MORE SPRING SHOWERS

MEAGAN THOMPSON/Times-News

A crew from the Twin Falls streets department works to suck up the large pool of water that accumulated at the intersection of North College Road and Washington Street North Tuesday morning. Tuesday's wet weather led to instances of standing water that made travel treacherous throughout parts of the Magic Valley.

MAGIC VALLEY SOAKED

Water closes North College Road, snow falls in Mini-Cassia

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

Sustained rain showers across the southern Magic Valley on Tuesday plugged sewer drains, but also provided the region with much of its average monthly moisture for May.

By mid-afternoon, weather stations at the Twin Falls and Burley airports were reporting close to or more than an inch of rain during the day, with more precipitation falling in the Mini-Cassia area. The rain was accompanied by wind gusts of between 20 and 30 miles per hour.

The Jerome airport, which got nearly half an inch of rain by midday Tuesday, received record-setting rainfall the day before. On Monday, a daily record of .72 inches was set, breaking the old record of .62 inches set in 1998, according to the National Weather Service.

The storm stood out as slightly unusual, and dumped a large portion of the 1.3 to 1.4 inches NWS records show as the area's average May precipitation. It was more distinctive in regard to how long it lasted, however, than the amount of water it provided.

The city of Twin Falls around noon closed a section of North College Road from Washington Street North to near the entrance to the College of Southern Idaho's Health Sciences and Human Services building after part of the intersection of the two roads filled with water. City Streets Superintendent Dean Littler said an open ditch on the north side of North College that used to drain storm water was removed during recent construction.

Three hours later, Littler said his crew was trying to pump out the intersection, though he expected the street to stay closed for a few more hours, depending on whether the rain continued. Other older drains around town plugged up, but none as bad, he said.

"Those are the ones that cause us problems," he said of daylong showers like Tuesday's.

Just south of the problem pool, rain forced workers to halt construction projects on stretches of Washington and Falls Avenue. Robbie Hansen with Gordon Paving Co. said he stopped work for the day around 10 a.m. at both sites over fears that water soaking into dirt below the roads would cause soft, spongy areas when heavy equipment moved over them.

It could take as long as two days for the road sites to dry out and construction to resume, he said.

Aside from being wetter, southern parts of Cassia County even received some snow, visible during the mid-afternoon on highway-safety cameras on Conner Summit. But the city of Burley didn't have the same pooling problems, according to Streets Superintendent Brent Mallory.

"We've got a lot of siphon drains that just plug up," Mallory said. "But it hasn't been too bad."

Forecasters predict that this week's storms will now give way to warmer temperatures and clearer skies. NWS meteorologist Joel Tannenholz said day-time high temperatures should increase to more than 70 degrees by the weekend and as high as 83 on Monday. More storms could come on Tuesday, he said, but there's only a slight chance of rain.

Seewald sentenced in vehicular manslaughter case

Boise teen gets 30 days in juvenile detention, license suspended for 3 years

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Seventeen-year-old Shelby Seewald tearfully apologized in a Jerome County courtroom on Tuesday, before a judge sentenced her for her role in a traffic accident that took two lives and left one man seriously injured.

Judge Mark Ingram sentenced Seewald to three years of probation, the loss of her driver's license during probation, a drug and alcohol evaluation, and, as part of her program, told her to develop a "restorative plan" outlining what she will do to help repair the damage.

There's jail time, too. Seewald will serve at least 30 days in juvenile detention.

Seewald previously had pleaded guilty to two counts of misdemeanor vehicular manslaughter for causing a chain of collisions along Interstate 84 on Dec. 11. According to court records, Seewald of Boise had veered into the interstate's left westbound lane and collided with a vehicle driven by Scott Brown, causing Brown's vehicle to cross the median and collide head-on with a vehicle driven by Dixilyn Noh.

Noh and her sister, Kristin Noh, both of Boise, died in the accident while on the way to Twin Falls for their father's funeral. Brown of Wendell, who was not charged or cited in the accident, was hospitalized, and cannot work during his rehabilitation, court records show.

Jones backs out of debate with Bradbury

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

It would have been a debate that pitted two of Idaho's legal minds against the other.

One, Justice Jim Jones, is on the Idaho Supreme Court. The other, John Bradbury is a district judge in northern Idaho.

If ducking a debate matters in the judicial realm, Jones is the one who flinched first.

Jones on Tuesday backed down from his previous acceptance of a challenge to debate Bradbury, adding another twist to what has been an unusual election season for Idaho's judiciary.

Jones, who sits on the Idaho Supreme Court with Justice Roger Burdick — who Bradbury is challenging — has publicly disputed

DIY DNA testing: Company plans to sell genetic testing kit at Walgreens

WASHINGTON — Beginning Friday, shoppers in search of toothpaste, deodorant and laxatives at more than 6,000 drugstores across the nation will be able to pick up something new: a test to scan their genes for a propensity for Alzheimer's disease, breast cancer, diabetes and other ailments.

The test also claims to offer a window into the chances of becoming obese, developing psoriasis and going blind. For those thinking of starting a family, it could alert them to their risk of having a baby with cystic fibrosis, Tay-Sachs and

Kickin' with the cowboys in The 208

Two hundred-series telephone area codes are all the rage these days.

Area code 213 (downtown Los Angeles) has spawned a hip-hop group of the same name, various websites and a whole lot of 'tude.

Area code 212 covers Manhattan, with all that entails. And all the places you wish you were right now have 200-series codes: the Bahamas (242), Barbados (246), Anguilla (264) and the British Virgin Islands (284).

Area code 209 (part of California's San Joaquin Valley, centered on the city of Stockton) has sudden cache because baseball's latest phenom, Oakland Athletics pitcher Dallas Braden, makes much of his down-and-dirty 209 origins.

After a run-in with New York Yankees superstar Alex Rodriguez, Braden said menacingly: "We don't do much talking in The 209."

So how about 208 — Idaho's only area code? I'm thinking we're facing a street-cred gap.

Sure, we don't have much that's hip hereabouts, unless it's redneck-hip. So I've made a few notes:

● Jacked-up trucks — say, an '89 Ford Lariat Quad Cab 4x4.

● Chrome pickup truck light bars.

● Threatening bumper stickers: "If you can read this, you're in range;" "The 2nd Amendment isn't for hunting;" "Warning! I'm a bitter gun owner clinging to my religion;" and best of all, "Keep honking; I'm reload-ing."

● Carhartt zip-to-thigh, quilt-lined bib overalls.

DON'T ASK ME

Steve Crump

● Sweat-stained baseball caps with seed company logos on them.

● Fry sauce.

● Lou Dobbs (he's from Rupert, you know).

● Tea partiers who never drink tea.

● The auction at the Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation's annual banquet.

● A tailgate that doesn't match the rest of the truck.

● One black lab in the truck bed and a second who's actually driving the truck.

● Tater Tot casseroles.

● Biscuits and gravy, with extra grease.

● Naugahyde and vinyl, and plenty of it.

● Longnecks (strictly speaking, you need to show an out-of-state driver's license to buy a microbrew here).

● Pretty much everything Toby Keith ever sang.

● Low-rise jeans, Idaho style: Two sizes-too-small Wranglers and a T-shirt that extends only as far down as a belly button, leaving 3 inches of exposed skin and nothing whatever to the imagination.

● Endless babyback ribs at the Golden Corral.

● Dangling conversation while leaning against pickup trucks. (We don't do much talking in The 208).

The Idaho Department of Health and Welfare office in Bellevue never provided some services available at other offices across the state, spokesman Tom Shanahan said, including applications for food stamps or Medicaid.

"It was mostly for offering mental health services," he said.

After Tuesday's closure, those services will be shifted elsewhere.

Two of the office's four employees were laid off, Shanahan said, while another resigned, declining transfer. The remaining employee will be transferred within Health and Welfare.

The department is working out a schedule to provide services for those in acute need out of the South

"It was the straw, in a sense, that broke the camel's back."

— Erin Pfaeffle, manager of St. Luke's Center for Community Health in Hailey

Central District Health office in Bellevue, although dates of availability haven't been determined.

"We'll have a person up there one day a week, and someone who can monitor meds every other week," Shanahan said.

Following Health and Welfare's April announcement of the office's closure, a group of Wood River Valley mental health professionals and other interested agencies met to address the gap the closure would create.

"It was the straw, in a sense, that broke the camel's back," said Erin Pfaeffle, manager of St. Luke's Center for Community Health in Hailey. "The issue of providing appropriate and effective community mental health services here in the valley, and access to them, is an issue we've had regardless of Health and Welfare closing or not."

At that meeting, it was decided to create a task force of area health and public representatives to address community health care needs. The task force will hold its first meeting on May 19, but it doesn't yet have a timeline or defined tasks.

However, Pfaeffle said the biggest issues are accessibility to care for people with limited resources, services for Spanish-speaking patients, and continuity of care for those with long-term illness or who have just exited an inpatient program or prison.

"If you have people who are vulnerable or stressed or economically challenged, you will see people who need services from Health and Welfare not accessing them," she said. "I feel confident that we will create solutions that really fit this community."

Shanahan said he was excited to see what the task force would come up with, and called its creation "proactive."

Anyone interested in receiving attention from visiting specialists in the Wood River Valley should call the Health and Welfare Twin Falls office at 736-2177.

Shanahan said the Rupert office primarily provided services for mental health clients and young children with developmental disabilities, though developmental services were generally provided in clients' homes.

He said two of the Rupert office's 10 employees will be laid off on May 18, after they help with the transfer to the Burley office at 2241 Overland Ave. The remaining eight employees will be transferred to Burley, Shanahan said.

"It will put a hardship on the people in the community who were using those services," said Bill Aldrich, director of the Community Support Center Inc. in Twin Falls, which provides support and programs for people with mental illnesses.

Aldrich also operated a center in Burley, which closed Jan. 31, 2009, due to funding cuts.

"Whenever mental health services close down in a community, I see increases in hospitalization, more people going to jail and more homelessness," Aldrich said. "It's not a good thing for anyone, including the community."

Aldrich said the state runs a pretty tight ship and can provide mental health services that no one else can or even wants to provide.

"I don't see a problem with there being enough service providers in the area, but rather with people having access to them," Aldrich said.

Shanahan said clients utilizing the Rupert office's services were generally uninsured. Many will now have to pay out of their pockets for transportation to the Burley office.

"It's really tough without public transportation in the area," said Jennifer Woodland, Burley branch manager and co-owner of S&R Services, a Mini-Cassia transportation company.

Woodland said S&R has already received calls to set up rides for Rupert residents seeking services at the Burley Health and Welfare office.

"I know there are some people out there we are not reaching and that's too bad," Woodland said. "But we are trying to get the word out."

Woodland said S&R accepts payment through Medicaid, as well as cash. Generally a round-trip ride from Rupert to Burley cost $16.

down from his campaign statements and took it a step further, saying in an interview he is willing to debate the facts with Jones "anytime, anywhere."

After reading a Times-News story in which Bradbury stated his willingness to debate, Jones sent Bradbury a letter on April 28 accepting the challenge.

Then Jones changed his mind.

"In light of recent events, I see no point in pursuing the debate to which you challenged me," Jones wrote in a letter on Monday to Bradbury. "I had accepted your debate challenge out of concern that people might start to believe your unfounded allegations against the judiciary, if they were repeated often enough and not challenged with the true facts. However, based upon subsequent statements by others, including responses by legislators and other judges, I see no need to take further steps to protect the Court."

Bradbury said Jones' withdrawal from the debate is "another instance of the court trying to avoid transparency and accountability."

"Jones gives his word that he'll debate, then breaks his word that he'll debate, then asks the public to accept as true the facts that he won't debate," Bradbury said in an interview with the Times-

News. "To me, that is simply a transparent effort to run away from the facts."

Jones also said in his letter that the debate would be a distraction from the Supreme Court election on May 25.

Bradbury disagreed, saying the debate's issues were central to the campaign.

"This is a justice of the supreme court that is supposed to give both sides a fair hearing," Bradbury said. " ... He publicly accepted and I told him you pick the date, you pick the place, you pick the time, and I'll be there. Instead he reneges."

In an interview, Jones said statements made by legislators and former justices that dispute Bradbury have adequately gotten the facts out.

"It seems to me that if there are debates, what's there to debate?" Jones said.

In Jones' first letter, he originally offered the dates of May 4, May 13 and May 18 as possible debate dates.

Jones said Bradbury can still get his message out without a debate.

"He can do advertising," Jones said. "He can go out and say everything that he thinks is true. He doesn't have to debate me to make his point."

Bradbury and Burdick have already debated on Idaho Public Television.

Ben Botkin may be reached at bbotkin@magicvalley.com or 735-3238.

Seewald

"I just want to apologize," Seewald said between sobs in a courtroom filled with family members of the victims. "I didn't mean for any of this to happen. I've seen lives be taken away, and I can't imagine what you're going through. All I can do is apologize."

While Seewald is sure to serve 30 days in juvenile detention, she was sentenced to 180 days total. Of the remaining 150 days, 130 were suspended, while 20 are discretionary days the probation department could later order Seewald to serve all or part of.

Before regaining her license, Seewald will have to complete an advanced course in driver safety.

Restitution for Brown and the Nohs' families wasn't decided on Tuesday and will come at a later hearing.

Family members of the victims pointed to Seewald's past driving record, which includes a speeding ticket she received shortly after the accident, as an indication that she was reckless and thoughtless about the consequences of her actions.

"Because of her actions, two dead women were buried in the Twin Falls cemetery who will never laugh or cry again," said Carl Liff, the uncle of the Noh sisters.

Seewald's defense attorney, David Leroy, said she is acutely aware of the pain she has caused.

"It's not all about her," he said.

The accident has also led to a civil personal injury complaint filed in Ada County by Brown against Seewald and her parents, Kimberly and Russell Seewald, and Seewald and Company Inc. of Boise, for medical expenses, lost wages and general damages.

CSI celebrates new wind energy program

By Pat Marcantonio
Times-News writer

With effort, Craig Otzenberger of Jerome turned the metal hub of a wind turbine unit on display at the College of Southern Idaho wind program open house.

His son, Will, 20, a student in the program, smiled and explained how one turn of the hub — where the blades connect — ends up as 29 rotations of the rotor shaft leading to the generators. And that creates power.

The purpose of the open house, at 496 Madrona St., was to celebrate the new program and its first crop of future wind energy technicians, said Mark Goodman, program director.

“After having gone through one year of training, these guys are ready to either continue their training in the two-year associate program or actually go to work in a wind farm,” he said.

The event also showed off a donated turbine unit that was completely rebuilt by the students. With 20 students, the wind program is at capacity and is expected to remain that way for two years, Goodman said. Students work with electrical components, on gearboxes, and learn to climb a 300-foot turbine’s tower.

First-year students Bob Lyda, 30, and Justin Miller, 35, both came from construction jobs to learn about an industry they hope will provide careers.

“I see a great future in renewable energy resources, and the class we’re taking has a broad range of job bases that you could take and apply to a number of jobs,” Lyda said.

“It’s like a new wild frontier; it’s exciting, as long as I get a job,” Miller added with a laugh.

About 700 megawatts of wind power productivity could come to south-central Idaho in the next five years, Goodman predicted. The CSI program will help meet that industry’s needs for workers.

“I often wonder if the wind farms would be coming if CSI weren’t developing a good crop of technicians,” he said.

Will Otzenberger is impressed with the industry’s new technology.

“I like working on cars and stuff, and it’s like work-

“Of course, a lot people argue that the wind doesn’t always blow,” Goodman said. “But in Idaho, it seems to blow quite a bit.”

Three seek to replace Davidson in Jerome Co.

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — With incumbent Jerome County Commissioner Joe Davidson declining to seek a third term, 2010 seemed opportune for Republicans Roger Morley, Doug Suter and Gerlyn “Sam” Walker to run for his District 3 seat.

