Alleged shooter makes court appearance

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

Markcus R. May is at the center of two shootings.

In one, he's a defendant who allegedly fired a bullet into the leg of his ex-girlfriend's boyfriend. In the other shooting, he was hit by an officer after leading police on a chase along rural roads in Twin Falls County.

May, 23, of Buhl, faces charges for allegedly shooting the boyfriend in Buhl and then driving at high speeds with police in pursuit before the chase ended in Filer, where he was shot. May is charged with aggravated battery, three counts of aggravated assault, burglary and eluding an officer, all felonies. He faces up to 105 years in prison if convicted of all charges.

The assault and battery charges also carry enhanced penalties for alleged use of a deadly weapon.

May was subdued at his Tuesday sentencing in Twin Falls 5th District Court, quietly answering "yes sir" and "no sir" when responding to questions from Magistrate Judge Thomas Kershaw.

Police responded at about 7:30 p.m. Saturday to a reported shooting in Buhl, where May had allegedly shown up in a white Dodge Stratus wearing a blue "Superman" shirt and carrying a pry bar in one hand and a handgun in the other, according to court records.

When May saw James Lambert, he yelled, "Hi James, I've been looking for you," before firing three or four times, according to court records.

Lambert, of Beaverton, Ore., told police that May's gun misfired and that May continued shooting and chased after Lambert, records state. Lambert ran into the house of his girlfriend, Rebecca Ward, and locked the front door, court records state.

Lambert told police he heard the window of the door break and ran into the bedroom with Ward, where the two barricaded the door. Lambert and Ward told police that May came to the door, banging on it and yelling before leaving after Ward yelled at him to go.

At about 9:15 p.m., police were scouring the county for May after not finding him in Buhl. They were advised that May had a gun and was planning to shoot in the direction of the officers, but not at the officers themselves, according to court records.

Along 4300 North Road, a deputy in pursuit attempted to stop May's car, which sped up to 80 mph, records said. Idaho State Police troopers set out tire spikes and the car continued, while an officer could smell burned rubber and see smoke from a blowout.

Patrol vehicles rammed the car in an attempt to stop it, but it started pulling away from where it was stopped, records said. In an affidavit, a deputy wrote he "heard a single gun shot" and saw the car drive into a fence on the south side of U.S. Highway 30. A patrol car pinned it into the fence and May was handcuffed, the report said.

It's unclear in court records when during the chase May was shot.

May was treated for a superficial head wound, said Twin Falls County Prosecutor Grant Loebs. The officer who shot him is with

Magic Valley High School graduates largest class in its history

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

The graduates of Magic Valley High School have an extra reason to be proud this year.

The class of 2010 is also the largest group of graduates in the Twin Falls school's history. A record 82 students graduated from the high school this year. Last year, the second-largest for the school, Magic Valley High had 56 graduates.

An alternative high school, Magic Valley High offers a second chance to students who have struggled in other high schools. Instead of attending multiple classes taught throughout the day, students focus on one class taught over 18 school days.

"It's a great compliment to them to stick this out," Principal Jack Altemose said of the class. "It's a great testament to their will to want to do this and get this done."

School officials don't attribute their large graduating class to any one specific reason. Altemose said that high schools in Twin Falls have advisory periods in place, which help struggling students know where they stand in their academic goals.

"It may be part of the proactive conversations that the advisers and counselors are having with the students," he said.

With one class taught at a time, the program helps students focus on their core credits without as much of an emphasis on electives, he said.

Graduates preparing for Tuesday's ceremony had varied goals. Casey Hart planned to study art design at the College of Southern Idaho.

"It's really awesome," he said of graduation. "It's a relief."

Joey Patterson departs for the Army later this month, where he'll be trained as a tank operator.

"It's amazing," he said.

Nathen Langford is planning to attend CSI, then move on to Idaho State University for a degree in fire science to be a firefighter.

"I had a good experience," he said.

Right to remain silent? Suspect better speak up

By Jesse J. Holland
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Want to invoke your right to remain silent? You'll have to speak up.

In a narrowly split decision, the Supreme Court's conservative majority expanded its limits on the famous Miranda rights for criminal suspects on Tuesday — over the dissent of new Justice Sonia Sotomayor, who said the ruling turned Americans' rights of protection from police abuse "upside down."

Justice Anthony Kennedy, who wrote the majority opinion, said a suspect who goes ahead and talks to police after being informed he doesn't have to has waived his right to remain silent. Elena Kagan, who has been nominated by President Barack Obama to join the court, sided with the

receive higher doses of the most potent carcinogens than do smokers in many foreign countries because of variations in the way tobacco is processed for cigarettes, researchers from the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention reported Monday.

American cigarettes are typically made from "American blend" tobacco, a specific blend that, because of growing and curing practices, contains higher levels of cancer-causing tobacco-specific nitrosamines. The most popular Canadian, Australian and British brands, in contrast, are made from "bright" tobacco, which is lighter in color and cured differently.

The study was designed primarily to correlate how well levels of the chemicals in cigarettes correlate with levels of their metabolites in smokers' urine. The data about exposure to the chemicals in different countries were an added benefit.

