Life's survivors

Cancer survivor Stacey Hastings, 51, left, embraces her aunt Shirley Gorrell, 80, a 38-year-survivor of ovarian cancer, at the beginning of the survivor's lap during this year's Relay for Life at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds. The women were joined by relatives Melissa Neiers, 53, and Loah Allred, 76, at right. Each has suffered cancer. Over the past two years Allred, who was also celebrating her 76th birthday on Friday, has received two stem cell transplants for multiple myeloma, a type of blood cancer. 'We're survivors,' said Allred before the walk.

FILER — They came to walk, they came to help, and they came to remember.

More than 89 teams from across the Magic Valley — comprised of everything from business co-workers to individual families — gathered to walk or run laps at the Twin Falls County Fairgrounds in Filer for the annual Twin Falls Relay For Life, a fundraiser for the American Cancer Society.

Silent auctions, games and food booths were set up as a way to raise funds for the event. Each team had their own designated booth and were encouraged to follow this year's theme of "Toon Out Cancer" by decorating their booths with cartoon characters.

Katrina Alires, of Twin Falls, chases her 1-year-old daughter, Avri, Friday during the survivors' lap at Relay for Life. Alires had breast cancer when she was 25 years old. After her annual exam in February, doctors told her she'll need to undergo a double mastectomy. She'll have the operation in a few weeks in Boise.

"Our goal is to raise $250,000," said Relay for Life Chairman Justin Ash. "With the weather I expect us to have a good turnout. People can have a good time and eat good food."

The event took off from the starting blocks as survivors wearing purple shirts walked the field in a survivor lap. Survivors were invited to participate in the event to celebrate their winning battle against cancer.

Two seek GOP's nod in T.F. assessor race

A former professional appraiser has challenged longtime Twin Falls County Assessor Gerry Bowden for his job this spring.

George Haney III, 64, has questioned some of Bowden's assessments in recent years and said he wants to create a more open office that runs on a leaner budget. In turn, Bowden, 61, has pointed to efforts he's making to modernize the office and his experience as reasons why voters should re-elect him.

primary. No one else is seeking the job, which currently pays $63,710 a year.

Bowden has served as assessor since he was first elected in 1994 to replace retiring Assessor Dorothy Hamby. Before that, he spent another 15 years in the county's appraisal office.

Familiar by now with all his office's operations, he said he enjoys the work, which entails appraising nearly 40,000 parcels once every five years. He follows market values, but noted they usually end up being a year behind under the state-mandated process — 2010 assessments, for example, come from sales data for October 2008 to September 2009. Bowden does not set taxes, he said; he simply provides the property valuations that taxing districts use.

Bowden said he'd like to continue efforts to modernize his office, which has switched to a computer-assisted mass appraisal system and will one day go paperless.

He's proud of the job he and his staff do — the Idaho Tax Commission, which reviews the county's values and forces changes if they're

CSI graduates set out to tackle new challenges

Though the past is unchangeable, the future and its decisions still remain ahead.

That was the message a fresh crop of College of Southern Idaho graduates heard on Friday at their graduation ceremony in the college's packed gymnaum. About 300 students accepted diplomas at the ceremony, part of a larger group estimated at nearly 1,000 students getting degrees or certificates.

James Gentry, a history professor at CSI, was the guest speaker. He told the students that he, too, is going through a transition

Round One goes to pelicans in battle for reservoir trout

Predators enlisted to control birds have disappeared

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — The badgers bailed. The skunk skedaddled. The pelicans persevere.

In April, the state Department of Fish and Game put five predators — three badgers, two skunks — on Gull Island in the Blackfoot Reservoir in a bid to keep American white pelicans from nesting there.

The agency blames the big birds for eating too many fish, including sensitive Yellowstone cutthroat trout, as well as stocked hatchery-raised trout coveted by anglers.

But two badgers outfitted with radio collars now appear to have swum to the mainland. There's no sign of the third badger, which had no collar. And only one skunk with a radio collar remains on Gull Island. The other has disappeared.

Mark Gamblin, Fish and Game's regional supervisor for southeastern Idaho, concedes enlisting skunks and badgers to control pelicans has been a bit of a disappointment, at least so far.

"This is exactly what adaptive management is: You try something, you learn something from it and decide what the best approach to take is," Gamblin said.

Pelicans in two colonies in southeastern Idaho, one on the Blackfoot Reservoir and the other on the Snake River's Lake Walcott, have tripled to about 7,000 birds since 2002. Idaho wants to reduce the flock to 700 birds at the Blackfoot Reservoir and 2,100 at Lake Walcott by 2013.

month since I beat cancer,” said Linda VanVooren. “This is a good cause to find a cure for cancer. Last year I (raised) over $1,000 for the relay.”

“Participating is saying that there is hope,” said Karen Stuart, who won her battle with cancer. “Someday I hope they find a cure for cancer. Without events like this relay, we would not have the funds to do so. It is so important to raise money so all of us can continue to have birthdays. That is what this event is all about.”

Wilford Allison of from Jerome has fought two battles with cancer. In 2000 he was diagnosed with melanoma and in 2008 he was diagnosed with neuroendocrine cancer. According to Allison, the event gives a little hope to those dealing with cancer.

“There is a lot of camaraderie with all of the survivors,” said Allison. “The big things are the publicity, and people can see what a whole bunch of us are up against.”

Following the survivor lap, teams took to the track for the overnight relay, which wraps up at noon today. Each team will keep at least one team member on the track through the event's duration.

“This will give us great memories,” said Buhl resident Trevor Webb. “My team is Trev's Welding. My mom had breast cancer. This is a way to honor her and find a way to beat cancer.”

Friday's event included a luminary ceremony, a somber reminder of those lost to cancer during the otherwise spirited event.

“This gives people new hope,” Ash said. “It will show them that cancer can be beat.”

in life because he is retiring.

“History is like a sparkler,” Gentry told attentive students donned in graduation gowns and caps.

A burning sparkler – with the past behind it and the future ahead – represents history and life, Gentry said, with the burning part symbolizing the present.

“We make decisions every day based on our understanding of the past,” Gentry said.

For the students, their futures vary as widely as their degrees. Some are furthering their education, while others are ready to begin their careers.

Lyndi Adams of Hagerman and Stacey D'Ambra of Twin Falls, for example, both graduated with associate's degrees in criminal justice. They're both planning to take Boise State University courses in criminal justice.

“When I woke up this morning, it was like, ‘Wow, everything's changing today,’” said Adams, who plans to be a probation officer.

Scott Butler of Jerome, who earned an associate's degree, is planning to start a job right away as a paramedic.

He said he's enjoyed going to college close to home, but is ready to start working in his chosen field.

“I like the adrenaline,” he said. “I like helping people.”

out of a certain range, has had no recent complaints, he said. And he believes he's created an open, helpful office, reappraising sites if property owners ask him to.

“We are taxpayer-friendly,” he said.

Haney disagrees. Based on both personal experiences and input from others, he believes the office could be more open to the general public, and that the assessor needs to be more accessible.

A longtime real-estate appraiser and member of the Twin Falls County Republican Central Committee, Haney said he's running in part because he needs “to spend some time serving the public.” But he also said he sees problems with Bowden's work, including assessments allegedly outside the tax commission's limits and people with questions about their valuations being referred to the appraiser that did the work, not the assessor.

He's also concerned about Bowden's budget, which increased from $810,000 in 2001 to $1.48 million this year. That's a growth rate much higher than the population growth of the county, Haney said.

“They are wasting their resources somewhere and it needs to be answered for,” Haney said.

While Haney said his three decades as a real-estate appraiser show he has the experience for the job, his license was revoked last year by the Idaho Real Estate Appraiser Board, which also ordered him to pay more than $12,000 in state attorney fees and costs.

The board's findings state that three Haney appraisals dating back to 2003 contained errors and misleading statements, and that there was no proof for one that Haney even inspected the property. He argues he was railroaded by an unfair and broken state process, and that the board ignored his defense. That a real-estate license is not needed to be an assessor.

Bowden stands by his budget management and said the office's increase was likely largely due to hiring more employees and a county-wide effort to bring wages up to par. He said he's required to follow state rules for the assessment process and that he asks office visitors to first speak to the appraiser that handled their land because that appraiser knows the site better.

“Anybody can walk in then and talk to me,” Bowden said.

Haney's unconvinced, however, and doesn't buy Bowden's references to the tax commission when asked about rising assessments.

“I don't want to be a county assessor for the state tax commission,” Haney said. “I want to be a county assessor for the people of Twin Falls County.”

Paul hears update on ITD road project

Department plans work on five-mile section of Highway 24

By Coreen Hart
Times-News correspondent

PAUL — The Paul City Council heard a number of items on Wednesday, including an update on planned area road construction from the Idaho Transportation Department.

Councilman Garth Baker said aside from ITD's construction on Overland Avenue in Burley and Interstate 84 southeast of Paul, the department is planning work on Idaho Highway 24.

"They're going to do some work starting June 21st on a five-mile section of Highway 24, from Minidoka to Dietrich," Baker said. "From 600 West (Road) they are going to come in five miles. They will redo two miles and then do some work on the other three."

Drivers who use the road to travel between Mini-Cassia and destinations in Lincoln County and the Wood River Valley should prepare for construction-related delays during the project.

In other business, Public Works Director Rich Rau gave an update on progress at the new City Park, saying that grass will soon be seeded, and adding that Tuesday's rain caused flooding in a portion of the park, in which drainage will need to be installed.

Also, City Attorney Kent Fletcher said he has contacted the Idaho Water Resources Board about a proposal to tie all of Paul's water wells together so they can be used as a single system for potable water. He said he hopes an agreement will be signed by the next City Council meeting. Fletcher also said state water call apportionments are currently being set, and the city will soon be required to provide $85,000 to senior water users. He said that shouldn't be a problem, as the city has never used its entire water appropriation.

In other business, the city:

- Heard a request from Cable One that the city draft a new ordinance pertaining to a city lease that expires in October for land occupied by a cable television communications tower.
- Heard a request from AT&T to change equipment

Fletcher suggested the city appoint a committee to review the proposal, and said lease agreements with Cable One and Project Mutual Telephone should be made uniform.

attached to the city's water tower. AT&T requested freedom to make equipment upgrades without amending its contract with the city for space leased on the tower. Fletcher recommended the city expand its 10-day approval period for changes to 30 days, and said AT&T's antenna should not reach more than 120 feet above ground.

- Heard from Councilman Bruce Hossfield that the city's planning and zoning board will seek a replacement for departing member Tony Korsen.

Judge rejects request to halt Bliss lagoon

A 5th District judge ruled Friday against a request to stop work on a new wastewater lagoon system for Bliss.

The ruling from District Judge John Butler is a setback for 13 plaintiffs who had sought a 14-day temporary restraining order for the project's site southeast of the town of about 250 people.

The plaintiffs are county residents who sued Bliss and city officials, alleging the $7 million project's liner will harm groundwater and springs that are used for needs like drinking water and raising fish. The plaintiff's attorney, Paul Arrington, had also argued that it was an immediate threat to Bernard Saul, whose fields come within 200 feet of the lagoon site.

Arrington said Friday that he's disappointed in the ruling but needs to talk with his clients before knowing what their next move will be.

Arrington has previously argued that because Saul contracts to grow sprouting seeds for human consumption, he stands to lose his contract if waste is stored too close to his fields.

The group also has appealed the Idaho Department of Environmental Quality's approval of the site.

"It is true that the plaintiffs have expressed concerns as to whether there was a sufficient analysis of impacts of the WWTF (wastewater treatment facility) on water quality as well as location," Butler wrote in his decision. "However, there is a strong presumption that the City and IDEQ (Idaho Department of Environmental Quality) are acting in the public interest."

The city's attorney, Robert Williams, couldn't be reached Friday. He had previously denied the claims that the project poses immediate damage and pointed out that residents didn't appeal Gooding County's approval of the site last year.

Bliss currently uses two privately owned, unlined lagoons and individual septic tanks for its waste storage needs.

The $7 million project is funded by four different state and federal agencies and federal stimulus money.

Pelicans

In 2009, Fish and Game proposed shooting pelicans and oiling their eggs to keep them from hatching.

That angered some who like the big birds. And the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the federal agency that manages migratory birds under a 1918 law, appeared likely to shoot down Idaho's proposed lethal measures after calling them an "eradication program."

As a result, Gamblin's agency decided to unleash the badgers and skunks.

That the predators bolted isn't exactly a surprise.

A badger's home range is tens or even hundreds of times the size of 6-acre Gull Island. A skunk's range may be 1,200 acres, too.

Both are swimmers.

A radio collar from one of the badgers is currently sending a "mortality signal" from an area that scientists believe is located on the mainland. That means the collar isn't moving. Until it's collected, Gamblin won't know if the animal is dead or has just shed its collar.

"It's a valuable collar, we need to retrieve it," he said.

Biologists who fly the reservoir regularly haven't picked up the signal of two additional collars, meaning the badger and skunk that wore them have likely wandered beyond the one-to-two-mile signal range.

Gamblin said spring snow flurries delayed pelican nesting this year, so the birds are still arriving to lay their eggs.

On Willow Island, a second island in the Blackfoot Reservoir, the state agency has also fenced off about half the pelican nesting habitat. But even that's no guarantee of reducing pelican numbers, because the adult birds might just crowd into nesting habitat that remains.

"It's been effective at preventing nesting activity within the fence," Gamblin said. "We may learn — we don't know yet — that the birds just pack into a tighter area."

Experience counts in Lincoln County races

Lincoln County’s Jerry Nance belongs in the top tier of Idaho county commissioners, along with Tom Faulker of Gooding County, Paul Christensen of Cassia County, Larry Schoen of Blaine County, among others.

So the county’s Republican voters should give him two more years in the courthouse. He gets our endorsement over ambulance company owner Gary Russell and rancher Carol Boudreau.

If Nance is reelected, they’ll be his 24th and 25th years on the job.

Besides providing stability and continuity for a county that’s been through a lot of different commissioners, Nance has been at the center of nearly every successful collaboration with other counties: the Southern Idaho Regional Communications Center, the Southern Idaho Solid Waste District and the Idaho County Risk Management Program.

“We have a sound county,” he said. “My motto is to always remember who you work for, and that is the taxpayers.”

Linda Jones, the county assessor for the past four years and deputy assessor for seven years before that, and Liz Kime, acting county clerk since 2002 and chief deputy clerk for four years previously, also have solid track records. Jones is being challenged by delivery driver Brian Cheney and Kime by county Planning and Zoning Administrator Suzanne McConnell.

Specialized skills and hands-on-experience are hard to come by in a small-county courthouse in Idaho. Lincoln County is lucky to have Nance, Jones and Kime.