Their first hurdle is winning their party’s nomination in the May 25 primary election.

Morley, a 58-year-old former state Senate lobbyist and Qwest Communications retiree, wants the county to boost its proactive approach to business recruitment. Without a diversified economic base, he said, the county’s brain drain will continue.

“Jerome County has enormous potential economically,” Morley said. “... I think we have the infrastructure and ability to draw high-tech companies into the area. We need to attract higher-paying jobs with benefits. We lack economic and job possibilities needed to keep our kids here after graduating and going to college.”

Like his two opponents, Morley approves of the county’s push to build a regional corrections facility.

“It comes down to two questions, the first being, do we need it? The second (question) is how do we pay for that?” he said. “In my opinion, a bond for paying for it is just another tax. The lease-to-purchase option, I believe, is a good option for the county.”

Gerlyn “Sam” Walker, 52, is in favor of the jail lease as well. Walker is currently chief deputy for the Twin Falls County Sheriff’s Office and has built her career in law enforcement, notably in drug enforcement and victim assistance, since moving to the Magic Valley in 1990.

“I’m really interested in the jail and with (Davidson) deciding not to run I thought it’s the right time to run,” Walker said.

In addition to meeting demand as county incarceration rates increase, a new corrections facility would enhance the safety of those working in Jerome’s jail, Walker said.

She said the county needs to explore the expansion of special courts for drugs, domestic violence and family issues.

Walker admits that she needs to get familiar with the county’s confined-animal feeding operations ordinances.

“We need to stay active in strategically planning for the future, and it’s our responsibility to sit down with the community to see where they want Jerome to go,” Walker said.

Suter, 52 and a construction contractor, said the county needs to work with its agricultural base to protect rural areas from urban sprawl.

“I believe we need to keep agriculture and residential (areas) separate,” said Suter. “There are many open subdivisions, lots available, and when the economy allows it that land should be built on.”

Suter said areas that have been historically zoned for agriculture shouldn’t be converted for residential development, and that with proper planning the need for each can be balanced.

“When agriculture lands are converted, those lands now have special protections — like not a l l o w i n g spraying — and for our farmers that isn’t fair,” Suter said.

“The restrictions really hinder a farmer.”

Other Republicans running unopposed for county seats include Commissioner Charlie Howell, seeking reelection in District 2. Commissioners earn yearly salary of $27,600 and county benefits.

Clerk Michelle Emerson, paid $50,760 yearly, Assessor Rick Haberman, at $47,928 yearly, and Treasurer Mary Childers, who makes $49,160 yearly, are all running unopposed in the Republican primaries. Republican incumbent Coroner Gerald Brant, who makes $7,164 yearly, is running unopposed for a second term.

Lincoln Co. clerk, assessor face primary opponents

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News correspondent

Lincoln County's clerk and assessor will both face opponents in May 25 Republican primary races for their offices.

Assessor Linda Jones, 55, will run against newcomer to the political arena, Brian Cheney, 32. Clerk Liz Kime, 46, faces challenger Suzanne McConnell, 41.

Before taking her current office in 2007, Jones was the county's chief deputy assessor for seven years. She said she is constantly looking to modernize the office and continues her campaign promises to make county assessments reasonable and unbiased.

"I planned on making this a career," she said. "It took two years to get to a place where the data is fair and equitable, but now everyone is up to market."

Jones said her experience as chief deputy assessor made her appreciate holding an elected position.

"I am a very hands-on person. I know the programs we have to work with and I work very hard for the community," she said. "I sit on a lot of committees and I am very vocal about what the people in the county want."

Cheney said he's willing to learn this job thoroughly and educate county residents about the job of the assessor.

"I think there is a lack of education in the assessor's office and I think I can make a difference," he said.

Cheney, a G o o d i n g native, currently works for Home Depot in Twin Falls doing delivery work and is a father of three.

"I've always been very community oriented and I think our children need a good county to grow up in."

He has helped with the recreation district and has volunteered with Lincoln County Search and Rescue for the last four years.

The four-year assessor term includes a $41,990 yearly salary and county employee benefits.

Kime served as the county's chief deputy clerk in 1998 and has been its acting clerk since 2002.

"I've been in it for 13 years," Kime said. "Consistency is important right now?"

McConnell said she is running to make the clerk's office more service-oriented.

"My main concern is record keeping and ordinances," she said. "We need to get to an organizational level where the residents of Lincoln County can feel comfortable that their records are in place"

Kime, a licensed practical nurse, said her job as county clerk has been to watch over the budget and keep the county running.

"The times are rough for taxpayers," Kime said. "Now is not the time to be training someone new"

McConnell hopes, if elected, that she can help reduce some county expenditures she says have come due to a lack of organization. She has served as the county's planning and zoning administrator for two years and said her office's needs have not always been met by Kime.

"I feel there is a need," McConnell said. "It is an important position that needs some attention. I am very qualified for the job because of my experience with planning and zoning, and I feel like I can make it better."

The clerk will serve a four-year term, starting in January, earning $42,233 yearly plus county employee benefits.

Incumbent Coroner Keith Davis and Treasurer Cathy Gilbert are both running unopposed in the Republican primary.

Kimberly passes supplemental levy

Dietrich School District supplemental levy also passes

Times-News

School districts in Kimberly and Dietrich passed one-year supplemental levies on Tuesday night, following state cuts to public education.

Voters in the Kimberly School District showed good turnout, according to Cathy Cooper, the school district's clerk. She said the one-year supplemental levy passed by 69 percent, with 421 votes in favor and 188 votes against the measure, which is slated to raise taxes.

According to information from the district, the one-year, $300,000 levy is an increase from the district's supplemental levy last year of $275,000. A home valued at $150,000 after the homeowner's exemption will now be assessed at $68.40 per year, an increase of $5.25 from the last supplemental levy rate.

Kimberly's first supplemental levy passed in 2005 and the district has passed one every year since, according to district superintendent

Kathleen Noh.

The most recent levy is also "to help with the reduced appropriation for education from the state," Noh said.

The Dietrich School District also passed a one-year $106,000 supplemental levy on Tuesday evening. It passed with 97 votes in favor, and 55 against, according to the school district, and is expected to cost about $272 per $100,000 of assessed property value.

Pandora's box of confusion, privacy violations, genetic discrimination and other issues.

The new test comes as federal regulators, bioethicists, geneticists, doctors and patients have been increasingly struggling with how to use, interpret, regulate and guard against abuse from the flood of genetic information, tests and technologies being developed because of the massive, government-sponsored Human Genome Project.

For years, companies have been hawking tests on the Internet that can analyze genes for a person's risk of some diseases, and genetic tests for paternity and ancestry have been widely available in stores.

But the plan being announced Tuesday by Pathway Genomics of San Diego to sell its Insight test at about 6,000 of Walgreens' 7,500 stores represents the boldest move yet to bring the power of modern molecular medicine to the mass market.

"It's the first widespread retail availability of genetic tests that are directed specifically at health issues," said Joan Scott, director of the Genetics and Public Policy Center at Johns Hopkins University.

The Food and Drug Administration questioned Monday whether the test will be sold legally because it does not have the agency's approval. Critics have said that results will be too vague to provide much useful guidance because so little is known about how to interpret genetic markers.

"It doesn't seem like a good use of resources or something people should be spending their money on yet," said Sharon Terry, who heads the Genetic Alliance, a Washington-based coalition of patient groups, researchers, private companies, government agencies and public policy organizations.

Others have said that the test is irresponsible and could give many buyers a dangerous false sense of security or, conversely, needlessly alarm them.

"It is reckless," said Hank Greely, director of Stanford

University's Center for Law and the Biosciences. "Information is powerful, but misunderstood information can be powerfully bad."

The breast cancer test, for example, will screen for only a few of the genetic mutations associated with the malignancy, so it won't exclude the possibility of getting the disease because of other mutations or nongenetic reasons. Misunderstanding this, women whose results sound reassuring might forgo mammograms. On the other hand, a result suggesting an increased risk could prompt some to seek unnecessary follow-up tests and treatments.

Mojave cross at center of dispute stolen

By Robert Jablon
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — A cross erected on a remote Mojave Desert outcropping to honor American war dead has been stolen less than two weeks after the U.S. Supreme Court allowed it to remain standing while a legal battle continued over its presence on federal land.

Versions of the memorial have been vandalized repeatedly in the last 75 years and the motive this time was not immediately known, but the theft was condemned Tuesday by veterans groups that support the cross and by civil libertarians that saw it as a violation of the constitutional separation of church and state.

“The American Legion expects whoever is responsible for this vile act to be brought to justice,” said Clarence Hill, the group’s national commander.

Attorney Peter Eliasberg of the American Civil Liberties Union of Southern California, which sued on behalf of an opponent of the cross, said the organization rejects any resort to theft or vandalism.

“We believe in the rule of law and we think the proper way to resolve to any controversy about the cross is through the courts,” he said.

The 7-foot-high metal cross vanished from its perch in the Mojave National Preserve late Sunday or early Monday, said National Park Service spokeswoman Linda Slater. Bolts holding it to the rock were cut.

Slater said possible scenarios ranged from people “with an interest in the case” to metal scavengers. The U.S. Justice Department was looking into the case.

The cross has been the center of a legal dispute for about a decade since a complaint by a former park service employee represented by the ACLU.

On a 5-4 vote in April, the U.S. Supreme Court refused to order its removal. The high court told a federal judge to take a new look at a congressional plan to transfer land under the cross to private ownership.

The theft was discovered when workers went to replace a plywood cover that was placed over the cross years ago pending resolution of the case and had been torn off during the weekend.

The isolated site in the 1.6 million-acre preserve is a small rise amid Joshua trees along a road far off busy Interstate 15, about 200 miles northeast of Los Angeles and 70 miles south of Las Vegas.

Idaho group says school trustees met illegally

POCATELLO (AP) — A government-accountability group says a Pocatello school board held an illegal secret meeting over salary cuts.

The Idaho Freedom Foundation, a free-market advocate, vowed to lodge a complaint in state court against Pocatello’s District 25 school board, whose trustees held a three-hour executive session Saturday morning, followed by a vote to cut administrative salaries by 6.9 percent.

Wayne Hoffman, executive director of the Idaho Freedom Foundation, said such a topic isn’t covered under Idaho’s exemptions to its open meetings law.

Hoffman told The Associated Press on Tuesday he’s worried that school districts across Idaho could opt for similar closed-door meetings as they address budget cuts in 2011. He wants to stop this practice before it spreads.

“What makes the Pocatello school system think that making a decision to either add to or take from a public employee’s salary is confidential somehow?” Hoffman told the Idaho State Journal. “The school board has an obligation to hold a substantive debate about the budget issues confronting the school district in a public setting.”

School district officials referred questions to their lawyer, Brian Julian.

Julian said the board acted appropriately, because the closed meeting covered personnel matters.

Julian said he’s dealt with hundreds of such cases over the last decade, “and this is the way it’s done every time.”

The agenda announcing Saturday’s special meeting lists the open meeting law exemption used to base the executive session as: “to consider the evaluation, dismissal or disciplining of, or to hear complaints or charges brought against a public officer, employee, staff member or agent.”

According to the Idaho open meetings manual, the state attorney general believes general personnel matters can’t be the subject of closed-door secret meetings.

Rather, only specific personnel actions — such as hiring or firing a public officer or staff member, or to hear complaints or charges brought against public employees, agents or students — are appropriate to be heard in executive sessions.

Julian, who has handled such cases for 30 years, said he believes hosting the discussion in closed session protects due process rights of employees. He also said a retired judge was listening over the phone and believes the school board had a right to deliberate in private.

“I feel comfortable that the process was appropriate,” Julian said.

Body found in Utah likely that of missing 4-year-old

By Paul Foy
Associated Press writer

LAYTON, Utah — The body a missing 4-year-old child has been found in a Utah canyon and his mother and stepfather are in custody, police said Tuesday.

Layton police said Ethan Stacy’s stepfather, Nathan Sloop, 31, was being charged with aggravated homicide. Both he and the boy’s mother, Stephanie Sloop, 27, also will be charged with felony child abuse, obstruction of justice and desecration of a corpse, police said.

The search for Ethan started Tuesday after police said the boy’s mother reported that he had left his bed and wandered from their apartment complex. Officials said she told them that the boy had walked away five of the last 10 nights.

“That appears to have been a ruse by the mother, something to cover the tracks,” said Layton police Lt. Garret Atkin.

Later Tuesday police said they had a credible lead and no longer needed volunteer searchers. The search at that point shifted to Wolf Canyon, about 40 miles northeast of Salt Lake City.

It’s unclear when Ethan was killed or how, police said Tuesday. Atkin said either the mother, stepfather or both revealed the location of Ethan’s body and that searchers dug up his remains. Five officers were seen carrying a blue bag out of the woods late Tuesday afternoon.

Atkin refused to describe the condition of the boy’s body.

Ethan arrived in Utah 10 days ago to spend the summer with his mother, police said. His biological father is in Virginia. His name was not released.

Investigators spent the early morning hours combing through cupboards, closets, Dumpsters and the area near the apartment complex looking for the boy. Sex offenders in the area were also interviewed and had their homes searched, Atkin said.

“The school board has an obligation to hold a substantive debate about the budget issues confronting the school district in a public setting.”

EDITORIAL

An indispensable legislator? That's probably Cameron

After 20 years in the Idaho Senate, Dean Cameron finds himself in some select company. The chairman of the Finance Committee, Cameron is the most influential senator from the Magic Valley since Laird Noh, Dick High and Jack Murphy — the Shoshone lawyer who served as Senate president during the 1960s and lieutenant governor from 1967-75.

The reasons for his clout are easy to see: He works harder than anybody else, knows the state budget-making process inside-out, and has a well-earned reputation for approachability and fairness.

And although he's a fiscal conservative, it bothers Cameron when the state can't keep its commitments to public schools, higher education, Health and Welfare and public safety. In his decade co-chairing the Joint Finance-Appropriations Committee he's found a way to appropriately fund many important state programs.

Cameron is a legislative pragmatist in the best sense of the word.

So the voters of Jerome and Minidoka counties would be unwise not to send him back to Boise for an 11th term when they go to the polls for the May 25 GOP primary (no Democrat has filed for the job, so the primary is effectively the general election for this seat).

Cameron's opponent, retired Rupert farmer Harold Mohlman, has long been involved in public affairs in Minidoka County and beyond, serving as a Minidoka Fire Protection District commissioner and chairman of the A&B Irrigation District. He's also a past president of the Idaho Water Users Association, where he sits on the board of directors.

But a Sen. Mohlman wouldn't be able to do for District 26 — and the rest of Idaho — what Sen. Cameron does.

Frankly, the state will need all the expertise it can get on JFAC to navigate the transition from the Great Recession.

There are still big challenges ahead, since most of Idaho's budget reserves will be exhausted by the time the 2012 fiscal year rolls around — and the economy remains wobbly.

“I feel like we have unfinished business to make sure that the budget remains balanced and that we see the state back onto a stable economic footing,” Cameron said.

South-central Idaho will be fortunate if Cameron is one of the key lawmakers in charge of that process.

ABOUT THIS RACE

Ten-term incumbent Republican state Sen. Dean Cameron, 49, a Rupert insurance and investment business owner, is being challenged in the May 25 GOP primary by retired Rupert farmer Harold Mohlman, 57, in legislative District 26, which includes Minidoka and Jerome counties.

What happens when bomb goes off?

On Christmas Day, a 23-year-old Nigerian engineering student allegedly tried to destroy an airplane flying into Detroit. Ten days ago, an American citizen of Pakistani origin allegedly attempted to detonate a car bomb in New York's Times Square. Neither effort succeeded — not because U.S. authorities intercepted the attackers, but because the bombmaking skills of the wannabe terrorists were lacking.