We're sending our daughter's luggage to China this year

My stepdaughter Avalon is headed for China next week for a two-month, college-credit summer program. On Wednesday, she leaves from Boise and flies on Southwest Airlines to Sacramento via Phoenix. On Thursday, she'll hop an Air Canada flight from San Francisco to Vancouver, and then from Vancouver to Beijing.

Let's see, that's two airlines, three countries and six cities in a little more than 48 hours. What do you suppose are the odds that Avalon's luggage won't end up in the same hemisphere that she does?

One or two of every 100 suitcases on an international flight goes astray nowadays, but misplacing luggage in Beijing isn't exactly the same as losing your grip in, say, Phoenix.

Before he got a job and a measure of respectability, I had a co-worker who was a Timbuktu-on-$5-a-day-style world traveler in his younger years. He'd find a cheap flight and take it, wherever it was headed.

That was in the early 1990s, when the People's Republic of China was just discovering that — in the words of Premier Deng Xiaoping — capitalism can be glorious. If you were a Westerner with hard currency to spend, China Southern Airlines would take you to the ends of the Earth and beyond.

Including Urumqi. Urumqi is a Houston-sized city and the capital of China's westernmost province, Xinjiang. It's located 2,050 miles west of Beijing.

From the Chinese capital, Urumqi is a five-hour flight. From Guangzhou, where Tom embarked, it's 11 hours.

He carried his backpack on his lap all the way until the rattletrap, Russian-built tur-boprop transport landed in Urumqi. Then a Chinese soldier relieved Tom of his carry-on luggage at the point of an AK-47.

See, then as now, Xinjiang is the scene of an insurgency by the dominant, non-Chinese local ethnic group, the Uighur. And the Chinese, then as now, were sensitive to the point of paranoia about foreigners running guns to the rebels.

Eventually, the foreign passengers were allowed to disembark, bused to the biggest hotel in Urumqi and, within limits, permitted to roam the city. Two days later, they were packed aboard an Antonov An-24 transport and flown back to Guangzhou.

Without their luggage. Two years later, after Tom was living in Twin Falls, he got a call from the Air China office at San Francisco International Airport. Seems his backpack had been bouncing around the world all that time, and the airline wanted to know where to ship it.

When the long-lost luggage fetched up in Twin Falls, the spare socks and the dried dates that had been inside were missing. Instead, the backpack was about one-quarter full of cheap, Chinese-made keychains.

And to every one was attached a fob that read, "Visit Beautiful Sturgis, South Dakota."

Bon voyage, Avalon.

ISP: Collision sends one to hospital

A Gooding man ended up in the hospital Tuesday morning after the pickup truck he was driving veered into another vehicle on State Highway 75.

Randall Webber, 39, was northbound in a silver 2006 GMC Sierra pickup when, north of Shoshone, he drifted into southbound traffic, according to Idaho State Police. At milepost 85.9, his pickup hit a blue 2001 Hyundai Elantra driven by Leah Fredback of Hailey.

Webber was not wearing his seatbelt and was totally ejected from his vehicle, according to ISP. He was taken by air ambulance to St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center, where he was stabilized and then transported by air to Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise. Fredback was wearing her seatbelt and was released from the hospital with minor injuries.

Drugs and alcohol are not suspected in the crash, which completely closed Highway 75 for 30 to 45 minutes and then reduced it to one lane for three more hours, according to ISP. State police are continuing their investigation.

Twin Falls School Board to meet Friday on teacher contract proposal

The Twin Falls School Board will decide at 8 a.m. Friday about proposed cuts in teacher contracts, the result of state cuts to the public schools budget.

The meeting is at Canyon Ridge

High School's auditorium and is open to the public. For the Twin Falls district, the proposed changes are: 14 full-year days, the elimination of an optional 192nd day of teaching, freezing employee salary movement that would usually be given for increased experience, and lowering the additional pay for teachers who take on extra duties like coaching.

The Twin Falls district's cut in state funding is estimated at $2.64 million. The district opted into a statewide financial emergency, which the Legislature passed so districts could renegotiate lower contracts for next school year.

Statewide, the cut for the upcoming fiscal year will be $128.5 million, or 7.5 percent of the public school budget.

Filer gets more say over area of impact

T.F. County Commission seeks consistent ordinances

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

Filer just got a bit more control over its future.

The Twin Falls County Commission passed a resolution Tuesday that effectively gives Filer more control over its area of impact in both zoning decisions and code enforcement. It does not impact the taxes of people living outside Filer, nor is it a precursor to annexation, Filer Mayor Bob Templeman said.

"If (residents) comply with everything, they won't notice anything," Templeman said. "They really won't see anything different other than some code enforcement that will be able to take place."

For example, the city can now enforce litter codes on properties that fall within its area of impact, he said.

The Filer City Council passed the same ordinance in January.

"This is a long time coming," Commissioner Tom Mikesell said at the vote. "It's a great thing."

Commissioner Terry Kramer said the ordinance continued a pattern of the commission trying to give cities more control over their immediate areas. Rick Dunn, the county's planning and zoning administrator, compared giving the city more control over its area of impact zone to giving it a buffer zone.

"Cities have the responsibility to control growth around (themselves)," Kramer said.

Kramer said giving the cities more control makes sense because they're more familiar with their immediate areas than the county is. He said previously designated zones, such as those for agriculture, will be grandfathered in and not affected by the change.

report on the shooting.

