Tea party helps dump Idaho Senate incumbents

By John Miller
Associated Press writer

BOISE — With the tea party's help, the Idaho Senate may turn more conservative after Tuesday's primary.

Right-leaning Republican candidates ejected four incumbents whose stances on issues including states' rights, taxes and even wolves put them at odds with newly active tea party voters eager to make their presence felt.

Sens. Chuck Coiner of Twin Falls, Mike Jorgenson of Hayden Lake, Gary Schroeder of Moscow, and Lee Heinrich of Cascade lost to rivals who are either tea party adherents or courted voters espousing the movement's limited-government, states-rights philosophy.

Tea party organizers contend this will force broader state GOP leaders like Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter and U.S. Rep. Mike Simpson to pay closer attention. Otter and Simpson both won Tuesday, but tea-party-backed rivals siphoned off votes; Rex Rammell won 25 percent off Otter, while Chick Heilesen wounded Simpson, whose 58 percent was his poorest primary showing since 1998.

"They're going to have to think twice about how they cast their votes," said Rusty Satterwhite, a spokesman for the Twin Falls-based Tears of the Patriots group, who himself lost a bid for the Idaho House, on Wednesday. "If they do push that boundary, there will become a critical mass."

Lee Heider, a Twin Falls city councilman, beat Coiner. Steve Vick, a former Montana House member, beat Jorgenson. Neither faces a Democratic foe in November, so they're headed for Boise in 2011.

Meanwhile, Gresham Bouma of Moscow dumped Schroeder, a nine-term Republican, while Cottonwood bookkeeper Sheryl Nuxoll ousted Heinrich. Bouma and Nuxoll face Democratic general election rivals.

In March, Coiner was one of just three Senate Republicans who opposed a bill requiring Idaho to sue the federal government over President Obama's insurance reforms. Tea party groups backed Idaho's lawsuit — and Heider.

And Vick, who moved to Idaho several years ago, made hay of Jorgenson's support in 2009 for

Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter's proposed $174 million boost in gas taxes and vehicle registration fees to pay for road construction.

Vick said he's not a member of tea party groups, but he attended several functions where he promoted his Montana House record from 1995 to 2000 when he backed budget austerity — and fought speed limits as an insult to personal liberty.

Of course, it wasn't all tea party. Jorgenson's sometimes-turbulent Senate tenure also took its toll. He'd become obsessed with punishing employers that hired illegal

Saving field trips

Kimberly Elementary School second-grader Abby Heider, 8, learns about different kinds of fish on a field trip to the Hagerman National Fish Hatchery on Wednesday. Proposed cuts in school budgets may soon eliminate field trips, something groups in the Hagerman area are working to avoid.

Multi-agency effort brings students to Hagerman sites

Times-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — A yellow school bus pulled into a half-circle parking area at the Hagerman National Fish Hatchery; once stopped, the door folded open and students spilled down the steps into the cool spring air.

Jill Russell, 8, and her classmates were at their first stop on a Wednesday field trip, the National Park Service's Hagerman Fossil Beds National Monument. The Kimberly Elementary School second-graders excitedly craned their necks while taking in the new environment.

"We got to see fossils and that was awesome," Russell said.

As much as she enjoyed it, the day may have been her class' last field trip until the economy straightens out. Like many school districts managing shrinking budgets, Kimberly eliminated field trips from next year's costs.

But a partnership of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, NPS and the Idaho Department of Parks and Recreation, coupled with funding through Hagerman IDEA, may give districts a lifeline. A program called "Connect Students with Hagerman Resources" helps pay to bring school-children on field trips to the Hagerman-area sites, including the Hagerman National Fish Hatchery and Thousand Springs State Park.

"School groups are invited to take a field trip to the Hagerman Valley to learn about natural resources," said Anna Ray, fisheries program assistant at the Hagerman hatchery. "Plus, the program meets a variety of Idaho state teaching standards, which makes it a valuable learning experience for students and teachers alike."

The coalition has more than $20,000 to help offset transportation costs.

"If districts needed less, we would give less, but right now, because of funding, districts need the costs completely covered," Ray said.

The program's sponsors hope to not only encourage trips to area sites but also to inspire kids to get outdoors. It is also affiliated with the Idaho Children and Nature Network's "Be Outside" initiative.

"Recreating outside may help combat rising childhood obesity and also helps set the stage for childhood discoveries, discoveries kids aren't going to get inside a classroom or in a book," Ray said. "School field trips are an excellent opportunity to begin those discoveries."

Hagerman IDEA member Jim Scott said the group looks forward to helping kids across the state go on field trips. He's also excited about showcasing the Hagerman Valley to kids who may not otherwise visit the area.

"When you look at natural resource managers and what got them started in the field many will say it was a field trip from when they were just a kid. Field trips have a long-term impact," Scott said.

Kimberly Elementary didn't use the grant opportunity to visit the hatchery and fossil beds this year, but the school likely will take advantage of the funds next year. And with many other districts facing the same challenge, those

Jerome Co. to start over on new jail

JEROME — It's back to square one for a new Jerome County jail.

Following another narrow failure in Tuesday's election, county commissioners placed discussion of the next steps for a new jail on their June 7 agenda.

"I'm just going to take a breath and bang my head on the wall and start over again," Commissioner Charlie Howell said. "Something needs to be done and we can't give up."

On the ballot was a proposed lease-purchase agreement for a $13.5 million, 165-bed jail and sheriff's office. It failed to reach a 66.6 percent supermajority approval by 1.2 percent. Under the measure, the jail would have been

Hagerman School District voters weighed in Wednesday on a proposed two-year, $175,000 annual supplemental levy. But the results of the vote were not available as of 10:30 p.m. District officials sought

Blair pleads not guilty to crimes related to fatal crash

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — Handcuffed and shackled, Christopher Edward Blair pleaded not guilty Tuesday to five criminal charges stemming from a one-vehicle crash that claimed the life of a Twin Falls woman.

Blair, 27, of Kimberly, was arraigned Tuesday in Burley, in Cassia County 5th District Court, for his alleged involvement in a March 11 crash that killed Kristy Ann Staley, 24, in the South Hills. He is charged with felony vehicular manslaughter and leaving the scene of an accident resulting in injury or death, and misdemeanor possession of a controlled substance, use or possession with the intent to use drug paraphernalia and driving under the influence.

Blair pleaded not guilty to all charges Tuesday through his attorney, Cassia County Chief Deputy Public Defender Timothy Schneider.

Blair is slated for a jury trial at 9 a.m. July 28 in Cassia County 5th District Court. A pretrial conference was scheduled at 9:30 a.m. July 13.

Christopher Edward Blair, center, leaves Cassia County 5th District Court Tuesday after pleading not guilty to charges stemming from a one-vehicle crash that claimed the life of Kristy Ann Staley, 24, of Twin Falls in the South Hills.

District Judge Michael Crabtree told Blair his presence was required at all hearings connected with the case.

Blair remains incarcerated in the Mini-Cassia Criminal Justice Center on a $50,000 bond.

According to court records, Blair was charged after the crash that occurred 1/2 mile south of Third Fork Trail on Rock Creek Road. Staley had been partially ejected from the vehicle, which Blair was allegedly driving, and was found pinned against a tree.

According to court records, Blair allegedly left Staley after the crash and started walking home, when he was given a ride by a passerby who later called police because of the strange story Blair told him about being involved a crash and leaving the scene of an accident.

Deputies estimated his speed at the time of the crash at 55 mph in a 35 mph zone.

District mulls electronic device ban

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Minidoka County school officials are considering a new district-wide policy to prohibit students from using cell phones and other electronic gadgets while they're in school.

The policy received a second reading during the school board's May 17 meeting.

"The students feel they should be allowed to use cell phones between classes," said Minico High School student Gerardo Juarez, who serves as student representative to the district's board of trustees.

According to the policy, banned electronic devices would include cell phones, pagers, USB drives, MP3 players, personal digital assistants and any other device used for audio, video or texting communication.

Juarez said students feel like the decision of whether or not to allow cell phone use should be determined individually by each teacher.

"The comments tend to be all over the board on this issue," said district Superintendent Scott Rogers.

"At the middle-school level we don't want them out in the hallways," said Sandra Miller, West Minico Middle School principal. "They are already bumping into each other, so if they are texting it's going to be that much worse."

Rogers said issues other than classroom disruptions need to be considered, including how students can use electronic devices to cheat on class work.

Jail

November by 1.16 percent.

Howell, Commission Chairwoman Cathy Roemer and Sheriff Doug McFall waited at the county courthouse for the votes to roll in late Tuesday. Howell and McFall said the evening became more ominous as the precincts were counted, as the voter approval percentage increased, but not fast enough.

The current 35-year-old jail has fallen out of compliance with several federal and state regulations, leading McFall to say replacing it is a matter of when, not if. As if to punctuate the need, a sewer pipe began leaking over an inmate's bed while votes were being counted and had to be fixed, Howell said.

"It's unfortunate that it didn't pass because the need for a new facility still exists, and the longer we wait to build a new jail, the more risks we are apt to encounter because of the condition of the old jail," Roemer said. "All I can say is at this point I am open to thoroughly looking at all options and looking at what is on the table."

In the county commissioners' race, Roger M. Morley ended up pulling away from other Republican contenders to guarantee a victory. As precincts rolled in, he went from being behind to tied to ahead of candidate Douglas M. Suter, winning 955 votes to 856. Gerlyn "Sam" Walker ended up with 269 votes.

Morley, 58, a former state

Senate lobbyist and Qwest Communications retiree, said the jail will "always be a priority" but that he also aims to make Jerome more business-friendly and to designate a canyon rim park.

In regard to the jail, Morley said, "I think the people are looking to their leaders for innovative solutions and we'll come up with something new or work on what we already have."

If he wins in November — when he doesn't face any Democratic competition — he will make $27,600 with county benefits as a commissioner.

ISP, Kimberly prepare for Wills' departure

By Eric Larsen
Times-News writer

Kedrick Wills and his family are no strangers to moving. Wills, who has split time between the Magic Valley and Meridian since earning a March promotion to serve as one of only three Idaho State Police majors, said he's working on his fifth move during his tenure with ISP.

While the transient nature of police promotions may be old hat to Wills, he leaves two agencies with the task of finding new feet to fill his shoes. On Friday, Capt. Robert Storm will be named commander of ISP's Region 4 office in Jerome. And the Kimberly City Council on June 8 plans to appoint a replacement to fill Wills' council seat.

"This was a fantastic opportunity for me to move on with the state police, but we certainly don't do it without leaving our heart here," Wills said. "Kimberly is a fantastic community."

With ISP, Wills oversees the agency's Police Services Division, which handles forensic services. He said he's split his time at work between Jerome and ISP's Meridian headquarters for about a month, but will resign from the Kimberly City Council effective Tuesday as his family moves to Meridian this week.

Wills has served on the council since January 2009, when he replaced former councilman and ISP Trooper Chris Glenn. Wills' term runs through 2011. In the council's May 11 meeting, Kimberly Mayor David Overacre said Wills' replacement will be appointed during the council's June 8 meeting.

Kimberly has seen its share of big issues during Wills' time on the council, including the November 2009 passage of a $6.6 million bond to pay off an Idaho Department of Environmental Quality loan for sweeping upgrades to the city's water system. That effort increased city water rates, but allowed Kimberly to pursue metering and billing individual usage instead of charging users a flat rate.

"Our water delivery system had not kept up with the times, I think," Wills said. "To be able to have meters and accurately bill people instead of a flat rate — I'm a big user-pay guy — I believe the people that use the services should pay for them."

As for his former role at ISP, Wills said Storm, a 23-year ISP veteran, is "a natural fit" to take command of the Region 4 office.

"He is very, very well prepared for this," Wills said. "Capt. Storm has the institutional knowledge in the region that no other applicant brought to the table."

A pinning ceremony for Storm will be held at 1 p.m. Friday at ISP Region 4 headquarters, 218 W. Yakima Ave., Jerome.

GRADUATE PROFILE

Service defines Kimberly's Novacek

By Amy Huddleston
Times-News correspondent

Justin Novacek is leaving a legacy of service at Kimberly High School.

As a Congressional Award Gold Medal recipient and one of six valedictorians in his class, the 18-year-old son of Rick Novacek and Stacy Beem has much to celebrate on his graduation Friday.

"In three words, I would describe myself as unpredictable, funny and also responsible," Novacek said. "I like to make people laugh but I know that I need to work hard."

The congressional award requires recipients to demonstrate and document 400 hours of community service, 200 hours of personal development and 200 hours of physical fitness, as well as an expedition. Novacek planned a five-day trip to the Oregon Coast for his expedition, and after achieving the award received a trip to Washington D.C. last June with other congressional award winners for a week-long program.

"It was a treat for all the kids who worked hard. We got to tour the area and go to a baseball game," he said. "It was an awesome way to see all the history."

Kimberly High School senior Justin Novacek, center, speaks with his debate partner Juan Torres while their counterpart, Kakota McEwen, speaks during 'An Evening of Spoken Art' at the school on Friday.

Novacek said he volunteered with Natural Helpers, which gave him a chance to eat lunch with at-risk students. He also served on the staff at Boy Scouts of America's National Youth Leadership training. "I learned more while being on staff than I did attending the camp. I actually got to put my leadership skills into action."

He earned personal development hours by participating on Kimberly High's speech and debate team. Julie Underwood, KHS forensics coach, said Novacek is very cohesive.

"He is an incredible team player," she said. "Justin has always helped other students grow to their potential. Even when he was a novice, he was always telling others, 'We're a team, let's do this.'"

His participation in school activities, including FFA and mock trial, is paying off with more than just experience.

"I was able to get over $25,000 in scholarships and some of them are still pending," he said. Novacek received the Elks Legacy Scholarship and was a semi-finalist for the Coca-Cola Scholars program.

He said he is proud of his time at KHS and looks forward to attending the University of Idaho in the fall.

"This is the ending of a great chapter in my life but the beginning of a new one," he said. "I am excited to go out on my own and become independent."

KHS Principal Luke Schroeder said Novacek's dedication to community service has been a recognizable contribution to the school.

"He is the type of kid you pride yourself in as an educator," he said. "He is going places. Fortunately for us, we have a lot like him."

Health district gets closer to 2011 budget

Twin Falls County's share to rise slightly

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

The budget for the South Central Public Health District is set to move forward with cuts that director Rene LeBlanc said should be minimal.

The district's proposed fiscal-year 2011 budget is about $80,000 shy from its 2010 proposal, after 2010 construction costs are removed. LeBlanc said the cuts primarily came from the consolidation of two senior management positions. Both workers had retired, he said.

The final budget won't be approved until August.

"We're still assessing what that impact might be," LeBlanc said of the cuts. "People are going to be traveling a lot, getting in their cars to provide services."

He said more nurses will be based out of Twin Falls and travelling to the surrounding eight counties. There won't be fewer services provided, he said, but they will likely be available for fewer hours.

With the cuts, Twin Falls County is slated to pay slightly more for the district

— $1,112. Whether that cost will be spread out among county property taxes depends on the assessed value of the county's property versus the population, County Commissioner and budget hearing Chairman George Urie said.

If there was an increase, "there wouldn't even be a figure for it, it would be so small," he said. But all together, it would bring the county's share of the health district to $360,073.

T.F. police warns residents of lost-and-found scam

Times-News

The Twin Falls Police Department is warning area residents of scammers who are allegedly taking advantage of people who post advertisements for lost property.

According to a Wednesday police press release, the scam involves a scammer who responds to a lost property ad with false claims of finding the lost property. A request is then made for the owner of the lost property to send money through Western Union to a false phone number and address.

Twin Falls police have received several reports of this scam, and remind residents to make sure they know who they're sending money to.

Police also advise residents to ask specific questions about the lost item to verify the caller's authenticity. Victims of scams are encouraged to contact their local law enforcement agency immediately.

Jerome's Geoff Wolfe rallies from the brink of not graduating

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

JEROME — His bad attitude and direction in life could be changed by no one but himself, said Geoff Wolfe, 18. So a little more than two years ago, he set out to do just that.

Wolfe is one of nearly 210 students to graduate from Jerome High School this year, but it took more than just an attitude adjustment to get there.

"I had to make up my freshman and sophomore years while keeping up on my new classes," Wolfe said. "It was a lot of hard work. But completely worth it."

He calls the last two years his "metamorphosis."

"I had a rough middle school experience. I wasn't academically motivated and didn't have a positive attitude," Wolfe said.

He took a medical leave of absence during his freshman year. When he returned to school, his attendance was sporadic and his grades suffered.

"I got into a couple of fights ... I spent nine months in a group home," Wolfe said. "It was my rehabilitation. I found myself thinking that the direction I was on was not the one I wanted."

He enrolled in night classes and kept up with his regu-

Geoff Wolfe works on building a computer in the Jerome High School technology lab. The 18-year-old spent his junior and senior year at JHS making up credits so he could graduate on time. Along the way, he found a passion for working with computers; this fall Wolfe will take classes at the College of Southern Idaho in technology and digital media.

lar school work. It was grueling but he didn't complain. "I've never heard Geoff make excuses for where he was or complain with how much work he had to put into making up his classes," said counselor Kathy Muscat. "He literally made up for those first two years."

Along the way, Wolfe gained the trust of the school. As an aide to information-technology teacher Tyler Wardle, Wolfe learned about building computers and managing networks.