Richard A. Clarke

In both instances, much of the subsequent debate has centered on how the attacks were able to get as far as they did. The unfortunate fact is that such cases represent a kind of terrorism that is virtually impossible to disrupt. These attempts will continue, and from time to time one of them will succeed, with many dead and injured. The more relevant question, therefore, is: How will we respond when that car bomb does go off?

The reason such attacks are hard to stop is rooted in the identity of the attackers. They often seem to be successful or well-educated members of society, uninvolved in any form of radicalism. But then, the drip-drip of terrorist propaganda — either on the Internet or circulated through friends — has its effect. They quietly make contact with radical groups overseas, perhaps even traveling abroad for training and indoctrination. They throw away the life they have made in the West and agree to stage an attack. Faisal Shahzad, the alleged Times Square terrorist, fits that profile, as have others in the United States and Europe.

For U.S. intelligence and law enforcement authorities, these new terrorists are the hardest to stop. They may not be part of any known cell; there is no reason for their phones or e-mail accounts to come under surveillance. When they buy rifles, handguns, tanks of propane gas or fertilizer, they are doing nothing out of the ordinary in American society.

In the raw aftermath of a successful attack, it will be very hard for an American president to shift the debate in a more productive and honest direction. Imagine if, after a fatal attack, President Obama responded by proposing greater outreach to Muslim communities domestically and around the world, in an effort to undercut radicalization. That is precisely what we and other nations should be doing, but it would undoubtedly be decried as a weak, starry-eyed reaction by our commander in chief, especially after an attack that revealed deficiencies in our counterterrorism system.

But right now, after a near-miss, there is a better opportunity to adjust than in an emotionally charged period when the nation is mourning. Though a good dose of political courage would still be required, it would constitute a major improvement to our debate if leaders could come together now and agree on a few key points about our efforts to battle terrorism:

First, no matter how good a job our government does in protecting the homeland, we must anticipate that someday another terrorist may succeed. If that happens, we will refine our tactics and procedures, but we will not overreact.

Second, we appreciate the hard work and dedication of the civil servants and appointed officials who spend their lives protecting us at home. We will reject politicians and commentators who automatically make counterterrorism officials the whipping boy after an attack.

Third, it is an objective and undeniable fact that U.S. counterterrorism efforts have reduced the overall threat from what it was a few years ago. So we must not assume that a successful attack indicates that our antiterrorism efforts have, on balance, failed. We will hold on to what is working and be agile in response to evolving threats.

Fourth, eliminating the current terrorist threat will take a generation of diligent effort; we must rebut those who demand overnight success. In addition to capturing and killing people who are already terrorists, we have to do the time-consuming and less glamorous work of defeating radical Islamist ideology in the battle of ideas.

Fifth, as willing as we may be to pay a high price to rid ourselves of terrorism, throwing more money at the problem or abandoning our civil liberties and way of life will not reduce the threat, nor will it accelerate the day when it disappears.

Sixth, in an attempt to show that we are doing something new after an attack, we should not adopt procedures that inconvenience the public more than they do the terrorists and amount to little more than security theater.

Seventh and finally, let us warn now that those who seek political gain from the murder of Americans will be regarded as despicable — whether they are the terrorists who carry out the attacks or the politicians who seek partisan benefits from them.

Richard Clarke served as national coordinator for security and counterterrorism in the Clinton White House. He wrote this for The Washington Post.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Our future depends on good education system

We in Idaho really need to rethink education and give it a much higher priority. No student in Idaho who isn't developmentally delayed should fail to graduate from high school and go on to, at minimum, trade school. Two- and four-year degrees should be the goal for most graduates.

Sadly, this has not been the message we are sending to our kids. This last Legislature decided not to raise revenue by closing sales tax loopholes, employing more tax collectors or even temporarily raising taxes for people who make more than $70k in income. They cut everywhere but, most importantly, they cut the education budget. They said to our kids that their education is not important enough for Idaho to find ways to pay for it.

Education is of strategic importance to the United States and to Idaho. The world is full of literate and illiterate people who feel fortunate to be paid less money to do jobs which used to be done in the United States. The only way we can be sure of a future where we maintain the living standards we have today is to have a workforce that is highly educated.

Family members must send the message that graduation and further education are not optional. We can have spirited discussions about how to accomplish our educational goals, but we must never fail to set those goals high enough to ensure our economic survival.

The Legislature cut the education budget over the objections of the (Republican) superintendent of schools. They did it because they felt that Idahoans wouldn't blame them. I'm urging you to blame them for hampering our ability to attract good-paying jobs, for failing to tell our kids and adults the hard facts that the lack of education will be harder on their generations than it was for past generations. Idaho was already behind in education. We have to find the money to do better because our economic future depends on it.

LINDA BRUGGER

Raw recruits make more than beginning teachers

Just a little perspective on the Idaho Legislature's and Gov. Otter's willingness to renegotiate (reduce) teacher pay. Military pay only includes base pay and basic allowance for housing for married personnel in fiscal year 2010. To include all military pay incentives — tax exemptions, combat pay, separation allowance, pro-pay, etc. — would only further skew the disparity.

Since the educational requirements are essentially the same, let's compare teachers to officers. The starting pay for a teacher in Idaho is $31,750. With the 7.5 percent pay cut, this will drop to $29,655. With the anticipated future 5.5 percent pay cut, this will further drop to $27,754. The starting pay for a 2nd lieutenant (O-1) is $43,037 and only base pay ($32,947) is taxable.

The only realistic comparison between an Idaho teacher's pay and military pay is to use junior enlisted pay grades. A private (E-1) earns $24,800 annually, a private (E-2) earns $25,042, and a private first class (E-3) earns $28,270. Only base pay is taxable. This means that a new recruit's take-home pay will be greater than a beginning Idaho teacher's will. When the economy is doing well, these salaries do not attract the best and brightest young people to the military so how are they supposed to attract the best and brightest teachers to Idaho?

Decreasing expenses is one way to balance a budget. Increasing revenues is another. Let's discuss both.

It has long seemed to me that those most critical of education in general and teachers in particular are the ones who know the least about either. Gov. Otter and current Republican state legislators fit this mold to a tee. Time for a change. Time to elect both a governor and a party grounded in reality rather than in ideology.

Vote Democrat Keith Allred for governor.

SEC: Regulators yet to determine cause of plunge

By Daniel Wagner and Marcy Gordon

WASHINGTON — The head of the Securities and Exchange Commission told a congressional panel Tuesday that regulators need more time to figure out what caused last week's stock market plunge.

SEC Chairman Mary Schapiro said her agency has yet to pinpoint the exact reason for the sell-off that sent the Dow Jones industrial average falling nearly 1,000 points in less than half an hour. "We will move as quickly as we can but I can't give you a final date," Schapiro said at a hearing examining the historic market drop. Some causes have been ruled out, she said. The agency's review found no evidence of terrorist activity or computer hacking. There also was no evidence "that this was done in any kind of a

Albion Bed & Breakfast opens for business

Homemade breads a staple at this retreat

By Judy Albertson
Times News Reporter

The former Albion State Normal School has received another tenant — its second in almost two years.

Chad and Susan Manderscheid opened the Albion Bed & Breakfast, School House Bakery earlier this year on the old campus in what used to be the training school.

The Manderscheids opened the business hoping to make it the perfect place for a romantic getaway or a cozy overnight stay for families on their way to the mountains.

Chad Manderscheid said about 42 people have visited the bed-and-breakfast so far. Currently there are 30 beds available, but the owners plan to expand the business to accommodate up to 60 guests.

For $69, two people can get a private room with a free continental breakfast. There are also three large suites available for only $129. Each of the three suites have rooms with a sprinkling of vintage furnishings, a lounge area around a cozy electric fireplace, a private modern bathroom, and a personal kitchen for preparing meals.

and game rooms are available to group rentals, making it perfect for family reunions, church meetings or other gatherings, Manderscheid said.

Manderscheid, who is originally from Mesa, Ariz., first toured the campus in 2007. He has sisters who live in Oakley and he was originally looking for something there, before deciding on the place in Albion. His wife is Dutch and is currently in Holland with their two children.

"Hopefully they will be moved here by the end of the summer," Manderscheid said.

At the Albion School House Bakery, Manderscheid bakes fresh bread and dinner rolls. He uses all-natural ingredients with no preservatives, or artificial flavors. The ingredient list is short and simple — the very same things his mother and grandmother used to make their breads: 100 percent whole wheat flour, water, oil, molasses or honey, salt and yeast.

"We will have a moderate line. We will also be serving non-gluten bread. Our main thing is artisan and organic for people who want to enhance their health," Manderscheid said. "We did it in Seattle and were making 700 rolls a day."

He currently delivers bread to Gossner's and Upper Crust and hopes to deliver to other smaller places in the area. When possible, he tries to use local produce and supplies. Manderscheid hopes to have ovens in his basement by winter and will use them to help heat the building.

"This is a do-as-you-go business. We'll keep adding as we go along," he said.

Reinsurance program to provide financial relief for employers

Times-News

Small business employers may be eligible for reimbursement for medical claims by retirees age 55 and older who do not qualify for Medicare, according to the Department of Health and Human Services.

"Currently, Americans who retire without employer-sponsored insurance and before they are eligible for Medicare have difficulty finding affordable plans that will not cause financial hardship," says Bill Deal, Director of the Idaho Department of Insurance. "The Affordable Care Act will provide $5 billion in financial assistance to employers to help them maintain coverage for early retirees."

The amount of reimbursement to the employer plan is up to 80 percent of claims costs for health benefits between $15,000 and $90,000. Only medical expenses incurred after June 1, 2010, are eligible for reimbursement under this program. However, claims incurred between the start of the plan year and June 1 are credited towards the $15,000 reimbursement threshold.

Employers can apply for the program through the Department of Health and Human Services. Carrier plans must be approved and will be subject to audits to assure fiscal integrity. Self-funded and insured plans can apply, including plans sponsored by private entities, state and local government, nonprofits, religious entities, unions and other employers.

The program ends Jan. 1, 2014, when early retirees will be able to choose from coverage options that will be available in the health insurance exchanges.

Idaho city won't end downtown business improvement district

Signatures on petition come into question

The Associated Press

SANDPOINT — Administrators in this northern Idaho city have rejected a petition by downtown businesses to abolish a local business tax.

Sandpoint officials say some of the signatures on the petition to dissolve the city's business improvement district couldn't be verified as being from the business owners, and some of the businesses had closed.

The ruling was reminiscent of efforts earlier this year by business owners in downtown Twin Falls, who fought to dissolve the Historic Downtown Business Improvement District. The city council voted in April to dissolve the improvement district.

Mayor Gretchen Hellar wrote a letter to the city council saying the petition didn't include enough valid signatures, and that 17 were declared invalid immediately.

Hellar also said only 39.75 percent of the business improvement district was represented by the petitioners. But the mayor noted the petitioners can go straight to the city council.

"The council can still dissolve the district if so desired," Hellar wrote.

The tax money collected by the city goes to the Downtown Sandpoint Business Association to promote and beautify downtown.

One of the petitioners, Rich Curtis of Exit Realty, said the city was nitpicking.

"They are trying to play loopholes," he said.

One signature that was nullified belonged to Darcy Peters, co-owner of The Loading Dock. The city said the seasonal business was closed when the city tried to verify her signature.

"I'm trying to lease space, to grow the downtown," said Peters, who opened the store for the summer season last week. "I'm paying for the building and I'm paying for the square footage."

The city also invalidated signatures that appeared on sheets of paper with no heading defining the goal of the signers.

Selling renewable energy far and wide

Foreign reporters and writers will be in southern Idaho through Sunday as business and industry groups show off the region's renewable energy opportunities.

The Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce, Southern Idaho Economic Development Organization and the College of Southern Idaho's Renewable Energy Program are hosting the writers who work mostly for business and trade publications.

The tour was organized by

Joshua Palmer

Idaho Department of Commerce.

"Hopefully, we can give these guys an idea of what's in our area from an energy perspective," said Jan Rogers, director of the Southern Idaho Economic Development Organization, which is promoting the region's wind and geothermal energy capabilities.

Britain's David Cameron becomes PM; Brown out

By David Stringer and Paisley Dodds
Associated Press writers

LONDON — David Cameron, the youthful leader who modernized the party of right-wing icon Margaret Thatcher, became prime minister Thursday after the resignation of Gordon Brown — capping a gripping election saga that returns the Tories to government after 13 years of Labour Party rule.

According to tradition, Queen Elizabeth II appointed Cameron at Buckingham Palace — the stately denouement to a behind-the-scenes dogfight between Cameron and Brown for the cooperation of Britain's third-place party, after an election that left no party with a majority. Within minutes, Cameron was installed at No. 10 Downing Street and an announcement followed that Liberal Democrat leader, Nick Clegg, would become deputy prime minister after days of hard bargaining with his former political rivals.

The 43-year-old Cameron becomes Britain's youngest prime minister in almost 200 years — the last was Lord Liverpool at 42 — and cemented a coalition deal with the third-place Liberal Democrats. Clegg and four other Liberal Democrats received Cabinet posts. A number of other Liberal Democrats would receive junior posts.

The agreement, reached over five sometimes tense days of negotiation, delivered Britain's first full coalition government since

Conservative leader David Cameron became Britain's youngest prime minister in almost 200 years Tuesday after Gordon Brown stepped down and ended 13 years of Labour government.

World War II.

Cameron and Clegg agreed to a pact after the Conservative Party won the most seats in Britain's May 6 national election, but fell short of winning a majority of seats in Parliament.

Cameron's Conservative Party said ex-leader William Hague will serve as Foreign Secretary, senior lawmaker George Osborne as Treasury chief, and lawmaker Liam Fox as defense secretary.

Reform of Britain's electoral system aimed at creating a more proportional system.

"We are going to form a new government — more importantly, we are going to form a new kind of government," Clegg said in a news conference after his party's lawmakers overwhelmingly approved his decision to enter a coalition with Cameron.

Arriving at London's Downing Street hand-in-hand with his wife Samantha, Cameron said he believed that Britain's "best days lie ahead."

Britain's new government could spell changing relationships with its foreign allies.

Both Cameron and Clegg have signaled they favor looser ties to Washington. Both men back the Afghanistan mission but Cameron hopes to withdraw British troops within five years. Clegg has said he's uneasy at a rising death toll.

Relations with European neighbors could also become problematic. Cameron's party is deeply skeptical over cooperation in Europe, and has withdrawn from an alliance with the parties of Germany's Angela Merkel and France's Nicolas Sarkozy. Clegg, once a member of the European parliament, has long been pro-European.

"We have some deep and pressing problems — a huge deficit, deep social problems, a political system in need of reform," Cameron said, as he took office. "For those reasons, I aim to form a proper and full coalition between the Conservatives and the Liberal Democrats."

Drifting satellite threatens US cable programming

By Michael Weissenstein
Associated Press writer

LONDON — A TV communications satellite is drifting out of control thousands of miles above the Earth, threatening to wander into another satellite's orbit and interfere with cable programming across the United States, the satellites' owners said Tuesday.

Communications company Intelsat said it lost control of the Galaxy 15 satellite on April 5, possibly because the satellite's systems were knocked out by a solar storm. Intelsat cannot remotely steer the satellite to remain in its orbit, so Galaxy 15 is creeping toward the adjacent path of another TV communications satellite that serves U.S. cable companies.

Galaxy 15 continues to receive and transmit satellite signals, and they will probably overlap and interfere with signals from the second satellite, known as AMC 11, if Galaxy 15 drifts into its orbit as expected around May 23, according to the two satellite companies.

AMC 11 receives digital programming from cable television channels and transmits it to all U.S. cable systems from its orbit 22,000 miles above the equator, SES World Skies said. It operates on the same frequencies as Galaxy 15.

14th-century aqueduct found in Jerusalem

By Grant Slater
Associated Press writer

JERUSALEM — Archaeologists said Tuesday they have uncovered a 14th-century aqueduct that supplied water to Jerusalem for almost 600 years along a route dating back to the time of Jesus — but unlike most such finds, this time the experts knew exactly where to look.