Belinda Colunga, owner of the El Paralo Saloon, said both Manuel Arellano and Monica Arellano came into the bar frequently.

"They were good customers," Colunga said.

Colunga said the couple had children together but may have been estranged when the incident occurred.

Monica's grandfather, Jesus Urena, said Tuesday he didn't know if the two alleged subjects in the shooting were married.

Other family members declined to comment on Tuesday.

Colunga said there was a small crowd in the bar Saturday night when the incident occurred.

"He (Manuel) was already here when she (Monica) walked in," said Colunga.

Colunga said Monica Arellano went onto the dance floor with another man and Manuel Arellano, who had been sitting at the bar, followed her.

Colunga was walking away from the dance floor when she heard a bang, which she thought was a speaker falling. The sound turned out to be a single gunshot.

The bar's security guard wrestled Manuel Arellano to the floor and took the gun away from him, Colunga said. The two then struggled and the magazine fell out of the gun.

"Manuel was a nice person and she was too," Colunga said. "I loved both of them and pray for their families"

Colunga said she plans to hold a benefit dance from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Saturday. There will be a live band and the cost will be $5 for women and $10 for men. All proceeds will be donated to Monica Arellano's family for funeral expenses.

Wood River's Gaeddert takes love of music, theater to college

By Karen Bossick
Times-News correspondent

HAILEY — Brita Gaeddert has been a constant presence at school performances in the Wood River Valley since she was in elementary school. Her absence will be noted next fall when she heads off to college. But college, she said, is her door to introducing other youngsters to the arts. “Theater teaches children how important they are,” she said. “It teaches them they’re important to the whole, even if they don’t have a speaking role. And it teaches them about working together for something bigger than themselves.” Gaeddert, set to graduate with her Wood River High

She participated in All-Northwest Honor Choir and All-State Choir twice. She sang with the school’s elite Colla Voce choir and took first at the District IV Soprano Solo contest. “She works on her voice like no other student,” said choir teacher Max Stimac. “She even records lessons with a pocket recorder so she can remember what she needs to work on. police as U.S. solicitor general when the case came before the court. She would replace Justice John Paul Stevens, one of the dissenters. A right to remain silent and a right to a lawyer are at the top of the warnings that police recite to suspects during arrests and interrogations. But Tuesday’s majority said that suspects must break their silence and tell police they are going to remain quiet to stop an interrogation, just as they must tell police that they want a lawyer.

This decision means that police can keep shooting questions at a suspect who refuses to talk as long as they want in hopes that the person will crack and give them some information, said Richard Friedman, a University of Michigan law professor. “It’s a little bit less restraint that the officers have to show,” Friedman said. The ruling comes in a case in which a suspect, Van Chester Thompson, remained mostly silent for a three-hour police interrogation before implicating himself in a Jan. 10, 2000, murder in Southfield, Mich. He appealed his conviction, saying he had invoked his Miranda right to remain silent by remaining silent. Kennedy, writing the decision for the court’s conservatives, said that wasn’t enough. “Thompkins did not say that he wanted to remain silent or that he did not want to talk to police,” Kennedy said. “Had he made either of these simple, unambiguous statements, he would have invoked his ‘right to cut off questioning.’ Here he did neither, so he did not invoke his right to remain silent.” He was joined in the 5-4 opinion by Chief Justice John Roberts and Justices Antonin Scalia, Clarence Thomas and Samuel Alito. Prosecutors cheered the decision, saying it takes the guesswork out of when police have to stop questioning suspects. “Is it too much to ask for a criminal suspect to say he doesn’t want to talk to police?” said Scott Burns, executive director of the National District Attorneys Association. This is the third time this session that the Supreme Court has placed limits on Miranda rights, which come from a 1966 decision — it involved police questioning of Ernesto Miranda in a rape and kidnapping case in Phoenix — requiring officers to tell suspects they have the right to remain silent and to have a lawyer represent them, even if they can’t afford one.

Cigarettes

The CDC team enlisted 126 regular smokers in Australia, Canada, Britain and, in the U.S., in New York and Minnesota. All smoked one brand routinely, typically the most popular brands in their country. Smokers in Minnesota smoked Marlboro, Newport, Marlboro Light and Camel Light, while those in New York smoked Marlboro, Newport, Newport Light, Camel Light and Marlboro Menthol. The team focused on the most lethal carcinogen in the tobacco smoke, 4-(methylnitrosoamino)-1-(3-pyridyl)-1-butanone (NNK), and its primary metabolite in urine, known informally as NNAL. They collected cigarette butts from each smoker over a 24-hour period and analyzed them for the content of NNK, an indicator of how much of the carcinogen the smokers were exposed to. They also collected urine and measured levels of NNAL.

world vary in their ingredients and the way they are produced,” Dr. Jim Pirkle of CDC’s National Center for Environmental Health said in a statement. “All of these cigarettes contain harmful levels of carcinogens, but these findings show that amounts of tobacco-specific nitrosamines differ from country to country, and U.S. brands are the highest in the study.” Changes in curing and blending practices could reduce U.S. smokers’ exposure to this particular carcinogen, he added, but that would not necessarily result in a safer product.