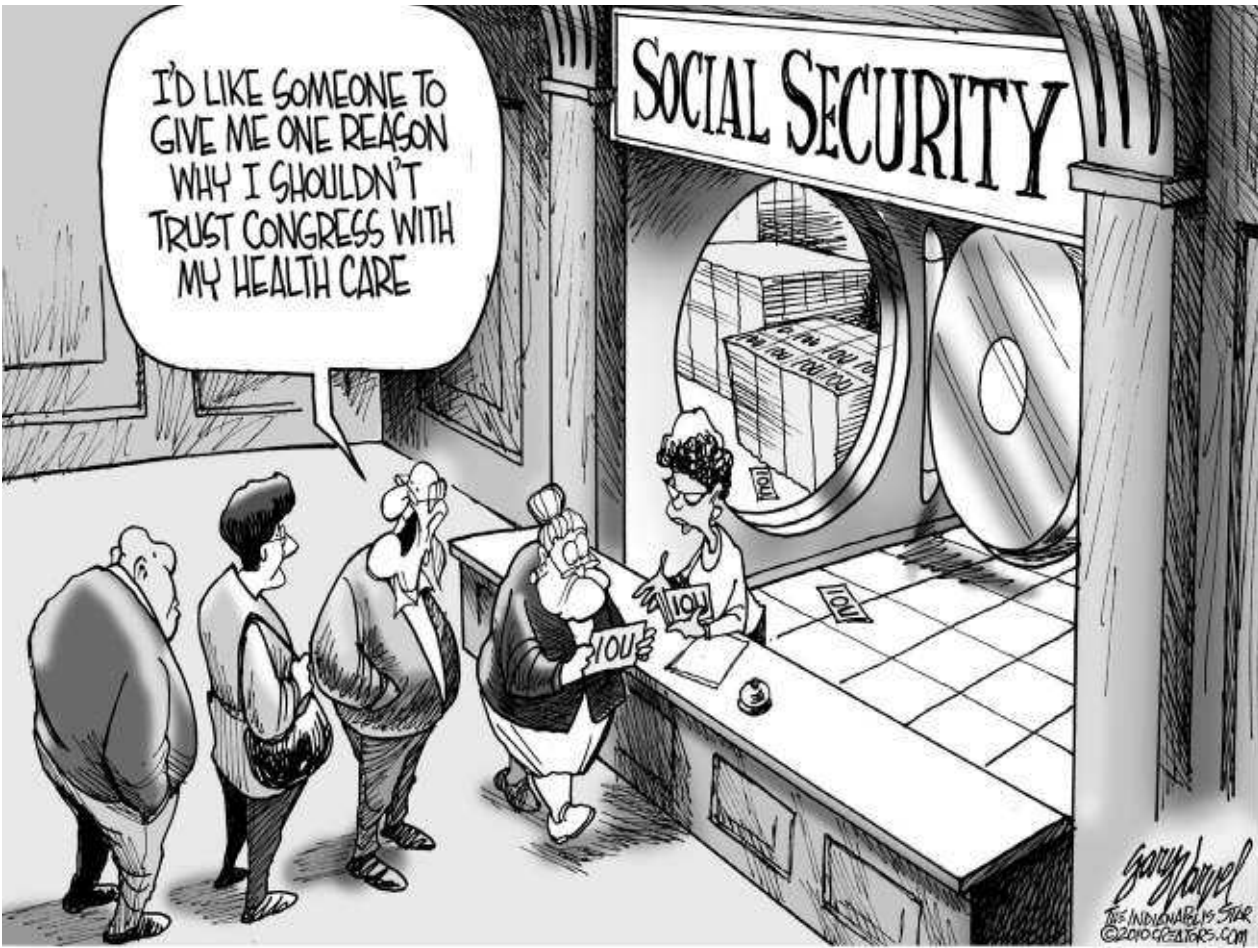

ABOUT THESE RACES

• County commissioner: Twenty-three-year incumbent Jerry Nance, 69, a Dietrich rancher, is being challenged for another two-year term in the May 25 Republican primary by Gary Russell, 55, of Shoshone, a transportation specialist at the Lincoln County Care Center, and Carol Boudreau, 70, a Dietrich rancher. No Democrat has filed for the position.

• Assessor: First-term incumbent Linda Jones, 55, of Shoshone, is being challenged in the Republican primary by Brian Cheney, 32, of Shoshone, a delivery worker at Home Depot in Twin Falls. The assessor’s term is four years. No Democrat has filed for the position.

• Clerk: Liz Kime, 46, of Shoshone, Lincoln County’s acting clerk since 2002, is being challenged by in the GOP primary by Suzanne McConnell, 41, of Shoshone, the county’s planning and zoning administrator. The clerk’s term is four years. No Democrat has filed for the position.

Taxing Social Security benefits is wrong

Most Americans will pay thousands of dollars per year in Social Security taxes during their working lives on the promise that they’ll receive a government pension when they reach a certain age.

Their employers will contribute an equal amount.

When they finally become eligible for these benefits, however, they will learn another reality: If they or their spouse are still working and their earnings exceed a certain threshold, the government will tax their Social Security benefits.

This double taxation is not only unfair and imposes punitive tax rates on seniors who choose — or are forced by economic circumstances — to stay in the workforce, it also harms the economy. As our most experienced workers, seniors contribute greatly to workplace productivity; discouraging their labor force participation through punitive taxation harms everybody.

Social Security is in dire financial condition, already operating in the red — eight years earlier than the program’s trustees expected. The program must be reformed. But any reform should, for both simple fairness and to promote economic growth, repeal the 1993 tax on Social Security benefits.

Historically only 50 percent of Social Security benefits were taxable: the part paid by employers. Since 1993, however, individual seniors with incomes exceeding $34,000 and couples with more than $44,000 in income have been taxed on 85 percent of their Social Security benefits. Because these threshold amounts aren’t indexed to inflation, the unfair levy hits more and more seniors every year.

For most Americans the 25 percent marginal tax rate kicks in this year at $34,000 — meaning they will pay $25 in taxes for every $100 they earn above that. A senior earning the same $34,000 will pay a higher rate. For every additional $100 the senior earns, he or she will pay $25 in income taxes, plus an additional $21.25 on the previously untaxed Social Security benefits — 25 percent of the 85 percent that are now taxable, or 21.25 percent overall. This gives the senior an effective marginal tax rate of 46.25 percent.

This double-taxation creates a strong incentive for some of America’s most knowledgeable and productive workers to cut back or leave the labor force.

We learned — or should have — from earlier tax cuts during the Kennedy and Reagan administrations that marginal income tax rates have an enormous impact on economic growth.

High marginal rates encourage some of our best workers to stop working. Employers are forced to replace them with less experienced workers who produce less, slowing the growth of both the company and the economy — thus resulting in fewer jobs.

The Social Security system for the first time this year will send out more in payments than the government collects in taxes. Some will argue that this is good reason to continue double-taxing Social Security benefits. It isn’t.

Social Security’s premature financial woes have been caused primarily by the bad economy; ending the double taxation of Social Security benefits would help give the economy a lift.

Social Security’s financial problems can only be solved with economically sound, fair policies that don’t rely on gimmicks like the 1993 double-taxation provisions. The system needs to be modernized in a way that promotes economic investment and growth, preferably through individual retirement accounts that would give workers a better deal than the current system even promises.

More taxes, fees or benefit cuts would only exacerbate the biggest problem with Social Security, which is that it offers a meager return to workers who deserve better.

The best way to finance the transition to a reformed Social Security system is to reduce excessive federal spending, not punish seniors with an unfair, discriminatory double tax.

Bauscher has solid record in Gooding Co.

It’s fair to say that Gooding County Assessor Patty Bauscher has a pretty good reputation in her business. The other 395 elected county officials in Idaho chose her as president of the Idaho Association of Counties.

In May 25 Republican primary, Bauscher will face Lincoln County Deputy Assessor Mary Norman, who lives in Gooding County. We think Bauscher has earned a fifth term, which she’ll effectively get by winning the primary since no Democrat has filed for the office.

Because of the dominance of one industry — dairying — in Gooding County, it’s not the easiest place in Idaho to

Is time travel possible? It just might be

Imagine that you're a science-fiction writer on a tight schedule. You'd like to play in the vast expanses of the universe, but you have too much scientific integrity to conjure up a warp drive or a DeLorean out of thin air. You're also concerned that your audience would get bored in the thousands of years that it would take for a spaceship to realistically travel the distances between stars. What you really need is a wormhole — a shortcut through time and space. Best of all, unlike most science-fiction tropes, wormholes might very well be real.

Seventy-five years ago, Albert Einstein and his collaborator, Nathan Rosen, submitted a paper to the Physical Review with the goal of unifying gravity and electromagnetism. Although they failed to discover a theory of everything, they did something arguably more much important: By creating the first theoretical model of a wormhole, Einstein and Rosen allowed science-fiction writers — including Arthur C. Clarke, Madeleine L'Engle and the writers of “Babylon 5” and “Doctor Who” — to explore vast stretches of space and time in the blink of an eye.

From the outside, an Einstein-Rosen bridge, as wormholes were originally known, looks a lot like its cousin, the black hole. And I risk having my official Physics Badge revoked if I don't tell you, ideally in a spooky voice, that “nothing can escape from a black hole — not even light.” Einstein and Rosen made a very bold supposition: What if a traveler fell into the mouth of something that looked like a black hole, but rather than being crushed by a singularity at the center of a black hole, instead emerged from another mouth, potentially many light-years from where he or she started? This isn't as crazy as it sounds. Einstein's theory of general relativity — our current working model for how gravity and space work — has been confirmed with countless experiments. And, as ad hoc as it sounds, an Einstein-Rosen bridge is a perfectly valid solution to the equations of general relativity.

And it's not just a shortcut through space. In 1988, Caltech physicist Kip Thorne also showed something else: If you can build a wormhole, you can also turn it into a time machine. By dragging one of the mouths of the wormhole around space at nearly the speed of light, we can create a two-way tunnel connecting two points in time. Even better, you don't need to worry about mucking up history. A time machine built from the laws of general relativity is necessarily self-consistent, and thus your history will remain safely as you left it.

By creating the first theoretical model of a wormhole, Albert Einstein and Nathan Rosen allowed science-fiction writers to explore vast stretches of space and time in the blink of an eye.

However, Einstein's original concept had a few flaws. For one thing, going through an Einstein-Rosen bridge, later theorists have concluded, would have to be a one-way trip, since one mouth always serves as the entrance and the other the exit. An even bigger problem with the wormhole Einstein envisioned was found in 1962, when John Archibald Wheeler demonstrated that an Einstein-Rosen bridge would collapse before anything, even a beam of light, could travel through.

Fortunately, wormhole design has improved considerably in the last 75 years. In 1988, Thorne and his students took up the problem of traversable wormholes, in large part because of a plea from his friend Carl Sagan, who was then working on the novel “Contact.” Thorne found that it was theoretically possible to construct models of wormholes, but they would require the existence of as-yet-undiscovered “exotic matter” — strange stuff that has less than zero mass — to keep them open. Unlike Einstein-Rosen bridges, Thorne's model was bi-directional and, more important, stable.

This all might seem like good news, but the fine print on wormholes is pretty daunting when you get into it. For one thing, we've never discovered anything like the exotic matter needed to prop wormholes open, and for another, we're not sure how we — or even a super-civilization — could punch a hole through the universe to create one in the first place. Furthermore, the idea of time travel is so anathema to many respectable physicists that some, including Stephen Hawking, have proposed a “chronology protection conjecture,” basically insisting that physics must somehow outlaw time machines in order to keep “the universe safe for historians.”

Theoretical physicists have the luxury of being able to invent things that don't, or perhaps can't, exist. In the three-quarters of a century since Einstein thought up wormholes, we haven't come close to observing one, though we've gotten some fantastic science fiction in the bargain. It may be that in science fact, if we want to explore the galaxy, it would be much easier to do so without trying to rip up the fabric of space-time in the process.

Otter's trade mission to China slated for June

Mission comes at critical time as China discusses ban on dairy imports

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter and state agencies are putting the final touches on a trade mission to China, according to officials with Idaho Department of Commerce.

The nearly one-week trade mission will begin June 4, traveling to three cities in mainland China to promote Idaho products, attract investment financing and address policy issues limiting trade, officials told the Times-News on Friday.

Idaho companies, which choose the destination by way of a survey, say it’s a welcome return as the foreign nation proposes new import restrictions.

The governor’s trade missions came to a halt in 2009 after the global recession pummeled foreign and domestic economies. State officials and industry leaders decided earlier this year to resume the trade program, citing economic growth in many export markets, said Damien Bard, administrator of the International Business Division of the Idaho Department of Commerce.

He said 15 business leaders and state officials, including Otter, will take part in the trade mission. Dave Curta, manager of international operations for Davisco Foods, which owns and operates Jerome Cheese, will be one of the participants.

“We’ve been doing business in

Otter

China for several years, but these trade missions give us leverage with local government officials by bringing in our own government officials,” Curta said. “It’s always important at to encourage job growth in Idaho.”

The trade mission will visit with buyers, wholesalers and agents in Shanghai, Guangzhou and Beijing, Bard said. The meetings were organized through the state’s trade office in Beijing.

China was Idaho’s third largest export destination during the first three months of 2010, with sales of about $80 million, according to a report released Thursday by Idaho Department of Commerce.

year, to endorse the state as a central location for Chinese businesses looking to expand or relocate within the western United States.

“It’s a relatively new focus that goes hand-in-hand with the governor’s Project 60, which is partly aimed at bringing in more investment capital,” he said. “It’s just one of the aspects we are looking at to encourage job growth in Idaho.”

Big seller in market drop ID'd as Waddell & Reed

By David Pitt
Associated Press writer

DES MOINES, Iowa — Waddell & Reed Financial Inc. was identified as the stock trader that sold off a large number of index futures contracts during last Thursday’s market collapse.

Waddell’s sale of 75,000 e-mini futures contracts in a 20-minute span on May 6 drew the attention of regulators, Thomson Reuters reported.

E-minis are tied to the value of the S&P 500 index. They’re traded electronically on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange.

Overland Park, Kan.-based Waddell & Reed, which provides mutual funds and asset management services, said its trading of e-mini contracts was part of its normal

GONE, AND NOT COMING BACK

Millions of jobs that were cut won’t likely return

Erik Proulx, a former advertising copywriter, is seen on the roof of an office building where he maintains an office in Boston. Proulx says he no longer wants to rejoin an industry he thinks will continue to struggle.

By Christopher S. Rugaber | Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Fewer construction workers will be needed. Don’t expect as many interior designers or advertising copywriters, either. Retailers will get by with leaner staffs.

The economy is strengthening. But millions of jobs lost in the recession could be gone for good.

And unlike in past recessions, jobs in the beleaguered manufacturing sector aren’t the only ones likely lost forever. What sets the Great Recession apart is the variety of jobs that may not return.

That helps explain why economists think it will take at least five years for the economy to regain the 8.2 million jobs wiped out by the recession — longer than in any other recovery since World War II.

It means that even as the economy strengthens, more Americans could face years out of work. Already, the percentage of the labor force unemployed for six months or longer is 4.3 percent. That’s the highest rate on records dating to 1948.

Behind the trend are the cutbacks businesses made in the recession to make up for a loss of customers. To sustain earnings, they became more productive: They found ways to produce the same level of goods or services with fewer workers. Automation, global competition and technological efficiencies helped solidify the trend.

Diminished home equity and investment accounts have made shoppers more cautious, too.

GE, Vestas fall behind in China’s wind market

By Mark Scott
Bloomberg News writer

Western wind turbine manufacturers are losing ground in China, the world’s fastest-growing green energy market.

The combined market share for companies such as General Electric and its European rivals Vestas Wind Systems and Siemens fell to 14 percent last year from 71 percent in 2005, according to Bloomberg New Energy Finance. Sales are being eroded by local companies including Sinovel Wind and Xinjiang Goldwind Science & Technology.

Jesus Zaldua, president of Gamesa Corp. Tecnologica’s Chinese subsidiary, which has four wind-turbine factories in the northeast city of Tianjin. “Some companies will have to leave China in the next five years.”

To get back in the game, the foreign companies are introducing newer technology. Siemens, based in Munich, expects to open an $80 million plant this year in Shanghai that can build 3.6-megawatt turbines. That’s bigger than anything now made by a Chinese company.

Gamesa plans to build 2-megawatt turbines after operation to protect fund investors from market risk.

“The portfolio managers in those flexible portfolio funds often make hedging trades to attempt to protect shareholders from downside risk. And that’s what was happening in that case,” spokesman Roger Hoadley said.

Waddell & Reed said it was one of more than 250 companies that traded e-mini securities as the stock market plunged. The Dow Jones industrials lost nearly 1,000 points, nearly a tenth of their value in less than half an hour. It was the biggest drop ever in a trading day. The Dow recovered two-thirds of the loss before the closing bell, but the free fall prompted close scrutiny of that day’s trading as regulators try to figure out what caused the sell-off.

SEC Chairman Mary Schapiro said Tuesday in testimony before the House Financial Services subcommittee on capital markets that her agency has yet to pinpoint the reason for the sell-off.

Six major U.S. securities exchanges on Monday agreed in principle to a uniform system of “circuit breakers,” which could slow trading during sharp market swings. Most of the 50 U.S. exchanges regulate themselves and design their own tools for slowing or halting trading.

Schapiro and her fellow SEC commissioners will review the recommendations submitted by the exchanges for a marketwide system of circuit breakers, SEC spokesman John Nester said after the hearing.

And their frugality could endure well into the recovery. That’s why fewer retail workers, among others, will likely be needed.

More than one-third of chief financial officers at 620 big companies surveyed in March by Duke University and CFO magazine said they didn’t expect to restore their payrolls to pre-recession levels for at least three years. Nearly all cited higher productivity and tepid consumer spending.