Photographs from the late 19th century showed the aqueduct in use by the city's Ottoman rulers, nearly 600 years after its construction in 1320. The photo shows an inscription dating back to the aqueduct's early days.

It was uncovered during repairs to the city's modern-day water system. Public works projects here proceed in cooperation with antiquities officials in a city where turning over a shovel of dirt anywhere can turn back the pages of time, said Yehiel Zeligler, the archaeologist in charge of the excavation.

The team has found two of nine archaic sections of a bridge about nine feet tall on the west side of Jerusalem's Old City, Zeligler said.

Though archaeologists knew the aqueduct was there, the find represents the first time they have had a glimpse of the intricate bridge system used for centuries to combat gravity and shuttle water from faraway sources, Zeligler said.

When the population of Jerusalem in biblical times outgrew nearby springs, leaders began to search farther afield, finding a water source near Bethlehem, a winding route of about 14 miles away. They built a first aqueduct dating back 2,000 years on the same path of the one found today, Zeligler said.

Pope: Church to blame in sex scandal

By Barry Matton
Associated Press writer

LISBON, Portugal — In his most thorough admission of the church's guilt in the clerical sex abuse scandal, Pope Benedict XVI said Tuesday the greatest persecution of the institution "is born from the sins within the church," and not from a campaign by outsiders.

The pontiff said the Catholic church has always been tormented by problems of its own making — a tendency that is being witnessed today "in a truly terrifying way."

"The church needs to profoundly relearn penitence, accept purification, learn forgiveness but also justice," he said.

"Forgiveness cannot substitute justice," he said.

Benedict was responding to journalists' questions, submitted in advance, aboard the papal plane as he flew to Portugal for a four-day visit.

In a shift from the Vatican's initial claim that the church was the victim of a campaign by the media and abortion rights and pro-gay marriage groups, Benedict said: "The greatest persecution of the church doesn't come from enemies on the outside but is born from the sins within the church."

Previously, he has taken to task the abusers themselves and, in the case of Ireland, the bishops who failed to stop them.

Benedict has promised that the church would take action to protect children and make abusive priests face justice. He has started cleaning house, accepting the resignations of a few bishops who either admitted they molested youngsters or covered up for priests who did.

EATING WELL ON $68.88 A WEEK

Two chefs, food magazine editor do their best to come up with seven days' worth of meals

By Pervaiz Shallwani
For The Associated Press

How well can a family of four eat on just $68.88 a week? For more than 38 million Americans, it's more than a matter of conjecture.

With job growth and the economy still only sputtering along, a record number of Americans have turned to the Supplemental Nutrition Assistance Program, the formal name for the federal food stamp program.

At the end of last year, roughly 1 in 8 Americans received food stamps, the highest rate ever, according to Lisa Pino, the program's deputy administrator. During the past two years alone, another nearly 12 million people enrolled in the program.

How much a family gets per month is determined by a number of factors, but typically ranges from less than $100 to more than $500. The national average for a family of four at the end of 2009 was $275.53 a month, or about $68.88 a week.

Despite growing dependence on food stamps, the popular impression is that the meals you can make with them are bleak.

To find out how well you can eat on food stamps, the AP asked two chefs and a magazine food editor to plan out seven days of meals for a family of four using that budget: $68.88.

Food stamp officials note that the program is meant to supplement a household's food budget, not be its only spending. But to best illustrate what's possible — or not — on a very tight budget, we asked the participants to work with the food stamp budget only.

"It was tough. You really have to think outside the box," says Jose Garces, a Food Network Iron Chef and James Beard award-winning chef from Philadelphia. "When you are used to creating food the way we do, it takes you back."

Though not everyone succeeded in staying within budget, the lessons learned were universal. All three said plan-

Bill Telepan of Telepan restaurant in New York

Telepan approached the food stamp challenge with the same sustainable eating philosophy he uses at his restaurant. He favors high-quality, unprocessed ingredients (organic when possible) and plenty of from-scratch cooking.

"The problem with the way some people spend food stamps is by buying processed foods," he says. "I wanted to buy everything fresh and cook from scratch. You are not going to do it every day. But do it two or three times a week and then make enough so you heat it up."

Carol Biggers demonstrates how to insert a meat thermometer into a hamburger to test that it is hot enough to kill microorganisms, in a class for the Easter Seals — Goodwill Working Solutions program in Burley. The classes, required for anyone on food assistance in the program, cover such topics as nutrition, food safety and stretching food dollars.

Making nutrition fun

Class requirement isn't onerous, say food assistance recipients

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

BURLEY — It's a little hokey, and Carol Biggers admits it, as she pretends to taste sauce from an empty pot before putting the spoon back in, and pretends to wipe an invisible kid's nose with a dishtowel.

"I'm going to get silly for a minute," the University of Idaho Extension Nutrition Program educator warns her students, "but I want you to pay attention."

The class, with its entertaining props, is about food safety, and everything Biggers is demonstrating is something a cook shouldn't do in the kitchen. One of many classes Biggers teaches, this one is for adults enrolled in the Easter Seals — Goodwill Working Solutions program in Burley, who are required to take her nutrition courses to receive food assistance.

"When I first heard I had to go to this class, I was like, 'Oh God, no' ... I thought it would be boring, and I don't do boring at all," said Sheri Mussaw of Rupert, who said she has learned quite a bit from Biggers and enjoyed it. "What I liked best about it is that a bunch of people just like me can get together and learn something new and have fun. ... I actually look forward to going."

Mussaw has put together a binder of handouts to take home for reference, and students also get a "prize" at each class, such as a stress ball shaped like a bunch of grapes or a meat thermometer to ensure they use the information they learn about safely cooking a cut of meat.

Biggers' weekly classes cover a variety of topics, from the new food pyramid to meal planning, from stretching food dollars to eating healthily for a pregnant or nursing

When she can, nutrition educator Carol Biggers, left, uses props to illustrate — and entertain. Students often come in reluctantly but leave with useful information and smiles, Biggers says. mother. The budget-shop-ping lesson teaches food stamp recipients how to use the assistance on healthy foods.

“We emphasize that you can really take control of your health by eating right, eating more healthy,” the teacher said. “Not every-body changes their eating habits, but we make a differ-ence.”

Through the class partici-pants, who are primarily women, Biggers hopes to change the dining habits of entire families. And it seems to be working, at least for some.

“A lot of times, they don’t eat what I give them, but they’re starting to eat more and more of it,” said Ronna Gregory of Rupert. “Last night (my son) asked me for green beans and I was really impressed.”

That’s exactly the kind of reaction Biggers hopes to get.

“If you offer a lot more fruits and vegetables, chances are they’re going to eat a lot more fruits and vegetables,” she said. “You can control what’s in the house available to eat. You set the example, you cook the good food and you eat the good food.”

Gregory and Mussaw said they had learned a few of the basics of nutrition as chil-dren – the old food pyra-mid, for example – but had either forgotten or never learned many of the things Biggers teaches.

“I know we all eat more than we should, but what surprised me was portion sizes in terms of health. When I make oatmeal, I make a pan of oatmeal and I eat a bowl of oatmeal. I’m eating probably four cups too much,” Mussaw said.

She has also stopped buy-ing something at the store just because it is on sale, instead planning which fresh and which preserved or processed items to get during a shopping trip – both for health and cost sav-ings.

“I’ve been buying some canned fruits, but I’m trying to figure out how to do the vegetables,” Mussaw said. The handouts, though, have helped her come up with ideas. “A lot of those fruits and vegetables, I don’t know what they are, and if I were to buy it, what would I do with it?”

Mussaw said she would recommend the course not just to those who are on public assistance, and she’s glad the Easter Seals pro-gram has required her to take Biggers’ classes.

“You’re never too old to learn something new, and nutrition and what your body needs to sustain a healthy life has changed over the years,” she said.

Marinated lamb rib chops make for tender wrap

By J.M. Hirsch
Associated Press writer

Keeping a grilled lamb dish tender and fast is all a matter of choosing the right cut.

For this recipe, I wanted something I could marinate briefly, toss on the grill for a few minutes, then shove into a pita bread with some roasted pep-pers and crumbled feta.

I ended up going with lamb rib chops, an incredibly tender cut most often prepared – and eaten – on the bone. But a quick slice with a paring knife turned the ribs into medallions just the right size for a wrap.

For this sandwich, I kept everything simple, and very Greek. The marinade is olive oil, red pepper flakes and oregano. For the acid, I went with cider vinegar for ease, but lemon juice would just as good (and more authen-tic).

Since I already had the grill going, I roasted my own red peppers. But for ease, bottled roasted red peppers would be fine. Crumbled feta and fresh oregano finish the sandwich. A mess of arugula and some grilled mushrooms would be good additions.

GRILLED MARINATED LAMB WRAPS WITH FETA

Start to finish: 25 minutes.
Servings: 4.

- 3 tablespoons olive oil, divided
- 1 tablespoon cider vinegar
- 1/4 teaspoon red pepper flakes
- 1/2 teaspoon dried oregano
- Salt and ground black pepper
- 2 pounds lamb rib chops
- 2 red bell peppers, cored and quar-tered
- 4 large pita pocket breads

Quick to marinate and fast to cook, lamb rib chops are the centerpiece of this Greek-influenced sandwich.

1/2 cup crumbled feta cheese
2 tablespoons fresh oregano leaves

In a medium bowl, whisk together 2 tablespoons of the olive oil, the vine-gar, red pepper flakes, dried oregano, 1/2 teaspoon salt and 1/4 teaspoon pepper.

Carefully cut the meat from the bones, then add the meat to the bowl. Toss well to coat, then refrigerate for 15 minutes.

Heat the grill to medium-high. Coat the grates with cooking spray.

Use the remaining 1 tablespoon of oil to rub all sides of the pepper quar-ters. Arrange the peppers on the grill and cook until solid grill lines form on the bottoms. Turn the peppers, then continue grilling.

Add the lamb to the grill and cook for 1 to 1 1/2 minutes per side.

To assemble the wraps, place 4 rounds of lamb down the center of each pita. Top with grilled peppers, crumbled feta and fresh oregano. Season with salt and pepper.

Processed foods may some-times seem less expensive, but they are harder to stretch and generally not as healthy. Telepan also looked for more seasonal foods, which gen-erally are cheaper.

But even without buying the organic, grass-fed meats he favors, Telepan still came in nearly $20 over budget. Some aggressive use of coupons, sales and bulk shopping probably could bring his total closer to the goal.

When constructing his menu, Telepan began by selecting the protein and building out from there. This ensured the meals were sat-isfying.

He also assembled his meal plan backward, start-ing with each day’s dinner, then sorting out how to use the leftovers in other meals. For example, the leftovers from Monday’s roasted chicken dinner became a salad for lunch on Tuesday. And ziti that was served with broccoli, toasted garlic and shell beans on Wednesday got a makeover with meat-balls two nights later.

Of course, cooking from scratch is more work, which many busy families will find daunting. Telepan advocates involving the whole family in the cooking. “People look at cooking as a chore,” he says. “In the end, if people all help out it makes it fun.”

“Cooking on a budget and actually cooking means cooking without using packaged foods,” she says. “Packaged food can often be not as nutritious for you. You are also paying for the convenience sometimes. Pasta sauce is a conven-ience. Cooking it yourself, you know what’s in it. There is less sodium. There is less fat. It’s those sorts of things that you have to think of as well.”

How she shopped also was part of her plan for stay-ing on budget. If possible, she says don’t shop when hungry or with your chil-dren, both of which can prompt unplanned pur-chases. And always use a list; it makes shopping faster because you only look for what you need.

“It also helps you avoid buying extra things,” she says. “To me, writing the list is the most important thing.”

When selecting foods, Last started with foods she liked, as well as basic sta-ples. She also made sure to buy foods with multiple uses – such as flour, oil and spices. But she splurged where she could, as with buttermilk and andouille sausage. She simply bought those items in smaller amounts or made sure she had uses for leftovers.

“Throw out nothing,” she says. “If you want a special ingredient, figure out what else to do with it.”

This is where Last turned to a kitchen sink stew, build-ing around extra chicken legs and adding anything that was leftover from the week. “You can use almost any vegetable in it.”

Where the money went:

Last spent a total of $68.49, giving her 39 cents to spare. Nearly $22 of that was spent on about 14 pounds of meat, mostly chicken, ground beef and a bit of bacon. About another $22 was spent on produce, with the remaining money split between dry goods and dairy, including milk, eggs and cheese.

Jose Garces of Philadelphia

Garces’ signature style is to dress up simple foods with plenty of ethnic flavors. And because seasonings – both dry spices and fresh herbs – tend to be inexpen-sive, his is an approach that works well when trying to make the most of a small budget.

Inexpensive basics – such as pasta, beans, greens and potatoes – can get tons of flavor from spices and herbs. The same foods also can taste radically different from one meal to the next – Indian flavors one night, Asian the next and Mexican on the third.

Garces suggests that budget shoppers start in the grocer’s ethnic aisle, where the products generally are less expensive.

Budget cooking “traces back to roots in ethnic cook-ing,” he says. “If you look back in history, people had to survive, and using inexpensive products became ways to survive and using those inexpensive products became traditional dishes.”

To create his menu, Garces drew on his Mexican roots, as well as his love of Indian food. Beans, spices, herbs and produce are at the heart of both cuisines – and are among the least expensive ingredients at the grocer.

If cooking ethnic dishes intimidates you, head to the library, which should have plenty of books covering plenty of cuisines.

On his menu, an inexpen-sive chipotle pepper gives a kick to meatloaf. Smokey paprika adds depth to roast-ed chicken.

“It’s all about shopping and buying the right amounts,” he says. “Buy products that contain a ton of flavor. Chorizo typically has paprika, black pepper, garlic, cumin and a lot of pork fat.”

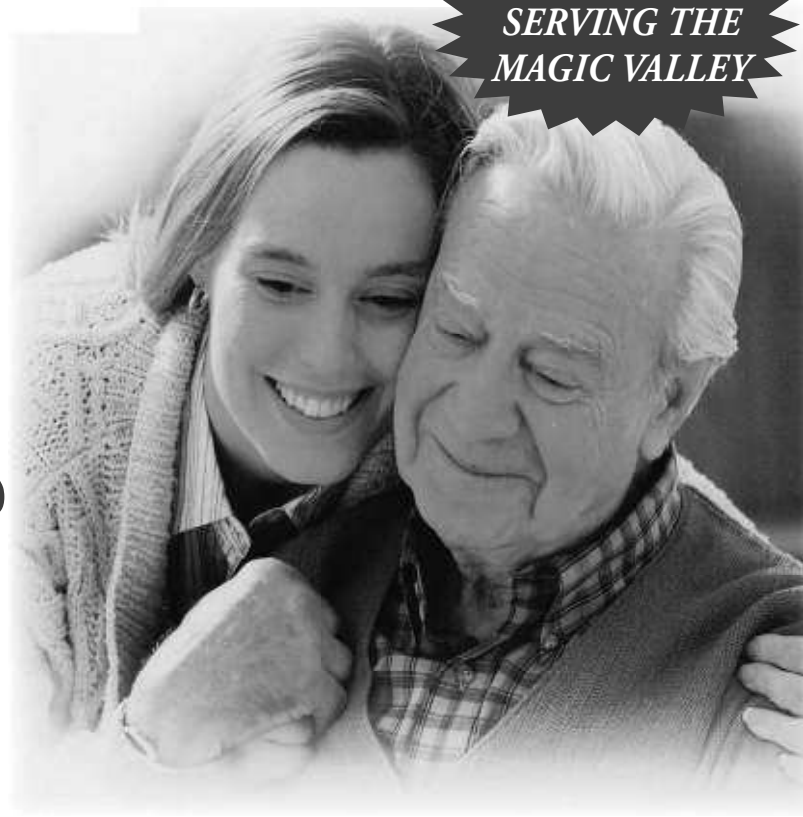

Where the money went:

Garces spent $69.54, just 66 cents over budget. Nearly $23 went to meat, including high-flavor items such as chorizo and bacon. Another $18 was spent on dry goods and flavorful foods, such as salsa, roasted peppers, chipotles in adobo sauce, paprika and maple syrup. The rest was split mostly between dairy and produce, including garlic, avocado and lemons.