Man who robbed 21 banks dubbed ‘Granddad Bandit’

By Jim Salter
Associated Press writer

ST. LOUIS — A bald, heavyset man who has robbed 21 banks in the eastern and central U.S. is proving to be so elusive that the FBI has given him a name — the “Granddad Bandit” — and the agency announced plans Tuesday to post a digital picture of him on billboards in several states in hopes of catching him.

The man, who is believed to be 50 to 60 years old, is suspected in 21 bank robberies in 12 states, the most recent on May 18 at a Regions Bank branch in St. Louis County, the FBI said.

To catch him, the FBI has partnered with outdoor advertisers on a digital billboard campaign displaying a surveillance picture of the robber.

The FBI describes the suspect as about 6 feet tall, white, bald and heavy. Along with Missouri, he is wanted in: Alabama, Arkansas, Georgia, Kansas, Florida, New York, Oklahoma, Texas, Mississippi, Tennessee and Virginia.

“It’s not that the individual can’t be caught,” agent Zack Lowe said of the robber who has so far escaped capture for a year-and-a-half. “The right person hasn’t seen this picture yet. He has to sleep somewhere. He has to eat somewhere. He has family somewhere.”

The suspected robber began his crime spree with a robbery in Mobile, Ala., on Jan. 16, 2009, the FBI said. The agency believes he has struck three times in Atlanta and twice in Mobile. Officials say he has robbed four banks overall in Alabama, four in Georgia, three in Texas, two in Arkansas and one each in the other states.

Sometimes, the man claims to be armed. Other times, such as in the St. Louis County robbery, he doesn’t show or imply a weapon. Agents say his holdups are calm and deliberate, apparently aimed at not attracting attention to himself. He tends to wear nondescript clothing such as a ballcap and a polo-type shirt.

In the St. Louis County robbery, the bandit walked into the bank late in the afternoon, approached a teller and pulled a holdup note from his black billfold.

Though the man has been dubbed the “Granddad Bandit,” not much information is known about him including if he has grandchildren. Lowe said the FBI typically assigns a name to serial bank robbers, in this case the “Granddad Bandit,” to help other law enforcement officers and the public have a reference point when talking about a specific criminal.

Dieting for dollars? More employees trying it in U.S.

By Mike Stobbe
Associated Press writer

ATLANTA — How much money would it take to get you to lose some serious weight? $100? $500?

Many employers are betting they can find your price. At least a third of U.S. companies offer financial incentives, or are planning to introduce them, to get their employees to lose weight or get healthier in other ways.

“There’s been an explosion of interest in this,” said Dr. Kevin Volpp, director of the University of Pennsylvania’s Center for Health Incentives.

Take OhioHealth, a hospital chain whose workforce is mostly overweight. The company last year embarked on a program that paid employees to wear pedometers and get paid for walking. The more they walk, the more they win — up to $500 a year.

Anecdotal success stories are everywhere. Half of the 9,000 employees at the chain’s five main hospitals signed up, more than $377,000 in rewards have already been paid out, and many workers tell of weight loss and a sudden need for slimmer clothes.

But does will this kind of effort really put a permanent dent in American’s seemingly intractable obesity problem? Not likely.

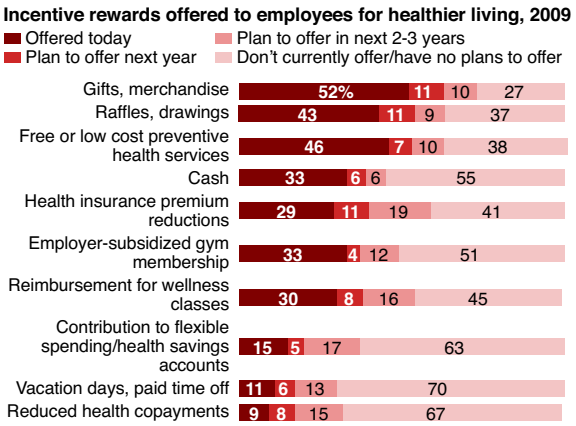

“It’s probably a waste of time,” said Kelly Brownell, director of Yale University’s Rudd Center for Food Policy and Obesity.

Brownell’s assessment is harsher than most. But the science seems to back him up.

Only about 15 to 20 U.S. studies have tried to evaluate the effect of financial incentives on weight loss. Most of those studies were small and didn’t look at whether such measures worked beyond a few months. None could make conclusions about how much money it takes to make a lasting difference for most people.

Bonuses offered for a healthier employee

At least a third of U.S. companies offer financial incentives, or are planning to introduce them, to get their employees to lose weight or take other steps to get healthier.

NOTE: 1,103 organizations from more than 45 countries, representing more than 10 million employees, responded to survey. Figures do not add to 100 due to rounding.

AP

Perhaps the largest effort to date was an observational study by Cornell University. It looked at seven employer programs and the results were depressing: The average weight loss in most was little more than a pound.

Sure, there are grounds for optimism. Smaller experiments report some success. And other studies have shown promising results against tobacco. One study published last year in the New England Journal of Medicine, co-authored by Volpp, found that cash rewards of a few hundred dollars nearly tripled quit-smoking rates.

One problem: “Food is more difficult than tobacco,” said Steven Kelder, an epidemiology professor at the University of Texas School of Public Health.

