Burglars crash car into T.F. liquor store

By Eric Larsen

Talk about getting smashed. A white 2002 Pontiac was lodged squarely into the bourbon section of State Liquor Store No. 201, its motor still running shortly after 5 a.m. Thursday when Twin Falls police responded to the building's burglar alarm.

Broken bottles littered the store, the check stand where workers stood only hours earlier was obliterated, and the three burglars who allegedly ransacked the store and fled on foot were gone.

"This is like straight out of the movies," said Idaho State Liquor Division Deputy Director Larry Maneely. "It was one of the crazier stories I've heard about. We've had some things occur, but nothing like this."

According to a Thursday city of Twin Falls release, surveillance video from the store at 2041 Kimberly Road shows the Pontiac crash through the building's front doors, after which three individuals — two men and a woman, all masked and carrying bags, Maneely said — rush in, apparently take bottles of alcohol from the store and exit on foot.

While votes will count more than money raised when ballots are cast, disclosure forms covering the period of Jan. 1 through May 10 show the level of financial support that legislative candidates are receiving from donors.

Here are the details:

Sen. Chuck Coiner, R-Twin Falls, reported $11,420 in contributions and starting the year with a cash balance of $1,791, for a total of $13,211.

Syrupy oil washes into La. marshes for first time

By Kevin McGill
Associated Press writer

GRAND ISLE, La. — The spectacle many had feared for a month finally began unfolding as gooney, rust-colored oil washed into the marshes at the mouth of the Mississippi for the first time, stoking public anger and frustration with both BP and the government.

The sense of gloom deepened as BP conceded what some scientists have been saying for weeks: that the oil leak at the bottom of the Gulf of Mexico is bigger than the company previously estimated.

Up to now, only tar balls and a sheen of oil had come ashore. But on Wednesday, chocolate brown and vivid orange globs, sheets and ribbons of foul-smelling oil the consistency of latex paint began coating the reeds and grasses of Louisiana's wetlands, home to rare birds, mammals and a rich debate will focus on the issue of the school's shortened lunch period this year.

The lunch hour was shortened from an hour to about half an hour, with a 25-minute advisory period added to the break. The change came about after the school district switched from a block schedule to a seven-period class schedule for this school year.

The change has raised concerns among some students, who have said it's too short of a time to eat, particularly if they want to leave campus for a meal.

Though the students and administrators have their disagreements, the debate itself is on friendly terms. Proceeds

St. Luke's plans new same-day surgery center

By Nate Poppino
Times-News writer

Outpatient surgery at a hospital can be a hassle, especially if higher-priority patients cause delays.

Officials at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center want to change that.

"We needed a better mousetrap," St. Luke's Chief Financial Officer John Groesbeck said Thursday of the ambulatory surgery center his company plans to build in northern Twin Falls.

Also known as "same-day" surgery centers, such stand-alone facilities provide surgical services that don't require a stay in a hospital. While any outpatient procedure could conceivably be done there, Groesbeck said, St. Luke's will initially focus on three surgery areas: orthopedic, plastic, and ear, nose and throat.

The $4.5 million, 16,000-square-foot center will stand next to DaVita Twin Falls Dialysis Center on Canyon Crest Drive. Hospital officials hope to start work in His challenger, Lee Heider, reported $4,620 in contributions, with expenditures of $1,647 and a cash balance of $2,973, along with a credit card debt of $478.

In the House primary race involving Rep. Leon Smith, R-Twin Falls, and two challengers, Mark Goodman and Rusty Satterwhite, that pattern also holds true.

Smith started the year with a balance of $2,434, and has received $9,440 in contributions. He's spent $5,779 and had $6,095 left on May 10.

Goodman reported $7,449 in contributions and $4,432 in expenses with a balance of $3,017. Goodman spent $2,506 out of his own pocket on campaign materials, and his business, Goodman Electric Motors, donated another $708 toward literature and printings costs.

Satterwhite has pulled in $2,638, spending $2,517 on campaign expenses and leaving him with a cash balance of $120. Of his contributions, he donated $400 to his campaign and his business, Satterwhite Paint Contracting, donated $200.

In the race for the Senate seat in District 25, there's a wide gap among the candidates.

Sen. Michelle Stennett, D-Ketchum, running for the first time after filling in for her husband, Clint Stennett, during the legislative session, has raised $15,300, and spent $2,590, leaving her with $12,709.

David Maestas, also seeking the Democratic nod in the primaries, reported $2,597, and expenses of the same amounts. All of his contributions came out of his pocket.

The same holds for Robert Blakely, also running for the same seat, who reported $161 in expenditures and no contributions.

Republican candidate Jim Donoval, unopposed in the primaries, reported $1,534 in contributions and $1,059 in expenses and a $475 cash balance.

Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, running for reelection to his District 26 Senate seat, reported $15,250 in contributions, in addition to a $1,558 cash balance at the start of the year. He's spent $7,905 and had a balance of $8,903 remaining and a credit card balance of $156.

His opponent in the Republican primaries, Harold Mohlman, reported $76 in contributions, and has spent $26, leaving him with $50.

Vehicular manslaughter charges filed in Jerome

Crash killed Allen Larsen, driver
Irwin Adams faces felony allegation

By Andrea Jackson
Times-News writer

JEROME — A Jerome man is charged with vehicular manslaughter for a crash that killed his friend last year.

Irwin Ryan Adams, 20, was charged with the felony on May 11 — about seven months after the rollover along 200 East Road near 30 North Road that resulted in the death of Allen Larsen, 19.

Adams claimed he had been chased when he was involved in the crash, according to what he told Idaho State Police in court records and the Times-News last year.

Charging documents, however, paint a different picture, saying that Adams was chasing another vehicle that was carrying a girlfriend, two other adults and a baby.

Police say Adams drove his car at 108 mph in a 50 mph zone while "trying to chase down another vehicle and crashing ... which caused the death of the victim, Allen Larsen."

A witness to the crash did not see any cars behind Adams' vehicle, according to police. Attempts to reach Adams Thursday for comment were unsuccessful.

Adams operated his 1995 Saturn with "gross negligence," according to a court record.

Police have said that Adams' car came to rest on the passenger side, after which he was treated for minor injuries.

A not-guilty plea was filed Monday in Jerome, and Adams has been appointed a public defender.

Adams' preliminary hearing is scheduled for June 3 in Jerome.

Caretaker accused of abandoning vulnerable adult

Times-News

The caretaker for a mentally incompetent man is charged with abandoning the man at his Twin Falls home.

Sheri Jean Hodges, 42, allegedly went to Nevada in a vehicle belonging to the "vulnerable adult" for three days in July 2009, leaving the man's welfare at risk, according to court records.

Police found that the man's hygiene needs were not being met, after Hodges allegedly left him with a 17-year-old friend, according to court records in the case filed Jan. 29.

Hodges was arraigned on Thursday in Twin Falls after she was arrested on the felony warrant for abandoning a vulnerable adult.

"There were numerous dishes, and left over food items that were still on the bed forcing (the victim) to live in filth," according to a court record filed by Twin Falls police. "The house was very messy with dirty clothing, dishes and other items spread out. There was an excessive amount of feces in almost every room."

The 17-year-old girl told police that Hodges left her to care for the victim and was unaware of how to give him medication. The victim was put in a situation where he was at "great risk of bodily harm or death," authorities wrote in court records.

The victim's daughter told authorities that Hodges — who was fired after the incident — had been employed to care for the mentally incompetent victim who had Alzheimer's disease and other illnesses. Hodges was to provide meals, daily medication and personal hygiene for the victim 24/7, and in exchange Hodges could live at the victim's residence for free and earn $100 per week, according to court records.

Her preliminary hearing is set for May 28 and a public defender was appointed Thursday.

July and open the facility in April 2011, in time to help juggle surgeries as the main hospital moves to its own new building.

The two new facilities should be able to handle the city's surgery needs for the next decade, Groesbeck said. The same-day center will open three operating rooms right away, saving a fourth for future growth, and its patients will be carefully selected — those at risk of serious complications during their surgery will still be seen at the hospital to take advantage of its resources.

The idea of building a stand-alone center dates back to when St. Luke's started planning its new hospital building, Groesbeck said. Officials this year decided that it was time to move forward, and Groesbeck on Wednesday met with hospital staff to go over the final architectural renderings.

The center will give St. Luke's patients a dedicated place where emergencies and trauma cases won't pre-empt their care, Groesbeck said. He said it will also allow more efficient use of the hospital, where outpatient cases now make up about half of surgeries and continue to grow, thanks in part to advances in technology.

While the business side will be St. Luke's, the actual building will be owned by a new company formed by the hospital, a few physicians and other investors, Groesbeck said. The hospital will then lease the structure, cutting its initial costs.

Though St. Luke's certainly won't complain if it gets more business or market share from its planned center, officials said, that wasn't their primary goal. Rather, the focus was on balancing existing surgery volumes better, Groesbeck said.

Stand-alone ambulatory centers are somewhat rare in south-central Idaho. The national Accreditation Association for Ambulatory Health Care accredits just three in the Magic Valley, according to its website.

Shirley Ramey, nurse manager at the Ambulatory Surgery Center of Burley, said she doesn't expect to see much impact from the Twin Falls venture as St. Luke's already does same-day procedures. And Linda Trainor, administrator of the Sawtooth Surgery Center in Twin Falls, noted the good relationship her center maintains with the hospital and said Sawtooth remains a viable health care provider and small business.

"We feel that we're an example of how health care can be done more efficiently and more cost-effectively," Trainor said.

T.F. to Wood River Valley bus service plan stalls

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — Don't look for public bus service between Twin Falls and Sun Valley until September at the earliest.

Mountain Rides Executive Director Jason Miller said Wednesday that he had hoped to start the bus service this summer. But the Ketchum transportation organization just received a 70-page document on Tuesday that it needs to sort through before it can solicit bids for a private carrier to partner with Mountain Rides.

Miller said he hopes to be able to put the service out for bids by July at the latest.

In the meantime, Mountain Rides will begin the task of determining how it can provide transportation to and from Blaine County's new airport, which is expected to be built 22 miles south of the existing airport, just north of the Lincoln County line.

The airport won't open until 2014 at the earliest.

But Blaine County Commissioner Tom Bowman told Mountain Rides Wednesday that it needs to start planning to handle the transportation needs that could one day include nearly 300 passengers departing from a single commercial jet.

"We see 380 seats a day in the winter right now if they're (flights are) full. It would be a challenge to deal with a larger number of customers coming in a fewer number of times," Bowman said. "I don't think we can expect Sun Valley Company to provide transportation for everyone from the airport."

Bowman said an environmental impact statement for the new airport originally expected by July now likely won't be released until the end of the year due to geotechnical surveys that need to be done.

In a perfect world, he said, airport construction could start March 2012. But there's only a 40 percent likelihood of that happening. The opening date would be December 2014 if an aggressive construction schedule is followed; December 2015, if a "reasonably aggressive" schedule is followed, he said.

Mountain Rides currently doesn't provide service for passengers going to and from Friedman Memorial Airport in Hailey. Nor is it equipped to handle passengers with ski bags and large amounts of luggage, Miller said.

But now would be a good time to test-drive airport service, said replacement airport board member

Nils Ribi.

Board member Tom Blanchard, city administrator for Bellevue, said Bellevue residents would prefer not to see people driving individual rental cars through Bellevue from the airport since few would be interested in stopping in Bellevue to eat or shop.

Both he and Ribi suggested that the resort experience start at the airport with buses offering TV screens and video to introduce visitors to the area and acquaint them with the variety of recreation Sun Valley offers year-round.

Another possibility might be for Sun Valley Co. to equip passengers with half-day lift tickets and take care of their luggage so they can hit the ski slopes before they ever check in, a procedure taken from Walt Disney World in Orlando, Fla.

It's possible Mountain

Rides can get Federal Aviation Administration funds for new buses that are equipped to handle the needs of airport service, Bowman added.

to the city, the Pontiac was still running, lodged 25 feet to 30 feet within the building.

"Wiped out the bourbon section, I heard," Maneely said.

The vehicle, which the city said has not been reported stolen, was later extracted from the building. Police are questioning the vehicle's owner, though they have not released the owner's name.

Twin Falls Police Capt. Matt Hicks told the Times-News in a Thursday e-mail that the investigation into the incident is progressing and police are pursuing several leads.

Maneely said that before the crash, surveillance video appeared to show the suspects attempt to break in by pounding on the storefront's shatterproof glass with a pipe, to no avail. He said the suspects apparently jammed the pipe between the Pontiac's driver seat and its accelerator pedal, and put the empty car in gear, sending it hurtling into the building.

Maneely said he didn't have an estimate on damage done to the building or the value of lost products, but said the Kimberly Road location has done "significant business," accounting for $1.2 million in sales over the last 12 months. He said at the end of April, the store contained inventory worth $117,000.

Damage to the store and its liquor supplies far exceeds the value of any items allegedly stolen from the store, according to the city.

The work for store manager Kelli Spann and District Manager Bob Milne began as soon as the Pontiac was removed and Twin Falls police cleared the scene. Maneely said clean-up and restoration work began Thursday, and while the store remained closed that day, it may open as early as its regular 11 a.m. opening time today.

"If we can get the window wall and the doors reinstalled, and the folks who do those things are pretty quick ... we can get a functional check stand going by Friday," Maneely said.

Police say body found is 12-year-old Colorado girl

By P. Solomon Banda
Associated Press writer

"We don't give up on cases like this."
— Greeley Police Chief Jerry Garner, saying his department will vigorously press the investigation

GREELEY, Colo. — Police confirmed Thursday that a body found in an irrigation ditch in northern Colorado is that of a missing 12-year-old girl who was last seen walking to a friend's house for a birthday party.

Greeley Police Chief Jerry Garner said the body recovered Wednesday is that of Kayleah Wilson, of Greeley, and that the coroner's office ruled the death was a homicide. He said police know the "manner and cause" of death but he declined to provide details. No one has been arrested.

The decomposed body had been in the irrigation ditch "for some time" in an area that had been searched twice, Garner said. Greeley is about 60 miles northeast of Denver.

The ditch is about a half-mile from the sixth-grader's home. A worker checking the ditch after heavy rain found the body in about three feet of water, Sgt. Joe

Kayleah Wilson

Tymkovich said.

Wilson's disappearance on March 28 spawned repeated searches by police, Greeley residents and the FBI. Authorities said they pursued more than 300 leads and knocked on the doors of about 1,000 homes.

No one has been ruled out as a suspect, but investigators have nothing that points to family members, Garner said.

Tymkovich said police are looking at a range of individuals who had the time and opportunity to kill Kayleah and don't have good alibis.

"The investigation has really turned a corner with the discovery of this body," Tymkovich said.

Authorities received additional tips on the case after the body was recovered, and police will vigorously press the investigation, he vowed.

"We don't give up on cases like this," Garner said.

Police met with Wilson's mother, April Wilson, before the public announcement, the chief said.

"She's upset as you would expect," he said.

Family friend Cindy Rogers said finding out about Kayleah "sure is devastating."

"But now I'm glad that it's her because now the community can lay her to rest," Rogers said. "She can go home to where she belongs." Rogers called Kayleah "a very sweet, quiet young girl."

"She loved to laugh. She had a really great personality. She's going to be missed," Rogers said.

After the police news conference, a dozen or so people showed up at a makeshift memorial of flowers and teddy bears along the grassy banks of the irrigation ditch where Kayleah's body was found. About 150 people held a vigil in the same place Wednesday night.

Police take business owner into custody over electric bill threat

COEUR D'ALENE — Officials with Avista are considering additional security for field workers sent out to shut off power due to unpaid bills following situations in which workers felt threatened.

"In the last month, we've had three or four incidents where people have verbally threatened us or, in one case, shown a gun," said spokesman Hugh Imhof. "They're looking at this now from an internal standpoint of what can we do. It's definitely a concern."

Imhof said the company, based in Spokane, Wash., has about 356,000 electricity customers and 316,000 natural gas customers over a 30,000-square-mile territory that includes portions of Idaho, Washington, Oregon and Montana.

"This is a tough time for people, the economy is not good," said Imhof. "But people have to pay their bills."

In the most recent incident, the owner of a Coeur d'Alene bed and breakfast was taken into police custody and ordered to undergo a psychiatric evaluation after a power company worker felt threatened.

The Avista employee was at the bed and breakfast Wednesday to collect payment of about $3,000 or turn off the power.

Police said the owner called the Avista customer service center and made threatening statements that included a reference to a gun.

"Our serviceman felt threatened because of comments he overheard being made by this gentleman as he called our contact center," Imhof said. "As trained, he removed himself from the situation and called the police."

Coeur d'Alene Police Sgt. Christie Wood said police confiscated an unloaded rifle and took the man into protective custody, which happens when subjects endanger themselves or others. She said no charges have been filed.

Smaller, better NW cherry crop expected

PASCO, Wash. (AP) — Northwest cherry growers expect a smaller crop this year than the 2009 record but with a longer harvest period, which should extend sales.

Growers from Washington, Oregon, Idaho, Montana and Utah met Wednesday in Pasco for a meeting of the 5-State Cherry Commission.

They estimate the 2010 crop at about 153,000 tons.

Last year's crop was more than 195,000 tons.

President B.J. Thurlby told the Tri-City Herald this could be a better year for growers because last year's crop came in all at once, inundating packing houses.

RE-ELECT LEON SMITH

STATE REPRESENTATIVE Republican
District 24

I am opposed to closed primaries.

This issue has greater significance in our area than you may realize. Twin Falls County has an estimated 45% of people who consider themselves to be "independent." During the next legislative session there will likely be an opportunity to vote for a "modified" or fully "closed" primary. If we end up with a "closed" primary, many independents who traditionally vote "Republican" will have no place to vote in the next primary election. The election winners will be selected by only officially registered Republicans.

My opponents have indicated they favor "closed" primaries which squeezes out the voting options for far too many local citizens who are proud of their independent status.

Be sure to vote next Tuesday, May 25.

Feds: No major changes for Columbia Basin salmon

By Abby Haight
Associated Press writer

PORTLAND, Ore. — The Obama administration has made no major changes to a plan to protect endangered wild salmon runs in the Columbia River Basin, dismaying salmon advocates who say they expected more.

The government on Thursday submitted revisions for a 2008 Bush-era biological plan to U.S. District Judge James Redden in Portland.

Redden said in February that the plan likely violated the Endangered Species Act, but he gave the government three months to review new science that might strengthen it.

The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration recommendations include studying salmon migration, monitoring water temperatures and other effects of climate change, and creating a team of fisheries managers to resolve potential harm to wild salmon runs by hatchery fish.

"After we reviewed all the information we've accumulated over the last three months, only modest changes were necessary," said Bruce Suzumoto, NOAA Fisheries assistant regional administrator for hydropower. "The actions are more along the lines of study, research."

Proponents of the government's plan urged court approval to end years of fighting over salmon recovery.