Last focused on stretching her ingredients as far as pos-sible and budgeting her time as much as her cash.

Like Telepan, she avoided processed foods. Not only are whole foods often more nutritious, they usually are easier to stretch.

STRETCHING A FOOD STAMP BUDGET

Affordable beans go from dry to delicious

The Associated Press

Don't be intimidated by dry beans. They are so affordable and healthy, it's worth learning how to use them. And that isn't hard.

Place your dry beans in a large stockpot or bowl, add enough cool water to cover by several inches, then cover the bowl and forget about it overnight. In the morning, drain the beans and proceed with your recipe. It's really that simple.

RED BEANS WITH ANDOUILLE SAUSAGE

Start to finish: 1 hour 20 minutes (20 minutes active). Servings: 4.

- 1 teaspoon vegetable or canola oil
- 1 medium yellow onion, finely diced
- 2 cloves garlic, finely chopped
- 1-pound bag dried, small red beans, soaked overnight and drained
- 4 1/2 cups water
- 1 pound andouille sausage

Dry beans, like those in this recipe, are perfect to keep on a tight budget and are easy to use.

Coarse salt and ground pepper

In a large saucepan over medium, heat the oil. Add the onion and garlic to the pan. Saute until softened, 3 to 5 minutes. Add the beans and water, then bring to a boil. Reduce to a simmer, partially cover, and cook until the beans are tender, 1 to 1 1/2 hours, adding more water if necessary.

When the beans are nearly done, heat a grill or grill pan to medium. Cook the sausage until they have prominent grill marks and are heated through, about 4 minutes per side.

Season the beans with salt and pepper, then spoon them into 4 serving bowls.

Top each serving with a sausage.

Pot of chili makes most of cheap ingredients

The Associated Press

This recipe is simple and healthy, but doesn't lack in flavor thanks to a host of spices and chickpeas that add meatiness. Make it in advance; chili only gets better with age.

VEGETARIAN CHILI

Start to finish: 45 minutes (20 minutes active). Servings: 6.

- 1/4 cup vegetable or canola oil
- 1 medium yellow onion, diced
- 1 red bell pepper, cored and diced
- 1 green bell pepper, cored and diced
- Salt
- 1 jalapeno pepper, seeds removed, minced
- 4 cloves garlic, minced
- 2 tablespoons chili powder
- 2 teaspoons cumin
- 2 teaspoons dried oregano
- 5 tablespoons (half of a 6-ounce can) tomato paste
- 1 3/4 cups water
- 28-ounce can diced

tomatoes

Three 15-ounce cans black or kidneys beans, drained of about half their liquid (also can use chickpeas)

Ground black pepper, to taste

In a large saucepan over medium, heat the oil. Add the onion, both bell peppers, the jalapeno pepper, the garlic and a pinch of salt. Cover and cook, stirring occasionally, for 10 minutes.

Add the chili powder, cumin and oregano. Stir well and cook for 1 minute. Add the tomato paste, diced tomatoes and water. Bring to a simmer and cook, uncovered, for 20 minutes.

Add the beans and cook for another 5 to 7 minutes. Adjust seasonings with salt and pepper.

When perception doesn't meet reality

Foods with 'organic' label may be higher in calories than you think

By Jeannine Stein
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Organic foods are better for you, right? And they have fewer calories and taste better, correct? If that's your across-the-board assessment of things organic, maybe it's time to re-evaluate.

The Cornell University Food and Brand Lab did a study to determine whether the perception of organic foods matched reality. Spoiler alert: It didn't.

Researchers randomly assigned 54 college students to try cookies that were labeled "organic," or had no label. The cookies in both conditions were Oreos made with organic flour and sugar. Yes, they really have Oreos like that. We were surprised too.

The participants also filled out a questionnaire about their level of environmental awareness and behavior (whether they recycled, liked being outdoors, etc.) and whether they tended to buy organic products and read nutrition labels.

Those who ate the cookies labeled organic thought they had 40 percent fewer calories than the unlabeled cookies. They also rated their appearance more appetizing, and higher in fiber than the other cookies.

Those who thought the organic-labeled cookies had fewer calories tended to be people who usually buy organic foods and who pay attention to nutrition labels. But people who like activities such as nature hikes also thought the organic-labeled cookies tasted less natural.

"An organic label gives a food a 'health halo,'" said study co-author Brian Wansink, in a news release. Wansink is the director of the Food and Brand Lab and was also involved with the study on recipes in the "Joy of Cooking" becoming more caloric over the years, as well as the recent study on increasing portion sizes in artistic depictions of the Last Supper. "It's the same basic reason people tend to overeat any snack food that's labeled as healthy or low fat. They underestimate the calories and over-reward themselves by eating more."

His recommendation for how to estimate calories in organic foods if they're not available? "Take your best guess at its calorie count. Then double it. You'll end up being more accurate, and you'll probably eat a lot less."

Discovery Stops Heartburn & Ulcers

WASHINGTON — Gastrointestinal (GI) problems like acid reflux, heartburn and ulcers may now be a thing of the past. New research shows that GI problems are not the result of excess acid, but the body's inability to deal with it. Pepstat 380® is a patent-pending formula that contains an extract known as DGL that strengthens the body's natural defenses against stomach acid.

Pepstat goes to work immediately on acid while addressing the cause of GI problems. Scientists say that the DGL in Pepstat improves the body's protective substances, increases the lifespan of digestive tract cells, improves blood supply to the area and inhibits the heliobacter pylori bacteria that causes ulcers. Articles have appeared in publications like the British medical journal The Lancet showing DGL to be as effective as Zantac® or Tagamet®. Pepstat also works faster than Prilosec® and Prevacid®. Pepstat may make these drugs obsolete because DGL has no known side effects. Study results are available at key2health.com.

Pepstat 380 is a natural alternative available at pharmacies and nutrition stores without a prescription or call 1-800-339-3301. Now at SAV-MOR DRUGS 139 Main St. W. • 733-8323

Fresh grapes wait to be processed in this October 2009 photo at Holesinsky Organic Vineyard and Winery north of Buhl. The winery produces syrah, merlot, riesling, chardonnay, rose, port, a red blend and an ice wine.

Buhl winery's rose brings home bronze from Calif.

Times-News

Holesinsky Organic Vineyard and Winery's 2009 syrah rose won a bronze at the 29th Riverside International Wine Competition, which concluded Friday in California.

It's a high-stakes contest in which wines from Canada, New York and California earned the top sweepstakes awards. But the event also recognizes "fabulous wines from non-traditional grapes and regions," a Riverside press release said.

Holesinsky's dry rose was the only Idaho wine to take an award, said Wes Malvini, the Buhl winery's marketing director and winery manager.

"It's old world-style rose. ... It's more of a pure wine than most of the roses that are being made," Malvini said Tuesday. "You're not tasting the chemicals and the processing ... It's crisp, it's complex, but it's not overbearing. Simple and elegant."

Forty-three judges from around the U.S., mainly wine makers, wine journalists and wine merchants, evaluated 1,923 wines over three days, awarding 229 golds, 583 silvers and 469 bronzes.

STRETCHING A FOOD STAMP BUDGET

Everything but the sink can go into this easy stew

Adaptable to whatever you have on hand, this stew is great for making use of leftovers.

The Associated Press

The name of this recipe says it all. Toss in whatever you have, including leftovers. The same goes for seasonings. Oregano, basil are a good start, or you could get more adventurous with red pepper flakes, chili powder or cumin.

KITCHEN SINK STEW

Start to finish: 1 hour 10 minutes (25 minutes active). Servings: 6.

- 8 skinless chicken drumsticks
- Coarse salt and ground black pepper
- 2 tablespoons vegetable or canola oil
- 1 large yellow onion, large dice
- 1 large carrot, large dice
- 1 large celery stalk, large dice
- 3 garlic cloves, smashed and peeled
- 1 large russet potato, large dice
- 1 pound collard greens, stems removed, leaves torn
- 46-ounce bottle vegetable juice
- 2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce

2 teaspoons white vinegar

Season the chicken generously with salt and pepper. In a 6-quart Dutch oven or heavy pot, heat the oil over medium-high. Add the chicken and brown on all sides, 10 to 12 minutes. Transfer the chicken to a plate.

Add the onion, carrot, celery and garlic to pot. Saute until the onion softens, about 3 minutes. Add the potato and collard greens, then cook until the greens begin to wilt, another 3 minutes.

Return the chicken to the pot. Add the vegetable juice and Worcestershire sauce. Bring to a boil, reduce heat to medium and simmer, partially covered, until the chicken begins separating from the bone and the vegetables are tender, about 45 minutes.

Season with salt and pepper and stir in the vinegar just before serving.

Less mess, more meat: Country-style ribs

By J.M. Hirsch

Associated Press writer

The trick to great barbecued ribs is not letting the meat get lost in the sauce.

So to keep the pork flavorful and moist — and to give it the substance to stand up to the sauce — I created a quick sweet and peppery brine from brown sugar, kosher salt, peppercorns and garlic powder.

A quick — or not, depending on how much time you have — bath in the brine produces exceptionally tender, moist ribs. And to help the meat shine even more, I opted for country-style pork ribs, which are all meat and no bone.

As for the barbecue sauce, there's nothing wrong with using purchased. But it's easy to make your own, which lets you tweak the flavors. I created a spicy Asian-influenced one for this recipe (it includes ginger, toasted sesame oil and hot sauce).

BRINED AND GRILLED COUNTRY-STYLE PORK RIBS

Start to finish: 1 hour 20 minutes (20 minutes active). Servings: 3.

For the brine:

- 2 cups water
- 1/2 cup packed brown sugar
- 1/4 cup kosher salt
- 1 tablespoon whole peppercorns
- 1 teaspoon garlic powder
- 4 cups ice
- 1 1/4 pounds country-style pork ribs

For the barbecue sauce:

- 6-ounce can tomato paste
- 1/4 cup packed brown sugar

- Juice of 1/2 lemon
- 1/2 teaspoon kosher salt
- 1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
- 1/4 teaspoon ground dry ginger
- 1/4 teaspoon cumin
- 1/4 teaspoon dry mustard powder
- 1 tablespoon honey
- 1 tablespoon toasted sesame oil
- 2 tablespoons water
- Sesame seeds

In a medium saucepan over medium-high, combine the water, brown sugar, salt, peppercorns and garlic powder. Bring to a simmer, stirring until the sugar and salt have dissolved. Add the ice and stir until fully cooled.

Transfer the brine to a large zip-close plastic bag. Add the ribs, seal the bag and refrigerate at least 1 hour, or up to 8 hours.

Meanwhile, prepare the barbecue sauce. In a small bowl, whisk together the tomato paste, brown sugar, lemon juice, salt, garlic powder, ginger, cumin, mustard powder, honey, sesame oil and water.

When ready to grill, heat a grill to medium-high. Coat the grate with oil or cooking spray. Drain and discard the brine.

Place the ribs on the grill. Brush the tops of the ribs with barbecue sauce, then cover the grill and cook for 5 minutes. Use tongs to flip the ribs, then brush the tops with additional barbecue sauce. Reduce heat to medium-low, cover and cook for another 5 to 8 minutes, or until an instant-read thermometer inserted at the thickest part of a rib reads 160 degrees.

Just before serving, sprinkle the ribs with sesame seeds.

Affordable cross between omelet and quiche

The Associated Press

A cross between an omelet and a quiche, this classic Spanish dish is a cheap and easy way to spice up breakfast. The leftovers make a nice lunch served with a salad or cradled between slices of a hearty bread.

TORTILLA ESPANOLA

Start to finish: 30 minutes. Servings: 4.

- 2 potatoes, peeled and finely diced
- 2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil, divided
- 1/2 cup finely diced yellow onion
- 1 clove garlic, minced
- 4 eggs
- Salt and ground black pepper, to taste

Bring a large saucepan of water to a boil. Add the potatoes and blanch for 5 minutes. Drain and set aside.

In a large non-stick skillet over medium, heat 1 1/2 tablespoons of the oil. Add the onion and garlic and saute until soft, about 4 minutes. Set aside.

In a medium bowl, lightly beat the eggs. Fold the onion mixture and potatoes into the eggs, then season with salt and pepper.

Heat the oven to broil.

Return the skillet to medium heat. Add the remaining 1/2 tablespoon of oil. Pour the egg mixture into the skillet and cook for 4 minutes. Transfer the skillet to the oven about 10 inches from the broiler. Broil for about 10 minutes, or until lightly browned on the top and the egg is set.

KEEPING FRUIT DESSERT LIGHT

By Stephanie Witt Sedgwick
Special to The Washington Post

Fruit desserts seem virtuous, but butter-laden toppings or heaping helpings can negate healthful aspects. In this recipe, the fat is kept to a minimum, and individual ramekins or Pyrex containers (8-ounce) control portion size.

The fruit can be cut up in advance, but do not mix it with the other ingredients any sooner than 30 minutes before baking. The crumbles can be baked, held at room temperature and warmed before serving.

STRAWBERRY RHUBARB CRUMBLES

8 servings

For the filling:

- 1 pound rhubarb

(trimmed), thick stalks cut into quarters or long halves, then cut crosswise into 1/4- to 1/2-inch pieces (4 cups)

1 pound fresh strawberries (hulled), large ones cut into eighths, medium ones cut into fourths, small ones halved (about 3 cups)

- 1/2 teaspoon almond extract
- 3/4 to 1 cup sugar
- 2 tablespoons cornstarch
- For the topping:
- 1/4 cup quick-cooking or regular plain oatmeal
- 1/3 cup flour
- 1/3 cup packed light brown sugar
- 1/2 teaspoon ground cinnamon
- 3 tablespoons salted or unsalted butter, cut into 1/2- to 1/4-inch cubes

For the filling: Combine the rhubarb, strawberries, almond extract, 3/4 cup of the sugar (or 1 cup sugar for a less-tart mixture) and the cornstarch in a mixing bowl. Stir to coat evenly, and let the mixture sit for 10 to 15 minutes.

Preheat the oven to 350 degrees. Line a large rimmed baking sheet with aluminum foil. Place eight 8-ounce ramekins on the lined sheet.

For the topping: Combine the oatmeal, flour, brown sugar and cinnamon in a separate mixing bowl. Add the butter, and use your fingers to incorporate it into the dry ingredients until the mixture has the consistency of fine crumbs.

Stir the fruit mixture, then divide it evenly among the ramekins. Sprinkle each portion with equal amounts of the topping. Bake for 45 to 50 minutes or until the fruit is bubbling around the edges of the ramekins and the topping is just starting to brown.

Let the crumbles cool for 10 to 15 minutes before serving.

Watch out for fat and salt in chicken nuggets

By Michael Hill
Associated Press writer

If you didn't believe Jamie Oliver, here's another chance to hear it — many brands of chicken nuggets are loaded with fat and salt.

After testing 14 super-market brands of refrigerated and frozen chicken nuggets — including two chicken-like nuggets made from soy — Consumer Reports Health said that choosing a healthier nugget will mean sacrificing flavor.

While none of the 14 brands received a "poor" nutritional rating from the health website, which is associated with Consumer Reports magazine, the only brand to get a "very good" nutrition rating — Health is Wealth — didn't get high marks in taste.

The site also urged consumers not to be misled by

"Whatever the claims that are being made, you definitely want to turn to the nutritional panel on the product and see if it matches what you're looking for."

— Gayle Williams, deputy editor of Consumer Reports Health

brands that are advertised as natural or organic, terms that aren't necessarily indicators of nutritious foods.