While cigarettes can be addictive, people don’t need to smoke to live, and advertising and clean-air restrictions curb tobacco’s presence. People must eat, however, and sugary drinks and fatty snacks are everywhere, Kelder and others said.

Health officials lament that more than two-thirds of American adults are overweight and one-third obese, and lecture on fat’s role in deaths from diabetes, heart disease and other conditions. The problem has a huge economic impact, too, with obese workers costing U.S. private employers an estimated $45 billion or more annually in health care costs and lost labor. That’s

Feds meet with ‘Avatar’ director on Gulf oil spill

WASHINGTON (AP) — “Top kill” didn’t stop the Gulf oil spill. How about something “titanic”?

Federal officials are hoping film director James Cameron can help them come up with ideas on how to stop the disastrous oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico.

The “Avatar” and “Titanic” director was among a group of scientists and other experts who met Tuesday with officials from the Environmental Protection Agency and other federal agencies for a brainstorming session on stopping the massive oil leak.

The Canadian-born Cameron is considered an expert on underwater filming and remote vehicle technologies.

More than 20 scientists, engineers and technical experts attended the meeting, which also included representatives of the Energy Department, Coast Guard and National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration.

Other organizations represented at the gathering included the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute; Oceanographic Institute at Harbor Branch, Florida Atlantic University; University of California at Santa Barbara; Nuytco Research Limited; World Wildlife Fund; and the University of California at Berkeley.

Idaho fines private prison for contract violations

By Rebecca Boone
Associated Press writer

BOISE — The state is ordering private prison company Correction Corporation of America to pay thousands of dollars and fix problems with drug and alcohol treatment and medical care at the Idaho Correctional Center.

Ten of 13 drug and alcohol counselors at the prison near Boise aren't qualified to provide treatment under CCA's contract with the state. Additionally, medical audits by Idaho Department of Correction officials completed earlier this year show the private prison has extensive problems administering medical care, including inadequate records; delays in providing medications, immunizations and mental health care; and a lack of follow-up or oversight when inmates are returned to the lockup after being hospitalized.

The Associated Press obtained the information through a series of public records requests and a review of 19 medical audits, along with letters and other documents detailing Idaho's findings at the private prison.

The state ordered CCA to provide it with a plan to fix the medical care problems by May 25; the company missed that deadline but did get a plan to the state on May 28. Idaho Department of Correction spokesman Jeff Ray said Tuesday department officials are still reviewing the plan.

Idaho is also imposing liquidated damages against CCA for violating its state contract by failing to have qualified drug and alcohol counselors. The damages rack up at a rate of more than $2,600 a day; so far, CCA owes the state more than $40,000 for the violations.

"We're very concerned," said Rona Siegert, director of Idaho Department of Correction Health Services. "That's the whole purpose of the audit, to find these things before they get to a level where they're critical."

Nashville, Tenn.-based CCA responded to questions about the problems through a prepared statement.

"Regarding the findings of recent medical audits completed by the Idaho Department of Corrections at Idaho Correctional Center, we acknowledge and share the concerns of our government partner and take them seriously. While the identified issues are not at a critical stage, we are working actively and deliberately to quickly and effectively resolve them," the company said.

CCA also said it is trying to hire qualified staffers for its drug and alcohol rehabilitation program.

"Our efforts to recruit qualified and credentialed addiction, alcohol and drug professionals from the available pool of local candidates continue. We are confident that these efforts will result in our company being in compliance in the near term with a fully credentialed Therapeutic Community staff, as local qualified professionals seek employment opportunities."

Company officials also said several staff members are set to undergo certification testing in the coming months. But Natalie Warner, the Idaho Department of Correction's contract administrator and quality assurance manager, said that under the schedule CCA provided for its current employees, the last of the certifications won't be completed until June 2011. Meanwhile, CCA will have racked up more than $100,000 in liquidated damages.

In an April letter informing the private prison company of the issues, Idaho Department of Administration purchasing officer Jason Urquhart said the Correction Department feared that the drug and alcohol program violations could increase costs for the state.

Offenders often are required to complete the Therapeutic Community program to be released, so if the program's integrity is compromised, offenders may have to stay in prison longer, increasing costs to the state, Urquhart wrote. He went on to say that the parole commission could require offenders to take part in drug and alcohol programs at other prisons — also increasing costs.

The medical audits, completed between February and April, suggest that in some cases, inmates are going without adequate care, Siegert said. Still, Siegert said the Correction Department didn't know of any inmates who had suffered injury or harm because of the violations.

Among other problems found in the audits, inmates in the prison's infirmary were sometimes left alone, without any working pager or call-light system to call a nurse or doctor in an emergency. They also were going too long between medical checks by nursing staff, according to the records.

"Our requirement is that a provider makes the rounds every day to see if they're getting better or getting worse, what their vital signs are," Siegert said.

Prestigious Medical Journal Reveals Brain Oxygen-Boosting Nutrient Breakthrough

Reverse Memory Loss by up to 10 to 15 Years

New pill can help sharpen focus, clear away “brain fog”, erase up to 15 years of lost memory power!

If you're one of the millions concerned or even embarrassed by your fading focus or memory... forgetting names, important dates or to-do items, getting words stuck on the tip of your tongue or perhaps having one too many senior moments — then here's some great news!