"Geoff has been a great help in managing and fixing computers with Mr. Wardle," Muscat said. "He's extremely trustworthy."

Wardle said he was impressed with how Wolfe "found something he was interested in and grabbed onto it."

"There are specialty things that kids can find in high school, and some kids don't take advantage of it," Wardle said. "Geoff did find something and has come a long way. I have no doubt that he'll find great success in his future."

Wolfe is already enrolled at the College of Southern Idaho for the fall semester with plans of majoring in digital media and technology.

aliens, alienating business groups and some Senate colleagues with failed bills. And Jorgenson also sued to keep Vick off the primary ballot, something that may have won Vick sympathy.

"I got early press because of that," Vick said, adding when a local newspaper asked website readers to weigh in on Jorgenson's lawsuit, "60 percent said it looked like he was a crybaby."

Bouma, an ardent tea party adherent in north-central Idaho's Latah County who would end federal education funding and expel wolves from the state, says Schroeder's acceptance of the predators — and opposition to cutting public school budgets this year — helped spur his downfall.

After 18 years in the Senate, Schroeder is barely even Republican anymore, Bouma said.

"The Republican Party gets punished when it fields candidates that don't really reflect its values," he said. "The electorate is waking up to examining its candidates more closely."

Heinrich, a former Valley County clerk, also supported Otter's proposed gas tax hike in 2009 to pay for roads; Nuxoll, who beat him, told District 8 voters from Valley, Clearwater, Idaho and Lewis counties she backs toll roads.

Judge may close part of prison crowding case

By Rebecca Boone
Associated Press writer

BOISE — After nearly three decades of court battles over conditions at the Idaho State Correctional Institution, a federal judge is weighing whether to discontinue part of the prison overcrowding lawsuit.

U.S. District Judge B. Lynn Winnmill told attorneys for the Boise prison inmates last week that they have 30 days to let him know if they oppose closing the oldest portion of the case, which aimed to stop rampant violence, the near-routine brutal rapes of newly arrived young prisoners, limited access to psychiatric and medical care and other problems at the lockup. Changing conditions and procedures at the prison make enforcement of that part of the case difficult, he noted.

Winnmill also said that as long as state officials “tread cautiously and show good faith in maintaining compliance” with court rulings designed to prevent overcrowding, he’s prepared to reduce the long-term monitoring requirements at the prison as well.

“I’m grateful that he is acknowledging that things have changed, times have changed,” said Idaho Department of Correction Director Brent Reinke. “There was a lot of concern around medical care, clothing, food, psychiatric care, classification, programming — we have tried and been quite diligent in our approach in dealing with those issues.”

Still, Winnmill said he wouldn’t hesitate to reimpose stringent monitoring if needed.

The case began in the early 1980s, when so many inmates at the prison began filing lawsuits that the cases threatened to clog the state’s federal dockets. A judge ultimately combined them into one big lawsuit, dubbed the “Balla case” after lead plaintiff Walter Balla.

In three major rulings over the next two decades, federal judges ordered the state to stop overcrowding at the prison, provide warm clothing to inmates, improve access to medical and psychiatric care and rehabilitation programs, and to take other measures to ensure that some units of the prison would no longer be “an extremely violent place to live.”

Before the first Balla trial, “virtually every young man assigned to that custody level was brutally raped. Guards and inmates alike were subjected to physical assault,” former U.S. District Judge Harold Ryan noted in 1984. “Substantial evidence was introduced demonstrating that double-celling of close-custody inmates resulted in the infliction of unnecessary and wanton pain, and was grossly disproportionate to the severity of crimes warranting imprisonment.”

In 1985, the judge ordered the department to take nine steps to fix the problems at the Idaho State Correctional Institution. But a couple of years later, the case was back in court, with inmates persuading the judge again that overcrowding had made the prison unbearable.

The third major ruling in the case came in 2005, when the prison had again become overcrowded and U.S. District Judge James

Fitzgerald permanently barred the state from double-bunking inmates in a section of the prison that became known as the “Balla beds.”

But the state has struggled to comply with the overcrowding rules in recent years.

A prison riot in January 2009 destroyed a new housing unit and forced correction officials to temporarily double-bunk the Balla beds while they scrambled to find new accommodations for the displaced inmates.

Winnmill said the state’s quick response in fixing the problem stopped him from reaching a contempt of court finding.

IDAHO Crane: Money to help bolster college savings plans

BOISE — State Treasurer Ron Crane says several dozen scholarships will be awarded as part of a plan to help Idaho families invest in college savings accounts.

A total of 13 scholarships in the amount of $529 will be awarded to invest in IDeal plans, which are Idaho’s version of a 529 college savings account.

Another 60 scholarships worth $52.90 will be awarded to go toward the accounts, which waive taxes on a portion of college savings and are often called 529 plans after a section of the Internal Revenue Code.

Qwest Communications International Inc. is providing more than half of the scholarship money. The winners will be chosen in a drawing, which is open until June 15 to those who open new IDeal accounts and contribute a minimum of $25. Existing account holders who contribute $100 or more will also be entered into the drawing.

Tot's trek from home ends at parents' workplace

CHUBBUCK — Authorities say a brief but intensive search for a missing Chubbuck toddler has a happy ending.

They also say Marco Rascon possesses a keen sense of direction for just a three-year-old.

The search began early Tuesday morning after his mother awoke, found the front door wide open and her son missing. Authorities ruled out kidnapping, assuming instead he wandered off after noticing his shoes and blanket were gone.

The Idaho State Journal reports the boy was discovered 20 minutes later in the bushes near the front gate at the Heinz Frozen Food plant in Pocatello, where both parents work.

Police who traced the boy’s probably route say he trekked along several major roadways.

The boy’s mother, Erica Rascon, says when they drive by the plant she often quizzes him about who works inside.

WASHINGTON Police: ‘Drugstore Cowboy’ busted

REDMOND — Police in Washington state say the man who wrote “Drugstore Cowboy” has been arrested in yet another pharmacy robbery.

James Fogle was arrested with another man Tuesday night after they allegedly tied up employees at a pharmacy in Redmond, east of Seattle. The Seattle Times reports Fogle will be arraigned today on a charge of first-degree armed robbery.

Ohio family faces killer’s parole, Oregon ID fraud

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A boy killed during a kidnapping, a stolen identity and an enigmatic man.

Oregon’s latest mystery isn’t a whodunit — 3-year-old Jason Evers’ killer is in jail. Instead, investigators and Jason’s family are puzzling over the true identity of a man they say usurped the boy’s name more than a dozen years ago, even using it to pass a police background check and get a state job.

The man is sitting behind bars, refusing to reveal his identity to a federal judge as he awaits a court hearing.

His fingerprints are not on file, and authorities say they don’t know of any old friends or home videos. There’s nothing of substance that’s surfaced since his arrest in Idaho last month by federal agents who charged him with making a false statement on a passport application.

Bob Evers, the father of kidnap/murder victim Jason Evers, shown in the photo on the table, looks at a copy of the prison record of Adrian Williams, May 3 at his home in Harrison, Ohio. Williams was convicted of kidnapping and involuntary manslaughter in the June 1982 death of Jason Evers.

Public Employees Retirement System board.

“He was our most engaged member,” said Gay Lynn Bath, the state deferred compensation manager, noting he was not involved in any investment decisions or given any access to confidential information as a member of an advisory committee.

His public defender, Susan Russell, said at a hearing in federal court in Portland that he moved from Colorado to Oregon to be close to a surrogate grandmother, and ended up finding the OLCC job and making friends in the Bend area and in Nyssa on the Idaho border.

Connections to Colorado are hard to find.

A woman who recently bought a house in Denver where the man claiming to be Jason Evers had lived more than a decade ago got a knock on her door from federal agents just before a call from The Associated Press.

All she could offer was that she guessed the man had rented the basement from the elderly couple who had owned it.

Despite the limited public information about his background, authorities are piecing together a character sketch.

They say he may be from New Jersey or Washington, D.C., sporting an East Coast accent and able to speak “street type” Spanish. He may have grown up in a foster home and was a master chess player. His mother is likely dead and his father may be in prison.

Dissatisfaction reigns in Idaho’s primary election

As advertised, Tuesday’s primary election was hard on incumbents. State Sen. Chuck Coiner, R-Twin Falls, went down to a surprisingly lopsided defeat at the hands of Twin Falls City Councilman Lee Heider, and five county commissioners in south-central Idaho lost their jobs.

That kind of turnover isn’t unusual at the county level in the Magic and Wood River valleys. What was eye-catching was the amount of experience that south-central Idaho voted out of office on Tuesday.

Among them, defeated commissioners Larry Rose in Elmore County, Ron Chapman in Camas County, Dan Stapelman and Lyle Hunsaker in Minidoka County and Clay Handy in Cassia County had 46 years’ on the job.

And although he didn’t lose his commissioner’s job, the defeat of Paul Christensen by Dwight Davis for the Cassia County assessor’s post was a shock. Christensen has served 16 years on the commission.

Interestingly, the beaten commissioners didn’t lose to upstart newcomers motivated by the Tea Party movement. Wes Wootan of King Hill, who defeated Rose, has been a member of the Elmore County Planning and Zoning Commission. Janet Croner, who beaten Chapman, is the Fairfield city clerk.

Stapelman lost to Paul City Councilman McClellan, and Sheryl Koyle, who defeated Hunsaker, is a precinct committeewoman from Acequia. Robert Kunau, who beat Handy in Cassia County, is a member of the Gateway West Task Force that recommended an alternate route for the proposed high-voltage transmission line coming through the county.

Jerome County failed again — again by just a few votes — to get enough patrons to agree to a lease-purchase agreement to build a new county jail, leaving the commissioners with a dwindling number of bad options. They can either try the lease-purchase scheme again in November, or run a bond issue election. Either way, the clock is ticking. The jail’s insurer could close down the 35-year-old facility any time.

The most far-reaching result of Tuesday’s election may turn out to be the defeat of moderates Coiner and state Sens. Mike Jorgenson, R-Hayden Lake, and Gary Schroeder, R-Moscow, by conservatives. Collectively, the three lawmakers have served 30 years in the Legislature — and none of them got more than 44 percent of the primary vote.

A relative handful of Republican pragmatists hold the balance of power in the state Senate, and with a House of Representatives dominated by tax hawks bent on downsizing state government, Tuesday’s election may signal more trouble for public schools, higher education, Health and Welfare and corrections.

Although some observers were expecting record turnout in south-central Idaho, it didn’t work out that way. Throughout the region, fewer than 30 percent of the registered voters bothered to cast ballots.

TROUBLE FOR GOP MODERATES

How state Senate Republican moderates and pragmatists did in Tuesday’s Republican primary election:

- Sen. Shawn Keough, R, Sandpoint defeated conservative Steve Tanner of Bonners Ferry, 76 percent to 24 percent. Keough has no Democratic challenger in the November election.
- Sen. Joyce Broadword, R-Sagle, won a three-way race. She received 49 percent of the vote. Dennis Engelhart of Sagle got 36 percent and James Stivers of Desmet had 16 percent. Broadword has no Democratic challenger in the November election.
- Sen. Mike Jorgenson, R-Hayden Lake, was defeated by conservative Steve Vick of Dalton Gardens, 59 percent to 41 percent. Vick has no Democratic challenger in the November election.
- Sen. Jim Hammond, R-Coeur d’Alene, held off challengers John Green of Liberty Lake, Wash., and Jack Schroeder of Post Falls. Hammond received 51 percent of the vote, Green 37 percent and Schroeder 12 percent. Hammond has no Democrat opponent in the November election.
- Sen. Gary Schroeder, R-Moscow, was defeated by conservative Gresham Bouma of Viola, 57 percent to 43 percent. Bouma, however, faces a general election challenge from Dan Schmidt of Moscow in a Democratic-leaning district.
- Sen. Tim Corder, R-Mountain Home, beat conservative Marla Lawson of Lowman, 58 percent to 42 percent. Corder will be challenged in the November election by Democrat Henry Hibbert of Glens Ferry.
- Sen. Chuck Coiner, R-Twin Falls, was beaten by conservative Lee Heider of Twin Falls, 57 percent to 43 percent. Heider has no Democratic opponent in the November election.
- Sen. Dean Cameron, R-Rupert, defeated conservative Harold Mohlman of Rupert, 77 percent to 23 percent. Cameron faces no Democratic opponent in November.

Anglo insecurity in Arizona

It’s easy to assume that Arizona has become the epicenter in the battle against illegal immigration primarily because it has one of the highest percentages of undocumented migrants of any state in the union. But that’s just half the story behind the fear many white Arizonans evidently feel.

Arizona is something of a transient culture. “Post-ethnic” white transplants drove its population growth — particularly in recent decades — newcomers who had long since passed through the crucible of suburbanization and left behind the “home country” identities of their forebears. The leap by these Midwesterners or Californians to Arizona was another step beyond that.

What they found when they arrived (mostly to the hot emptiness of Phoenix), was not much in the way of Anglo culture. Earlier migrations didn’t spring from the kind of foundational events, like California’s Gold Rush or Texas’ Alamo heroics, that made for distinctive Americana. And instead of truly engaging whatever was there, they adopted a veneer of real and imagined local color.

By the late 20th century, white Arizonans had perfected a style critics dubbed “Taco Deco,” “Mariachi Moderne” or simply “Refried Architecture” — that faux Spanish colonial architecture with arches, tiles and the bougainvillea climbing everywhere. According to Phoenix architecture critic Lawrence Cheek, in the Valley of the Sun, “The farther you move away from the Hispanic neighborhoods of central and south Phoenix, the more refried architecture you see. The style has been coopted not by the people who could legitimately claim it as their heritage — they tend toward Middle American tract homes — but by itinerant gringos in search of a heritage. ...”

Faux American Indian culture is another part of the Arizona aesthetic. I know a fancy spa in Scottsdale that has a tepee in the back where a shaman leads meditation sessions. (Never mind that tepees were used by Plains Indians far from the Southwest.) In some parts of town, you can’t shake a stick without hitting mass-produced Kachina dolls, wrought-iron Kokopellis welded by hippie sculptors, and Indian jewelry that isn’t made by Indians.

None of this should be mistaken for genuine cross-pollination or healthy race relations. On the one hand, it demonstrates the Anglo newcomers’ desire to acquire the trappings of ethnicity. On the other, it suggests how comfortable they are commodifying and consuming less influential cultures.

And make no mistake, the coming of Anglos meant the delegitimizing of other cultures in the Arizona Territory. In the early 1900s, during Arizona’s struggle for statehood, its representatives had to prove to Washington that it was, in essence, white enough to enter the union.

Because of the large presence of non-Anglos, Indiana Sen. Albert Beveridge, the chairman of the Senate Committee on Territories, argued that the federal government should view Arizona as it would an overseas possession. To avoid its becoming like “the Negro section of the South,” he wanted Arizona to be managed the same way as the Philippines.

To counter such bias, proponents of statehood assured Washington that Anglo transplants dominated the territory politically and culturally. In 1902, congressional delegate Mark Smith declared that what made Arizona different from — read: more worthy than — New Mexico was that most people in the territory were non-natives: They came “fully grown from the different states of the union.”

When it was time to write a constitution, this logic was made explicit, and non-Anglos were relegated to second-class status. The struggle for statehood had honed a clear notion of what constituted the preferred Arizonan. As historian Eric V. Meeks has written, “Racial inequality was not simply an unfortunate corollary to full statehood; it was built into the very identity of Arizona from its inception.”

The echoes of that resound in the state’s adoption of a “present your papers” law, as well as its ban of voluntary K-12 ethnic studies. It’s hard not to see the whole outburst as a simple expression of white cultural insecurity. And 98 years after the territory became a state, the nasty campaign against illegal immigrants suggests that Anglo Arizonans’ identity is still driven less by who they are than by who they are not.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Memorial Day is for unity, not for fighting

The Twin Falls School District, with the approval of the district’s board of trustees, has scheduled a due process hearing on Memorial Day, Monday, May 31, at the Canyon Ridge High School Auditorium, commencing at 6 p.m. The purpose of the meeting is to consider the district’s proposed changes to teacher contracts.

Holding a hearing that is inherently adversarial in nature on Memorial Day diminishes the significance of this very special day. For nearly 150 years, Memorial Day has been set aside as a sacred day, reserved for the observation and appreciation of the heroic sacrifices made by American soldiers fallen in battle. As such, Memorial Day is a day when Americans unite as one for consolation and prayer. To end the day in a process riddled with divisiveness and strife, flies in the face of this most significant patriotic observance.

Please urge the Twin Falls School District, and its board of trustees, to reconsider the appropriateness of the currently scheduled date.

ISP officer’s gesture greatly appreciated

On Wednesday, May 19, we laid to rest my brother-in-law David Wayne Jones, an active member of the Idaho National Guard’s 116th and an Iraqi War Veteran. During the funeral procession to Wendell I witnessed something that I will never forget.

As our procession entered onto the interstate from Jerome, a state police officer stood on the side of the road next to his car with the lights flashing and saluted the hearse carrying my brother-in-law’s flag-draped casket. To that officer, I would like to say thank you for the respect you showed David that day. I for one will never forget.

Middle schoolers show community spirit

I think that it is time that some recognition go out to the many good young people of our community. It seems that in today’s society that we focus on the negative and that the positive is never acknowledged.

Last Friday, May 21, O’Leary Middle School students participated in Helping Hands Day. On this day, the students went to various places from 12:30 p.m. to 2:30 p.m. and donated their time to do community service projects throughout our community.

