

Buhl Festa wraps up with Sunday parade

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Jim Whitaker and Maxine Price don't attend Buhl's Immaculate Conception Catholic Church. But that didn't stop them from enjoying the parade that traveled Sunday morning in front of their home, across the street from the church.

The procession began the day's activities as part of the Portuguese Holy Spirit Festival, or Festa, put on by the Irmandade do Divino Espirito Santo, or Brotherhood of the Divine Holy Spirit.

The parade included festival queens and their courts, toddlers and preschoolers dressed as angels and costumed in old-world Portuguese attire, members of the Knights of Columbus, men carrying heavy statues, and a band playing traditional marching hymns that brought up the rear.

The cacophony offered a short glimpse into Portuguese culture and the yearly festival.

"It's just beautiful and it makes for a more beautiful community," Price said. "We love it. We've only seen the parade twice but it's wonderful!"

Whitaker said he was impressed the local Portuguese community welcomes others to enjoy

"If you're lucky, you get hit by a truck and you go quickly."

Questions persist for asbestos-ravaged Montana town

By Matthew Brown
Associated Press writer

LIBBY, Mont. — Gayla Benefield and Eva Thomson are sisters who have grown used to death. For two decades, they have watched asbestos from a nearby vermiculite mine strangle their parents, Thomson's husband, an aunt, several in-laws and numerous neighbors and friends.

So as they wandered the Libby cemetery on a blustery Montana morning, they worked the graves like a block party — retelling old stories and commiserating with the dead.

Talk turned to their own fates. Both sisters suffer from the microscopic asbestos fibers lodged deep in their lungs. Their breathing is sometimes choked by plaque building up around the fibers. If it progresses into cancerous mesothelioma, they face certain death.

"If you're lucky, you get hit by a truck and you go quickly," Benefield said, her face betraying no emotion but her voice tight with anger.

The sisters' town, Libby, population 3,000 along the Kootenai River, has emerged as the deadliest Superfund site in the nation's history.

Health workers tracking Libby's plight estimate at least 400 people have died of asbestos-related illnesses — from W.R. Grace mine workers and family members who breathed in the dust they brought home in their clothes, to those who played as kids in waste piles dumped by the company behind the community baseball field. Some 1,500 locals and others who

Zoning request leads Twin Falls council agenda

By Ben Botkin

The Twin Falls City Council will meet at 5 p.m. today at council chambers, 305 Third Ave. East.

The council will discuss the following:

- The final plat for the West Haven Subdivision, which has nine single-family residential lots on 3.37 acres along the west side of the 500 to 600 blocks of Wendell Street.
- A request to waive the entrance fees at Shoshone Falls for the Twin Falls Municipal Band's Flag Day Concert, which is at the falls at 7 p.m. June 14. The band wants the city to stop charging admission fees to the falls starting one hour before the event starts.

- There's also a public hearing at 6 p.m.

Fred Meyer Stores is appealing the city Planning and Zoning Commission's decision regarding its traffic flow for an expansion of its gas station at 705 Blue Lakes Blvd.

The gas station wants to add two more fuel pumps to its five existing pumps to help traffic congestion, with two-way traffic. The P&Z wants the store to follow the conditions of a special use permit approved in February, however, which requires one-way traffic with vehicles entering on the south end of the station and exiting on the north end.

If you're behind bars for a felony, prison guards won't be taking you to the courthouse to vote — even if your favorite judge is on the ballot. Nor can you vote if you're still on felony probation or parole.

After satisfying all the probation and parole requirements, convicts need to petition the court system to get their civil rights restored before voting, Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs said.

In Twin Falls County, there's one wildcard. District 2 County Commissioner Tom Mikesell's name is still on the ballot, even though he's announced he's not interested in another term and will leave office.

Technically, Mikesell could still win the Republican nomination. But that doesn't mean the second-place winner would automatically run in November.

If Mikesell wins, the Twin Falls County Republican Central Committee would have to pick a GOP nominee for the November election.

"If a candidate resigns before the general election then the central committee meets and they select, from whoever applies, a person to fill that person's seat," Loebs said.

The committee would select its replacement by a vote — on a secret ballot.

If you're behind bars for a felony, prison guards won't be taking you to the courthouse to vote — even if your favorite judge is on the ballot. Nor can you vote if you're still on felony probation or parole.

Sharon Lancaster, chief deputy clerk in Twin Falls County, said one source of confusion is where to vote, so call the county clerk's office if you aren't sure.

If voters show up at the wrong place, they'll be rerouted to the proper location, making their quest to the voting booth take longer.

"Sometimes people go to the wrong polling place and then the registrars there will send them to the right polling place," Lancaster said.

Voters are out of luck if they want to support both Democrats and Republicans. In the primaries, you can only choose a ballot for nominating Republican or Democratic candidates, not both.

Those split-ticket votes won't happen on ballots until November, when voters can mix it up.

Voters also need to be U.S. citizens, residents of their county for 30 days prior to the election and at least 18 years old.

Been in trouble with the law? That can keep you from voting, too.

said, at next weekend's Festa at St. Anthony Catholic Church in Wendell.

"She'll pass along the crown to this year's queen and be done, but it was exciting to have her crowned and a real honor. We felt blessed and Destiny enjoyed getting dressed up," he said.

After the procession completed its loop around the church, festival-goers went to Mass and then enjoyed sopas — a rich soup made with beef, onions, paprika, cinnamon, cumin, tomato, wine and cabbage poured over French bread and mint sprigs, with the beef served alongside.

The festival wrapped up with an auction and bazaar, dinner, Grand March and a dance.

This was the 27th Festa, pronounced "Feshta," celebrated in Buhl.

The event is traced back to Portugal's Queen Isabel, who in 1354 promised to God that if peace were restored to her land, broken by war between her husband, Portugal's king, and son, the heir to the throne, she would hold a festival in honor of the Holy Spirit.

Asbestos

were exposed have chest X-rays revealing the faint, cloudy shadows of asbestos scarring on their lungs.

Even though research long showed cause for concern — up to 70 percent of miners in a 1980s study had fibers in their lungs — it took news reports about the deaths to drive officials to action, beginning a decade ago. After the cleanup began, the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency confidently predicted it would be done in two years at a cost of $5.8 million. Ten years on, the price tag has exceeded $333 million, the deaths continue, and more asbestos keeps showing up — in schools, in businesses, in hundreds of houses.

The scope of contamination has at times overwhelmed environmental regulators, dragging out the cleanup, an Associated Press review of hundreds of pages of government documents and interviews with current and former agency officials revealed.

News cameras returned to Libby last June, when new EPA chief Lisa Jackson declared a health emergency, a step the agency rejected during the Bush administration.

New patients continue to file into the local clinic to be diagnosed with asbestos illnesses at the rate of 15 to 20 a month. Because of a decades-long latency period, such diagnoses are expected for at least another 10 years.

The EPA this month took its first step toward wrapping up its efforts over the next two to three years, rekindling anxieties.

"Everybody wants Libby to go away and it's not going away," said Dr. Brad Black, director of Libby's Center for Asbestos Related Diseases. His stethoscope pressed against the back of a 36-year-old patient who never worked in the mine, Black said the man's exposure likely came from playing in a friend's contaminated house as a child.

Some scientists say the threat will exist as long as people remain in Libby — and the notion of moving the whole town has been floated by an attorney for a citizens' group. But just as some residents maintained a fierce loyalty to W.R. Grace even as fatal asbestos illness spread, the idea of moving now is quickly discarded.

"People say, 'Why don't you leave Libby?'" Benefield said. "I've got the fiber in me. That won't make the problem go away. Not at all."

The unfolding tragedy, with moonsuited contractors carting off contaminated materials as locals go about their business, seems odd and out of place in

Libby, where the snow-capped Cabinet Mountains tower over the lush Kootenai Valley as it winds its way toward Idaho.

Established in the 1800s as a mining and fur trading outpost, the town retains its frontier feel. Locals call it "God's Corner."

W.R. Grace bought the vermiculite operation in 1963 and at the mine's peak in the 1970s, Grace produced almost 2 million tons of ore annually and employed about 200 miners and others. Vermiculite stripped from the terraced steps carved into Zonolite Mountain was shipped around the world to make insulation.

But unmarketable material — much of it asbestos — made up about 80 percent of the ore. Crushing the rock to remove "nuisance" materials set billions of asbestos fibers loose in clouds of dust that drifted the six miles down to Libby, leaving a powdery trace as light as snow.

If it looked benign, many warnings cried out that it was not. In 1964, workers appealed to the state Board of Health to help clean up the unhealthy conditions. In 1978, word of the problems caused by asbestos from Libby's mine reached the EPA. In 1981, a Grace scientist found that runners on the high school track likely were stirring up dangerous levels of asbestos.

Little was done — despite state-issued orders for the mine to cut down on dust levels and to upgrade filtering equipment. Federal regulators stayed on the sidelines, and the mine remained open until 1990.

Nine years later, EPA finally joined the fray — after the Seattle Post-Intelligencer newspaper detailed the toll of dead and dying that had become too large to ignore.

Grace, which declared bankruptcy in 2001, waged an eight-year court battle to limit its cleanup responsibilities. That ended with a 2008 settlement under which the company paid EPA $250 million.

"They settled the lawsuit," Grace spokesman Greg Euston said. "They are not interested in talking about Libby anymore."

At the cemetery, Benefield and Thomson paused before the grave of their mother, Margaret Vatland — the first non-mine worker whose death was traced to Libby asbestos. Standing before the marker, Benefield promised her mother she'd come back soon to scrub it clean.

Vatland cared for their father for years until he died from asbestos exposure in 1974; she was diagnosed a decade later. By the time she died, in 1996, her lungs had shriveled "until they looked like two sausages hanging on a stick," Benefield said.

Semi driver cited after falling asleep on I-84

Times-News

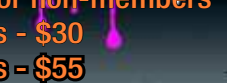

A commercial semitrailer that ran off of Interstate 84 Sunday afternoon lost much of its load in a canal, but didn't cause any serious injuries or hit other vehicles, according to the Idaho State Police.
Jesse A. Reed, 25, of Freeman Spur, Ill., was cited for inattentive driving after the incident, which happened just before 1 p.m., an ISP press release stated.
Reed was headed west on the highway when he fell asleep at the wheel. At milepost 172, his semitrailer crossed I-84's westbound lanes, the median and then the eastbound lanes before going down the shoulder embankment. It then went through two fences and over a canal before coming to a rest.
Much of the semi's load was lost along its trip, and "a significant portion" ended up in the canal. A hazardous-materials response team from the Jerome Rural Fire Department determined that no such materials entered the canal; an ISP dispatcher said later Sunday that the semi's load included vegetable oil.
Reed only received a few scratches and was wearing his seatbelt. One lane of I-84 was partially closed for a short time during ISP's investigation.

Snake River should run high next month

JACKSON, Wyo. (AP) — A cool spring and late snowmelt mean the Snake River should be running high next month as usual.
The U.S. Bureau of Reclamation says the river would have increased water flows in June despite last season's light snowpack. The agency plays a large role in the river's flow because it controls Jackson Lake Dam in Grand Teton National Park.
The bureau projects releases will peak at 5,000 cubic feet per second June 13. The agency says flow will be reduced from the end of June through late September.

History buffs hope to preserve SW Idaho depot

NAMPA (AP) — Preservationists in southwest Idaho are trying to raise $331,000 to restore the Nampa Train Depot, an emblem of the city's railroad history built in 1903.

The Canyon County Historical Society oversees the former station that is now a museum. It announced Thursday the campaign received $20,000 from four different sources, including a $5,000 grant from the National Trust for Historic Preservation.

“Historic buildings are a tangible link to our past,” Wendy Miller, director and curator of the Canyon County Historical Society, told the Idaho Press-Tribune. “Think of all the people that came through this train station. In the summer, the Farmers Market is hosted in front of the depot and families stage wedding, Christmas and senior portraits with the depot as their setting. It’s a beautiful building and truly is the heart of the community.”

The group said the restoration will include a wood floor, making the station handicap accessible, plumbing improvements and a new red tile roof. About $16,000 is needed to modernize the 107-year-old electrical system.

Nampa resident Kevin Daniels, a trustee of the National Trust for Historic Preservation, said the depot in the heart of downtown could help develop and revitalize the city center.

‘A very big problem’

BP: Mile-long tube collecting less oil than before

By Greg Bluestein
Associated Press writer

COVINGTON, La. — Three top Obama administration officials are returning to the Gulf Coast to monitor the massive oil spill that seems to have no end in sight, as BP PLC officials said Sunday that one of their efforts to slow the leak wasn’t working as effectively as before.

BP spokesman John Curry told The Associated Press on Sunday that a mile-long tube inserted into the leaking well siphoned some 57,120 gallons of oil within the past 24 hours, a sharp drop from the 92,400 gallons of oil a day that the device was sucking up on Friday. However, the company has said the amount of oil siphoned will vary widely from day to day.

Engineers are working furiously to stem the growing ooze as more wildlife and delicate coastal wetlands are tainted despite the oil-absorbing booms placed around shorelines to protect them.

A pelican colony off Louisiana's coast was awash in oil Saturday, and an Associated Press photographer saw several birds and their eggs coated in the ooze while nests rested in mangroves precariously close to the crude that had washed in. Workers had surrounded the island with the booms, but puddles of oil had seeped through the barrier.

Anger with the government and BP, which leased the rig and is responsible for the cleanup, has boiled over as the spill spreads. U.S. Environmental Protection Agency chief Lisa P. Jackson was headed Sunday to Louisiana, where she planned to visit with frustrated residents.

Secretary of the Interior Ken Salazar and Secretary of Homeland Security Janet Napolitano were to lead a Senate delegation to the region on Monday to fly over affected areas and keep an eye on the response.

White House Press Secretary Robert Gibbs also told CBS’ “Face the Nation” on Sunday that Justice Department officials have been to the region gathering information about the spill. However, he wouldn’t say whether the department has opened a criminal investigation.

Meanwhile, the official

An oil-soaked pelican is seen on an island in Barataria Bay just inside the the coast of Louisiana on Sunday. The island, which is home to hundreds of brown pelican nests as well as terns, gulls and roseate spoonbills, is impacted by oil from the Deepwater Horizon oil spill.

“If anybody is frustrated with this response, I would tell them their symptoms are normal, because I’m frustrated, too. Nobody likes to have a feeling that you can’t do something about a very big problem.”

— Thad Allen, Coast Guard commandant responsible for the oversight of the month-old spill response said he understands the discontent among residents who want to know what’s next.

“If anybody is frustrated with this response, I would tell them their symptoms are normal, because I’m frustrated, too,” said Coast Guard Commandant Thad Allen. “Nobody likes to have a feeling that you can’t do something about a very big problem.”

President Obama also has named a special independent commission to review what happened. The spill began after the Deepwater Horizon oil rig exploded off the coast of Louisiana on April 20, killing 11 workers, and sank two days later. At least 6 million gallons of crude have spewed into the Gulf of Mexico since, though a growing number of scientists have said they believe it’s more.

The visits from top Obama chiefs come as BP said it will be at least Tuesday before engineers can shoot mud into the blown-out well at the bottom of the Gulf, yet another delay in the effort to stop the oil.

A so-called “top kill” has been tried on land but never 5,000 feet underwater, so scientists and engineers have spent the past week preparing and taking measurements to make sure it will stop the oil that has been spewing into the sea for a month. They originally hoped to try it as early as this weekend.

“It’s taking time to get everything set up,” BP spokesman Tom Mueller said. “They’re taking their time. It’s never been done before. We’ve got to make sure everything is right.”

Crews will shoot heavy mud into a crippled piece of equipment atop the well. Then engineers will direct cement at the well to permanently stop the oil.

As the spill spreads deeper into vulnerable marshes, some have called for federal officials to take over the response. But Allen said the government must hold BP accountable. After the 1989 Exxon Valdez tanker spilled 11 million gallons of oil in Alaska, Congress dictated that oil companies be responsible for dealing with major accidents — including paying for all cleanup — with oversight by federal agencies.

BP has tried and failed several times to halt the gusher, and has had some success with the mile-long tube.

Engineers are also developing several other plans in case the top kill doesn’t work, including an effort to shoot knotted rope, pieces of tire and other material — known as a junk shot — to plug the blowout preventer, which was meant to shut off the oil in case of an accident but did not work.

Move afoot in Congress to ban drop-side cribs

By Jennifer C. Kerr
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The baby crib, usually a safe haven for little ones, became a death trap for 6-month-old Bobby Cirigliano.

The side rail on his drop-side crib slid off the tracks and trapped his head and neck between the mattress and the malfunctioning side rail. His face pressed against the mattress, the boy suffocated.

“I just don’t feel complete anymore,” says his mother, Susan Cirigliano of North Bellmore on New York’s Long Island.

Bobby was one of at least 32 infants and toddlers since 2000 who suffocated or were strangled in a drop-side crib, which has a side that moves up and down to allow parents to lift children from the cribs more easily than cribs with fixed sides. Drop-sides, around for decades and probably slept in by many of today’s parents, are suspected in an additional 14 infant fatalities during that time.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission, which regulates cribs, has warned about the problem. Its chairman, Inez Tenenbaum, has pledged to ban the manufacture and sale of cribs by the end of the year with a new performance standard that would make fixed-side cribs mandatory. It could be several months into 2011 before that became effective.

The industry has already started phasing out drop-sides and big retailers such as Babies R Us and Wal-Mart have taken them off sale floors. Yet there are still plenty for sale on the Internet, and that’s part of the reason Congress is getting involved.

“There’s a great urgency here. We have to make sure that no parent is unaware that drop-side cribs could kill their children,” Sen. Kirsten Gillibrand, D-N.Y., said in an Associated Press interview.