“Companies have just figured out, ‘We didn’t want to fire people ... but now that they’re gone, we’ve realized that we can get by without them,’” said John Graham, a Duke finance professor who directed the survey.

Productivity grew at an annual rate of 6.3 percent in the year ending in March, the Labor Department said this month. It was the largest increase in 48 years, though most economists think that pace isn’t sustainable. In the long run, more productive workers raise standards of living; Companies can pay more without inflating prices. But in the short run, high productivity delays hiring.

Three industries, in particular, where many jobs may not be coming back are retailing, manufacturing and advertising.

Retailers have lost 1.2 million, or 7.5 percent, of jobs that existed before the recession, according to Labor Department data. Manufacturing has shed 2.1 million jobs, or 16 percent of its total, since the recession began. Advertising and PR agencies have lost 65,000 jobs, or about 14 percent of the pre-recession total. Moody’s Analytics estimates those industries will lose even more within five years.

retrofitting its existing plants. It will also open its fifth factory in China next year. The Spanish company’s machines cost a third more and are more reliable than Chinese models, according to Beijing-based renewable consultancy Mint Research.

“Competing on cost isn’t the way to go,” said Jens Tommerup, president of the Chinese business unit of Vestas, which is based in Denmark. “It’s about quality.”

Chinese manufacturers say they are improving their quality. Goldwind and Sinovel plan to introduce higher-output turbines next year.

“We already have 2.5-megawatt and 3-megawatt products” under development, Thomas Yao, Goldwind’s public relations director, said in a telephone interview. “We are going to produce some 2.5-megawatt (turbines), and they will be put into mass production early next year.”

The head start in technology may pay off for western companies, particularly as the Chinese venture abroad, said Keith Hays, global wind

Space shuttle Atlantis soars on final voyage

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Space shuttle Atlantis thundered away on its final voyage to orbit Friday, hoisting an experienced crew of six and a full shipment of space station gear.

Atlantis sped through a perfectly clear afternoon sky, blazing a trail over the Atlantic before huge crowds eager to catch one of the few remaining shuttle launches. More than 40,000 guests — the biggest launch-day crowd in years — packed the Kennedy Space Center.

The shuttle's destination is the International Space Station, which was soaring over the South Pacific at the time of liftoff. The shuttle should catch up with the orbiting complex and its six residents Sunday morning.

A piece of orbiting junk, however, was threatening to come too close to the space station. If necessary, Mission Control will order up a maneuver so the station can dodge the debris the night before Atlantis' arrival. The docking will not be delayed, even if the station has to move out of the way of the unidentified piece, NASA officials said.

"Good luck, godspeed and have a little fun up there," launch director Mike Leinbach told the astronauts just before liftoff. He said he was speaking on behalf of all those who have worked on Atlantis since construction began in 1980.

"Like you said, there are thousands of folks out there who have taken care of this bird for a long time," replied commander Kenneth Ham. "We're going to take her on her 32nd flight, and if you don't mind, we'll take her out of the barn and make a few more laps around the planet."

The astronauts — all repeat space fliers and all men — couldn't resist a little humor before they got down to business. They showed up for their steak and cheeseburger breakfast wearing blue and black smoking jackets, white shirts and black bow ties.

This 12-day mission is the last one planned for Atlantis, the fourth in NASA's line of space shuttles. Only two flights remain after this one, by Discovery and Endeavour.

AROUND THE WORLD

THAILAND Seven dead as Thai troops battle demonstrators

BANGKOK — At least seven people were killed and more than 100 wounded as Thai troops battled anti-government demonstrators in a Bangkok commercial area to end a two-month street campaign for an immediate election.

Security forces aiming to seal off a business district as large as New York's Central Park fought protesters in at least three separate locations. Demonstrators set fires and launched explosives at troops, who shot bullets and tear gas in return, local television footage showed.

"There could be attempts by people who have ill intentions to create instability," government spokesman Panitan Wattanayagorn said in a nationally televised briefing. "We hope that in the next few days the situation will return to normal."

The government is seeking to force protesters to end rallies in central Bangkok that have claimed at least 37 lives since they began March 12. The protesters, drawn mostly from poor rural areas, say they are fighting for democracy.

LIBYA Dutch crash survivor could go home this weekend

TRIPOLI — Authorities were hopeful Friday that the Dutch boy who is the sole survivor of a plane crash in Libya will be able to return home to the Netherlands this weekend, as investigators began work to determine the cause of the crash.

Rescuers found 9-year-old Ruben Van Assouw still strapped in his seat and breathing in an area of desert sand strewn with the plane's debris. He lost the rest of his family — his father, mother and older brother — in Wednesday's disaster, in which a flight from South Africa crashed short of the runway in Tripoli, killing 103 people.

Dutch Foreign Ministry official Ed Kronenburg said authorities think the boy could return home this weekend.

"I think he's fine," Kronenburg said. "Under the current conditions, we hope that we will be able to make preparations for his return, hopefully this weekend, but it's all subject ... to medical examinations and agreement of the doctors that he's fit for travel."

WASHINGTON Army recalls combat helmets

The Army is recalling about 44,000 helmets because they don't meet specifications, the service said Friday, and said the Justice Department and Pentagon inspector general are investigating.

The recall represents about 4 percent of the total inventory of Advanced Combat Helmets, the Army said in a news release. The recalled items were produced by Hebron, Ohio-based ArmorSource LLC, the service said.

ArmorSource officials didn't immediately respond to an e-mail request for comment or a telephone message left on an answering machine.

Army spokesman Lt. Col. Jimmie Cummings said the service is trying to determine the exact location of the potentially flawed helmets, some of which might be in use in Iraq and Afghanistan.

"As far as we know there have been no deaths or injuries" because of the helmets, he said.

RUSSIA Search for 24 Russian miners can't resume for week

MOSCOW — Russian officials said Friday the search for 24 workers missing after a coal mine explosion won't resume for a week, apparently eliminating hopes of finding them alive.

Rescue operations at the Raspadskaya mine in western Siberia were suspended Thursday because of heavy concentrations of explosive methane and fires in the tunnels. On Friday, Emergencies Ministry official Pavel Plat said the methane couldn't be reduced to safe levels for at least a week, and a protest rally by the mine's employees was reportedly broken up brutally by riot police.

"We simply can't let people remain in the kind of situation that has developed" in the mine, he said.

P&G faces allegations of dangerous diapers

By Burt Helm
Bloomberg News

NEW YORK — Procter & Gamble Co. is locked in a public-relations war with blogging parents demanding that the company recall Pampers diapers they say are unsafe.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission launched an investigation May 3 into complaints that Pampers with Dry Max, the latest version of P&G's $9-billion-a-year brand, causes rashes and chemical burns. The company denies the claims.

Parent bloggers can damage companies that anger them, said Jackie Huba, principal of Ant's Eye View, an Austin, Texas, strategy consulting firm. Unproven blog posts can metastasize on the Web and spread far and wide, she said.

"A lot of brands live in fear of the mommy bloggers," said Huba. "Social media is a word-of-mouth jet stream. When you have angry moms, it's going to go all over the world. This is very dangerous for P&G. Their reputation is very important as they compete with cheaper generic diapers."

Earlier this week, two lawsuits seeking class-action status were filed in Ohio against Cincinnati-based P&G. The plaintiff parents assert the company "knew or should have known that Pampers with Dry Max had the capacity to and, in many cases, did actually harm infants and toddlers by causing severe rashes, blisters, chemical burns, infections, and/or other ailments."

On May 6, P&G released a statement denying that Dry Max Pampers caused rashes or burns.

"These rumors are being perpetuated by a small number of parents, some of whom are unhappy that we replaced our older Cruisers and Swaddlers products while others support competitive products and the use of cloth diapers," the company said.

Pope's Portugal trip a bid to move beyond scandal

By Nicole Winfield
Associated Press Writer

PORTO, Portugal — Pope Benedict XVI wrapped up a trip to Portugal on Friday with an appeal to spread the faith, capping a pilgrimage marked by an explicit admission of church guilt in the clerical abuse scandal with a fresh bid to move beyond the crisis.

Benedict celebrated Mass in the northern city of Porto, his final stop on a four-day visit designed to boost the faithful in a country that is overwhelmingly Roman Catholic but where only about 20 percent of the people regularly go to church. Portugal's north is its most conservative, staunchly Catholic region, and Benedict came to pay tribute to efforts by the local bishop to make the church a stronger presence in the country.

"We must get over the temptation of limiting ourselves with what we have, or think we have as surely ours," Benedict said. "How much time has been lost, how much work has been pushed back because we didn't pay attention to this?"

Police estimated that more than 150,000 people attended Friday's Mass, celebrated in front of city hall on Porto's main avenue which filled with flag-waving faithful shouting "Viva o papa!" On Thursday, some 400,000 pilgrims turned out for the spiritual highlight of Benedict's trip, a Mass in the famous shrine city of Fatima on the anniversary of the day when three shepherd children reported visions of the Virgin.

Benedict dealt with the clerical abuse scandal head-on en route to Portugal, telling reporters on board the papal plane that the crisis was caused by the "sins within the church," his most explicit admission of Church culpability to date. But Benedict moved on to other issues during his various speeches and homilies, which touched on the increasing secularization of Europe and the need to uphold traditional church teaching on key matters of life and family.

In Fatima, Benedict called abortion and same-sex marriage some of the most "insidious and dangerous" threats facing the world today. Vatican officials cast the turnout in Fatima as evidence that Benedict had turned a page in weathering the abuse scandal, which has dogged him for months.

One issue Benedict didn't address at length in any of his speeches or homilies was the European financial crisis and the crippling effect it is having in Portugal. During his visit, Prime Minister Jose Socrates announced tax hikes in a bid to allay market fears about its high level of debt.

The crisis is being felt acutely in Porto, known for its production of Portugal's famous sweet port wine but perhaps more importantly as the hub of the country's industrial north. Its traditional manufacturing sector, especially textiles and footwear, has declined over the past 20 years, putting many out of work.

The plight of Portugal's low-paid blue-collar workers is expected to worsen with the new austerity measures designed to reduce the state debt.

Benedict made a few vague references to the tough times, but only explicitly referred to the financial crisis in comments to reporters on the first day in which he renewed his call for a more ethics-based world financial order.

Porto Archbishop Manuel Clemente referred to the economic difficulties in his welcome to the pontiff Friday, saying the church was "urgently" being called on to provide charity to the needy.

Associated Press writer Barry Hatton contributed to this report.

Woman faces charges in Texas polygamist deaths

HOUSTON (AP) — The fugitive daughter of a deceased Utah polygamist sect leader wanted in a 1988 quadruple slaying has been arrested in Honduras and extradited to Houston to face charges, the FBI said Friday.

FBI Special Agent Shauna Dunlap said a tip led to the capture of Jacqueline Tarsa LeBaron on Thursday.

LeBaron, wanted since 1992, was to appear before a federal magistrate Friday, Dunlap told The Associated Press.

The FBI website lists the charges against her as conspiracy to commit murder; murder; conspiracy to tamper with a witness; tampering with a witness; use of a firearm during a crime of violence; conspiracy to obstruct religious beliefs; obstruction of religious beliefs; and racketeering conspiracy.

LeBaron, 44, is accused in the shooting deaths of three former sect members and the 8-year-old daughter of one of the adults in Houston and Irving in 1988.

LeBaron's father, Ervil LeBaron, was the leader of the Church of the Lamb of God. Investigators say the elder LeBaron ordered the executions of rival polygamists in the 1970s. In 1972 he was convicted in Utah of ordering family members to kill his brother, who was said to have disobeyed church laws.

of disobedient church members, died in the Utah state prison in 1981.

Jacqueline LeBaron was among six family members charged in the June 1988 murders.

Three were convicted in 1995 and sentenced to life in prison. Another was convicted of ordering the deaths and was sentenced to 45 years in prison. The youngest, who was 16 at the time of the killings, pleaded guilty to the child's death and served five years in prison.

The victims were brothers Mark and Duane Chynoweth, killed in Houston, and Ed Marston, slain in Irving. Duane Chynoweth's daughter, Jenny, was also killed in what investigators believe was an effort to eliminate her as a witness.

He and two fellow German church members paid for spreading the word against Nazis

Hollywood-style in a feature film starring Haley Joel Osment as Huebener and Max von Sydow as the Nazi judge who sentenced the boys. The film, "Truth and Treason," is planned for release in fall 2011.

Retired BYU German professor Alan Keele, in the early 1970s, read a German magazine article about the boys. Keele looked up Schnibbe in the Salt Lake City phone book, called him for an interview and struck up a collaboration that would last through several books he wrote with BYU historians.

"He said, 'I've been waiting 25 years for this call,'" Keele said. "He knew it was an interesting story"

It goes like this: Huebener listened to British radio — banned in Germany under threat of death — and enlisted Schnibbe and Wobbe to wage a propaganda war telling Germans how they saw the war. Early versions were postcard-size with slogans such as "Hitler is a murderer," Keele said, and the boys moved about at night tacking them to bulletin boards, leaving them in phone booths and slipping them into pockets at opera-house cloak rooms. They kept it up through much of 1941, with the later leaflets describing the hopelessness of the German war effort based on the Third Reich's lack of oil, fights on multiple fronts and America's imminent entry.

A work colleague who Keele believes Huebener tried to recruit to the effort rattled out the trio. Huebener got death. Wobbe was sentenced to 10 years in a labor camp. And Schnibbe — perhaps wise enough to stay

Dalai Lama: Brother’s memory lives on at center

By Rick Callahan
Associated Press writer

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. — The Dalai Lama said Thursday a southern Indiana Buddhist center founded by his eldest brother is a tribute to the Indiana University professor’s memory.

The Buddhist leader made his first visit to the center since the September 2008 death of his brother, Thubten Norbu, whose legacy he said is carried on by the Tibetan Mongolian Buddhist Cultural Center.

“Spirituality is very much alive here, so that means my late brother’s spirit still very much exists here, so I am very happy,” he said.

The 74-year-old Nobel

Peace Prize laureate’s brother, who died at age 86, founded the center in 1979 at a heavily wooded site on Bloomington’s southeast side. It has grown over the years into a hub for Tibetan educational and religious activity.

The Dalai Lama and his brother fled Tibet in 1959, nine years after China sent communist forces to occupy the Himalayan region. Since then, the Buddhist leader has led a self-declared government-in-exile in India.

On Thursday, 9-year-old Kai Grise of Bloomington asked the Buddhist leader how long it will be before China pulls its forces out of Tibet. The boy’s question prompted a jolly laugh from the Dalai Lama. He then paused and said, “That’s a difficult question,” before asking for another.

The Dalai Lama later approached the boy with a grin, gingerly placed his right index finger on the boy’s cheek and spoke to him briefly before departing.

Kai, a third grader at Bloomington Montessori School, noted the Dalai Lama had not actually answered his question, but said he was still delighted to meet him personally.

“He said that big change would come during my lifetime — overall, that there would be big changes for the whole world,” the boy said.

The visit is the Dalai Lama’s sixth to Bloomington, about 60 miles south of Indianapolis. His last was in October 2007. He arrived Tuesday and delivered religious teachings Wednesday at the Indiana University Auditorium.

He was scheduled to give a public speech Friday at Conesco Fieldhouse in Indianapolis.

The Dalai Lama’s U.S. visit also includes stops in Madison, Wis.; Cedar Falls, Iowa; and New York City.

Early in his visit to the Bloomington center, the Dalai Lama discussed beliefs about happiness, noting “everybody wants a happy life.”

“The ultimate source of joyfulness is within ourselves,” he said. “We must realize that.”

What can I do if my faith is not growing?

McClatchy Newspapers

Real faith shows us how to live

Usually when we think of faith, we think of a belief or religious teaching or doctrine that lacks empirical evidence. Sometimes this is referred to as “blind” faith because it lacks any kind of proof.

Rather than based upon blind faith, Buddhism is based more on one’s own direct experience. The Buddha taught that one should not accept religious teachings simply out of blind faith. In referring to religious teachings, the Buddha said in the Kalama Sutra, “(when) these qualities are skillful; these qualities are blameless; these qualities are praised by the wise; these qualities, when adopted and carried out, lead to welfare and to happiness — then you should enter and remain in them.” In other words, we should examine a particular religious teaching and only when we know it is true, or we see some value in it, should we accept it.