I received the benefit of this as the owner of the Twin Falls Cemetery.

Mr. and Mrs. McFarlin’s Prime Time Classes came to the cemetery and picked up trash and cleaned around headstones. I cannot express enough what a joy it was to see young people representing our community, their school and themselves in such a positive way. Each and every child showed care and compassion as they went about our cemetery. They showed respect that many adults fail to do today. What a credit to their school, the teachers and the parents for teaching these children to be such an asset to our community. I am sure that the others that participated at other facilities were just as helpful and respectful as those helping us.

Please join me in thanking them for such a great job.

Utah's Sen. Bennett talks about his fall

As we approached the Tuesday night with the most significant senatorial primaries of the year so far, I turned for guidance to a man who had already been through the fires that define the incendiary politics of 2010.

Ten days after he was barred from the ballot in the Utah Republican primary because the 3,500 delegates to the GOP state convention preferred to give more votes to his two challengers, three-term incumbent Sen. Bob Bennett was, as I expected, more analytical than angry, more thoughtful than embittered.

Bennett, 76, who followed his father to Washington and Capitol Hill, is the kind of legislator reporters value, because he can speak thoughtfully and dispassionately about his colleagues' collective mood without subjecting you to gobs of self-serving rhetoric.

ric.

Now, I found him equally reflective of what had caused his fellow Republicans, who had elected him for almost 20 years and frequently told pollsters he was their most popular incumbent, to turn against him.

"I'll tell you what is new," he said. "There is this thing called the federal government. It's big and intimidating and it's out of control. And whoever you are, and whatever your title, or your history, or your individual voting record, if you are part of it, you find yourself having to defend it. And sometimes, it just looks indefensible to them."

Two days before activist Republican voters in Utah gathered for the county caucuses that chose the delegates to the state convention, they watched on television as Democratic Speaker Nancy Pelosi forced an unusual Sunday session of the House of Representatives to push through an amended version of the Obama administration's health care bill. "It was a Sunday, which is a very special day for me and my fellow Mormons," Bennett said. "And it was really a display of partisan political muscle."

"We prepared for the county conventions like we never had before. We had every precinct covered, and we set our turnout quotas at twice the level we had ever seen before. We hit or exceeded our quotas almost everywhere, and we were swamped. People came out of the woodwork to vote against anyone they associated with the federal government."

In Bennett's view, his fate was sealed by the county conventions, and nothing that happened thereafter could change it. The efforts against him by out-of-state tea party people and other right-wing organizations simply let them claim credit for something they were late in joining, he said. And the efforts by wildly popular Mitt Romney and other establishment Republicans to save his candidacy were equally futile.

At the fringe, the movement to purge him took on aspects of ideological extremism, Bennett said. "I was asked several times about my position on the Seventeenth Amendment, providing for the direct election of senators," Bennett said. "They viewed that as the opening effort by Washington to usurp the power that the Constitution had placed in the hand of state legislatures."

But mainly it was a mainstream reaction against the centralization of power in the capital, a combination of bank bailouts, health care guarantees and all the other ways in which Washington has found reasons — or excuses — to intervene and to spend money it does not have.

That reaction is not confined to Utah. And it may not even be representative of the state. If Bennett had made the primary ballot, he claims he would have won re-nomination easily.

But we saw the anti-Washington sentiment Tuesday in Kentucky, where the physician son of libertarian Rep. Ron Paul easily defeated Senate Minority Leader Mitch McConnell's handpicked candidate for the Republican nomination for a vacant Senate seat — and credited his win to the tea partiers.

The same sentiment carried to Arkansas, where incumbent Democratic Sen. Blanche Lincoln was forced into a runoff by her labor-backed challenger.

And it claimed its largest victim of the year so far in Pennsylvania's Sen. Arlen Specter. Run out of the Republican Party last year by a GOP challenger, he fell embarrassingly to a less-known younger congressman in a bid for the Democratic nomination. His failure showed the Obama White House once again to be a toothless tiger — with its endorsements now having failed in Virginia, New Jersey, Massachusetts and Pennsylvania. No good news for the president there.

OTHER VIEWS

Here's what Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

... raising property taxes

Lewiston Tribune

If one principle guided Idaho Gov. C. L. "Butch" Otter and the GOP leadership in the recently concluded legislative session, it was this: The people of this state can't afford more taxes to fill the budget holes. Cut schools if you must. But don't raise state sales or income taxes.

To balance the budget, lawmakers proceeded to cut schools by $128 million. It worked out to an 8.5 percent cut, after you consider inflation and the cost of covering new students. For added measure, House Republican leadership has encouraged school districts to dig another 5.5 percent deeper in anticipation of another budget holdback.

So local districts have gone to work, trimming staffs, cutting teacher pay and reducing programs. Some have reduced the school year by a few days. Others are on a four-day week.

But an odd trend is emerging. Past a certain point, communities have decided the cuts just aren't worth it. So voters — parents, but also people without children in the school system as well as local business owners — have voluntarily increased taxes to pay for schools. Not any tax. The tax they dread the most. Property taxes. It's the only choice lawmakers have left to them. Only the state can raise sales and income taxes.

Last month, Genesee voters agreed to increase the supplemental property tax on a typical house by more than 30 percent. Doing so raised $185,000 more for local schools, replacing almost two-thirds of the money state lawmakers pulled away.

... Troy voters agreed to add $120,000 to their property tax burden. For the typical homeowner, it means a 20 percent boost in the property tax he pays to support the local schools ...

This is not a case of property-rich, wealthy districts deciding to do more for the kids. There isn't a more economically strapped area than Clearwater County, where one in five workers is unemployed. But after closing the junior high school, reducing the teaching staff by more than six positions and negotiating salary and benefit cuts for those who remain, Orofino has struck bedrock. So voters will be asked to backfill a third of the $800,000 lawmakers cut from the community's schools. That will take the supplemental levy up to $1.74 million, which translates into a 20 percent boost for the homeowner.

Or take Mountain View. It figures to lose $1.1 million. Making 40 percent of that will take the supplemental levy to within blinking distance of $2 million. For the Grangeville homeowner who is voting today, the choice comes down to agreeing to a 19 percent tax increase or risking the loss of more teaching positions, putting building maintenance on hold and closing school libraries four days out of five.

... Many of these districts have come to rely on local property taxes for a third of their budgets or more. Voting no would throw all of them into crisis.

So how is it that these Idahoans are willing to do for themselves what their state legislators are not — raise taxes to support schools? Could it just possibly be that the state leadership is in error?

... Hailey innovates

Idaho Mountain Express, Ketchum

Communities that take the lead, rather than taking a poll and then making a decision, usually run far ahead in their quality of life.

The city of Hailey is on that track.

In another step in the city's avowed "green" programs, Hailey is on the verge of creating an energy audit policy that would require new structures and older ones being modified or rebuilt to undergo a sophisticated on-site study to determine ways to stop energy waste and improve energy conservation.

Hailey City Council members thus far have avoided making the energy audits mandatory. Perhaps during the economic pinch, a policy allowing voluntary audits would be more saleable.

Yet, if the city can demonstrate the financial and health values of audits, homeowners and builders will sign up willingly.

The testimonial of Councilwoman Carol Brown is such an incentive. An audit of her home discovered a carbon monoxide problem that could have created a health problem.

In other older homes, audits could turn up energy waste that could be reversed, thus possibly saving homeowners the cost of the studies.

Hailey has cashed in on several significant U.S. and state financial grants it aggressively sought to achieve environmental and energy goals.

In its most ambitious energy-saving program, it used a $234,000 state energy grant to install a solar power generating system at the city wastewater treatment plant in Woodside. Hailey calculates it'll save the city $864,000 over 25 years in energy costs.

That should "light" up the faces of taxpayers.

week with a smear campaign against Democratic gubernatorial candidate Keith Allred.

In one of those annoying after-dinner robo-calls, the IACI's Prosperity Fund claimed Allred wants to bring "Washington's reckless spending habits to Idaho" and said Allred didn't want to make "tough spending choices." That, the IACI claimed, would have resulted in $82 million in new taxes. Finally, the call plugged a website, Allredink.com, to see "why Idaho can't afford Keith Allred's big spending agenda."

We understand that the IACI wants to keep its cozy relationship with the governor's office. It has sales tax exemptions to protect, after all, and we doubt it has forgiven Allred for his role in increasing Idaho's homeowner's exemption, something the IACI fiercely opposed. That's no surprise. Whenever someone attempts to look out for the little guy, the IACI can be counted on to oppose the effort.

Here are the facts: Allred supported the Legislature's stingy budgeting for the current fiscal year. He opposed the public school cuts for fiscal year 2011. He recommended avoiding those by signing on to a more realistic revenue forecast and going after tax deadbeats. If that doesn't work, Allred wrote in the Idaho Statesman's voter guide, "I'd make additional cuts rather than raise taxes on Idaho families."

The IACI's desperate attempt to smear Allred comes awfully early in the campaign season. Makes you wonder whether Republicans aren't seeing something in their internal polling that they don't like.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

American agriculture can do much more

Since I grew up in Idaho, I visit my mother and father there. I'd ride in the Toyota van with them, Dad in the back sometimes, and me and Mom in the front, because Dad had a scooter now and they were retired. I'd see field after field of gray-brown; long furrows of earth going endlessly towards the horizon: straight lines of rolled dirt extending to the blue sky, then on.

We drove through extinct towns surrounded by orchards, filled with old gnarled branches in the spring, still forming fruit in the summer, now for no one in particular. It's cliché to talk of "amber waves of grain," but those golden fields may someday and maybe soon, be the next American economic juggernaut.

Many states have exemplary programs, such as Washington, but many fall short of making the United States the main supplier of foodstuffs world wide, which it could be. If a bunch of farmers on a little island east of Australia, called New Zealand, can corner the dairy market in Asia, American agriculture can do much, much, more.

Arizona immigration law will boost crime, police chiefs say

By Pete Yost
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Arizona's new immigration law and similar proposals in other states would lead to an increase in crime, some police chiefs from around the country told Attorney General Eric Holder in an hourlong meeting Wednesday.

The chiefs told the attorney general that having to determine whether a person is in the United States illegally will break down the trust that police have built in communities and will divert law enforcement resources away from fighting crime.

If that happens, "we will be unable to do our jobs," said Los Angeles Police Chief Charlie Beck. "Laws like this will actually increase crime, not decrease crime."

Tucson Police Chief Roberto Villasenor said the requirements of the new law are so burdensome that "we doubt the federal government can even handle the numbers of people we will bring to them" on immigration status.

The new law "puts Arizona law enforcement right in the middle" at a time when police budgets are already in crisis, said John Harris, president of the Arizona Association of Chiefs of Police.

On Monday, the FBI reported that both violent crime and property crime dropped dramatically last year, a trend the police chiefs said could be imperiled if immigration is added to law enforcement's responsibilities.

The Obama administration is weighing a possible court challenge to the Arizona law and "the attorney general said he would be making decisions fairly quickly," though he did not elaborate, said Harris, who is police chief in Sahuarita, Ariz.

The chiefs, who spoke to reporters after the hourlong meeting with Holder, said the subject of filing a lawsuit never came up.

Holder has expressed reservations about the new law, saying it could lead to racial profiling.

Three weeks ago, the Justice Department's civil rights division head told some Arizona leaders that DOJ staff is analyzing the potential effects of the new state law.

Arizona immigration law empowers police to question anyone they suspect of being in the country illegally.

Woman seeks order against onetime JonBenet suspect

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A 19-year-old woman has requested a temporary restraining order against the man who once falsely claimed to have murdered JonBenet Ramsey in 1996.

John Mark Karr

San Francisco Court Commissioner William Gargano issued the order against John Mark Karr on April 19, on behalf of Samantha Spiegel, 19.

Spiegel claimed that Karr, who now goes by the name Alexis Valoran Reich, made what was described as "ongoing death threats" and "threats of sexual exploitation to children" in e-mails.

"I'm concerned for my safety: he knows where I sleep, where I go to school, what I look like," Spiegel wrote in her request for the restraining order. "(He) has seriously threatened to hunt me down and kill me by any means necessary."

In issuing the order, Gargano determined the threats were credible.

According to television interviews, Spiegel met Karr when she was 9 and he worked at the school she attended in San Francisco. The two began communicating in video chats, e-mails and instant messages, Spiegel said.

Her lawyer, Robin Sax, said the court has been unable to serve Karr with the order because they cannot find him. She said Karr was last seen in Seattle.

Spiegel said in court papers that authorities would have a hard time finding Karr.

Officials seek girl who questioned first lady

ANNAPOLIS, Md. — Peruvian officials in the U.S. were seeking the family of a second-grader who told first lady Michelle Obama that her mother "doesn't have papers," so they can help them with documentation from their home country, a consulate official said Wednesday.

The 7-year-old told the first lady during a visit last week to New Hampshire Estates Elementary School in the Washington, D.C., suburbs that her mother had said President Obama was "taking everybody away that doesn't have papers."

The girl then adding that her mother "doesn't have papers." Mrs. Obama tried to reassure her that the president was working to solve the immigration problem and "everybody's got to work together in Congress to make sure that that happens."

Consul General Cesar Jordan in Washington said the girl's parents are Peruvian and their national identification and passports have expired. He said consulate officials learned the girl's nationality after Peruvian media ran stories featuring interviews with the girl's grandfather.

Mobile-phone customers surprised by fees, FCC says

By Todd Shields
Bloomberg News

WASHINGTON — One in six mobile-phone customers has faced unexpected monthly fees, according to a survey released by the Federal Communications Commission as part of a drive to wrest clearer information from wireless carriers. Almost half of consumers subscribing to plans with fees for dropping service before the end of a contract didn't know the amount they would be charged, the agency said Wednesday in an e-mailed statement, citing the survey. "There is still more that can be done to help customers navigate what is sometimes a confusing marketplace," said FCC Chairman Julius Genachowski. Consumers would be helped by "simple and easy to understand" purchase and billing procedures, he said. Verizon Wireless, AT&T and other service providers may face rules similar to those in Europe, where carriers must send text messages to subscribers who are close to plan limits, the FCC has said. The agency said it is talking with wireless industry groups about steps to improve bills.

"We really can't say at this point whether this all will result in a rule-making or voluntary standards," Joel Gurin, chief of the FCC Consumer and Governmental Affairs Bureau, said on a conference call with reporters. Of the 30 million Americans who said they were surprised by their bills, 88 percent weren't contacted by their carriers when charges increased, the agency said today. About 84 percent weren't contacted when they were about to exceed their allowed minutes, text messages, or data downloads, the agency said. "It seems the commission is going to attempt to micromanage what is an incredible array of choices for consumers," said Steve Largent, president of the Washington-based CTIA — The Wireless Association, in an e-mailed statement. The wireless industry "does provide 'simple and easy to understand' plans for every type of American consumer," Largent said. "Only 36 percent" of mobile-phone customers who are familiar with their bills said that they include "very clear" information on early termination fees, the agency said. More than a third of people surprised by a bill said charges jumped by at least $50, and 23 percent said the increase was $100 or more, the FCC said.

Factory orders, new-home sales rise in April

By Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The economic recovery got a lift in April as orders for large manufactured goods surged while sales of new homes benefited from homebuyer tax credits. Manufacturing is helping drive the rebound. But some economists worry about the threat posed to U.S. exports from the widening debt crisis in Europe. And some fear that home sales will falter in coming months because the tax breaks for buyers have expired. Still, economists found the two Commerce Department reports released Wednesday generally encouraging. "These are very strong numbers which suggests that the second quarter started off on a very solid note," said Mark Zandi, chief economist at Moody's Analytics. Demand for commercial aircraft lifted orders for durable goods 2.9 percent last month. That was the best showing in three months. Excluding transportation, orders fell 1 percent in April. But that came after the March figures were revised to show a 4.8 percent jump. A separate report showed sales of new single-family homes jumped 14.8 percent in April. That gain followed a 29.8 percent surge in March, the biggest monthly increase in 47 years. Home sales have surged this spring as buyers rushed to sign sales contracts before tax credits expired on April 30. Historically low mortgage rates also helped fuel purchases. But sales are expected to slump in the coming months as households deal with slow job growth and tight credit. Even with sales rising, the median price of a new home tumbled last month: It dropped 9.6 percent to $198,400. That indicates continued stress in the housing market.