Dramatic Reversal of Memory Loss

The peer reviewed Medical Journal, JANA, recently announced astounding results after the testing of a new “Memory Pill” called Procera AVH that can help you reclaim as much as 10 to 15 years of mental decline, lost memory recall speed and even help improve your mood in just 30 days or less.

Medical Journal states: “The [Procera AVH] data provides evidence that this compound improves a range of cognitive variables... and appears to improve mental clarity and mental energy and repair mood disturbances... [with] speed of memory retrieval [improvement] that suggests functioning at approximately 10 or more years younger.” Stough, C., PhD, JANA 2009.

Wakes Up a Tired and Sluggish Brain

Joshua Reynolds, Clinical Researcher and Author featured nationally on TV and Radio.

“This Landmark Clinical Trial scientifically validated over 30 years of research completed on the formula's ingredients” says U.S. clinical brain research scientist and best-selling author of “20/20 Brainpower”, Joshua Reynolds.

Over the course of many years of researching and testing hundreds of natural ingredients, Reynolds narrowed his search down to three of Mother Nature's most effective brain energy nutrients in precise amounts and ratios. He calls these three ingredients the “3 Miracle Memory Molecules”!

Is YOUR Brain Starved of Precious Oxygen?

After analyzing data from over a MILLION brain tests, Reynolds identified the main reasons our brains seem to age faster than our bodies.

His research concludes “It's a simple concept; your aging brain can't quite catch its breath. Once you reach 55, you may have already lost up to HALF your brain power as your brain cells are virtually gasping for more oxygen.”

Reynolds further reveals in his medically acclaimed book, “20/20 Brainpower”, that our brains are experiencing an energy crisis, “and with each passing birthday less and less oxygen and vital brain nutrients called neurotransmitters get to your energy starved brain cells which can cause memory loss, mental fatigue, mental fog and low energy”.

Memory pill ingredient “...lights up aging brains like a Christmas tree! 100% Energizing!”

Increased oxygen from one of Procera AVH's natural ingredients – Vinpocetine.

Medical research confirms that severely diminished supplies of neurotransmitters and oxygen can dull your cognitive powers, sabotaging your ability to concentrate, remember things and even make the simplest decisions.

Reynolds states, “Procera AVH may help fix all of that by giving your brain the oxygen and vital nutrients it needs to be sharp and clear – throughout the day.”

Many people who have struggled with forgetfulness and poor concentration say they notice a pronounced effect.

Refuel and Recharge Your Brain Quickly!

Ingredients in Procera AVH were shown to help “wake up” the brain by increasing circulation in the brain, flooding energy-starved cells with fresh supplies of invigorating oxygen and vital neurotransmitters. And, “just like after a good exercise session, it gets you feeling super refreshed and re-energized. Procera AVH gets those neurons fired up again!” says Reynolds.

It's Like Putting On a Pair of Glasses & Seeing Clearly Again

Procera AVH users from all over the country confirm their experience supports the clinical findings. Memory recall, concentration and multi-tasking, and even mood all seem improved... just like when you were younger and sharper. Leah F. had this to say, “I haven't felt this sharp in a decade!” While Elle H. commented, “I'm functioning better than I have in the last 20 years; there's no doubt about that.”

Barbara D. said this about Procera AVH, “My brain was able to find words in a flash!” And users like Penny S. are amazed at how much their mental quickness improved, “I definitely have more energy and focus. I process things at an increased speed than before using Procera AVH.” Procera AVH works to improve the overall health and performance of the brain from memory, to recall, focus and even alertness. Bibi C. reports, “I felt solid, bright and alive, and energetic, clear and focused.”

Procera AVH is not just recommended for the Baby Boomers with concerns about an aging brain, it can also be used daily by students and professionals to get a mental edge. Eric L., in his mid-40's and a Real Estate Agent, talked about the increased energy and mental sharpness he gets from Procera AVH, and feels it gives him an edge in the competitive business world. “This is like a miracle! Now I can stay sharp and fully charged with mental energy throughout the day. I feel no mental fatigue. I have my life back!” says Eric.

Trouble-plagued ICC souring Idaho on private prisons

It’s hard to recall, but three years ago, the new administration of Gov. C.L. “Butch” Otter and many legislators were talking up the idea of Idaho’s next major prison being a private-sector operation.

Imagine the potential savings, proponents said then. Maybe eventually Idaho could get out of the bricks-and-mortar corrections business altogether.

But that was before Idaho got to know the Corrections Corporation of America better. For nearly a decade, CCA has operated the 2,000-inmate Idaho Correctional Center near Kuna — easily the most trouble-prone prison in the state’s history.

On Tuesday, The Associated Press reported that the state is fining CCA more than $40,000 and ordering it to fix problems with drug and alcohol treatment and medical care at ICC.

Ten of 13 drug and alcohol counselors at the lock-up aren’t qualified to provide treatment under CCA’s contract with the state, according to records obtained by the AP. Additionally, a medical audit done by the Idaho Department of Correction shows the private prison has extensive problems administering medical care, with inadequate records, delays in providing medications, immunizations and mental health care, and a lack of follow-up or oversight when inmates are returned to the lockup after being hospitalized.