The problem for most of us is that we see faith as an accomplishment or a personal possession. Faith is more than just belief; it is a vision of a greater and deeper reality, a vision of how our lives and our world can manifest great compassion. Real religious faith should manifest itself in our everyday actions. If you are dissatisfied with your level of faith, you may, in fact, be dissatisfied with how you are relating to the world.

— Lama Chuck Stanford, Rime Buddhist Center & Monastery, Kansas City, Mo.

Reassurance can make faith grow

Speaking from a scriptural point of view, we can know our faith-growth, be it weak, strong or other. We are encouraged to inquire into our own measure of faith so that we can be true to ourselves regarding our faith, and determining if we are growing.

“Examine yourselves as to whether you are in the faith.” (2 Corinthians 13:5.) A somewhat greater challenge is given us when we are told, “Count it all joy when you fall into various trials, knowing that the testing of your faith produces patience.” (James 1:2, 3.)

I doubt if any of us see trials and tests as joy circumstances, especially when they are happening. However, if in the strength of your faith you have survived these circumstances of tests and trials upon your person and character and have not lost focus, faith’s assumption is that God has been your strength in those times of trials and tests.

How we respond to trying times and circumstances are testimonies of faith and character. You are the first to know if you have faith-growth. And if you have not grown in the faith, it’s not a matter that you have lost faith, it’s just a matter of being reassured. Faith works for you by and through love. (Galatians 5:6.) The strength for faith-growth is in our undying love for and trust in God.

quiet in court because, at age 18, he was the elder of the group, Keele said — got five years.

At first, Schnibbe and Wobbe stood waist-high in cold swamps and cut peat outside Hamburg. They then moved to a camp in Poland to refurbish Messerschmitt warplanes. Schnibbe had been a painting apprentice, Keele said, so the Nazis had him paint the camouflage atop the factory.

As the Soviet army advanced westward, the Nazis marched their prisoners through the snow back to Hamburg, where Schnibbe’s shorter sentence proved a curse. Wobbe wound up being liberated. But because much of Schnibbe’s prison term was served by the war’s final weeks, Keele said, the Nazis sent him to Czechoslovakia to train as a German soldier. When the Soviets overran his camp there, they sent him to a Russian work post.

In all, he spent seven years in forced labor and emerged weighing less than 100 pounds and with poor night vision from malnutrition.

Tens of thousands of Mormons lived in Nazi Germany, Keele said, and they covered the political spectrum. Many of the boys’ church mates kept their heads down even if they opposed the regime, he said, and their branch president was a Nazi Party member.

“The boys were more brash,” he said. “As typical teenagers, they didn’t think anything would happen to them.”

When they were caught, Keele added, the Gestapo started coming around to church meetings to “find out what was the deal with this American sect — did they want to overthrow the government or what?” Ultimately, the secret police were satisfied the boys acted alone.

Schnibbe’s widow, Joan, said he loved America and touted its freedoms throughout the rest of his life. His second wife, she married him in 1976.

“Usually his message to young people was that they should be really proud to be Americans, and they should be really grateful for their freedoms,” she said, “and then also that it’s important to forgive.”

Forgiveness came hard, she said, but the way he told it, he had been bitter after the war until he prayed with a German LDS Church official who told him to let it go. “He said he felt so much better letting the past be the past.”

Schnibbe went on to be a detail painter in Utah, performing fancy stencil work and gold-leafing homes and public and church buildings.

Whitaker, the filmmaker who befriended him after hundreds of hours of interviews, said Schnibbe was humble.

“He would say, ‘My friend Helmuth was the hero,’ ” Whitaker said. “Of course, I looked at it and thought all three were heroes.”

Attorney gaining a worldwide reputation for his battle against sexually abusive priests

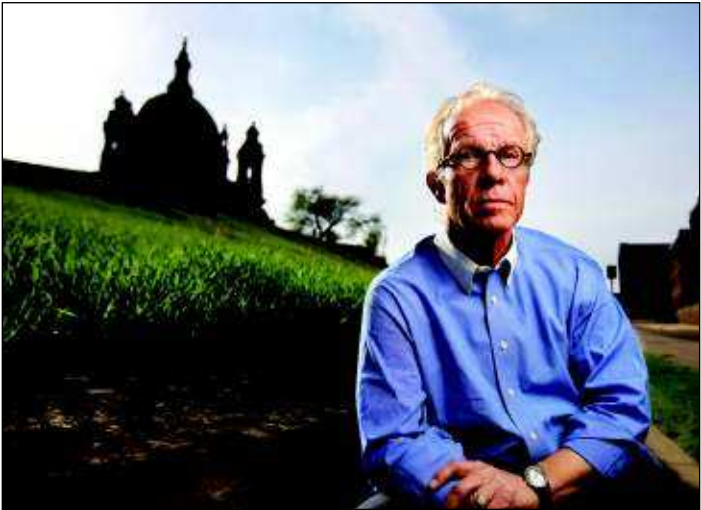

By Kim Ode
Star Tribune

MINNEAPOLIS — Jeff Anderson grabbed a thick book from the table in his law office, fanning the pages as a French journalist filmed the action.

“These are official Catholic directories,” he said. “With these, I can find any U.S. priest, and I’ve got resources for foreign countries, as well.”

Two pieces of art, each depicting Don Quixote, leaned against the wall behind him, bookending the scene.

For years, Anderson has been vilified for his zeal in pursuing priests accused of sexually molesting children.

St. Paul, Minn., lawyer Jeff Anderson has been representing many victims abused by priests. He has spent years fighting the Catholic Church and is now single-handedly feeding information to the New York Times in its investigation of the church.

BRIAN PETERSON/
Minneapolis Star Tribune

Critics say he disrupts church protocol, spurns the promise of redemption through confession and makes a fortune from sordid lawsuits. Yet Anderson also has fervent supporters who praise the Lord that he takes on the Catholic church. The work has led Anderson to a conclusion he’s long regarded as inevitable: “All roads lead to Rome.”

On Thursday, Anderson filed a federal lawsuit accusing Pope Benedict and senior Vatican officials of failing to defrock a Wisconsin priest despite allegations that he molested at least 200 deaf children over 25 years.

Anderson’s actions as a publicity stunt, saying that most of the complaint is without merit “and rehashes old theories already rejected by U.S. courts.”

Lately, Anderson’s days have included interviews by journalists from Spain and Italy, Portugal and Germany. “This is very big news in Europe,” said the French reporter, who quickly learned not to refer to victims.

“We call them survivors,” Anderson said.

It’s been more than 20 years ago since Anderson filed a lawsuit on behalf of a St. Paul Park, Minn., man who’d been sexually abused by a priest. The case proved an unexpected linchpin to a floodgate. Thousands of other adults haunted by childhood terrors came forward across the United States. Now Anderson is on the world stage, possessing documents he says implicate Pope Benedict for mishandling cases of clergy sexual abuse when he was Cardinal Joseph Ratzinger.

“It all leads to the pope,” Anderson said. “Deposing him sounds bombastic, but it isn’t. He needs to be held responsible for the torture and mutilation of children’s souls worldwide.”

Controlling nature

A toothbrush. That’s all I needed.

But not just any old toothbrush. None of your bargain basement, wimpy bristled, use-it-twice-then-throw-it-out toothbrushes this time. No sir. This time I was going to get a toothbrush that could withstand the beating I seem to inflict upon instruments of dental hygiene (you should see what I do to dental floss — it isn’t pretty).

Perhaps I have toothbrush-intolerant enamel. Or perhaps I have latent hostility issues that cause me to turn in to Iron Man in front of the bathroom mirror. Or perhaps it has something to do with the fact that I grew up with two dentist brothers-in-law who insisted on vigorous brushing — or else. Whatever the reason, I am hard on toothbrushes.

My wife, Anita, is still using that really nice toothbrush I gave her for our 28th wedding anniversary five years ago (what, you’ve never heard of the Toothbrush Anniversary?). I, on the other hand, go through them like Lady Gaga goes through sequins. I buy a toothbrush, it works well for a few days, and then, before you know it, the bristles stop bristling. Or the handle breaks. Or the brush doesn’t brush — it just sort of rubs.

So I was determined to get the best toothbrush I could find. It was the only thing I needed when I walked into the store that day. I was prepared to spend as much as three or four dollars on the brush. Little did I know that three or four dollars wouldn’t even constitute a decent down payment on a state-of-the-art toothbrush. There are toothbrushes with engines — I’m not kidding about this. They have more horsepower than my Hyundai.

I don’t want to compete in the Indianapolis 500. I just want to brush my teeth.

Finally I settled on a nice, sturdy, no-nonsense toothbrush that looked like it would get the job done for at least the rest of the month. Then I noticed that this toothbrush was also available in a five-pack for even less per toothbrush than I was going to pay for the one I had selected. If one toothbrush is good, then five is even better, isn’t it? Sure, it was more than I was planning to spend during this trip to the store. But it would be worth it in the long run. Wouldn’t it?

After picking up the box o’ brushes, I noticed another good deal: a package of four tubes of our favorite toothpaste for a very good price. Well, I couldn’t pass on that deal, could I? It seemed so cosmically synergistic: toothbrushes and toothpaste. It flowed naturally from one to the other — and such good prices!

Then I noticed another great price on a multi-bar pack of soap. And then another great deal on shampoo. And they had such a good price on “The Blind Side” ...

Nearly $100 later, I escaped from the store with my debit card smoking. Of course, this isn’t unusual for me. Anita often sends me to the store with a five-item list, and I end up at the checkout stand with a fully loaded shopping cart. It’s called impulse buying, and I’m about as impulsive as they come. I’m the reason store managers prepare those attractive displays and megasales offers — they want to entice me into being impulsive. And usually I oblige.

But no more. Although it is my nature to be impulsive in the grocery store, I’ve decided it is time to go against my nature. Our burgeoning cupboards and our crashing budget both demand it — not to mention Anita. And that’s OK, I think. One of the most important things we learn in this life is when to trust and act upon our natural inclinations, and when to control them. There are times when “that’s just how I am” is an explanation, and times when it’s a cop-out.

Even when dental hygiene is at stake.

Muhammad cartoonist head-butted during lecture

STOCKHOLM (AP) — A Swedish artist who angered Muslims by depicting the Prophet Muhammad as a dog was assaulted this week as furious protesters interrupted his university lecture about the limits of artistic freedom.

Lars Vilks told The Associated Press a man leaped from the front row and head-butted him as he was delivering his speech at Uppsala University, breaking Vilks’ glasses but leaving him uninjured. Two people were arrested.

A video clip of the incident by a Swedish newspaper showed police using pepper spray and batons to hold off an angry crowd shouting “God is great” in Arabic after Vilks was escorted out of the lecture hall.

Vilks has faced numerous threats over his drawing of Muhammad with a dog’s body, but Tuesday’s incident was the first time he has been physically assaulted.

Early Mormons settled central Texas village

By Jeanne Williams
Temple Daily Telegram

CAMERON, Texas — The settlement of Port Sullivan was one of many Texas villages that dried up and blew away into the chronicles of the Lone Star State’s heritage.

It was added to historical marker lists and ghost town rosters, yet the 19th century settlement in east Milam County claims important ties to some Utah families and The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

In 1854, the Mormon church dispatched elder Seth M. Blair on a mission trip to the outpost near the confluence of the Little and Brazos rivers. Blair preached the Mormon doctrine and welcomed 50 new converts into the faith, using the Brazos River for baptisms. Blair also persuaded his newly acquired flock to make their homes in Salt Lake City, Utah Territory.

Blair, an attorney, veteran of the Texas War for Independence and celebrated figure in Utah history, was a respected leader in his church and friend of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints President Brigham Young.

Blair led his party of saints out of Port Sullivan on March 9, 1855, in a wagon train that moved slowly northward into Falls County purposely to accommodate latecomers.

Among Mormon saints departing Port Sullivan was Georgia native and former Texas state representative Nathaniel Hunt Greer, his wife Nancy and their children. Greer operated a prosperous sawmill in Milam County. The Greers sold their properties in Milam and Washington counties and bought wagons, oxen and supplies for their overland wagon train journey to Utah.

Blair’s journal recorded his visit to Texas, events in Port Sullivan and the wagon train to Utah, according to documents at the LDS Church Library in Salt Lake City.

By March 25, the party was six miles north of Marlin. The weather was dry and windy, stunting grasses needed for livestock forage. Near Waxahachie, Blair expressed in his diary dismay because envy, jealousy, worldliness and loss of the spirit had crept in among his followers.

The slow-moving caravan departed Texas on April 22, crossing the Red River at Preston. They traveled through Choctaw and Chickasaw land, then joined a larger wagon train of Utah-bound Mormons in Atchison, Kansas Territory.

The overland wagon train of 89 people, 38 wagons, 480 oxen, 21 cows and 40 horses departed Atchison on June 15, only to be stricken with a cholera epidemic after traveling only 20 miles. In the first 24 hours, a dozen people died of cholera that eventually claimed 29 victims, 16 from Texas and 13 others.

The train continued, leaving in its wake a trail of graves. Nathaniel Greer was among the casualties. His coffin was made from a wagon bed and he was buried on a hill close to Grasshopper Creek in Kansas.

“The cry of the dying and shrieks of the living presented nothing but the true scene, even all the horrors of death imaginable. The gravediggers were employed both night and day,” Blair wrote in his journal on June 14, 1855.

The train continued, but the people had to deal with a measles outbreak, distention, a few accidents and the threat of Indian attacks that terrorized travelers but never occurred. They reported they had fed a few Sioux.

Greer’s grief-stricken family plodded on across the plains with the overland train arriving in Salt Lake City on Sept. 11, 1855.

A year later, some of Greer’s offspring, heartbroken over the loss of their father and disheartened over the loss of cattle during a brutal Utah winter, returned to Texas and settled in Bosque County. Others stayed in Utah. One of Greer’s granddaughters married Blair.

Blair, who had longtime friends in Texas, was reported to have corresponded with Sam Houston in the early days of Texas.

Officially, the village was christened Port Sullivan on Dec. 12, 1835, when August W. Sullivan gained title to the property. The 1870 census counted 1,423 people, but a decade later only 123 people remained. By the 1890s Port Sullivan had reached ghost town status.

Port Sullivan recorded some notable events. Robert E. Lee was among soldiers stationed at Port Sullivan before the Civil War to quell unfriendly Indian uprisings.

Natural resource camp taking registrations

By Michael Cole
Times-News writer

For 51 years, the Natural Resources Camp has offered young Idahoans an adventure packed week that is fun and educational. The week long camp sponsored by The University of Idaho Extension, in cooperation with the Idaho Association of Soil Conservation Districts is June 21-26. Located north of Ketchum, the camp offers 12- to 14-year-olds a chance to learn about the importance of water, forestry, rangeland, soil and wildlife. "This is a new scenario for the kids," said Kellie Rey the Natural Resources Camp coordinator. "The beauty of this area speaks for itself.

The campers will be taught by a professional teacher from each of the five resources. They will teach a 45 minute class and then there will be an hour and a half lab where campers learn hands on. By opening their eyes to these natural resources they will be able to explore the field and see if this is something that they are interested in. Campers can expect a variety of activities challenging them physically and mentally. From testing water by gathering stream insects to the Tournament of the Outdoors, the focus is giving campers an experience they will remember for a lifetime. "Education and fun are indistinguishable," said Rey. "It does not seem like you are being schooled. Our goal is for campers to have the best week of their summer. They will not forget what they did at natural resource camp." Going into her fifth year as a cabin leader for the camp Betsy Heinz, 18, of Cascade, recalls her days as a camper and life changing events that took place. "I loved it," said Heinz. "I had always loved science classes but this was a chance for me to get out there and dig in the dirt, take core samples from trees and see the natural resources. I was a shy kid at school but once I got to camp everyone was encouraging and I really felt like I could be open." The camp also offers teachers the chance to gain two graduate credits in Natural Resource Conservation from the University of Idaho. "The teacher's attend camp as if they were a camper," said Rey. The concept is to see how field instruction is done. They have to attend the whole camp and come up with their own plan for a week-long lesson for a camp or class later." When campers arrive on June 21, they can expect to explore, to learn and to play, which according to Rey and Heinz, is what the camp is all about. "I will never forget this camp," said Heinz. "I have dreams about camp every week, year round. At the end of the week I am exhausted because I have been living to the fullest for that week."