BP BEGINS NOVEL EFFORT TO STOP GULF OIL LEAK

By Greg Bluestein and Mike Baker
Associated Press writer

COVINGTON, La. — BP on Wednesday launched its latest bid to plug the gushing well in the Gulf of Mexico by force-feeding it heavy drilling mud, a maneuver known as a "top kill" that has never before been tried 5,000 feet underwater. The oil giant's chief executive earlier gave the procedure a 60 to 70 percent chance of working, and President Obama cautioned Wednesday there were "no guarantees." BP spokesman Steve Rinehart said the company will pump mud for hours, and officials have indicated it may be a couple of days before they know whether the procedure is working. The top kill involves pumping enough mud into the gusher to overcome the flow of oil, and engineers plan to follow it up with cement to try to permanently seal the well. A live video stream showed pictures of the oil gushing and the blowout preventer, the five-story device the mud was being pumped into. A weak spot in the device could blow under the pressure, causing a brand new leak. Gene Beck, a petroleum engineering professor at Texas A&M in College Station, said the endeavor

Oil prices jump 4 percent after 3-week slump

By Chris Kahn
Associated Press writer

NEW YORK — Oil prices rebounded sharply Wednesday after weeks of being knocked down by economic uncertainty. After dropping more than 20 percent in three weeks, oil rallied 4 percent, the best one-day percentage gain since September 30. Consumers, meanwhile, continue to benefit from declining prices at the pump. Investors chose to focus on positive U.S. economic news instead of troubles in Europe. Government reports said demand increased for both gasoline and big-ticket goods like refrigerators and airplanes. Many investors now think oil is undervalued and a rally in equities markets sparked a parallel rally in crude, said Tom Kloza, publisher and chief oil analyst at Oil Price Information Service. "I'm not saying the correction is over" in energy commodities, Kloza said. "But people are now saying, 'I can live with these prices.'" Oil held its gains even as U.S. stock markets turned lower. Benchmark crude for July delivery added $2.76 to settle at $71.51 a barrel on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The price was $86.84 on April 6. In London, the Brent crude rose $2.19 to settle at $71.74 a barrel on the ICE futures exchange. The benchmark oil contract was pushed higher early in the day by rising international stock markets. Prices kept rising as the Commerce Department reported that orders for durable goods increased 2.9 percent in April, the best showing in three months. The report suggested that the U.S. manufacturing industry was getting stronger, which could lead to more fuel consumption. Oil also jumped after the Energy Information Administration said U.S. gasoline supplies dropped unexpectedly last week. Gasoline stockpiles shrank by 200,000 barrels while demand grew compared with last year. The EIA also reported that oil supplies rose more than expected.

Companies juggle rebuilding, employee vacations

Small business owners may feel in a bit of a bind this summer. Just as many companies are recovering from the recession and making do with fewer staffers, it's high season for employee vacations. Owners may feel anxiety and resentment when workers say they want time off. They may be afraid of losing customers just when the business is picking up some momentum. The fact is, it's pretty hard to ban all employee vacations. The only companies that can realistically do that make most of their money during the summer months, such as restaurants that cater to beach-goers. Management consultants say owners should deal with this summer's vacation requests as they would in any year. That means managing staffers' expectations about how much time they can take and when they can take it. It also means planning now for how an employee's work will be done when he or she is away. THINK BEYOND THE SUMMER A business owner who's tempted to say no to staffers' vacation requests needs to think about what impact that response will have on workplace morale. Also, whether it might make employees think about finding other jobs as the labor market improves. "Don't take a hasty position that solves a problem in the short run but in the long run burns a bridge," said Leslie Yerkes, president of Catalyst Consulting Group in Cleveland. Yerkes said employees will especially remember how the boss treats them during the summer, when even the most dedicated staffer will want time off. They'll also hold on to their anger if they've had to make other sacrifices, such as not getting raises and having heavier workloads due to layoffs. See VACATIONS, Business 2

At hearing, workers describe failures on BP oil rig

By Michael Kunzelman, Mike Baker and Jeff Donn
Associated Press writers

NEW ORLEANS — As the Deepwater Horizon drilling rig burned around him, Chris Pleasant hesitated, waiting for approval from his superiors before activating the emergency disconnect system that was supposed to slam the oil well shut at the bottom of the Gulf of Mexico.

The delay may have cost critical seconds. When Pleasant and his co-workers at rig owner Transocean finally got the go-ahead to throw the so-called deadman's switch, they realized there was no hydraulic power to operate the machinery.

Five weeks after the April 20 explosion that killed 11 workers, the blown-out well continues to gush oil, pouring at least 7 million gallons of crude into the Gulf.

Dozens of witness statements obtained by The Associated Press show a combination of equipment failure and a deference to the chain of command impeded the system that should have stopped the gusher before it became an environmental disaster.

On Wednesday, BP launched its latest bid to plug the well, force-feeding it heavy drilling mud in a technique known as a top kill. Officials said it would take until at least Thursday to know if it worked, and President Barack Obama cautioned there are “no guarantees.”

At a Coast Guard hearing that started earlier this month and continued in New Orleans on Wednesday, Doug Brown, chief rig mechanic aboard the platform, testified that the trouble began at a meeting hours before the blowout, with a “skirmish” between a BP official and rig workers who did not want to replace heavy drilling fluid in the well with saltwater.

The switch presumably would have allowed the company to remove the fluid and use it for another project, but the seawater would have provided less weight to counteract the surging pressure from the ocean depths.

Brown said the BP official, whom he identified only as the “company man,” overruled the drillers, declaring, “This is how it's going to be.” Brown said the top Transocean official on the rig grumbled, “Well, I guess that's what we have those pinchers for,” which he took to be a reference to devices on the blowout preventer, the five-story piece of equipment that can slam a well shut in an emergency.

In a handwritten statement to the Coast Guard obtained by the AP, Transocean rig worker Truitt Crawford said: “I overheard upper management talking saying that BP was taking shortcuts by displacing the well with saltwater instead of mud without sealing the well with cement plugs, this is why it blew out.”

BP declined to comment on his statement.

A congressional memo about a BP internal investigation said that tests less than an hour before the well blew out found a buildup of pressure that was an “indicator of a very large abnormality.” Still, the rig team was satisfied that another test was successful and resumed adding the seawater, said the memo by Reps. Henry Waxman and Bart Stupak to members of the House Committee on Energy and Commerce, which is investigating.

Investigators for BP told reporters at a briefing in Washington that rig workers misconstrued the test they had thought was successful. Investigators said they don't understand why the mistake was made and added that there had been debate among the workers on the rig about how to proceed.

Dave Nagel, executive vice president of BP America, stressed

NEW YORK — In Facebook's vision of the Web, you would no longer be alone and anonymous. Sites would reflect your tastes and interests — as you expressed them on the social network — and you wouldn't have to fish around for news and songs that interest you.

Standing in the way is growing concern about privacy from Facebook users — most recently complaints that the site forced them to share personal details with the rest of the online world or have them removed from Facebook profiles altogether.

Facebook responded to the backlash Wednesday by announcing it is simplifying its privacy controls and applying them retroactively, so users can protect the status updates and photos they have posted in the past.

“A lot of people are upset with us,” CEO Mark Zuckerberg acknowledged at a news conference at Facebook's Palo Alto, Calif., headquarters.

The changes came after Facebook rolled out a slew of new features in April that spread its reach to the broader Web. Among them was a program called “instant personalization” that draws information from a person's profile to customize sites such as the music service Pandora. Some users found it creepy, not cool.

Privacy groups have complained to regulators, and some people threatened to quit the site. Even struggling MySpace jumped in to capitalize on its rival's bad press by announcing a “new, simpler privacy setting.”

To address complaints its settings were getting too complex, Facebook will now give users the option of applying the same preferences to all their content, so that with one click you can decide whether to share things with just “friends” or with everyone.

For those who found it complicated to prevent outside websites and applications from gaining access to Facebook data, there's now a way to do so in a couple of clicks.

It's not clear whether the changes will quell the unease among Facebook users, which has threatened to slow the site's breakneck evolution from a scrap-

AT A GLANCE

Facebook's latest privacy changes being rolled out in the next few weeks:

- Facebook currently gives users granular controls over many of the things they share on the site, such as each photo and status update. With the changes, users can apply the same settings to everything with one click, so that they can share with friends, friends of friends or everyone. But for those who want it, the granular controls are also staying.
- There is less information that Facebook makes automatically public. You can now hide your hometown, for example, and the pages for hobbies, books and other interests that you have linked to your profile. These were previously visible to everyone.
- Facebook says it will stop updating its privacy settings so frequently.
- Users can now turn off all outside applications and websites, instead of having to deny them access one by one.
- As it rolls out the changes, Facebook plans to notify users through a message that will appear on their page when they first log in.
- The changes apply retroactively, as well as to new services still to come.

What's not changing:

- Users' full name, profile picture, gender and work or college networks remain visible to everyone.

py college network to an Internet powerhouse with nearly a half-billion people.

“They've lost the users' trust. That's the problem,” said Marc Rotenberg, executive director of the Electronic Privacy Information Center, an advocacy group.

“In the earlier days, there was time to regain it. It's not so clear now. I think it's getting more serious than making changes and moving on,” he said.

Some of Facebook's loudest critics offered cautious praise but indicated the young company will need to do more to prove it cares about privacy.

Sen. Charles Schumer called it a “significant first step that Facebook deserves credit for,” but added he'd still prefer that Facebook require users to actively turn on sharing with outside sites, rather than having sharing be the default setting.

The space shuttle Atlantis is towed to the orbiter processing facility Wednesday at the Kennedy Space Center in Cape Canaveral, Fla., after Atlantis and her crew of six wrapped up a 12-day mission.

Shuttle Atlantis completes 32nd, final flight

By Marcia Dunn
Associated Press writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — How would you look after 120 million miles?

Atlantis might appear a little scuffed up to outsiders as it heads into retirement after a quarter-century of spaceflight.

But to the trained eyes of NASA engineers, the ship is still in its prime — a fact that adds to wistful emotions at the space agency as the shuttle program winds down.

Atlantis returned home from its 32nd and final voyage Wednesday, the first of three shuttles that are closing out their flying careers and eventually heading to museums.

“The legacy of Atlantis, now in the history books,” Mission Control announced at touchdown.

About 1,200 guests lined the Kennedy Space Center runway to watch the shuttle glide through a clear morning sky to a flawless landing at the end of a 12-day journey.

NASA employees wore white ribbons with the name “Atlantis” and the shuttle's picture embossed in gold. Even the lead flight directors came in from Houston for the occasion.

Only two shuttle flights remain — by Discovery and Endeavour — before the entire fleet is retired. Barring a reprieve from the White House, Atlantis will stand by as a rescue ship for the very last shuttle flight, then take off for a museum somewhere.

The shuttle came back “really, really clean,” with just a couple of dings in its thermal shielding, said NASA officials who were out on the runway with Atlantis' beaming crew and shuttle workers.

“It's just a beautiful machine to see out on the runway, and we got to see it up close and personal again today,” observed launch director Mike Leinbach. “I'm going to hate to see that go away.”

Before the 2003 Columbia disaster, shuttles regularly landed with hundreds of nicks and even gouges. Redesigned fuel tanks took care of that problem.

Launch manager Mike Moses noted how often NASA officials now describe a just-retained shuttle as “one of the cleanest we've ever seen.”

“That's actually the truth. Each one is just getting better and better,” he said.

The hodgepodge of old and new thermal tiles, combined with the rigors of launch and the heat of re-entry, might make the shuttles appear shabbier than they really are.

Pilot Dominic “Tony” Antonelli said Atlantis looked “just absolutely fabulous” after logging so many miles. “It's a shame,” he said, that the shuttle may not fly again.

Report: Trans fat limits lead to healthier foods

The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Holy fish sticks! Scientists finally have some good news about fat in our foods.

Contrary to fears, most food manufacturers and restaurants did not just swap one bad ingredient for another when they trimmed artery-clogging trans fats from products and menus, an analysis finds.

Even the french fry, a long-time dietary scourge, got a healthier remake. But there's still room for improvement, particularly for some items sold in supermarkets, which replaced heart-damaging trans fat with its unhealthy cousin, saturated fat.

A Harvard researcher and a consumer advocacy group examined 83 foods that had a makeover since 2006. That year the federal government began requiring food labels to list the amount of trans fat in packaged products and New York City became the first of several cities to phase them out in restaurants.

Trans fats are created when hydrogen is added to liquid oils to harden them for baking or to extend shelf life. With trans fat under attack, food makers and restaurants tinkered with various cooking oil and fat substitutes, trying not to compromise taste and texture. But how healthy are the reincarnations?

Harvard researcher Dr. Dariush Mozaffarian and the Center for Science in the Public Interest checked grocery products and restaurant chow for fat content. They studied margarine, junk food, baked goods and fast food from five chains.

The researchers did not do their own testing, but instead used Food and Drug Administration databases, nutrition labels and industry brochures to determine trans fat and saturated fat levels.

Results were published in a letter in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

Nearly all of the foods analyzed were free or mostly free of trans fat, and many companies and restaurants did not spike their saturated fat content when they cut trans fat — 65 percent of supermarket products and 90 percent of restaurant fare contained saturated fat levels that were lower, unchanged or only slightly higher than before.

No place safe in coming hurricane season, researcher says

By Brian K. Sullivan
Bloomberg News

A hurricane researcher who rarely issues seasonal forecasts says the coming Atlantic cycle is likely to be a bad one, unleashing the sort of storms that become “the big and the ugly ones.” Fifteen to 20 named storms may develop in the season, which begins June 1, threatening both the Gulf of Mexico and the East Coast, said Greg Holland, director of the Mesoscale and Microscale Meteorology Division of the National Center for Atmospheric Research. Environmental factors such as wind patterns and ocean temperatures are more conducive to storm development this year than in 2005, Holland said in a telephone interview from Boulder, Colo. In 2005, a record 28 storms with winds of 39 mph or greater formed. One of them was Hurricane Katrina, which unleashed flooding that covered much of New Orleans and killed more than 1,800 people. “This one stands out so much that there is no rational looking at the evidence which gives you anything else but that this is going to be a bad season,” said Holland. Academic and commercial forecasters have issued predictions calling for as many as 18 storms during the Atlantic season, which runs through Nov. 30. Thursday, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, which has postponed its prediction once, is expected to release its outlook for the season. “They are calling a special press conference in (Washington) D.C., so I don’t think they are doing that for the fun of it,” Holland said. Holland has held positions with or been an adviser to the U.S. Navy, the Australian Meteorological Bureau and NOAA, and has written or contributed to more than 15 books and more than 90 academic and scientific papers on meteorology and hurricanes. “I normally don’t get involved in hurricane seasonal forecasting, partly because it is not my expertise and partly I am fairly jaundiced about some of the results,” Holland said. “But this particular season I am being quite different.” In an average year, 11 systems develop into named storms, with six of them reaching the 74- mph threshold for hurricanes and two growing into major storms with winds of 111 mph or more, according to the National Hurricane Center. The shorter-term 1950 to 2009 average is 10 storms, six hurricanes and three major systems.

Holland said he expects the majority of the 2010 storms to develop in an area between the western coast of Africa and the Lesser Antilles often called the main development region. “If we do indeed get the storms developing down there, and that’s been the trend for the last 11, 12 years now, when they get going they tend to be the big and the ugly ones,” Holland said. “About 90 percent of all the Category 4s and very close to 100 percent of the Category 5s come from down in that region.”

New managers make changes at Rock Creek Race Track

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

Changes are happening at Rock Creek Race Track in Kimberly.

Riders to the motocross facility will notice a longer, newly-designed race track with new soil. More changes are planned, say track managers Ryan Hinton and Kelly Mangum of RK Promotions.

The pair, hired this year by track owners Denis and Bobbie Sandrock, say the improvements aim to make the track more competitive on a national level.

Changes so far include:

- New soil. The track has been elevated by about 2 feet, Mangum said, which should make riders happy. It also is a tougher soil, not as soft as the previous dirt.
- Extended track. So far, the track has been extended about 300 feet, Mangum said. They hope to add 200 more yards to the track this summer, which will increase lap times to be more consistent with national standards.
- Design change. “We changed the layout of the track for no particular reason but to freshen it up a bit,” Mangum said. “Riders got tired of the same exact thing, but now they have a reason to want to come back ... we’re trying to build the track to have a more national feel to it.”

The managers, both who have years of off-road experience, have formed a new website for the track and aim to keep practice and gate fees affordable, Mangum said. Practice is $15, gate fees $8.

“Rider numbers are down in the sport, so those of us who have the opportunity to make it affordable should,” he said. “We need to step up and help the sport to stay alive.”

Mangum said this is their first time managing a track, but they hope to be able to manage more in the future.

“This gives us more time to do something else,” Denis Sandrock said about the reason he hired the managers. He hopes it’ll give

GOOD FOR THE KIDS

Jerome man promotes dirt bikes to help youth improve self-esteem, stay off drugs

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

JEROME — As steel-gray clouds glided overhead, blown by a cold wind, the five dirt bikes set up in James Allinen’s backyard looked as if they were ready to ride.

But the chilly weather Thursday afternoon, and Allinen’s busy schedule, prevented him and his kids from attempting any off-road fun.

That was OK, because dirt-bike fun happens frequently with the Allinens.

Riding dirt bikes, however, is more than about having a good time for this family of five. Since his kids became involved with dirt bikes, he’s noticed a difference. They’ve gotten better grades in school, express more self-esteem and have better attitudes.

“Since they’ve been riding,” Allinen says, “their grades went to As and Bs, and their attitude inside the house has been positive.”

Allinen and his wife Janie have three children; two are adopted.

Riding isn’t something he’s pushed on his kids, he says, but one by one they’ve chosen to pursue it on their own.

That makes Dad smile.

“They wanted to ride, so I said ‘all right, let’s get you all bikes,’” he said.

They all ride Yamaha’s, the family’s dirt bike of choice and because it is the manufacturer that sponsors Allinen in the Southwestern Idaho Desert Racing Association (SIDRA).

He still rides, but now he’s focusing on the kids.

Thirteen-year-old Rachell said riding is a lot of fun, but it also has helped her to make new friends and become more popular in school.

Monica, 9, echoed the same sentiments, noting that she’s been able to better break out of her shell because of her increasing popularity with classmates.

“It kind of makes you feel like a celebrity,” Allinen said. “People notice when you wear your jersey, they know you’re a racer.”