"It is time for the federal court to approve this plan and for the region to begin the process of implementation," said a statement from Scott Corwin, executive director of the Public Power Council.

Redden twice before had found that federal plans to balance cheap hydroelectric power against the survival of wild salmon violated the Endangered Species Act.

In sending the plan back to the government in February, Redden had warned that he would view with "heightened skepticism" efforts to deal with the issues superficially.

Opponents said the government's revisions did little to make hydroelectric dams safer for the Columbia Basin's 13 endangered salmon and steelhead runs.

"These guys came out with Band-Aids when we're hemorrhaging from a major artery," said Nicole Cordan, policy and legal director for Save Our Wild Salmon. "These are species that are already imperiled, and they're saying, 'We're going to do less for them.'"

Michael Carrier, natural resources policy director for Oregon Gov. Ted Kulongoski, said he was disappointed in the revised plan — and that federal officials didn't collaborate with other governments, tribes and groups involved with salmon restoration.

Salmon advocates had urged the government to at least begin planning the controversial removal of four dams on the Snake River, and allow for spillage — that is, allow water to flow over dams to help salmon and steelhead smolts headed out to sea.

"Any fish living above the dams are ESA listed, and that isn't going to change with a tweak here and a twist there," said Glen Spain, northwest representative of the Pacific Coast Federation of Fishermen's Associations, which represents commercial fishermen.

Human remains retrieved from Priest Lake may be 100 years old

SANDPOINT (AP) — Skeletal remains up to a century old have been retrieved from a depth of 327 feet in Priest Lake, the Bonner County Sheriff's Office in northern Idaho says.

Sgt. Gary Johnston said the remains brought up on Tuesday are being sent to Boise State University to develop a DNA profile that can be checked against samples from people who lost relatives in the lake.

He said authorities have a list of 12 missing persons dating back to the early 1900s, but none are obvious matches.

"I would like to talk to family members who have lost a loved one in Priest Lake," Johnston told the Bonner County Daily Bee.

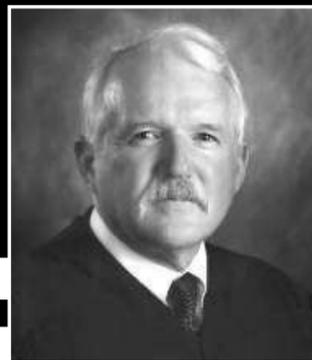

Ralston & Associates of Kuna first found the remains using side-scan sonar in 2004 during an unsuccessful search for a person who disappeared on the lake.

Underwater video footage from the first recovery attempt indicated the remains were not from a recent drowning victim.

Johnston said efforts at the time to bring up the fragile remains failed because of rough weather.

Gene Ralston of Ralston & Associates, in a report about the first recovery attempt, said the body broke apart like caked salt.

RE-ELECT ROBERT J. ELGEE

IF YOU WANT TO BE A JUDGE, MR. WERTH, YOU'D BETTER LEARN HOW TO BE HONEST WITH THE FACTS.

- The Idaho Supreme Court has never ruled that Judge Elgee exceeded his jurisdiction.
- Judge Elgee has upheld and struck down a handful of ordinances. Werth's "countless ordinances" claim is totally false.
- Judge Elgee has been upheld in his decisions by the Idaho Supreme Court and the Idaho Court of Appeals in two-thirds of the cases that have been appealed. (See www.re-elect-elgee-2010.com)
- Virtually all of the disqualifications of Judge Elgee have come from just two attorneys, one of whom stopped a year ago.
- Judge Elgee is supported by nearly every single attorney and by top law enforcement officials in Blaine County. Mr. Werth has yet to obtain the public support of any attorney or law enforcement official other than the Twin Falls County Prosecutor.
- Judge Elgee has 18 years of judicial experience, Mr. Werth has none.
- Mr. Werth's "experience" includes:
 - Being the only Blaine County Prosecuting Attorney in more than fifty years to lose a first degree murder trial.
 - Being the only Blaine County Prosecuting Attorney to be sued for Sexual Discrimination — and leaving someone else holding the bag for settlement of the case.
 - Being a Public Defender with a reputation for never trying a case.

Mills, Urie, Bowden, 2 Dems top T.F. primary hopefuls

When Twin Falls County Commissioner Tom Mikesell withdrew from the primary election race 18 days ago, the ground shifted under local Republican politics.

His three GOP challengers — Roger Ursenbach Sr., Jim Schouten and Leon Mills — were no longer on the outside looking in. More to the point, they didn't have an incumbent's record against which to run.

In many ways, that's a boon for the taxpayers. The best election campaigns are those in which each candidate must justify his or her character, political views and command of public policy.

On that basis, our choice for the GOP nomination to succeed Mikesell is Mills.

At 54, he's been hanging around local Republican politics for a while, unsuccessfully challenging 15-year incumbent Commissioner Marvin Hempleman in 1996 and earning a seat on the Twin Falls GOP Central Committee two years later. In 2002, Mills jumped into a crowded GOP primary in 2002 and finished fourth.

So for at least 14 years, he's been a close observer of county government. Mills has concluded that frugal management and enhanced county cooperation with the cities serve the taxpayers best.

We agree.

Mills is a good listener, and like any good rookie commissioner would likely be impressed with how much he has to learn. Much, we think, like current County Commission Chairman George Urie when he was elected four years ago.

On the Democratic side, two viable candidates have emerged: Bill Shropshire, a former labor activist who came within 179 votes of unseating Hempleman in 1998, and Gary Eller, a Republican-turned-Democratic rancher. Both have solid, middle-of-the-road positions on how county government should be run. Either would make a good nominee for the Democrats.

In District 3, Urie gets our endorsement in the GOP primary over challenger Brandon J. Jones for his steady performance, his willingness to ask tough questions, his firm grasp of the realities of county government, and his ideas for making it better.

Urie, Mikesell and Commissioner Terry Kramer run one of the tightest ships in Idaho local government. Even in an era of sliding tax receipts, they have — by Urie's estimation — six months worth of reserves, meaning they could operate county government for half a year if they didn't receive a dime in property taxes during that period. That's impressive.

In the other contested race on the GOP county primary ballot, Gerry Bowden's 31 years in the assessor's office — the past 16 as assessor — make him more qualified than challenger George Haney III.

Bowden has come in for his share of criticism from property taxpayers over the past few years, but we don't see anyone on the political horizon who could handle appraising the county's 40,000 parcels of private property better.

ABOUT THESE RACES

In Tuesday's primary election, three Republican candidates are vying to succeed District 2 Twin Falls County Commissioner Tom Mikesell, who is retiring after two terms. They are Jim Schouten, 47, a Twin Falls drywall and stucco contractor; Roger Ursenbach Sr., 51, a Twin Falls businessman, and Leon Mills, 54, Twin Falls, an assistant supervisor at ConAgra Foods Lamb Weston's plant. Two Democrats are also seeking the job in the May 25 primary: Twin Falls rancher Gary Eller, 60, and Bill Shropshire, 57, of Twin Falls, a longtime employee of Longview Fibre. The winners of the two primaries will square off with independent Randy G. Carpenter of Twin Falls, in the Nov. 3 election. In the District 3 race, first-term Republican Commissioner George Urie, 67, of Hansen, is being challenged by Twin Falls small businessman Brandon J. Jones, 39. No Democrat has filed for the position. Elsewhere on the ballot, four-term incumbent Republican County Assessor Gerry Bowden, 61, of Twin Falls, is being challenged in Tuesday's primary by George Haney III, 64, a Twin Falls real estate appraiser. No Democrat has filed for the job.

Throwing all the bums out

A recent poll surveying attitudes toward the current political acrimony revealed an interesting and meaningful contrast between Republicans' and Democrats' views that explains a lot about recent primary election results.

The poll, which independent pollster John Zogby conducted for Allegheny College's Center for Public Participation, showed that Republicans believe it's more important for politicians to stand firm in support of principles, while Democrats favor compromise to get things done.

Carl Leubsdorf

Those tendencies were even stronger among the parties' more ideological members. Those calling themselves very conservative favored standing firm on principle by better than 4-to-1; self-styled liberals backed compromise by 5-to-3.

That helps explain why Republicans in recent high-profile primaries — starting in March in Texas — supported more outspokenly conservative candidates. Democrats, meanwhile, seemed to cast more pragmatic votes that often defied easy ideological classification.

Those rival tendencies were evident again Tuesday.

Conservative insurgent Rand Paul's victory in the Kentucky GOP senatorial primary followed the pattern set by Gov. Rick Perry's primary victory in Texas, Sen. Bob Bennett's convention loss in Utah and Marco Rubio's rise in Florida.

Paul's win underscored Republicans' desire to pick candidates more likely to stand firm for principles than to compromise on issues like spending.

Races are mainly being settled by local political currents, candidate caliber and, to some extent, the general anti-incumbent mood.

Conservative challengers haven't won every race; establishment Senate candidate Dan Coats survived a tea party challenge in Indiana. But most key primaries have shown conservatives' clout in the Republican Party.

Tuesday's headline Democratic contests were less ideological.

In Pennsylvania, Rep. Joe Sestak unseated veteran Republican-turned-Democrat Sen. Arlen Specter. Though President Obama endorsed Specter when wooing him to switch parties, he avoided him in recent weeks; the outcome had little to do with Obama's standing.

Rather, Pennsylvania Democrats rejected a Johnny-come-lately Democrat who epitomized old-style Washington politics and thus probably would have been the easier general-election foe for Republican Pat Toomey in November.

Similarly, in Kentucky, Democrats seem to have picked the fresher candidate, Attorney General Jack Conway. And in Arkansas, while labor unions and outside liberal groups funded Lt. Gov. Bill Halter's challenge to Sen. Blanche Lincoln, the pattern of their near-draw suggests the vote was less ideological than pragmatic.

Lincoln's lackluster showing means Halter probably will be favored in their June 8 runoff, and his rise suggests a newer face may be more electable in the current anti-incumbent climate. In any case, either would be an underdog against Republican Rep. John Boozman.

Earlier this month, liberal critics failed to unseat two North Carolina conservatives who opposed Obama's health reform bill, while an Ohio conservative lost to a supporter of the measure.

There may yet be instances in which liberal critics damage the re-election prospects of conservative Democrats who opposed health reform. But the one who seems most vulnerable, Rep. Michael Arcuri in upstate New York, hurt himself by first supporting the measure and then opposing it.

In West Virginia, a more conservative challenger unseated veteran Rep. Alan Mollohan, but that outcome may have turned more on Mollohan's ethical issues than ideology.

In any case, these Democratic primaries lack the clear ideological pattern of many GOP contests. Races are mainly being settled by local political currents, candidate caliber and, to some extent, the general anti-incumbent mood.

Interestingly, in a race that may have greater significance for what might happen this fall, Republicans failed Tuesday to capture the rural, conservative Pennsylvania seat held for 35 years by the late Democrat John Murtha.

Democrats were thrilled, even though the victor, longtime Murtha aide Mark Critz, ran as a critic of Obama's health plan, abortion rights and limits on firearms.

It's another sign that the Democratic Party is likely to remain an occasionally unwieldy ideological coalition, albeit liberal-led, contrasted with the increasingly monolithically conservative GOP.

And that augurs poorly for any future cooperation.

City didn't pick July 5 fireworks date; organizers did

Iwould like to clear up some issues up regarding the recent decision to allow the Southern Idaho Fireworks Organization to hold their fireworks event on July 5th instead of July 4th. Southern Idaho Fireworks is a private organization, much like the Western Days Committee, which organizes and funds this event. When an organization submits a special events application to the city of Twin Falls, it is up to the council to review the application for safety and security issues surrounding that event.

It was the decision of Southern Idaho Fireworks to move the event to Monday night. The council

READER COMMENT

did discuss the issue and felt that it was the prerogative of the organizers to determine when the event was going to be held and since all safety concerns were met, the council should support their special events application. We did ask why they didn't choose Saturday instead of Monday and the organizers indicated that they didn't want to compete with Buhl's Sagebrush Days which are held on that date. Other communities have moved their Independence Day celebrations to be held on dates other than July 4th for a variety of reasons.

There is no local ordinance or rule regarding when our Independence Day can be celebrated. If enough citizens feel strongly about having an event on Sunday, July 4th, I believe there is still time to organize and fund a fireworks display. The council would look at this event the same way we did Southern Idaho Fireworks and I feel we would be supportive of the application.

This issue has elicited strong feelings from many members of our community and I respect those feelings. I don't want to see this degenerate into a conflict between religious and/or secular organizations, which would be counterproductive. This should be a time of celebration and unity, not dissension. I would suggest that all citizens who have strong feelings about this issue, or any other issue that affects our city, to get involved with these community committees and let your voice be heard. That is your right and obligation and is the principle upon which our country was founded — the very thing we celebrate on Independence Day!

Don Hall is mayor of Twin Falls.

We need to keep a Stennett in office

My family supports Sen. Stennett for the 25th District of the Idaho Legislature, and we ask our friends in District 25 to vote for Sen. Stennett on Tuesday, May 25.

Sen. Stennett has represented our district with competence and skill; has learned and understands the complex Senate process; has done research on the many difficult issues of today; has looked thoughtfully at the future job and education needs of southern Idaho, and Sen. Stennett will be our voice in Idaho government for the life issues most important to our communities, our local economies and our children's future. We have had a Sen. Stennett looking after us in the past; there is no reason we shouldn't have a Sen. Stennett looking after our future as well.

In the current troubled economic times, with high unemployment and diminished job opportunities, we need Sen. Stennett's experience in working with the private sector to help provide us with good jobs and career opportunities. In some parts of the United States, there is an anti-incumbent sentiment that wants to replace all elected officials regardless of their quality; Idaho's voters are too smart to replace their high-quality senators when those senators have proven themselves to be focused only on our own well-being and our own future rather than on their own political careers and personal profit.

Please join me in voting for Sen. Stennett for the 25th District on May 25.

Lynn Stephens knows the value of money

I have known Lynn since grade school and, over the years, I have seen him grow from an angry young man into a responsible and caring respected member of the community. Lynn lives within his means and understands the value of money. He comes from a lower-income working family with a good work ethic and common sense. I believe he will do a good job for the people of the Hollister area and southern Idaho.

Lynn takes the time to look into issues until he finds an answer that makes sense and is not quickly swayed by public opinion. Lynn feels the proper role of local government is to provide for the people only those critical functions that cannot be performed by individuals or private organizations. He believes the most effective, responsible and responsive government is government closest to the people.

When elected, Lynn will work to support Republicans who are unalterably opposed to tax legislation which deprives farmers of income averaging; capital gains treatment on the sale of livestock held for dairy, draft, breeding or sporting purposes; and/or deferment of taxes by pre-payment of expenses.

I fully recommend that you act favorably on his candidacy. Please consider voting for Lynn Stephens for the Hollister Precinct on Tuesday, May 25.

CIEDRA looks out for motorcycle riders

Growing up on a ranch, I learned to ride a motorcycle and snowmobile when I was 6 years old and I've been riding ever since. I've spent a lot of time riding in the Boulder-White Clouds. I appreciate that Congressman Simpson and Sen. Crapo have looked out for riders like me in their legislation, called CIEDRA.

When the Sawtooth National Recreation Area was established back in 1972, Congress and the Forest Service established a Wilderness Study Area covering almost all of the Boulder-White Clouds. The Central Idaho Economic Development and Recreation Act will designate wilderness on some lands but release the rest and preserve motorized access.

Germania Creek will remain open forever. Frog Lake loop, Washington Basin, Washington Lake Creek, Casino Lakes, Rough Creek, Pole Creek Trails and others will remain open. Fourth of July, Washington Lake, Champion Lakes, Warm Springs Meadows and the North Fork of the Big Wood will remain open to snowmobiling.

This seems a good compromise to a trail user like me. See you on the trails!

Heilesen understands what freedom means

One good thing our current president has done for me is to wake me up. I hadn't deeply studied our Constitution, our founders or our still-remaining freedoms until the past 18 months or so. Little did I know that my president doesn't understand agency, freedom or liberty.

The last 12 months, I've also discovered a good number of people representing me do not understand freedom and the personal responsibility that is inseparably connected to it. This letter is to try and influence you to help me make one small change for the better.

After hours of study, meetings and research, I cannot support Mike Simpson and I will be voting for Chick Heilesen for U.S. representative. I know Chick Heilesen understands freedom much the way I do. He knows personal responsibility is required in order to maintain freedom. Mr. Heilesen knows the Constitution was designed to limit what government can or should do for us. Chick knows if current trends continue with our government, our nation is primed to take a 5,000 year leap backward.

Please help stop the madness of Mike and vote for Chick Heilesen.

Think twice before voting for status quo

To the legislators:

A thought occurred to me tonight. First of all, a congratulations is in order. You almost balanced Idaho's budget by cutting expenses! Wow, how hard is that? My second job can't compete with that logic. Maybe I should quit my second job and find some state assistance to help me out! You "slashed and burned" our infrastructure, but it's an election year so you can all "smell like roses" because you made lots of cuts.

Heaven forbid our legislators make rational downsizing as well as rational income-generating decisions on a day-to-day basis — that's the way a household would run itself, but how can I expect you "big-wigs" to understand how a plebe like me even exists?

So here's my epiphany: I have noticed way too many levy and bond elections in the news lately and my light bulb flashed on brightly! Our elected officials are, for the most part, not working for us (citizens) with our best interests at heart. It may sound crazy, but these other elections are evidence that we are trying to govern ourselves since our Legislature will not act in our behalf!

The epiphany? Just exactly who is working for us when we, the people, have to do all the work? Now that I think about it, I haven't seen many (if any) levy or bond elections coming out of the Blaine County area. In fact, I think I saw an article reporting that Blaine County teachers were still getting their raises this year. Hmm, perhaps there is still enough property tax revenue to keep them afloat. Yet, the rest of our state is foundering since much of our educational funding was removed when we decided to rely on revenue via sales tax generation for public education instead of property taxes.

Please, take a moment, maybe only half a second, before you vote for the status quo.

Retain Burdick as Supreme Court judge

Now and in the coming years it is vital for Idaho to retain Judge Burdick as a Supreme Court judge. Roger Burdick's experience as the Snake River Basin Adjudication judge will be invaluable in making landmark decisions for our state's future. From north to south, our state's lifeblood is water. Our State Supreme Court will be dealing with issues affecting that lifeblood.

Judge Burdick has proven to be a strong, fair-minded, knowledgeable leader for our state. From local attorney, district and SRBA judge to Supreme Court judge, we'd have to say his performance was "nicely done."

Please join us in voting to return Roger Burdick to the Idaho Supreme Court.

In these times, be constructive, inclusive

To "Jefferson is my hero": I would like to ask that you remove my campaign sign from your blog site (<http://twinfallsrepublicans.blogspot.com>).