Throw away denial

I know you have been dying all week to find out how to lessen denial and get more out of life. I will give advice again from Lt. Col. Dave Grossman, which I am allowed to share with my reading audience.

Denial must be spit out and thrown away because it has no advantage at all. Denial kills you physically, mentally and financially, it has no survival benefit. To fight denial, think of the four D's that I will discuss and you might find things going much better. It might even save somebody's life. I will use school safety as my point for these.

DETER. Deter anybody from wanting to harm children. Safety measures that are plainly noticeable if somebody wanted to cause harm can stop any potential problem to begin with. For example: having guards at the schools is OK but what good are they if not armed to deter somebody from coming in and shooting up the school. An unarmed guard is like a firefighter with everything but a fire hose. They may look good but they can't do their job without all the proper tools.

DETECT. That's a pretty simple idea. If you detect a problem report it. It might be a total innocent event, but wouldn't it be better to know it was innocent than to find out people's lives were destroyed? Detect also means to be ever vigilant and look for the unexpected.

DELAY. If a school makes it hard to get to our children that could be the time needed to get the right people there to stop the threat. Some of the ways to cause delay would be to keep all but one outside door locked, while keeping the doors to the classrooms locked from outside so teachers could simply shut the door or keep the door closed during school.

POLICEMAN DAN
Dan Bristol

DESTROY. Destroy the idea that it'll cost too much to protect our children. The experts are now starting to add up the liabilities of school violence and now understand that the prevention was much cheaper than not being prepared. Denial is now a word I hope never gets used again unless you hear somebody talking bad about this column. If you want more information from Lt. Col. Grossman you can find him at his website: killology.com.

Q: I am a female runner and run into all sorts of animals when I run. Is it against the law to carry pepper spray or mace when a person runs, bikes or walks and then to use it if an animal comes after you?

A: No, in fact I highly encourage its use. This is Idaho and you never know what animal you might encounter. It also works great for those two-legged wolves too. Just make sure a threat is eminent and not just an annoyance. Also one last word of advice: make sure you are down wind when you spray, or that jog might be even more painful.

Officer down

Please put these officers, killed in the line of duty, and their families in your prayers. God bless these heroes.

- Officer Danny Benavides, California Highway Patrol
 - Deputy Brian Lamar Mahaffey, Rockdale County Sheriff, Georgia
- Be safe, I'll talk to you next week. Email your questions to policeman-dan@yahoo.com.

Despite strict diet and exercise, weight gain still a problem

DEAR DR. GOTT: I'm beginning to think I'm crazy. I'm 5'9", 41 years old, about to tip to 200 pounds, and am unable to lose weight. Everyone talks about challenges in weight loss, but I have seriously made giant efforts and do not see any results. I have a steady routine of exercise — a minimum of two hours each day doing strength and aerobic activities. I mix up the routine so my body won't get adjusted to doing the same thing every day. During weekends and vacations, I increase my activity levels. I've read anything I can get my hands on about how to exercise properly and tried many ways to lose weight.

ASK DR. GOTT
Dr. Peter Gott

My doctor has ordered all sorts of blood work that always comes back normal. It has been discovered that I have an airway-obstruction issue (apparently my tongue is too big for my mouth), and my physician told me that the sleep issue caused my weight issues and that a CPAP machine would help. I started using this in November and have put on 10 pounds since then. I continue to question my doctor, but he maintains that if I reduce my calories enough, I will lose weight. I don't drink soda or alcohol, nor do I eat white flour or sugar. At one point in a depressed, desperate mood, I consumed 500 calories per day for two weeks, kept up my workouts, and gained four pounds. What is wrong with me? DEAR READER: There are several reasons why individuals can experience difficulty losing weight, including the consumption of too many calories without expending them, hypothyroidism, alcohol use, certain medications, emotional factors such as depression, slow metabolism, Cushing's syndrome and more. Some individuals may even be weight-loss intolerant. Based on your letter, I don't believe you are weight-loss intolerant. The fact that you continue to gain weight despite drastic calorie cuts is a concern to me. It indicates that either you are not being truthful about your diet and exercise habits or there is some underlying medical problem causing the unintentional weight gain. For the record, I would like to say, that I do not believe you are being untruthful and the sheer desperation of your letter is proof of that. You claim to have had blood work but because you did not elaborate, I do not know what you were tested for. Because of this, I will again review some of the testing you should undergo or perhaps have repeated. First, a complete blood count and work-up should be done. Several endocrine disorders such as hypothyroidism and Cushing's syndrome can lead to unwanted weight gain and difficulty losing weight as well as other problems. Hypothyroidism is often easy to resolve with inexpensive prescription hormone replacement. Cushing's syndrome is more complex. It often results from a benign pituitary-gland tumor, a benign adrenal gland or an ectopic adrenocorticotrophic hormone (ACTH) secreting tumor (typically found in the lungs, thyroid, thymus gland or pancreas).

Alcohol use, quitting smoking, depression and certain medications may be contributing factors. I believe your current issues with depression are stemming from the persistent weight gain, not the other way around. In my opinion, your physician is being negligent about your situation. Despite your repeated attempts to get help, he has essentially ignored the situation. Now is the time to find a new physician who will take you seriously and work with you to get to the bottom of this very frustrating problem. Peter H. Gott is a retired physician and the author of several books.

Mother of slain Utah boy may face murder charge

By Paul Foy and Jennifer Dobner

FARMINGTON, Utah — Prosecutors in Utah said Friday they may file murder charges against the mother of a 4-year-old boy whose body was found in a canyon earlier this week.

Searchers dug up Ethan Stacy's badly beaten and disfigured body Tuesday, about 10 days after he arrived in Utah for a summer visit with his mother, Stephanie Sloop, 27.

Davis County Attorney Troy Rawlings said Sloop and her husband, Nathanael Sloop, 31, will likely be charged with aggravated murder in the boy's death. Before Friday, the possibility of murder charges had only been discussed for Nathanael Sloop. “We're looking at aggravated murder — both defendants are suspects at this point,” Rawlings said.

Police said Stephanie Sloop initially told officers her son had wandered away from her Layton apartment.

But probable cause statements said Nathanael Sloop acknowledged beating the boy for days before his death on Sunday and Stephanie Sloop did nothing to stop it. After the boy died, Nathanael Sloop used a hammer to disfigure the boy's face and teeth to keep him from being identified, then buried the body in a canyon, according to Nathanael Sloop looks back before walking out at what was his first appearance at the Second District Court in Farmington, Utah, on Friday. He is a suspect in the death of his 4-year-old stepson, Ethan Stacy, whose body was found buried in a wooded area near Powder Mountain on Tuesday. Formal charges have not been filed.

the documents.

The Sloops may also be charged with felony child abuse, obstruction of justice and desecration of a corpse, Rawlings said.

At a court hearing Friday, both separately agreed to waive their right to be bailed out of jail until at least their next court appearance on May 28.

Nathanael Sloop kept his head low and wept softly during his court appearance. Stephanie Sloop appeared withdrawn and showed no visible emotion during the twin hearings that together lasted less than 15 minutes.

Earlier, Nathanael Sloop's court-appointed attorney, Todd Utzinger, would not discuss specifics of the case or possible charges. He said he met with both Sloops Friday morning at the Davis County Jail and advised them to stop talking to detectives.

Attorney Julie George, who was appointed to represent Stephanie Sloop, said her client “is very emotional and having a difficult time.”

Prosecutors are waiting to file charges because there is the potential for the death penalty.

“We're not going to file charges before all of our ducks are in a row and we're ready to go, but we intend to get there,” Rawlings said.

The 2nd District Court hearing in Farmington drew about two dozen members of the advocacy group Bikers Against Child Abuse and many other people unconnected to the case.

Gov’t met with enviros on land protection in West

By Matt Gouras
Associated Press writer

HELENA, Mont. — Recently released documents show the Obama administration was getting ideas from environmental groups about setting aside millions of acres in the West, drawing the ire of land users who said discussions were being developed behind their back.

In the documents — most of which are e-mail messages — the environmental groups suggest various ways to protect land, such as by creating national monuments, buying private land or through conservation easements.

A subsequent internal Interior Department memo — which the agency said is simply the product of brainstorming — listed 2.5 million acres in Montana for a new bison range as one of 14 sites in nine Western states being considered as national monuments.

Some of the other sites mentioned in the Interior Department documents include the Berryessa Snow Mountains in California, the Northwest Sonoran Desert in Arizona, the San Juan Islands in Washington state and two possible designations in Utah: the San Rafael Swell and Cedar Mesa.

Interior Secretary Ken Salazar said any proposals or decision would face public input.

Republicans who submitted an information request to obtain the documents blasted the information as proof that the administration was privately crafting large-scale land use plans. Federal agencies have so far produced only a fraction of the requested documents, they said.

“We now find references to plans that Montanans were told weren't in the works,” said U.S. Rep. Denny Rehberg, a Montana Republican. “This doesn't pass the smell test.”

The e-mails show detailed discussions that went into brainstorming for the “Treasured Landscapes Initiative.”

In Montana, a dozen or so pages show a back-and-forth discussion setting up meetings and brainstorming ways to protect prairie grasslands stretching from the Charles M. Russell National Wildlife Refuge north to the Canadian border. Much of that land is leased for cattle grazing and used in other ways.

“Ranchers were not involved in these discussions despite always being respectful of federal agency processes,” said Errol Rice, executive vice president of the Montana Stockgrowers Association. “Removing ranchers from these lands in the name of preservation is not in the public's best interest.”

Motorized users said they also were surprised to find out they were left out of the brainstorming for land they use.

“We are concerned that with the Treasured Landscapes Initiative, it appear the only groups that have had input have been the environmental groups,” said Russ Ehnes, with the Montana Trail Vehicle Riders Association. “If there are indeed going to be monument designations, we would expect this administration to do what they promised in the campaign and let all stakeholders participate in the process.”

Ward’s campaign manager leaving post

BOISE — Republican congressional candidate Vaughn Ward's campaign manager is stepping down — 12 days before the primary and in the wake of a series of political missteps.

Ward campaign consultant Mike Tracy confirmed Friday that Ward has accepted the resignation of Ryan O'Barto, who also served as spokesman.

Tracy, a press secretary for former Idaho Sen. Larry Craig, told The Associated Press he will begin serving as campaign spokesman.

The latest mishap for Ward emerged Thursday when it was reported that position statements on Ward's website appeared to have been cut and pasted from other GOP candidate websites and writings.

Tea Party Boise endorses Labrador for U.S. House

BOISE — The leaders of Tea Party Boise are endorsing Republican Raul Labrador in the race for the GOP nomination in Idaho's 1st Congressional District.

The organization, which touts 2,600 members in southwestern Idaho, picked Labrador Friday over his primary rival Vaughn Ward.

The endorsement comes 12 days before the primary election to determine which Republican candidate will square off in November against first-term Democrat Walt Minnick.

Tea Party officials say Labrador, who has served two terms in the Idaho House of Representatives, better understands the issues facing Idahoans and Americans.

Lewiston school employees to take 2.1 percent cut

LEWISTON — Students in the Lewiston School District will go to class two fewer days and employees there will see a 2.1 percent cut in pay next school year, part of a pact between administrators and the local teachers union to make up for less state money in 2010-2011.

Officials called the concessions “difficult and emotional.”

The school board voted 5-0 to approve a contract that calls for teachers working 186 days, down from 190 this year.

And students get out of school June 7, instead of June 9.

The 2010 Legislature approved a $128 million cut to public education to help balance a budget hammered by falling tax revenue.

In Lewiston's case, the cuts amount to about $2.8 million, pushing the annual budget back to 2005 levels.

Luna: Feds set ‘unrealistic goal’ for ed reform

BOISE (AP) — Idaho public schools chief Tom Luna charged President Obama's administration with setting an “unrealistic goal” to qualify for cash meant for an education reform program, so he's not going to apply a second time.

In April, Luna said he'd try again for “Race to the Top” grants after missing out in the first round. Then, Idaho ranked just 28 out of 41 states and the District of Columbia.

Only Delaware and Tennessee got money. The U.S. Department of Education still has some $3 billion in grants.

But Luna now says Idaho school districts shouldn't spend their “precious time and resources competing for an unrealistic goal that has been set by the federal government, not the state of Idaho.”

Luna says the short application timeline places an “undue burden” on school districts.

ERRORS DISCOVERED

Free US Gov't issued coin giveaway begins today

All 57 never-circulated U.S. State Quarter Dollars are being given away free to reward the first 14,052 readers who find the error and claim one of the last remaining discounted Gallery Displays before the midnight tomorrow order deadline

By J.S. Speakman
Universal Media Syndicate

(UMS) – Everyone hates making errors. But in the world of coins and currency when someone makes an error, it usually pays huge dividends to whoever finds it.

“I can’t believe errors occurred on these Gallery Displays with the tight procedures we have in place,” said Jefferson Marshall, Executive Director of the private World Reserve Monetary Exchange.

“That’s why I’ve directed our vault officials to give away all 57 never-circulated U.S. State Quarters as a reward to all readers who find at least one of the errors,” said Marshall.

There are only 14,052 of these Gallery Displays left so, “readers who want to make sure to get the complete set of all 57 State Quarters for free should closely inspect the large photo for the error and call in today,” Marshall added.

Whether or not the errors on these custom-built, museum-quality Gallery Displays will ever cause them to become sought after by collectors, only time will tell. But one thing is for sure, the quality of the construction is beyond compare. “We had a frame shop build a duplicate and the price tag was $231.00 and that was without a single coin, but because of the error we’re able to give them away fully loaded with all 57 U.S. State and Territory Quarter Dollars Encapsulated in never-circulated condition for just $88 and shipping. It’s truly the bargain of a lifetime,” said Marshall.

Starting at 8:00am this morning and ending at midnight tomorrow, the World Reserve Monetary Exchange guarantees that each of the last 14,052 Gallery Displays will be filled with all 57 State and Territory Quarters free with each order of the Gallery Display and shipping.

When asked how all this happened, Marshall said, “A former World Reserve proofreader failed to catch these errors and officially accepted them into our inventory.” So, now the private vaults of the World Reserve contain these frames that are perfect quality, but contain two known spelling errors.

Because of this extreme oversight, the World Reserve has quarantined these Gallery Displays.