For instance, Consumer Reports said that while Tyson accurately claims its chicken nuggets are "100 percent all natural," one serving (about 3 to 4 ounces) of its nuggets has 270 calories, 17 grams of fat and 470 milligrams of sodium.

It's generally recommended that people consume fewer than 65 grams of fat and 2,300 milligrams of sodium a day.

Consumer Reports gave Tyson's nuggets a "fair" rating for nutrition.

"Whatever the claims that are being made, you definitely want to turn to the nutritional panel on the product and see if it matches what you're looking for," said Gayle Williams, deputy editor of Consumer Reports Health.

Oliver pushed nuggets into the news recently when he made them on his ABC reality program, "Jamie Oliver's Food Revolution." He thought the process of grinding up the chicken parts would gross out the children he made them for, but they ate them eagerly.

Of the 14 items tested, only Health is Wealth received a "very good" nutritional rating, with 130 calories, 4 grams of fat and 230 milligrams of sodium. Testers, however, didn't care for the taste.

"There's the rub. The brand may be more nutritious than others, but if your kids won't eat it, what good is it?" said Williams.

On taste, three brands earned a "very good" rating: Market Pantry (from Target, which told the magazine it was changing its formulation), Bell & Evans Breaded and Kirkland Signature Disney (Costco). Each received a "good" nutritional rating.

And McDonald's nuggets? The site asked children to compare them against the others. McDonald's came out on top, but earned only a "fair" nutrition rating.

FOOD FACT

Hostess Twinkies were invented in 1931 by James Dewar, manager of Continental Bakeries' Chicago factory. He envisioned the product as a way of using the company's thousands of shortcake pans which were otherwise employed only during the strawberry season. Originally called Little Shortcake Fingers, they were renamed Twinkie Fingers, and finally "Twinkies."

RACKING UP FANS

New cuts, hip new attitude has many looking for lamb

By Michelle Locke
For The Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — There are fashions in meat, as in all things, but ... Are you ready for lamb bacon?

That's just one of the new dishes popping up on menus across the country as chefs experiment with American lamb, a trend driven partly by a concerted effort on the part of producers to shake off lamb's dated image. Fussy crown roasts topped by tricky little frilled caps — out. "Lamb Jams," cooking contests featuring local chefs getting their grill on — in.

"We're definitely trying to approach a whole new generation and make lamb more approachable," said Megan Wortman, executive director of the Denver-based American Lamb Board.

Why lamb now? New Hampshire sheep farmer Jeff Conrad sees the trend as riding the wave of eating local. "People want to know where their food's coming from," he said. Conrad, who with his wife, Liz, runs Riverslea Farm near Epping, has noticed an increase in people buying lamb cuts for everyday meals, as opposed to previous years when he sold mainly whole animals to families looking to have a party.

"Ground lamb? We can't even keep that around," he said.

For chefs, cooking with lamb is something new, giving them a chance to stretch creatively. And if you use the lesser-known cuts — such as the neck and belly — it also can be cheaper, good for budget-stretching, said Matt Accarrino, executive chef at SPQR in San Francisco.

"I've been calling 2010 the year of the lamb," he said with a laugh. "I'd rather have a lamb belly than a lamb rack. Braised and glazed, long and slow-cooked — it's a very versatile cut. It's much less expensive than, say, the rib chops. You see a lot of people working with lamb neck."

Across the country, Mike Price, chef/owner of Market

Table in New York City, has been selling more lamb and fewer steaks, "which I think is a good thing. I'm a big fan of lamb?"

With its distinctive taste and slight gamey-ness, you don't need a huge portion to make a statement, which also contributes to cost-effectiveness, said Price.

Of course, in the wrong hands, that distinctive flavor can morph into something rather unpleasant. Accarrino can remember facing gray, tough roasts as a child, often accompanied by equally abused brussels sprouts.

"You've got to let the lamb speak for itself," agreed Price. "Overcooked is overcooked. It's going to be dry, and it's going to be tough."

Lamb is showing up at the retail level, too, with more and different cuts available. Many supermarkets now regularly carry ground lamb, which can be the basis for some delicious burgers.

"I feel like we're definitely selling more lamb," said Tia Harrison, co-owner and butcher at Avedano's Holly Park Market in San Francisco. A popular cut is the shoulder chop, something she has on the menu at Sociale, the restaurant she co-owns. "Lamb goes beautifully with rosemary and garlic and olive oil."

Harrison gets her lamb from Sonoma Direct, a Northern California processing plant, where executive director Marissa Guggiana has noticed an increased acceptance of "some of the strange cuts," partly because local chefs are buying whole lambs.

She's seen a lot of lamb charcuterie, grilled lamb neck and also noticed that "lamb bacon is a chef-y kind of trend."

Lamb has a long way to go before it becomes a staple in the U.S. On average, Americans consume only 1 pound per person annually, and one-third have never even tried it, according to Wortman. Compare that with federal figures from 2008 showing Americans on average ate about 61 pounds of beef, 59 pounds of chicken and 46 pounds of pork per capita.

Jeff Conrad of Riverslea Farm in Epping, N.H., shown in his barn with the farm's youngest lambs, sees the lamb trend as riding the wave of eating local.

Rosemary lamb and mint pesto: a wonderful combination that serves nicely on a bed of couscous.

SPICY GROUND LAMB WITH MARJORAM

This simple ground lamb from Darina Allen's new cookbook, "Forgotten Skills of Cooking," is a versatile dish that can be served with rice or pasta. It also could be used in a shepherd's pie, accompanying it with mashed potatoes and corn.

Start to finish: 15 minutes. Servings: 4.

- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- 1 medium yellow onion, chopped
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1 pound ground lamb
- 1 teaspoon ground cumin
- 2 teaspoons chopped fresh marjoram
- 1 fresh chili, seeded and chopped
- Dash soy sauce
- Salt and ground

- black pepper
- Pinch sugar

In a large saute pan over medium, heat the oil. Add the onion and garlic and saute until tender and lightly browned.

Add the lamb and saute until browned, about 8 to 10 minutes. Add the cumin, marjoram and chili. Stir to combine. Drain any excess fat. Season with soy sauce, salt, black pepper and sugar. Serve with rice or pasta.

ROSEMARY LAMB BROCHETTES WITH MINT PESTO

These lamb skewers

from Romney Steele's cookbook, "My Nepenthe," are nicely accented with mint pesto. Serve them with a bed of couscous, or wrap them in warmed pita breads with greens and chopped cucumber.

Start to finish: 1 hour (30 minutes active). Servings: 6.

- For the pesto:
- 2 tablespoons crushed walnuts
 - 1 clove garlic
 - Pinch salt
 - 2 tablespoons grated Parmesan or pecorino Romano cheese
 - 1/2 cup fresh mint leaves
 - 1/2 cup fresh cilantro or parsley leaves
 - 1/2 cup extra-virgin olive oil

For the lamb:

- 1 1/2 pounds lamb shoulder, cut into 1-inch chunks

3 tablespoons olive oil, plus more for grilling (if needed)

2 sprigs fresh rosemary, leaves only, coarsely chopped

Coarse salt and ground black pepper

1 red bell pepper, cut into 1-inch squares

1 small red or yellow onion, cut into 1-inch squares

1 lemon, halved

To make the pesto, in a food processor combine the walnuts, garlic, salt and cheese. Pulse to chop, then add the mint and cilantro, then pulse several more times to produce a chunky sauce. Transfer to a bowl, then stir in the oil.

For the lamb, place the meat in a medium glass bowl. Drizzle the oil over the meat, then sprinkle with rosemary, salt and pepper. Toss to coat, cover, and set aside to marinate for 30 minutes.

Thread the lamb pieces onto about 8 skewers, alternating with the red pepper and onion.

Heat a grill or grill pan to medium-high. Grill the lamb, turning every so often and basting with any remaining marinade (or using a little more olive oil, as needed) until cooked to desired doneness, about 15 minutes for medium.

Just before serving, squeeze with lemon juice. Serve with mint pesto.

Per serving: 580 calories; 437 calories from fat; 49 g fat (13 g saturated; 0 g trans fats); 111 mg cholesterol; 4 g carbohydrate; 30 g protein; 2 g fiber; 297 mg sodium.

Spicy ground lamb can be served with rice or pasta or used for the base of a shepherd's pie.

Roger Allen Graefe Sr.

Roger Allen Graefe Sr., 74, of Twin Falls, passed away Monday morning, May 10, 2010, at his home in Twin Falls.

Roger was born Aug. 26, 1935, in Sheboygan, Wis., the son of Jack and Elvera (Giefer) Graefe. Roger was the oldest of four; he was raised and educated in Sheboygan and joined the U.S. Air Force in 1952 and served until honorably discharged in 1960.

Roger married Ann Perry on June 22, 1957. They started their married life in Sheboygan then, in 1962, they moved to Twin Falls, where they spent the rest of their lives together. They raised five wonderful boys.

Roger loved his job as a tractor mechanic, not only the work but the many customers whose tractors he repaired. Music was a great part of his life. He played the bass violin in the high school orchestra; had a polka band, then played with the Magic Valley Symphony and the Dilettantes for many years. A sight to see was five sons, his wife and bass going to a concert in the four-door Studebaker with Roger driving. He directed the St. Edward's Catholic Church choir for 10 years. Roger loved to bowl and golf. He ran the State Bowling Tournament in 1977. He was a member of the Knights of Columbus for 45 years, where he became Idaho State Deputy from 1997 to 1999 and was also a member of the 4th Degree Knights. Roger was also a member of the American Legion and was commander from 2006 to 2008. He loved the many camping trips with his family and the precious time with his grandchildren.

Roger is survived by his wife, Ann of Twin Falls; brothers, Richard (Elinor) Graefe and Leroy (Faye) Graefe; his sister, Janet (Ken) Perleberg; and his sons, Roger (Linda) Graefe, Michael Graefe, Robert (Debra) Graefe and Paul (Stephanie) Graefe; also his grandchildren, Allen, Alisha, Jordan, J.T., Kaytlyn, Dilyn and Nicole. Roger was preceded in death by his parents; and his son, Peter John Graefe.

A rosary payer service will be recited at 7 p.m. Thursday, May 13, at Reynolds Funeral Chapel, 2466 Addison Ave. E. in Twin Falls, with Deacon Jim Herrett reciting. A funeral Mass will be celebrated at 11 a.m. Friday, May 14, at St. Edward the Confessor Catholic Church, 161 Sixth Ave. E. in Twin Falls, with Father Mike St. Marie celebrating and military honors by the Idaho National Guard and Magic Valley Veterans Association. A viewing for family and friends will take place from 5 p.m. until the time of the rosary Thursday at Reynolds Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls.

The family suggests memorials be given in Roger's name to the Knights of Columbus Vocation Fund or Hospice Visions. Contributions may be given to funeral chapel staff or mailed to Reynolds Funeral Chapel, P.O. Box 1142, Twin Falls, ID 83303.

Donald Richard Sawyer 'Dick'

GONVICK, Minn. — Donald Richard Sawyer of Gonvick, Minn., died peacefully after a long illness Thursday, May 6, 2010, at Clearwater County Memorial Hospital in Bagley, Minn. He was 82 years old.

A funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Friday, May 14, at the Lutheran Church in Gonvick, Minn. A memorial service will be held at noon Saturday, May 15, at the Jerome LDS 2nd Ward Church, 100 S. 50 E.

Donald was born to Rex and Nina Sawyer on May 3, 1928, in Ventura, Calif., while the family was traveling. As a child and during early adulthood, he was referred to as either Richard or Dick. Much later in life, he was commonly known as Donald. His family returned to their farm and home south of Wendell, where he spent his younger years and attended Wendell Elementary School. He later attended Gooding High School.

In high school, he was a football and track star and loved boxing. His senior year, Gooding High School took state track in the medley relay. Dick ran the 440-yard medley leg. He graduated in 1948.

In 1950 while working at a local lumber yard in Wendell, he met and married Larene Thompson from Jerome. Their first child and son, Dennis, was born in 1952. Soon after, they moved to Hawthorne, Nev., where Dick worked as a carpenter for the Naval Ammunition Depot. Two daughters, Diane and LaNae, soon followed.

From 1953 to 1956, he worked in law enforcement with the sheriff's department of Mineral County, Nev. He trained at various police academy workshops organized by the Reno, Nev., FBI team.

In 1958, Dick and Larene leased land from the U.S. Forest Service where they owned and operated Virginia Lakes Pack Station, located high in the Sierra Nevada Mountains. By horseback and pack mules, they guided backcountry trips with the help of their son, Dennis, and young wranglers from the Schurz, Nev., Paiute Indian Reservation. A two-room cabin with a wood cook stove served as home.

Winters were spent in Hawthorne and Schurz, Nev., and Mammoth Lakes, Calif., where Dick continued his law enforcement duties. He earned several commendations for his law enforcement work.

In 1964, Dick and Larene purchased a farm southwest of Jerome and relocated the family back to Idaho in 1965.

In 1967, Larene became ill and died in March of 1969. After Larene's death, Dick continued farming and ranching between Jerome and Dietrich. During this time period, he met and married Ruth Brogdon.

In 1973, he sold all of the Idaho property and relocated to northwestern Minnesota. He farmed near Trail, Minn., then in 1979, he opened a NAPA parts store in Gonvick, Minn. His wife, Ruth, died in 1982. He met and married Darlene Clemenson at Gonvick in 1983.

In 1986, he began trucking and hauling grain. Later, he trucked for the North Star Lines. He retired in 2002.

During early adulthood, Dick spent endless hours roping wild mustangs in Nevada. Later after moving to Minnesota, he was passionate about boat fishing on Lake of the Woods. His entire life, he enjoyed big game hunting in remote areas of Idaho and Nevada.

Dick is survived by his wife, Darlene; children, Dr. Dennis (Karen) of Jerome, Diane (Jim) Meeks of Jerome, and LaNae (Roy) Davis of Pocatello; stepchildren, Frances, Elaine and Norman Brogdon, James (Stephanie) Clemenson and Lori Clemenson, both of Minneapolis, Minn.; nine grandchildren; and eight great-grandchildren. Lester was born Oct. 29, 1910, in Bates County, Mo., the son of John and Sarah C. Duggan. He completed his schooling with an eighth-grade diploma. Glenn Schutte

GOODING — Glenn Schutte was born March 31, 1957, in Gooding, Idaho, to Edmund and Hazel Schutte. He joined those he missed so much on Sunday May 9, 2010.

He was preceded in death by his father, Edmund Schutte; mother, Hazel Schutte Mays; stepfather, Harold Mays; and a special friend and one he considered his daughter, Erin Holloway. Survivors include his sister, Kathleen Venters of Meridian; nephew, Allen (Holli) and son, Zachary; niece, Heidi and son, Lucas, all of Boise; special friends who he also considered as sons, Adam and Travis Holloway of Seattle, Wash.; several aunts and uncles and many cousins.

Glenn graduated from Gooding High School in 1975 and attended Boise State University for two years, where he studied photography. He was raised and continued to reside on the same farm northeast of Gooding, where he developed a love for cattle. Glenn started working with registered Angus cattle when his mother inherited half a herd his grandparents had in Kansas. They moved the cattle to Idaho in 1973. Glenn was owner/operator of Black Magic Angus Ranch. He enjoyed attending shows in Reno, Nev., Denver, Colo., and Kentucky. Glenn also was active in the Idaho Angus Association, where he had served as a board member and was the current state president. His operation also included custom farming. He accomplished this while also managing family holdings in Kansas and Oklahoma and farming the home property.

Glenn loved the sport of snowmobiling and has been a member of the Northside Snowriders Snowmobile Club since its inception and had served as president. He currently was on the Camas County Groomer Advisory Committee as a board member and operator. He spent many long nights grooming trails in Fairfield for the benefit of other snowmobilers. Occasionally, a friend would spend the night riding with him in the snow cat which he loved to operate. Glenn also enjoyed the sport of baseball as a spectator and the Colorado Rockies were his team. And finally, possibly one of Glenn's most important accomplishments has been his involvement in and occasional leadership of a Grief Support Group at the Twin Falls Reformed Church. Glenn was very compassionate and caring for others.