Allinen, 31, started riding about five years ago, but he’s only been racing for two. He started when a coworker at Jerome Cheese Co. encouraged him to buy a dirt bike. Allinen did, and one thing led to another until he started racing. He was a natural, winning one of his first races, and things began to change for him. Yamaha approached, asked if he’d like to ride for them.

“Sure,” Allinen told them. “I love your bikes.”

Allinen now is helping to sponsor youth through the LBZ logo he and his wife created. It’s taken from the Local Boyz shop he’d eventually like to open. His first sponsor is 14-year-old Michael Roberts of Jerome.

Allinen said he only sponsors kids who are good, focused students in school. He also helps promote a healthy, drug-free lifestyle, and says riding dirt bikes helps kids stay involved with something positive — a good push in the fight against drugs.

Thoughts and observations about the off-road world

A couple years ago when we first kicked off the off-road edition, we had the idea of maybe taking it completely off-road ... and into the water.

We haven’t taken the plunge just yet, but think we’d like to this summer.

What I’m thinking: personal watercraft. I’d like to talk with a family, group or individual who rides Jet Ski’s or other personal watercraft.

Where do you ride? How often? How much different is it than riding a snowmobile?

It’s something I’ve obviously never tried and would like to learn more about it.

I often search wire news for off-road issues, and almost every time I do I come across a handful of briefs that tell about the latest all-terrain vehicle tragedy, how someone was injured or killed in an off-road accident.

Sometimes when you’re in the wild accidents can’t be helped, but most of the time they can be prevented. Perhaps surprisingly — or maybe not — I don’t see nearly as many motorcycle crash reports as I do ATV ones. Some from this week’s reports:

- An 8-year-old boy died after his ATV flipped over, throwing the boy in Mayfield, Ky.
- A rural Maquoketa, Iowa, man was pinned under an ATV for three hours while rescuers searched for him in a heavily wooded area Sunday night.

A deputy said the man was driving the ATV when he lost control, and it landed on its side, pinning him underneath.

- A 50-year-old southeast Missouri man was hospitalized with moderate injuries after his ATV crashed into a school bus. The Missouri State Highway Patrol says the man crossed the center line, struck a school bus and overturned.

Lesson: Be careful, ride safe, wear protective gear.

This week’s main off-road story is about James Allinen and the youth he’s trying to promote through desert riding. He says the sport is a great way for youth to keep focused on something positive in their lives, increasing the chances of them staying drug-free.

It’s not the first time I’ve heard such remarks. The riders I meet usually say dirt bike riding has helped them to want to live a clean, sober lifestyle.

Shane Lee, a motocross rider who I met in 2008, told me at the time, “You have to stay really straight. You can’t be into drugs or alcohol and still race.”

He said other riders in the sport are like an extended family to him, who help him stay focused and support his clean lifestyle.

If you suspect your kids are susceptible to experimenting with drugs, it might not be a bad idea to introduce them to a different kind of peer pressure: an off-road group.

Riders say, if done right, it’s positive, fulfilling and fun, and there’s a sense of camaraderie that’s hard to neglect.

Your cell phone may be your best defense against aliens

Science fiction has envisioned humanity conquering invading aliens with everything from nuclear warheads to the common cold. But, in reality, our bug-eyed, would-be overlords have been felled by the lowly cell phone.

While I'd be amazed if Earth is the only haven of life in the universe, I'd be nearly as amazed to learn extraterrestrials had traversed the enormous gulf of space between their home and ours. Like the late Carl Sagan, I contend that extraordinary claims require extraordinary evidence and, so far, the evidence for alien visitation has fallen far short of extraordinary.

With the exception of a handful of blurry photos, and at least as many demonstrable forgeries, the vast body of proffered evidence for alien encounters comprises notoriously unreliable eyewitness testimony.

Enter the cell phone/camera. As ubiquitous as they are, one has to wonder why UFO images haven't skyrocketed accordingly. On the contrary, photos of flying objects that actually resemble spacecraft are rarer than ever. In an era where "Photoshop" has morphed into an Internet-slang verb meaning "to fake an image," it's harder for a would-be forger to fool some of the people even some of the time.

Maybe the aliens find excessive cell phone use in public places as annoying as the rest of us?

Utah river otters settling into Provo River dam

PROVO, Utah (AP) — After a century's absence, Utah's river otters are poised for a comeback in Wasatch Front waterways.

Last fall, a dozen otters from the Green River were introduced to the middle fork of the Provo River near Midway. They've taken up residence behind a 5-foot-high beaver dam and appear to be settling in.

The hope is that relocation will result in a self-sustaining otter population.

Biologists are studying patterns in otter habitats, diets and migrations. The project is a joint effort of the Utah Division of Wildlife Resources, the group Utah Wildlife in Need and a Brigham Young University graduate student, Casey Day, who monitors otter activities.

Early data analysis shows the otters typically forage for food in the nearby Deer Creek Reservoir at night, then rest in calmer sections of the river during the day.

"I think they've finally settled in here," Day said of the Midway area, adding that several females otters have "denned up," so he soon expects to see otter cubs.

Each otter was implanted with a radio transmitter for monitoring. Three of the dozen otters have died — one struck by an automobile and two from complications from the transplant. The project team plans to import another 20 otters to the area this fall.

"It's a great stretch of river, with abundant habitat," DWR non-game biologist Kim Hersey said of the lower Provo River. "They'll likely make their way down. One could take off and show up at Utah Lake tomorrow, or it could still be a few generations away!"

Some anglers have expressed concern that the otters will deplete the fish population, but the DWR said the creatures will balance an unchecked trout population.

"We're just restoring a naturally occurring ecosystem," Slater said. "The anglers won't see a marked difference."

Otter reintroduction has been made possible in part by the restoration of the Provo River's banks. Utah's arm of the federal Reclamation Mitigation and Conservation Commission has worked to restore the river's meandering channels and streams which were straightened in places to better serve farming and irrigation demands.

Alterations of the river led to the demise of the native otter population, said J.D. Davis of Utah Wildlife in Need.

changes they've made to the track so far.

"Denis and Bobbie did a good job getting this track started. It's in a good location," Mangum said, noting the changes will make it an even better facility.

Non-motorized boat launch opens at Centennial Waterfront Park

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

About 30 people attended a grand opening and ribbon cutting ceremony for a non-motorized boat launch Tuesday afternoon at Centennial Waterfront Park.

The new 30-foot launch ramp, built by the Twin Falls County Parks and Waterways Department, can accommodate up to three kayaks, canoes or rafts at a time.

"It's great for alternate-boating people to have access to the river," said Twin Falls County Commission Terry Kramer.

The easy-access ramp, which sits several yards downriver from the motorized-use docks, will make it easier for users to launch their craft, he said, and they won't be hindered by wakes and waves created by motor boats.

The launch, which cost about $41,000, is paid for through the county's capitol improvements fund. It's been planned for about five years, but installation work began in March.

Darrell Heider, a former director of the parks department, said the launch is a good addition to the park.

"It will take congestion off the other (docks)," he said, before noting his appreciation for the many groups who've helped improve the county's parks over the years.

Fishing will not be allowed from the new launch, according to Twin Falls County Sheriff's Lt. Daron Brown, though a couple had sat on the ramp casting their lines before the ceremony Tuesday. A sign will be posted soon to discourage potential anglers, he said.

Suggestions for a young person's first deer hunt

Question: "I'd like to take my grandson on his first deer hunt this fall. Do you have a suggestion for a good place to go on a first deer hunt?"

Answer: The Idaho Department of Fish and Game has recognized changes in the nuclear family and understands how this has altered hunting and fishing as a family tradition. We view opportunities to support young hunters as a significant part of our mission. The department has improved hunting opportunities for youth to help recruit new hunters.

Young hunters must first complete a hunter education class. You can review class schedules and sign up for one online at our website below. After completion of the hunter education class, your young hunter must purchase his or her junior hunting license.

In the 2010 big game hunting brochure — available on-line, at local vendors or regional office — there are several excellent choices available for first-time hunters 12 years and older.

There are several special youth deer hunting opportunities called youth controlled hunts. Many of these special opportunities have been under-subscribed the last several years. Applicants must be 12 to 17 years of age to apply for these hunts. As limited entry hunts, these opportunities are really great for kids. Applications for these hunts must be submitted before June 6 at any license vendor or regional office. To see if your child is eligible, see pages 21 and 75 of the big game hunting brochure.

There also are many "regular" deer, any-weapon hunts available where a youth between 12 and 17 years old may accompany an adult hunter. Adult hunters in these hunts are restricted to antlered-only deer, but youth may take deer of either sex. In the Magic Valley region, youth hunters may harvest either sex deer in units 43, 46, 48, 49 and 52A from Oct. 10-24. Young hunters must obtain a junior regular deer tag to hunt in these units.

A quick review of the big game hunting brochure reveals several additional youth-only deer hunting opportunities across the state.

For more information, review the rules online or pickup a 2010 big game hunting brochure.

Taking a kid fishing or hunting is a wonderful way to spend time together sharing the outdoors.

Tucson man's electric bike could be a greener ride

By Dan Sorenson
Arizona Daily Star

TUCSON, Ariz. — Greg Fisher isn't trying to save the planet with his two-seat, human-powered mechanical mountain goat.

It could help do that — or at least save it from some fossil-fuel exhaust — but Fisher is a practical guy. If his invention, the Animas Quadracycle, ever goes into production — and that's a big "if" at this point — he figures most of the people who buy it will use it for basic road transportation. The quad's off-road capabilities will just be frosting on the cab.

To make enough Animas Quadracycles to kick in the economies of scale and lower the price — now about $15,000 each — he thinks it will take major mass production. He believes a Chinese manufacturer could bring the retail price down to about $2,000 with production of roughly 100,000 units.

And that kind of production would require demand from the masses — "Africans selling gas in glass quart jars countries where there isn't a gas station on every corner," as Fisher puts it — rather than American thrill sports looking to conquer some gnarly trails.

He estimates it would cost between $2,000 and $3,000 just for the parts to build a copy of his latest prototype, plus 300 to 400 hours of labor. Hence, the $15,000 current price.

But Fisher understands that practical side of the Quadracycle, using his latest prototype — which includes an electric assist — as urban transportation himself.

Fisher said he uses the electric boost, activated by a thumb lever on the mountain bike-style handlebar, to get that extra push needed to make a light on East Speedway or maintain speed on a hill. In heavy, rugged off-road use, he kicks in the electric assist when he and his passenger's legs and lungs are burning.

But those who would buy it strictly as efficient transportation would be missing some major thrills. It's as serious an off-road vehicle as any pumped-up 4WD Jeep or baja buggy.

Fisher proved that during a recent off-road, boulder-bashing ride on the Chiva Falls double-track trail off Redington Road on the east end of the Santa Catalinas.

Fisher won't say "you can't tip it over," but he does say he never has — despite his best efforts.

When you're riding in the right seat (the steering is on the left) and he's heading straight for yet another car-sized boulder that seems impossible to top, you'd swear the first time may be mere seconds away.

Fortunately, the driver and passenger are busy pumping the bicycle-style pedals, which keeps the lungs gasping for air too hard to spare any breath for screaming.

Fishing season opens Saturday

The traditional opening of fishing season, and the official launch of summer in Idaho, is Saturday.

Unless listed under regional exceptions in the rule book, fishing is open on Idaho rivers and streams from Saturday through Nov. 30. Most lakes and reservoirs and ditches and man-made canals are open year round.

On that day alone — Free Fishing Day — people across Idaho, residents and non-residents, may fish without a license. All other rules, such as limits or tackle restrictions, remain in effect.

Free Fishing Day allows people who've never fished before to give it a try, in the hopes of developing a life-long love for the recreation sport. Parents are especially encouraged to bring their children.

At special locations around the southwest region, equipment will be available for use and fishing experts will be on hand to help novice anglers learn the ins and outs of fishing. In addition, all these locations will be stocked with hatchery rainbow trout prior to the day.

Kids

In the future, Allinen would like to sponsor more youth in SIDRA desert racing, and is confident he'll get to that point. But anyone willing to help sponsor his team would be helpful, he says. He doesn't accept cash, but businesses who'd like to donate discounts or sponsorship in other ways would be appreciated.

He said he's especially grateful to his wife, who works more than one job to help fund the venture. "I couldn't do this without her," he said.

She said she worries about the kids riding, sure, but believes it is important for parents to support their children in the positive things they wish to accomplish.

So far, she said, dirt bikes have been a very positive thing in her children's lives.

In an e-mail Friday to the Times-News, Allinen wrote: "I can say that our relationship to God makes our bond but the time spent together in this sport helps us maintain that bond. We learn to work as a team and spend a lot of time together as a family sharing in something we all have a passion for.

"Many times families can't spend that time because the children are involved with other sports that require separation such as after school practice, and training camps that parents cannot attend. In this case with our first fully sponsored rider (Michael Roberts), we have made each and every training day and trip fun for all the families to attend."

During the summer, Allinen will help his children and Roberts prepare for the next SIDRA race in October. There'll be plenty of camping trips, practice rides and video recording. The videos, he says, helps the kids to see their rides and how they might improve.

"This is all about the kids," he said. "It's all about the kids."

Diane Bevan to compete for Mrs. Idaho International title

By Judy Albertson
Times News writer

Diane Bevan of Burley has been selected for the title of Mrs. Southern Idaho, going on to compete in the Mrs. Idaho International Pageant on Aug. 14, the pageant has announced.

The event will be at 7 p.m. at the Nampa Civic Center. Bevan will compete in Interview, Fitness Wear and Evening Gown competitions.

The Idaho International Pageant is a platform-based pageant. Bevan has selected “You Really are Better than you Think you Are! Discovering the Ability to see Yourself Through 3-D Glasses” for her platform.

“I wanted my platform to be inspiring, motivating and uplifting to the women in the state of Idaho,” Bevan said. “I feel there is an overwhelming number of married women in Idaho that are suffering from depression and low self-esteem.”

Bevan, who owns and operates Sweetheart Manor in Burley, is not new to public speaking. She has emceed several Mini-Cassia Chamber events, as well as the Mini-Cassia Women’s Expo in February.

“That’s where I was recruited to be in this pageant. The reigning Mrs. Idaho, Brandy Townsend, was the speaker at the expo and she told me to ‘throw my heels into the race,’” Bevan said.

Bevan was named Miss Teen Oklahoma in 1986 and was involved in various activities all through her school years.

“In high school I was voted most likely to take Oprah Winfrey’s job,” she said. “I feel like I have been planning this for my whole life.”

Bevan has been active in volunteer community activities including fashion shows, cooking classes and golf tournaments. She has donated to and sponsored athletic teams and is involved in the activities of her favorite charity, Special Olympics. She describes herself as “energetic, dedicated and creative.”

For many years Stan voluntarily attended to the maintenance and management of the Veterans Cemetery, providing skilled leadership in all aspects of the operation.

The VFW is seeking the names of other veterans who also volunteered their time for the cemetery’s upkeep.

There are only a few names of past caretakers, but the cemetery wants a complete list of individuals and their military history. Please provide name and a brief history so that plaques can be added to the memorial.

- Hailey’s Memorial Day ceremony will be from 11 a.m. to 12:15 p.m. Monday at the Hailey Cemetery, 511 E. Maple St. It is open to the public and there is no cost. Join them to honor and remember the nearly 400 known Hailey veterans. Information: maggiespringer@msn.com.

- The public is invited to a Memorial Day service from 11:30 a.m. to noon Monday at Elmwood Cemetery in Gooding, weather permitting. The event will be at the chapel building at the cemetery’s south end, and will feature guest speaker and state Rep. Donna Pence.

The service will be hosted by Gooding’s American Legion Post No. 30, Legion Auxiliary Post No. 30 and Veterans of Foreign Wars Post No. 3078. Music will be provided by June Koonce, president of the Legion Auxiliary post.

Those who require seating are asked to bring their own.

VFW Post No. 3078 also needs help placing crosses and flags on veterans’ graves at Elmwood Cemetery, starting at 6 p.m. Friday. All are invited to lend a hand.

Rice bodies plague patient recovering from shoulder surgery

DEAR DR. GOTT: My healing wasn’t complete a year following rotator-cuff surgery. My shoulder became red and swollen. My doctor opened it up to see what was going on and found “rice bodies” — thousands of them. I understand this is a rare thing and that little is known about the cause or the treatment. I am specifically interested in knowing what antibiotics should be used. I am now on infusion therapy. Also, could these be elsewhere in my body?

DEAR READER: Identified and documented as far back as 1895, rice bodies were originally thought related to tuberculous arthritis. The name originated because of a similarity in appearance to grains of polished white rice.

Today, rice bodies are commonly linked with chronic rheumatoid arthritis (RA), as a complication of bursitis or an underlying systemic disorder. They appear to represent an unrelated group of particles that may contain fibrin, fibronectin, mononuclear and blood cells, collagen and amorphous materials.

Diagnosis is accomplished through X-ray, ultrasound or MRI. I cannot tell you which antibiotic to take because management depends on the underlying cause. For example, if your rice bodies are the result of chronic bursitis, an antibiotic may not be appropriate. Only your physician can direct you in that regard. Elimination of the offender in conjunction with treatment for any possible underlying disease should provide relief.