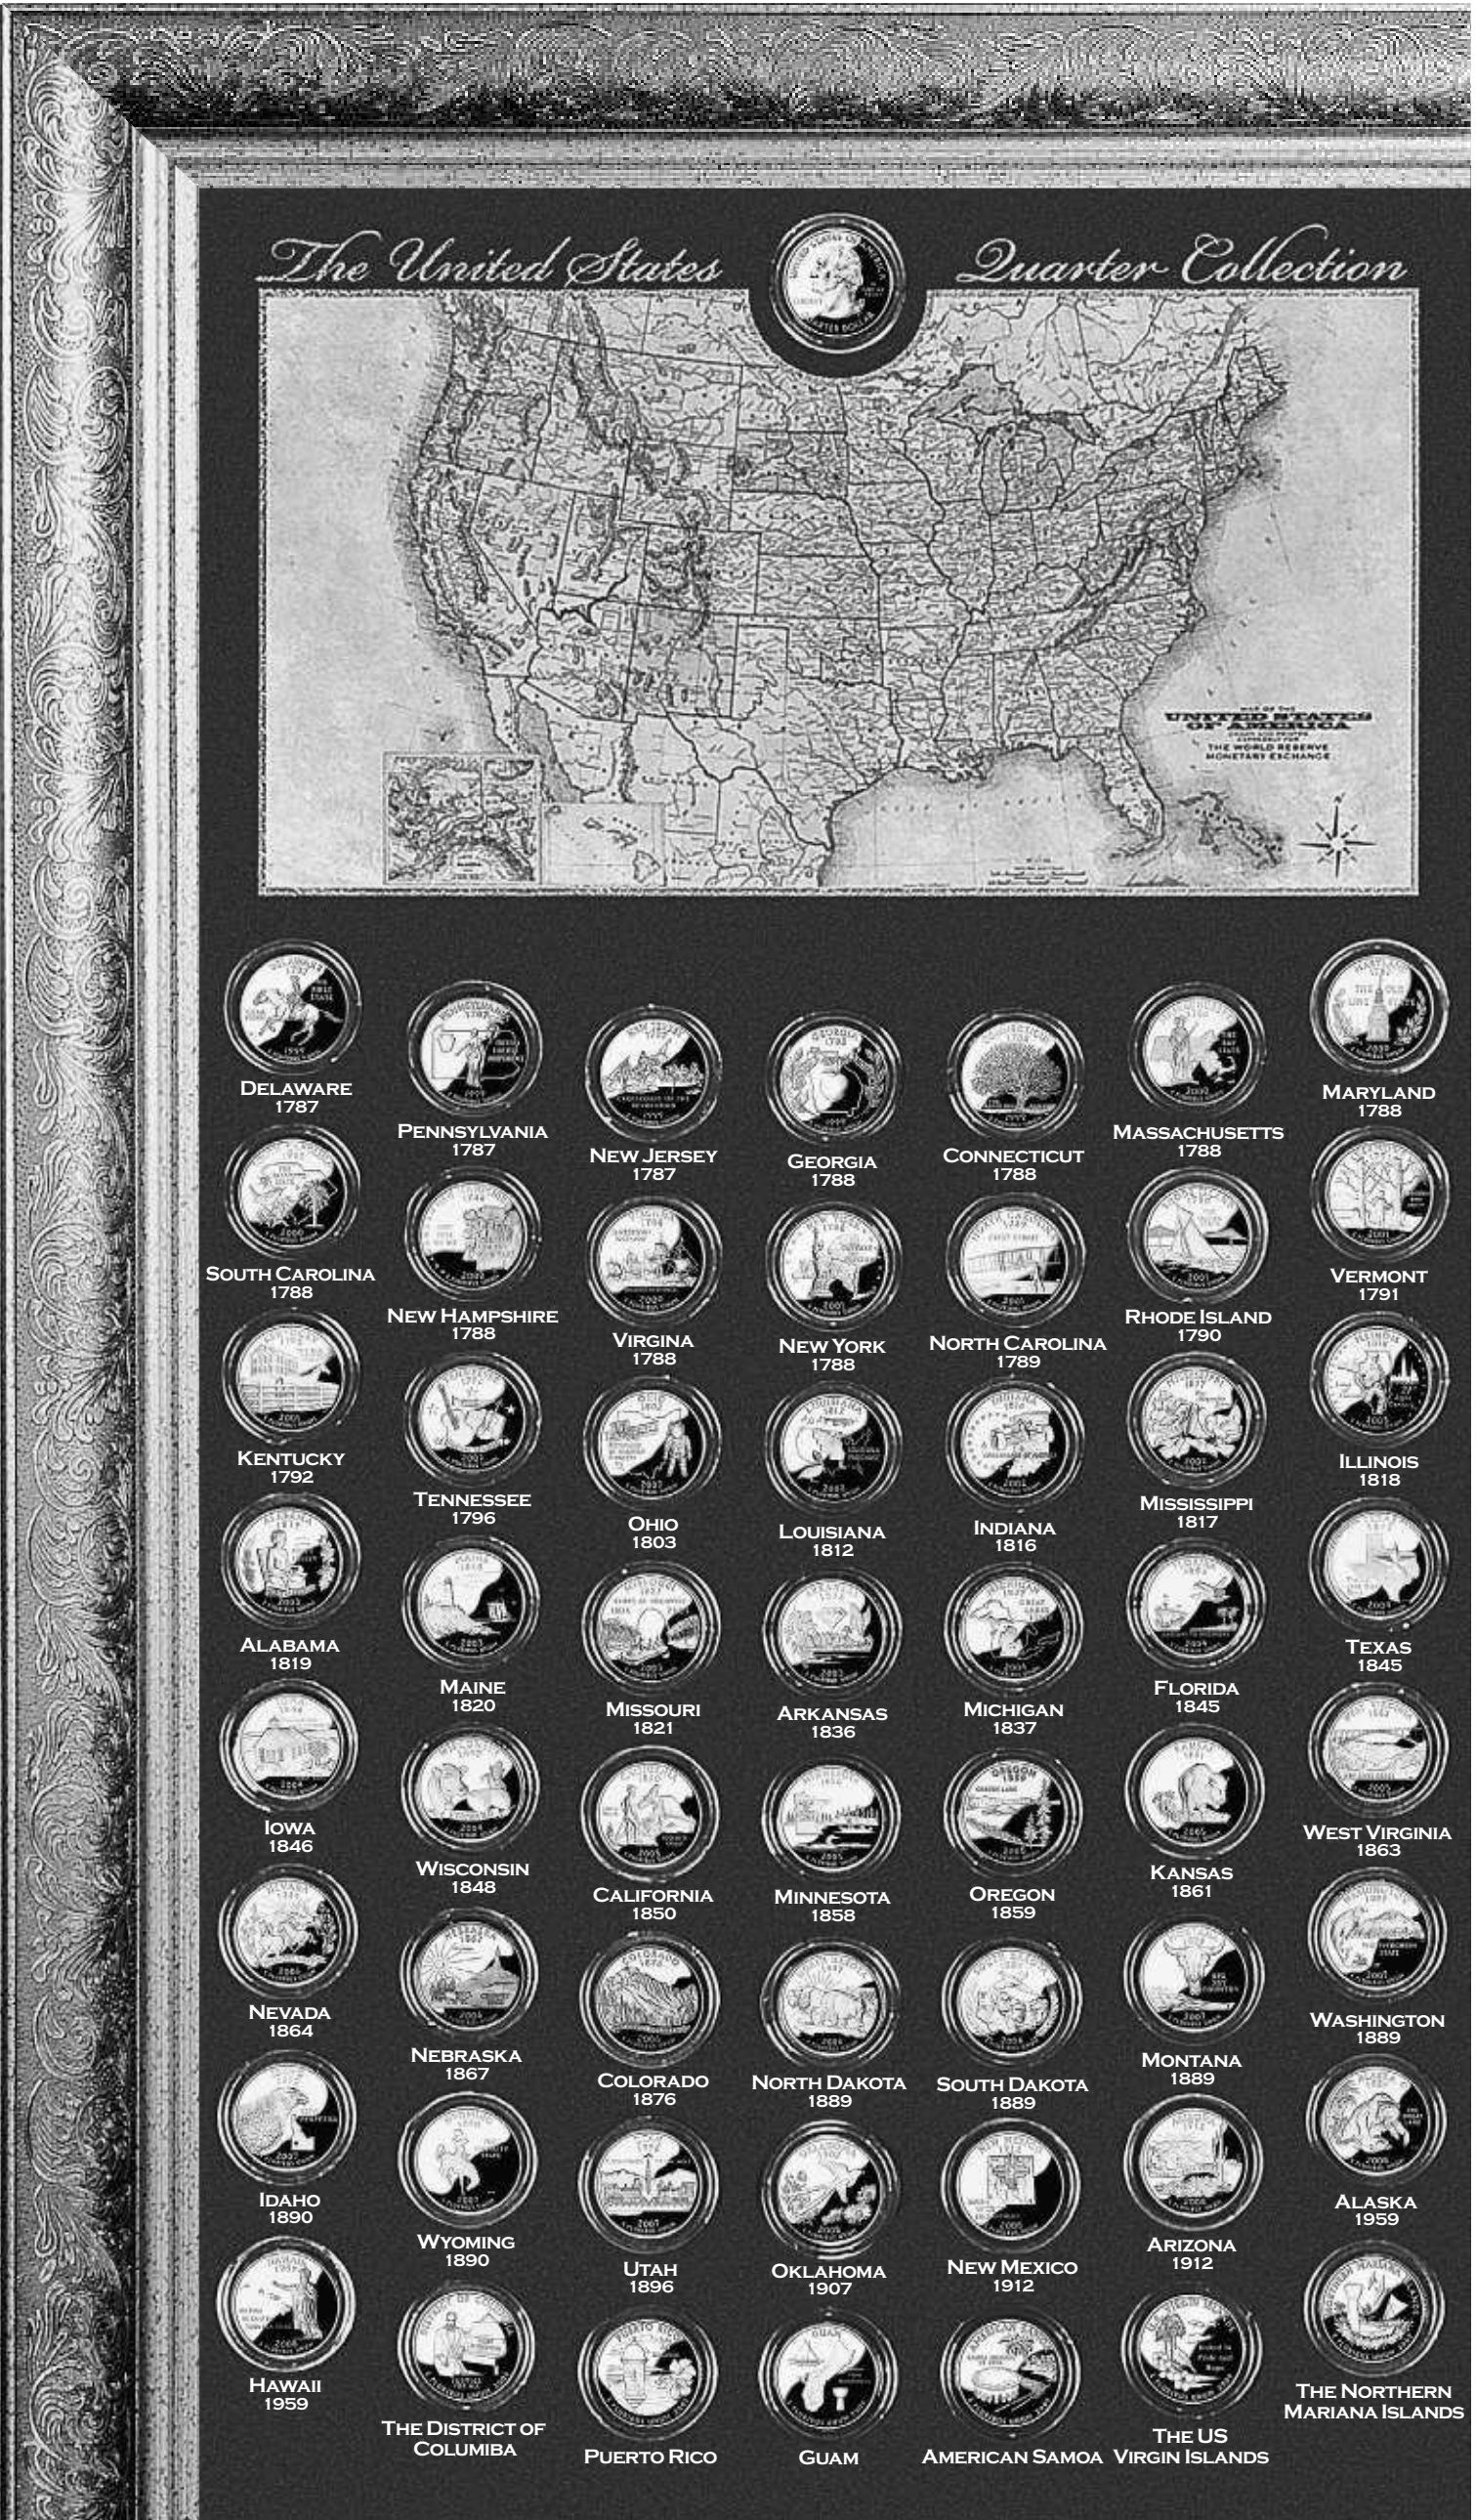

“They cannot be sold as new because they simply do not meet our strict standards of perfection,” Marshall added. “So instead, I’ve sent a Directive to immediately discount these from their original price of $198 which you will find on our website down to just $88 and shipping for today’s readers, but just until midnight tomorrow, or until they’re all gone,” he said.

Everybody loves to find the mistake. And the two mistakes in this run of the classic custom-made Gallery Display are actually somewhat challenging to find. So for readers who are struggling to find the errors, here’s a hint. One spelling error is in the second row, and one is in the bottom row.

“We’re bracing for all the calls because everyone wants to get their free coins,” said Aaron Stryker, the Director of Hotline Operations. So when the lines are busy, keep trying. “We promise to get every call,” Stryker said. “Beat the deadline and you’ll be bragging to your family and friends how you found the spelling error and got all the coins absolutely free,” he added. ■

■ VALUABLE: Never-Circulated State Quarters like these have increased up to 500% in collector value because they are a much higher quality than pocket change. That’s why everyone is trying to get the whole collection free before they’re gone forever.

■ FREE: Today’s readers who find just one of the spelling errors in the Gallery Display above and call the Toll Free Hotline at 1-866-942-6744 before midnight tomorrow get all 57 U.S. State and Territory Quarter Dollars free with each discounted Gallery Display.

Missed opportunities doom CSI baseball

Lay sets school SB record in loss

By Justin Lawson
Times-News correspondent

HENDERSON, Nev. — Just two days ago, the College of Southern Idaho baseball struggled to get hits with runners in scoring position and fell into the loser’s bracket of the Region 18 Tournament. On Thursday, CSI did the same and fell out of the tournament altogether. The Golden Eagles left nine runners on base in a 3-2 loss to Western Nevada in an elimination game for both teams and fell just short of playing for a spot in the tournament title game against Southern Nevada. “It was one of those games that I just love being involved in,” CSI coach Boomer Walker said. “It’s one of those games that comes down to a break or one AB (at-bat) or one pitch and that decides the game. Western took advantage of one more opportunity than we did and that was the decider.” CSI (37-22) failed to get runners home in five innings, including a force-out at home with the bases loaded in the sixth inning. The sixth was essentially the difference between a win and loss. CSI loaded the bases without registering a hit after Kyle Beverley was hit by a pitch to start the inning and Blake Lively and JC Paquin walked consecutively. But Tanner Craswell grounded into a fielder’s choice at home and Remington Pullin struck out looking.

The Golden Eagles did take advantage of a Western Nevada error in the inning when Ryan Cooperstone grounded to second for what should have been close out at first, but Jonathan Sigado’s throw was in the dirt and first baseman Eric Maupin couldn’t dig it out. Lively scored on the play to tie the game at 2-2. Ryan Lay ended the inning with a fly out to centerfield. “I’m not sure (what happened), maybe it was a little bit of people trying too much somewhat,” Lay said. “Some people did put together great at-bats for us, the ball just didn’t fall and that’s just part of baseball.”

Bruins claim fourth straight district baseball crown

By Ryan Howe

One streak ended and another extended as Twin Falls beat Minico 6-4 to claim the District IV Great Basin Conference baseball championship Friday at Bill Ingram Field. Including the last three Region Four-Five-Six titles won as a Class 5A program, the Bruins have now won four straight district championships. Meanwhile, Minico, which had won the last five Great Basin West titles, saw its streak of league dominance end. Both teams have clinched berths in the Class 4A state tournament next week at Rodeo Park in Nampa. “We’re pretty confident going into state,” said Bruin sophomore Zayne Slotten. “We’ve played pretty good all year and you want to be playing your best going into the state tournament.” Slotten helped spark Twin Falls with two outs in the first inning when he sent Dylan Winnmill’s 3-2 offering over the left field wall for a three-run homer. “It was a fastball inside and I was just trying to make contact with it, but I hit it well,” Slotten said of his first home run of the year. “It makes you feel a little bit more confident when you get things started hot and then you roll into the game with that swagger, like you can’t be beat.” Zak Slotten and Jayson Welker each drove in a run, and Cy Sneed earned the complete-game victory with seven strikeouts and one walk. “I’m proud of our kids today because they didn’t come out and say ‘Hey, we’re already in state,’” said Twin Falls coach Tim Stadelmeir. “They knew what they were playing for.” With limited arms available, Minico used a makeshift bullpen that gave a decent effort and put the Spartans in position. Winnmill made his first start of the year, and Nate Hanks recorded zero earned runs, three hits, and one walk in four innings of relief. “Their pitchers did a good job keeping us off balance,” Stadelmeir said. “We didn’t make a lot of adjustments early on, but we found a way to win.” Casey Christiansen batted 2-for-4 with an RBI and Andrew Frank drove in two runs for Minico. “Overall we’re a decent place heading into the tournament,” said Minico coach Ben Frank. “Offensively I’m pretty comfortable. The only thing we’ve got to do better is execute our short game. There were a couple times where we could have got bunts down that would have made it a tough situation, we just didn’t get it done.” At state, Twin Falls (25-4) gets a first-round matchup with the winner of the Hillcrest-Skyview play-in game, held at 3 p.m. today at Bill Ingram Field. Minico (21-11) gets the District 1-2 champion in the first round.

CSI softball blows big lead against Salt Lake

By Bradley Guire

SALT LAKE CITY — Teams at this year’s Region 18 Softball Tournament may have thought they saw a little vulnerability in the No. 1 team in the nation, Salt Lake Community College. The Bruins found themselves trailing twice at this tournament, first against Snow College on Thursday and again on Friday against the College of Southern Idaho. Although it has a soft underbelly, a shark is still a shark. CSI found that out the hard way as the Bruins overcame a five-run lead to defeat the Golden Eagles 8-7 in the championship semifinal game. Salt Lake notched six runs in the final three innings of an eight-inning game to advance to the title match and force the Eagles into the elimination bracket. “It’s tough to get those 21 outs,” head coach Nick Baumert said of facing the Bruins. “There were too many mistakes, and when you give them extra outs, they’ll make you pay.” Tied at 7-7 in the bottom of the eighth, Salt Lake catcher Cyd Allen took one of Generra Nielson’s pitches deep for a solo home run to win the game. It was a reversal of fortunes from the early innings, when it appeared that the Eagles had the

BSU’s Petersen to headline sports medicine symposium

For the Times-News

Boise State University football coach Chris Petersen will be the keynote speaker at this summer’s Sports Medicine Symposium at the College of Southern Idaho. The symposium, which will be held June 25 and 26 on the College of Southern Idaho campus, will address the growing concern over athletes who suffer concussions while participating in various sports. Legislation has been attempted in Idaho and other states to establish standards of care as well as guidelines regulating how quickly athletes can return to play after concussions. The symposium will also address other sports injury issues. The annual event provides students, coaches, athletic trainers, physical therapists, and physicians the current standards of care for common athletic injuries as well as guidelines on how quickly players can return. Areas of focus will include ACL and shoulder injuries, prescription drug interactions in athletes, and medical emergencies. The keynote address at

5:30 p.m., Thursday, June 24, will be held at Baun Gymnasium at Twin Falls High School. Petersen will be accompanied by new Boise State men’s basketball coach Leon Rice, as well as some former and current players. They will be available after the address for a meet and greet. Petersen’s address is free and open to the public, but tickets are required for admission. Tickets can be obtained in advance by calling the CSI Physical Education office at 732-6475, Primary Therapy Source at 734-7333, or St. Luke’s-Elks Rehab at 737-2126. The cost to attend the two-day symposium at CSI is $125. Online registration is available at www.stlukes-online.org.