She plans to introduce legislation this week to outlaw the manufacture, sale and resale of all drop-side cribs and ban them from day-care centers and hotels. Gillibrand wants to accelerate efforts for a ban, from Congress or the CPSC, and highlight concerns about the cribs to parents who are using them.

“There still are thousands and thousands of children who are sleeping every night in drop-side cribs and we need to protect them,” said Gillibrand.

She outlined her bill at a news conference in New York on Sunday, joined by Bobby Cirigliano’s parents and the family of 10-month-old Tyler Witte, who died in a drop-side crib in 1997.

More than 7 million of these cribs have been recalled in the past five years, often because screws, safety pegs or plastic tracking for the rail can come loose or break. The industry insists that babies are safe in drop-sides that haven’t been recalled.

Shuttle Atlantis undocks from space station

By Marcia Dunn
Associated Press writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — After a week of flying together, shuttle Atlantis undocked from a larger and virtually completed International Space Station on Sunday and headed for home on its final voyage.

The two orbiting craft parted company 220 miles above the Indian Ocean. Once more, the space station astronauts thanked their shuttle friends for all their help and urged them to “stay safe.”

Atlantis isn’t set to land until Wednesday. On Monday, the six crewmen will conduct one last safety inspection of their ship.

“Take care,” the space station’s skipper, Oleg Kotov, told his shuttle visitors right before the hatches were sealed for undocking.

“We’ll see you all on the surface of planet Earth again soon,” said Atlantis’ commander, Kenneth Ham.

The two commanding officers shook hands twice and laughed, then embraced. Their crewmates — representing the United States, Russia and Japan — followed suit.

The space station is bigger and packs more power, thanks to Atlantis and its crewmen. They left behind a new Russian compartment packed with supplies, as well as six fresh batteries and other equipment that was hooked up during a series of spacewalks.

Cash-strapped districts cutting summer school

By Heather Hollingsworth
Associated Press writer

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Amber Bramble had to scramble to arrange summer plans for her 5- and 7-year-old daughters after their suburban Kansas City school district gutted its summer school program this spring.

Her daughters were among about 2,500 of the Raymore-Peculiar district's 6,000 students who enrolled for free last summer in a program that combined traditional subjects with enrichment classes like music. But with state funding uncertain, the district decided to focus this year on about 800 students who either need to make up credits to graduate or are struggling to keep up with classmates.

Across the country, districts are cutting summer school because it's just too expensive to keep. The cuts started when the recession began and have worsened, affecting more children and more essential programs that help struggling students.

And in districts like Raymore-Peculiar, although lawmakers ultimately decided to maintain summer school funding, they made the decision so late in the session that many administrators already had eliminated or scaled back the programs.

The cuts come even as President Obama and Education Secretary Arne Duncan call for longer school days and shorter summer breaks. But in many states, districts cutting summer school outnumber those using stimulus money to expand their offerings.

"At a time when we need to work harder to close achievement gaps and prepare every child for college and career, cutting summer school is the wrong way to go," Duncan said in a written

A sign along School Road marks the front of Raymore-Peculiar High School in Peculiar, Mo., on Friday. About 2,500 of the Raymore-Peculiar district's 6,000 students enrolled in a free summer school program last year that combined traditional subjects with enrichment classes like music. Now, with state funding uncertain, the district will focus on about 800 students who need to make up credits to graduate or are struggling to keep up with classmates.

statement. "These kids need more time, not less."

With the Raymore-Peculiar district trimming its program, Bramble's daughters were unable to participate.

"I think it gets them out of the rhythm," she said. "You lose the momentum."

An American Association of School Administrators survey found that 34 percent of respondents are considering eliminating summer school for the 2010-11 school year. That's a rate that has roughly doubled each year, from 8 percent in 2008-09 to 14 percent in 2009-10.

Noelle Ellerson, a public policy analyst for the group who managed the study, said the cuts illustrate how strapped school districts are. Experts say studies show summer break tends to widen the achievement gap between poor students and their more affluent peers whose parents can more easily afford things like educational vacations, camps and sports teams.

On average, low-income children fall between two and three months behind in reading skills over the summer while their middle-income peers stagnate or make very slight gains, said Ron Fairchild, chief executive officer of the Baltimore-based National Summer Learning Association.

He said both low- and higher-income students lose ground in math.

"Most people generally think summer is a great time for kids to be kids, a time for something different, a time for all kinds of exploration and enrichment," Fairchild said. "Our mythology about summer learning really runs counter to the reality of what this really is like for kids in low-income communities and for their families when this faucet of public support shuts off."

The cuts are not isolated to Missouri. In New York, the East Aurora Union Free School District in suburban Buffalo is dropping a summer program that had served several dozen struggling first- to sixth-graders, said Superintendent Jim Bodziak.

In Indiana, the New Albany-Floyd County Consolidated School Corporation, located across the river from Louisville, Ky., suspended its traditional summer school. It had offered enrichment courses as well as classes for kindergarten to 12th-graders who were falling behind their classmates. But this year it will only offer online classes for high-schoolers needing to make up credits to graduate.

In financially strapped California, summer cutbacks continue this year, with the Pasadena Unified School District among those paring back its program. The district is keeping its summer classes for high school students needing to make up credits to graduate but canceling other summer programs.

"I know they are struggling with trying to put in summer school," said Pam Slater, a California Department of Education spokeswoman. "Many at the local level are limited to those who need tutoring to pass the high school exit exam. I know a lot of the subjects I used to take in summer school aren't offered because of the funding situation."

In Missouri, the talk of cuts has been a jolt because of the program's popularity. Last year, 480 out of 523 school districts offered summer school, serving about 34 percent of the state's total K-12 enrollment, according to the Missouri Department of Elementary and Secondary Education.

Fairchild of the National Summer Learning Association said he was not aware of another state that has that high of a summer school participation percentage.

For years, Missouri districts actually made money offering summer school because of the way the state funded it. Some districts offered incentives — like gift cards — so students would attend in greater numbers.

But that ended a few years back, and this year some lawmakers wanted to pare back state funding for summer school significantly because of budget problems. The cuts didn't win approval, but the issue could return.

Brent Ghan, a spokesman for the Missouri School Boards' Association, said education funding is still at risk, especially since the state budget director has said $350 million in cuts will need to be made before the budget's approved, which should happen in mid-June.

Should there be cuts in basic funding for K-12 schools, state funding for summer school would take the same hit as would classes offered during the regular school term. And next year doesn't look any better.

"I sadly suspect that the funding for summer school will be eliminated by next year," said Jeff Kyle, superintendent of the Raymore-Peculiar district. "I hope I'm wrong, but I don't think I am."

Clinton speaks to Yale grads about unequal world

NEW HAVEN, Conn. (AP) — Former President Bill Clinton told Yale seniors on Sunday to listen to people with whom they disagree.

In a Class Day speech that included points similar to a commencement address he gave a week ago in West Virginia, the Yale Law School alum said today's college graduates will be left to deal with a world that has three major problems.

"It is too unstable, it is too unequal, and it is completely unsustainable," Clinton said.

He urged them to change that, and said that will mean working together.

"One problem we have in the modern world is, we've got access to more information than ever before, but we don't all listen to the same information," he said.

A tidbit of information Clinton didn't give the Yale seniors was that he was involved in a minor traffic accident on the way to the event.

State police Lt. J. Paul Vance said Clinton's secret service van was in a traffic jam that was the result of accident just north of New Haven on the Merritt Parkway when it was hit from behind.

"There was no injury, no endangerment to Clinton," Vance said. "The motorcade continued on to its destination, and we're piecing it all together."

Clinton told WTIC-TV

that the accident was a fluke.

"It was one of those deals where everybody in the passing lane slowed down, and we all slowed down, and one person didn't," he said. "It happened to be the person behind us."

During his speech, Clinton told Yale seniors that while the country is less sexist, racist and homophobic than it once was, people today only want to be around those who agree with them.

"In our media habits, we go to the television sites, we go to the radio talk shows, we go to the blog sites that agree with us, and it can have very bizarre consequences," he said, citing the controversy over the origin of President Obama's birth certificate.

He also warned that as information becomes more available, so does the potential for its misuse.

He noted that Faisal Shahzad, the man accused of attempting to bomb Times Square, received a college degree in the United States before flying back to Pakistan to train as a terrorist.

"It shows you that when you tear down all the walls, and you can break through all the barriers of information, that the same things that empower you to get access to more information more quickly than ever before could empower you to build bombs," he said. "It's an unstable world."

Clinton said he believes the mission of every empowered person in the world should be to increase the positive forces and decrease the negative forces of the world's interdependence.

"We have to be relentlessly committed to change," he said. "And change is hard."

The address continued a Yale tradition in which graduation speakers typically don't speak at commencements. The major speech to seniors is instead given the previous day during Class Day festivities, an event that also includes the wearing of silly hats.

The former president said he considered turning a handkerchief he had been given by the class of 2010 into a do-rag so that he would better fit in.

"I wasn't sure I was coming to fashion week," he joked.

Clinton's wife, Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton, was Class Day speaker in 2001, and received an honorary degree last year.

600 museums offer military families free admission

By Brett Zongker
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — More than 600 museums nationwide are offering free admission to military families all summer in a new partnership with the National Endowment for the Arts.

The list includes some of the nation's premier art museums, including New York's Museum of Modern Art and the Art Institute of Chicago, as well as science centers, children's museums and other sites in all 50 states.

The program, called Blue Star Museums, is being announced Monday in San Diego, where 14 museums will participate. The offer for active duty military personnel and their families runs from Memorial Day through Labor Day.

It was the brainchild of Kathy Roth-Douquet, chairwoman of the group Blue Star Families. Her husband, Marine Corps Col. Greg Douquet, is on his third deployment to Afghanistan.

"You can feel a little alone in America right now, being part of the 1 percent that's involved in fighting these wars," she said, adding that the recession has changed priorities for many people. "When the kids and I go to museums this summer, we know we're being welcomed. It will make us feel less alone."

Roth-Douquet, who lives in Parris Island, S.C., said military bases are sometimes far from cultural centers, though museums can be a good escape.

The Defense Department is helping to promote the offer, and Roth-Douquet said some military bases may coordinate bus trips.

We can make no predictions about their future. But one thing is certain:

We'll be there.

Goodell urges governors to adopt concussion law

The Associated Press

NEW YORK — NFL commissioner Roger Goodell sent a letter to 44 governors urging them to pass a law similar to one in Washington state that protects young athletes from concussions.

The NFL said in an e-mail Sunday that Goodell's letter will be part of Dr. Richard Ellenbogen's testimony at Rep. John Conyers' forum on concussions in New York on Monday.

Ellenbogen treated Zackery Lystedt, the Washington youth who suffered a brain injury in 2006 after returning to a middle school football game following a concussion. His story prompted Washington to pass Lystedt's Law, which keeps young athletes from returning to play too soon. Other states have followed suit and adopted similar laws. Ellenbogen and Dr. Hunt Batjer head the NFL's new Head, Neck and Spine Committee.

The Idaho House unanimously approved a bill in March requiring the State Board of Education post information on its website about the dangers of concussions and of continuing to play after sustaining one.

The bill was initially much broader. Lewiston Democrat Rep. Liz Chavez and Pocatello Democrat Rep. Elaine Smith wanted a requirement that coaches remove players with possible head injuries, then have them checked by a doctor or team trainer before returning to action.

But Nampa Republican Rep. Brent Crane persuaded the House to strike that requirement, saying it would expose coaches to lawsuits even if they acted in good faith.

In his letter, Goodell wrote, "The Center for Disease Control estimates that there may be as many as 3.8 million sports and recreation-related concussions in the United States each year. These injuries are sustained by both boys and girls in numerous contact sports.

"Given our experience at the professional level, we believe a similar approach is appropriate when dealing with concussions in all youth sports. That is why the NFL and its clubs urge you to support legislation that would better protect your state's young athletes by mandating a more formal and aggressive approach to treatment of concussions."

The Lystedt law contains three essential elements:

- Athletes, parents and coaches must be educated about the dangers of concussions each year.
- If a young athlete is suspected of having a concussion, he/she must be removed from a game or practice and not be permitted to return to play.
- A licensed health care professional must clear the young athlete to return to play in the subsequent days or weeks.

"We would urge that similar legislation be adopted in your state," Goodell added. "We believe that sports and political leaders can help raise awareness of these dangerous injuries and better ensure that they are treated in the proper and most effective way. Young athletes, as well as parents, coaches and school officials in your state, will thank you for taking a stand on this important issue."

Stoudemire leads Phoenix past Lakers

Suns 118, Lakers 109

By Bob Baum

Associated Press writer

PHOENIX — Amare Stoudemire answered his critics with an exclamation point, and there will be no sweep in the Western Conference finals.

Stoudemire matched his career playoff high with 42 points, 29 in the second half, and grabbed 11 rebounds to power the Phoenix Suns to a 118-109 victory Sunday night that cut the Los Angeles Lakers' lead in the series to 2-1.

"Just being aggressive, really going after it," Stoudemire said. "Tonight I wanted to come out with some aggressiveness and get it going."

The Suns can pull even with a victory at home in Game 4 on Tuesday night.

Phoenix, dominated inside in the first two games, won with its big men, and a big advantage at the free throw line.

Robin Lopez, whose 7-foot presence gave the Suns some much-needed toughness inside, scored 20 on 8-of-10 shooting in 31 minutes, by far his most playing time since returning from a back injury at the start of the series. Phoenix made 37-of-42 free throws, 14 of 18 by Stoudemire. The

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — The inaugural five members of NASCAR's new Hall of Fame were inducted Sunday in a ceremony that both honored auto racing's pioneers and celebrated the entire industry.

NASCAR founder Bill France was lauded for his vision of turning unregulated beach racing into America's premiere motorsports series. His son, Bill France Jr., was remembered as tough taskmaster who Richard Petty, the seven-time champion, was credited as the sport's first superstar, while Junior Johnson was celebrated as the symbol of the sport's roots.

And then there was Dale Earnhardt, the "champion's champion" who epitomized the blue collar spirit at the heart of NASCAR.

The final inductee in Sunday's ceremony, Earnhardt was represented on stage by his widow, Teresa, and four children, who each took a moment to share their memories of "The Intimidator." It was a rare picture of unity for a family that's been largely depicted as fractured since Earnhardt's 2001 death in the Daytona 500.

Venus Williams easily wins opener at French Open

PARIS — Whistles and whispers circulated through the stands at Court Suzanne Lenglen on Sunday, a reaction brought about not by Venus Williams' play at the French Open, but rather by her outfit.

With a lacy, black overlay giving it the illusion of being see-through, and bright red trim on the bodice, Williams' corset-like get-up made her look as if she were ready to perform in a 19th century Parisian cancan chorus line. Her game, a mix of power and niftier-than-usual footwork on this day, was very 21st century, and befitting a star of the show.

The red clay of Roland Garros never has been Williams' best stage — her seven Grand Slam titles all came at Wimbledon or the U.S. Open. At this year's French Open, she is assured of at least one more performance, thanks to a 6-3, 6-3 victory over former top-10 player Patty Schnyder of Switzerland in the first round.

Williams explained that her look was "about illusion," which, she noted, is "a lot of my motif this year" when it comes to clothes design. She also said she might not wear that particular dress again on court. Then again, perhaps she will. She's not sure. Either way, Williams comes to a tournament with eight to 10 outfits, just in case the victories keep coming.

And she plans a lengthy stay in Paris this time around, perhaps capped by a title.

Kanaan overcomes crash to make Indianapolis 500 field

The Associated Press

INDIANAPOLIS — Tony Kanaan spent all weekend cramming to get into the Indianapolis 500. He barely made it. Two crashes in less than 24 hours sent Kanaan's team scrambling to get the No. 11 car back together, and the 2004 IndyCar Series champ aced the biggest test of his career with a four-lap qualifying average of 224.072 mph to get his car on the starting grid with 30 minutes left in qualifications. All he had to do was wait to see if the speed would hold up, which it did.

“You live, you learn, and we crashed. Today was just a nightmare,” he said after getting the 32nd starting spot in the 33-car field. “Apart from that, the conditions were the hottest we’ve ever seen. The track was really slick, I saw everybody complaining. So it’s tough to keep it cool and say ‘Yeah, we’re just going to go out at 5’ It’s the last day, you’re not in the field yet, crashed two cars and just stay cool.” Fortunately for Michael Andretti, Kanaan did. It’s the first time the Brazilian will start outside the first two rows in nine

Indy starts, but after a dreadful weekend for Andretti Autosport, they’ll take it. From Kanaan’s crashes to Danica Patrick’s contentious comments, the Andretti Curse was back in full force at Indy — right up until the final moments when Kanaan pulled out of line twice after realizing he wouldn’t have to requalify. The team struggles began Saturday when Marco Andretti described his qualifying run as “pathetic.” The 23-year-old American still wound up with the best starting position, 16th, on his dad’s five-car team.

Kanaan and Patrick had worse weekends. Patrick, the series’ most marketable personality, climbed out of her car after Saturday’s sub-par run and blamed a poor setup for her poor performance — comments that drew boos when they were broadcast over the public address system. After talking to Kanaan for two hours Saturday night, Patrick took a different tone, though her assessment of the cars seemed spot on. “I was a little emotional yesterday,” she said in a television interview. “I was still shaking when I did the interview because we were on a very, very ragged edge out there.” Kanaan wasn’t the only driver feeling Sunday’s tension. Brazil’s Bruno Junqueira, the 2002 Indy pole winner, earned one of the nine open spots with an average of 225.662 — the day’s fastest qualifying speed. He’ll start 25th. Kanaan’s teammate John Andretti was the first driver to qualify Sunday, averaging 224.518 mph. He’ll start 28th, the inside of Row 10. Sarah Fisher’s four-lap average of 224.434 was the fastest of the record four women to make the lineup and will start 29th. The fifth woman, Venezuela’s Milka Duno, could not qualify on her three attempts Sunday. Paul Tracy, who lost the Indy 500 title in the disputed finish of 2002, withdrew his speed and failed to requalify. Fisher’s teammate, Jay Howard, did the same thing and wound up with the same shocking result. The two withdrawals put Saavedra in the 33rd starting spot despite crashing late in practice and not being able to requalify. Joining Duno, Howard, Tracy on the sidelines will be Jaques Lazier, who was a late replacement for A.J. Foyt IV.