While I appreciate your support and understand your concerns with the politics of the Republican Central Committee, I am very much against the use of "political games." Whether they are being played by the "Old Guard" or a "new participant." Your site mantra of "restore the GOP" doesn't reflect your most recent actions. The rumors and accusations from your site do not promote restoration. Your claims and accusations are destructive and divisive.

As the co-founder/spokesperson for TEARS of the Patriots and now a candidate for the Idaho House of Representatives for District 24, I know there are some substantial changes that need to be made in the way politics are practiced. Attacks on Mr. Edmunds, a man who I have found to have the utmost integrity, honesty and dedication, are not constructive. During these difficult political times, we must be constructive and inclusive, not destructive and divisive.

Should you continue to create hostility and division among conservative voters and politicians, you will force the creation of a third party. That third party will pave the way for a liberal political dominance and bring about the end of the principles of small government and personal freedoms reflected in the state Republican platform. And that, in my opinion, is exactly what we are struggling against. I implore you to carefully consider the results of your actions and the tactics that you employ.

Temple makes sure job gets done right

In the past, I have been called upon by employers to give a job reference for someone that has worked for me. In this case you, the voters, will be deciding who will be hired to replace me as Minidoka County clerk. So I am giving this job reference for my chief deputy, Patty Temple, who is seeking election to my position.

In the nearly six years that Patty has worked for me in the auditor's office, I have really been impressed with how dedicated she is to her work. She continually goes out of her way to do the extra work to get the job done right. Because of her knowledge and reliability, I chose her to be my chief deputy at the beginning of 2009.

The multiple responsibilities of the county clerk's position is carried out by 16 deputies in five offices. At various times, each of these responsibilities demands the clerk's attention. Currently, due to the economy and the county's financial condition, I would say that the job of dealing with financial matters is especially important.

Patty's financial knowledge puts her in the best position to advise the county commissioners on the important financial matters that the county will be facing in the coming years.

Burdick is quality individual who cares

Roger Burdick is one of three Idaho Supreme Court justices. And one of my favorite people. I don't know too much about the specific qualifications he carries for re-election to the position, but I do know firsthand he's a quality individual who cares about people — including those he doesn't know and has never met.

A little story: More years ago than I care to specify — all right it was Oct. 8, 1983, a Saturday — a pretty young lady and I were all gussied up and ready to elope in the Twin Falls Courthouse. Judge Meehl was supposed to marry us but, ahem, he went fishing that morning and I guess he forgot all about it. In desperation, after a fruitless two-hour wait, I called my attorney, who luckily was at home. He in turn called Roger Burdick who happened to be home, too. In those days he was a Jerome city magistrate. Well, in a matter of 30 short minutes, a young Judge Burdick arrived at the courthouse in his van. He walked inside, saw two unhappy strangers all decked out with nowhere to go and introduced himself. He had a big smile beneath his bushy mustache. I and my bride immediately liked him, especially after he suggested that, hey, it's a beautiful day, why don't we all stroll across the road to the park? Good idea! So that day, in the shade beneath a spreading blue spruce tree, Judge Roger Burdick married us in the Twin Falls City Park. And over the years, the marriage he launched has prospered. And I've watched that spruce tree grow a bit and Judge Burdick's remarkable career grow more than that.

Good luck, Roger!

Joe Larsen a man of high integrity

Having been born and raised in the Mini-Cassia area and actively involved in the funeral business throughout the majority of my career, I would like to share my perception of Joe Larsen.

He is a candidate for Cassia County clerk in the Republican Party. My mother, a brother and I were directly involved as an employee or co-worker of Joe for a number of years at Payne Mortuary during its most successful years. He showed great respect for the Payne family, to the families he served and to our family. I've known him to be a person of high integrity and honesty in every respect.

As the proprietor of my own funeral business, I practice many of the same techniques, skills, service, sincerity and kindness that was part of Payne Mortuary while it was under the direction of Joe Larsen and while I was a co-worker with Joe.

Schouten has good cost-cutting ideas

Please vote for Jimbo for county commissioner.

Knowing Jim Schouten as a businessman for a number of years, I think Jim is a knowledgeable and honest person. I think Jim knows that, in these hard economic times, we need to stop foolish spending. He knows we need to cut back. He has reviewed the entire county budget and has some good ideas on how to lower the budget. He knows we need to combine some departments and positions to save money.

Jim will work one-on-one with county employees to make it a more friendly place to work. He understands we cannot keep raising taxes and user fees. He understands the people should run the government, not the government run the people.

Please get out and vote May 25 for the primary elections. And remember both politicians and diapers need changed for the same reason.

Doug lets his record speak for itself. He does not accept endorsements because as judge, he does not want to be beholden to any special interest groups. He will serve the public.

Judge Elgee Wrong 70% of the Time.

The Idaho Supreme Court has reversed or found that Elgee erroneously applied the law in 7 of the last 10 of his cases the high court reviewed.

Judge Elgee Disqualified.

The Blaine County and Twin Falls County prosecutors have repeatedly disqualified Elgee from important felony criminal cases. Elgee has been disqualified more than 100 times in Twin Falls County alone and Elgee is the only district judge the Twin Falls prosecutor has disqualified. The prosecutors said they had to disqualify Elgee "to guarantee justice for citizens and crime victims in our counties."

Judge Elgee and Judicial Activism.

Judicial activism occurs when judges second-guess the Legislature and strike down laws unnecessarily. The Idaho Supreme Court said Elgee did just that when he wrongly struck down Idaho's felony domestic battery statute. Judicial activism occurs when a judge adds words to a statute that aren't there. The Idaho Supreme Court found that Elgee did just that in a recent case. The Supreme Court has repeatedly criticized Elgee for going "too far" and not basing his decision on the law. Judge Elgee has exceeded his power as a judge repeatedly. These are facts.

Obama eyes more loan guarantees for nuclear energy

French nuclear firm gets gov't backing for E. Idaho plant

By Erica Werner
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — President Obama is poised to ask Congress to agree to $9 billion more in loan guarantees for the nuclear energy industry, a Democratic aide said Thursday, in a renewed push for nuclear power as the growing oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico highlights the risks of fossil fuel production.

Also Thursday the Energy Department announced a $2 billion loan guarantee for French-owned nuclear services company Areva Inc. to support construction of a uranium enrichment plant in eastern Idaho.

At the insistence of Democratic House Speaker Nancy Pelosi of California, the request for more spending on nuclear energy would be coupled with $9 billion in loan guarantees for renewable energy such as wind and solar, according to the Democratic aide, who spoke on condition of anonymity before a formal announcement from the White House.

The request would be tacked onto a multibillion-dollar spending bill for Afghanistan, Haiti and other programs that Congress is expected to finish after Memorial Day. Taxpayers would have to pay $180 million to support the loan guarantees, essentially putting up insurance for nuclear companies that would have trouble borrowing money to build new plants without the federal backing.

The new spending follows $18.5 billion in nuclear loan guarantees the Obama administration announced in February to spur building of the first nuclear power plant in the U.S. in almost three decades, part of a broad shift to lessen dependence on foreign oil and reduce the use of other fossil fuels blamed for global warming. Obama called for "a new generation of safe, clean nuclear power plants" in his State of the Union speech this year.

Some $8.3 billion of the money announced in February was for helping Southern Co. build new reactors in Burke, Ga. Energy Department officials have said the remaining loan guarantee authority was only enough for one project, and there had been several other finalists before Southern Co. was selected.

Mitch Singer, a spokesman for the Nuclear Energy Institute, an industry group, said Thursday that the additional loan guarantee funding should give the Energy Department "most, if not all, the resources needed to grant conditional loan guarantees to the other finalists."

They were Constellation Energy Group Inc. of Baltimore, Md., NRG Energy Inc. of Princeton, N.J., and SCANA Corp. of Cayce, S.C.

Rodent steals show as Obama talks to media

By Mark S. Smith
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — In the midst of his battle with the titans of Wall Street, President Obama was nearly upstaged by a rodent.

Obama had just begun a Rose Garden statement lauding the end of a Senate filibuster on his financial overhaul when a rodent dashed out of the bushes to his right, just outside the Oval Office.

As photographers snapped away in the sun-drenched garden, the critter scurried straight past the gray podium with the presidential seal and made a bee-line for another set of bushes to Obama's left.

It's not clear if the president could even see the streaker, but he didn't show any reaction. And he concluded his statement minutes later, returning to his office without answering a few shouted questions on other topics.

Once he was safely inside the Oval Office, a fierce debate erupted among the photographers and reporters who'd witnessed the dash. Was it a rat or a mouse? Or maybe a mole, or some other kind of related creature.

Before long, experts had joined the fray.

"I would partially rule out rat," said Russell Link, a wildlife biologist who works for the Washington State Department of Fish and Wildlife. "That's due to the lack of a tail that is typically equal to body length."

After viewing a photograph of the surprising scurry, Link said, "My suspicion is it's a vole, commonly called a 'meadow mouse' out our way."

In fact, this wasn't the first time a rodent's been spied in the White House, or even the Rose Garden.

Just last week, as camera crews set up for an Obama statement on the Gulf oil spill, what's believed to have been the same rodent made a dash across the famous gateway."

The press work areas behind the White House briefing room have had at least one rat sighting, though that was before a multimillion-dollar rehab project finished by the Bush administration.

Moreover, rodents of all kinds are pretty common in Washington. From time to time, city officials issue alarms about surges in the rat population when residents put out extra-big summer piles of garbage.

Washington is, after all built, along a river, on what used to be a malarial swamp.

Southern Idaho counties get on preferred list

High unemployment rates give areas better chance of doing business with gov't

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

Twin Falls, Jerome, Lincoln and Blaine counties have been added to a federal contract preference list that will help employers do business with the federal government. The U.S. Department of Labor on Thursday approved Idaho Labor Department's request to dramatically expand areas of the state where employers receive preference when they bid on federal contracts. Officials with the state labor department said rising unemployment in 21 counties across the state made them eligible candidates for the preference list.

ON THE WEB

More information about the designations is available online at <http://www.doleta.gov/Programs/lisa.cfm>.

The federal approval of the state petition increases from six to 27 the number of counties designated as labor surplus areas, or areas with high unemployment rates. The city of Idaho Falls was also included although Bonneville County was not.

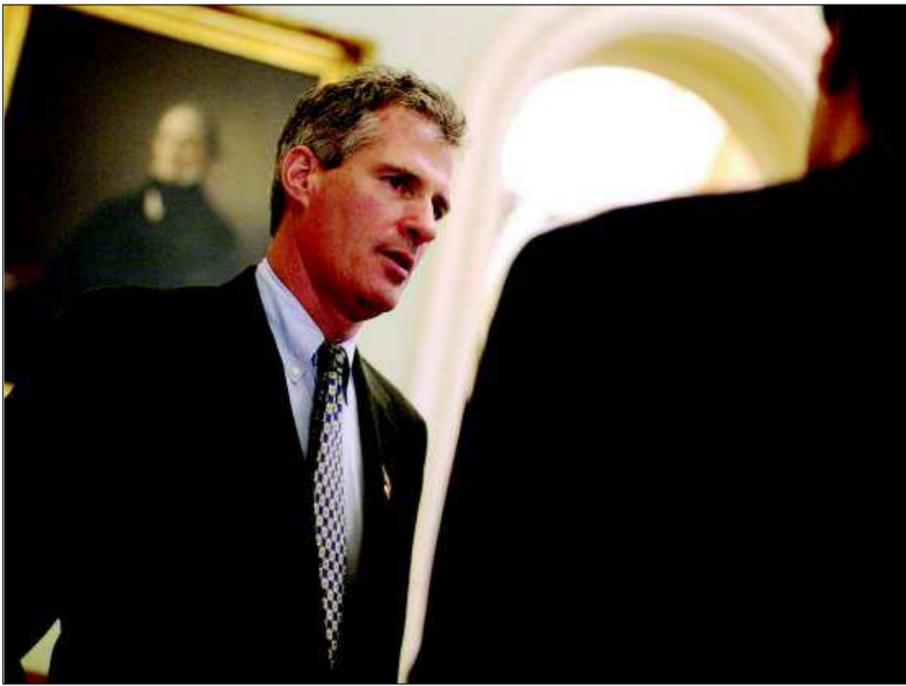

The state's petition, authorized under federal Executive Orders 12073 and 10582, cited exceptional circumstances that drove the local unemployment rates over 6 percent for three straight months and will keep them that high or higher for the next year. Statewide, the unemployment rate has been over 9 percent since November. Added to the original 2010 list of Adams, Benewah, Boundary, Clearwater, Shoshone and Valley counties were Ada, Bannock, Blaine, Boise, Bonner, Camas, Canyon, Elmore, Fremont, Gem, Idaho, Jerome, Kootenai, Lemhi, Lincoln, Payette, Power, Twin Falls and Washington. Nez Perce County was included as part of the Lewiston Metropolitan Statistical Area, and Owyhee County was included as part of the Boise-Nampa Metropolitan Statistical Area. Both metro areas were designated labor surplus areas.

Restraint on big banks

Sen. Scott Brown following a vote for financial reform on Capitol Hill in Washington, Thursday. The decisive vote to close debate on the financial regulation bill was supplied by Brown, the Republican freshman of Massachusetts.

Senate passes massive Wall Street regulation bill

By Jim Kuhnhenn
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Prodded by national anger at Wall Street, the Senate on Thursday passed the most far-reaching restraints on big banks since the Great Depression. In its broad sweep, the massive bill would touch Wall Street CEOs and first-time homebuyers, high-flying traders and small town lenders. The 59-39 vote represents an important achievement for President Barack Obama, and comes just two months after his health care overhaul became law. The bill must now be reconciled with a House version that passed in December. A key House negotiator predicted the legislation would reach Obama's desk before the Fourth of July. The legislation aims to prevent a recurrence of the near-meltdown of big Wall Street investment banks and the resulting costly bailouts. It calls for new ways to watch for risks in the financial system and makes it easier to liquidate large failing financial firms. It also writes new rules for complex securities blamed for helping precipitate the 2008 economic crisis, and it creates a new consumer protection agency. It would impose new restraints on the largest, most interconnected banks and demand proof that borrowers could pay for the simplest of mortgages. "Our goal is not to punish the banks but to protect the larger economy and the American people from the kind of upheavals that we've seen in the past few years," Obama said earlier Thursday after the Senate cleared a key 60-vote hurdle blocking final action. The financial industry, Obama said, had tried to stop the new regulations "with hordes of lobbyists and millions of dollars in ads." Only two Democrats, Sens. Maria Cantwell of Washington and Russ Feingold of Wisconsin, voted against the bill. Feingold said it did not go far enough to rein in Wall Street and end a culture of "too big to fail." Four Republicans — Sens. Charles Grassley of Iowa, Scott Brown of Massachusetts, and Olympia Snowe and Susan Collins of Maine — broke ranks with their party to support it. Twice the Senate had to beat back efforts by Republicans to delay the bill before achieving final passage. "The decisions we've made will have an impact on the lives of Americans for decades to come," said Sen. Richard Shelby, R-Ala., who voted against the legislation. "Judgment will not be rendered by self-congratulatory press releases, but, rather, by the marketplace. And the marketplace does not give credit for good intentions." While Republicans succeeded in amending the bill, they still objected to its sweep, claiming it represented an expansion of government power that would

St. Luke's cuts the ribbon on office building

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center opened the doors to its new administrative office building in downtown Twin Falls on Thursday — the culmination of a public/private partnership to put the hospital's administrative operations under one roof and revitalize the city's neglected warehouse district. The hospital gutted the former Crum Electric Supply Co. building at 212 Third Ave. S., to create an 11,500 square-foot maze of cubicles and office space that will house up to 110 employees handling billing, records and other administrative tasks. The project was one that brought the individual interests of both the city of Twin Falls and St. Luke's together under one roof — literally. The hospital wanted to consolidate its administrative operations, which were spread out among two locations in Twin Falls. The city needed a large employer to set a new precedent in downtown, one that encouraged retailers, coffee shops and other services to set up shop where abandoned warehouses once stood. "This is a perfect example of a public/private partnership to develop downtown," said Mayor Don Hall. "It's exactly what we need to kickstart downtown." The two parties reached an agreement more than a year ago, which included nearly $500,000 in state grants to pay for parking, additional lighting, new sidewalks, curbing, gutters, landscaping and alley paving in the block surrounding the new administrative office building. The grant money helped mitigate the risk of moving downtown. St. Luke's spent about $900,000 to renovate the building and add the technology needed to process records and protect its investment. The facility stands out among the barren lots and old warehouses because of its modern brick and stucco

Tax law may get more businesses to delve into high technology

Tucked away in the health care overhaul bill that became law this year was a provision that will require small-business owners to keep better records of what they buy. They'll also have to report some purchases to the government. This new law requires small businesses to issue 1099 forms to people or companies that sell them more than $600 worth of goods or services. It takes the

SMALL TALK

Joyce M. Rosenberg

1099 beyond its most common business use, which is to report money paid to independent contractors or freelancers. The law doesn't take effect until Jan. 1, 2012, which means owners won't have to worry about the paperwork until early 2013, when they're compiling their 2012 returns. But owners whose books and finances are chaotic might want to get themselves organized in the meantime so keeping track of such payments and reporting them becomes routine. The new law The law, called a revenue provision, was attached to the health care legislation that Congress passed and President Obama signed into law in March. According to Congress' Joint Committee on Taxation, under the new law a business is required to file a 1099 form "for all payments aggregating $600 or more in a calendar year to a single payee." Between now and the Jan. 1, 2012 effective date for the law, the IRS will be formulating regulations that spell out what businesses must do under the law. Eric Smith, a spokesman for the agency, said that as with any regulations, the public will be able to comment on those regulations before they also take effect. Because the regulations don't yet exist, it's hard to predict exactly what businesses will have to do to comply. The law is designed to stop businesses, in this case vendors, from evading taxes on their income. The fact is, there are companies that don't report all their sales, particularly small transactions. But if a customer has to issue a 1099, which reports a payment to the government, the vendor that doesn't report a matching sale could get a letter from the IRS questioning the discrepancy. Paperwork overload? There's no getting around See TAX, Business 2

National intelligence director resigns after security lapses

By Eileen Sullivan and Kimberly Dozier
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — National Intelligence Director Dennis Blair is resigning under pressure from the White House, ending a tumultuous 16-month tenure marked by intelligence failures and spy agency turf wars.

Blair, a retired Navy admiral, is the third director of national intelligence, a position created in response to public outrage over the failure to prevent the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks.

His departure underscores the disorganization inside the Obama administration's intelligence apparatus, rocked over the past six months by a spate of high-profile attempted terror attacks that revealed new national security lapses. And it comes two days after a stark Senate report criticized Blair's office and other intelligence agencies for new failings that, despite a top-to-bottom overhaul of the U.S. intelligence apparatus after 9/11, allowed a would-be bomber to board a Detroit-bound airliner on Christmas Day.