Gagne sends Flyers to NHL Eastern finals

BOSTON (AP) —The Philadelphia Flyers overcame a couple of 3-0 deficits to finish off the Boston Bruins.

Simon Gagne scored on a power play with 7:08 left to cap a comeback from a three-goal deficit, and the Flyers won 4-3 on Thursday night for a berth in the Eastern Conference finals that seemed a distant dream after they lost the first three games.

For the Bruins, the season will be remembered for the colossal collapse. They're only the third team in NHL history to lose a series after winning the first three games.

And now the seventh-seeded Flyers get to start the next round at home Sunday night against another surprising conference finalist, the eighth-seeded Montreal Canadiens.

Gagne, a major force since returning from a toe injury for Game 4, scored with only 18 seconds left in a power play after the Bruins were penalized for having too many men on the ice.

Too many men and too few goals for Boston.

lead for good in the bottom of the sixth inning when Brooks Klein hit a sacrifice fly to right field to score Jay Skilton.

Casey Lish made his second appearance in the tournament after earning the win in the first game of the series. The sophomore made a plea to Walker on Thursday night at the team hotel to start the game. He threw six innings on Wednesday, but said he would give the Golden Eagles two innings.

Lish, though, struggled and only got one WNC batter out, faced four and gave up two runs on three hits. He was pulled for Tyler Duffin, who gave up a sac-fly that scored an inherited runner and struck out Maupin to end the inning.

"The kid's been someone we've been able to trust in every situation, on the field or off the field and we had to give him the shot; it didn't work out," Walker said of

Lish. "That doesn't mean we would have won the game if we would have started some else, but it just didn't work out for Casey."

Duffin went five innings and gave up three hits and the sac-fly in the sixth, and the loss, was credited to him. Travis Huber finished the game.

In his last game as a Golden Eagle, Lay managed to take sole possession of the single-season stolen base record for 37 at CSI. He broke a 22-year-old mark held by Erroll Shirer when he stole second base in the third.

"I had opportunities and took them to help out the team," said Lay, who was understandably more concerned with the loss than the record. "It got me in the record book, I guess."

standings in the NAPA Street Stocks division, where he now occupies second spot in the rankings. Still in pursuit of his first main event win of season, Pehrson will have to contend with others in the top five, including Rob Roche and Chase Carraway, who are in the hunt for a win of their own.

Last weekend, Brennan's Carpet Pony Stocks driver Ray Homolka stretched his lead in the division by an additional 10 points over new runner-up in the standings Todd Audet. Audet will want to keep a close rein on Homolka this evening in order to gain any ground on the former champion.

Quale's Electronics Hornets driver Andy Brennan not only got his first win last weekend — he moved up to second in the point standings as well. Brennan hopes his good fortune continues while Ty Garibay would like a better ending to his less than stellar outing last Saturday night.

The Jr. Stingers will be rounding out tonight's events.

Declo softball punches ticket to state

Times-News

The Declo Hornets did it the hard way, but they're going to the state tournament.

After picking up a 7-2 win in the opener of the Canyon Conference softball tournament's best-of-three series at Glenns Ferry on Friday, the Hornets rallied for seven runs in the top of the sixth of Game 2 for an 11-8 win over the Pilots to take the conference's only berth to the Class 2A state tournament.

Brinlee Brashears scattered six hits in the opener for Declo, which saw the Hornets benefit from 10 Glenns Ferry errors.

Glenns Ferry (15-11) came out firing in Game 2 but couldn't get an out when it needed to in the decisive inning.

"We didn't hit the ball and when we did it was right to somebody," said Glenns Ferry coach Kelli McHone. "We couldn't get an out and some girls at the bottom of the lineup got some big hits for them.

"We've been pretty evenly matched. Today the ball bounced their way and it didn't our way. But I'm proud of the girls, they could have quit after the first game since that was a big game. We didn't just give up; we made a ball game out of it."

Declo will face District III's runner-up at 5 p.m.,

Thursday in the opener of the state tournament, held at Homedale.

Homer parade lifts Mariners over Rays

HED: ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Franklin Gutierrez, Adam Moore and Mike Sweeney homered, helping the light-hitting Mariners beat the baseball-best Rays 4-3 on Friday.

Right-hander Doug Fister (3-1) allowed one run and four hits in five innings as the last-place Mariners won for just the third time in 13 games.

Reliever Shawn Kelley gave up a two-run homer to Evan Longoria, enabling the Rays to pull within 4-3 in the eighth. David Aardsma got the final three outs for his ninth save in 11 opportunities.

Chris Coghlan hit the first home run by a left-handed batter for Florida this season, and Gaby Sanchez also connected.

YANKEES 8, TWINS 4
NEW YORK — Alex Rodriguez followed a seventh-inning intentional walk to Mark Teixeira with his 19th career grand slam to power the Yankees.

A-Rod nearly carried his bat all the way to first base, then raised a fist in triumph after the drive off Matt Guerrier, who had just replaced left-hander Brian Duensing with Minnesota ahead 4-3. The homer was Rodriguez's 587th, moving him past Frank Robinson into sole possession of seventh place.

BLUE JAYS 16, RANGERS 10
TORONTO — Aaron Hill, Travis Snider and Vernon Wells all hit three-run home runs and the Toronto Blue Jays outslugged the Rangers for a wild win.

The Blue Jays pounded out 15 total hits and boosted their major league lead in home runs (57) and extra-base hits (162).

NATIONAL LEAGUE CARDINALS 4, REDS 3
CINCINNATI — Albert Pujols ended the St. Louis Cardinals' longest homer drought in three years with a two-run shot that landed in the front row, and left-hander Jaime Garcia pitched into the seventh inning in another Fernando Valenzuela-like appearance.

Ryan Ludwick added a two-run shot off Aaron Harang (2-5) that also barely cleared the wall, sparking an offense that hadn't homered in the last nine games.

Cavs, LeBron's futures uncertain after loss

INDEPENDENCE, Ohio (AP) — The Cavaliers' season of seasons, the one supposed to end Cleveland's tortured 46-year title drought, ended without a parade or King James' coronation as a champion.

It's over.

The pain endures, though. And it may only worsen.

Superstar LeBron James hasn't bolted as a free agent for New York or Chicago or Los Angeles or New Jersey or (fill in your favorite NBA city here) — at least not yet. And Cavs coach Mike Brown hasn't been fired — at least not yet. General manager Danny Ferry still has his job, too.

That three-ring circus hasn't opened.

One day after their title run was snuffed by a more focused Boston team on the Celtics' famed parquet floor, and with two-time MVP James' impending free agency looming on the horizon like an inescapable hurricane, the Cavaliers began piecing together what went wrong.

It hurt.

"It's one of those things that you can't believe it after it's happened," shellshocked owner Dan Gilbert said.

Reality hit hard on Friday as the organization and Cavaliers fans faced Day One of the Summer of LeBron, which wasn't supposed to arrive until mid-June. But it's here and it's going to be stormy.

WOODSON OUT AS HAWKS COACH

The Associated Press

Mike Woodson is out as coach of the Atlanta Hawks after the team was swept in the second round of the playoffs by the Orlando Magic.

General manager Rick Sund said Friday the team will not offer Woodson a new contract. He coached the Hawks for six seasons, and they improved their record every year after managing just 13 wins in his debut.

whether it can re-sign James, whose recruitment by other cities began with New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg saying he may give him a "big sales pitch."

Gilbert wasn't amused.

"I would think Mayor Bloomberg has better things to do than that," said Gilbert, who contends the Cavs remain the best fit for James. "Besides that, we have to ignore the noise. People in New York read that stuff more than people in Cleveland do. We are focused on building the best franchise, the best environment, the best place for a long-term situation for LeBron or any free agent that wants to come here.

"We will do everything in our power to attract great talent and keep great talent."

Bruins on the ropes.

Home runs from Mikkel Griffin, Kelsey Bryant and McChel Hunt, along with an RBI hit from Lyndi Miller, put CSI up 7-2 by the fourth inning. The teams battled to a stalemate through the bottom of the sixth, when the Bruins scratched up a pair of runs to narrow the gap. In the bottom of the seventh, with CSI needing three outs to win, Krystin Jachim blasted a home run with runners on to tie the game 7-7. The Eagles soon got out of the inning without giving up any more runs to force extra innings.

Nielson put some of the blame on herself, as she said that she faced too many batters, who were getting too used to her.

Baumert, who noted the fielding errors, defended his ace: "(Generra) threw well enough. It was nothing that Nielson allowed eight runs on 14 hits with three walks and five strikeouts while holding Salt Lake to two runs through the first five innings. It was the 11th time out of 65 games that CSI has allowed double-digit hits.

Bruins again. CSI must eliminate Snow College in the 11 a.m. game to make the championship match. There, the Eagles have to beat Salt Lake twice to claim the title and a berth to next week's NJCAA Division I Tournament in St. George, Utah. "It will be tough," Nielson said. "But it's about who has the biggest heart."

Jimmie Johnson not as unstoppable after switch to spoiler

By Anthony Andro
McClatchy Newspapers

FORT WORTH, Texas — Coincidence or not, the introduction of the spoiler has turned the Sprint Cup Chase for the Championship into just that, a real-life chase.

Since it was introduced at Martinsville, four drivers have found their way to Victory Lane, and not one of them has been Jimmie Johnson.

Since the switch from the rear wing to the spoiler, the four-time Sprint Cup champion hasn't been the dominant driver in the series or even at Hendrick Motorsports.

The best driver with the spoiler has been Denny Hamlin, who has won three of the six races with the spoiler. Johnson's teammate Jeff Gordon has had more opportunities to win than Johnson has, only to have bad luck and bad timing hamper him.

"I think it's made a significant change in the sport, and some teams have adapted to it better than others, and there could be different drivers within the same organization that have done better or worse with it," said Kurt Busch, whose victory at Atlanta came before the spoiler. "An example I'd like to lead with is Jeff Gordon has really flourished with the new spoiler, where Mark Martin has struggled a little bit. So I find it interesting on how it's balancing the car different, whether it's front downforce, rear downforce, driving styles, and so we're starting to see what the spoiler's change is doing."

When the spoiler was tested at TMS earlier this season, the four drivers who tested it said the change would favor the teams that could adapt the quickest. It would also level the playing field, because Johnson would be starting from square one like the other 42 drivers.

To be fair, the spoiler isn't the only reason Johnson hasn't won a race since Bristol. Accidents in two of the last three races have led to finishes of 31st and 36th. And despite those problems, Johnson trails only Kevin Harvick in the standings.

"Is the 48 car just having bad luck right now, or has it really changed the game that much for them?" said Busch, who was on the weekly NASCAR teleconference. "We'll understand a little bit more as we go down into these summer month races like Charlotte, Pocono and Michigan. Those will be some good tests to see who's going to be strong in the upcoming months."

The spoiler hasn't just opened the point standings,

TRUEX WINS POLE AT DOVER

DOVER, Del. (AP) — Martin Truex Jr. turned a lap of 157.315 mph and has won the pole at Dover International Speedway.

Kasey Kahne was second and Mark Martin third in Friday's qualifying.

Truex won his first pole of the season and first since last November at Phoenix. He won his only career Cup race at Dover in 2007. The native of Mayetta, N.J., has long considered Dover his hometown track.

He is 13th in the points standings in his first season with Michael Waltrip Racing.

it's also opened teams to second-guessing themselves. Some have to wonder if their struggles or successes are because of the way the team is going or if it's because of the spoiler.

You have to give credit to the spoiler for something. It might not have made the racing any better, but it has at least raised questions that haven't been raised before.

Buescher makes switch: Plano, Texas, native James Buescher, 20, will no longer drive for Phoenix Racing in the Nationwide Series. Buescher, who was competing for rookie of the year honors, will switch to the NASCAR Camping World Truck Series where he will drive the No. 31 Turner Motorsports Chevrolet for the remainder of the season. Earlier this year, Phoenix Racing lost its sponsor in the Nationwide Series but was committed to running. But Buescher has just one top-10 finish and has dropped to 19th in the points standings. He finished 13th and 16th in his two Truck Series races this year.

Three NASCAR teams penalized: NASCAR issued penalties and fines to the No. 7 and No. 55 Sprint Cup teams because of violations found at Darlington Raceway. Robby Gordon, owner and driver of the No. 7 team, was docked 25 owner and 25 driver points for unapproved door braces. Gordon's crew chief, Samuel Stanley, was fined $25,000 and placed on probation until Dec. 31. Zachary McGowan, crew chief for the No. 55 team, was fined $25,000 and placed on probation for an unapproved drive gear. Driver Michael McDowell lost 25 driver points and owner Randy Humphrey was docked 25 owner points. Kasey Kahne lost 25 driver points in the Nationwide Series after his No. 38 team was caught with an illegal shock absorber.

Super Saver poised to set up Triple Crown bid

BALTIMORE (AP) — No rail for Bo-rail.

Don't look for jockey Calvin Borel to be riding the rail in the Preakness. He's so confident in Kentucky Derby winner Super Saver — even boasting the colt will win the Triple Crown — that he's come up with a new strategy.

Borel expects Saturday's race to be the opposite of the speed-crazed Derby, where his patented rail-hugging ride guided Super Saver to a 2½-length victory in the slop.

If another horse wants to go to the lead, Borel can position Super Saver just off the pace. If not, he said he and his colt will take it to their 11 rivals after breaking from post No. 8.

that wanes outside its major races.

"I'm always confident in my horse. I maybe say things that I shouldn't — that I'm going to win it," Borel said. "I don't know if people understand, but if you're going to ride, why don't you want to win it? C'mon. That's me. I'm coming here to win the race."

So is trainer Todd Pletcher, who has not won the Preakness in four tries. Despite having saddled 24 horses for the Derby, he didn't win it until he sent in Super Saver with Borel aboard.

"Todd has the first line of his tombstone: Winner of the 2010 Kentucky Derby," trainer Bob Baffert said jokingly.

On TV

Preakness Stakes
2:30 p.m. (Post time 4:15), NBC

Super Saver has won races either on the lead or from a stalking position, giving Borel options in the 1 3-16-mile race.

"I'm not going to ride him like I did the last time, on the fence, I don't believe," he said Friday.

Super Saver is the early 5-2 favorite for the $1 million Preakness. If the colt can back up Borel's bragging, he'll set himself up for a Triple Crown try in three weeks in the Belmont Stakes.

"This colt is starting to peak at the right time and it's a big, big plus," Borel said.

It's been 32 years since Affirmed swept the Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont to become horse racing's 11th Triple Crown winner. With females Rachel Alexandra and Zenyatta dominating racing these days, the sport is hungry to anoint a king and capture public interest Baffert will saddle 3-1 second choice Lookin At Lucky, the beaten favorite who was compromised by starting on the rail in the Derby. This time, he'll be in the No. 7 post — right next to Super Saver — with new rider Martin Garcia replacing Garrett Gomez.

"Everything is going to be pushed down to the inside," Baffert said. "The whole key to the race is what (Kent) Desormeaux does (on Paddy O'Prado). Kent will probably start the tempo and the rest of us have to fall into it."

Desormeaux knows Pimlico's tight turns better than just about anyone. He won riding titles here earlier in his career and he won the 2008 Preakness aboard Big Brown.