Glenn loved to read and was quite a history buff. Glenn had many friends he enjoyed doing a variety of things with, including motor biking, bowling, snowmobiling and socializing. Many of those friends have considered him like a brother. If you had an opportunity to spend any length of time with Glenn, conversation eventually led to talking about faith. Over the past few years, Glenn began spending more time trying to understand his faith by regularly attending church more and sharing time with his Christian friends.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, May 14, at the Gooding Methodist Church, with the Rev. Dave Buechler officiating. Burial will follow at the Eden Trinity Lutheran Cemetery. Viewing for family and friends will be from 4 to 7 p.m. Thursday, May 13, at Demaray Funeral Service, Gooding Chapel.

Memorial contributions can be made to a charity of choice or to the Grief Share Group in Glenn's Memory, in care of the Reformed Church of Twin Falls, 1631 Grandview Drive, Twin Falls, ID 83301.

Armstrong, Blue Cruise returning to Twin Falls

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

Retirement doesn't always mean slowing down.

For 2008 Olympic gold medalist Kristin Armstrong, it's meant a whirlwind of activity to promote healthy lifestyles and activities.

"It's going well. I'm keeping super busy, with lots of different events," Armstrong said, noting her women's cycling academy among the demands heading her list of involvements with the community.

Armstrong will also return to Twin Falls for the second straight year next Friday to kick off the Blue Cross of Idaho Foundation for Health's "Blue Cruise of Idaho" summer initiative.

She and several hundred riders participated in last year's Blue Cruise, which was a hit in the community.

"We had a good time last year," Armstrong said. "It was nice to go and meet new people, ride new roads. I had a lot of fun, and the weather was great. Hopefully we'll have a great time out again."

Riders from all fitness levels can register for the Blue Cruise, which has three different route lengths as part of the event. The shortest, at 15 miles, kicks off at 10:30 a.m., which the other two beginning earlier due to the extra mileage.

The only major difference from last year, Armstrong said, is the route. This year riders will begin and end at O'Leary Middle School. Two of the routes will also be longer this year, according to the official Blue Cruise website. The intermediate and long routes will cover 32 and 64 miles, up from 30 and 50, respectively.

Armstrong said the main focus of the Blue Cruise is cycling, but her goal is to get the word out about healthy living regardless of whether it includes a bicycle.

"Blue Cross of Idaho really wants to encourage people to get out and be active," she said. "This particular event is obviously being out and being active on their bike, but we really just want people to go out and be healthy."

"It's a great community, and we want to encourage people to come out. Hopefully we can get people from all levels of fitness levels out."

The registration cost is $40 per rider, with discounts available for early registration.

BLUE CRUISE OF IDAHO

What: 15, 32, or 64-mile bike ride, lunch and other scheduled events

Where: Beginning and ending at O'Leary Middle School

When: May 22 (start time depends on selected course distance)

Other: Proceeds benefit Twin Falls Parks and Recreation's development of the Canyon Rim Trail system.

Information: www.bluecruiseidaho.com

Forms can be printed out from the Blue Cruise's website.

A lunch event, at which Armstrong will speak on the merits of a healthy lifestyle, will be available after riders complete the course. Non-riders can participate in the lunch event for $7 in advance, or $8 on the day of the event.

Proceeds from the event will go to Twin Falls Parks and Recreation to help develop the Canyon Rim Trail system.

Boston beatdown

Celtics stun Cavs, take 3-2 lead in series

By Tom Withers
Associated Press writer

CLEVELAND — The Boston Celtics pushed the Cleveland Cavaliers dangerously close to an early start to the Summer of LeBron.

Ray Allen scored 25 points, Rajon Rondo scored all of his 16 in the second half and the Celtics, once thought too old to challenge for another title, beat LeBron James and the Cavs 120-88 in Game 5 on Tuesday night to move within one win of knocking the NBA's top team from the playoffs.

Paul Pierce added 21 and Kevin Garnett 18 for the Celtics, who handed the Cavs their worst home playoff loss in history and can end Cleveland's season with a win in Game 6 on Thursday night.

"We cannot come back here," Garnett said. "We have to think this is our Game 7 coming up and we cannot afford to have the best team in the league have a Game 7 on their floor. Just not possible."

James, the league's two-time MVP on the verge of an expected trip into free agency on July 1, had an atrocious game. He scored 15 points on 3-of-14 shooting, a startling outing for the 25-year-old who has been playing with a sprained elbow.

Because of James' uncertain future, Game 5 may have been his last at home for Cleveland and it has set up Game 6 as the most important in franchise history: Win and force Game 7 on Sunday in Cleveland; lose and maybe watch James, the local kid trying to deliver this city its first pro championship since 1964, leave for good.

Rondo, coming off a 29-point, 18-rebound, 13-assist performance in Game 4, was held without a point in the first half as the Cavs concentrated their defense on stopping the point guard from penetrating into the paint. He finally got loose in the third, scoring 12 as the Celtics opened a 21-point lead.

Boston went up by 24 in the fourth, sending battered Cleveland fans toward the exits.

James finally checked out with 3:58 and the Celtics leading by 27. He shrugged his shoulders and slapped hands with Cleveland's coaches and teammate Shaquille O'Neal, who had

NASCAR opens Hall of Fame in Charlotte

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The rumble from a pair of motors interrupted the opening ceremony at the NASCAR Hall of Fame.

Nobody seemed to mind, though, when Richard Petty pulled his 1974 Dodge Charger onto the ceremonial plaza, with Junior Johnson trailing in a 1940 Ford. The two members of NASCAR's inaugural Hall of Fame class climbed from the cars they are most associated with to a rousing ovation.

"This is the greatest thing that's ever happened to me," Johnson said of being part of the first induction class.

Started in 1948, the National Association of Stock Car Racing finally opened its Hall of Fame on Tuesday with a star-studded ceremony.

North Carolina governor Beverly Perdue joined Charlotte area dignitaries and representatives of NASCAR's past and present on a stage outside the Hall for the hour-long opening ceremony. After Johnson and Petty's arrival — Petty in a replica of his No. 43 STP Dodge, and Johnson in a No. 3 Ford that read "Carolina Moonshine" — several past champions scanned their entrance cards to officially open the doors.

"If you're going to be a top-five sports league in this country, you need to have a world-class Hall of Fame," said NASCAR chairman Brian France. "It's going to be a place where our fans can come and celebrate and look back at the history of the sport. We haven't really had that in a formal way all these years, and this is going to change that overnight."

The city spent $195 million on the project and is touting it as the biggest and most technologically advanced Hall of Fame in professional sports. The 150,000-square-foot building is a shrine of memorabilia, exhibits that recreate old-time NASCAR lore, 154 video screens, racing simulators and interactive activities.

NASCAR team owner Rick Hendrick, who helped the city of Charlotte with its winning bid for the rights to the Hall of Fame in 2006, spoke at Tuesday's ceremony and was one of the first visitors to tour the facility after the doors opened.

"I just think if you don't hold on to history in anything, that it doesn't mean much," Hendrick said. "The fact that we can showcase our history in such a great setting is going to pay us huge dividends down the road because new fans ought to know about Junior Johnson and they ought to know Buck Baker and those kind of guys. And they ought to be able to see the old cars."

"I think a fan walks away knowing we care about our past and our history. To me, that's what's important — that our history, our roots and our heritage is important. It's not all just about today."

The inaugural class, elected by 50 voters last year, is: NASCAR founder Bill France Sr., longtime chairman Bill France Jr., seven-time champion Dale Earnhardt, Johnson and Petty. The induction ceremony is May 23.

Petty believes the timing is perfect for NASCAR to start its Hall of Fame.

"You've got to figure to have a Hall of Fame, you've got to have some history," he said. "NASCAR is just 60 years old, so it took them a while to accomplish history. If they had one 25 years ago, they wouldn't have had a lot of stuff to put in it."

Lee dazzles to earn first M's win

BALTIMORE — Cliff Lee allowed one run in 7 1-3 innings to earn his first win with Seattle, and the Mariners beat the Baltimore Orioles 5-1 on Tuesday night in a matchup of last-place teams.

Ryan Langerhans homered for the Mariners, who have won two straight following an eight-game skid. Seattle is 4-0 against Baltimore and 9-19 against everyone else.

Lee (1-1) allowed eight hits, struck out two and walked none. After the left-hander gave up two consecutive singles in the eighth, Brandon League got Miguel Tejada to hit into a double play.

League also pitched the ninth to earn his first save.

Lee, the 2008 AL Cy Young Award winner, was making his third start with the Mariners since coming off the disabled list after an abdominal strain.

RED SOX 6, BLUE JAYS 1

BOSTON — Daisuke Matsuzaka allowed three hits in seven innings and the Red Sox capitalized on more wildness by Blue Jays pitchers.

Matsuzaka struck out nine and allowed just three runners on a single and double by John

Buck and a double by Fred Lewis. He walked none, while four Toronto pitchers issued eight bases on balls one night after the Red Sox drew seven walks in a 7-6 win.

WHITE SOX 5, TWINS 2

MINNEAPOLIS — The White Sox put together their biggest inning of the season in the fifth and Jenks rebounded for the save in a victory over the Twins.

INDIANS 8, ROYALS 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Russell Branyan homered twice and Jake Westbrook pitched six innings for his first win in two years, lifting the Indians to a victory over the backpedaling Royals.

ATHLETICS 7, RANGERS 6, 13 INNINGS

ARLINGTON, Texas — Daric Barton hit a two-out RBI single in the 13th inning after homering in the 11th, and Oakland won the opener of a three-game series between the AL West's top teams.

Catcher Landon Powell drew a walk against Dustin Nippert (1-3) to start the Oakland 13th, then swiped second for his first career steal. He scored when Barton's hard grounder short-hopped off second baseman Ian Kinsler's glove and into right field.

NATIONAL LEAGUE
REDS 9, PIRATES 0

PITTSBURGH — Johnny Cueto pitched a one-hitter for his first major league complete game, allowing only a third-inning single that went off shortstop Paul Janish's glove, and Cincinnati got its fourth consecutive win.

The Pirates' only hit was by Ronny Cedenio — and it nearly wasn't one. Janish managed to deflect Cedenio's one-out grounder into left field, barely missing making the play.

Chris Heisey backed up Cueto's superbly pitched game with his first three major league hits, including a pair of singles and a two-run homer in the eighth against Jeff Karstens.

METS 8, NATIONALS 6

NEW YORK — Pinch-hitter Chris Carter, just called up from the minors, delivered a tiebreaking double in his first at-bat for the Mets and New York scored six runs in the eighth inning.

MARLINS 3, CUBS 2

CHICAGO — Ricky Nolasco pitched seven sharp innings, and Cody Ross and Gaby Sanchez homered for Florida.

Nolasco (3-2), a former Cubs farmhand, allowed one run and five hits. Leo Nunez pitched a perfect ninth for his seventh save in nine opportunities.

ASTROS 6, CARDINALS 3

ST. LOUIS — Brett Myers worked six strong innings and pinch-hitters Cory Sullivan and Humberto Quintero had consecutive RBI singles in Houston's four-run seventh.

St. Louis starter Brad Penny (3-3) allowed four hits in seven innings with all four runs unearned after shortstop Brendan Ryan bounced a throw to first for an error on Carlos Lee's one-out grounder.

BRAVES 11, BREWERS 3

MILWAUKEE — Tim Hudson kept pitching his way out of trouble and came inches shy of hitting a home run himself.

Troy Glaus went deep for the second straight night for the Braves, who will go for a three-game sweep of the Brewers on Wednesday afternoon. Eric Hinske doubled twice and drove in three runs.

Blackhawks thrash Vancouver to reach West finals

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — Troy Brouwer and Kris Versteeg scored 36 seconds apart early in the second period, and the Chicago Blackhawks eliminated the Vancouver Canucks in Game 6 of the Western Conference semifinals for the second straight year with a 5-1 win on Tuesday night.

Dave Bolland scored on a short-handed breakaway with 45 seconds left in the second, and Patrick Kane and Dustin Byfuglien added breakaway goals 35 seconds apart in the third to send Chicago back to the Western Conference finals.

The second-seeded Blackhawks will face the West's top-seeded team, the San Jose Sharks, with a trip to the Stanley Cup finals on the line.

Antti Niemi made 29 saves for the Blackhawks, who won all three games in Vancouver in the series.

Shane O'Brien scored 3:44 into the third period, and Roberto Luongo finished with 30 saves for the Canucks, who were knocked out in the second round for the third time in four years. Vancouver hasn't advanced past the second round since 1994 when the Canucks reached the Stanley Cup finals.

Celtics

21 points.

Before the game, Celtics coach Doc Rivers said his team would not change its strategy.

"We are who we are," Rivers said. "We don't need anyone to play hero basketball. We have to be a team. We're good when we're a team."

And through five games, the Celtics have been the better one. Because of injuries, Boston, two years removed from its 17th NBA championship, never found its groove in the regular season.

The Celtics got it now.

They've outperformed the top-seeded Cavs in almost every aspect of the game, outrunning and outthrusting a younger team that with the addition of O'Neal, Antawn Jamison and Anthony Parker, was built for the postseason but has yet to show it's serious about winning a title.

Allen opened the second half with back-to-back 3s, pushing Boston's six-point half-time lead to 12 and deflating already nervous Cleveland fans, who have seen so many of their teams choke in pressure situations before.

In the first half, the Cavs did a brilliant job on Rondo, who didn't score his first points until the 9:47 mark of the third quarter. But by then, the Celtics had opened their double-digit lead and with James misfiring from the outside, Cleveland was in big trouble.

James missed his first seven shots before he got loose on a leak-out dunk with 6:15 left in the third.

Rivers described the first four games of this our-turn-your-turn series as "rhythm-less." That characterized much of the first half, as defense prevailed and both teams struggled to find good looks.

The Cavs led 29-21 when, with Rondo on the bench, Boston's Big Three of Allen, Garnett and Pierce did all the scoring in a 16-0 run that put the Celtics ahead by eight, sending a chill through the arena as Cleveland fans pondered the thought of facing a season-saving Game 6 in Boston.

James shifted into attack mode and got to the free-throw line four times in the final 3:51 as the Cavs pulled within 50-44 at half-time.

Moth-munching bird finds perch at Twins ballpark

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — There is more than one way to catch flies at the Minnesota Twins' new ballpark.

During a game at Target Field last week, a bird of prey was spotted sitting atop the right field fowl — er, foul — pole. With a steady rain falling and the Twins being shut out by Baltimore, the bird drew plenty of attention as it swooped through the air, snaring insects lured by the bright stadium lights.

When its acrobatic acts were shown on the video scoreboard, the crowd went crazy. One close-up shot featured the bird eating a large moth clutched in its talons.

There's even a Twitter account with the username TargetFieldHawk and the name Kirby the Kestrel. One post says: "I know I'm technically the 'smallest' falcon, but I'm a Minneapolis moth's biggest nightmare."

Julia Ponder, the executive director of The Raptor Center at the University of Minnesota, said the bird is a male American Kestrel. The kestrel is indeed the smallest falcon species in North America, and similar in size to a robin. It preys on insects, small rodents and small birds.

There's a wooded area not far to the west of the ballpark, a possible home for the bird.

The ballpark insects are easy pickings at night and the bird didn't seem bothered by the activity and noise at Target Field.

"To me it's a little surprising the kestrel is hunting amid all of that," Ponder said. "Even when the crowd was cheering, it didn't seem to impact the kestrel at all. It just seemed to keep doing its thing."