In a message Thursday to his work force, Blair said his last day would be May 28.

"It is with deep regret that I informed the president today that I will step down as director of national intelligence," Blair said.

The resignation became inevitable following a meeting between President Obama and Blair on Thursday afternoon, according to two senior congressional officials. During the meeting, the officials said, it became clear that Blair had "lost the confidence of the president."

Obama made no reference to Blair's rocky tenure in a brief statement Thursday night that did not acknowledge his impending resignation, one of the highest-profile administration departures.

"During his time as DNI, our intelligence community has performed admirably and effectively at a time of great challenges to our security, and I have valued his sense of purpose and patriotism," the president said. "He and I both share a deep admiration for the men and women of our intelligence community, who are performing extraordinary and indispensable service to our nation."

Two other government officials said several candidates already had been interviewed for the national intelligence director's job, which is to oversee the nation's 16 intelligence agencies.

"We have been interviewing several strong candidates to be his replacement," one official said.

MBA campaigns for business grads to take oath

By Oliver Staley
Bloomberg News

NEW YORK — When Larry Estrada graduates from Harvard Business School next week, he'll begin work at Goldman Sachs. He'll do so only after taking an oath.

Estrada, 30, has joined with about 150 fellow business school students and faculty worldwide to crusade for the acceptance of an MBA ethics pledge modeled on the Hippocratic Oath taken by doctors. The aim is to get as many as 6,000 graduates at 50 MBA programs to swear they won't put personal ambitions before the interests of their employers or society.

Created last year by Harvard Business students to counter a growing public mistrust of business, the oath is being championed by Nitin Nohria, the newly appointed dean of the school. After the global financial crisis, Bernard Madoff's $65 billion Ponzi scheme and scandals at Goldman Sachs, there has never been a better time for managers to rethink their role in society, said Rich Leimsider, director of the Aspen Institute's Center for Business Education, in New York, which is helping to coordinate the movement.

"One of the things we're hoping to do is force hundreds of thousands of people in business to talk about and think about their responsibilities," Leimsider said. "Nitin has given Harvard a huge head start in that direction."

Last year, 484 new MBAs at Harvard Business School took the pledge, inspired partly by an article by Nohria and Harvard professor Rakesh Khurana, in the October 2008 issue of the Harvard Business Review, calling for a code of ethics for managers. About another 1,500 took it at the Wharton School of the University of Pennsylvania and the Kellogg School of Management of Northwestern University and at other business schools, Leimsider said.

"For me, it was a stake in the ground, to say here are my values, here's what I believe in," said Estrada, who plans to work as an investment manager for Goldman Sachs in Seattle. "When I

"I recognize that my behavior must set an example of integrity, eliciting trust and esteem from those I serve. I will remain accountable to my peers and to society for my actions and for upholding these standards."

— From the oath created by Harvard Business students to counter the public's growing mistrust of business have a tough decision, I want to be in a position where I have my own personal oath."

Not all Harvard Business students support the oath. About 45 percent of the graduating class of 886 last year didn't take it, and a similar share won't this year, either, Estrada said.

The oath is "the knee-jerk reaction by business apologists to the current financial crisis," Justin McLeod, 26, a Harvard Business student, wrote in the Harbus, a school publication.

The problem with the oath "is that it is essentially cosmetic," Krishna Mahesh, a 2005 Harvard Business School graduate, wrote in a February e-mail. "The danger of cosmetic change is that it masks the need for real, structural change. And making that structural change is what businesses (and regulators) should be concentrating on."

The pledge is "well meaning but in the end, very mushy and not well thought out," said Steven Kaplan, a professor of entrepreneurship and finance at the University of Chicago Booth School of Business.

All business schools teach students to be ethical, Kaplan said. The pledge ignores the nuances of management, where leaders have to weigh competing interests against each other, he said.

If Goldman Sachs's leadership had followed the oath's tenets, the company may not have entered into agreements to sell mortgage-backed securities that another client, New York investment company Paulson & Co., was betting against, said Khurana, the Harvard professor who worked with students in drafting the oath.

"If you have a law against murders, would all murders stop? No," Khurana said. "But I think the risk of it would be mitigated and there would be more checks at a variety of points."

The current version of the oath, which has evolved during the last year, consists of seven principles that require its takers to obey the letter and spirit of the law, refrain from corruption, oppose discrimination and exploitation, and protect the right of future generations to enjoy a healthy planet.

"I recognize that my behavior must set an example of integrity, eliciting trust and esteem from those I serve," the oath states. "I will remain accountable to my peers and to society for my actions and for upholding these standards."

Paul tries to defuse controversy over comments on race

By David Espo
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — A tea party conservative on a national stage, Republican Senate candidate Rand Paul of Kentucky labored Thursday to explain remarks suggesting businesses be allowed to deny service to blacks without fear of federal interference, declaring, "I abhor racial discrimination."

Paul

In a written statement, Paul said, "I believe we should work to end all racism in American society and staunchly defend the inherent rights of every person."

Paul told CNN he would have voted for the 1964 Civil Rights Act, a statement he declined to make one day earlier.

On Wednesday, Paul expressed support for the act's provisions banning discrimination in public facilities, but he had misgivings about extending the same requirement to private businesses — then or now.

"Do you think that a private business has the right to say we don't serve black people?" he was asked by MSNBC's Rachel Maddow on Wednesday.

"Yes. I'm not in favor of any discrimination of any form," Paul said at the beginning of a lengthy answer in which he likened the question to one about limiting freedom of speech for racists. "I don't want to be associated with those people, but I also don't want to limit their speech in any way in the sense that we tolerate boorish and uncivilized behavior because that's one of the things freedom requires."

The issue arose little more than 24 hours after the political novice swept to a landslide

Republican primary victory, defeating a rival recruited by Senate GOP leader Mitch McConnell and others who feared Paul's brand of conservatism might make him unelectable in the fall. The seat is held by retiring Republican Sen. Jim Bunning, and the party can ill afford to lose it if it is to seriously challenge Democratic control in the fall.

Paul, 47 and an eye surgeon, is making his first run for public office, and his emergence as a favorite of tea party activists has been one of the most striking developments of the early months of the midterm election campaign. In an appearance on primary night, he credited their support with powering him to his victory, and the first opinion poll since then shows him with a commanding lead over his Democratic rival, Jack Conway.

Heyburn's Torrez, Navy command earn honors

Navy Seaman Mark A. Torrez, son of Teresa and Raul Torrez of Heyburn, and his command, USS George H.W. Bush, based in Norfolk, Va., recently earned the honor to fly the Enlisted Surface Warfare Specialist (ESWS) and Enlisted Aviation Warfare Specialist (EAWS) pennants.

The pennants signify that all eligible sailors have qualified in both the ESWS and EAWS programs.

In order to qualify, sailors must demonstrate advanced knowledge in the warfare capabilities of all of the ship's departments. Sailors are required to train in many jobs throughout the ship, during which they obtain more than 400 signatures stating that they understand the workings of each specific job.

After the requirements are met, sailors must then pass a 200-question written exam and an oral board chaired by a senior or master chief.

"It's a very difficult challenge for a command of this size," said Command Master Chief John W. Hick. "The spirit and motivation from the crew with these programs is awe-inspiring."

The warfare programs were created between 1978 and 1980 to help sailors gain a level of qualification and knowledge beyond what is normally required for advancement.

Torrez joined the Navy in January 2008.

What time of day should meds and supplements be taken?

DEAR DR. GOTT: My doctors have told me that there are better times during the day to take vitamins or calcium. I take a thyroid pill in the morning. About an hour or so later, I take my vitamin with an omega-3 tablet and then take my calcium tablet with a late lunch or after my dinner. Am I taking them correctly as far as getting all the benefits from them? I hope you can answer this question for me.

DEAR READER: You ask

an extremely important question, and your doctors are correct in what they tell you. In some respects, the most appropriate time of day to take vitamins and other medications is when you are least likely to forget, such as the first thing each day.

Thyroid medication should be taken on an empty stomach a half-hour before breakfast. If you are a swing-shift employee, judge accordingly and plan to take the medication at an appropriate time.

Vitamins can be taken at almost any time of the day, so just before or following a meal is satisfactory. Be sure to read the recommendation printed on each vitamin bottle to determine what the manufacturer believes is most appropriate. There are some supplements that work better when taken on an empty stomach. For example, if B-complex vitamins upset your stomach, take them with food. Iron supplements should be taken on an empty stomach. And, whenever vitamins are consumed, do not wash them down with alcohol.

Calcium comes in two forms — calcium carbonate, which is more readily available and inexpensive, or calcium citrate. Either form should be taken at least four hours apart from any thyroid medication. This also holds true for calcium antacids, iron supplements and many drugs prescribed or recommended as antacids. Calcium carbonate should be taken with meals; calcium citrate can be taken either with meals or on an empty stomach. Calcium should be taken in 500-milligram doses or less at one time. Therefore, if your supplement is a 1,000-milligram tablet, split it into two doses, because it can hamper the absorption of some medications, including those for high blood pressure and antibiotics, so a timing modification might be required. Speak with your physician for his or her recommendations.

Ralph Lamb

VANCOUVER, Wash. — Ralph Lamb, 92, of Vancouver, Wash., passed away Tuesday, May 18, 2010, following a stroke.

He was born in Kellogg, Idaho, on Feb. 3, 1918, to Elliot and Phoebe Lamb as one of six children. Shortly after his birth, the Lamb family moved to the Twin Falls, Idaho, area. Ralph attended schools in Hollister and Jerome, Idaho, and then worked for the Voris Movie Theater in Jerome. He married Mable Clark in 1941, and they moved to Boise, Idaho, where he worked for Standard Oil and Safeway Stores. During World War II, he went through boot camp at Camp Farragut in Idaho and then served with the 3rd Fleet aboard the USS Canberra in the South Pacific. On Friday, Oct. 13, 1944, the ship was torpedoed and suffered heavy damage; 23 crew members were killed. The ship was towed to a temporary repair base and then steamed back to Boston via the Panama Canal for refurbishing. As a World War II veteran, Ralph is listed in the duty roster at the World War II Memorial in Washington, D.C.

After the war, Ralph attended barber school and then worked in Young's Barber Shop in Buhl, Idaho. In 1947, he went to work for Safeway Stores and worked as meat department manager in the Buhl and Payette stores. He finished his career with Safeway in Twin Falls, where he retired in 1983 with 36 years of service. While in Payette, Ralph and Mable were active members in a square dancing club and later became involved with a

Twin Falls ballroom dancing group. Following retirement, he started a small lawn care business in Twin Falls. During retirement, he and Mable enjoyed a trip to Europe, purchased an RV and spent several years traveling around the west with friends and family. A highlight of their summers was an annual family reunion at "Camp Lamb," typically populated with more than 30 family and friends, which moved from park to park in Idaho, Washington and Oregon over the years.

In 2003, Ralph and Mable moved to Vancouver, Wash., to be near family. Ralph was diagnosed with prostate cancer in the mid-1980s but survived the disease and treatment to live until he was 92. He and Mable celebrated their 69th wedding anniversary in February this year. He was a member of the Buhl Volunteer Fire Department for 18 years and was active in the Twin Falls Historical Society. He was a member of the First Baptist Church in Buhl and Twin Falls and the Faith Baptist Church in Vancouver, Wash.

He is survived by his wife; two sisters, Fern and Bernice; and three children, Aleta Heard of Longview, Wash., Brian Lamb of Pullman, Wash., and Robin Strickland of Vancouver, Wash.; with eight grandchildren and five great-grandchildren.

A memorial service will be held at 4 p.m. Saturday, May 22, at the Faith Baptist Church in Vancouver, Wash. In lieu of flowers, the family requests donations be made to the First Baptist Church of Buhl or the First Baptist Church of Twin Falls.

Jane Bader Tremblay, 85, passed away Monday, May 17, 2010, with dignity at her home.

Jane was the third child of Harry and Mabel Bader, born Jan. 1, 1925, in Puyallup, Wash. She was a graduate of Puyallup High School and attended Seattle College. While working at the Draft Board, she met and married the love of her life, Frederick "Todd" Tremblay, on July 14, 1946. Four children were born to this union. Todd's career took the family to Washington state, Oklahoma, Ohio and finally to Twin Falls, Idaho, in 1968. Jane was a secretary for several companies but eventually found her niche as a travel agent at Magic Carpet Travels. She loved to travel and experienced many special places in the world during her lifetime. She also enjoyed reading, playing bridge, her cabin in the mountains, her stained glass projects and her beautiful garden.

Jane was a member of St. Edward the Confessor Catholic Church for 42 years. Jane was a loving, special person, always upbeat and thinking of others. Her family and friends were very important to her. She will be greatly missed.

Jane was preceded in death by her parents, Harry and Mabel Bader; her sister, Dorothy Brakefield; her brother, Charles Bader; and her beloved husband of 49 years, Todd Tremblay. She is survived by her three sons, Robby Town of Seattle, James Tremblay of Twin Falls and Michael (Jody) Tremblay of Twin Falls; her daughter, Teresa (Bill) Shank of Filer; her eight grandchildren; four great-grandchildren; and her beloved cat, Esther.

At her request, there will be no funeral service. In celebration of her life, an open house for friends and family will be held from 3 to 6 p.m. Saturday, May 22, at Rosenau Funeral Home, 2826 Addison Ave. E. in Twin Falls. Memorials may be given to the St. Edward's Catholic Church Building Fund or to St. Luke's Magic Valley Health Foundation for a memorial in the Rose Garden at the new hospital.

The family extends a special thank you to all the staff of St. Luke's Magic Valley, the physicians and staff at St. Luke's Clinic, and to Rick Routt with St. Luke's Hospice for the compassionate care they provided.

Thereafter, he served in the U.S. Air Force during World War II as a pilot flying P-38s and B-25s. After the war he attended Idaho State University. He worked for more than 30 years as a mechanic for United Airlines prior to his retirement. For more than 30 years Ralph served as an elder in various congregations of Jehovah's Witnesses in Colorado and California.

He is survived by his immediate family, his wife of 65 years, Shirley; a son, Michael; and a daughter, Elaine Cope; as well as three brothers, Wilburn (Bud) Andrew of Shoshone, Idaho, Warren (Casey) and Clair Kenaston; his sister, Judith Warren; and three grandchildren, David and Brian Cope, and Melissa Woody.

A memorial service will be held at 5 p.m. Saturday, May 22, at the Woodland Park Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses Kingdom Hall in Madera, Calif.

Fredrick Howard Rood

JEROME — Fredrick "Fred" Howard Rood passed away May 13, 2010, at the Overlake Medical Hospital in Bellevue, Wash., due to heart complications.

Disposition will be by cremation. At the family's request, there will be a memorial service held for him in Montana this summer.

Mr. Rood was born Dec. 17, 1941, in Westwood, Calif., to Howard James Rood and Martha May (Pitken) Rood. He was raised in Weippe, Idaho, with his two sisters, Naomi and Elizabeth; and three brothers, Marvin, Kenneth "Kenny" and Connie. He married his wife, Virginia Hirsch, in 1971. He graduated high school in Weippe, Idaho, and then went into the Army, serving during the Vietnam War. After the Army, he attended the College of Southern Idaho, where he obtained his certification as a diesel mechanic. He maintained his career in the transportation industry as a long-haul truck driver for more than 40 years, with 16 of those years accompanied by his wife, Virginia.

Mr. Rood enjoyed fishing, camping, race car driving and restoring automobiles. His first passion was his absolute devotion to his family and being with all the people that he cherished. His encouragement to others inspired them to be as kind hearted as he was.

Survivors include his wife, Virginia Rood of Jerome; son, Gerrald Rood of Jerome; daughter, Michelle Berreth of Weippe; daughter, Shannon Goldenstein of Umatilla, Ore.; brothers, Kenneth Rood of Ripley, Tenn., and Connie Rood of Jerome; and seven grandchildren. He was preceded in death by his father, Howard Rood; mother, Martha Rood; sisters, Naomi Rood and Elizabeth Dakin; and brother, Marvin Rood.

Barton's Funeral Home of Bellevue, Wash., is in charge of the cremation.

Calderon seeks U.S. help in drug wars

By Mary Beth Sheridan
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Mexican President Felipe Calderon, speaking Thursday to a joint session of Congress, pleaded for more help in limiting the flow of weapons to Mexico, saying they were contributing to the devastating drug violence in his country.

In a speech punctuated by applause and standing ovations, Calderon thanked lawmakers for providing hundreds of millions of dollars to bolster his country's fight against drug gangs. He emphasized his government's resolve to confront the narco-traffickers, who have killed more than 20,000 people in Mexico in recent years.

But Mexico needs greater U.S. assistance stopping the flow of assault weapons and other deadly arms across the border, he said.

"I understand that the purpose of the Second Amendment is to guarantee good American citizens the ability to defend themselves and their nation," he said. "But believe me, many of these guns are not going to honest American hands."

The Obama administration has won goodwill in Mexico by publicly acknowledging the role of U.S. guns and drug consumption in fueling that country's narcotics trade. President Obama has ordered increased searches of Mexico-bound train cargo and other measures to crack down on the illegal stream of weapons. But Mexican officials have expressed frustration that more progress has not been made.

Calderon said his government had seized 75,000 guns in Mexico in a three-year period and found that 80 percent of those whose origin could be traced were bought in the United States.

The Mexican leader also asked lawmakers to "consider reinstating" the assault weapons ban, a 10-year measure passed in 1994. Many Democrats jumped to their feet, clapping.

The Obama administration has shown no inclination to take on powerful gun-rights supporters and the National Rifle Association with such a move. Homeland Security Secretary Janet Napolitano recently acknowledged that there would be little appetite for it in Congress.

Andrew Arulanandam, a spokesman for the NRA, noted that when Attorney Gen. Eric Holder proposed reviving the assault weapons ban last year, 65 House Democrats sent him a letter opposing the idea. Most Republicans in Congress are strong defenders of gun rights.

"The answers to Mexico's drug and violence problems do not lie in stripping away the rights of law-abiding Americans on this side of the border," Arulanandam said.

Calderon's speech came on the second and last day of his state visit. The warm reception in Congress reflected the widespread praise he received in Washington for his government's aggressive fight against the cartels. But his approach is increasingly unpopular at home because of the spike in bloodshed.

The Obama administration has sought to continue the Merida Initiative, which was begun under the Bush administration and provided $1.3 billion in equipment and training in the past three years.

In his speech, Calderon also tried to convince lawmakers that his government is doing all it can to stem illegal migration to the United States by creating jobs and better opportunities for Mexicans. He said the immigration reform backed by Obama, which would create a path to citizenship for many illegal immigrants, was "crucial to securing our common border."

Inventor of ATMs dies at 84 in Scotland

LONDON (AP) — John Shepherd-Barron, the Scotsman credited with inventing the world's first automatic cash machine, has died after a short illness. He was 84.