Bay, Santana help Mets hold off Yankees

NEW YORK — Jason Bay homered twice off an ineffective CC Sabathia, and the New York Mets held off the slumping New York Yankees 6-4 on Sunday night behind Johan Santana’s stellar pitching. Shut down nearly all night by Santana, the Yankees rallied for three runs in the ninth inning before Francisco Rodriguez struck out Alex Rodriguez on a 3-2 breaking ball with runners at the corners to end it.

Alex Cora, a late addition to the lineup, got the offense started with a two-run single in a four-run second inning and the Mets took two of three at home in Citi Field for their first Subway Series victory since a rain-shortened two-game sweep at old Yankee Stadium in May 2008.

The city rivals meet again in the Bronx from June 18-20.

BLUE JAYS 12, DIAMONDBACKS 4
PHOENIX — Edwin Encarnacion and Jose Bautista each hit two-run homers, and the Toronto Blue Jays avoided a three-game sweep with a 12-4 rout of the Arizona Diamondbacks on Sunday. The major league leaders in home runs brought their team total to 76, and the Blue Jays established a season high for hits with 17. They had 36 for the series and left the desert after belting 10 home runs in the three games.

and struck out five in his fifth consecutive start of at least six innings pitched. It was also his fifth straight start allowing two runs or less.

TIGERS 6, DODGERS 2
LOS ANGELES — Rick Porcello fought off three line drives right back at him to get his first road victory of the season, and the Detroit Tigers got home runs from Miguel Cabrera and Magglio Ordonez in a 6-2 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers on Sunday. The Tigers avoided a three-game sweep in the first interleague series for both teams.

ATHLETICS 3, GIANTS 0
OAKLAND, Calif. — Jake Fox hit a go-ahead RBI double in the seventh inning and the Oakland Athletics completed a three-game sweep of the San Francisco Giants in the Bay Bridge Series with a 3-0 victory Sunday.

BREWERS 4, TWINS 3
MINNEAPOLIS — Trevor Hoffman returned to help Milwaukee’s patchwork pitching staff and Corey Hart and Prince Fielder homered in the Brewers’ 4-3 victory over the Minnesota Twins on Sunday.

MARLINS 13, WHITE SOX 0
CHICAGO — Cody Ross hit two of Florida’s five home runs and Josh Johnson pitched six sharp innings to help the Marlins defeat the Chicago White Sox 13-0 on Sunday.

CARDINALS 6, ANGELS 5, 10 INNINGS
ST. LOUIS — Felipe Lopez lofted a bases-loaded single in the 10th inning well over a drawn-in outfield, giving the St. Louis Cardinals a 6-5 victory over the Los Angeles Angels on Sunday.

RAYS 10, ASTROS 6
HOUSTON — John Jaso homered and drove in four runs, Ben Zobrist and Hank Blalock added solo shots and the Tampa Bay Rays overcame a shaky start by David Price in a 10-6 win over the Houston Astros on Sunday.

ROCKIES 11, ROYALS 7
KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Jason Giambi homered and drove in four runs, and the Colorado Rockies roughed up AL Cy Young Award winner Zack Greinke in an 11-7 win over the Kansas City Royals on Sunday.

CUBS 5, RANGERS 4
ARLINGTON, Texas — Carlos Silva became the first Cubs starter in 43 years to have a perfect record after six decisions, working into the sixth inning of Chicago’s interleague series-clinching 5-4 victory over the AL West-leading Texas Rangers on Sunday.

NATIONALS 4, ORIOLES 3, 10 INNINGS
WASHINGTON — Josh Willingham homered in the 10th inning and the Washington Nationals overcame Matt Capps’ first blown save to beat the Baltimore Orioles 4-3 on Sunday.

INDIANS 4, REDS 3
CLEVELAND — Jhonny Peralta singled in the go-ahead run in the sixth inning Sunday to help the Cleveland Indians beat the Cincinnati Reds 4-3 and snap a six-game losing streak.

RED SOX 8, PHILLIES 3
PHILADELPHIA — Tim Lincecum pitched eight shutout innings for his first victory in nearly a year, and the Boston Red Sox roughed up Roy Halladay in an 8-3 win over the Philadelphia Phillies on Sunday.

NATIONAL LEAGUE PIRATES 3, BRAVES 2, 10 INNINGS
PITTSBURGH — Ryan Doumit homered with two outs in the 10th inning off Takashi Saito for his third hit, helping the Pittsburgh Pirates beat the Atlanta Braves 3-2 on Sunday and avoid a three-game sweep.

Byfuglien hero again as Blackhawks win the West

CHICAGO (AP) — Dustin Byfuglien has emerged as a force for the Chicago Blackhawks and now he is taking his game to the highest level. He and his teammates are headed to the Stanley Cup finals.

Byfuglien scored his third go-ahead goal of the Western Conference finals, converting on a third-period power play as Chicago rallied to beat the San Jose Sharks 4-2 on Sunday and complete a four-game sweep that sent the Blackhawks to the NHL finals for the first time since 1992.

“Seems like he likes the spotlight. He likes being the hero. He steps up in big time,” teammate Patrick Sharp said. “He told me before the third period he was going to be the guy to go get it. True to his word, he got it.”

Chicago will play either Montreal or Philadelphia and be in search of its first NHL title since 1961, more than two decades before many of the current players were born. “It’s an honor to be going to the Stanley Cup. We beat a very good team over there. It wasn’t easy,” Byfuglien said. The 257-pound Byfuglien was parked in front of the net with 7 seconds left on the power play. He took a nice pass from Patrick Kane and knocked the puck past Evgeni Nabokov to give the Blackhawks a 3-2 lead at 14:05 of the final period.

“I got my stick open in front of the net, and Kaner game me a nice little feed,” Byfuglien said. Moving Byfuglien to the top line with Kane and captain Jonathan Toews was one of coach Joel Quenneville’s best adjustments.

Kris Versteeg added an empty-net goal with 42 seconds left, and the red-clad fans at the United Center erupted, littering the ice with souvenir towels.

Byfuglien also had the game-winner Friday night in overtime as Chicago captured Game 3, 3-2. He also put the Blackhawks ahead to stay with a goal in their 2-1 victory in the opener and scored a goal in all four of the Blackhawks’ victories over the Sharks. He has eight goals in this postseason.

It was another disappointing ending for the Sharks, who won the conference in the regular season by a point over the Blackhawks.

Earnhardt, the legend, lives on.”

The Earnhardt’s closed a ceremony that was rich on family ties but short on individual celebration. Since only two members of this inaugural class are still living, inductions and acceptances fell to family members and close friends who shared stories that drew laughter and an occasional tear.

France Sr. was accepted into the Hall by his son, Jim, who said the promoter-turned-NASCAR founder would have been thrilled to see the racing series had far exceeded his visions of creating a national sport.

France Jr., who took the reigns from his father and guided NASCAR through a 30-year period of extreme growth, was represented by his children, Brian and Lesa.

Johnson, the one-time moonshine runner turned champion driver and car owner, was inducted by his 16-year-old son, Robert, who nervously called his father to the stage.

Petty was inducted by his son, Kyle, who called NASCAR’s all-time wins leader “the biggest fan of the sport that ever lived.”

“I think that’s what made him a great racecar driver,” Kyle Petty said. “He loves the sport. He carries a passion for this sport. He loves to drive. He loves to work on it. He loves the guys he raced against. He loved the fans. He loved everything about the sport.”

The King, clad in his trademark cowboy hat and dark sunglasses, deflected attention to his accomplishments in his speech, preferring to praise his parents, his family, the Franceses, his team, media and fans.

“I never did anything by myself,” said Petty, NASCAR’s all-time winningest driver with 200 victories, who closed with “I guess I’m going to be like Gomer Pyle. Thank you. Thank you. Thank you.”

YOO WINS SYBASE MATCH PLAY CHAMPIONSHIP
GLADSTONE, N.J. — Sun Young Yoo arrived at stately Hamilton Farm with modest expectations. She left with a breakthrough victory.

The 23-year-old South Korean player won the Sybase Match Play Championship on Sunday for her first LPGA Tour title, beating Angela Stanford 3 and 1 after dispatching top-seeded Jiyai Shin in the morning semifinals.

“My goal was to get past the first two days,” Yoo said. “I did a lot better.” And she did it from the toughest quarter of the 64-player draw, beating No. 32 Karen Stupples, No. 5 Cristie Kerr, No. 12 Song-Hee Kim and No. 4 Yani Tseng before finishing off Shin 2 and 1 and No. 10 Stanford.

“It was tough,” said Yoo, seeded 28th. “I tried to be a little more aggressive out there because it’s match play. I think it worked out pretty good.”

Yoo also became the LPGA Tour’s eighth straight foreign winner and 25th in the last 26 events. Michelle Wie — in the Lorena Ochoa Invitational in November — is the lone U.S. champion since Kerr won the Michelob Ultra Open a little over a year ago.

with 26 seconds to go to put the lid on the triumph, snapping the Lakers’ eight-game playoff winning streak.

Richardson scored 19. Steve Nash had 17 points and 15 assists.

Stoudemire, who had just nine rebounds in the first two games and had been criticized for his lack of defense and absence of fire, scored repeatedly on drives to the basket, when he either made the basket, was fouled, or both. The All-Star power forward, who can opt out of the final year of his contract after this season, made 10-of-12 shots in the second half, scoring 16 in the third quarter and 13 in the fourth.

“My dedication to the game should never be questioned,” Stoudemire said. “I always give 100 percent. I try to dedicate my game to the game of basketball. I came out tonight with a chip on my shoulder and it was a must win for us.”

The Suns played a lot of zone defense after the Lakers averaged 126 points and shot 58 percent in the first two games. Los Angeles shot 48 percent in this one. The Lakers had a 27-4 advantage in second-chance points, but were outscored 18-3 on fast-break points.

Los Angeles, though, led 90-89 when Lamar Odom made two free throws with 8:47 to play.

Lopez entered the game for the struggling Channing Frye, and Phoenix took the lead for good 91-90 on Jared Dudley’s baseline drive with 8:27 left.

Frye missed all seven of his shots, five of them 3s, and is shooting 1 for 20 in the series, 1 for 14 on 3s. He has missed 17 straight shots.

saying — believe I can win,” said Williams, whose biggest hitches Sunday were eight double-faults.

Williams lost in the third round at each of the past three French Opens and only once has been beyond the quarterfinals in 13 previous trips: She lost to younger sister Serena in the 2002 final. Still, Venus’ hitting partner, David Witt, said after Sunday’s victory: “If she goes out there and is smart and plays smart tennis, I think she can win the tournament.”

There are others who will have some say in that, of course, including defending champion Svetlana Kuznetsova, who also won in straight sets Sunday, and the top-ranked Serena, whose first-round match is Monday. Venus is back at No. 2 in the rankings for the first time since May 2003, and was not shy about saying she wants to bump her sister off the top spot.

“It feels good to be moving up the ranks. Obviously, when you get to 2, of course, the next dream is 1,” Venus said. As for chasing Serena?

“When we’re on the court, and when we’re competing against each other, it’s competition,” Venus said. “Both of us feel that, you know: May the better player be the best.” Generally, the better players were, well, better than their opponents on Day 1 of the year’s second Grand Slam tournament, when the sky was a cloudless blue and the temperature touched 80 degrees, making ice cream the snack of choice around the grounds.

Only one seeded man departed. No. 23 Ernests Gulbis of Latvia, who upset Roger Federer at Rome this month, stopped because of a right thigh injury while trailing Julien Benneteau of France 6-4, 6-2, 1-0. Two seeded women left: No. 10 Victoria Azarenka of Belarus, a quarterfinalist a year ago, lost to Gisela Dulko of Argentina 6-1, 6-2, and No. 20 Maria Jose Martinez Sanchez of Spain lost to Akgul Amanmuradova of Uzbekistan 6-2, 6-4.

Winners included 2009 runner-up Robin Soderling, who stunned four-time champion Rafael Nadal in the fourth round last year; No. 8 Jo-Wilfried Tsonga, No. 10 Marin Cilic and No. 11 Mikhail Youzhny. Soderling won the first nine games and took 49 of 58 points on his serve en route to eliminating French wild card Laurent Recouderc 6-0, 6-2, 6-3.

Joining Kuznetsova in the women’s second round were No. 15 Aravane Rezaï, No. 19 Nadia Petrova, No. 26 Dominika Cibulkova and No. 30 Maria Kirilenko. Kuznetsova sputtered at the start against 2009 quarterfinalist Sorana Cirstea, losing the opening six points and falling behind 3-0, before reeling off nine games in a row.

Werth will make sure laws are faithfully carried out

In recent years, we Idahoans have been fortunate that, for the most part, our state elected officials have done a good job of representing our interests. We don't have to worry an elected official will take positions that are contrary to our belief in individual freedom, personal responsibility and the rewards of hard work.

We need to be vigilant, however, and scrutinize all those who serve in positions of authority. When they deviate, even a small degree, from the basic principles that we live by, we need to seek others who will faithfully carry out the mandates we voters give them.

Such is the situation we now face in choosing the person to serve as the judge in the 5th Judicial District. We have a choice between the incumbent whose decisions in relation to the law are often overturned by a higher court and a man who understands a judge's job is to enforce the law and not modify it. That man is Douglas Werth.

Doug Werth believes, like most Idahoans, in judicial restraint. He will put his personal opinions aside and see that the laws are faithfully carried out. That isn't happening now. We need a new judge in the 5th Judicial District. Your vote for Doug Werth will bring that about.

Coiner made right decision on Health Act

I want to thank Sen. Chuck Coiner for his recent vote against the Idaho Health Freedom Act.

The Legislature passed the bill out of concern about the mandates from enacted federal health care overhaul. This means the Idaho Legislature needlessly passed a bill that's going to cost Idaho taxpayers a lot of money. Estimates on how much range from $100,000 to $1 million. Most knowledgeable experts say states' legal objections will not prevail. It is generally believed that these bills have been enacted for political purposes only — to let their base supporters think they were working against the Obama health care reform. The matter will be decided in federal courts with or without Idaho spending a dime.

Congratulations, Sen. Coiner, for thinking for yourself and your constituency.

May 25 primary holds importance to Cassia County voters

The primary election on May 25 is very important to all citizens of Cassia County. This election is the precursor to the general election to be held in November, but those that will serve us in the county will be decided now.

In the primaries, the Republican, Democratic and other party candidates are elected to run as their party's nominees in the general election. Each party winner is then listed in November. If there is no opposition from another party, the primary is, for all practical purposes, the deciding election.

This year, no candidates filed from other parties for Cassia County offices, so each Republican who receives the most votes on May 25 will be the only candidate listed on the ballot for that position next November. The Republican Party will honor the wishes of the voters and will work to see that each Republican primary winner will become our elected official next January.

We have outstanding candidates running for county offices, and voters have excellent choices. It is important to vote in the primary and to get your candidate of choice elected. Please mark May 25 and vote. Good luck to all the candidates.

Jenks aims for legislation that limits government

DeeAnn Jenks is running for precinct committee person on the Republican primary ballot because she feels the Republican Party needs more people who will uphold the Republican Party core values. Her desires are to push back federal control within Idaho. She feels strongly that Republican lawmakers should be held to the Republican Party platform and adhere to the U.S. Constitution — our pillar of freedom in America.

DeeAnn Jenks will work to ensure the proper role of our central committee is restored; to debate and form resolutions that will serve as stepping stones for legislation within Idaho. She has a goal to pass legislation that limits government!

God bless America, and God bless Idaho! Vote DeeAnn Jenks.

Suter had courage to protect the rights of landowners

I have personally known Doug Suter for more than 10 years. During that time, I have found him to be honest and direct in his actions and his thinking.

During his nine years of service to the citizens of Jerome County as an active member of the Jerome County Planning and Zoning Board, Doug has had to address a variety of issues relating to property rights and land use. If you take the time to look at his voting record, you will find that he has been fair and consistent in his common sense approach to issues. When the Planning and Zoning board had its public hearings regarding the airport overlay, Doug had the courage to stand in support of the landowners and made every effort to protect their rights.

Doug's effort in just this project alone demonstrates his conviction to stand up

As a long-time member of the county Planning and Zoning, Doug has developed a working relationship with the current county commissioners and would bring a new fresh perspective to Jerome County leadership. Anyone that knows Doug knows that he is not one dimensional in his talents and experience. His dedication to serving the citizens of Jerome County for nine years as a member of the planning and zoning board, being a self-made business owner, his lifelong commitment to Jerome County and his common sense approach makes him uniquely qualified to be our next Jerome County commissioner.

It is for these reasons I am recommending Doug Suter to be our next Jerome County commissioner.

Mills' demeanor will be asset to commission

Please vote for Leon Mills for County Commissioner District 2.

I have known Leon for more than 30 years. We have hunted together and gone to church together. He is honest and fair and treats people with respect. Leon's approachable and friendly demeanor will be an asset to the county commission. He wants to hear the people's views and ideas on how they would like to see the county's assets managed. He sees the role of county commissioner as one of service and responsibility to the people of the county.