In March, the American Civil Liberties Union sued CCA — and the state — claiming violence is so rampant at the ICC that it’s known as “gladiator school” among inmates.

The lawsuit claimed Idaho’s only private prison is extraordinarily violent, with guards deliberately exposing inmates to brutal beatings from other prisoners as a management tool.

The group contended the prison then denies injured inmates medical care to save money and hide the extent of injuries.

Stephen Pevar, senior attorney for the ACLU, said he has sued at least 100 jails and prisons, but none came close to the level of violence at Idaho Correctional Center.

“Our country should be ashamed to send human beings to that facility,” he said.

The ACLU asked for class-action status and $155 million in punitive damages — the entire net profit reported by the Nashville-based company in 2009.

The ACLU said the money should go to lead plaintiff Marlin Riggs, who sustained permanent facial deformities and other medical problems after he was savagely beaten in his cell.

Guards use violence to control prisoner behavior, forcing inmates to “snitch” on other inmates under the threat of moving them to the most violent sections of the prison, ACLU-Idaho Executive Director Monica Hopkins said.

Last year, an AP investigation found the level of violence at the prison was three times higher than at other Idaho prisons, and that IDOC officials believed violence was also dramatically underreported by CCA and inmates.

The ACLU contends that ICC is understaffed, with sometimes only two guards on duty to control prison wings with as many as 350 inmates.

Which may be one of the reasons that the publicly traded company was able to report a 4 percent revenue increase for the fourth quarter of the last fiscal year, and a 12.5 percent increase in earnings per share.

Not many legislators have much appetite anymore for another ICC-style facility in the state. There’s much more enthusiasm for alternative sentencing and drug, alcohol and mental-health courts to keep Idaho’s inmate numbers as low as possible.

But stay tuned. Thanks to CCA’s actions, a federal judge — and not the state — may soon be dictating how Idaho handles its prison population.

Our view:

Private prisons used to be viewed as the answer to a problem in Idaho; now they are the problem.

Doing the right thing cost Sister Margaret

We finally have a case where the Roman Catholic Church hierarchy is responding forcefully and speedily to allegations of wrongdoing.

But the target isn’t a pedophile priest. Rather, it’s a nun who helped save a woman’s life. Doctors describe her as saintly.

The excommunication of Sister Margaret McBride in Phoenix underscores all that to me feels morally obtuse about the church hierarchy. I hope that a public outcry can rectify this travesty.

Sister Margaret was a senior administrator of St. Joseph’s Hospital in Phoenix. A 27-year-old mother of four arrived late last year, in her third month of pregnancy. According to local news reports and accounts from the hospital and some of its staff members, the mother suffered from a serious complication called pulmonary hypertension. That created a high probability that the strain of continuing pregnancy would kill her.

“In this tragic case, the treatment necessary to save the mother’s life required the termination of an 11-week pregnancy,” the hospital said in a statement. “This decision was made after consultation with the patient, her family, her physicians, and in consultation with the Ethics Committee.”

Nicholas Kristof

Sister Margaret was a member of that committee. She declined to discuss the episode with me, but the bishop of Phoenix, Thomas Olmsted, ruled that Sister Margaret was “automatically excommunicated” because she assented to an abortion. “The mother’s life cannot be preferred over the child’s,” the bishop’s communication office elaborated in a statement.

Let us just note that the Roman Catholic hierarchy suspended priests who abused children and in some cases defrocked them but did not normally excommunicate them, so they remained able to take the sacrament.

Since the excommunication, Sister Margaret has left her post as vice president and is no longer listed as one of the hospital executives on its Web site. The hospital told me that she had resigned “at the bishop’s request” but is still working elsewhere at the hospital.

I heard about Sister Margaret from an acquaintance who is a doctor at the hospital. After what happened to Sister Margaret, he doesn’t dare be named, but he sent an e-mail to his friends lamenting the excommunication of “a saintly nun.”

“She is a kind, soft-spoken, humble, caring, spiritual woman whose spot in Heaven was reserved years ago,” he said in the e-mail message. “The idea that she could be ex-communicated after decades of service to the Church and humanity literally makes me nauseated.”

A statement from the bishop’s office did not dispute that the mother’s life was in danger — although it did note that no doctor’s prediction is 100 percent certain. The implication is that the church would have preferred for the hospital to let nature take its course.

The Roman Catholic hierarchy is entitled to its views. But the episode reinforces perceptions of church leaders as rigid, dogmatic, out of touch — and very suspicious of independent-minded American nuns.

Sister Margaret made a difficult judgment in an emergency, saved a life and then was punished and humiliated by a lightning bolt from a bishop who spent 16 years living in Rome. Compare their two biographies, and Sister Margaret’s looks much more like Jesus’ than the bishop’s does.

“Everyone I know considers Sister Margaret to be the moral conscience of the hospital,” Dr. John Garvie, chief of gastroenterology at St. Joseph’s Hospital, wrote in a letter to the editor to The Arizona Republic. “She works tirelessly and selflessly as the living example and champion of compassionate, appropriate care for the sick and dying.”

Garvie later told me in an e-mail message that “saintly” was the right word for Sister Margaret and added: “Sister was the ‘living embodiment of God’ in our building. She always made sure we understood that we’re here to help the less fortunate. We really have no one to take her place.”