Shepherd-Barron died peacefully in northern Scotland's Raigmore Hospital on Saturday, funeral director Alasdair Rhind said Wednesday.

Shepherd-Barron once said that he came up with the idea of the cash dispensers after being locked out of his bank. He also said that his invention was inspired by chocolate vending machines.

"It struck me there must be a way I could get my own money, anywhere in the world or the U.K.," he said in an interview with the BBC in 2007. "I hit upon the idea of a chocolate bar dispenser, but replacing chocolate with cash."

The first automatic teller machine, now known as ATMs, was installed at a branch of Barclays Plc in a north London suburb on June 27, 1967.

Step to artificial life: Manmade DNA powers cell

Obama asks bioethics commission to study milestone's impact

By Lauren Neergaard
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Scientists announced a bold step Thursday in the enduring quest to create artificial life. They've produced a living cell powered by manmade DNA.

While such work can evoke images of Frankenstein-like scientific tinkering, it also is exciting hopes that it could eventually lead to new fuels, better ways to clean polluted water, faster vaccine production and more.

Is it really an artificial life form?

The inventors call it the world's first synthetic cell, although this initial step is more a re-creation of existing life — changing one simple type of bacterium into another — than a built-from-scratch kind.

But Maryland genome-mapping pioneer J. Craig Venter said his team's project paves the way for the ultimate, much harder goal: designing organisms that work differently from the way nature intended for a wide range of uses. Already he's working with ExxonMobil in hopes of turning algae into fuel.

"This is the first self-replicating species we've had on the planet whose parent is a computer," Venter told reporters.

And the report, being published today in the journal Science, is triggering excitement in this growing field of synthetic biology.

"It's been a long time coming, and it was worth the wait," said Dr. George Church, a Harvard Medical School genetics professor. "It's a milestone that has potential practical applications."

Following the announcement, President Obama directed the Presidential Commission for the Study of Bioethical Issues he established last fall to make its first order of business a study of the milestone.

"The commission should consider the potential medical, environmental, security and other benefits of this field of research, as well as any potential health, security or other risks," Obama wrote in a letter to the commission's chairwoman, Amy Gutmann, the president of the University of Pennsylvania.

Obama also asked that the commission develop recommendations about any actions the government should take "to ensure that America reaps the benefits of this developing field of science while identifying appropriate ethical boundaries and minimizing identified risks."

Scientists for years have moved single genes and even large chunks of DNA from one species to another. At his J. Craig Venter Institute in Rockville, Md., and San Diego, Venter's team aimed to go further.

A few years ago, the researchers transplanted an entire natural genome — the genetic code — of one bacterium into another and watched it take over, turning a goat germ into a cattle germ.

Next, the researchers built from scratch another, smaller bacterium's genome, using off-the-shelf laboratory-made DNA fragments.

Friday's report combines those two achievements to test a big question: Could synthetic DNA really take over and drive a living cell? Somehow, it did.

"This is transforming life totally from one species into another by changing the software," said Venter, using a computer analogy to explain the DNA's role.

Feds say Massachusetts man had name, number of Times Square bomb suspect

By Denise Lavoie
Associated Press writer

BOSTON (AP) — A Pakistani man arrested in Massachusetts during the investigation into the failed Times Square bombing had the primary suspect's phone number and name in his cell phone and written on an envelope, a government attorney said Thursday.

Aftab Khan, a gas station attendant, had the items among his belongings in his Watertown, Mass., apartment, said Richard Neville, deputy chief counsel for U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement in Boston.

Neville revealed the information in court Thursday as he tried to persuade a U.S. immigration judge to keep Khan in the United States. His lawyer has asked that Khan be allowed to leave voluntarily. Judge Robin Feder did not immediately rule.

Khan, 27, was one of three Pakistani men arrested on immigration violations in New England last week as federal agents followed the money trail in their investigation into Faisal Shahzad, who is accused of trying to set off a car bomb in Times Square on May 1.

New York prosecutors said in a letter released Thursday that uninterrupted access to Shahzad for two weeks after his May 3 arrest was "extremely beneficial, if not essential" as investigators raced to prevent future attacks and identify other suspects.

Khan's cell phone had in its memory Shahzad's Connecticut phone number and first name, Neville said. The envelope also had Shahzad's first name and phone number written on it, he said.

Defense attorney Saher Macarius said earlier Thursday that Khan had never heard of Shahzad before his arrest, and he appeared stunned by the government's courtroom revelations.

"My client denied any relationship with that individual," he said. "He would have told me if he had any connection."

After the hearing, Macarius questioned whether the confiscated cell phone belonged to Khan and noted that the government had not presented evidence that it did.

Khan did not appear in court, but via video link from jail. He and a relative and roommate, Pir Khan, were arrested last week. A third man, Mohammad Shafiq Rahman, was arrested in Maine.

All three are being held on immigration charges and have not been charged criminally.

Man says God told him to go for walk in nude THIBODAUX, La. (AP) — A man who told police that God told him to walk the streets naked to save his soul has been arrested.

Thibodaux police responded to an obscenity complaint around 2 a.m. Thursday and found Shafiq Mohamed walking nude down the street.

When approached; Mohamed reportedly told officers that "America raped him" and added God told him to walk the streets naked to save his soul.

Mohamed was taken into custody and charged with obscenity. He was booked into the Lafourche Parish Detention Center where he awaited bail.

It was not immediately known whether Mohamed has an attorney.

Study: Ovarian cancer caught early by $30 blood test for women over 50

By Tom Randall
Bloomberg News

Dianne Klefstad's quilting group may have saved her life.

Klefstad, 61, was rescued from deadly ovarian cancer by a $30 blood test after the group signed up for a study that detected her disease. The research, released Thursday, may lead to an annual test recommended for all women over age 50.

For the majority of ovarian cancer patients, tumors go undiagnosed until the disease progresses to its fatal stages. Researchers were able to detect early development of three aggressive cancer cases and two borderline tumors when doctors monitored fluctuations of a protein known as CA-125, according to the study of 3,252 women released Thursday by the MD Anderson Cancer Center in Houston. About 21,550 patients were diagnosed with ovarian cancer in the United States last year, and 14,600 died from it, according to the National Cancer Institute. The cancer can be permanently removed if caught before it spreads. The new CA-125 testing method is now being evaluated in 200,000 women in Britain, with results are expected by 2015.

"I've been in this field for over 10 years and have seen a lot of false starts, so I'm excited when I see these results," said Karen Lu, the study's lead author and the MD Anderson doctor who removed Klefstad's tumor. "Finding a screening mechanism would be the holy grail in the fight against ovarian cancer."

The ovarian cancer study was highlighted among 4,500 research project summaries released Thursday ahead of the annual meeting of the American Society of Clinical Oncology, which begins June 4 in Chicago. More than 30,000 cancer doctors and researchers are expected to attend, according to conference organizers.

The CA-125 protein was identified as a tumor marker in the 1980s and has long been used by doctors to watch for relapse in patients who have been treated for ovarian cancer. But until now the test was considered a failure at detecting new cases because it missed some tumors and falsely identified too many healthy women as having cancer.

Researchers in the MD Anderson study used an algorithm that took into consideration age and subtle changes in the CA-125 score. When a score rose too much, the patient was asked to come in for another test three months later. If the tests were still high, they were given an ultrasound and moved into surgery if necessary. The testing regimen was a success.

Klefstad, who has quilted blankets as a hobby for 30 years, joined a quilting group in 2004 to meet new friends after she moved from one side of Houston to the other. One quilter was a volunteer at the hospital and suggested they join the clinical trial. Klefstad thought the drives to the hospital and the free lunches would be a way to bond with her new friends.

Klefstad's first CA-125 tests were well below the level that would have raised flags before the new testing algorithm. It wasn't until the fourth year of annual tests that a slight rise in CA-125 indicated she should return for an ultrasound, which revealed a small cyst. A second ultrasound showed the cyst had grown, and when she went in for surgery in June 2008, the doctors knew it was cancer.

Michaels in hospital after 'warning stroke'

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Bret Michaels is back in the hospital.

The rocker and reality TV star suffered what doctors call a "warning stroke" and has been diagnosed with a patent forum ovale, or hole in the heart, according to a report Thursday on his website. Michaels' publicist, Joann Mignano, confirmed the report.

Michaels was hospitalized after experiencing numbness on the left side of his body, particularly in his face and hands.

Doctors said the condition is operable and treatable and likely unrelated to the brain hemorrhage the 47-year-old suffered last month.

Michaels' neurosurgeon said that while the Poison frontman has a "fantastic attitude" about making a full recovery, "Bret's brain and body are not quite 100 percent yet, especially with the hole found in his heart."

Additional tests were being conducted to determine the best course of treatment. Doctors said

Michaels is currently being treated with a daily injection of a blood thinner to reduce the risk of clots.

His website said Michaels was "up, walking, talking, continuing his daily rehab and very happy to be alive."

"He has made it clear he is sick and tired of being in the hospital and is ready to rock again," the site says.

Michaels was expected to appear at Sunday's finale of Donald Trump's "The Celebrity Apprentice" in New York. NBC said in a statement that the network is "cautiously optimistic" that Michaels can attend the live season finale.

Young Cassia artists fill Springdale School with pretty paintings

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

BURLEY — The girls walked around the studio and munched on cake, some of them barefoot and wearing spring dresses despite the heavy, wet snow outside.

The juvenile artists, all students of Springdale School of Art, weren't showing off typical school art projects with color wheels or pencil sketches. Their impressive oil paintings, displayed in the middle of the room, showed that Cassia County's young artists have a lot of talent.

Springdale owner Claudette Bray teaches several kinds of art classes for children, including acrylic painting, pottery and computer design. Near the oil paintings sat a carousel of digital horse images the girls had decorated. The stars of the show, though, were the oil works.

Many of the students, like Haylie Lugo and Gabrielle Steele, both of Declo, first came to the school during annual summer classes, where they learned art basics with a variety of mediums — this year's schedule includes clay pinch pots, sewing, cupcake decorating and pulled-cardboard prints. After they got hooked, though, they signed up for art classes during the school year.

They start with an interest in painting, drawing or clay, and within two years of after-school classes produce oil still-lives — a privilege Bray bestows on students who are proficient at acrylic, she said. Although they use the same photos or models for their paintings, the girls' work has budding personality. Lugo, 11, focuses on details, while Steele, also 11, adds a streak of light-colored paint in her backgrounds.

Other artists will do workshops with students or help in other ways — Lugo's dad, Jason Lugo, provides photos as a reference from which

T.F. GROUP OTTO PILATE A MIX OF ECLECTIC TALENTS

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

Cigarette butts and old popcorn littered the floor of The Lamphouse Theater in Twin Falls on Monday. No movies were showing — the theater no longer operates regularly — but the room was far from quiet.

Twin Falls band Otto Pilate, which practices at The Lamphouse and regularly plays at Woody's and Von Scheidt, blends genres for high-energy rock shows. Their creative covers and diverse original music liven up whichever venue they play at.

Otto Pilate is made up of Josh Summers on lead vocals and guitar, Nate Harper on drums and Luke Tracy on percussion and harmonica. The band name, a homophone of "autopi-lot," comes from Pontius Pilate, Summers said. (Otto was his marijuana-selling cousin, the musicians joke.) Each of the band members brings a different flavor to the band: Harper has a jazz background, Summers likes metal, Tracy plays reggae and Capps does everything. Their sets mix all of those influences, with an Americana song

An uplifting and entertaining evening with John Rutter

By Michael Cole
Times-News writer

Choosing to perform "Requiem" and "Magnificat" by John Rutter was an easy choice for director Joseph Casperson, of the Magic Valley Chorale — almost as easy as waving his baton.

"John Rutter is the most published living composer," said Casperson. "If it is by Rutter, I will instantly buy 50 copies of the music. It is great for the choir, the orchestra and the audience. There is something profound and deep to its sound."

The Chorale and the Magic Valley Chamber Orchestra are set to perform "An Evening of Rutter" tonight.

"This music lends itself to something uplifting," said Casperson. "The melody will just take you away. Rutter just knows so much about making music fit the text."

Born in London in 1945, Rutter has created diverse music and shows influences of 20th century traditions as well as American classic songwriting. As one of his generation's top choral composers, his music is highly popular among audiences.

Rutter's choral arrangements almost always have an orchestral accompaniment. The chance to perform with a 20-piece orchestra makes a unique experience for members of the Chorale.

"I told Joe that this music is like ear candy," said Mike the audience.

"I think the most important thing is to feel the music," said Blackston. "Instead of concentrating on the notes on the page you have to feel how the music flows. You have to get the audience to feel those highs and lows."

With their sights firmly set on their performance tonight, the Magic Valley Chorale hopes the audience will leave the auditorium with the same appreciation for Rutter that they have.

"This is a big event," said Casperson. "We are going to fill up the whole stage. Our choir members range from 80 years old to high school students. This group has terrific talent."

"I hope that the audience will go away with a love for this music," said Blackston. "Rutter just writes beautiful music. We want the audience to fall in love with Rutter."

Philip Glass joins Sun Valley Opera

Times-News

SUN VALLEY — American composer Philip Glass has joined Sun Valley Opera's honorary board.

Glass has composed 20 operas, eight symphonies and compositions for his own Philip Glass Ensemble, and collaborated with such artists as Twyla Tharp, Woody Allen and David Bowie.

Opera President Frank Meyer said he was pleased to add a composer who has had such an impact on modern music to the honorary board.

"Having Mr. Glass associated with an arts organization in Idaho is an honor," echoed Mary Jo Helmeke, executive director of the Sun Valley Opera.

The Sun Valley Opera held its first performance in a private home about a decade ago. Last year it held a concert in the 1,500-seat Sun Valley Pavilion. And on July 11 it will present MIZ SAIGON. The program will feature five singers singing songs from "Les Miserables" and "Miss Saigon" accompanied by a 25-piece orchestra and a chorus finale.

Because of this growth the opera has added Peter Huang and Carol Scheifele-Holmes to its board of directors. Huang, a retired investor who lives in New York and Sun Valley, has served as a trustee of Carnegie Hall, the Brooklyn Academy of Music and the New York Zoological Society.

Scheifele-Holmes is a retired consultant who served on the boards of the Boston Symphony and the Boston Lyric Opera while living in Boston.

College students hold art show at Pandora's

Times-News

Epik Student Art Show will be on display through May 28 at Pandora's, 516 Hansen St. S. An opening reception will be held from 7 to 10 p.m. Saturday.

All of the artwork is made by several art students from the College of Southern Idaho, who were invited to participate in the show. The exhibition is a student-juried show so the artwork has been chosen by the students' peers.

Organizers estimate about 100 pieces will be shown. The featured works include paintings, drawings, ceramics, sculpture, photography, digital and mixed media.

The art show was the idea of one of the student organizers, Kendra Wakeman, who is doing the show for a college honors project and also for an enrichment experience for the art students.

The event provides an opportunity for the students to put together a show, organize submissions and learn to analyze art, according to Koye Brown, another organizer.

After the opening reception, the art show is on display from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m. Tuesday through May 28 at Pandora's.

Admission is free and the public is invited to attend.

Joelle Andersen, 12, points out details in her computer art project. the students paint — but Bray is their primary mentor.

And while the images have sophisticated details — Steele's sunflower still life catches the eye with a bright flower on the left, then leads it through the painting and into the dark background, Bray pointed out — the girls also enjoy simple things about their projects. Eight-year-old Hailey Whitehead likes drawing pictures of horses simply because she likes the animals, and Madisen Christensen said she likes art better than other subjects in school.

Hailey Whitehead, 8, drew this picture freehand. 'I like horses,' she said.

"Art, I get," the 16-year-old Declo student said. Joelle Andersen, 12, agreed. "(Painting) just helps my mind get clear off of school and stuff," the Burley girl said.

But whether they realize it or not, Bray said, they're getting benefits besides pretty paintings to give to grandparents. "We are teaching them to see," Bray said.

Otto Pilate

transitioning into hard rock, then moving to blues. Summers has even rapped on-stage before — earning eye-rolls from his band mates and cheers from the audience.

DREW GODLESKI/For the Times-News

"We all do a lot of different things," Summers said.

When the band started about a year ago, they had more covers in their sets. They now have more originals, and the covers they do play aren't ones bar-goers typically hear from live bands.

"We're not doing (expletive) 'Sweet Home Alabama,'" Summers said.

No matter what they play, all of their music is rooted in rock 'n' roll. During practice on Monday, between R-rated banter, they played one song multiple times until they felt comfortable with a reggae-inspired section. They then discussed whether it was true reggae, and decided the true hippies in the audience might take offense to the label. Let's call it the disco section instead, Summers said.

Summers' brother, Mike Summers (who makes up half of Christian rap duo Mouth of Otto Pilate member Luke Tracy plays harmonica during practice on Monday. Tracy, who also plays percussion, brings a reggae vibe to the band, while other band members are influenced by jazz, blues, rock and other genres.

Christ) is also a fan of the group.

"They're the best band in town that's not trying to be Incubus," he said. The two jokingly spar over whose band is more popular — Mouth of Christ just released their first CD, while Otto Pilate has no recordings other than a few on their MySpace page. They're picky about how their live recordings sound, Summers said, and haven't made it to a studio.

"We're working on it," Capps said.

But the lack of a CD isn't necessarily a bad thing for a band that thrives on interaction with each other and the audience. To get the full Otto Pilate experience, head to the bar, order a drink or three and groove on the dance floor to their reggae-bluesy-metal rock.

And if you're lucky, you might have half as much fun as the band members.

United through technology, Tibetan monk and family make documentary, CD

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

KETCHUM — When Jamyang Yeshe left behind his monastery in Tibet and fled over the Himalayan mountains into India in 1998, he knew that there was a good chance he would never again see the family he had left behind in his Chinese-occupied homeland.

But now Yeshe and his family have been reunited through the magic of multi-tracking recording technology.

Yeshe eventually made his way to Canada where he recorded a "Shining Spirit" CD. And filmmaker Karen McDiarmid and recording technician Mark Unrau took what he had recorded to Tibet where they filmed and recorded Yeshe's family laying down additional tracks to the CD.

Diarmid's film, "Shining Spirit: The Musical Journey of Jamyang Yeshe," will be shown at 7 p.m. Monday at the nextStage Theatre, 120 S. Main St., Ketchum. It will include an introduction by McDiarmid and a musical performance by Jamyang Yeshe, who will accompany himself on such traditional Tibetan instruments as the kara and dranyin.

Tickets are $15 at the door.

The half-hour film was shown at the Banff Film Festival earlier this year and McDiarmid and Yeshe are on their way to the Telluride Film Festival to show it there. The Ketchum showing was organized by the Sun Valley Spiritual Film Festival.

It was very emotional watching Jamyang's family listen to his voice from Unrau's laptop computer, McDiarmid said.

"We were overwhelmed by the intensity of their joy and sorrow," she said. "Jamyang's monk friends from his old monastery also came to listen, as well, and were very moved."