Infusion therapy is a means of administering medication through a needle or catheter intravenously. Infections and disorders unresponsive to oral medications, dehydration, diseases of the gastrointestinal tract, congestive heart failure and platform is desire, the second determination and the third dedication. By utilizing her theory, she said, people can make their lives more realistic and alive. She offered an example from her own life, learning to sew in her teens until she was able to make her own gown when she was homecoming queen. “It shows that if you are determined to do something, you can,” she said. Bevan is most excited about the evening-gown competition. She has ordered a gown, but will redo most of it to create her own design. The pageant is not considered a beauty pageant. Grading in the competition is 50 points for platform, 25 for evening gown and 25 for fitness. It focuses on the intelligence of women, she said.

If Bevan wins the Idaho competition, she will compete in the Miss International Pageant in Chicago in July 2011. Even though it would require some traveling time for speaking engagements and various duties, she does not expect it to interfere with her business. “I just hired an assistant wedding planner and I now have a full staff. I don’t wash the dishes much anymore,” she said.

The pageant is open to the public, and Bevan would like to see some Mini-Cassia residents attend. “I really think I’m going to win. It is my hope that as the new 2011 Mrs. Idaho, I will have the opportunity to make a difference to the women in Idaho,” Bevan said. For more information about the Idaho International Pageant visit www.IdahoPageants.net or call 283-8718.

immune deficiencies are commonly handled through this form of therapy. Thirty years ago, patients being infused were required to remain in the hospital for the duration of the treatment. However, with expenses as they are in a hospital setting, the same service can now be provided in an outpatient setting or at home. I remember when a woman remained in hospital for close to a week following childbirth. Surgical patients undergoing relatively simple procedures spent almost the same amount of time recuperating before being sent home. Now, however, the sooner a patient returns to normal activity, the better. Rice bodies can be found in joint areas such as the shoulder, knee or ankle. If your condition is the result of chronic bursitis or RA, multiple joints can be affected, but I can’t guess whether that will occur in your case. DEAR DR. GOTT: Many publications have inserts in them for discounts on prescription drugs. When I see these, I tear them out, take them to my pharmacy, and present them at the window where prescriptions are filled. Employees save them to use for customers who don’t have insurance. Why do I do this? Because I have insurance and can help others who do not.

DEAR READER: Target and Walmart offer $4 prescriptions for a one-month supply of medication. There may be other large chains I am unaware of that provide a similar program. This is of enormous assistance to everyone, but primarily those on a fixed income who must watch every penny.
Over the years, I have known patients who cut their medication in half, making a prescription last twice as long. Obviously, it isn’t always as effective when a modification in dosage is instituted but maybe half is better than nothing when the alternative is not to take anything, compounding a medical disorder.
If we all take your lead and make an effort to help others in similar ways, we will be doing something good for our communities and perhaps might even feel better about ourselves. In today’s difficult economy, it’s a thoughtful thing you do. Keep up the good work.

TV's 'People Are Funny' host Art Linkletter dies

By Lynn Elber
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — Art Linkletter, who as the gently mischievous host of TV's "People Are Funny" and "House Party" in the 1950s and '60s delighted viewers with his ability to get kids — and grownups — to say the darndest things on national television, died Wednesday. He was 97.

Linkletter died at his home in the Bel-Air section of Los Angeles, said his son-in-law, Art Hershey, the husband of Sharon Linkletter.

"He lived a long, full, pure life, and the Lord had need for him," Hershey said.

Linkletter had been ill "in the last few weeks time, but bear in mind he was 97 years old. He wasn't eating well, and the aging process took him," Hershey said.

Linkletter hadn't been diagnosed with any life-threatening disease, he said.

Linkletter was known on TV for his funny interviews with children and ordinary folks. He also collected their comments in a number of best-selling books.

"Because of Art Linkletter, adults found themselves enjoying children," said Bill Cosby, whose style interviewing kids on his own show in the late '90s was often compared to Linkletter's.

"An amazing fellow, a terrific broadcast talent, a brilliant businessman. An all-around good guy," CNN's Larry King added about his longtime friend and frequent guest.

Asked what made Linkletter so appealing to audiences, King said, "He had an unusual voice, a twang to his voice that was immediately recognizable. And he looked like your favorite uncle."

"Art Linkletter's House Party," one of television's longest-running variety shows, debuted on radio in 1944 and was seen on CBS-

TV from 1952 to 1969.

"On 'House Party' I would talk to you and bring out the fact that you had been letting your boss beat you at golf over a period of months as part of your campaign to get a raise," Linkletter wrote.

"All the while, without your knowledge, your boss would be sitting a few feet away listening, and at the appropriate moment, I would bring you together," he wrote. "Now, that's funny, because the laugh arises out of a real situation."

Linkletter's programs — like many of today's reality TV shows — often relied on ordinary people sharing too much information on national television.

But his shows were far gentler than today's often mean-spirited productions. His guests experienced, at most, mild embarrassment instead of utter humiliation. When Linkletter elicited an all-too-revealing remark from a guest, he did it with devilish charm, not malice.

Though "House Party" had many features, the best known was the daily interviews with schoolchildren.

Linkletter collected quotes from children into "Kids Say The Darndest Things," and it sold in the millions. The book "70

Art Linkletter got his first taste of broadcasting with a part-time job while attending San Diego State College in the early 1930s. He graduated in 1934.

"I was studying to be an English professor," Linkletter once said. "But as they say, life is what happens to you while you're making other plans."

He held a series of radio and promotion jobs in California and Texas, experimenting with audience participation and remote broadcasts, before forming his own production company in the 1940s and striking it big with "People Are Funny" and "House Party."

Linkletter was born Arthur Gordon Kelly on July 17, 1912, in Moose Jaw, Saskatchewan. His unwed mother put him up for adoption when he was a baby; when he was about 7, he and his adoptive parents moved to the U.S., eventually settling in San Diego.

He recalled his preacher-father forced him to take odd jobs to help the family. So Linkletter left and became a hobo, hopping trains across the West, working where he could. He recalled later that he felt the religious faith instilled by his father had been a great gift.

After leaving daily broadcasting in 1969, Linkletter continued to write, lecture and appear in television commercials.

Among his other books, were "Old Age is Not for Sissies," "How To Be a Supersalesman," "Confessions of a Happy Man," "Hobo on the Way to Heaven" and his autobiography, "I Didn't Do It Alone."

A recording Linkletter made with his daughter Diane not long before she died, "We Love You, Call Collect," was issued after her death and won a Grammy award for best spoken word recording.

Robert L. McNeil Jr. dies; pharmacist marketed Tylenol

The Washington Post

Robert L. McNeil Jr., a third-generation pharmacist who in the 1950s played a crucial role marketing the new drug Tylenol, which was manufactured at his family's laboratory and has since become one of the world's bestselling over-the-counter painkillers, died of a heart ailment May 20 at his home in Wyndmoor, Pa. He was 94.

McNeil was a just out of pharmacy school in 1938 when he joined McNeil Laboratories, the Philadelphia-based company his grandfather had founded in 1879. Originally a neighborhood drugstore, it had morphed by then into a business marketing drugs directly to hospitals and doctors.

Almost immediately, McNeil was made responsible for evaluating the company's product line and establishing a research division to develop new prescription drugs, according to the 2003 book "Pharmaceutical Achievers" by Mary Ellen Bowden, Amy Beth Crow and Tracy Sullivan.

In 1951, McNeil suggested that the company consider selling a little-known analgesic originally discovered in the 19th century that had only recently shown in rigorous studies to effectively reduce aches and fevers.

Skeptics wondered whether there would be sales potential for such a painkiller given the already widespread use of aspirin, which was relatively cheap. McNeil prevailed after pointing out that the new analgesic would have none of aspirin's unpleasant side effects and could be marketed to different clients as a prescription drug.

Company scientists did additional laboratory testing of the drug to secure approval for its sale from the U.S. Food and Drug Administration. McNeil came up with the drug's generic name, acetaminophen. One of his colleagues dubbed it Tylenol, an abbreviation of the chemical name, N-aceTYL-p-aminophENOL.

In 1955, Tylenol Elixir for Children hit the shelves. It was sold in a box shaped like a fire engine and marketed with the slogan "for little hotheads."

The following year, McNeil rose to become board chairman of McNeil Laboratories. In 1959, he and his brother, Henry, sold the company to Johnson & Johnson, which produced bandages and other health products, for more than $30 million in stock.

Soon afterward, Tylenol was approved for over-the-counter sale.

Former CBS Chief Exec. Officer Michael H. Jordan dies at 73

The Associated Press

Michael H. Jordan, a skilled troubleshooter who held leadership roles at CBS, PepsiCo and Westinghouse, has died from complications related to cancer. He was 73.

Jordan was instrumental in crafting the media conglomerate that became the CBS of today as its chairman and chief executive. As the top executive at Westinghouse Electric Corp., he engineered the acquisition of CBS in 1995. He later shed Westinghouse's industrial businesses and kept the media business. Viacom

Inc. bought CBS in 1999 but they parted ways seven years later.

CBS CEO Leslie Moonves says Jordan "took over Westinghouse when most thought its demise was inevitable and brought it back to life, transforming the old industrial corporation into one completely focused in the media world."

Early in his career, Jordan was a consultant and principal at McKinsey & Co. He would later hold various executive positions at PepsiCo before retiring in 1992 as chairman and CEO of its international foods and beverages division.

Obama's new security strategy breaks with Bush

By Anne Gearan and Robert Burns
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — President Obama is breaking with the go-it-alone Bush years in a new strategy for keeping the nation safe, counting more on U.S. allies to tackle terrorism and other global problems. It's an approach that already has proved tricky in practice.

The administration's National Security Strategy, a summary of which was obtained Wednesday by The Associated Press, also for the first time adds homegrown terrorism to the familiar menu of threats facing the nation — international terror, nuclear weapons proliferation, economic instability, global climate change and an erosion of democratic freedoms abroad.

From mustering NATO forces for Afghanistan to corraling support to pressure North Korea to give up its illicit nuclear weapons program, the U.S. has sometimes struggled in leaning on friends and allies in recent years.

Still, the new strategy breaks with some previous administrations in putting heavy emphasis on the value of global cooperation, developing wider security partnerships and helping other nations provide for their own defense.

In his first 16 months in office, Obama has pursued a strategy of gentle persuasion, sometimes summarized as "engagement."

His administration has attended more closely to ties with Europe, sought a "reset" of relations with Russia, pushed harder to restart stalled Mideast peace talks and consulted widely on a roadmap for defeating the Taliban in Afghanistan.

Obama's critics, however, assert that his policies have largely failed, given the continued defiance of Iran and North Korea on nuclear development, the stalemate in Afghanistan and rising worries about terrorist attacks at home.

Presidents use their national security strategy to set broad goals and priorities for keeping Americans safe. But the document isn't an academic exercise: it has far-reaching effects on spending, defense policies and security strategy.

For example, President George W. Bush's 2002 strategy document spelled out a doctrine of pre-emptive war.

"We must be prepared to stop rogue states and their terrorist clients before they are able to threaten or use weapons of mass destruction against the United States and our allies and friends," the Bush strategy said, with Iraq clearly in mind. The following year U.S. forces invaded, launching a conflict that has lasted far longer and cost far more money and lives than Bush intended.

Obama's new strategy is expected to move away from that doctrine.

Bush, too, valued alliances. But some of his action, especially the U.S.-led invasion of Iraq, ripped holes in the fabric of U.S. foreign relations, particularly in Europe.

Bush pursued what he called "a distinctly American internationalism." One of the central pillars of his national security strategy — spelled out in 2002 and repeated in 2006 — was a call to "strengthen alliances to defeat global terrorism" and to "work with others to defuse regional conflict."

Clinton: World must act on South Korean ship sinking

By Matthew Lee and Hyung-Jim Kim
Associated Press writers

SEOUL, South Korea — U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton said Wednesday the world must respond to the "unacceptable provocation" represented by the sinking of a South Korean warship blamed on Pyongyang, as the regime unleashed more blistering rhetoric against Seoul and Washington.

Tension on the divided Korean peninsula has risen dramatically since international investigators said last week that a torpedo fired by a North Korean submarine tore apart and sank the South Korean warship Cheonan on March 26, killing 46 sailors.

Relations are at their lowest point in a decade, when South Korea began reaching out to the North with unconditional aid as part of reconciliation efforts. South Korean President Lee Myung-bak has taken a harder line against Pyongyang since taking office in 2008 amid delays in the North's promised denuclearization and has suspended aid.

South Korea, backed by the U.S., Japan and other allies, began implementing a package of punitive measures against the North on Tuesday — ranging from slashing trade, resuming propaganda warfare and barring the North's cargo ships. Those were seen as among the strongest it could implement short of military action.

"This was an unacceptable provocation by North Korea, and the international community has a responsibility and a duty to respond," Clinton told reporters in Seoul, the final leg of a three-nation Asian tour.

South Korea's measures "are absolutely appropriate and they have the full support of the United States,"

Later Wednesday, North Korea again called the investigation results a "fabrication" and accused President Barack Obama's administration of being behind a plot to pinpoint the North as the culprit to bolster its military presence in the region.

"As a matter of fact, the Obama administration is straining the situation in a bid to beef up its forces in the region and tighten its military domination," the official Korean Central News Agency said in a commentary. It did not mention Clinton's trip.

North Korea, which has vowed to retaliate against any punishment for the ship sinking, has declared it is cutting relations with South Korea, starting "all-out counterattacks" against the South's psychological warfare operations and barring South Korean ships and airliners from passing through its territory.

Islamists slam Elton John visit to Morocco

RABAT, Morocco (AP) — A concert by Elton John has tested the limits of Morocco's drive for modernity, probing this Muslim nation's complex and ambiguous attitudes toward homosexuality like rarely before.

Islamists in the North African kingdom were outraged by the gay pop star's visit, while the royal palace, government and his many fans backed his appearance Wednesday night.

No riots or violence was reported, said Rabat's governor, Hassan Amrani. Authorities had beefed up security with thousands of police and plainclothes officers.

In a sign of John's popularity, several thousand of his fans appeared to know his lyrics by heart even though most people in this French and Arabic speaking country know little or no English.

"He is a very big name in the music world, he's a great artist. And his private life is nobody's business," said Leila Hassan, a 43-year-old housewife.

The tension over the concert is part of a tussle between conservatives and modernizers in a nation that criminalizes homosexuality but has long been famous for a swinging party scene. Morocco has attracted gay celebrities such as designer Yves Saint Laurent and writer Paul Bowles, and recently saw the launch of its first gay magazine.

Across the Islamic world, strictly hidden but sometimes tacitly tolerated traditions of homosexuality are surfacing fitfully — and John's concert is the latest litmus test.

The public dispute between organizers for the Mawazine Festival that invited John and the Justice and Development Party, or PJD, Morocco's largest authorized Islamist group, illustrates the growing rift between Western-leaning Moroccan authorities and the more conservative Muslim movements that are on the rise in the kingdom.

"This singer is famous for his homosexual behavior and for advocating it," said Mustapha Ramid, a leader and spokesman for the PJD, the biggest opposition party with 40 lawmakers in parliament.

"We're a rather open party, but promoting homosexuality is completely unacceptable," Ramid told The Associated Press in a telephone interview.

Ramid said homosexuality is against Muslim values, and he feared the British singer would "encourage the phenomenon" and be a bad influence for Moroccan youth.

Cancun mayor's arrest fuels fears of drug politics

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The arrest of Cancun's mayor on suspicion of protecting two violent drug gangs as he campaigned for governor has heightened fears that cartels are muscling their way into Mexican politics. There are also worries the gangs are tightening control over the country's most important tourist resort.

Gregorio Sanchez faces drug trafficking and money laundering charges a year after his police chief and other close collaborators were arrested for allegedly protecting cartels, said Ricardo Najera, a spokesman for the federal Attorney General's Office.

Sanchez is suspected of tipping off and protecting the Beltran Leyva and Zetas drug cartels — gangs known for brutal tactics including beheading rivals. He had taken a leave of absence as Cancun mayor to run for governor of Quintana Roo state, known for turquoise Caribbean waters and white-sand beaches marketed as the Mayan Riviera.

The mayor is the first candidate in the July 4 elections formally linked to cartels, but fears have been rising that drug gangs are infiltrating the vote in several states through intimidation and bribes.

On May 13, gunmen killed a mayoral candidate in a town near the border with Texas after he ignored warnings to quit the race. Several other candidates have received threats, and in some towns near the U.S. border, some parties couldn't find anyone to run for mayor.

High-level corruption remains one of the biggest impediments in the fight against drug trafficking in Western Hemisphere countries that have become key smuggling corridors. In Jamaica, security forces are fighting supporters of a major drug trafficking suspect who has ties to the ruling party and is resisting extradition to the U.S. In Guatemala, the national anti-drug czar and police chief are under arrest in a case involving cocaine and slain police.

The Sanchez case will be another tough test for Mexico's judicial system and its ability to successfully prosecute high-profile drug and corruption cases.

The last effort largely fizzled: A year ago Wednesday, 10 mayors from the western state of Michoacan were arrested in an unprecedented sweep against elected officials accused of protecting drug gangs. All but two have been released for lack of evidence, undercutting Calderon's efforts to show politicians are not immune in his U.S.-backed campaign to wipe out cartels and those who protect them.

Officials: Target of bloody raid may have left Jamaica

KINGSTON, Jamaica (AP) — After a slum raid that left nearly 50 people dead in four days of gunbattles, the reputed drug kingpin who was the target may have fled the country, the government said Wednesday.