Leon Mills is well-qualified for the job! He has seven years of management experience and is currently assistant supervisor in the waste treatment department at LambWeston. Leon is a hard worker and a long-time volunteer in the community. He has served this community by volunteering for Johnny Horizon, Paint Magic, the Rock Creek Brigade, Interfaith Volunteer Caregivers and the LambWeston Fry Booth. All of these projects make Twin Falls County a better place to live.

Leon believes in serving the people of his community. Elect someone who will serve you well — elect Leon Mills for County Commissioner District 2.

Rammell is perfect for today's difficult times

I am a business owner and resident of Twin Falls since 1988. I moved here after meeting some fine Idahoans while living in Alaska. A bush pilot visionary named Jay Hammond, a long shot for governor for sure, won election in 1974. His wild optimism embodied the spirit of the populous and resulted in tax cuts and the very successful Alaska Permanent Dividend program. I remember the press and powers that be at the time guffawed at the notion of tax cuts and the return of money to the taxpayers.

Today, another visionary is running for governor of the state I have called home for 22 years. I support Rex Rammell for governor of Idaho. In better times, Gov. Otter would be a swell head of state. We do not live in better times. Extraordinary times call for extraordinary visionaries to lead and battle ignorant foes. I shake my head in bewilderment at the actions and inactions of those for whom I have cast my vote in the past.

I urge us all to vote for Rex Rammell. Mr. Rammell's strong conviction to eliminate the individual and corporate income tax will resound across the West and employers like me will be freed to hire more talented Idahoans instead of pouring more money into the Great Rift that knows No Thrift. These new employees will surely know better how to provide for their families than the tax collector.

Frankly, I like Gov. Otter; but he has had his chance and has come up short. We are facing extremely difficult times and a man of Rex Rammell's character and vision are required for Idaho to retain Idaho's and America's promise of freedom and individuality. Rex Rammell will be Idaho's Jay Hammond; and Idaho will be America's envy.

Chuck Coiner might be in wrong party

Voters, did you know Sen. Chuck Coiner voted 31 percent conservative. Clint Stennett voted 25 percent conservative. Senator, are you in the wrong party? Republicans vote for family values, hunting and fishing, and preserving Idaho water rights.

On Feb. 26, 2007, you voted a no vote which would allow minor children to obtain an abortion without parental consent. On March 1, 2006, you voted to deny Idaho citizens the right to hunt, trap, and fish anytime lawmakers may think it is needful.

We have a clear choice. Lee Heider will give us clear conservative, family values. We need to make that choice. Lee Heider is a conservative Republican. He rides for the Republican brand.

Jones would make great addition to GOP

I have known Brandon Jones for some time. He is a Twin Falls businessman who enjoys an excellent reputation in the community. Brandon is a person of the highest character and integrity. He is a responsible and trustworthy conservative Republican. He was awarded "National Republican Business Man of the Year" in 2001 and received the honorary Ronald Reagan Republican Gold Medal for entrepreneurship. He feels modification of Idaho's historic water laws must be considered with extreme caution. He will work to elect Republicans that understand the federal government shall not infringe upon state jurisdiction over Idaho water.

Mr. Jones recognizes that the primary function of county and state government in agriculture should be service, research and the promotion of markets. The voters of Twin Falls County have a choice of a real dependable, courageous and determined Republican.

It is a pleasure to recommend Brandon Jones for Republican precinct committeeman, Precinct 22, and county commissioner. He would be a very valuable addition to the Republican Party of Twin Falls.

Coiner brings sides together

To the people of District 24:

As chairman of the Senate Health and Welfare Committee, I work daily with Sen. Chuck Coiner. I have asked Sen. Coiner to mediate several situations where we could not bring two differing sides together for consensus legislation. Sen. Coiner not only "stepped up to the plate" and worked diligently to find consensus but, on many occasions, brought the sides together to form legislation that was acceptable to each side. This is very difficult to achieve since each side has to determine what they will give up to achieve good meaningful legislation that will benefit Idaho citizens, not just the special interests of those involved in promoting the legislation.

Sen. Coiner is a tremendous asset to the Senate Health and Welfare Committee. He has a vast understanding of the issues that affect the health and welfare of Idaho citizens and is acutely aware of the budget constraints of Idaho citizens.

With Sen. Coiner's ability to listen, understand, research and mediate, you are well served in the Idaho Senate. He is not afraid to make tough votes which help us maintain Idaho's constitutional mandate of a balanced budget.

Idahoans will have a strong Senate Health and Welfare Committee with Sen. Chuck Coiner as a hard-working member. Please return his services to the Idaho Senate.

Darrington won't shy away from challenges

I am writing to endorse a good friend of mine, Fred Darrington, to the position of Cassia County clerk.

Now and again, unexpected events can give us an opportunity to bring new people into our lives. Several years ago, I had the privilege to brush shoulders with one of the best people I could be so lucky to meet. We remain friends today because he is someone people gravitate to and because of his genuine concern for others.

In my opinion, Fred has the qualities needed to successfully fill this position. The office of county clerk requires someone who can listen, learn and act. Fred fits the bill. He is also someone who can inspire and motivate others. He's a hard worker and brings a big shot of positive thinking to his surroundings. He has plenty of energy to get the job done while making it enjoyable for everyone involved. One of his most endearing qualities and one that will take him far is his pleasant disposition.

I find Fred to be honest, trustworthy and truly someone who can really get things done. He doesn't shy away from challenges but tackles them head-on, making the best of any situation he finds himself in. I feel the citizens of Cassia County would be doing themselves a great favor by electing Fred Darrington for clerk.

See you at the polls!

Coiner thoughtfully considers legislation

Chuck Coiner gets my vote as one of the few legislators who thoughtfully considers each piece of legislation and then votes what he believes will be best for the citizens of the state of Idaho.

As an independent voter, I find that Chuck looks to his conservative beliefs to help guide his decisions and not as an ideological litmus test for what to support. His background, experience, willingness to listen and hard work as a state senator make him the best choice to return to the State Senate.

In simple terms, "If it ain't broke, don't fix it!" Please help me return Chuck Coiner to continue to work for us on vital matters such as water and education.

Elgee shows outstanding responsibility, dedication

Being a Blaine County resident for 25 years, the past seven in "Old Hailey," I wish to offer the following observation:

Rain, hail or snow, I walk my dogs from 10 to 12 p.m. nightly. On many, and I mean many, late-night walks, there is only one light on in the entire county complex. Judge Elgee is working at his desk. I assume preparing for his weekly trials. He is the only public official I have ever observed with that level of responsibility and dedication.

Regardless of decisions I agree or don't agree with, he has my vote and deserves yours. Win or lose, Judge, thanks for your many years of thoughtful, hard work.

PAC uses questionable political tactics

Here's what I dislike about political action committees: They generally run a very negative campaign. They use a lot of scare tactics. A candidate who is a victim of their hate has no one to whom they can respond. Who are they, really? Where do they get their money? Whom do they represent? We have received many mailings and read many ads from the PAC calling itself "Free Enterprise." Its political tactics scare me. If it cannot say who it is, why should I believe it?

Obenauer letter uses untruths about jail

As I recently read the letter from Diana Obenauer about the proposed jail for Jerome County, I was taken aback that such an educated and literate lady as Ms. Obenauer would write such a letter. It was very surprising that someone such as Ms. Obenauer, who I have known and respected, would write something like this. In my time working for Jerome County, I have found all the commissioners easy to work with and very honest people and find it concerning that someone like Ms. Obenauer would attack them. In Ms. Obenauer's letter, she banters words, like the old rooster in the farmyard will argue with the farmer. Taking small bits of words from something that has been talked about for many months to try to make your point is not fair to the person who said those words and certainly is not fair to the community. In my experience with both Commissioner Howell and Lt. Robert Haas, neither of them would tell anyone anything they did not find to be the truth, so I find it very concerning that Ms. Obenauer would write those things about them. In my many discussions with county officials and meetings I have attended, it is clear to anyone who is listening with an open mind what has been said and the implications from Ms. Obenauer's letter just are not true, or at the very least paints a distorted picture of the facts. Ms. Obenauer made some comments in her letter about Mr. Howell and Lt. Haas saying the new jail may not raise taxes, and she wants to know what they meant. That has always been clear. If enough beds are rented, it will pay for the jail; if not, it still has to be paid for. That is what I've always heard. Facts: Jerome County's current jail is dangerous for staff, inmates and the community. Each year, Jerome County taxpayers pay hundreds of thousands of dollars to house inmates in other jails. Over the last 10 years, Jerome County taxpayers have paid $1.6 million to house inmates in other jails. A new jail would bring money and jobs back to Jerome County. Jobs in construction during the building; jail staff when finished. I hope Jerome County taxpayers will each take the true facts to the polls with them on May 25 and vote.

It is call the Stoney Creek Living Center, and it is presently home to 11 individuals who are in their later years of life. The owners of Stoney Creek Living Center are David and Jen Weigt, and they, along with a wonderful staff, provide an environment that is over the top in every way. They do everything they can to make sure all their needs are met. They have a council once a month and talk with all the residents to make sure they are doing all they can both physically, emotionally and socially to discuss what they can do better. They have wonderful people that are not just employed but want to do the best for each resident. I felt that the reason I wanted to write this letter is because the state has been in the area this week visiting such facilities as Stoney Creek. It is very rare in this type of a facility to be deficiency free and that is exactly what happened. The state was in the facility for a day and a half and did not find one error or one item that this facility was doing wrong. Hats off to Stoney Creek. We welcome visitors! You can drop by any time. If you have a talent you want to share, we would love that also.

Return Burdick, Elgee to the bench

On May 25, two elections will be decided. Both elections deal with judges. Idaho Supreme Court Justice Roger Burdick is being challenged by Mr. Bradbury. District Judge Robert Elgee is being challenged by Mr. Werth, a Blaine County attorney. Both judges are of high moral courage and ethics and have substantial legal expertise and experience. The challengers criticize judge shopping by defense attorneys, seeking more lenient judges. If that happened, the claim would be valid; such is not the case. Defense attorneys rarely recuse sitting judges. I am aware of three instances in more than 20 years where prosecuting attorneys have made it policy to recuse a district court judge and require other judges to handle their cases. The prosecutions alleged the judge was not following the laws to their satisfaction. In each case, the prosecuting attorney did not appeal any of the judges' decisions. They simply banned the judge from all their cases. It has been prosecutors who utilize blanket recusal of judges, not defense attorneys. It is not the judge's fault he is recused. It is very wrong to turn a recusal into a political tool of blackmail. It an attorney does not like a judge's ruling, he should appeal. That's what the appealing court is for. Judge Burdick and Judge Elgee should be returned to the bench and be allowed to continue their service to their communities and their state.
M. LYNN DUNLAP

I would like to express my strong support for Doug Werth for district judge. He is opposing Judge Elgee, who is the current district judge. Unfortunately, when you reside in Camas County, you do not have a choice other than Judge Elgee to hear civil cases. In criminal cases, a judge can be dismissed using Rule 25, which allows a party to disqualify a judge without cause. In Judge Elgee's case, this rule is used an inordinate number of times in Twin Falls. Our county has been involved in several lawsuits by one individual involving land uses and procedure by the county commissioners and Judge Elgee has been the presiding judge. While the Hon. Robert Elgee ruled against the county enjoining the county's 2007 land use ordinances, the matter is currently before the Supreme Court. Considering that at last count, Judge Elgee committed approximately 40 reversible errors, we are confident that Judge Elgee's decision will be reversed. Judge Elgee's poor decisions have cost our county more than $100,000 and twice he has enjoined ordinances including building permits and basically shut down our county. This made things a little tough if you happened to be in the construction business, especially in a county as small as Camas County. Doug Werth has clerked for two or three judges, has worked as a prosecutor and a defense attorney in Blaine County. He is, unlike Elgee, familiar with land use issues, and he is currently on the Blaine County Planning and Zoning Commission. Doug Werth believes in judicial restraint and believes that judges should follow and apply law and not make law. It is time for a change. Vote for Doug Werth for district judge.

I am writing this letter in support of Rusty Satterwhite, who is running for the state representative position in District 24 Seat A, which covers much of Twin Falls and the eastern portion of Twin Falls County. I had become acquainted with Rusty at the 2009 Tea Party event. I was very impressed with his passion for our country and also his concern over where we are also headed as a country. After the Tea Party ended, I approached Rusty and told him I'd like to get involved, as I, too, was very concerned over our country's direction. I can tell you from our limited involvement with the TEARS of the Patriots that Rusty Satterwhite is truly a great American who believes in America and the Constitution. Rusty also served in the United States Army for eight years, lived in many areas of the United States during his Army career and served for eight months in Bosnia. The time he served in Bosnia was certainly an eye-opener for Rusty, as he has seen first hand what a civil war can do to a country. Rusty and his family then moved back to the Magic Valley, where he and his wife felt they could raise their four children in a community of people who held similar beliefs. Rusty and his wife desired a place where family, God, hard work, honesty, integrity and caring neighbors support one another; a place where his children less government and taxes. Lee will represent our values and we will be heard.

We need Coiner's expertise on issues

We all know Sen. Chuck Coiner's expertise in agriculture and water issues, but most of us need to be reminded that he also serves on the Senate Commerce and Human Resources Committee and the Senate Health and Welfare Committee. Sen. Coiner also is the vice chairman of the Commerce and Human Resources Committee. The Commerce and Human Resources Committee deals with all kinds of insurance matters, and the Health and Welfare Committee addresses all of the health programs and issues in this state. Whether we like it or not, health care reform is now the law of the land. Unless it is repealed or ruled unconstitutional, it will be implemented over the next few years, and it will have significant impact on all of our insurance and health programs in this state. Re-electing Sen. Chuck Coiner to another term in the Idaho state Senate will assure that we will have a voice at the table and a say over how this far-reaching federal program will impact our lives. Sen. Coiner's expertise in these areas will be much needed for the next two years, and I support his re-election. Finally, last week, I received a misleading and distorted piece of campaign literature supporting Sen. Coiner's opponent. Many of us have expressed our disdain of all kinds of negative campaign tactics, and this election gives us our opportunity to express our outrage with those people who use negative distortions by voting for Sen. Chuck Coiner.

One of my concerns is the government's lack of financial responsibility. In my own life, saving has always been a part of my financial plan. Orville and his wife have always set money aside, automatically going into a reserve, giving them a little cushion. This financial approach could work in government as well. We can't spend ourselves into prosperity — somewhere along the line we have got to save a bit. Please consider casting your vote Orville Knighton on May 25 for Precinct 3 committeeman.

Heider will listen carefully to constituents

We were born and raised in Twin Falls. We are blessed to live in this choice area that still represents the high values that our country was founded upon. Lee Heider has raised an honorable family of five sons and a daughter. They have all been taught the value of hard work and earning an honest living. This says something about two great parents who have truly taught their children well. Lee is a commonsense person with a brilliant business mind. He has been a successful business owner for more than 30 years. Lee has served our community on the city council and is currently the vice mayor of Twin Falls. He has also served as an ecclesiastical leader and on the Boy Scouts Snake River Council. Lee knows what we believe and he understands his commitment to those who support him. He will be a listening voice for his constituents. He understands the farmers and they trust him with water rights issues. He's concerned with our current economic and educational problems. Let's cast a vote for a principled man who believes in would grow up to be independent adults and hold those values to pass on to their children. With little doubt, Rusty has chosen his children's future to be of the utmost importance. Rusty Satterwhite, if elected to the Idaho Legislature, will bring those values with him to Boise as well as a truly common-sense approach to our state government. If common sense and conservative values are of great importance to you, then please vote for Rusty Satterwhite on May 25.

Knighton can help get GOP back on track

I want to submit a letter of support for Orville Knighton's bid for the Twin Falls County Republican Central Committee. Having lived in the Magic Valley for several years, I am concerned about the direction of the Twin Falls County Republican Party. Because of my concern, I am supporting Mr. Knighton's bid for Twin Falls Precinct 3 committeeman. He is not pleased with the way the Republicans are acting. He is considerably more conservative than the average Republican today. One example of the misguided directions is the issue of the Central Committee's handling of the purse. In the wake of the National Republican Committee's shameful use of funds to sponsor trips to a Hollywood "bondage-themed night club," local leaders of the Twin Falls GOP should come out and show where our contributions are going. Financial reports are not consistently made available to committee members on a monthly basis, and the majority of the time, committee members are merely asked to rubber stamp cleared checks approved by the executive committee.

Many ‘good’ people don’t believe in God

In regard to “Godless people won’t be near God” (May 14), something more to think about:

I would sat that the “opposite” of God would be “no God” — rather than hell, as people who do not believe in God would no doubt not believe in hell.

“Good” is the opposite of “evil” might be a better analogy. I do believe there may be “good” people who do not believe in God, as there may also be people who believe in God that do not believe in “hell.”

Shropshire will keep Twin Falls a good place to live

I’m writing a letter in support of William Shropshire in his quest for Twin Falls County Commissioner District 2.

We have been friends for more than 30 years. I watched his children grow and have seen his strong commitment to family. I worked with Bill; he has good work habits and sets a good example for younger workers. Bill has been a shop steward and has represented fellow workers in the union and company for years. In this context, he has gained experience with contracts, people and their personal problems — assets needed for county commissioner.

Bill is a longtime resident of Twin Falls. He enjoys fishing and the outdoors, which help to enforce the idea of goals to keep Twin Falls a good place to live. Bill has the intellect, common sense and honesty needed for the job.

I support Bill for County Commissioner District 2 and ask you to vote for Bill on May 25.

Let’s do some pruning in these elections

Experience?

Wake up, Magic Valley voters, and think! What is experience? It’s the opportunity to do a job, I think. Why not let the new challenges have this opportunity to do this job? What makes people think they have to stay with the same batch of people in there now?