This week, she is one of just two contestants left on the YOBISing online contest, which the Times-News first told you about last month.

She plays regularly at venues in the Wood River Valley, including Papa Hemi's Hideaway, a Ketchum restaurant and bar.

MVHS performs 'The Seussification of Romeo and Juliet'

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

Lay out a blanket or bring your own seat, as "The Seussification of Romeo and Juliet" is sure to be a treat.

The show, opening tonight, is playwright Peter Bloedel's look at how Dr. Seuss might have written the tragic love story, offering a whimsical reinvention of Shakespeare's classic tale.

With fantastical machines, inventive and colorful costumes, rhyming couplets and creative wordplay, the show will delight audiences both young and old.

Director and drama teacher Jennifer Miller is hoping Mother Nature cooperates: the show is being held at Mary Alice Park in Twin Falls.

With a large romantic mural, gazebo, fountain, array of landscapes, and garden oddities, like the oversized checkerboard, Mary Alice Park is the perfect backdrop for this fanciful show, Miller said.

"I saw a scene from this script performed at the state drama competition and instantly fell in love," Miller said. "It's perfect for us."

Rehearsing outside has been a challenge.

During a recent dress rehearsal cast members tripped over solar-lit pathway lightings and statues. Blocking was made difficult by the park's changing terrain of grass and concrete blocks.

"It's been raining a lot so we're hoping the weather clears," Miller said.

Chairs will not be set up in the park but audience members are welcome to bring lawn chairs, lay out a blanket, enjoy a picnic or simply sit in the grass.

Those familiar with MVHS productions will notice the return of Alisha Neal, a graduate of the school.

Neal is loving developing many characters, as she will be playing the parts of Narrator Two, Abram, Nurse and Monk Larry.

"I get to be crazy with each one so it's easy to separate the characters," Neal said. "One has a British accent, another is a Southern Baptist and one is based off Dr. Frank N. Furter from 'The Rocky Horror Picture Show.'"

To match the character with caricature you'll have to come to one of the two planned play showings.

"I don't want to give it all away," Neal said.

For Tom Hunt, a senior, this show is a first — but you wouldn't know it, as his rendition of a 'Seussified' Romeo shines.

"I've done any theater before," Hunt said.

Like school theater veteran Sam Cheney, cast as Sampson and Tybalt, Hunt is finding script's rhyming flow fun and easy to follow.

"It's written like Dr. Seuss would have written and it's fun to play along," Cheney said.

A local 'Glee' club will rap and rock

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Colla Voce might be considered the Wood River Valley's version of the popular TV show "Glee," about a high school glee club that takes song to new levels.

The popularity of the Wood River High School group has certainly soared since it was founded seven years ago.

Today the 12-woman ensemble has to stage three separate concerts in Hailey's 250-seat Liberty Theatre to accommodate all its fans.

Colla Voce and a hard-rocking rhythm section will perform a selection of jazz, rhythm and blues and rock 'n' roll titled "Nights at the Liberty" at 7 p.m. tonight and Saturday at the Liberty Theatre, on Main Street, Hailey. The third performance was May 20.

The group will sing everything from rap to jazz, including such songs as "Singing in the Rain" and "Don't Stop Believin'," said Colla Voce director Max Stimac.

The concert will include guest appearances by the B-Tones, the high school's men's vocal group; and Enchante, another high school women's vocal ensemble.

Admission is free but donations will be accepted at the door.

High school students film screenplay in Hailey bar

By Karen Bossick
Time-News correspondent

HAILEY — With the spring play out of the way, drama students at Wood River High School have retreated to the bar.

Students in the school's Performing Arts Academy are turning Hailey's Wicked Spud into a biker bar this week as they film a 22-minute screenplay written by a Boise State University student.

The idea is to give acting students additional skills as they leave high school and enter a world where they can call on those skills to make commercials and TV shows.

"We're trying to broaden their theater experience," said Cathy Reinheimer, who organized the shoot with Academy Director Karl Nordstrom. "The older kids will have some film clips they can take with them when they graduate. And the younger kids are getting their feet wet."

A former actress on soap operas, Reinheimer also worked on such shows as "Evergreen," a TV drama about a doctor who moved his family from New York to a small mountain town in Colorado.

Her experience has given her the opportunity to snag some real scripts for such TV shows as "CSI" and commercials like Burger King, Fresh Express Salad and Cheerios. She's tried out the scripts on the drama students before they've aired on TV.

"A lot of times the kids do better than what we end up seeing on TV later. For instance, Kate Morales did a 'CSI' scene where a woman was visited by a detective about a break-in and she blew us away the way she did it," Reinheimer said. This week's script, Cathy Reinheimer checks the monitor before starting the next take.

"Stimulus Package," revolved around a cell phone salesman being pressured to manipulate his customers to sell the most expensive phones and plans. But he's taught to pursue his passion by an MBA graduate who decides to try experiencing life rather than rushing to find a new job after she is laid off in the recession.

Reinheimer hired a professional cameraman for the film shoot that started Monday afternoon.

"Working with professionals, rather than people they know, forces them to become professional right away," she said.

As cameraman John Plummer readied the camera, Reinheimer lined up the first shot.

"Now Alex," she said, addressing Alex Kuntz, "I need you to wrap your hand around that corner as you enter the room. Sarah, honey, I want you to beg Karl for some nachos for the big ride tomorrow. I'm going to be under the camera," she showed Sarah Hope as she crawled along the floor. "I want you to follow me with your eyes as you're talking."

Reinheimer studied the scene in the camera monitor and then looked at videographer John Plummer.

"Camera's rolling," Plummer said.

"And action," Reinheimer responded.

"Now don't you be makin' fun of MY past life as a corporate puppet," Alex Kuntz rattled off. "There were lotsa perks — free credit cards, acid reflux, performance write-ups..."

Thirty seconds later, as a couple Wicked Spud patrons moseyed over to Brandon Vilcapoma holds the microphone as the students film a take.

look in on the scene, the take was over.

"And cut," Reinheimer said. "That was great. Now let's try it again."

Kuntz, who plans to study theater at a California university next year, said she was amazed by the differences between film and stage.

"Ohmigosh! Film is a lot more about little expressions. It's a lot more realistic," she said. "The toughest part is remembering not to go big, not exaggerating. But I love it — it's definitely a different experience."

Mackenzie Harbaugh, who played the cell phone salesman, said he still prefers the stage.

"It's so hard to start and stop and have to remain in character," he said. "But it's a good experience for me, working with a camera."

Cameraman John Plummer watches the monitor as a cell phone salesman, played by Mackenzie Harbaugh, (in background) lives a double life as a biker dude.

Casey on the mound: Minico sinks Lakeland

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

NAMPA — Ernest Thayer's baseball rhyme "Casey at the Bat" is a well-known classic about a star player from Mudville.

On Thursday, "Casey on the Mound" was another poetic masterpiece, this one about a star player from Spartanville.

Minico pitcher Casey Christiansen threw a gem in the Spartans' 10-1 win over Lakeland in the opening round of the Class 4A state baseball tournament. The junior's line: seven innings, three hits, 11 strikeouts, zero walks, zero earned runs.

"These are the moments you live for, the state tournament," Christiansen said. "You just gotta love the moment and go out there and give it what you've got."

The defending state champs loved nearly every moment of the lopsided victory, and hope that mojo continues into today's 4 p.m. semifinals where the Spartans will face Bonneville (23-5), a 5-1 winner over Kuna on Thursday.

"A lot of people didn't expect us to get to state this year and we're here to show them that we're going to give it our all and we're going to play our best and play our game," said Minico senior Dylan Winmill, who went 3-for-5 at the plate with a double and an RBI.

"We've had a plan all year, we're the defending state champs and we have to come back and win it again, that's our goal," Winmill said. "Everybody's got the right mindset and right focus to come back and get that."

BOISE — As dusk fell Thursday at the Idaho State Track and Field Championships, the Jerome girls stood atop the Class 4A leaderboard with 35.5 points.

Carrie Thibault beat out a pair of Skyview pole vaulters to take gold for Jerome in the event. Her vault of 10 feet, 6 inches was half a foot higher than the second-place finisher and her personal record.

"I did it when it counted," Thibault said. "It was a good day to PR. It's awesome to win, but in the end you want to see your team up there with a trophy. Hopefully it will happen for us."

The pole vault is one of the first events of the state meet. There is no time to get nervous.

"We're used to it," Thibault said. "You do it all year long, but your adrenaline gets going. You just have to take a deep breath and hope for the best."

She said state is the best part of track, the most fun, the one thing they look forward to all year long, to unite and bond as a team.

Jerome's Mikesell Clegg placed second in the 3,200 meters. Clegg is small, even for a sophomore, but her effort to stay with the lead pack paid off in the end.

"People always tease me that I have to take twice as many steps as everyone else," Clegg said, "but I don't know if that's true."

Wood River High School brought a small team to state, but Cheyenne Swanson gave her Wolverines some hometown hardware from Bronco Stadium. The sophomore won the discus with a throw of 115-11, a full seven

It's contagious

Bruins come alive to rout Hillcrest

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

NAMPA — Taking it on the chin for two innings was more than enough for Class 4A heavyweight Twin Falls.

After struggling early on against Hillcrest pitcher Brookx Andrus, the Bruins recovered, saw an opening and dealt the knockout punch with an eight-run fourth inning in a 12-3 victory to open the 4A state baseball tournament at Rodeo Park.

The win advances Twin Falls (26-4) into today's semifinals where it will meet Bishop Kelly (20-4) at 7 p.m.

"I was very pleased with our kids because they could have very easily folded after three innings," said Twin Falls head coach Tim Stadelmeir. "They had us on the ropes early.

"We prepared hard all week for that lefty."

— Twin Falls' Eric Harr

Ellis, Ryan Petersen and Jared Jordan each drove in a run to give Twin Falls the lead. The Bruins began to take advantage of the lefty Andrus with several push bunts for base hits.

"For the first few innings we thought we were in for a battle and then a few bunts really got us going," said Ellis, who was 2-for-4 with three RBIs. "Like our coaches always say, bunting is contagious and hitting is contagious. Once we started bunting, the hitting came."

In the fourth, the Bruins sent 13 batters to the plate and scored eight runs on four hits while Andrus issued five free passes.

"We prepared hard all week for that lefty," said Twin Falls' Eric Harr, who had two hits and three RBIs in the fourth inning. "Everybody has been gearing up for that fastball and everyone did their job. We just started jumping on him like it was contagious."

Twin Falls' Zak Slotten rounds third base on his way to score during the Bruins' 12-3 win over Hillcrest in the Class 4A state baseball tournament Thursday at Rodeo Park in Nampa.

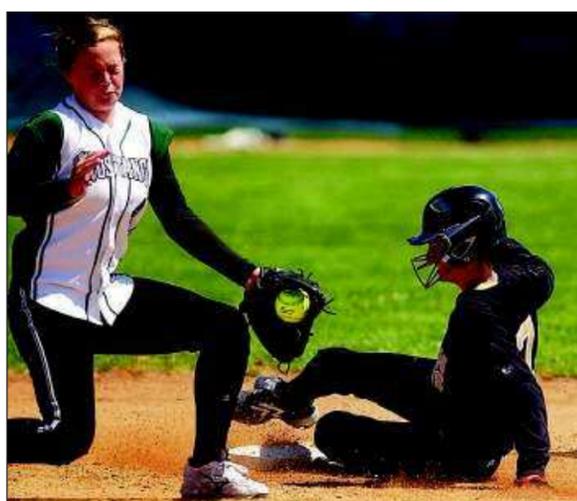

After that, the Bruins' loose, confident swagger was back and they pounded the Knights the rest of the way. Catcher and leadoff hitter Jayson Welker was 3-for-4 and starting pitcher Cy Sneed went six innings, giving up two earned runs on four hits with five strikeouts and four walks.

"We said from Day 1 that we're not going to come into this state tournament and let the game come to us — we're going to go get it," said Stadelmeir. "We're going to be the aggressors. That's just the way we play. We create our own momentum."

Johnson repeats in triple, T.F. boys win medley

By John Derr
Times-News writer

BOISE — Minico's Coltin Johnson repeated as triple jump champion while Twin Falls took gold in the medley relay on the first day of the boys Class 4A state track meet at Bronco Stadium in Boise.

The news is not so good on the team front. The Spartans hopes for a state title look daunting as Rigby dominated in the field events, tallying 53 points. Minico sits in second with 22.25 while the Bruins collected 10 points for the relay.

Johnson, sporting a red Mohawk just as he did at last year's state meet, hit a personal best 45 feet, 2.75 inches on his second attempt and let that mark hold up from there.

Glenns Ferry pounds Soda Springs at 2A tourney

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

GLENN'S FERRY — Last year's championship rematch is happening a round early.

Today's Class 2A state baseball tournament semifinal round features last year's champion and runner-up in a battle for a spot in the 2010 title game as Nampa Christian and Glenns Ferry meet following lopsided wins on Thursday. The Pilots got to work early against opening-round opponent Soda Springs, beating the Cardinals 10-0 in a five-inning run-rule game, while Nampa Christian scalded Kendrick 21-6 in a five-inning game.

Glenns Ferry scored five runs in the top of the first on the strength of John Acord's three-RBI triple.

"Their pitcher was good, but we keyed off him, which boosted our morale," Acord said. "We were nervous to start."

The early performance gave winning pitcher Adrian Martinez some room to maneuver. The sophomore said he was excited all week, looking forward to the tournament, and his enthusiasm led to a five-inning one-hitter with 11 strikeouts.

"I was pleased with how it worked out," said head coach Denis Uhl. "Adrian kept his count down to help us out if we make it to the last round."

Martinez also contributed at the plate, hitting 2-for-3 with one RBI and two runs scored. Gabe Arevalo also tripled for the Pilots, who connected nine times against the Cardinal pitching.

Glenns Ferry and Nampa Christian will meet at 6 p.m. at Pilot Field to decide one of the spots for the championship finale. New Plymouth and Parma will play earlier in the day for the other spot. Nampa Christian is the defending champ, having beaten Glenns Ferry in last year's title game.

The Pilots fell to Nampa Christian twice in the regular season, but the Pilots believe they have a shot to upset the defending champion.

NEW PLYMOUTH 6, GRANGEVILLE 2

New Plymouth advanced to the championship semifinal by defeating Grangeville 6-2 in the opening game of the tournament.

The Pilgrims broke a 1-1 tie with five runs in the top of the seventh, and Grangeville could only respond with one run. Winning pitcher Matt York struck out 13 batters in a complete-game performance.

PARMA 8, MALAD 5

Tied 4-4 in the bottom of the sixth, Parma rallied for four runs to beat Malad 8-5 and advance to the championship semifinal round. The Panthers will play New Plymouth at 3 p.m.

NAMPA CHRISTIAN 21, KENDRICK 6

Nampa Christian made quick work of Kendrick, thumping the Tigers 21-6 in five innings.

The Trojans scored most of their runs in two innings, putting up eight in the third and another 12 in the fourth on 15 hits.

Buhl survives scare against Timberlake

Kimberly comes up just short in 3A tournament

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

ONTARIO, Ore. — Stellar at times and awful at others, Buhl's baseball team did just enough to avoid disaster.

J.D. Leckenby's two-out single in the bottom of the seventh scored Marco Avelar and advanced Buhl to the Class 3A semifinals with a wild 10-9 win over Timberlake on Thursday.

The Indians (22-5) led 4-0 after two innings but found themselves in all kinds of trouble in the sixth, where they trailed 9-5 with just six outs left with which to work. But they scored four times in the sixth to tie it and Leckenby's single an inning later gave Buhl a win over a team it may have underestimated.

"I think we came out thinking they weren't very good. We scored a couple of runs early and then quit," said junior outfielder Matt

Hamilton, who doubled, homered and drove in four runs in the win. "But certain kids came up with big hits and that's what got us going."

One big element of Buhl's scouting report was to be extra aggressive on the base paths and take extra bases whenever possible. That netted a run that might not have scored when Avelar came around from first base on a Hamilton single in the fourth inning, after Timberlake (16-8) had scored three runs in the top half to close within one.

But the Indians couldn't stem the rising tide through two pitchers, until Markus Lively put the fire out in the sixth inning and then put Timberlake down without a run in the seventh to set the stage for his team's last-gasp heroics.

"I just had to trust my defense and try to throw strikes," Lively said. "We struggled, but then we clutched up there at the end and got it done. There wasn't much momentum in this one but hopefully we can take a little toward the next ball game."

With the win Buhl gets a rematch of last year's semifinal against Fruitland. The Grizzlies mercy-ruled Buhl 15-0 in five innings last season on their way to the title. Revenge isn't on the mind, though, as there's now a greater goal.

"Last year we were happy to be at state," Hamilton said. "This time we want that state championship."

FRUITLAND 5, KIMBERLY 4

Kimberly gave the defending champ all it wanted, but in the end Fruitland was too good.

The Grizzlies raced out to a 4-1 lead after three innings and held on for a 5-4 victory Thursday to set up a semifinal rematch with Buhl.

Fruitland (23-3) led 5-2 heading into the seventh inning, but a fielding error and a walk put runners on first and second with no outs for Kimberly. Twice the Bulldogs (14-13) grounded into fielder's choices to get an out at third before a fly ball was dropped in the outfield to score a run.

The tying run was at second base for Nick Dame, Kimberly's best hitter, but he grounded out after a wild pitch scored a run and put the would-be game-tying run 90 feet away.

"Nick did a great job, put it in play but we just couldn't find the hole. The (second baseman) made a good play," said Kimberly coach Darin Gonzales. "It's hard to lose like that to the defending champion. But we told the kids we're a good baseball team, and we're not here by accident. We believed we could compete at this level and this proves it."

"They'll be fine ... we're here to win two more games and bring some hardware back home for the school and community."

Kimberly plays Timberlake in an elimination game at 1 p.m., today.

Jerome drops heartbreaker at 4A tourney

Times-News

Just that close. The Jerome Tigers fell 6-5 in 10 innings to Hillcrest on the opening day of the Class 4A state softball tournament in Pocatello.

"We went down fighting," said Jerome coach Adam Reynolds.

Trailing 3-0, the Tigers finally got going on Crystal Luna's two-run triple in the sixth inning. The teams were knotted 3-3 after seven innings and 4-4 after eight. Jerome had the winning run on third base in the ninth but came up empty.

A pair of RBI singles put Hillcrest up 6-4 in the 10th. A sacrifice fly by Shelbi Buzzuto scored one Jerome run, but the Tigers couldn't muster another.

With only T.J. Surrage having state experience, Reynolds said his team battled nerves early in the game. Jerome faces Pocatello in a 10 a.m. elimination game today.

Said Reynolds: "If we come out and just play, we'll be fine."