Strongman Christopher Coke, who helped the prime minister win elected office, had months to stockpile weapons in his slum stronghold while the premier wavered over U.S. demands for his extradition.

"I could not say if he is in Jamaica," Information Minister Daryl Vaz said of Coke, who is known as "Dudus." "It's very difficult to tell."

Police and soldiers who fought their way into the barricaded Tivoli Gardens slum in gritty West Kingston were conducting a door-to-door search, and the government reported calm Wednesday. Coke's lawyer has declined to confirm his whereabouts.

Gray smoke was rising from recently extinguished fires inside Tivoli Gardens. Sporadic gunfire rang out elsewhere in West Kingston and security forces barred journalists from entering the battle zones around the capital on Jamaica's south coast, far from the tourist resorts on the north shore of the Caribbean island.

CSI men ink four returnees

Golden Eagles expect to ink multiple signees this summer

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

For junior college basketball coaches, this time of year is about patiently playing the waiting game. Numerous NCAA Division I prospects will take one final stab at standardized testing in June. Those that don't academically qualify for the NCAA become prime prospects for schools like the College of Southern Idaho.

"They start to look at Plan B," said CSI head coach Steve Gosar.

That's why Gosar has only filled seven scholarship spots on the 2010-11 roster. Four of those spots belong to returnees from the 20-12 squad of last year, including point guard Pierre Jackson, swingman Dennis Mikelonis and center Kenny Buckner. The fourth is 6-foot-5 guard Ben Van Lith, who red-shirted as a walk-on last season but has been granted a scholarship for the coming campaign.

Other signees are 6-foot guard Gerald Brooks, 6-5 guard Mitch Bruneel and 6-8 post Kevin Davis.

Failure of M.H. levy would impact Jerome

All secondary school athletics and activities will be cut.

That's the pledged result left in the minds of Mountain Home voters as they go to the polls today to vote on a $2.8 million supplemental levy for the school district, paid for by a sliding-scale increase in property taxes. It requires a simple majority, 50 percent plus one vote, to pass.

David Bashore

Seventy miles to the southeast, the athletic program in Jerome watches and waits with an interest level rivaled only by Mountain Home and its Southern Idaho Conference rivals.

If the levy fails, teachers will take a substantial pay cut, the Mountain Home School District will adopt a four-day school week, and funding for all middle school and high school athletics and activities will be dropped. If it passes, there'll still be a 4-percent pay cut for teachers and a 6.5-percent one for administrators, but the activities will stay — except for high school dance and golf.

The prospect of failure has Jerome athletic director Ty Jones and his Class 4A colleagues in the Treasure Valley anxiously awaiting the final tally.

Jerome would suffer as it schedules Mountain Home in every sport but volleyball. The levy's failure would blow a huge hole in schedules and send Jones, and other athletic directors, scrambling to pick up the teams Mountain Home would drop — if they can.

"I check the weather (religiously) in the spring and winter. (Today) I'll be checking the news," Jones said. "We have no contingency plans at this point."

The Mountain Home athletic program is ground zero for the levy debate despite being earmarked for just more than 10 percent of the overall revenue.

In an interview with Jeff Caves and Mike Prater on Boise's 1350 AM KTIK Tuesday, Mountain Home athletic director John Clark said the middle school and high school athletic department funding only comprises about $300,000 of the $2.8 million levy. He also said the school district has

Orlando Magic center Dwight Howard (12) raises his hand after scoring against the Boston Celtics during the first half of Game 5 of the NBA Eastern Conference finals in Orlando, Fla., Wednesday.

Orland routs Boston to extend series again

By Brian Schmitz
The Orlando Sentinel

ORLANDO, Fla. — For a team down in a dark hole no one else had ever escaped, there finally is light, maybe at the end of the Ted Williams tunnel.

The Orlando Magic head for Boston with a real chance to tie the series after beating the Celtics, 113-92, on Wednesday night at Amway Arena.

No team in NBA history has ever fallen behind 0-3 in a seven-game series and advanced. Maybe this is the time, maybe this is the team to do the impossible.

Winless after the first three games, the Magic cut the Celtics lead in the Eastern Conference finals to 3-2, but that's just the half of it.

All but ruled extinct days ago, the series looks to have taken a dramatic turn — in Dwight Howard's favor and thus, Orlando's.

The Celtics might be without two big men — center Kendrick Perkins and power forward Glen "Big Baby" Davis — for Game 6 on Friday night at TD Garden.

Perkins might be suspended, and Davis and guard Marquis Daniels might be out with concussions.

Perkins was ejected in the second period after picking up his second technical, a temperamental foot-stomp that could swing the momentum.

It was the seventh technical of the postseason for Perkins, meaning he could be suspended for Game 6 after the league reviews the call.

Perkins is one of the few players who, at times, can handle Howard one-on-one, a luxury that allows other Celtics defenders to cover Orlando's 3-point shooters instead of double-teaming Dwight.

The Celtics had to use veteran Rasheed Wallace to defend Howard after Perkins was tossed and Davis saw twenty-birds.

A scary scene unfolded late in the third quarter, when Glen "Big Baby" Davis was nearly knocked unconscious.

Howard's left elbow — which should be registered as a lethal weapon — came down across Glen "Big Baby" Davis' face and stayed down under the basket. He struggled to his feet, but looked like a guy who just got off a merry-go-round, wobbling until officials called time.

It was not immediately known how Daniels was injured.

The breaks might be falling Orlando's way, along with their three-pointers. They shot lights out, built a 14-point lead in the second quarter and answered every Celtics' charge, even when their lead was trimmed to six midway through the third period.

Howard finished with 21 points, 10 rebounds and five blocks. Point guard Jameer Nelson added 24 points and five assists, nailing four 3-pointers.

Boer tabbed as CRHS volleyball head coach

Stacy Boer wanted stability, and Canyon Ridge High School needed her to bring it.

Boer was announced Wednesday as the new head volleyball coach at Canyon Ridge, leaving Magic Valley Christian after 15 seasons. She replaces Karen Perron, who led the Riverhawks in their debut season in 2009.

"It's still a new program, so I'm excited to mold and shape the girls," Boer said. "I'm excited to see the girls improve. That's the main goal is to see these girls, who have come over to a new school, improve."

Boer also coached with the Southern Idaho Volleyball Club for four seasons.

Her mix of club and varsity experience, as well as a familiarity with many of the players, combined to make her a perfect hire in the eyes of Canyon Ridge athletic director Bill Hicks.

"She's a quality coach who's proven herself in the club ranks and she has the experience that we need to get the program going in the right direction," Hicks said. "The fact that a number of

ImPACT concussion testing offered to athletes in Ketchum

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

Had your bell rung?

Athletes in the Wood River area now have access to ImPACT through St. Luke's Elks Rehab in Ketchum, part of the St. Luke's Wood River Medical Center. ImPACT is Immediate Post-Concussion Assessment and Cognitive Testing, which is a program used in all levels of sports, from high school to the pros, to evaluate sports-related concussions and determine when a person can safely return to daily activities and sports.

Certified athletic trainer Matt Jaksetic is the test administrator for ImPACT at St. Luke's Elks Rehab. He said concern over concussions is growing, especially among teens and pre-teens.

"Concussions not only affect the return to play but how the kids do in school," Jaksetic said. "A straight-A kid with a concussion could see his grades start going down."

While the testing is available to a few organizations in the valley, such as Wood River High School, and available in other parts of the state, including Twin Falls, this is an opportunity for other youth athletes to receive this resource.

The test is a 20-minute evaluation which focuses on the areas of attention span, working memory, sustained and selective attention time, response variability, non-verbal problem solving and reaction time, according to the ImPACT website.

little other recourse than to cut the entire athletic program, among other cuts, if the levy fails as the district can't cut core educational programs like math or English, and the teaching staff is so threadbare any layoffs would result in a counterproductive decrease in federal funding.

Debate on radio call-in shows voiced both sides of the argument. Comments ranged from suggestions that programs are too valuable to not pony up a few more bucks a month, to notions that a pay-to-play scheme is better suited because it shifts the financial burden on the actual participants without harming the population at large. Many supported the levy's principles except for the athletic stipulations.

Jones said his contacts in Mountain Home are cautiously optimistic the levy will pass. Even if it does, as a similar levy did to save Mackay's athletic program last summer, the feeling exists that one community will eventually say no.

"I'd like to think that in every town in Idaho, people value the activity programs that schools put on for kids. That's my hope. I'd hate to see opportunities for kids being taken away," Jones said. "I think it's just a matter of time, unfortunately."

Jones just hopes it's not today.

Twin Falls High grad Jon Pulsifer will also be in the mix as an invited walk-on.

"I like them. It's a good group, we just need to add some pieces to them," said Gosar, who is 42-21 in his two seasons at the helm.

Jones and Kearsley both started as freshmen, with Kearsley being named a NJCAA honorable mention All-American.

Federer uses advice to advance

PARIS (AP) — Apparently, even Roger Federer, with his record 16 Grand Slam titles, was in need of some advice on a wet and windy Wednesday at the French Open.

Forced off court by two rain delays, and "pushed," as he put it, by a player with a career record below .500, Federer turned to Swiss Davis Cup captain Severin Luthi for words of wisdom during the breaks. Told to be more aggressive early, then to use more drop shots late, Federer wound up with a 7-6 (4), 6-2, 6-4 victory over Alejandro Falla in the second round.

"Those were good things he told me," said the top-ranked Federer, the French Open's defending champion for the first time. "Those little details make a crucial difference."

The defending women's champion, sixth-seeded Svetlana Kuznetsova, encountered quite a bit more trouble than Federer — she faced four match points in the second set against 41st-ranked Andrea Petkovic and was so distraught she whacked herself in the leg with her racket.

Petkovic made matters easier with unforced groundstroke errors on all four of those chances to win, though, and Kuznetsova eventually came all the way back for a 4-6, 7-5, 6-4 victory — but not before wasting three match points of her own.

"I'm not really sure what happened," Kuznetsova said. "I saw that she got tight."

White Sox survive double ejection

CLEVELAND — Mark Buehrle's ejection in the third inning for arguing a balk didn't rattle the Chicago White Sox, who regrouped after losing their starting pitcher and survived a scary ninth to beat the Cleveland Indians 5-4 on Wednesday.

Mark Kotsay hit a two-run homer off Jake Westbrook (2-3) and Mark Teahen drove in two runs as Chicago won two of three over Cleveland to capture their first road series this season.

ATHLETICS 6, ORIOLES 1

BALTIMORE — Trevor Cahill pitched six innings of two-hit ball, Adam Rosales homered and drove in four runs, and Oakland ended a six-game road losing streak.

ANGELS 6, BLUE JAYS 5

ANAHEIM, Calif. — Bobby Abreu hit an opposite-field RBI single with two out in the ninth inning, atoning for his error that led to the tying run in the top half for Los Angeles.

ROYALS 5, RANGERS 2

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Billy Butler homered and Luke Hochevar pitched eight strong innings to lead Kansas City.

NATIONAL LEAGUE METS 5, PHILLIES 0

NEW YORK — Hisanori Takahashi matched his first big league start with six more scoreless innings, Jose Reyes homered and the New

Like Federer, Kuznetsova discussed tactics with her coach during a 1½-hour rain delay, part of an odd day of stops and starts. After three days of sun and temperatures in the 80s, Wednesday's breezes reached 15 mph, the thermometer dipped into the low 60s, and intermittent showers disrupted the schedule and changed the way the clay played, slowing the surface.

Some matches were postponed, and four in men's singles were stopped because of darkness, involving No. 4 Andy Murray, No. 13 Gael Monfils, No. 17 John Isner and No. 25 Marcos Baghdatis.

Monfils' match against Fabio Fognini in the main stadium was halted at 5-all in the fifth set a few minutes before 10 p.m., but only after all manner of theater. At 4-all, there was a prolonged discussion with tournament referee Stefan Fransson about whether to suspend the match; Fognini didn't care for the decision to continue and kept arguing, which led to Monfils being awarded a free point.

Then, with Monfils barely able to walk, let alone run, Fognini accrued three match points at 5-4, but failed to convert any, and had more choice words for the chair umpire while packing up his equipment for the night.

Nothing quite so dramatic happened on that same court several hours earlier, when Federer met Falla, a left-hander ranked 70th who entered the day 11-13 at Grand Slams, 53-60 overall.

York Mets shut out the Philadelphia Phillies for the second straight game.

Rod Barajas had a two-run double and a sacrifice fly off Joe Blanton and Reyes had his fourth straight multihit game and drove in two runs for New York, which handed the Phillies consecutive shutouts for the first time since April 2008. Luis Castillo had two of the Mets' four stolen bases in their fourth straight win.

DODGERS 8, CUBS 5

CHICAGO — Chad Billingsley won his fourth consecutive start and James Loney had three hits.

Loney was a home run short of the cycle and Casey Blake homered and drove in two runs for the Dodgers.

REDS 4, PIRATES 0

CINCINNATI — Bronson Arroyo pitched into the eighth inning for his fifth straight win, and Orlando Cabrera drove in two runs with a sacrifice fly and a single for Cincinnati.

BRAVES 7, MARLINS 3

MIAMI, Fla. — Troy Glaus drove in two of Atlanta's six runs in the seventh inning, when the Braves sent 11 men to the plate.

ASTROS 5, BREWERS 0

MILWAUKEE — Roy Oswalt threw eight dominant innings in his first start since requesting a trade and the Houston Astros had 12 hits.

ROCKIES 7, DIAMONDBACKS 3

DENVER — Ubaldo Jimenez threw eight shutout innings and Seth Smith homered twice to lead Colorado

Lakers scrambling on D after Suns even series series against a surging, shot-making opponent with rising confidence of its own.

"There's absolutely no doubt that we love this," Lakers coach Phil Jackson said Wednesday, not sounding much like a coach planning to fill out retirement papers next month. "This is what champions are made of. If you have the best teams in the West going up against each other, it should come down to a challenge like this. ... This is what basketball at this level is. Like I told them, 'If you can't meet this challenge, then why go to the finals?'"

The Lakers have been in this situation three previous times over the past two playoffs: a series tied at 2, with Game 5 at home. Los Angeles won each time, beating Houston and the Nuggets last season before trouncing Oklahoma City last month in the first round. Overall, they've won Game 5 seven straight times at home.

Yet the Suns hold every smidgen of momentum heading back to Staples Center after winning the last two games with a gimmicky zone defense, impressive bench play and another phenomenal exhibition of offense. Los Angeles' 58 percent shooting in its first two victories masked its full series of ineffective defense so far: Los Angeles has yielded 113 points per game, and Phoenix has shaken off a brief spell of outside shooting problems.

At least the Lakers are back home, where they haven't lost in seven playoff games this spring.

"The momentum we have, the confidence we have now, is definitely going to help us going to L.A.," said Suns forward Amare Stoudemire, who shook off two mediocre games at Staples Center with big efforts in Phoenix. "We definitely can win there. It's just a matter of us implementing our will."

Will was a popular topic in El Segundo as well, with Bryant declaring that most of the Lakers' problems are mental lapses on execution and assignments. After nearly posting a triple-double in Game 4, Bryant lamented Los Angeles' inability to stick to its assignments when the Suns repeatedly ran their pick-and-roll, drive-and-dish offense.

Redskins confident Moss won't be suspended over link to doctor

ASHBURN, Va. — Washington Redskins receiver Santana Moss told a small group of teammates last week that he received treatments from the Canadian doctor charged with smuggling and supplying human growth hormone. Moss portrayed the treatments as routine — and not involving banned substances — according to teammate Phillip Daniels.

“I believe he’s telling us the truth,” Daniels said Wednesday. “He got, like, three treatments, and who knows what happened after that.”

Coach Mike Shanahan was also persuaded by Moss’ version of events. The two met before Wednesday’s off-season practice, and Shanahan came away confident that Moss will not be disciplined for a possible violation of the NFL’s banned substance policies.

“I sat down and talked to Santana today and went through a bunch of situations that have happened to him,” Shanahan said. “And I feel really good about where he’s at. I feel real good that he’ll be, I don’t know if ‘vindicated’ is the word, but when people find out all the facts, everything will be OK.”

Asked directly if he had any worries that Moss will be suspended, Shanahan said. “No.”

Shanahan said his confidence was based solely on his conversation with Moss and that the Redskins had not done any investigating on their own, nor has the coach spoken to the NFL about the matter. Shanahan declined to discuss details but added: “There’s a number of things that will occur probably in the next couple of weeks.”

Moss referred questions to Shanahan.

“Coach Shanahan and I went over everything,” Moss said as he walked off the field.

Moss’ name surfaced in an affidavit in connection with the criminal complaint filed against Anthony Galea, a sports medicine doctor whose superstar clients include Tiger Woods and Alex Rodriguez. Galea faces federal criminal charges in Washington Redskins coach Mike Shanahan is taking a 'wait and see' approach to reports that receiver Santana Moss, pictured, is linked to a Canadian doctor charged with smuggling and supplying human growth hormone. The Buffalo News reported that Moss has received treatment from Galea and is the unidentified Washington player mentioned in an affidavit released after Galea was charged on May 18.

the United States for allegedly bringing unapproved drugs into the country and unlawfully treating professional athletes.

NY COURT DISMISSES SUIT AGAINST BRADY, BUNDCHEN

NEW YORK — A judge has dismissed a lawsuit by two photographers who said they were shot at by bodyguards of New England Patriots quarterback Tom Brady and Brazilian supermodel Gisele Bundchen.