It’s like pruning a tree or rose bush. It always gets better when you prune. Our state is too great to go on with the same batch of titles and old brush. Let’s give a change to the new people. Vote for someone different this year, and you will see the progress!

Goodman, Heider will follow leadership of GOP

Citizens of Twin Falls District 24, you have an opportunity to elect two individuals in the May 25 primary who will truly represent the conservative ideals we admired and shared with the late President Ronald Reagan. Two men who are not only conservative but are honest and will vote for the GOP principles so vital to restoring our cities, counties and nation to those ideals we so desperately need.

Both of these men are to be admired for their convictions, integrity and work ethics. Mark Goodman and Lee Heider will follow the leadership of the Republican Party and promise to listen to their constituency, unlike the senator and representative they are running against.

I agree that water issues and road issues are important to us, but so are small businesses, agriculture, alternate energy methods, education, and the health and welfare of our fellow citizens. Mark and Lee’s votes will not continually cancel the votes by those who sit in the Senate and House with them. These two proven, conservative leaders believe in our Constitution and the ideals so crucial to grass-roots America.

Mark Goodman and Lee Heider are local businessmen and know the current struggles facing many of us. Both Mark and Lee will be the best choice for small business and for those who are the working backbone of America. They have lived the American dream and know that hard work, integrity and sound principles will eliminate the destructive path our nation is being led down. They will help restore jobs and growth for Idaho.

Please vote Tuesday, May 25, for state Senate candidate Lee Heider and state Representative candidate Mark Goodman. Encourage your friends to vote for two proactive advocates for our area and the great state of Idaho.

Why didn’t Simpson vote no on war?

Why can’t we cross party lines?

Congressman Mike Simpson says he was “... fighting to protect America’s financial security by voting no on President Obama’s stimulus, health care and other spending excesses.” Why, then, did he not say no to President Bush’s decision to bomb and invade Iraq?

There is no cost comparison, even if we don’t talk about human lives?

Heider a legitimate, sincere individual

I do not live in District 24, but I have known Lee Heider for approximately two years and have found him to be a very honest and upright person of the highest degree. He is a very legitimate and sincere person. I believe he will serve the people of District 24 very well in the Senate. I would recommend him to anyone.

Lee is a very intellectual and concerned person. He will be dedicated to any matter in which he may be involved. I would be proud to have Lee represent me if I did indeed live in District 24.

Your vote for Lee Heider would be a vote in the right direction for the Legislature.

Mike Mathews is a man of his word

A message for Twin Falls Precinct 17 voters: On May 25, please vote for Mike Mathews. Mike is a candidate for precinct committeeman and has shown himself to be a dedicated, effective and tireless worker on behalf of Republicans. Many of you know Mike as director of the regional office of Sen. James Risch and his years of service as Twin Falls County GOP chairman.

If your polling place is Valley Christian Church, you are in Precinct 17. If it is your desire to strengthen the conservative cause, Mike Mathews is your man. I have known and worked alongside Mike for many years and many campaigns. He is a man of his word and would appreciate your vote.

It takes honest man to be assessor; elect Davis

The county assessor is responsible for managing huge amounts of information concerning property ownership and location, business type and application, comparable values, historical evolution, probable future potential and patterns of future county growth. It takes an honest man or woman to keep personal interest at bay while serving such a vital role in the community.

Dwight Davis is a candidate of established character and professional competency. He demonstrates curiosity, clear understanding, uncommon memory and broad practical experience. He is a political conservative, apparent from personal conversation and awareness of who in the community have posted his political candidacy signs. He will bring to this office fresh attitude, consistency, honesty, hard work, fairness and eagerness to listen.

Dwight’s service and leadership skills are made apparent by a long list of involvements: member of the Mini-Cassia Joint Jail Committee, member and president of the United Electric Board of Directors, board member of the Cassia Health Care Foundation, vice president and board member of the Idaho Irrigation Equipment Association, active in Cassia County School District youth activities and active in and supportive of church and community events.

Dwight Davis is a solutions kind of guy. He identifies problems and, instead of complaining, he goes to work to fix what’s broken. He has broad management and sales experience. He knows the community well.

Dwight Davis is our candidate for Cassia County assessor. He will get our votes in the primary election on May 25. I hope he will get yours too.

Keep open primaries by voting for Smith, Coiner

I am writing this letter in support of the re-elections of Leon Smith to the Idaho House of Representatives and Chuck Coiner to the Idaho Senate from District 24, which includes most of Twin Falls.

As a member of the American Independent Movement, I am very interested in retaining my right to vote in the Idaho primary, that it not be changed or limited but remain the same as it currently is. I like to be able to choose which ballot, Republican or Democratic, I want to vote on. Many Idahoans I know want to be able to vote for the person — not the party. It has been my philosophy that the party, Democrat or Republican, is not as important as the person running.

As history has shown, both parties have had great and poor leaders. Both parties have had their share of graft and corruption as well as great statesmen. This being my observation over many election cycles, I cherish my right to choose people over parties, so I favor open primaries as we now have. I am not alone in this thinking as Gov. Otter and Secretary of State Ysursa both support keeping the primary open. Both Rep. Leon Smith and Sen. Chuck Coiner also support keeping the Idaho primary open. Opponents of both Smith and Coiner say they support closed primaries, thereby restricting primary voting by independent voters like me.

For this reason, I urge you to vote to re-elect Rep. Leon Smith and Sen. Chuck Coiner on May 25.

Ursenbach is the clear choice for commissioner

After listening to the campaign speeches of the three candidates for County Commissioner District 2, it is abundantly clear that Roger Ursenbach is the best candidate. He has managerial experience; he was a successful executive for several large hi-tech companies. As management in these companies, he was responsible for overseeing budgets that were larger than Twin Falls’ own budget of $36 million. He has a computer consulting business that assists businesses in being more efficient and profitable.

During candidate questioning, Ursenbach was asked where farming fits into his “hi-tech” mentality; the feeling of some in the room was that he is a big city slicker, coming to take over the county. This is not so. Mr. Ursenbach was raised on a farm and lived in Idaho as a child and moved back to Idaho several years ago. He views farming as a business as well and would address the farmer’s concerns.

Of the three candidates, Mr. Ursenbach was the most well-spoken and educated. He has many good ideas for this county; he believes government should be smaller and limited; he believes in fiscal responsibility and accountability; he believes in less regulation and lower taxes. Mr. Ursenbach’s experience, education and business approach are all assets that will help our county during these tough economic times.

I am voting for Roger Ursenbach; he is a proven leader that is ready to go to work.

Smith committed to education, economy

Leon Smith — a valued representative.

Politically, our state of Idaho, not unlike the country, is experiencing some deep concerns and uncertainties. The ability to understand and provide structure for solutions to critical issues is vital — an ability Leon Smith, your present District 24 representative, has repeatedly proven himself to have. He knows the value of investigation, interactive listening, research and commitment to legislative issues.

Leon Smith, as the representative for District 24, has continuously shown himself to be the people’s advocate. He is committed to improving educational funding and the economy of our state. His broad experience, education, integrity and dedication, as well as his ability to both understand and work through difficult situations with legislative matters, are truly commendable. He is an integral community supporter as his service as mayor and councilman can attest.

Leon is focused on being your representative and will provide insightful consideration of each legislative issue so as to benefit Idaho and its citizens.

When you make a purchase, it is common sense to read the label. When you vote to elect your representatives, it also common sense to “read the label” concerning their qualifications.

Your vote on May 25 to re-elect Leon Smith as your District 24 representative is a vote to keep an intelligent, sincere, dedicated and concerned individual working for you and for Idaho.

Coiner has method for dealing with tough issues in Idaho

There are some very compelling reasons why we need to return Chuck Coiner to the Idaho Senate. Tough issues confront us: education, the economy, water use and management, and the environment.

Chuck has a very effective approach to representation: he listens, he asks questions, he listens, he asks more questions, he thinks, and then he persists on an issue until he gets to the bottom of it.

He is not divisive. He is not interested in pitting one group against the other. He knows that time is short and resources are scarce. He spends his time and energies wisely.

I don’t want Chuck to waste valuable legislative time trying to protect my marriage or my neighbor’s marriage. It’s none of his business and he knows it. I’ll protect my own marriage.

He is a simple but courageous man. He does not follow the herd simply because of a brand on their backsides. He thinks for the common good and conducts himself as if future generations depend on the decency, stewardship and common sense we embrace today.

Return Chuck Coiner to the Idaho Senate. There is too much at stake not to.

Leasing is the best option for Jerome jail

I have been watching the debate on the proposed lease/purchase project in the media concerning the Jerome jail and checking the numbers myself. It appears everyone says we need a new jail but expresses a concern about the repayment of the money to build it.

Lease or bond. I appreciate the commissioners’ due diligence and reasoning for the lease proposal. From the figures that have been shown and the current economic climate, I agree with the lease. We need a new jail now, but we don’t need to raise our taxes now.

If Gooding thought it was a good idea to build a jail and rent beds in its county, why is it not a good idea in Jerome? If Gooding’s business plan was valid, what’s wrong with the same business plan in Jerome?

Several other questions have been repeated as well. Where will it be built? They say the preferred site is located next to the state police and WOW logistics in southern Jerome. What will it look like? Pictures shown display a building that blends into almost any city’s aesthetics and usually is not even recognizable as a jail. Is the cost known? The ballot question limits the amount the commissioners can spend. How was this amount arrived at? Through the study performed by the consultants and the sheriff’s office. What does the floor plan look like? Similar to Jefferson County’s that was built three to four years ago and has been proven to work with expansion capabilities built in for future needs.

These are all reasons why I am voting yes and urging you to do the same.

LAURIE LICKLEY

Voters need to pass jail initiative now

The voters should pass the new jail initiative the county commissioners have proposed for the following reasons:

This is the time when interest rates are the lowest because of the economic downturn.

Contractors are needing the work and will bid the project competitively.

Building materials are cheaper in comparison to past years.

The commissioners’ proposal will not raise our taxes in the county.

The contractors will hire people who are unemployed and need a job at this time.

I have confidence in the commissioners we have to drive a hard bargain.

I am a farmer, land owner and taxpayer in Jerome County and I don’t like taxes, but we can approve the lease arrangement now or pay probably twice as much in the future. Building the new jail now is just good business.

Mills has shown true leadership, service

I support Leon Mills for County Commissioner District 2.

Leon was born and raised in Twin Falls County. He has shown true leadership as a Republican precinct committeeman for the past 12 years. He has been loyal to the conservative values of the Republican Party. I know Mr. Mills will make wise decisions based on what’s best for the people in Twin Falls County. He will listen to what the people have to say and will respond with respect and accountability.

My experience with Leon has been with Lamb-Weston, where he has worked since 1990. In our livestock feeding operation, Leon has been dependable, adaptive and innovative for the last 17 years. Anyone who knows Leon knows he is always willing to serve others. He has volunteered in our community for many years. For more than 10 years, he has worked with the LambWeston french fry booth, raising money for our local schools and non-profit organizations.

Leon especially cares about the elderly in our community — he has been a volunteer for Interfaith Caregivers for the past 15 years. Leon cares about his community and has the leadership skills to be a great county commissioner.

Carter Killinger is a bright and personable individual. He will make an outstanding Republican precinct committeeman for Filer Precinct 1.

Carter was born in and spent most of his life in Twin Falls County. He is married to a lovely lady, who agrees with him in his position of addressing public issues. His family moved out of state for a while to find work; however, they moved back to Filer where he graduated from Filer High School.

Mr. Killinger is in the automotive repair and parts business. He has given work to and encouraged numerous Idaho felons on work release to advance their career opportunities, helping them ease back into society as productive citizens.

Carter Killinger will work hard to elect Republicans that will reduce immigration and stop all government subsidies to illegal aliens, defend America’s moral values, keep God in the Pledge of Allegiance, and stop reckless spending, including foreign aid, and take care of America’s domestic needs.

The local Republican Party needs more people like Carter Killinger. He will be an asset to the GOP Central Committee. Primary election voting is Tuesday, May 25. Please consider voting Carter Killinger for Filer Precinct 1.

Simpson avoids taking real efforts against deficit spending

In a recent mailer, U.S. Rep. Simpson claims he is working to reduce the deficit and decrease the debt by supporting passage of a constitutional amendment to require Congress to balance the federal budget. Congress, from time-to-time, considers a hoax called a “Balanced Budget Amendment” to the United States Constitution. This proposed amendment is so equivocal in its provisions as to eliminate any hope of achieving the stated objective.

Over the last 10 years, Mr. Simpson has been engaging in planned, massive deficit financing. He should oppose the adoption of the weasel-worded balanced budget amendment and call upon the president and Congress to immediately balance the current budget and all future budgets. The best thing Mr. Simpson could do to reduce the deficit is to stop his repeated support for foreign aid.

For the last 10 years, Mr. Simpson has engaged in the greatest international giveaway program ever conceived by man and is now spending billions of dollars each year to aid foreign nations. There is no constitutional basis for foreign aid. These expenditures have won us no friends and constitute a major drain on the resources of our taxpayers.

There is hope. Chick Heilesen, if elected, wants to end all foreign aid and replace it with voluntary donations by citizens to needy countries via the embassies.

Please vote Tuesday, May 25. Thank you!

Record of service, solid voting record behind Smith, while Coiner votes liberal

I support the return of Leon Smith as state representative in District 24. Rep. Smith is backed by long service and a solid voting record.

I do not support the reelection of Chuck Coiner for Senate in District 24. While campaigning as a conservative and a water rights expert, Sen. Coiner has consistently voted as a liberal and on the losing side of important bills. Sen. Coiner voted against the Marriage Amendment HJR 2 and against S1082 Parental Consent for Underage Abortions. Sen. Coiner voted against S1172 English as the Official Language. While advertising himself a businessman, Sen. Coiner voted against H391 Opposing Federal Individual Health Care Mandate. Sen. Coiner was a pivotal vote on the defeat of SIR 106, the Right to Fish and Hunt. Sen. Coiner voted against the Education Bill H374, which passed by a large majority.

I support Lee Heider to replace Sen. Coiner. Lee Heider is a conservative with no hidden agenda. You will like his voting record.

Suter best qualified as commissioner

On May 25, Jerome County will head to the polls once again. While the primary elections may not be the final say in the 2010 elections, they do set the stage for our future decision. With three Republican choices for Jerome County commissioner, there is a big assessment to make.

A lifelong resident of Jerome, business owner and member of the planning and zoning committee starts to describe one of the candidates on this list. According Doug Suter, there was no reason to just sit back and complain about how the county was being run if you are not willing to change it. With a strong background in agriculture, Doug is qualified to help structure policies that promote economic growth without compromising the agriculture communities. He has also evaluated the county's monetary options.

Doug sees the building of a new Jerome County jail as a positive. No longer will money leave the budget to pay others to house our inmates. Instead, the ability for lease space can make this investment work for the county's residents. Additionally, tax breaks are not on the list for businesses. He feels such cuts would only put more financial strain on the rest of the taxpayers.

We can count on Doug Suter to make common sense decisions to promote the well being of Jerome County.

How can you find the true conservatives?

How can you find true conservatives to replace the fakes we've elected in the past? Go to www.RestoreTwinFallsGOP.com. Or call 944-3305. You will find what you need to know about the current crop of candidates. Look for people who believe in smaller government, keeping spending under control, lower taxation of working people and maximum personal liberty.

We used to be Republicans. The party left us behind as its politicians moved it farther and farther left. We've been feeling disenfranchised for years. Each year the party became more and more in step with the socialists in the Democrat Party. The ersatz Republicans who've long been in control of Idaho's Republican Party seem uninterested in protecting the republic. They seek merely to slow the growth of the federal government with no interest in downsizing it. Many seem interested mainly in their own re-election.

Fortunately there's now a strong movement in Idaho, even in Twin Falls County, to elect real conservatives as precinct leaders and to elect real statesmen to state government positions. We urgently need precinct leaders who are interested in keeping the Idaho Republican Party true to its conservative principles. Find out who those leaders are by visiting www.RestoreTwinFallsGOP.com or calling 944-3305 for information and a sample ballot.. And be sure you take the time to vote May 25, Republican primary ballot.

Closing primary will limit participation

“Oh beautiful for spacious skies ... above the fruited plain.” America, oh America! What is on your fruited plain?

We have grown more than fruits, vegetables and grains. We have grown seeds of greed and corruption, of fear and hate, of partisan politics and non-cooperation, of despair and apathy, of dishonesty and non-disclosure of special interest: the fruits of which have curtailed our freedoms.

We are about to give up another huge freedom if we don't pay attention. A group of Republicans want to close the primary election — the one which selects candidates to run in the November General Election. Then only registered Republicans will select the candidates.

Currently, anyone can vote in the primary election as long as they register to vote.

America's strength has always been predicated and still is in the diversity of ideas within her people and their ability to collectively put these ideas into tenets that work for all. Closing the primary will limit participation in the candidate selection process, excluding many voices (ideas).

I strongly urge the reelection of Rep. Leon Smith and Sen. Chuck Coiner because they are strong supporters of keeping the primary election — the candidate selection process — open to all voters. They are strong men who stand up for all of us rather than just those who have special agendas. Let those who want to lead be the servants of all! As I see, it is leaders' duty to provide opportunities for all to participate in government at all levels.

Please vote for Smith and Coiner so “... that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the Earth” (Abraham Lincoln).

I also ask the citizens in Twin Falls Precinct No. 11 to re-elect me, Ranee Haight, as your precinct committee Person.

Hatfield wants transparency of state's finances

Idaho's incumbent state controller was elected in 2006. While serving her current four-year term, the controller's budget has increased 25 percent; this expansion of government has not brought a benefit to the citizens of Idaho.