Makings went 3-for-3 with the homer and also struck out eight in the circle while holding Marsh Valley to two hits. Pfefferle hit 3-for-4 with five RBI. Kimberly led just 4-0 before exploding for 11 runs in the fifth.

The win means Kimberly will face rival Buhl at 1 p.m. (MDT) today.

New Plymouth scored four runs in the first and six more as the second as Declo committed four errors in the game.

"New Plymouth was a strong team," said Declo coach Kari Osterhout. "They hit well and took advantage of Minico pitcher Casey Christiansen threw 11 strikeouts and no walks in the Spartans' 10-1 win over Lakeland at the Class 4A state baseball tournament Thursday at Rodeo Park in Nampa.

Minico (22-11) jumped on Lakeland pitcher Cody Vandever early and never looked back, scoring three runs on four hits in the first inning. The Spartans pulled out their arsenal of offense with clutch hits, heads-up base running and small ball execution.

K.J. Redder batted 3-for-3 with an RBI and Christiansen was 3-for-4 and drove in two runs.

Lakeland's (13-12) only run came on a Minico throwing error in the fourth.

Christiansen faced five batters over the minimum while Lakeland only hit the ball out of the infield twice — a double in the first inning and a fly out to left field in the fourth. It was a fine pitching performance, especially considering Minico had no scouting report on the northern Idaho school.

"Coach (Ben) Frank said we were going to pitch to my strengths the first time through (the batting order) and see what they've got and try to use that as our game plan."

ASHLEY SMITH/Times-News

Twin Falls' Cheltzie Williams competes in the triple jump Thursday in the Idaho High School Track and Field Championships at Bronco Stadium in Boise.

4A girls

I feet more than her previous best. She said a short prep time before state may have helped her prepare mentally.

"When I'm going to the stadium, I listen to music, get in the zone and forget about everything and only my coach talks to me and that gets me in the zone," Swanson said. "Then you just get in and throw."

She said winning gold as a sophomore would add future pressure to state meets, but she hopes it helps her team grow in the future.

"Hopefully it inspires more people to come out," Swanson said. "We have a lot of good athletes but not a lot of them come out. Hopefully they'll be like, 'Oh, this girl can do it, so can I!'"

Cheltzie Williams of Twin Falls took third place in the high jump and fourth in the triple jump (35-07). She had the best qualifying height (5-foot-2) in the high jump, but failed to reach it in competition.

"I feel a little disappointed in myself, not reaching that height," Williams said. "I've only not hit it once and that was the first time I competed."

All four of the top finishers reached 5-0, but none made it higher and the gold and silver medals went to jumpers with fewer misses, including Minico freshman Sydney Meier.

"I was very scared," Meier said. "I think it is (a great start) because next year I hope to do better, maybe win, I hope. I was really happy the way I ended, because I missed lower heights and I actually placed above a lot of people."

Magic Valley teams finished second and third in the medley relay. Minico (Breonna Phillips, Marlee Chandler, Hayli Worthington and Kelcy Hamilton) finished second and Canyon Ridge (Victoria Jones, Laken Mullin, Danielle Bowcut, Brianna Bowcut) took third.

Twin Falls' Brooke Wagner qualified first in the 200 meters and second in both the 100 and 400. Her 12.44-second time in the 100 was just .03 seconds behind defending 4A state champion Alex Van Halder of Columbia. Danielle Bowcut (Canyon Ridge) and Marlee Chandler (Minico) also qualified for the 100 final.

Danielle Bowcut and Wagner ran relays together for Twin Falls in 2009, but now Bowcut runs for Canyon Ridge. The juniors aren't really happy about racing on opposing teams.

"It's crap, honestly," Bowcut said. "We really miss each other and we really need each other to do better. We're faster together."

"It's been hard to run against (Bowcut) and not be ... with her," Wagner said. "What we really miss is the relays from last year."

Armstrong denies new doping accusations

By Tim Reynolds
Associated Press writer

With the cycling season kicking into high gear, the strongest doping allegations yet against Lance Armstrong surfaced Thursday in a barrage of detailed messages from Floyd Landis, the disgraced rider and former teammate who finally confessed to years of cheating himself.

In a series of e-mails sent to sponsors and sports officials, Landis alleged Armstrong not only joined him in doping but taught others how to beat the system and paid the former president of the International Cycling Union to keep a failed test quiet.

"We have nothing to hide," Armstrong said at an impromptu news conference before the fifth stage of the Tour of California.

"Credibility," the seven-time Tour de France winner said in Visalia. "Floyd lost his credibility a long time ago."

In two e-mails obtained by The Associated Press, Landis also admitted for the first time what had long been suspected — that he was guilty of doping for several years before being stripped of his 2006 Tour de France title.

"I want to clear my conscience," Landis told ESPN.com. "I don't want to be part of the problem any more."

Neither Landis nor his family returned repeated messages from the AP.

The Wall Street Journal first reported the details of the e-mails on its website early Thursday.

Landis alleged that Armstrong and longtime coach Johan Bruyneel paid former UCI president Hein Verbruggen to cover up a test in 2002 after Armstrong purportedly tested positive for the blood-boosting drug EPO. The UCI denied changing or concealing a positive test result.

In an e-mail Landis sent to USA Cycling chief Steve Johnson, he said Armstrong's positive EPO test was in 2002, around the time he won the Tour de Suisse. Armstrong won the Tour de Suisse in 2001 and did not compete in 2002.

"We're a little confused," Armstrong said.

The e-mail to Johnson also said: "Look forward to much more detail as soon as you can demonstrate that you can be trusted to do the right thing."

Landis also implicated at least 16 other people in various doping acts, including longtime Armstrong confidant George Hincapie, Olympic medalist Levi Leipheimer and Canadian cyclist Michael Barry.

The Wall Street Journal reported another e-mail from Landis also linked another top American racer, Dave Zabriskie, to doping.

"At the end of the day, he pointed the finger at everybody still involved in cycling, everybody that's still enjoying the sport, everybody that still believes in the sport, everybody that's still working in the crosshairs," Armstrong said. "Yes, I'm standing here with all you guys because I won the Tour de France seven times."

Landis said he was asked at one point to stay in an apartment where Armstrong was living in 2003 and check the temperature in a refrigerator where blood was being stored for future transfusions.

"Mr. Armstrong was planning on being gone for a few weeks to train he asked me to stay in his place and make sure the electricity didn't turn off or something go wrong with the refrigerator," Landis wrote.

Landis is part of a long list of former Armstrong teammates and former U.S. Postal Service riders who have either acknowledged or been caught doping.

Griffey, Ms rally past Blue Jays

SEATTLE — Ken Griffey Jr.'s game-winning, pinch-hit single in the ninth inning capped Seattle's three-run rally off AL saves leader Kevin Gregg and gave the Mariners a 4-3 victory over Toronto on Thursday.

Seattle snapped a five-game skid and Griffey's teammates mobbed him between first and second base. Nine days ago the Mariners rallied to his defense following a report he was unavailable to pinch-hit in an earlier loss because he was sleeping in the clubhouse.

It was the first game-ending hit of Seattle's disappointing season.

Gregg (0-1) had 12 saves in 13 chances before he allowed singles to Mike Sweeney and Jose Lopez then walked Milton Bradley to begin the ninth. He walked Casey Kotchman on a full-count to make it 3-2.

Seattle Mariners outfielder Ken Griffey Jr., left, is mobbed by teammates including Ichiro Suzuki, right, after Griffey hit the game-winning, RBI pinch-hit single in the ninth inning against the Toronto Blue Jays, Thursday in Seattle. Milton Bradley scored on the hit, which gave the Mariners a 4-3 win.

Burnett, the majors' best team came out swinging against Andy Pettitte (5-1).

hits and drove in two runs for the Angels, who have won five of seven.

for the Cardinals.

Wainwright (6-2) allowed the first two first-inning runs against him this season, but he settled down to go seven innings. He allowed six hits and struck out eight.

PHILLIES 5, CUBS 4

PHILADELPHIA — Raul Ibanez hit a tiebreaking RBI single in the eighth inning, Jimmy Rollins hit a three-run homer and Chase Utley also went deep for the Phillies.

Danys Baez (2-1) retired all three batters he faced to earn the win. Jose Contreras pitched out of a jam in the ninth for his second save in two tries. He's filling in as the closer with Brad Lidge and Ryan Madson on the disabled list.

BREWERS 4, PIRATES 3

PITTSBURGH — George Kottaras, playing only because of an injury, doubled in a run and Milwaukee rallied from a three-run deficit to end a nine-game losing streak.

METS 10, NATIONALS 7

WASHINGTON — David Wright hit a three-run double and had four RBIs for New York, and Raul Valdes filled in admirably for injured starter John Maine for five innings.

ROCKIES 4, ASTROS 0

HOUSTON — Ubaldo Jimenez allowed one hit over seven innings and Troy Tulowitzki had a three-run homer for Colorado, which broke a three-game losing streak.

The only hit Jimenez (8-1) allowed was Humberto Quintero's single to start the third inning. Jimenez, who improved his major league-low ERA to 0.99, struck out four and walked two.

Cammalleri helps Habs beat Flyers 5-1

MONTREAL (AP) — Michael Cammalleri and the Montreal Canadiens finally solved Michael Leighton.

Cammalleri scored in the first period to end Montreal's two-game drought against Leighton, leading the Canadiens to a 5-1 win over the Philadelphia Flyers in Game 3 of the Eastern Conference final.

Tom Pyatt and Dominic Moore had a goal and assist apiece for Montreal, which earned its first win in the series. Brian Gionta and Marc-Andre Bergeron also scored as Leighton's shutout streak was snapped at 172:05.

"We are a much better team when our backs are against the wall," Gionta said. "We've dealt with it all year." Philadelphia's Simon Gagne foiled Jaroslav Halak's shutout bid by scoring 8:22 into the third period.

Leighton stopped 34 shots.

The Flyers had won six straight, dating to their second-round series win over Boston during which they overcame a 3-0 series deficit. It was Leighton's first loss in five starts since taking over after Brian Boucher hurt his knee.

Cammalleri got it started with his team-leading 13th goal, opening the scoring 7:05 into the game. Halak finished with 25 saves.

Playing their first game at home in 10 days, the Canadiens outshot Philadelphia 28-13 in building a 3-0 lead on Moore's goal midway through the second period. Moore's score sent the raucous crowd into a fury, leading to derisive chants of "Leighton! Leighton!"

Game 4 of the best-of-seven series is Saturday in Montreal.

Jason Day lines up his shot on the ninth green during the first round of the Byron Nelson golf tournament Thursday in Irving, Texas.

A very good day for Aussie at Nelson

IRVING, Texas — Jason Day's stomach was acting up while he was on the driving range Thursday morning, an angry reaction to antibiotics that are supposed to wipe out a lingering, often-misdiagnosed sinus infection.

He was thinking about withdrawing from the Byron Nelson Championship. Then he realized it looked like rain and he'd left his umbrella in the car.

Walking to the parking lot, Day pictured himself getting behind the wheel and heading to his home in Fort Worth. He ended up toughing it out, and "it was probably a good idea," he said with a smile.

Day birdied four of his first six holes on his way to a 4-under 66 for a share of the first-round lead when play was suspended late Thursday.

The threatening skies that sent Day fetching his umbrella never actually drenched the TPC Four Seasons course, but the radar looked so scary there was a delay of 3 hours, 44 minutes.

Joe Durant finished with an eagle and a birdie to match Day at 66. Steve Elkington, Hunter Mahan and Jarrod Lyle were still on the course with scores of 4-under.

Elkington will have two holes left, Mahan three and Lyle seven when play resumes at 7:15 a.m. today, pushing back the start of the second round by an hour. Thursday's late starters are the first to go off Friday, which means it will be a long day for them.

Among those working overtime will be 16-year-old Jordan Spieth, a high school junior from Dallas and the reigning U.S. Junior Amateur champion. He's the first high schooler to get a sponsor's exemption into this event since Tiger Woods in 1993, and he showed he belongs by shooting even par through 11 holes.

WIE ADVANCES IN SYBASE MATCH PLAY CHAMPIONSHIP

GLADSTONE, N.J. — Michelle Wie survived a tight opening match against Stacy Prammanasudh on Thursday in the Sybase Match Play Championship, taking the lead with a 30-foot birdie putt on the par-3 16th and winning 2-up with a conceded birdie on 18.

"It was a fight. She played extremely well," Wie said. "It was one of those matches where you had to make birdie to win, so kind of with that mindset, I went out and grinded and just tried to make birdies."

The eighth-seeded Wie will face Hee Young Park, a 19-hole winner over Ji Young Oh, in the second round today at Hamilton Farm.

Redskins' Shanahan: 'Wait and see' on Moss, doctor

LEESBURG, Va. — Washington Redskins coach Mike Shanahan is taking a "wait and see" approach to reports that receiver Santana Moss is linked to a Canadian doctor charged with smuggling and supplying human growth hormone.

Shanahan said Thursday that he will speak to Moss "at the right time" about the matter and not been contacted by the league.

"Let's just wait and see before we throw him underneath the bus," Shanahan said after speaking at a local Chamber of Commerce luncheon.

The Buffalo News reported that Moss has received treatment from Galea and is the unidentified Washington player mentioned in an affidavit released after Galea was charged on Tuesday. Galea's assistant said the doctor was planning to meet with the Washington player at a Washington-area hotel last September, according to the affidavit.

"Just because he's been associated with a doctor doesn't mean this person's guilty," Shanahan said. Shanahan said he's talked to "a couple of people" whose names have been associated previously with Galea.

FAVRE: HE'LL RETURN TO NFL IF SOUTHERN MISS RETURNS TO CWS

HATTIESBURG, Miss. — Brett Favre says he still isn't sure what he's doing next season, but he may have given some indication after visiting with the Southern Miss baseball team.

The Minnesota Vikings quarterback told the Golden Eagles on Thursday morning that if they can make it back to the College World Series for the second straight year, he will return for one more season in the NFL.

Favre has left fans hanging since the Vikings lost to New Orleans in the NFC Championship game. He signed a two-year contract with the Vikings before last season. Coach Brad Childress hasn't talked with Favre recently except by text message.

Southern Miss players have a lot of work to do if they want to force Favre into action. They are 30-20 and need wins to earn a postseason invitation.

FORMER NFL STAR BEING SUED IN MIAMI OVER CAR CRASH

MIAMI — Former NFL star Lawrence Taylor is being sued over a South Florida car crash last year in which he was charged with leaving the scene of an accident with property damage.

Police said Taylor struck a van on Nov. 8 on an expressway. He told police he thought he had hit a guardrail. No serious injuries were reported.

E-mails sent Thursday to Taylor's attorney and agent were not immediately returned.

THOMAS RETIRES AS A DOLPHIN

MIAMI — Zach Thomas has retired as a member of the Miami Dolphins.

The longtime linebacker signed a ceremonial contract with the Dolphins at their training facility in Davie, Fla. on Thursday, so he could leave the game as part of the franchise he spent 12 seasons with.

Only a fifth-round draft pick out of Texas Tech in 1996, Thomas became a star for the Dolphins. He was one of the faces of the franchise along with the likes of Dan Marino and Jason Taylor, who became Thomas' brother-in-law.

With Miami, Thomas had 1,038 tackles, 19½ sacks and 17 interceptions in 168 games, and he was chosen for seven Pro Bowls.

NFL STARTING CAREER TRANSITION PROGRAM

NEW YORK — The NFL has set up a career transition program for retired players that will begin next month.

A four-day course from June 7-10 at Georgia Tech will launch the program designed to help former players transition from football to the business world. The league will pay for tuition and accommodations.

Participating players will learn about personal finance; launching a new career with realistic expectations; developing a personal brand; communication skills; and the importance of health and well being.

5 masterpieces stolen in Paris museum heist

By Angela Charlton and Christina Okello
Associated Press writers

PARIS — A broken alarm system made it as easy as 1-2-3: A masked intruder clipped a padlock, smashed a window and stole a Picasso, a Matisse and three other masterpieces from a Paris museum Thursday — a $123 million haul that is one of the world's biggest art heists.

Offloading the artwork may prove a tougher task, however, with Interpol and collectors worldwide now on high alert.

In what seemed like an art thief's fantasy, the alarm system had been broken since March in parts of the Paris Museum of Modern Art, according to the city's mayor, Bertrand Delanoë.

The museum, in a tony neighborhood across the Seine River from the Eiffel Tower, reopened in 2006 after spending $18 million and two years upgrading its security system. Spare parts had been ordered to fix the alarm but had not yet arrived, the mayor said in a statement.

So with no alarm to worry about, a lone masked intruder entered the museum about 3:50 a.m., said Christophe Girard, deputy culture secretary at Paris City Hall. The thief cut a padlock on a gate, then broke a side window and climbed inside — his movements caught on one of the museum's functioning cameras, according to the Paris prosecutor's office.

The intruder later slipped back out, carrying the canvases and leaving behind empty frames. The whole thing took 15 minutes, a police official said.

Three security guards were on duty overnight, but "they saw nothing," Girard said. A night watchman discovered the theft around 7 a.m.

The stolen works included Pablo Picasso's "Le pigeon aux petits-pois" (The Pigeon with the Peas), an ochre-toned Cubist oil painting worth an estimated $28 million (euro23 million), and "La Pastorale" (Pastoral), a pastel-hued oil painting of nudes on a hillside by Henri Matisse worth about $17.5 million (euro15 million), Girard said.

Also seized were "La femme a l'eventail" (Woman with a Fan) by Amadeo Modigliani, "L'olivier pres de l'estaque" (Olive Tree near Estaque) by Georges Braque and "Nature morte aux chandeliers" (Still Life with Chandeliers) by Fernand Leger.

Estimates of the total value of the paintings varied: The prosecutor's office initially put their worth as high as $613 million but later downgraded the figure to about $111 million. Girard said the total value was about $123 million.

The broken alarm system also renewed concerns about museum security in the French capital. There was no operating surveillance system when a thief made off with a red sketchbook of 33 Picasso drawings from the nearby Picasso Museum while it was undergoing renovations last summer.

Within hours of Thursday's heist, red-and-white tape surrounded the Museum of Modern Art and signs on the Art Deco building's ornate bronze doors said it was closed for "technical reasons."

On a cordoned-off balcony, police wearing blue gloves and face masks examined the museum's broken window and the discarded frames. The paintings appeared to have been carefully removed from the disassembled frames, not sliced out.

Investigators were trying to determine whether the intruder was operating alone, Girard told reporters. Stephane Thefo, a specialist at Interpol who handles international art theft investigations, expressed doubt that one person could have pulled it off the heist, even if only one person was caught on camera.

Yoon Duk-yong, right, co-head of the team investigating the sinking of the South Korean warship Cheonan, speaks at a news conference while standing next to torpedo parts salvaged from the Yellow Sea, Thursday at the Defense Ministry in Seoul. Investigators say evidence overwhelmingly proves North Korea fired the torpedo that sank a South Korean warship in March, killing 46 sailors.