The Twins, who are playing their first season at Target Field after three decades inside the Metrodome, earlier discovered some red-tailed hawks nesting in the scoreboard. The kestrel was a new addition to the in-game entertainment.

"He obviously found a good hunting ground," executive vice president for public affairs Kevin Smith said.

Cable network Fox Sports North has aired the footage often since the kestrel was caught on camera, with broadcasters Dick Bremer and Bert Blyleven analyzing the action. Several fans have e-mailed the station asking about it, said communications manager Becky Ross, and FSN is considering options for future promotion.

Ponder said the bird was spotted again at the ballpark over the weekend.

"I hope he continues to put on a show," she said.

Jazz looking to lottery after playoff elimination

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — The Utah Jazz have a week before they can really start plotting their future.

The Jazz's season ended Monday night with a loss to the Los Angeles Lakers, who swept Utah out of the second round of the NBA playoffs.

The disappointment of being swept was still apparent as the players reported less than 12 hours after the season ended to clean out their lockers and meet with team officials.

"It's not fun to walk away from a series when you've just been zapped four-zip," coach Jerry Sloan said. "I don't care who you are. In this business, if you accept that then I'd like to play against you."

The Jazz know there are some changes likely to come, but won't know until after next week's draft lottery what direction the team will take. Two-time All-Star forward Carlos Boozer will be an unrestricted free agent and Utah may not be able to afford to re-sign him.

General manager Kevin O'Connor said that the planning will really begin after next Tuesday's NBA draft lottery. Utah holds the New York Knicks' pick in the first round of the NBA draft. If the current order holds, the Jazz would be picking ninth in the draft.

If the Jazz get a lucky bounce, they could pick higher. Once the Jazz know where they're picking, then O'Connor said they can take a closer look at free agents — including Boozer.

"The first move we'll see on the 18th is where we wind up in the draft," O'Connor said.

Shooting guard Kyle Korver is also headed for free agency. Both he and Boozer opted last summer to play out the final year of their contracts.

Utah's last three trips to the playoffs have ended with losses to the Lakers. The series has gotten shorter by one game each year and the frustration showed in All-Star point guard Deron

"Every team is going to have some bumps along the road. As long as you limit those and don't allow them to become mountains, then you'll be all right."

— Deron Williams, All-Star point guard for the Utah Jazz

Williams' postgame comment about Utah needing to make some changes to improve.

The Jazz have been good, but not Lakers-good.

"I was just saying I think we want to compete for the title, we have to add pieces. I see teams doing deals year after year and we stay the same. And we get the same results," Williams said Tuesday. "It wasn't a threat or anything like that. It was me being honest. If we want to compete for a title we need to make some moves."

What moves? Williams didn't have specifics. He was obviously frustrated after another loss to the Lakers and acknowledged the Jazz are still a young team that did get better in some areas.

"We fought through some things that have plagued us in the past. So I think we improved in those areas a lot," Williams said. "Every team is going to have some bumps along the road. As long as you limit those and don't allow them to become mountains, then you'll be all right"

Boozer said he hadn't talked to his agent yet about the future. In order to return to Utah, he would probably have to take a pay cut and he's not likely to do that after averaging 19.5 points and more than 11 rebounds.

The Jazz signed Paul Millsap to a four-year, $32 million contract last summer. Millsap and Boozer were a strong combination at power forward, but an expensive one.

Utah also has a restricted free agent in rookie Wesley Matthews, who started the season as an undrafted free agent who was invited to training camp. He ended up making the team, played in every game and was a starter by mid-February.

Clint Dempsey focused on Europa final, not landmarks

HAMBURG (AP) — Clint Dempsey prefers to talk about the goal that turned Fulham's season around than the possibility of becoming the first American to play in a European club soccer final.

After an up-and-down season that included a two-month injury layoff and one of the most celebrated goals in Fulham's 131-year history, Dempsey is fully fit and in line to appear in today's Europa League final against Atletico Madrid.

But the 27-year-old midfielder and forward from Nacogdoches, Texas, is concentrating only about the game, not becoming an American soccer landmark.

"I don't really think about it like that," Dempsey said. "It's just a chance for me to be in a final. In my career I've been fortunate enough to be in some finals, but I don't think about being the first because I'm not going to be the last. I think there's going to be more players."

"There's always records to be broken, so I'm not thinking about it like that."

German-born Americans Thomas Dooley and David Wagner were on the bench for Schalke's two-legged win over Inter Milan in the 1997 UEFA Cup final. Dooley dressed for the first match and Wagner for the second. Neither got in.

Dempsey returned from a right knee injury in March to come on as a substitute in the third round, second leg against Juventus, scoring on a spectacular 82nd-minute

Fulham midfielder Clint Dempsey, right, defends Arsenal winger Theo Walcott during their game Sunday in London. Dempsey, who will represent the United States at next month's World Cup, has a chance to become the first American to play in a European club final when Fulham play Atletico Madrid in today's Europa League final.

chip that advanced his team.

It was the turning point in the west London club's European season, clinching a 5-4 aggregate win with an unlikely 4-1 victory and giving the players belief that they could go all the way to the final.

"The personal high point so far (this season) has to get back from injury and get into the Juventus game and score the goal that put us into the next round," Dempsey said. "I was hoping I would get the chance to go in and make the difference and I was lucky enough to get the goal."

But it wasn't his favorite goal of his career.

"It was the second most important goal I've scored, the first one being in the World Cup against Ghana," Dempsey said. "Scoring in a World Cup is a dream come true and I don't think anything would ever be able to top that."

And Dempsey, a 200-1 outsider to be the leading scorer at this year's World Cup, said that will remain the case even if he scores at the June 11-July 11 tournament in South Africa.

The United States starts practice Monday in Princeton, N.J., and opens the World Cup against England on June 12 before playing Slovenia and Algeria. Dempsey, selected Tuesday for the U.S. 30-man roster, has 17 goals in 60 international appearances.

"There's the first time doing it," Dempsey said. "If you do it again, yeah it's awesome, but the first time is always special."

Davies left off U.S. World Cup training camp roster

NEW YORK (AP) — Charlie Davies, the forward who was convinced he could recover from a shattering car crash in time for the World Cup, fell short of making the 30-man preliminary U.S. roster for the tournament.

While Tuesday's announcement of the players invited to training camp was tough for him, it was a day of unexpected highs for Edson Buddle and Herculez Gomez, a pair of veteran forwards selected for the team.

At the start of the year, they were such afterthoughts they weren't even listed in the 2010 U.S. media guide.

The same for Alejandro Bedoya, a 23-year-old midfielder who didn't make his international debut until January.

"It's kind of like a dream," Gomez said in a telephone interview with The Associated Press. "I'll leave Saturday. I really don't know what to expect."

Still, they haven't quite made the World Cup just yet. U.S. coach Bob Bradley said the team must cut seven players to reach the 23-man limit by June 1, the day the team arrives in South Africa.

Davies was badly hurt in an Oct. 13 accident in Virginia, when he broke curfew ahead of the final U.S. World Cup qualifier. Originally forecast to be out a year, he has made it back to training with his French club Sochaux but has yet to play in any games.

While teammates and fans were pulling for the popular 23-year-old, U.S. coach Bob Bradley said Sochaux would not give Davies medical clearance to report to the national team.

Gomez, a forward who completed his season last month with Puebla, had given up hope on World Cup selection when he didn't hear anything Monday. The 28-year-old from Las Vegas scored 10 goals this year, becoming the first American to tie for the Mexican scoring lead, but made just two appearances for the national team, in the Copa America, that three years ago.

Buddle, also 28, leads Major League Soccer with nine goals for the Los Angeles Galaxy. Named after Pele — Edson Arantes do Nascimento — Buddle's only national team appearance was seven years ago, for 11 minutes in an exhibition against Venezuela.

"Nothing happens before the time," Buddle said after Galaxy practice. "Maybe it's my time to show what I can do."

The U.S. team starts practicing Monday in Princeton, N.J., where Bradley once coached, and has exhibitions against the Czech Republic on May 25 in East Hartford, Conn., and Turkey four days later in Philadelphia.

After arriving in South Africa, the U.S. has an exhibition against Australia on June 5. The Americans, trying to rebound from their first-round elimination four years ago, open with their first competitive match against England since the 1-0 U.S. upset win at the 1950 World Cup. The United States closes the first round against Slovenia on June 18 and against Algeria on June 23.

- The roster:
- Goalkeepers: Brad Guzan (Aston Villa, England), Marcus Hahnemann (Wolverhampton, England), Tim Howard (Everton, England).
- Defenders: Carlos Bocanegra (Rennes, France), Jonathan Bornstein (Chivas USA), Steve Cherundolo (Hannover, Germany), Jay DeMerit (Watford, England), Clarence Goodson (IK Start, Norway), Chad Marshall (Columbus), Oguchi Onyewu (AC Milan, Italy), Heath Pearce (Dallas), Jonathan Spector (West Ham, England).
- Midfielders: DaMarcus Beasley (Rangers, Scotland), Alejandro Bedoya (Orebro, Sweden), Michael Bradley (Borussia Moenchengladbach, Germany), Ricardo Clark (Eintracht Frankfurt, Germany), Clint Dempsey (Fulham, England), Landon Donovan (Los Angeles), Maurice Edu (Glasgow Rangers, Scotland), Benny Feilhaber (AGF Aarhus, Denmark), Stuart Holden (Bolton, England), Sacha Kljestan (Chivas USA), Robbie Rogers (Columbus), Jose Torres (Pachuca, Mexico).
- Forwards: Jozy Altidore (Villarreal, Spain), Edson Buddle (Los Angeles), Brian Ching (Houston), Robbie Findley (Salt Lake), Herculez Gomez (Puebla, Mexico), Eddie Johnson (Aris, Greece).

Haney spares himself (and Tiger) lots of innuendo

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — For all the criticism Hank Haney has faced over six years and six major championships working with Tiger Woods, his latest move deserves nothing but praise.

Haney resigned as his swing coach Monday night, and the timing could not have been better.

"I know Tiger Woods will be successful in the future no matter who helps him," Haney said on his website. "He is an incredible athlete with an incredible work ethic."

Haney informed his star client through a text message. He said Woods was with his two children when they exchanged messages, and they would talk more on Tuesday.

Speculation of a split began at Quail Hollow. Despite what Woods said about Haney at The Players Championship — "I'm still working with him, yeah" — it became clear last week from those close to the world's No. 1 player that change was imminent. And even though Haney said he had just been paid for the next quarter, he knew it was coming, too.

The only question was how long it would take.

While the timing looks bad — Woods is at his lowest personally and professionally — Haney did not walk out on him. What he did was spare Woods from having to spin tales about their relationship for the next however many months. He also spared the media and the public from having to listen to it and speculate about it.

That's how it was with Butch Harmon. Woods began the process of leaving Harmon in the summer of 2002. In effect, they were done at the PGA Championship when Woods told him at Hazeltine he was going on his own. Yet he continued to mention Harmon as his coach through the following summer, and Woods never confirmed he was working with Haney until nine months after they officially started.

Stepping aside was a gracious move by Haney.

Where does Woods go now?

The idea always has been for him to own his swing, although every player can use an extra set of eyes. To the casual fan, a logical move is for Woods to return to Harmon. That's not going to happen. While their relationship is good — they chatted on the back end of the range last week as Harmon worked with Dustin Johnson — there has been too much criticism of each other over the years. Besides, Harmon's star pupil is Phil Mickelson, who is trying to replace Woods at No. 1.

Haney never got his due, and probably never will.

He could not escape the shadow of 2000, when the swing that Woods rebuilt with Harmon produced 10 victories in 22 starts and perhaps the greatest summer in golf. Not only does that include three straight majors, two of them — the U.S. Open at Pebble Beach and the British Open at St. Andrews — were by a combined 23 shots. Woods never looked more dominant.

But how can anyone ignore what Woods achieved from 2006, when his changes with Haney had taken full affect?

Woods played 62 official tournaments worldwide — he missed eight months with reconstructive knee surgery — and won 28 times, which is an absurd 45 percent rate of winning. Woods won or was runner-up 61 percent of the time.

DEAR ABBY: Years ago you published your recipe for Abby's Famous Pecan Pie. I cut it out and made it often because it was the best pecan pie I ever tasted.

Somehow I have misplaced my recipe. I have come across other ones, but IF MAY 12 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Get pumped up and explore your need for physical outlets and leadership skills in this year ahead. Put a new exercise regime into place during July when you will be at your best and able to shine at all executive endeavors. All your irons in all those fires can be put to good use late June and the first half of July when you can successfully initiate important plans that greatly improve your future prospects. Wait until November to take a luxurious vacation and return to business in December with excellent ideas for money-making activities.

HOROSCOPE

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Others may be happy to let you take the lead. Your enthusiasm and optimism break the ice on many social and business levels, but someone could misinterpret your words. Be crystal clear about key terms.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Meet challenges with composure. You may be surprised to find you excel at activities you never dared to try before. An unexpected visitor might drop by so be prepared to share a meal or some time.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You are as sly as a fox and savvy with business affairs. You can pick up the scent of confidential information and put it to good use to improve the future. Someone might give you a valuable business tip.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Water tends to seek its own level. If you are in touch with your most significant ambitions you will naturally gravitate towards other people who can help you move further along on the road to success.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Dance to the drama. Your heart might beat a bit faster when you are in the presence of a certain attractive someone. You might hope that this is the "one" but only time will prove you right.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You will be left far behind when the starting gun goes off if you simply keep plodding along. Pay attention to what others have to say, as it might inspire you to tackle your work with a new perspective.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Someone could find you highly attractive and desirable, so this isn't a time to argue with your destiny. A new heartthrob might enter the picture. Get rolling if you are in the mood for a fabulous fling.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Read the headlines. It is in your best interests to on top of the latest news and data, as well as the local gossip. Let others know how you feel and you may be surprised by a change in behavior.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Meet a mentor with a Mensa mentality. Hook up with someone who is not only shrewd and intelligent, but has a passion to succeed and a little of that talent for business success may rub off.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Sometimes a fat bank balance and lovely possessions answer your needs, but emotional trust and nurturing could be the real aim. Concentrate on developing worthy goals and dependable friendships.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Spells may be spun. You may meet someone who makes you think of white picket fences and two dogs in the yard. The romantic daydream that is building now however could be just an illusion.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Love has a hold on you. You might be making plans for a romantic weekend escape, but your expectations could be a bit too high. Remember to figure in extra cash for unexpected contingencies.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"He ventured neck or nothing — heaven's success Found, or earth's failure." — Robert Browning

In today's deal from the 1999 Cavendish, from which all this week's deals are taken, the defenders added insult to injury.

It is bad enough to stay low and miss a cold game, but when your opponents beat you in the "safe" partscore you have reached, it rubs salt into the wound. After Peter Weichsel's natural but limited opening of two clubs, Paul Chemla (North) did not have enough to overcall in diamonds. When Christian Mari (South) reopened with two hearts rather than a double, Chemla decided not to explore for the no-trump game, a contract where nine tricks would have been straightforward. Instead, he settled for what he thought was a safe partscore in hearts.

Weichsel led the club ace, an incisive shot, then carefully played the club seven for Alan Sontag to ruff. In situations of this sort, the size of the spot-card West leads should tell East what to play next. Sontag now found the fine move of underleading the diamond ace. (Weichsel's middle club clearly indicated that he had no preference between the pointed suits; hence, he was likely to have both kings.)

Weichsel won his diamond king, then led a high club, giving Sontag a second ruff. At this point, Sontag led the spade two to ensure one down, setting up the defense's spade trick before declarer could establish the diamonds for discards.

Accordingly, declarer had to lose three clubs tricks, two diamonds and one spade, for down one.

ANSWER: Your partner had a forcing cue-bid available (a two-heart bid). Two spades was therefore natural, showing a good hand. You now have more than enough to jump to four spades. If your partner foolishly meant the spade bid as artificial, no doubt he will have diamond support and can revert to five diamonds.