The April 2009 incident occurred during a party in Costa Rica celebrating the celebrity couple’s marriage two months earlier.

Photographers Yuri Cortez and Rolando Aviles and the news agency Agence France Presse charged in the lawsuit that the guards shot at the photographers and narrowly missed their heads.

The lawsuit originally was filed in federal court in New York and then in Manhattan state Supreme Court.

Bundchen owned a Manhattan apartment before her marriage, but Justice Judith Gische said in her ruling that the model had sold the apartment by the time the lawsuit was filed in November 2009. The judge’s ruling was made

VIKINGS STAR JARED ALLEN CUTS HIS TRADEMARK MULLET

EDEN PRAIRIE, Minn. — Jared Allen has cut his mullet.

The All-Pro defensive end for the Minnesota Vikings showed off his new trim in a video and photo posted this week on the team’s website. Allen also wrote an update Tuesday on his Twitter feed, confirming that he got the cut for his upcoming wedding.

Allen said the mullet is not “just some hair” but “a lifestyle!”

He added: “You gotta keep a positive Mullitude!”

Allen is one of the more colorful characters in Minnesota’s locker room and on the field. He celebrates a sack by dropping to one knee and twirling his arm, pretending he’s roping a calf.

SUPER BOWL MAY GET NAME FOR GIANTS-JETS STADIUM

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Landing the Super Bowl in 2014 should help the Giants and Jets finally put a name on their new $1.6 billion stadium.

Speaking at a news conference Wednesday, the owners of the two NFL teams said the selection of the stadium for the NFL championship game in roughly 3 1/2 years is bound to attract sponsors interested in seeing their company’s name on the 82,500-seat facility.

Whether the Super Bowl association boosts the price of the naming rights is uncertain.

Some experts believe that the naming rights for the stadium located less than five miles from New York City might fetch $20 million annually for the teams to split.

“It can’t hurt,” Giants co-owner John Mara said at the press conference at the stadium on Wednesday, less than 24 hours after NFL owners awarded the New York-New Jersey area the Super Bowl. “This is a positive factor. It makes it an even more attractive package, the potential naming rights part, but that will come.”

Push-to-pass could give race a new look

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Helio Castroneves has everything he needs to win another Indianapolis 500.

A fast car, an experienced team, the pole position and a crew who seem to win the pit contest every year.

This year, Castroneves might need another ingredient for a record-tying fourth victory — good chess moves to outmaneuver the other 32 Indy drivers in Sunday’s push-to-pass game.

The “push-to-pass” button is making its Indy debut this week. On Sunday, drivers will get 15 chances to use the new feature, which provides 18 seconds of extra horsepower. Drivers then must wait 10 seconds before hitting the button again.

“I think it makes the game a little more complicated,” said Gil de Ferran, the 2003 Indy champ and a former teammate of Castroneves. “You’re adding a degree of difficulty to this race. Typically you spend 450 miles trying to get yourself in position to win, and the last 50 miles you drive with bare knuckles.”

The bare knuckles part won’t change Sunday, and the button could make that final stretch even tougher.

The trickiest part is no one really knows how it will influence race strategy.

Drivers have not tested the button at Indy and will get their first chance during Friday’s final practice. IndyCar officials added the push-to-pass button last season to increase passing. It debuted last August and has been used in all 11 IndyCar races since, proving most effective on the road courses.

“This is such a high-speed place anyway and now with the different rules, I think you’ll probably run a little closer, so I think it will affect the race,” Castroneves said.

Indy 500

11 a.m., Sunday, ABC

“Normally, you have 20 that last about 20 seconds, and that’s half a lap here. So it’s going to give you extra power, no question.”

Ed Carpenter, making his first start of the season, knows exactly what he wants to do.

“The only way I’m using it on defense is if I’m leading the race,” he said.

Of course, he’ll need to make sure he hasn’t used up his 15 shots.

The combination of an extra boost of horsepower, more drafting and tighter racing means Indy’s already fast speeds could get even quicker.

“It really adds a lot to our racing,” said Brian Barnhart, IndyCar Series president of competition and racing operations. “It’s been interesting to watch how that plays on the road courses, but we don’t run 200 laps on those like we do here.”

Nor do they run on straightaways as long as those on Indy’s 2.5-mile oval.

Rick Mears, one of three four-time Indy winners, has an idea of what might happen.

When he was driving in the ‘70s, ‘80s and ‘90s, some cars had unlimited use of a turbocharged booster knob.

“The exception is they’re regulated by the number of times they can push it, whereas we could do it any number of times but we were regulated by fuel mileage,” Mears said.

Come Sunday, there’s only one rule — 15 shots at that extra horsepower.

Gold medal teammates Toews, Richards battle for Stanley Cup

CHICAGO (AP) — Jonathan Toews and Mike Richards skated on the same line, sported the same jersey and shared a purpose during Canada’s pressure-filled run to a gold medal at the Vancouver Olympics.

Playing in their own country where hockey is king, the expectations immense, made the reward even more gratifying for two young stars.

A few months later, they have a rare chance at a hockey double, a chance to add a Stanley Cup to their gold medal. This time they are on opposite sides, with Toews and the Blackhawks looking to win the franchise’s first championship since 1961 and Richards leading the Flyers back to the finals for the first time in 13 years.

The two young captains — Toews at 22, Richards at 25 — are former first-round draft picks whose teams follow their example and their play.

They are 1-2 in playoff scoring this year. Toews has put up 26 points with seven goals and 19 assists and has a point in a club-record 13 straight playoff games. Richards has 21 points, six goals and 15 assists.

But what they do for their teams goes well beyond finding the back of the net with the puck. They can get dirty in the corners or near the crease, check another team’s scoring threat or thread a precise pass to set up a teammate.

“I’d say he’s a little more physical player than I am,” Toews said.

“He likes to go for the big

hits. But yeah, he’s a competitive guy, a heart-and-soul guy that doesn’t take the easy way. He works for every bounce he gets and you saw the way he played there in Game 5 the other night. ... He’ll overpower some guys and really kind of catch you by surprise sometime. He’s the type of guy his team will respond to and kind of play well with him.”

In the clincher over Montreal, Richards dived head first and slid perfectly between Montreal goalie Jaroslav Halak and Canadiens defenseman Roman Hamrlík. The puck squirted away as Halak and Hamrlík crashed and Richards got up and tapped it in.

A highlight-film goal — a short-handed one at that — still being talked about days later.

“He plays with an edge. He’s physical. He’s feisty. He’ll drop his gloves. There’s really not a weakness in his game,” said Chicago’s Patrick Sharp, a former Flyer who won a Calder Cup with Richards five years ago.

“That’s why he’s the captain over there,” Sharp said. “That’s why he’s the leader. When I was there, he came in and he was kind of touted as the next future leader after Keith Primeau, and he’s done a heck of a job doing that. He’s a guy we’ve got to key on, for sure.”

Toews and Richards aren’t the only players who could win a gold medal and get to carry around the Stanley Cup this year.

LEGAL NOTICE OF REVISED CATEGORICAL EXCLUSION FOR THE CITY OF KIMBERLY DRINKING WATER SYSTEM IMPROVEMENT PROJECT

The Idaho Department of Environmental Quality (DEQ) has determined that the City of Kimberly Drinking Water Improvement Project, Twin Falls County, Idaho conforms to the Rules for Administration of the Drinking Water Loan Program (IDAPA 58.01.20) and Chapter 5, of the Drinking Water Loan Handbook of Procedures, by which the project is eligible for a Categorical Exclusion. Accordingly, Phase 1 and Phase 2 priority 2 and priority 3 distribution system improvements of the project are exempted from further substantive environmental review requirements.

The proposed drinking water improvements will address water source, water supply, and water storage issues. An additional well will be added to the city's existing water supply system. The city is also proposing the construction of two new storage tanks, improvements to the distribution system, and the installation of a water metering system. The specific project improvements include:

- Development of well #7 located at the Kimberly City Park.
- Construction of a well house next to well #7.
- Replacement of the existing Redwood Storage Tank with a new 660,000 gallon tank at the existing location.
- Construction of an additional 880,000 gallon storage tank at one of two locations. The first location is the northeast lot of the intersection of Monroe and Ash Streets. The second location is at the City Park near the well #7.
- Installation of water meters and replacement of service lines from the mains to the water meters.
- Upgrading the existing supervisory control and data acquisition (SCADA) system.
- Installation of standby generators at well #7, the City Hall booster pump station, and the Redwood booster pump station.
- Phase 1 distribution system upgrades include waterline replacements on Center Street West, Banning Street, Maxine Street, and Van Buren to Pine Street.
- Phase 2, priority 2 distribution system upgrades include waterline replacements on east Center Street, Main Street, Ash Street, east of City Hall pump station, main on Emerald Drive, completion of some of the dead end lines, and completion of the 10-inch connection in the southern residential area.
- Priority 3 distribution system improvements include replacing the remaining 4 inch lines with larger diameter mains, looping the dead end lines, connecting all fire hydrants to 6-inch mains or larger.

DEQ has determined that this project is consistent with criteria for issuing a Revised Categorical Exclusion for the following reasons:

- The proposed facility improvements are solely directed toward minor rehabilitation of the existing facilities and construction of new ancillary facilities.
- The facility improvements will not provide the capacity to serve a population that is projected to grow at a rate 25% in excess of the 20-year population growth rate expectations for the state as a whole according to the Idaho Division of Financial Management projections, and be expected to change the current system's population by greater than 500 estimated residential units (ERUs).
- There will be no significant effect on the quality of the human environment either individually, cumulatively over time, or in conjunction with other federal, state, local or private actions as a result of this project.
- There will be no direct or indirect effects to (a) cultural resource sites; (b) endangered or threatened species or their habitats; (c) environmentally important natural resource areas such as floodplains, wetlands, important farmlands, aquifer recharge zones; or (d) other resource areas identified in DEQ's guidance. Short term impacts may occur during project construction that includes temporary disruption of the distribution system, increased noise, increased dust pollution, increased potential for stormwater runoff, and disruption of localized traffic conditions. The project contractor is responsible for managing the temporary disruptions of the system as follows:
- Contact the State Historical Preservation Office if any archeological artifacts are discovered during excavation.
- Control temporary dust pollution impacts as a condition of the construction specifications in accordance with the DEQ Rules for the Control of Air Pollution in Idaho, IDAPA 58.01.01.651 (rule). The rule states that reasonable precautions for dust control and suppression include using water or chemicals, applying dust suppressants, covering trucks, paving, and removing materials. In addition to the rule requirements, it is recommended that a dust prevention and control plan be implemented during construction of the project that includes DEQ Best Management Practices (BMPs) to minimize dust pollution for fugitive dust control.
- Handle stormwater runoff through an Environmental Protection Agency stormwater prevention plan and permit (SWPPP). The SWPPP and stormwater BMPs will be implemented prior, during and after project construction to reduce the potential for erosion from runoff.
- Adhere to any other appropriate BMPs, wherever possible, to avoid or minimize impacts from other construction activities.

Overall, completion of the proposed project will have long term positive effects by reducing leaks, conserving water, improving fire flows, providing additional water supply and water storage. The proposed project will protect public health.

RECALL BALLOT

TWIN FALLS COUNTY, IDAHO

TRUSTEE ZONE 2

Recall Statement

1) She continually tries to undermine the authority of the school administrators and personnel.

2) She has not supported most of the special programs or educational opportunities that have been proposed to the board.

3) She is in direct conflict with herself by voicing her support of certain things, then taking the opposite stance with her negative vote.

4) She always brings in the negative aspect when discussing any topic during meetings.

5) She initiated the animosity toward the new school building and appears to be leading a crusade to stop/delay construction of the new school project, costing the school district more money, and is doing this for her own personal gain.

6) She doesn't have the ability to focus on the main points of the topic of discussion and translate it into terms of how this will benefit the quality of education being offered in the Filer School District - as of yet, I have not heard her approve of anything for the benefit of the students.

Trustee's Response

1) Filer School Trustees act as legislative/judicial authorities of the School District. The Trustees empower the superintendent, as their agent, in executive, supervisory, and instructional decisions. The superintendent, only, has authority over district personnel. Trustee Smith has no direct authority over district personnel. Her Trustee authority is set by Idaho Statutes.

2) Trustee Smith supports all district programs including Special Services. Her support is documented in board minutes.

3) Trustee Smith is an informed decision-maker adapting as relevant information becomes known. Questioning, reasoning directs her problem-solving. Blanket approval of all requests does not benefit anyone.

4) Trustee Smith responded to Zone 2 Patrons living across from Intermediate School, listening to concerns, informing administrative staff, and Trustees. Trustees, by majority vote, worked with W. 6th Street Patrons to achieve productive outcomes.

Trustee Smith didn't attempt to close the Intermediate School. No construction time was lost, district lost no money, and the Trustees, by majority vote, responded affirmatively to W. 6th Street Patrons.

Trustee Smith cannot receive money or benefit personally.

5) Trustee Smith works to support all of Filer Students. Proudest support act, paying student's PSAT fee to open future opportunities.

Recommended Filer School District Complaint/Grievance Policy was not followed in Trustee Smith's recall attempt.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE®

Bobby Wolff

"A mind not to be changed by place or time, The mind is its own place, and in itself Can make a heav'n of hell, a hell of heav'n."

— John Milton

In a perfect world, you and I would bid the North-South cards to four no-trump. But the world is not perfect, and when this deal came up in the rubber bridge game at the Dyspeptics Club, South had a straightforward bid of four spades over East's pre-emptive call of four hearts.

The play of the cards was also slightly less than perfect. Before we criticize declarer too highly, consider how you would play four spades when West hits upon the lead of the club king. I too might have made the mistake that South did. Acting on autopilot, he called for dummy's ace. As a friend of mine would say in such situations, "Up went the ace; down went the contract!"

East ruffed away the club ace and played a top heart, leaving declarer with three apparently inescapable side-suit losers. Declarer did his best by winning the heart ace, ruffing out the diamonds, then drawing two rounds of trump ending in dummy and leading a low heart. But East could see that if he won the trick, he would have to concede a ruff and sluff. He ducked the heart, and West won his jack to cash two club tricks.

South ought to have known that he had 10 sure tricks unless East ruffed the club ace. South should have ducked dummy's club ace — four times if need be — and ruffed the fourth club in hand. Then he could discard his losing heart on the club ace after drawing trumps.

ANSWER: If ever a hand could be found to demonstrate the WRONG holding for an overcall, this is it. Your clubs and hand are too weak, the overcall takes up no space, your partner is a passed hand, etc. I can't guarantee that if you do overcall you will get into trouble. I can say that you deserve to!

10TWIN FALLS MOVING SALE: 5/28, 5/29 9am-? Stroller, Crib,

DEAR ABBY: A few months ago I became suspicious that my wife of 40 years was having an affair with an old high school friend. At first I thought I was misreading the signs. Then I found an unfinished e-mail on our computer making a date to meet him "at our special place" and I was crushed. I began gathering information and found it was true and that it had been going on for some time.

When I confronted her, she denied everything until I told her about the e-mail and everything else I had found. She eventually admitted it was true and said she had wanted only to see if she was still attractive to men because she felt we were "drifting apart in our lives."

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

We tried counseling, but when she was able to make only one appointment due to "job conflicts," I gave up. I don't trust anything she tells me now, and I don't know which way to turn.

I stupidly agreed not to discuss this with any of her family or friends. I hate thinking that everything I thought we were working for will end up being split down the middle (if I'm lucky), and I will probably be painted as the one at fault.

— DUPED AND TRUSTLESS IN WASHINGTON STATE
DEAR DUPED AND TRUSTLESS: Because your wife refused counseling does not mean that you shouldn't go, and that's what I'm urging you to do. You need someone who is not emotionally involved to help you get your head straight. Once you do, you will have a better idea of what you want to do and how to accomplish it. You should also save the evidence, in case your wife tries in the coming months to lay the blame for her infidelity on you. You have my sympathy.

DEAR ABBY: My son was married a short time ago. The reception was held at my condo member hall. After the reception, the bride and groom asked me to refrigerate the leftover bottom layer of the wedding cake. They said they'd pick it up the next day.

Six days later, the cake was still in my fridge. They made excuses every day for not picking it up. Finally, I threw it away.

Now I'm the bad guy, and the bride is demanding an apology. Abby, the cake was hard and crusty, and I felt six days was long enough. Was I wrong in dumping the cake?

— FATHER OF THE GROOM IN FORT WORTH

DEAR FATHER: Let me put it this way — rather than storing the cake in the fridge, it should have immediately gone into the freezer so it could be eaten at a later date. But because that didn't happen, and the cake was fit only to be used as a paving stone or a doorstep, the logical thing to do was throw it away.

DEAR ABBY: I am in my 50s and part of a management team at work. My first name is Mary. Every time the boss sees me he starts reciting that nursery rhyme, "Mary, Mary, quite contrary!" I find it belittling and insulting.

I have expressed my dislike of what he's doing, but he can't seem to stop. Is this a form of workplace harassment?

— "QUITE" ANNOYED IN ALABAMA

DEAR ANNOYED: If you have told your boss you find what he's doing to be unwelcome and he continues anyway, it might qualify as creating a hostile work environment. It appears you work for an insensitive clod whose attempts to be clever are annoying and pathetic rather than witty. You have my sympathy.