Todd Hatfield is running for state controller in the May 25 Republican primary. He says, “The incumbent's record shows a lack of conservative management and voting. I am a conservative, hold a degree in accounting and believe in limited government as per the Idaho Republican Party platform.”

Instead of posting the state's checkbook online for the public to review (as many states around the country have done) the incumbent's lack of action in this area indicates her unwillingness to promote the needed transparency of the state's finances.

The state controller helps manage the School Permanent Endowment Fund, of which 70 percent of venue is derived from state timber sales. The current controller's record shows 4,000 lost jobs in Idaho's wood-producing sector due to federal and state regulations, 14 percent to 24 percent unemployment in rural Idaho counties and $360 million of the school endowment money gambled away in equity markets through managers such as JP Morgan and Goldman Sachs, only to be replaced with future tax dollars through bailout money. You, the taxpayer, paid twice this year for schools!

Todd Hatfield says we must stop investing the School Endowment Fund in risky equity markets. No wonder the incumbent turned down the debate on Idaho Public Television. Those seeking office owe the electorate their full participation in discussion. Mr. Hatfield has been endorsed by Idaho Chooses Life, true conservative legislators throughout Idaho, and I encourage your readers to also vote for Todd Hatfield for state controller.

Coiner's voting record doesn't reflect those of constituents

Another primary, another opportunity for us to evaluate the performance of our legislators and contrast their performance with our beliefs, morals and positions.

District 24 has the rare opportunity of a choice on May 25. We have an opportunity to determine what we want our future in Idaho to look like for ourselves, our children and grandchildren. District 24 is represented by Sen. Coiner. During the past five sessions, has Sen. Coiner voted the morals and values of the majority of his constituents or the morals and values of a liberal Democrat? You decide.

Sen. Coiner has twice voted against marriage protection (2005, SJR101; 2006, HJR2), even though 70 percent of the Idaho electorate voted in favor of the Marriage Protection Act. While the country is steadily coming to grips with the devastating consequences of abortion on demand, Sen. Coiner has twice voted against requiring parental consent before Planned Parenthood performs abortions on minor children (2007, SB1082; 2005, HB351). Sen. Coiner has also refused to protect girls and women from coerced abortions (2008, HB654). He has even opposed legislation giving women a right to make an informed decision by having the right to see an ultrasound of the so-called “blob of tissue” before the abortion so that the woman can decide for herself whether she sees a human being or something else (2007, HB248).

This year, Sen. Coiner voted against the conscience protection bill (2010, SB1353) that protects our medical professionals, including doctors and pharmacists, from having to perform abortions or dispense pills that induce abortions when it is contrary to their conscience. He also voted no on the Health Freedom Act (HB391) which was an Idaho response to Obamacare.

I urge you to explore the positions of Lee Heider and decide which of these two candidates will truly represent the people of District 24.

Schouten will keep county's best interests at heart

Jim Schouten will make the best county commissioner. He is the kind of person who will keep the county's best interests at heart. Jim has a mind of his own and won't just “go with the flow” to make other people happy.

He is fiscally responsible. Jimbo is a true conservative. He has owned and successfully operated Jimbo's Drywall and More since 1993. He was raised on a dairy farm where milking cows was a way of life. His dad was in the construction trade and when Jim came to Idaho in 1986, that's what he wanted to do, too.

I believe that Jimbo will be the best one for the job of county commissioner. Jimbo is committed to community service. It started with our children in school where he served as parent-teacher organization president all the way up to now he serves the city of Twin Falls by sitting on the planning and zoning board.

Please join me in voting for Jimbo on May 25.

Smith, Coiner need to face term limits

Greetings, and God bless. A seat in the Idaho Legislature requires an oath to “... support the Constitution of the United States and the Constitution of the state of Idaho ...” These documents embody the foundational principles of American government; an understanding of them is essential to fulfilling that oath. Not all office-holders possess that understanding. Examine Senate Bill 1148, which would have allowed the virtually limitless proliferation of liquor licenses in Idaho by letting local governments issue them at will. In 2009, Rep. Smith and Sen. Coiner voted to allow this to happen.

Article III, Section 26 of the Idaho Constitution shows that, while the people of Idaho delegated to the Legislature the “... full power and authority to permit, control and regulate ... intoxicating liquors ...,” nowhere have they granted the authority to farm that out to local governments. It is solely a state responsibility, so a vote for SB1148 was a vote to move government off its foundation.

This disregard for foundational principles was rationalized with the false hope of increased state revenue from liquor sales, but every dollar gained from such sales costs $8 in medical and legal expenses, property damage, plus increased human suffering.

Voting for SB1148 demonstrated further disregard for constitutional principles by its supporters. The desired revenue increase necessarily requires increased alcohol consumption and its resulting social destruction. Contrast that with Article III, Section 24 of Idaho's Constitution: “The first concern of all good government is the virtue and sobriety of the people, and the purity of the home. The legislature should further all wise and well directed efforts for the promotion of temperance and morality.”

Rusty Satterwhite and Lee Heider are conservative, constitutionally minded alternatives to Rep. Smith and Sen. Coiner. May 25 and the phrase “term limits” come to mind.

WILLIAM TUTTLE

(Editor's note: Senate Bill 1148, proposed by Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter on the basis of a recommendation from a task force he appointed, proposed getting the state out of issuing new liquor-by-the-drink licenses, while grandfathering state licenses and preserving their existing rights to transferability. The legislation would have allowed cities and counties to issue nontransferable liquor-by-the-drink licenses, and set up a regulatory framework for servers dealing with underage and obviously intoxicated customers. The legislation passed the Senate 23-12 on March 26, 2009, and failed in the House 42-28.)

Think carefully before casting your vote

Soon, Republican primary voters will give their vote to a politician who claims to represent them. In this case, either Mr. Coiner or Mr. Heider as senator. This letter does not suggest how you should feel about any issue, it only reports their votes and positions so you can see for yourself who will represent you.

Mr. Coiner voted against Idaho citizens' right to hunt, fish and trap and no on merit pay for teachers. He voted no on a parent having consent rights if their child seeks an abortion; yes on public employee pay raises during the recession and against the effort to stop national health care. He voted against a doctor's or nurse's right to refuse to provide a health procedure that violates their own conscience. He voted against English as the official language of Idaho and against tax reductions that would increase investment and job creation.

These votes are documented by the state and reported on line if you wish to look them up. If these votes reflect your feelings, Mr. Coiner deserves your support. If they do not, Mr. Heider takes the opposite view on each law and deserves your support.

Senators make law that controls you and I. We ought to be careful to vote for who will support your position behind closed doors in Boise and not just when making speeches.

LOUISIANA La. Gov. Jindal: Officials will not wait for approval to start building sand berms

ON BARATARIA BAY, La. — Louisiana Gov. Bobby Jindal says the state is not waiting for federal approval to begin building sand barriers to protect the coastline from the Gulf of Mexico oil spill.

Jindal's defiant comments Sunday came as oil pushed at least 12 miles into the heart of Louisiana's marshes. Two major pelican rookeries are now awash in crude.

Jindal made his remarks on a boat at the edge of one of the pelican nesting grounds. He and officials from several coastal parishes say the berms would close the door on the oil still pouring from a deepwater gusher about 50 miles off the coast.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is studying the environmental impacts from the emergency barrier proposal. The Corps didn't immediately respond to e-mails and telephone messages.

WASHINGTON Sweeping financial overhaul will change many rules, but loopholes could allow another crisis

WASHINGTON — The most sweeping changes to financial rules since the Great Depression might not prevent another crisis.

Experts say the financial regulatory bill approved by the Senate last week, and a similar bill that passed the House, include loopholes and gaps that weaken their impact. Many provisions depend on the effectiveness of regulatory agencies — the same agencies that failed to foresee the last crisis.

A big reason for the bill's limitations is that banks and industry groups lobbied against rules they felt would reduce their profit-making ability.

The financial sector's influence in Washington reflects its enormous donations and lobbying. Over the past two decades, it's given $2.3 billion to federal candidates. It's outdone every other industry in lobbying since 1998, having spent $3.8 billion.

UNITED KINGDOM Duchess of York Sarah Ferguson 'devastated' after tabloid paper records her in bribe sting

LONDON — Duchess of York Sarah Ferguson said Sunday she was "very sorry" for her lapse of judgment after she was recording apparently offering to sell access to her ex-husband Prince Andrew in return for 500,000 pounds ($724,000).

The duchess said in a statement that she had financial problems, but "that is no excuse for a serious lapse in judgment and I am very sorry that this has happened."

"I very deeply regret the situation and the embarrassment caused," she said.

The tabloid News of the World posted video on its website that appears to show Ferguson discussing payment terms. She is heard to say "500,000 pounds when you can, to me, open doors."

Asked if she was referring to the prince, she said: "Yeah."

FRANCE Thai film 'Uncle Boonmee' wins top Cannes honor; Binoche, Bardem earn acting awards

CANNES — The hypnotic Thai film "Uncle Boonmee Who Can Recall His Past Lives" won the top honor at the Cannes Film Festival on Sunday, while Academy Award winners Juliette Binoche and Javier Bardem earned acting honors.

"Uncle Boonmee," directed by Apichatpong Weerasethakul, traces the dreamlike final days of a man dying of kidney failure as the ghost of his dead wife returns to tend him and his long-lost son comes home in the form of a furry jungle spirit.

"I would like to thank my mother and my father, who 30 years ago, they took me to a little cinema in our little town, and I was so young and didn't know what it was on the screen," said Weerasethakul, who previously won the third-place jury prize at Cannes with his 2004 film "Tropical Malady." "I didn't know the concept of cinema. With this award, I think I know a little more what cinema is, but it still remains a mystery. I think this mystery keeps us coming back here and to share our world."

Binoche, an Oscar winner for "The English Patient," won best actress for the cryptic love story "Certified Copy," directed by past Palme d'Or winner Abbas Kiarostami.

During her speech, Binoche pleaded for the release of Kiarostami's countryman, detained Iranian filmmaker Jafar Panahi — who had been asked to be on this year's nine-member jury.

MASSACHUSETTS Police say cleaning man taken to hospital after becoming stuck in sausage machine

DANVERS — Police said a cleaning man was taken to a hospital after being sucked into a machine at a sausage-making company in Danvers. The accident happened Thursday night as the man was cleaning the vacuum-type machine that is used to season the meat at DiLigui Sausage Co. Police said the man's head and shoulders became stuck in the machine after it somehow activated while being cleaned.

Lt. Carole Germano told The Salem News that the man — whose name was not released — was freed from the machine and showed no obvious sign of trauma, but was taken to a hospital as a precaution.

The Occupational Safety and Health Administration is investigating the mishap.

CALIFORNIA Jose Lima, former major league pitcher who won 21 games in 1999, dies at 37

LOS ANGELES — Jose Lima, the energetic All-Star right-hander who was a 21-game winner and dubbed his outings on and off the mound as "Lima Time," died Sunday, the Los Angeles Dodgers said. He was 37.

Lima, who won 13 games with the Dodgers in 2004, died of an apparent heart attack, according to the Aguilas Cibaenas, a winter ball team that Lima had played for in the Dominican Republic.

"Lima was an exceptional man. This is a great loss for Dominican baseball and the country," team president Winston Llenas said.

Lima posted his best season in 1999 when he was selected to the All-Star game as a Houston Astro. He went 21-10 in 35 starts with a 3.58 ERA for the NL Central champions.

"It saddened me greatly to hear of Jose's passing," Astros owner Drayton McLane said. "He was truly a gifted person both on the field and off of it. He could dance, he could sing, but his best gift of all was that he was an extremely happy person. He just lit up our clubhouse with his personality, which was his greatest asset. Jose was not shortchanged in life in any way. He lived life to the fullest every day."

Iceland volcano going quiet, but could stir again

LONDON (AP) — There is very little activity at the Eyjafjallajökull volcano, Icelandic officials and scientists said Sunday, but it is too early to say whether the eruption that has disrupted global air travel is over.

Iceland's Meteorological Office said "the eruption activity is minimal." Civil Protection Agency official Iris Marelisdottir said some steam was coming out of the volcano, but no ash.

"Now we can only wait and see," she said. "It's too early to say this is over, but at the moment it is quiet."

A report by Met Office and University of Iceland scientists classed the eruption as "dormant"

Sunday. They said the level of seismic activity was decreasing and was near that recorded before the eruption began last month.

Eyjafjallajökull erupted April 14 for the first time in nearly two centuries.

Danger to planes from the volcanic ash plume led most northern European countries to shut their airspace April 15-20, grounding an estimated 10 million travelers worldwide.

Smaller-scale disruptions have continued since then, as the volcano produced more ash.

The last time the volcano awoke, in 1821, it erupted on and off for almost two years.

Top Shiite cleric in Iraq calls for unity

BAGHDAD (AP) — The leader of the Sunni-backed coalition that won the most seats in Iraq's March election said the country's most influential Shiite cleric assured him in a meeting Sunday that no group would be excluded from the new government.

There are concerns that Sunnis will be largely excluded after the two Shiite blocs that came in second and third in the parliamentary vote formed an alliance likely to lead to another Shiite-dominated government, much like the current one. The Iraqiya coalition, led by former Prime Minister Ayad Allawi, is not part of the alliance.

Allawi met Grand Ayatollah Ali al-Sistani in the holy city of Najaf, where the cleric lives. He said al-Sistani said the next government should serve without "excluding and marginalizing any group," an apparent reference to minority Sunnis who have felt politically sidelined since 2003.

"Al-Sistani stressed national unity and ... the importance of forming the government as soon as possible," Allawi, a secular Shiite, told reporters after the meeting.

Allawi's list won 91 of 325 seats to al-Maliki's 89. For either to form a majority government, they need to partner with other parties.

Though more than two months have passed since the March 7 vote, the formation of the government has been slowed by a number of challenges by Prime Minister Nouri al-Maliki, who lost to Allawi by two seats. Al-Maliki demanded a recount, but it did not change the final result.

Jamaica: Gunfire, fire bombs in barricaded slum

By David McFadden
Associated Press writer

KINGSTON, Jamaica — Masked men torched a police station and traded gunfire with security forces in a barricaded slum in Jamaica's capital Sunday, prompting the government to declare a state of emergency.

Sporadic gunshots rang out in gritty West Kingston where defiant supporters of Christopher "Dudus" Coke, a Jamaican "don" who is widely suspected of controlling gunmen in the Tivoli Gardens neighborhood, have transformed the area into a virtual fortress cut off by trashed cars and barbed wire.

In barricaded Hannah Town, close to Tivoli Gardens, black smoke spiraled into the sky from a police station set aflame by molotov cocktails.

Officers fled the burning station in impoverished West Kingston, where a 2001 standoff between gunmen and security forces killed 25 civilians, as well as a soldier and a constable.

Jamaican media have reported just two wounded so far: a police officer and a civilian, both hit by gunfire.

Sunday's violence erupted following a week of ever-higher tensions in the capital over the possible extradition of Coke to the United States on drug and arms-trafficking charges.

After Prime Minister Bruce Golding reversed his long-standing refusal to extradite Coke, the alleged kingpin's supporters began barricading the streets and preparing for a fight.

Earlier Sunday, police urged the neighborhood boss to surrender, calling the heavy barricades encircling his slum stronghold a sign of "cowardice."

The U.S., Canada and Britain issued

"Clearly the government has to take a strong hand, but they must also tread very, very wisely so people are not hurt. But a lot of these guys in Tivoli Gardens, they are really pretty desperate."

— Rev. Renard White, a leader of a Justice Ministry peace initiative that works in Jamaica's troubled communities travel alerts on Friday warning of possible violence and unrest in Jamaica. Most islanders have been steering clear of downtown Kingston entirely.

The state of public emergency, limited to the parishes of Kingston and St. Andrew, will be in effect for one month unless extended or revoked by lawmakers, the government said.

Coke is described as one of the world's most dangerous drug lords by the U.S. Justice Department. He has ties of loyalty to the ruling Jamaica Labour Party and holds significant sway over the West Kingston area represented in Parliament by Golding, who stalled Coke's extradition request for months with claims that the U.S. indictment relied on illegal wiretap evidence.

Golding's fight against the extradition strained relations with Washington, which questioned the Caribbean country's reliability as an ally in the fight against drugs. His handling of the matter, particularly his hiring of a U.S. firm to lobby Washington to drop the extradition request, provoked an outcry that threatened his political career.

Coke, who typically avoids the limelight, has remained silent. He faces life in prison if convicted on charges filed against him in New York.

Jamaica's political history is intertwined with the street gangs the two main parties helped organize — and some say armed — in Kingston's poor neighborhoods in the late 1970s and 1980s. The gangs controlled the streets and intimidated voters at election time. In recent years political violence has waned, and many of the killings in Kingston now are blamed on the active drug and extortion trade.

But the Rev. Renard White, a leader of a Justice Ministry peace initiative that works in Jamaica's troubled communities, said Coke is a strongman who wields "enormous power" and whose followers are ready for violence if they think it is in his best interest.

"Clearly the government has to take a strong hand, but they must also tread very, very wisely so people are not hurt," White said. "But a lot of these guys in Tivoli Gardens, they are really pretty desperate."

Coke was born into Jamaica's gangland. His father was the leader of the notorious Shower Posse gang, a cocaine-trafficking band with agents in Jamaica and the United States that began operating in the 1980s and was named for its members' tendency to spray victims with bullets.

The son took over from the father, and expanded the gang into selling marijuana and crack cocaine in the New York area and elsewhere, U.S. authorities allege.

Lawyers for Coke — who in addition to "Dudus" is also known as "Small Man" and "President" — have challenged his extradition in Jamaica's Supreme Court.