"You have to ride aggressively," said Baffert, a four-time Preakness winner. "That (first) turn comes up quickly. Everything bad happens in that first turn."

Mears gets shot with Vickers out

DOVER, Del (AP) — Casey Mears is normally the driver watching Cup races on TV.

He'll be in the car at Dover International Speedway while Brian Vickers sits this one out.

Mears was needed in a pinch this weekend because Vickers, his friend and Red Bull Racing driver, is hospitalized with blood clots in his veins around his lungs and in his legs.

His Chase for the championship chances are all but gone, but he has more pressing concerns.

"Dealing with that and doing that right is way more important than being here at the track right now," Mears said Friday. "It's never fun to be watching races at home. I'm sure that will wear on him."

Mears knows how Vickers feels.

Mears qualified for only two races this season and has bounced around after sponsorship cutbacks cost him his job at Richard Childress Racing. He was on standby after Denny Hamlin had surgery to repair a torn ACL, and he'll drive week-to-week for Tommy Baldwin's No. 36 car as long as Baldwin can find funding for each race.

He drove the first two months of the season for underfunded Keyed-Up Motorsports.

"It's been crazy, it really has," Mears said. "Obviously, not what I want. I want something solid and I want to run all season. At the same time, there's been parts of it that have been fun. It's enlightened me a lot on what other guys are doing, different teams are doing. In a lot of ways, I learned a lot this year."

Red Bull Racing general manager Jay Frye said Vickers is on medication and was hopeful of being released from the hospital on Friday, but could remain there a few more days. Frye said there is "no timetable" for Vickers' return.

"He's got great reason for optimism that everything's going to be fine," Frye said.

Frye says Vickers complained of discomfort on his chest and went to a hospital in Washington. He says the team is not sure what caused the clots.

The 26-year-old Vickers is in his seventh full season racing in NASCAR's Sprint Cup Series. He has two career Cup wins and made the 12-driver Chase for the championship last season. He's currently ranked 20th in the standings. Missing a start almost certainly will make it impossible for Vickers to make the Chase this season.

"It is a minor setback in a young man's life and career," Frye said. "Obviously, it's a major setback for our race team this weekend."

Jimmie Johnson said Vickers sounded like his usual self when they spoke Thursday night.

"There's still a lot of question marks and concerns and trying to understand just what in the world is going on," Johnson said. "Until they can find out what's going on, there's a lot of worry and concern."

Mears will replace Vickers in the No. 83 Toyota. Frye said Mears will drive for RBR for as long as the team needs him. Frye did not know if Mears would be allowed to drive for Vickers in the NASCAR Sprint All-Star Race, if needed.

Frye said even if Vickers was released before Sunday's race, running at least one lap for points was not an option.

DEAR ABBY: I am 13 and have been home-schooled for a few years, but I hate it.

My parents recently got a divorce after many years of trying to. Although I was used to the idea of their divorce, I cried when it happened. Mom asked me what was wrong and I told her. Her reply was, "Oh, grow up. You're 13, not 51!" It showed me she doesn't care about my feelings.

I don't know why, but sometimes I think I'm the reason behind my parents' split. Also, I have no idea how to tell Mom I want to go to high school next year. I feel like my life is falling apart. What do I do?

— TENNESSEE TEEN IN TURMOIL

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

DEAR TENNESSEE TEEN: Regardless of how old a person is, when parents divorce it can be shocking — even if you saw it coming. It's normal to be sad about it, but don't make your burden harder to bear by feeling in any way guilty about the split.

Children are seldom, if ever, the cause — or even a factor — in a divorce or separation. The circumstances that led your parents to separate are far more complex than they may appear on the surface. Your parents have probably been deeply hurt by each other. Rarely is one party entirely to blame. Do not feel sorry for yourself or ashamed. Divorce happens in the best of families.

Your mother's reaction to your tears was regrettable. It may have been she felt defensive. Divorce can be an emotional roller coaster — so be prepared for her to have mood swings and don't personalize it. (She may be having a bad day.)

As to your attending high school rather than being home-schooled — a way to approach a discussion would be to tell your mother you would like to try it for "a while." She may be more receptive than you think, because she may need to get a job or return to school to prepare for one.

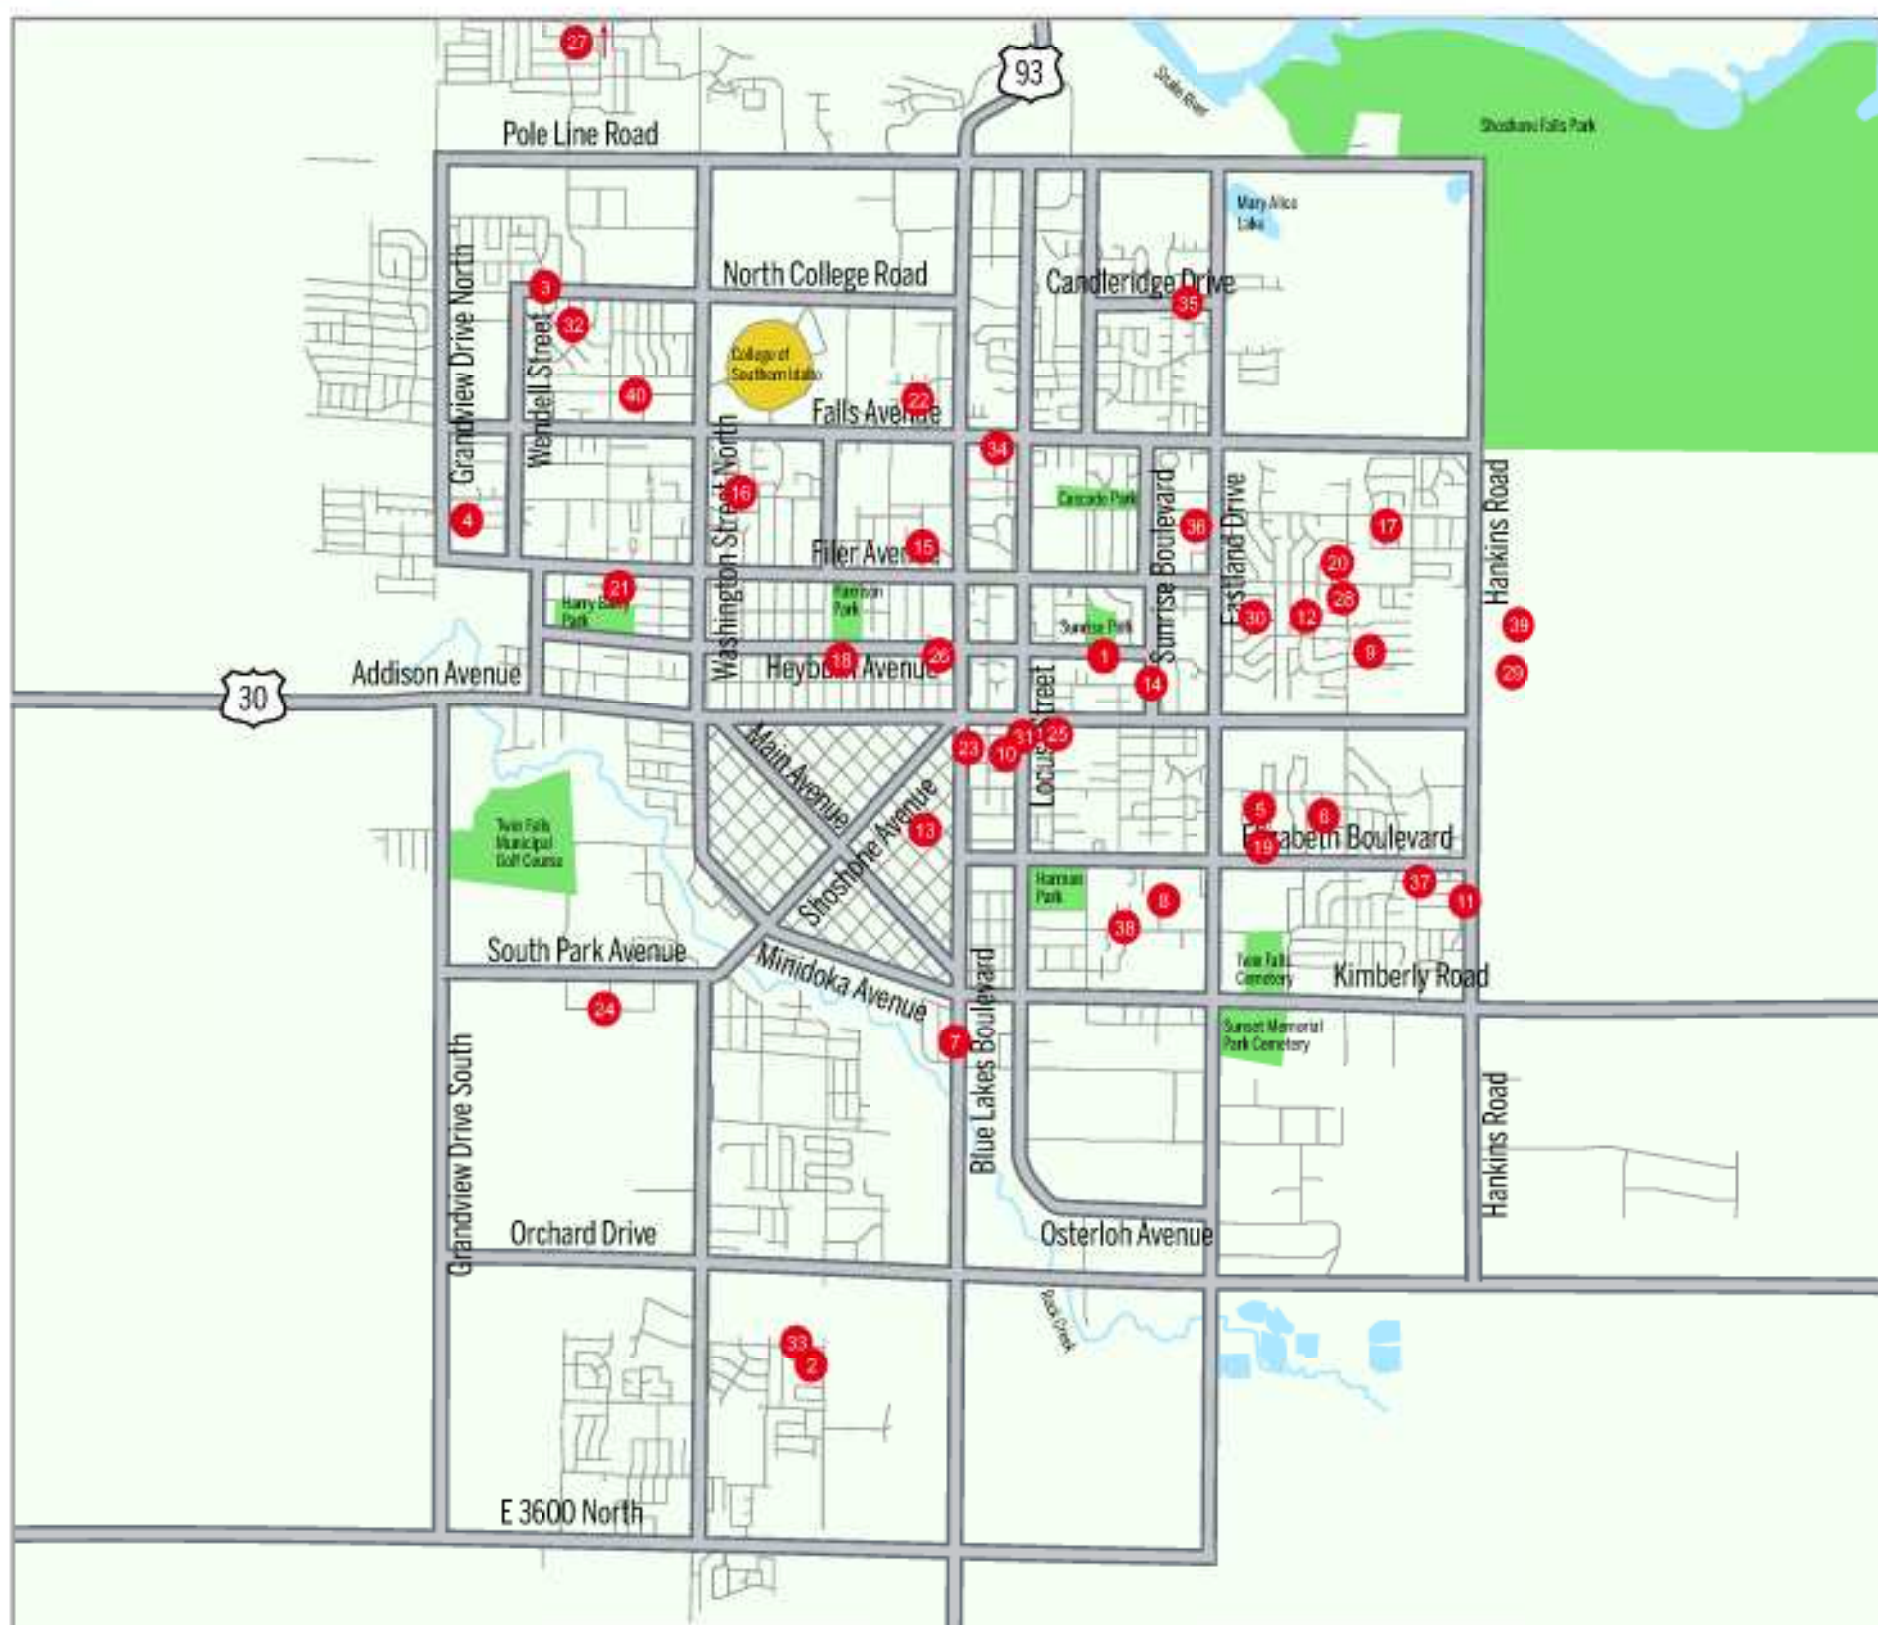

DEAR ABBY: I am a 22-year-old college student. My boyfriend, "Jay," and I have been together four years and plan to become engaged after school. The problem is, I have never told him my mom is a lesbian. She dresses like a man and wears her hair very short. I have always accepted her for who she is — or at least I thought so.

I have told Jay lies about my mom and dad being together when, in fact, they are not. My dad is deceased, and Mom has a girlfriend. I will graduate soon and Jay will be there. So will Mom and her girlfriend.

I feel like I am losing my mind the closer that graduation comes. Jay is a wonderful person, but sometimes he can be judgmental. I have wanted to tell him the truth many times, but I'm afraid of what he will think of me or have second thoughts about our relationship. I can't seem to find the words to tell him even when I try. Please help.

— KEEPING A SECRET IN HUNTSVILLE, TEXAS

DEAR KEEPING A SECRET: Here are the words: "Jay, there is something I need to tell you — something I haven't been completely honest about."

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"At every word a reputation dies."

— Alexander Pope

On this deal from the 1999 Cavendish Pairs, three no-trump by North is as good a spot as any (if the opponents let you play there), assuming the auction has marked East with both black aces. If you get a passive diamond lead, you can run the heart jack to establish a ninth winner painlessly.

If you are going to play a suit game, reaching four hearts may not be all that easy, particularly if East-West can pre-empt actively in clubs, as happened at our featured table. And of course the five-club sacrifice would be extremely cheap.

Fred Gitelman found a great extra chance in five diamonds, giving East the missed opportunity for an equally fine defense. West led a heart, providing declarer with a helpful start. Gitelman won in hand, crossed to dummy with a trump to ruff a club, drew a second trump, and then cashed the heart ace to get the bad news that he had a slow heart loser. Now he found the neat maneuver of leading the club king, on which he discarded a low spade from hand. East won his club ace (ducking does not help) and had to avoid giving a ruff-suff.

So he cashed the spade ace and led another spade, playing his partner for the spade jack, and now Gitelman had a home for his heart loser on dummy's spade winner — contract made. To beat the game, East had to find the unusual play of underleading his spade A-Q. That would have left declarer with an inevitable loser in each major.

ANSWER: This three-diamond call is forcing. (That you opened one diamond is irrelevant — spades are going to be trump.) The three-diamond call asks for help in diamonds; your partner has three or four cards to an honor and most likely a game-try for spades. You have good controls but nothing else, and only three trumps, so sign off in three spades.
