheader today before heading to Henderson, Nev., for the Region 18 Tournament. The two teams will open against each other.

Miller went 2-for-3 with a pair of RBIs. Brittany Gonzales smacked a two-run homer off the scoreboard, and Mikkel Griffin connected twice with one RBI.

Genera Nielson earned victory No. 26 this season, allowing one run on four hits with two walks and nine strikeouts.

Then the wheels came off again, rather early. The Coyotes started Game 2 with five runs as the Eagles struggled to field the ball. Three of their five errors were committed during the inning.

"I don't know what to say," said shortstop Kelsey Bryant, who committed three of the errors. "I just have to play the ball."

The Eagles didn't stop the bleeding, but they did manage to slow it until another allowing the Coyotes another five-run inning in the top of the sixth, when Medrano hit a grand slam to make it 13-2. During the Eagles' half-innings, they best they could do was scatter a run here and there, mostly hitting right to the Coyote fielders.

"My defense worked hard," said Game 2 winner Bley. "Without them, I couldn't win."

CSI exemplified this in the fifth, when they went three up and three down, all groundouts. The line for that inning: 0 runs, 0 hits, 0 errors, 0 left on base, 3 pitches.

Head coach Nick Baumert said that aggression at the plate can look good as long as they're base hits, but in this case, the results of first-pitch hits were "ugly"

The silver lining comes in the fact that CSN had to sweep to overtake CSI for second place in the league and the No. 2 seed to next weekend's Region 18 Tournament. CSI's lone victory Friday prevented that from coming to pass. Though the rest of the games do not matter mathematically in this case, the Eagles are determined to walk away from the regular season with wins.

"We're not worried at all," Bryant said. "We'll take two (today). A loss on the first day makes us tougher."

Games 3 and 4 of the series are set for noon.

What injury? LeBron leads Cavs to big win

BOSTON — LeBron James scored 21 of his 38 points in the first quarter to help the Cleveland Cavaliers beat Boston 124-95 on Friday night, handing the Celtics their worst home playoff loss ever and taking a 2-1 lead in the best-of-seven Eastern Conference semifinals.

Showing no ill-effects of an elbow problem that was the talk of Cleveland during the long layoff, James finished with eight rebounds and seven assists. The 21 points in a quarter was a franchise postseason record.

Antawn Jamison had 20 points and 12 rebounds for Cleveland, while Shaquille O'Neal added 12 points and nine rebounds.

Rajon Rondo, who had 19 assists in Boston's Game 2 victory on Monday, had 18 points and eight assists.

The Celtics missed 10 of their first 13 shots, hitting just 27 percent in the first quarter to spot Cleveland a 21-point lead.

SUNS 110, SPURS 96

SAN ANTONIO — Goran Dragic scored 23 of his 26 points in the fourth quarter and the Suns took a stunning 3-0 lead over San Antonio in the Western Conference semifinals, putting the Spurs in a historically irreparable hole.

The Spurs have put Phoenix through a decade of postseason misery, ousting the Suns from the playoffs four consecutive times since 2003.

Another win finally ends all that.

They can thank Dragic, whose brilliant fourth quarter made it unnecessary for Steve Nash to get off the bench until the final 3 minutes.

No team has ever come back from a 3-0 deficit in a best-of-seven series. Game 4 is Sunday night in San Antonio.

Flyers stay alive with overtime win over Bruins

PHILADELPHIA — Simon Gagne made a timely return to the lineup, scoring in overtime to help the Philadelphia Flyers hold off elimination by beating the Boston Bruins 5-4 on Friday night in Game 4 of the Eastern Conference semi-finals.

Gagne, the longest-tenured Flyer, played for the first time since he broke his right toe in Game 4 of Philadelphia's opening-round series against New Jersey.

Game 5 is Monday at Boston. The Bruins can still advance to their first conference finals since 1992 with a win on their home ice.

Former Flyers star Mark Recchi scored twice for the Bruins — including the tying goal with 31.5 seconds left in regulation that made it 4-all.

Chris Pronger, Danny Briere, Claude Giroux and Ville Leino all scored for the Flyers.

Michael Ryder and Milan Lucic had Boston's other goals.

GREGG MIDDLEKAUFF'S QUOTE OF THE DAY

"When we accept tough jobs as a challenge and wade into them with joy and enthusiasm, miracles can happen."

Rookie Castro has debut to remember in Cubs win over Reds

CINCINNATI — Starlin Castro got awakened by a call to the majors on Friday and arrived in style, hitting a three-run homer in his first at-bat and driving in a record six runs during the Chicago Cubs' 14-7 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

The 20-year-old became the youngest shortstop in Cubs history when he stepped onto the field. Then, he became a sensation.

PHILLIES 7, BRAVES 0
PHILADELPHIA — Forty-seven-year-old Jamie

Moyer tossed a two-hitter to become the oldest player in major league history to throw a shutout, and the Phillies beat Atlanta.

METS 6, GIANTS 4
NEW YORK — Rookie Ike Davis and Rod Barajas both homered twice, with Barajas hitting his second of the night in the ninth inning to give the Mets their eighth straight home win.

Davis hit solo homers in the second and fourth innings for the first multihomer game of his major league career.

MARLINS 4, NATIONALS 2
WASHINGTON — Gaby Sanchez hit a tiebreaking single in the eighth inning and Florida snapped a three-game skid.

Pinch-hitter Bryan Petersen singled in his major league debut, starting the decisive rally against Brian Bruney (1-2).

CARDINALS 4, PIRATES 3
PITTSBURGH — Yadier Molina doubled in the go-ahead run in the ninth inning with his fourth hit, and St. Louis took advantage of several Pittsburgh defensive lapses to beat the Pirates.

PADRES 7, ASTROS 0
HOUSTON — Mat Latos struck out a career-high nine in eight shutout innings and Scott Hairston homered twice.

AMERICAN LEAGUE RANGERS 4, ROYALS 1
ARLINGTON, Texas — C.J. Wilson pitched his second complete game and Vladimir Guerrero homered again to keep reigning AL Cy Young winner Zack Greinke winless in 2010.

YANKEES 10, RED SOX 3
BOSTON — Nick Swisher hit a three-run homer before the New York Yankees added six runs while absorbing more bruises in a wild sixth inning.

Phil Hughes (4-0) allowed seven hits and two runs in seven innings. Josh Beckett (1-1) gave up nine runs in 5 1-3 innings and knocked Robinson Cano out of the game when he hit him on the left knee in the sixth. He also plunked Derek Jeter in the back in that inning and even hit his own catcher, Jason Varitek, with a pitch that forced him out of the game with a bruised left forearm.

BLUE JAYS 7, WHITE SOX 4, 12 INNINGS
CHICAGO — Alex Gonzalez hit the tiebreaking three-run homer in the 12th inning. John Buck went deep twice and Toronto won its sixth straight.

feel right," Shirley said.

Dad Dan Shirley wasn't as convinced.

"I just counted it off as being normal," he said. "Sometimes the stagger is different and it makes the car feel different when you drive it. Then we went out for a second practice and it let loose. We thought we were done for the night."

With a broken rear end on a car now relegated to the pits, repair parts were soon offered from competitors. Rather than take the easy way out and load up and go home, father and son braved cold temperatures and an unforgiving wind, crawled under the car and got to work. Having a limited amount of time to fix the problem, the pressure was on to get the car in running order but Daniel was able to make it back just in time to compete in both the heat and main event races.

"We knew we had missed some practice and qualifying so we were behind the eight ball at that point," Dan said. "But we came back and that's what counts. By the time it was all said and done, we salvaged some points and it all worked out."