Jeanne Meyer, 70, and her flight instructor, Sean Chuma with Snake River Skydiving, talk about her first experience jumping out of a plane near Joslin Field on May 15.

Never too late to get fit

For her 70th birthday, Jeanne Meyer, opted for a tandem skydive. She is one of many who are trying new active pursuits in their senior years.

Meyer enters the plane that she soon would be jumping from.

Seniors should take it slow when starting a new exercise program, however

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

Jeanne Meyer didn't celebrate her 70th birthday in January with a trip to the bingo parlor.

Instead, she planned a tandem skydive.

"I've always thought about it, dreamed about it," the Twin Falls woman said on May 14, the day before her leap.

To prepare for the jump, Meyer started a new workout routine, including jumps and squats to make sure her knees were ready for the landing.

While the addition to her workout wasn't a huge stretch for the already active woman, other seniors may need to make some adjustments, depending on their physical abilities. But whether seniors are adding a workout routine to their regimen or are picking up dumbbells for the first time ever, it's never too late to get fit, said personal trainer Rayette Wright of Impact Athletic in Burley.

Seniors who exercise can improve balance, bone density, coordination and strength. And Joe Ruffing of Jerome said Tai Chi helped him reduce Parkinsons disease symptoms.

There are, of course, some adjustments for older exercisers, said Eric Snow, fitness director at Twin Falls YMCA.

Among suggestions to keep in mind: keep it slow and steady, and give the body a chance to adapt. Older bodies don't adjust to new routines as quickly as younger bodies, so seniors should pace themselves and focus more on form and less on intensity or duration, Snow said.

Also, some seniors should avoid exercises that change their center of balance, Snow said. That includes side lunges or extending

Report: Stress and worry ebb, happiness grows after 50

By Melissa Healy
Los Angeles Times

Imagine that life were a board game — let's call it, "Are We There Yet?"

The objective of the game — "getting there" — could be to attain happiness and even, say, wisdom (a very new-age board game). It could also be to avoid the pitfalls of illness and despair and reach the end of a long and healthy life (a board game for the slightly more worry-prone).

No matter which objective you choose, the game will look about the same: According to a study published Monday in the Proceedings of the National Academy of Sciences, those two endpoints — happiness and long life — pretty much follow the same course. Happiness — maybe even wisdom — grows as you pass midlife and get closer to the end.

How'd they figure this out? In a 2008 survey underwritten by the Healthways Inc., the Gallup

Organization asked 355,344 Americans from 18 to 84 not only to rate their general level of well-being but also the levels of happiness, enjoyment, stress, worry, sadness and anger they had felt the previous day. Respondents' well-being showed a clear pattern across the age span: for men, happiness and enjoyment hit a low point, on average, somewhere in their 40s, and women's nadir of happiness and enjoyment came between 50 and 53. From there, a significant upward turn began, and continued to improve into the octogenarian years.

There were lots of chutes and ladders along the way. Players — er, respondents — had to work their way past the heart-pounding peak of stress in their mid-20s, and endure declining but continued stress through their 30s and 40s. But after about 50, stress took a deep plunge. High levels of worry threatened to impede forward progress for men in the 46-49 years and peak for women at 50-53, but then declined steadily. Anger burned hottest at 18-21, stayed pretty high into the early 40s, when a sudden explosion of rage could cause a loss of turn. Then, it steadily declined.

We all know women live longer, but this survey makes clear it's a little harder on them than it is on men. At all ages, their reported levels of "enjoyment" are lower than men's. At all ages, their levels of stress and worry are significantly higher than those of men. At all ages, their reported sadness is higher than men's. Only their levels of anger were the equal of men's throughout the lifespan.

Nancy Snyderman’s new book weeds out dieting

By Jan Jarvis
McClatchy Newspapers

Dr. Nancy Snyderman’s new book, “Diet Myths That Keep Us Fat” (Crown, $25), is dedicated to everyone who is still battling that last 5 to 50 pounds.

That’s just about everybody, isn’t it?

The book sorts through all the myths we’ve heard over the years and lists 101 truths that will set the record straight and help people shed those extra pounds permanently.

Snyderman calls herself a veteran of the diet wars, having binged, skipped meals and starved herself. She knows there’s no quick fix. But her medical background combined with her personal battle and lots of research has uncovered plenty of little things that could add up to weight loss.

Knowing what really can help and what is a waste of time can go a long way toward getting your waist in summer-worthy shape pronto.

Here’s the truth about dieting, according to Snyderman.

Truth: Drinking green tea will make you lose weight.

This does work, but you have to drink 4 to 6 cups of green tea per day to burn about 80 calories. That’s not enough to burn even a pound — to do that you’ll have to burn 3,500 calories. But it can boost your metabolism and aid in weight loss.

Truth: Blotting a pizza will soak up the fat.

Yes and no. No napkin can sop up all that fat floating on the top of your pepperoni pizza, but a quick swipe with a napkin can take 45 calories and 5 grams of fat off a medium slice.

Even better, switching from a deep dish piece to a thin crust can slash 200 calories off, making it well worth the effort.

Truth: Popping a painkiller and lifting weights builds muscle in the quads.

In a three-month study of adults ages 60 to 78, those who lifted weights regularly and took a daily dose of ibuprofen or acetaminophen got substantially greater results than those who took a placebo. The muscles of the medication users got 40 to 60 percent bigger and their strength also increased more than the nonusers. The explanation: These pills triggered changes within the muscle that enhanced the metabolic response to resistance exercise, allowing the body to add more new protein to muscle. If it works for the seniors, it could benefit other age groups as well.

Working overtime can be bad for the heart, study says

By Rosie Mestel
Los Angeles Times

Who didn’t suspect it? Working overtime, according to a long-term study, may do a number on the ticker.

The finding, which was published in the European Heart Journal, found that rates of angina, nonfatal heart attacks and death from heart-related conditions was 60 percent higher in people who worked at least three hours beyond “the normal, seven-hour day” compared with those who didn’t work that amount of overtime.

We won’t quibble about the “normal seven-hour day” bit. We’ll go on to explain that the data came from the Whitehall II study, a long-term investigation into the health of more than 10,000 London office workers who’ve been tracked since 1985. This particular study looked at 6,014 of these men and women, tracking their health for an average of 11 years.

The researchers, led by Marianna Virtanen of the Finnish Institute of Occupational Health and University College London, aren’t sure what the link is caused by: The study did find that overtime-workers tended to be type A people, who are more prone to heart disease, and to be more anxious and depressed. But did the overwork make them that way — or did they start out that way to begin with?

Maybe they were stressed out from all that work (chronic stress is bad for the heart). Perhaps they got less sleep (sleep deprivation seems to be linked to more and more health problems with each passing day). Maybe lonely people tend to work more overtime. Maybe chronic workers go to work when they’re sick instead of staying at home in bed, as they should.

Whatever the answer to the chicken-egg question that these population studies tend to leave one with, it might be good to play it safe and eschew wee-hour stints at the office in favor of taking a stroll or pulling a weed or two in the garden.

To the extent that we have control over these things, that is. The study notes that a) overtime work “has increased in recent years” and b) the U.S. is one of the countries that is well above average in this arena.

The scientists did note that having “decision latitude” in the workplace seemed to lessen the link between overtime and angina rates in the study. They say it’s possible — though it’s still an open question — that choosing to work long hours may not be as rough on the heart as having to work the hours against your will.

How to eat less at night

By Alison Johnson
Daily Press (Newport News, Va.)

Some successful dieters swear by a strategy of not eating after about 7 p.m., while nighttime bingeing is a major problem for many people. Here are tips from nutritionists:

Don't starve during the day. Never skip meals, and add in healthy snacks if you feel hungry. Otherwise, you're very likely to overeat at night.

Drink plenty of water. If you think you're hungry, you may actually just be thirsty. Before eating anything, have a glass of water or some unsweetened, decaffeinated tea. Avoid too much alcohol, however; it may make you crave junk food.

Set a regular dinnertime. Your body will come to expect food at that time. Focus on fiber — fruits, vegetables and whole grains — low-fat dairy and lean proteins to fill up.

Try making dinner your smallest meal. Some people do well by having their largest meal at breakfast, their second-largest at lunch and only a modest-sized dinner.

Brush your teeth. A clean mouth can curb an urge to eat more. Brush right after dinner or at least an hour before bedtime.

Chew sugarless gum. You can keep your mouth occupied without snacking. For many people, mint is the best flavor for curbing cravings.

Ban nighttime boredom. Late-night eating often is a result of having nothing else to do. Pick up a new hobby or activity, connect with your spouse, take a walk or call a friend.

Form new habits. Stop eating after a specific time — say, 7 or 8 p.m. — for a week. Then aim for a month. By that time, your new pattern should be set.

Go to bed. An earlier bedtime will keep you from eating, as well as control production of hunger-triggering hormones.

How to stop teeth grinding

By Alison Johnson
Daily Press (Newport News, Va.)

10 minutes can help relax those muscles.

Wear a mouth guard. Protective dental devices keep teeth from rubbing together at night. Custom-made guards — available from your dentist — are more expensive than over-the-counter varieties, but they're typically less likely to dislodge during grinding.

Cut back on alcohol and caffeine. Both can make a grinding problem worse, especially if you eat or drink either shortly before bedtime.

Train yourself not to clench. During the day, notice if you are pressing your teeth together and work to hold them apart even if your lips are sealed. Putting the tip of your tongue between your front teeth may help.

Talk to a doctor. People with a severe grinding problem may benefit from a temporary prescription for muscle relaxants or even surgery. Just be aware that medical interventions may have unpleasant side effects; relaxants, for example, can be addictive over time.

Roughly 20 percent of adults grind or clench their teeth to the point that they're at risk for permanent tooth and jaw damage, dentists say. Here are tips for protecting your pearly whites:

Recognize the symptoms. Those include flattened, worn or chipped teeth; jaw pain or tightness; gum sensitivity to hot or cold temperatures; and earaches and headaches, especially right after you wake up. Bedmates also may hear clicking or squeaking noises as you sleep. Call your dentist right away.

Work to relieve stress ... Regular meditation, deep breathing, exercise and enjoyable hobbies will help; some people also benefit from talking to a therapist.

... especially right before bedtime. Take a bath, listen to soft music, read a favorite book or drink a glass of warm milk. Holding a warm washcloth against your jaw for about

Sleep-deprived teens could pack on the pounds

By Jeannine Stein
Los Angeles Times

Obesity has been linked to several lifestyle factors, including sleep. Studies have shown a connection between lack of sleep and higher body mass index in adults and children, but that relationship may hold true for teens as well.

A new study presented at the annual meeting of the Pediatric Academic Societies showed an association between sleep deprivation and a higher BMI. Researchers looked at data on 723 adolescents, average age about 15, and gave each one an accelerometer, which measures movement. The study participants were also asked about their sleep habits on weekdays and weekends, how often they had problems sleeping, and calorie consumption. Overall, sleeping less was linked with a higher BMI. That relationship was seen in teen boys who had less sleep on weekdays and weekends. For girls, getting less sleep on weekends only was associated with a higher BMI. There was also a strong relationship between lack of sleep and higher BMIs for middle schoolers, but not for high schoolers.

"Sleep has long been recognized as an important health behavior," said Leslie Lytle, in a news release. "We are just beginning to recognize its relationship to overweight and obesity in children and adults alike." Lytle, who headed up the research, is from the Center for Child Health, Behavior and Development at Seattle Children's Research Institute.

MEDICAL MYSTERIES

When Kim Goodrich told her husband, Steve, about her loss of vision, he flew home immediately.

LINDA DAVIDSON/
Washington Post

She came within 48 hours of going blind

By Sandra G. Boodman
Special to The Washington Post

After dropping her 12-year-old daughter off at school one morning last October, Kim Goodrich was driving to her job as a hair-dresser while talking on her cellphone with her husband, who had recently arrived in San Francisco on a business trip. Her migraine, she told him, was getting worse and she worried that intense pain might require a trip later that day to the emergency room of the hospital she was driving past.

What she said next made Steve Goodrich's stomach drop: "I can't see out of my left eye. And something's weird with my right eye."

"Go to the hospital right now," he told her before hanging up to book the next flight home to Montgomery County, Md.

Each was frightened, but for different reasons. Kim Goodrich, 39, had tried to endure the pain associated with migraines that had become more debilitating. Her husband had a more immediate concern: Kim, who had emigrated from Vietnam at age 16, sometimes had difficulty understanding what was being said to her and communicating effectively. He served as her interpreter in medical situations. Now he was 3,000 miles away, powerless to help her.

Things were about to get much scarier. Doctors soon discovered that a symptom of Kim's migraines was the vital clue to a problem that nearly had catastrophic consequences.

The first migraine had come on suddenly. In October 2005 Goodrich had traveled with her family to New Hampshire when she developed a severe headache and pain in her eyes and began projectile vomiting. The next morning, after a good night's sleep, she seemed fine.

"We just chalked it up to a migraine," said Steve Goodrich, adding that his wife has long suffered from carsickness and occasional tension headaches.

Goodrich had noticed that her eyes sometimes seemed tired and achy at the end of the day; at times her vision wasn't clear. "Sometimes it seemed like I was walking through a smoke cloud," she recalled. An optometrist who checked her eyes in 2005 and 2006 told her nothing seemed amiss.

But early one morning in March 2008 Goodrich experienced such severe eye pain that her husband took her to a Maryland emergency room. "They hooked her up to monitors, saw that her pupils were dilated and said, 'She's on drugs,'" he recalled.

"She doesn't do drugs," he replied. The ER doctor gave her an injection of Dilaudid, a potent narcotic painkiller; within minutes the pain vanished and her eyesight returned to normal. She was discharged with a diagnosis of migraines.

A few weeks later the neurologist she consulted about the headache ordered a CT scan, which revealed no abnormality. He advised Goodrich to reduce stress and to take over-the-counter pain relievers if she felt an incipient migraine. "His advice was: 'Learn to relax,'" she recalled.

The migraines continued intermittently, increasingly accompanied by eye pain. In August 2008 she wound up back in the emergency room with symptoms identical to the first ER visit — and a similar resolution.

The couple assumed that the stress of a new job that required battling heavy traffic might be partly responsible. "My wife is someone who, no matter what is going on, maintains her routine," Steve Goodrich said. He suggested she see an ophthalmologist, but she didn't think it was necessary. "I figured, well, she's got to make her own judgments."

The events preceding her sudden loss of vision in October 2009 were not unusual, although she had never before lost her sight.

But her third ER visit was different: Doctors focused on her eyes, not her headache, and discovered that her intraocular pressure, the fluid pressure inside the eye, was dangerously high. They sent her straight to a nearby ophthalmologist, who quickly diagnosed the problem: narrow angle glaucoma, the most severe form of a disease that is uncommon in people younger than 40. In Goodrich's case, farsightedness and Asian ancestry were risk factors.

Steve Goodrich, up in the air on his way home, knew none of this. "I had no cellphone access. It was absolutely nerve-racking for me, and I knew how scary this was for her," he said.

The glaucoma was intermittent, which had made it harder to diagnose. Ophthalmologists believe it had been developing for at least four years, probably before the New Hampshire episode. But every time Goodrich's optometrist measured her eye pressure it was normal, and doctors did not check it on her first two ER visits. Nor did the neurologist consider it: He treated her for migraines.

Narrow angle, also known as angle closure, glaucoma is considered a medical emergency, according to the Merck Manual, one of the world's most widely used medical texts. It occurs when the fluid at the front of the eye becomes blocked by part of the iris, which causes an increase in eye pressure as well as severe pain, nausea and halos. The increased pressure can damage the optic nerve and reduce the visual field. Intermittent glaucoma can resolve spontaneously after several hours, usually after people fall asleep in a supine position.

The ophthalmologist later told the couple, who spent much of the next week in his office, that Kim's case was so advanced that she was within 48 hours of permanent blindness. He immediately began a series of treatments, which included various eyedrops and laser procedures; at one point he tried to drain the excess fluid using a needle inserted into her left eye, which was much worse than the right.

On Saturday, Oct. 24, Steve Goodrich said, he told the ophthalmologist that while he appreciated the doctor's efforts, it was time to call in a specialist. The ophthalmologist agreed and telephoned Howard Weiss, a Chevy Chase, Md., glaucoma expert, who met the couple in his office that afternoon.

Weiss administered stronger eyedrops and performed another laser procedure, which seemed to work. The couple left his office at 6 p.m. with plans to return the following day.

But five hours later, Weiss received an urgent call from Steve Goodrich. Kim was in the throes of severe eye pain and a bad headache. The eye surgeon sent them to the emergency room, where the pressure in her left eye was measured at 71. (Readings above 21 are considered elevated.) Weiss began assembling a team to perform emergency surgery.

After several middle-of-the-night conversations with the ER doctor, who managed to control the pain, stabilize her vision and send her home, Weiss called the Goodriches at 7:30 a.m. and told them to head to the Washington Hospital Center, where he operated on Kim, fashioning a new drainage channel in her left eye.

"She did great," Weiss said. Luckily, the pressure in her right eye seemed to be under control; Weiss planned to monitor it closely.

But at 6:30 Sunday night, Kim Goodrich called Weiss. Her right eye hurt, she had developed a headache and she was having trouble seeing.

Weiss was dumbfounded — and alarmed. "I was really nervous about the second eye being in trouble so fast," he recalled. Although he has treated thousands of glaucoma patients in his 24-year career, he had never heard of both eyes requiring such emergency surgery, which doctors are loath to perform because of the risks.

He called two of his partners — among them they had 65 years of experience — and "no one had ever seen anything like this," particularly in a patient so young. His search of the medical literature and textbooks turned up nothing, either.