Combustible N. Korea situation could force hard decisions for U.S., S. Korea

By Glenn Kessler
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Seoul's dramatic accusation this week that North Korea torpedoed one of its warships, killing 46 sailors, sets up what could be one of the most combustible situations in the peninsula in years — one that could force South Korea and its top ally, the United States, to make hard decisions.

Analysts say the matter must now be carefully managed with a series of steps that would punish North Korea without leading to a new conflict.

"It's like the three bears. It has to be strong enough to deter but not too strong to start a war," said Victor Cha, a former Bush administration official now at Georgetown University. "It has to be just right."

China, Pyongyang's main patron, will also come under pressure to support efforts to condemn the attack. But China has kept a studied silence and urged "caution and restraint" in the wake of the report.

On Thursday, the State Department was far less restrained, as spokesman P.J. Crowley called the attack an "unprovoked and unwarranted act" by Pyongyang. He added that "clearly this was a serious provocation by North Korea and there will definitely be consequences because of what North Korea has done."

The issue is likely to be a prominent feature of Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton's trip this week to East Asia; she departed Washington Thursday and plans to hold talks in Tokyo, Beijing and Seoul.

North Korea, which has denied involvement in the sinking, denounced the investigation into the attack with unusual swiftness, saying it was a "sheer fabrication" and accusing the South of "pointing a dirty finger at us like a thief." Any retaliation for the attack, the North said, will prompt it to respond with "various forms of tough measures including all-out war."

North Korea is already under heavy sanctions because of its missiles tests and two tests of a nuclear device. A U.N. Security Council resolution approved last year allows for the inspection of all cargo to and from North Korea and also blacklisted a number of organizations and people associated with the nuclear program. Two other Security Council resolutions imposed financial and trade restrictions and bar the sale of luxury goods.

Moms visit three Americans jailed in Iran

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Three Americans jailed in Iran for 10 months embraced their mothers and spoke of their life in Tehran's most dreaded prison Thursday in an emotional reunion that Iranian authorities broadcast on a main international channel.

The women hope their weeklong visit will secure the release of Sarah Shourd, 31; her boyfriend, Shane Bauer, 27; and their friend Josh Fattal, 27.

The mothers threw their arms in the air and rushed to embrace their children as they entered a room at a high-rise hotel that overlooks the Evin Prison where the three have been held.

They cried, laughed and kissed. The conservative Islamic head scarves worn by the mothers slipped back and bouquets of flowers were set aside as they sat together and began to reconstruct their lives since last summer.

The families later ate an abundant lunch together at a feast of rice, kebabs and other traditional Middle Eastern dishes. The prisoners ate heartily and appeared to relish the food. The visit was scheduled to last until evening, said the families' Iranian lawyer, Masoud Shafii, but it was not clear whether the three detainees would have to return to the prison for the night.

Iran's main task appeared aimed at leveraging high propaganda value for allowing the visit.

The meeting at the Esteghlal Hotel in north Tehran received extensive coverage on Iran's state-run Press TV, the government's main English-language broadcast arm. Reporters for the foreign media also were allowed their first glimpse of the three Americans since their arrest on the border with Iraq last July.

The trio has been accused of spying and entering Iran illegally after being detained on the porous border with Iraq last July. Relatives say the three were simply hiking in Iraq's scenic and largely peaceful mountainous northern Kurdish region.

The decision to give a highly scripted public face to the private family moments suggests the trip by Nora Shourd, Cindy Hickey and Laura Fattal could be drawn deeper into Iran's brinkmanship with the West over Tehran's disputed nuclear program and a U.S.-led push for harsher sanctions.

2010 FORD EXPLORER SUV SPORTY PRACTICALITY!

RoadWorthy!
By Ken Chester, Jr.
Motor News Media Corp.

The popular Ford Explorer SUV already boasts one of the most comprehensive rosters of safety equipment in its market segment. Last year Explorer added standard Trailer Sway Control. Working with the automaker's AdvanceTrac vehicle stability control, Trailer Sway Control determines from the yaw motion of the vehicle if the trailer is swaying and takes measures – such as precise braking or reduced engine torque – to bring both vehicle and trailer under control.

Additionally, Explorer will continue to offer the XLT Sport Package. This available equipment package features: Charcoal Black cloth seats; a white instrument cluster; all-weather floor mats; black-accented wheel lips; and exterior step bar/fascia. The XLT Sports Package is available in the following exterior colors: Sport blue, Colorado Red, Brilliant Silver and Black.

Offered in XLT, Eddie Bauer and Limited trim levels and available in rear- or four-wheel drive drivetrain configurations, the midsize Ford SUV is powered by a 4.0L V6 engine bolted to a 5R55W5 five-speed automatic transmission or an optional three-valve 4.6L V8 prime mover mated to a 6R six-speed automatic transmission.

The awesome goodness of the Ford SUV starts with a robust body-on-frame construction. The Explorer uses the F-150 pickup's tube-through-tube frame design, where the crossmembers pass through the section of the frame rails, creating an inherently stronger joint. These joints are then completely welded around the perimeter for a fully boxed seam.

The stiffer frame provides a smooth ride with good road feel, crisp handling and precise steering. Paired with advanced manufacturing techniques that decrease manufacturing tolerances, the Explorer's solid foundation also helps significantly reduce long-term squeaks and rattles.

Explorer's control hardware includes a front suspension that retains its basic geometry with upper and lower control arms and a sway bar. At the rear, the independent suspension features trailing arms to accommodate the vehicle towing and payload capability. As before, the rear half shafts pass through frame portholes, lowering the rear control subframe for better third-row seating and a lower center of gravity. While the suspension components are stronger, they are also lighter overall.

Inside the cabin, Ford engineers fought to eliminate unwanted noise with a vengeance! As a result, the Explorer's third row is just as quiet as some competitors' front row at highway speeds. The all-new interior features the use of advanced materials that dampen vibrations and lessen noise. Extensive insulation materials have been used along the headliner, door panels and floor of the passenger compartment to help provide class-leading interior quietness.

A number of available seating configurations provide more comfort, enhanced safety and more possibilities when the need for hauling both people and cargo arise. The instrument panel is a study in modern capabilities. Crisp, clean and functional, all the gauges are easy to read, all the switchgear, simple to operate. The driver's side door controls come in for special mention – the placement of the power window and mirror switches, door-release handle and door pull is the BEST combination of convenience and function I have ever experienced!

The Explorer provides a virtually flat floor when the second and third row seats are folded – increasing cargo capacity. The midsize SUV features separate window and hatch rear access capabilities – allowing access to small items in the rear cargo area without having to open the rear hatch.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, Bureau of Land Management

Notice of Realty Action: Proposed Sale of Public Land, Idaho and Termination of a Multiple Use Classification on a portion of these lands

SUMMARY: The following described public land in Jerome County, Idaho, has been found suitable for disposal by direct sale to Todd Buschhorn, under the authority of Sections 203 and 209 of the Federal Land Policy Management Act of 1976 (FLPMA), at no less than the appraised fair market value: Boise Meridian, T. 10 S., R. 19 E., Section 25: Lot 10. The area described contains 7.45 acres in Jerome County. The 1985 BLM Monument Resource Management Plan, as amended, by the 2003 Amendments to Shoshone Field Office Land Use Plans for Land Tenure Adjustment and Areas of Critical Environmental Concern identifies this parcel of land to be within the adjustment area of land tenure Zone 4. The general management philosophy of Zone 4 is to allow disposal of public lands through sale or exchange. Revenues generated from the sale or disposal of lands will be deposited within the general treasury. Conveyance of any mineral interests pursuant to Section 209 of the FLPMA will be analyzed during processing of the proposed sale.

The patent, when issued, will contain a right-of-way thereon for all ditches and canals constructed by the authority of the United States under the Act of August 30, 1890, 43 U.S.C. 945. On the date of publication of the Notice of Realty Action in the Federal Register the above-described land will be segregated from appropriation under the public land laws, including the mining laws, except the sale provisions of the FLPMA. Until completion of the sale, the BLM is no longer accepting land use applications affecting the identified public land, except applications for the amendment of previously-filed right-of-way applications or existing authorizations to increase the term of the grants in accordance with 43 CFR 2807.15 and 2886.15. The segregative effect will terminate upon issuance of a patent, publication in the FEDERAL REGISTER of a termination of the segregation, or 2 years after date of publication in the Federal Register unless extended by the BLM State Director in accordance with 43 CFR 2711.1-2(d) prior to the termination date.

The land will not be offered for sale until at least 60 days after the date of this notice. For a period of 45 days from April 29, 2010, interested parties may submit comments.

COMMENTS: Interested parties and the general public may submit in writing any comments concerning the land being considered for sale to Lisa Claxton, Natural Resource Specialist, BLM Shoshone Field Office, at the following address. In order to ensure consideration comments need to be received by June 14, 2010. In the absence of timely objections, this proposal shall become the final determination of the Department of the Interior. Comments transmitted via e-mail will not be accepted. Comments, including names and street addresses of respondents, will be available for public review at the BLM Shoshone Field Office during regular business hours, except holidays. Individual respondents may request confidentiality. Before including your address, phone number, e-mail address, or other personal identifying information in your comment, you should be aware that your entire comment including your personal identifying information may be made publicly available at any time. While you can ask us in your comment to withhold your personal identifying information from public review, we cannot guarantee that we will be able to do so. If you wish to have your name or address withheld from public disclosure under the Freedom of Information Act, you must state this prominently at the beginning of your comments. Any determination by the BLM to release or withhold the names and/or addresses of those who comment will be made on a case-by-case basis. Such requests will be honored to the extent allowed by law. The BLM will make available for public review, in their entirety, all comments submitted by businesses or organizations, including comments by individuals in their capacity as an official or representative of a business or organization. THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"The most beautiful thing we can experience is the mysterious. It is the source of all true art and science."

— Albert Einstein

The auction to six spades might have been unsophisticated, but the play was interesting.

As South you received a club lead to your queen, then led a trump to the king to protect against a possible 4-0 break. You drew trumps in three rounds, intending to cash the top clubs next. But what do you plan to discard from hand and what is your plan?

There are a lot of possibilities in both red suits. You can pitch either a heart or a diamond on the clubs, and you have a whole range of finesses you might take. But so long as you make the right discard, then follow up correctly, you can claim your contract.

What you must do is pitch a heart from hand on the top clubs, then run the diamond jack. (Equally valid would be to run the diamond nine, but that gives up on overtrick chances.)

If West could win the diamond queen, a diamond return gives you an extra trick from your eight and nine of diamonds, allowing you to pitch a heart from dummy. But a heart or a ruff and sluff would be immediately fatal.

And if East covers dummy's diamond jack, then again your eight and nine of diamonds build to a trick on which you can discard a heart from dummy.

For details of Bobby Wolff's autobiography, "The Lone Wolf," contact kay19072@aol.com. If you would like to contact Bobby Wolff, e-mail him at bobbywolff@mind-spring.com.

ANSWER: This does not look like the right hand with which to bid two hearts. The opponents are highly unlikely to be raising the auction beyond two spades (you have three spades, your partner at least three) so at your next turn you may well be able to bid two hearts and get your limited values across nicely. I'd bid two hearts now if my heart jack were the queen.

Today is Friday, May 21, the 141st day of 2010. There are 224 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On May 21, 1927, Charles A. Lindbergh landed his Spirit of St. Louis near Paris, completing the first solo airplane flight across the Atlantic Ocean in 33 1/2 hours.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1542, Spanish explorer Hernando de Soto died while searching for gold along the Mississippi River.

In 1832, the first Democratic National Convention got under way, in Baltimore.

In 1881, Clara Barton founded the American Red Cross.

In 1892, the opera "Pagliacci," by Ruggero Leoncavallo, was first performed, in Milan, Italy.

In 1910, a year-old Jewish settlement near the port city of Jaffa adopted the name Tel Aviv (Hebrew for "Hill of Spring").

In 1924, 14-year-old Bobby Franks was murdered in a "thrill killing" committed by Nathan Leopold Jr. and Richard Loeb, two students at the University of Chicago.

In 1932, Amelia Earhart became the first woman to fly solo across the Atlantic Ocean as she landed in Northern Ireland, about 15 hours after leaving Newfoundland.

In 1956, the United States exploded the first airborne hydrogen bomb over Bikini Atoll in the Pacific.

In 1979, former San Francisco City Supervisor Dan White was convicted of voluntary manslaughter in the slayings of Mayor George Moscone (mahs-KOH'-nee) and openly gay Supervisor Harvey Milk; outrage over the verdict sparked rioting. (White was sentenced to seven years and eight months in prison; he ended up serving five years and committed suicide in 1985.)

In 1980, Ensign Jean Marie Butler became the first woman to graduate from a U.S. service academy as she accepted her degree and commission from the Coast Guard Academy in New London, Conn.

Ten years ago: Nineteen people were killed when a charter plane crashed in the Pocono Mountains in Pennsylvania. "Dancer in the Dark" won the Palme d'Or at the Cannes Film Festival; the Grand Prize went to "Devils on the Doorstep." Death claimed actor Sir John Gielgud at age 96 and author Dame Barbara Cartland at age 98.

Five years ago: A fleet Alex regained his footing and his drive after being cut off by Scrapy T in a frightening collision and breezed home to win the Preakness Stakes; Kentucky Derby winner Giacomo finished third. The Belgian film "The Child" won the Palme d'Or at the Cannes Film Festival. Comedic actor Howard Morris died in Hollywood at age 85.

One year ago: President Barack Obama made his case for closing the Guantanamo prison camp, denouncing what he called "fear-mongering" by political opponents; Obama made his case moments before former Vice President Dick Cheney delivered his own address defending the Bush administration's creation of the facility. Former Pfc. Steven Dale Green, convicted of raping a 14-year-old Iraqi girl and killing her and her family, was spared the death penalty after jurors in Paducah, Ky. couldn't agree unanimously on a punishment. A 66-year-old woman with terminal cancer became the first person to die under Washington state's new assisted suicide law.

DEAR ABBY: I'm an athletic, youthful-looking 58, and my son, "Barry," is 24. We go out alone for dinner quite often because my husband (Barry's father) doesn't enjoy eating in restaurants. My problem is the angry stares my son and I get from younger - and older - women who mistake me for a "cougar" out on a date with my "cub."

The other night when I left our table to use the restroom, a woman approached Barry, told him he was "disgusting" and asked, "Why don't you date girls your own age?" He informed her that I was his mother, but even if I wasn't, it was none of her business. Another time, a girl Barry's age asked him why he was out with "an old hag" and said, "How can you want her over me?" This happens every time we go out.

DEAR ABBY Jeanne Phillips

I dress well and look like I could be in my 40s, but I have to wonder about the rudeness and ignorance of someone insulting my son without knowing the circumstances of the situation. Some of them refused to believe the truth even after Barry told them.

Interestingly, young men who have commented thought it was "awesome" that Barry could be out with a cougar. It's only the females who have a problem with us. Can you comment on this?

- HAPPILY MARRIED MOM IN OHIO

DEAR MOM: Some thoughts do come to mind: Women who are happy in their personal lives don't approach strangers with snide remarks like those you have repeated. The women were rude, presumptuous, probably envious - and I'll bet they were also alone, because it's hard to imagine a woman with a date doing something so outrageous.

I'm not surprised that it was "awesome" that your son could be out with a cougar. When the subject was raised in my column, the men who commented said what attracted them to older women was that they are confident, relaxed, comfortable with themselves and fun to be around - while younger women didn't bother to be subtle about their preference for men with money.

And one more thing: You must be quite a knockout to attract the kind of attention you're getting.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 19-year-old guy who doesn't know what I want to do with my life. I know I'm still young and shouldn't stress out about what my career in life will be, but nothing seems to interest me. I don't want to be a doctor or an astronomer like some do. I can't cook or play any instruments, and I'm not very good with numbers. I have thought of hundreds of careers - and I hate them all.

I don't want to do something I will hate for the rest of my life, but I'm afraid that's what will happen. I have been to three different counselors and none was able to help me. I'm hoping you can offer me some advice.

- HOPELESS IN CHANDLER, ARIZ.

DEAR HOPLESS: You aren't the first person to panic because he (or she) is afraid of being stuck in a career slot that doesn't fit. The good news is one of the realities of today's workplace is that in many cases, jobs no longer last a lifetime. Workers can expect to change jobs and be retrained several times - or more - during their working years. I hope this relieves some of your anxiety.

Although you have decided what jobs do not interest you, nowhere have you mentioned any areas in which you excel. For that reason I'm advising you to go to your nearest community college career counseling center and ask to take some aptitude tests. People usually enjoy doing something they're good at.

Lock & Look! Locks to your interest rates for up to 90 days while you look for your new home! Call us for details. 734-5626

IF MAY 21 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: The rest of this month is a perfect time for a romantic getaway because you are in tune with your inner fantasies. During July you may be dissatisfied with a relationship but an impulsive break up could turn out like the story of Humpty-Dumpty. August is a month to straighten your desk, organize your files, and remain on your toes where responsibilities are concerned. You may be offered a golden opportunity in late September or early October. That is a good time to make important decisions.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Break the pinata of your romantic desires and be showered with happiness. Share your heart with a devoted partner or affectionate mate while vigilantly protecting sensitive or privileged information.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A promising romantic prospect might be too prominent. You could be attracted to someone on public display, leaving very little time for private get-togethers. You may be just a member of a fan club.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Look closely at your crystal ball. Your instincts about personal matters are on the mark even if others seem somewhat insincere or unpredictable. You can't go wrong if you are compassionate and generous.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Spin a web of scintillating seduction. If you have already captured someone's heart make beautiful music all night long. But this isn't a good time to make major purchases or banking changes.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A little stress in your love life might not be a bad thing. It may give you a chance to look at what is causing the problem and find ways to remedy the situation. It is time to find ways to please others.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You may be elected to be the designated driver. Imagine being the life of a rollicking party while still maintaining control. Impetuous people at work could strain your patience.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): They say you catch more flies with honey than vinegar, so maybe it is time to be a flirtatious flycatcher. Your love life can be a very sweet thing indeed. But the stars are not good enough for a new hookup.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Love's labor is not easily lost. Someone close to your heart may be working hard to please you, even if it seems to jangle on your nerves. Make this an evening to remember by being understanding.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Get it while you can. Some enchanting and passionate encounters are a distinct possibility with the one you love this evening. Put finishing touches on current projects but don't start new ones.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Drink deeply. Love could be an intoxicating experience. Your partner's judgment, however, could be off center regarding serious business or financial matters. Don't be impulsive with cash.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Lighthearted amusement is your best bet. The stars are primo if you have affectionate playfulness on your mind. Avoid initiating serious new endeavors or signing any important paperwork.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You could launch your love boat this weekend even if it seems you hit too many sand bars. You might be attracted to someone with great chemistry but who is not looking for the same level of commitment.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Concepts Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