He told the couple to meet him at 7:30 the next morning in his surgery center. There he removed the patch covering Goodrich's left eye and checked the pressure: To everyone's immense relief it had dropped to 19. But the right eye measured 51. A few hours later Weiss operated, creating a new drainage channel for the right eye.

Both surgeries were a success. Two weeks later, the pressure in both eyes was normal. Goodrich's headaches and eye pain disappeared, and her vision returned to normal.

"In her case the eye symptoms were actually more important than the headache," said Weiss, who doesn't expect the glaucoma to recur. "The headache was due to the eye pain," rather than the other way around.

Although Goodrich's experience is very rare, Weiss considers it a valuable reminder to patients and doctors alike: Eye pain should trigger a full ophthalmological work-up, particularly in farsighted patients.

Kim Goodrich said that she and her family feel deeply indebted to Weiss, who considers her case among the most rewarding of his career. Sometimes she thinks about what life would be like if she could not see her 12-year-old daughter grow up.

Preventing shoulder wear and tear

Overhand motions such as throwing a baseball or serving a tennis ball can damage the muscles that rotate and raise the arms. Some exercises that strengthen and protect the shoulder muscles:

Shoulder stretches

- Raise arm behind head to touch opposite shoulder
- Gently pull elbow downward with other hand
- Hold 15 seconds
- Repeat five times; switch sides

- Reach under chin to opposite shoulder
- Gently push arm back with other hand
- Hold 15 seconds
- Repeat five times; switch sides

Rotator cuff strengtheners

- Lift light weights outward, slightly forward
- With thumbs toward floor, slowly lower arms halfway, then return to shoulder level
- Repeat 10 times

- Lie on side with head supported
- Hold elbow against side, bend arm and lift light weight
- Slowly lower weight without moving elbow
- Repeat 10 times

Can you prevent Alzheimer's? NIH panel says no

By Kelly Brewington
The Baltimore Sun

Exercise, dietary supplements and programs that claim to boost your brain power have all been marketed as ways to stave off Alzheimer's. But there's no evidence that any of them work, an independent panel of experts convened by the National Institutes of Health concluded this spring.

So far, studies haven't been able to prove if any of these strategies work to prevent cognitive decline, the panel said. The news is discouraging, for certain. The unfortunate reality is so little is known about the illness and of the aging process in general, experts said.

Researchers have identified certain risk factors such as age and the association of a genetic variant of a protein that plays a role in cholesterol — apolipoprotein E — that have shown links to developing Alzheimer's. And experts hope to soon understand what role genetics play in the disease. But much more research is needed.

In addition, the panel found that chronic diseases such as diabetes and depression, and risk factors

"We wish we could tell people that taking a pill or doing a puzzle every day would prevent this terrible disease, but current evidence doesn't support this."

such as smoking are associated with increased risk of both Alzheimer's and cognitive decline. But it's unclear from studies if these factors actually cause Alzheimer's or are simply related.

What's clear, however, is that a review of the interventions used to prevent the disease shows little evidence that they're effective.

"Alzheimer's disease is a feared and heart-breaking disease," said Dr. Martha L. Daviglius, conference panel chairwoman and professor of preventive medicine at Northwestern University. "We wish we could tell people that taking a pill or doing a puzzle every day would prevent this terrible disease, but current evidence doesn't support this."

their arms high above their head.

"That could be something that might cause some issues," Snow said. Falling and getting hurt, for example.

For inactive seniors who want to start working out, Snow and Wright suggest water aerobics or Silver Sneakers for their first fitness forays. Water aerobics not only helps get the heart pumping, but doesn't have the fall risk that other aerobic exercises pose.

"The water's a wonderful place for them because they are buoyant," Wright said.

Older exercisers have another disadvantage, Wright added. Even if they are active, gyms and fitness classes weren't around when they grew up, she said.

"These guys are actually taking on a whole new concept," Wright said.

Wright also recommends seniors check with their doctors before starting a new routine, as everyone has different physical limits. For some inactive people, a short walk might be sufficient, whereas other, more active seniors can take fitness classes with no problem.

But even if someone isn't ready to jump out of a plane like Meyer, the new skydiver is happy to tell her peers to join her active ranks.

"Life doesn't end at 50, 60, 70," Meyer said.

Disgraced former Ohio congressman dies at 79

DALLAS (AP) — Former U.S. Rep. Donald "Buz" Lukens of Ohio, once a rising conservative star in state politics before a string of scandals abruptly ended his career, has died. He was 79.

Lukens died of cancer at a Dallas nursing home Saturday, said his sister, Lois Short of Springfield, Ohio.

Lukens was convicted in 1989 of paying a 16-year-old girl from Columbus for sex. He was sentenced to 30 days in jail and fined $500.

The scandal cost him the 1990 Republican primary, where he lost to then-state Rep. John Boehner, now the House minority leader in Congress.

Lukens resigned his seat Oct. 24, 1990, less than three months before his term was to expire, rather than face an investigation by the House ethics committee, which planned to look into allegations of sexual misconduct.

Lukens also was mired in legal trouble because of a scandal involving the now-defunct House bank, which benefitted Congress members by offering unlimited penalty-free checking overdrafts.

Later accused of taking $15,000 in bribes from two Cincinnati businessmen, Lukens was convicted on a felony charge of bribery in 1996 and sentenced to 30 months in prison.

Lukens denied that he ever exchanged votes for money.

A supporter of Barry Goldwater and an early, enthusiastic booster of Ronald Reagan, Lukens rose quickly as a Republican and conservative activist from southwest Ohio.

First elected to the House in 1967, he made an unsuccessful bid at the 1970 GOP nomination for governor. He was later appointed to the Ohio Senate and elected to Congress in 1986 and 1988.

An Ethiopian woman casts her vote Sunday at a polling station in Nazret, Ethiopia, about 62 miles south of Addis Ababa. Ethiopians began voting in national elections Sunday, in a vote closely watched by international observers and by critics who say the U.S.-allied ruling party has intimidated voters and challengers to secure an easy victory. Opposition members and the ruling party's critics say the poll will likely lead to a new decade of power for Prime Minister Meles Zenawi, who seized control of the Horn of Africa country in a 1991 coup. Meles' Ethiopian People's Revolutionary Democratic Front denies it repressed its opponents and says candidates have been able to campaign freely. But opposition members say they have been harassed and two of their campaigners have been killed under mysterious circumstances.

Ethiopia opposition bloc claims voter intimidation

By Anita Powell
Associated Press writer

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia — Ethiopia's opposition said they may contest the results of Sunday's national election in court after reports of intimidation and vote-rigging, hoping to avoid the violent street clashes that marred the last poll and left nearly 200 dead.

The election in Africa's third most populous nation is being closely watched by international observers, and by critics who say the U.S.-allied ruling party has harassed voters and challengers.

The poll will likely lead to a new decade of power for

Prime Minister Meles Zenawi, who seized control of the Horn of Africa country in a 1991 coup.

The largest opposition bloc, Medrek, complained of intimidation soon after Sunday's vote began. Spokesman Negasso Gidada said some of his party's observers had been blocked and arrested in northern Ethiopia, and others had been intimidated in southern Ethiopia.

"We think we may not accept the results," he said, emphasizing that the party would settle any election irregularities by appealing in court.

But Negasso said his party would not refuse to participate in the government if elected, as some opposition leaders did in 2005. About 100 opposition politicians and activists who challenged those results were arrested.

Another opposition candidate, Hailu Shawel, said observers also had been turned away Sunday in different parts of the country.

Government spokesman Bereket Simon, however, said he was not aware of any election-related problems and when told by The Associated Press of the opposition claims, he said "this is simply, simply an orchestrated lie."

"If they reject the result before it's declared, it means they know how they've been accepted," he said. "They know they have lost it squarely."

Negasso said a group of his party's election observers were arrested Saturday in Tigray. He also said that his party's observers were intimidated in Oromia and Amhara regions, and that voter cards were denied to eligible opposition voters. He also said that the plastic sheets separating election booths in the capital were not private enough and that voters could speak to each other and pass notes under the barriers.

A whole new world has opened up to me. It has been the best investment we have made.

I enjoy eating in restaurants again. I am able to hear the servers and carry a normal conversation with those around me.

The Commission on Accreditation of Medical Transport Systems will conduct an accreditation site visit of:

Air St. Luke's
on June 22 & 23, 2010

The purpose of the site visit will be to evaluate the program's compliance with nationally established medical transport standards. The site visit results will be used to determine whether, and the conditions under which accreditation should be awarded to the program.
 CAMTS accreditation standards deal with issues of patient care and safety of the transport environment. Anyone believing that he or she has pertinent or valid information about such matters may request a public information interview with the CAMTS site surveyors at the time of the site visit. Information presented at the interview will be carefully evaluated for relevance to the accreditation process. Requests for public information interviews must be made in writing and sent to CAMTS no later than 5 business days before the site survey begins. The request should also indicate the nature of the information to be provided during the interview.
 Such request should be addressed to:
 Office of the Executive Director
 Commission on Accreditation of Medical Transport Systems
 PO Box 130
 Sandy Springs, SC 29677
 The Commission will acknowledge such written requests in writing or by telephone and will inform the program of the request for an interview. The Commission will, in turn, notify the interviewee of the date, time and place of the meeting.
 This notice is posted in accordance with CAMTS requirements and shall not be removed until the site visit is completed.

IF MAY 24 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Group activities can distract you from what you should be doing in the next several weeks. Exercise and physical activity are necessary, but do not overdo it. In August, your ambitions are likely to be ignited, so that is an excellent time to show the boss you are responsible and diligent. You may not receive praise, but you will be able to pass the tests put before you so that in November you are ready for a promotion, to accept a lucrative opportunity or to embrace a definite improvement in your life. Early November is the very best time to seek wise counsel from professional people or to launch any significant plan successfully.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You will go a lot further with sugar than salt. Avoid potential conflict by employing extreme tact and compassion, as no one will benefit from a brawl.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The more, the merrier. It is time to let someone else take the lead and follow. Avoid being stuck in the rut of inertia. Make sure that you get "out and about."

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You will do well to avoid risks and to stick with sure things. Take time to jot down your ideas or to engage in deep contemplation, as your insights will be right on the mark.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Too many cooks spoil the broth. Worry about your responsibilities and leave others to worry about their own. In romantic encounters, it is up to you to make the first move.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be candid and open when dealing with others. There is no need to embellish the truth, as your standing is much better than your estimate. Listen to the voice of experience.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Show them the money. Do the right thing and make sure that you pick up all your tabs and promptly repay your debts. Be gracious in defeat if someone outshines you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Do not shy away from responsibilities. You can complain about the difficulty of the task at hand - or you can view it as a challenge and successfully attack it head on.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Keep your eye on the ball. A wide array of events will vie for your attention today. Keep your mind focused on your ultimate objective and ignore petty distractions.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Ingenuity and quick thinking yield many rewards. If you see something broken, fix it; do not stand around waiting for someone to fix it for you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Communication is the key. Do not step on anyone's toes. Working in close contact with another may create friction unless you make it clear that you are not in competition.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Think now and act later. Let your thoughts and ideas run amok. Be sure to write ideas down, as these insights are likely to be invaluable in the near future.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Beware of fair weather friends attracted to the jingling in your pockets. Remain cautious, and don't be taken in by a tale of woe designed to sponge up your money.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Concepts Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

Today is Monday, May 24, the 144th day of 2010.
There are 221 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:
On May 24, 1844, Samuel
F.B. Morse transmitted the message, "What hath God wrought" from Washington to Baltimore as he formally opened America's first telegraph line.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:
In 1819, Queen Victoria was born in London.
In 1883, the Brooklyn
Bridge, linking Brooklyn and Manhattan, was dedicated by President Chester Alan
Arthur and New York Gov.
Grover Cleveland, and opened to traffic.
In 1935, the first major league baseball game to be played at night took place at Cincinnati's Crosley Field as the Reds beat the Philadelphia Phillies, 2-1.
In 1941, the German battleship Bismarck sank the British dreadnought Hood in the North Atlantic.
In 1959, former U.S.
Secretary of State John
Foster Dulles died in Washington, D.C. at age 71.
In 1962, astronaut Scott
Carpenter became the second American to orbit the Earth as he flew aboard
Aurora 7.

In 1976, Britain and France opened trans-Atlantic Concorde supersonic transport service to Washington.
In 1977, in a surprise move, the Kremlin ousted
Soviet President Nikolai
Podgorny from the Communist Party's ruling
Politburo.
In 1980, Iran rejected a call by the World Court in The Hague to release the American hostages.
In 2001, 23 people died
when the floor of a Jerusalem wedding hall collapsed beneath dancing guests in a horrifying scene captured on video.

Ten years ago: Israeli troops pulled out unilaterally from south Lebanon, ending 18 years of occupation.
Gunmen killed five people and wounded two others in a robbery attempt at a Wendy's restaurant in Queens, New York. (The gunmen, Craig Godineaux and John Taylor, are serving life prison sentences.) The state of Maryland dismissed its wiretapping case against Linda Tripp after judge disallowed most of Monica Lewinsky's testimony. Isiah
Thomas, Bob McAdoo and Tennessee women's coach Pat Summitt were elected to the Basketball Hall of Fame.

Five years ago: Breaking years of gridlock, the Senate cleared the way for confirmation of Priscilla Owen to the U.S. appeals court following a compromise on President George W. Bush's current and future judicial nominees.
Ignoring President Bush's veto threat,
the House voted to lift limits on embryonic stem cell research.

One year ago: Space shuttle Atlantis and its seven astronauts returned to Earth, ending a 13-day mission to repair and enhance the Hubble Space Telescope.
Brazil's Helio Castroneves became the ninth driver to win the Indianapolis 500
three times.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"In baiting a mouse-trap with cheese, always leave room for the mouse."

— Saki

If you were to look only at the North-South cards, you would like your chances in six clubs. If you could ruff out the spades without losing a trump trick, you'd have excellent chances of 12 tricks.

All well and good, but you have bid your cards only to the pedestrian contract of three no-trump, so you had better not go down, given your side's combined 30 high-card points!

At some tables South might win the diamond lead in dummy, cash the two top clubs, finding the bad news, then try his luck with either hearts or spades. He could try to come to hand with the heart queen (a 50 percent chance) or he could play three rounds of spades, hoping for an even break, roughly a one-third shot. Today neither of these lines would work; the defenders would win and clear the diamonds, and declarer would go down.

At teams-scoring or rubber bridge, overtricks do not really count for much; the objective is to make your contract. The best line to do that is to win the diamond ace and play the club king, then the club queen, overtaking with your ace. That may turn your six club winners into five, but it does ensure that you have the entries to set up the club suit without the loss of a tempo. You concede a trick to the club jack, then win the diamond return, and cash out your nine winners.

ANSWER: Just because you do not know what to lead is no reason to abnegate responsibility by leading a trump (which rates to lose a trick when partner has an honor). When in doubt, lead from your long suit. A club could cost a trick, but it is also quite likely to set up a trick or allow you to cash club winners before they go away.

DEAR ABBY: My brother passed away a year ago, leaving a wife and five children. They are wonderful, well-behaved kids. Unfortunately, my brother appears to have been the one who kept everybody on schedule and made all the decisions. My sister-in-law just did whatever he said, deciding nothing on her own. Now that he's gone, the family seems to be falling apart.

ABBY
Jeanne
Phillips

The kids spend very little time at home, and they never eat together as a family anymore — something I know is necessary these days to keep tabs on what the kids are up to. I could go into detail about how things have gone to pot, but I want to keep this brief. It breaks my heart to see it happen.

I would love to have a little chat with my sister-in-law to explain to her that she must step up to the plate and be the adult. How does one broach the subject without alienating her?

— LOVING AUNT
IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR LOVING AUNT: Start by telling this widowed mother of five that you are worried about her, that you're concerned she may be chronically depressed over her husband's death, and you think she may need to talk to her doctor.

A woman in her situation, someone who has never made a decision for herself since the day she was married (or maybe longer), is in a terrible pickle. She needs a mentor because she will have to learn self-sufficiency from the ground up. So be prepared to share every bit of wisdom you can with her.

DEAR ABBY: A child was found dead in our area. He died from blunt force trauma to his head. His mother had reported him missing, and 12 hours later his younger brother found his body. It's not being called murder, although everyone around here suspects it was.

I went to the visitation the first night, and I have never seen so many kids attend a funeral without a parent. I was appalled. You don't send children to a child's funeral alone. I felt terrible for them. They lost a good friend and didn't have their parents there to help them cope.

Realize that people have to work, but the visitation was from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. The funeral was at 11 a.m. the next day. One adult I spoke with said she didn't go because she couldn't stand to see the child that way. She couldn't take it, so I had to be there for her daughter.

Don't people understand it's not about them? Parents need to realize their kids may have a lot of questions and mixed-up emotions and need to talk. What do you think of this?

— SAD MOM
IN THE U.S.A.

DEAR SAD MOM: I think you have written an important letter. Parents, if this letter strikes a familiar chord, please wake up and re-prioritize. Your children need you — especially at a time like this — to help them talk through any fears and anxieties they are experiencing.

DEAR ABBY: I was in and out of a relationship with "Bob" for four years, and we recently split up again. Last September I bought an airline ticket for him to accompany me on a Florida vacation, but we broke up, so I cashed in his ticket.

Bob keeps calling me and saying he wants his "present" so he can go away. I said, "No way!" Was I wrong?

— HURT
IN MASSACHUSETTS

DEAR HURT: Heck, no! The ticket was purchased with the understanding that Bob would accompany you to Florida. Because you are now on the outs (again) and it's not going to happen, why treat him to a free trip? Frankly, I think he has nerve to suggest otherwise, and if you're smart, the response you'll give him the next time he calls with his hand out will be, "Don't call me again."

It's that time again!