I’ve written several times about the gulf between Roman Catholic leaders at the top and the nuns, priests and laity who often live the Sermon on the Mount at the grass roots. They represent the great soul of the church, which isn’t about vestments but selflessness.

When a hierarchy of mostly aging men pounce on and excommunicate a revered nun who was merely trying to save a mother’s life, the church seems to me almost as out of touch as it was in the cruel and debauched days of the Borgias in the Renaissance.

St. Luke’s a big step forward for Twin Falls

Over the past year, the city of Twin Falls and the Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency worked with investors and hospital officials to establish the St. Luke’s Magic Valley Medical Center Patient Financial Services office in Old Towne.

This project accommodates 110 workers, whose very presence in Old Towne will help stimulate downtown business.

It also fits perfectly into the plans put forth by a Portland-based redevelopment company, Leland Consulting Group, hired three years ago by the urban renewal agency and the city to help revitalize downtown business. In fact, St. Luke’s is the first major project to set up for business in a run-down four-block warehouse district that the Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency and the Leland Consulting Group had targeted for rehabilitation.

The thrust of the agreement between Twin Falls city, the Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency and the Leland Consulting Group went far beyond simply providing some pretty drawings that depict an attractive, quaint downtown. Mainly what Twin Falls got from this nationally recognized group was the perspectives this community needed in order to evaluate, plan and implement redevelopment projects.

With St. Luke’s settling into Old Towne, the board of the Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency expects more redevelopment.

But this isn’t the first time that the Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency has stepped up to help this city. It is a fact that Twin Falls simply would not be as successful as it is today without the help of the URA. The agency has a long history of projects, starting back in the early 1970s when the newly formed Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency assisted downtown Twin Falls with a major remodeling project. Over the years, the URA has helped develop infrastructure for companies such as ConAgra, Seastrom Manufacturing, Jayco Manufacturing, Solo Cup Co. and Dell Computer. Thousands of Magic Valley residents have benefitted from the jobs created by these companies. The URA also previously helped refurbish another area in the Old Towne district, enabling new local businesses to start up and others to relocate.

Members of the board of directors for the Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency recognize there are some who have grave concerns about the concept of a taxing district that is based primarily on projects’ increased valuations.

Nonetheless, in 2010, urban renewal remains the only tool that communities in Idaho have for helping local businesses not only stay alive but thrive.

Gary Garnand is chairman of the Twin Falls Urban Renewal Agency.

Bumper to bumper on the road to perdition

The veteran global investor Mohamed El-Erian, who runs Pimco and has lived through many a financial crisis, recently issued a report describing the new, perilous state of today's global economy. He described it like this: "The world is on a journey to an unstable destination, through unfamiliar territory, on an uneven road and, critically, having already used its spare tire."

I like that image. America used its spare tire to prevent a collapse of the banking system and to stimulate the economy after the subprime market crash. The European Union used its spare tire on its own economic stimulus and then to prevent a run on European banks triggered by the meltdown in Greece. This all better work, because we're not only living in a world without any more spares but also in a world without distance. We're driving bumper to bumper with every other major economy today, so misbehavior or mistakes anywhere can cause a global pileup.

And that leads to the real point of this column: In this kind of world, leadership at every level of government and business matters more than ever. We have no margin of error anymore, no time for politics as usual or suboptimal legislation. But what does that mean, "leadership"?

When El-Erian says we have no spare, he means we have a much diminished pool of resources, whether to moderate the impact of markets when they go haywire or to fund better health care, schools and infrastructure for growth. So leadership today is all about taking innovative actions that generate new capabilities and resources — and being smart and disciplined about every dime we spend and invest.

We just emptied our Treasury for a bailout. Did it merely provide a needed short-term jolt to the economy, or will it end up making us much fitter and more competitive so we can drive our economy farther and faster? I am still not sure. We just passed a health care bill. Will that increase our leverage and resources as a society or just add another set of liabilities that will require new credit lines from China? I am still not sure. We're passing a new financial regulation bill. Are we just pretending to solve the problem or will this new law add to our capacity to generate the resources to cushion the next crisis and fund the next start-up? A lot will depend on the execution.

Similarly, in Mother Nature we are also losing our margins for error. The National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration said Monday that the planet's average temperature for April was 58.1 degrees Fahrenheit, the hottest for any April on record. The more we keep pumping greenhouse gases into the atmosphere, the more we expose ourselves to a sudden, unpredictable climate disruption. The more we blithely remain addicted to oil, and not face up to all its negative geopolitical and environmental consequences, the more we invite sudden catastrophes like the gulf spill.

I think many Americans understand this at some intuitive level. In this economic climate, people know they need to be smarter, more frugal and make tougher choices in their private lives. They know they can't fake it or fool themselves anymore, so they have much less tolerance for politicians who want to do that in our public life.

And I don't think they are alone. I was in Britain for the recent election there, and I was struck at how easily they put together a rare coalition government to generate the broad political base needed to make the sacrifices and hard choices they can't avoid. German lawmakers voted to fund the Greek bailout. Greeks are protesting the austerity being imposed on them, but they are also taking their fiscal medicine — for now.

Writing about the recent U.S. elections, the Politics Daily columnist Walter Shapiro noted: "The hopeful message buried in all these election returns is that voters are tired of being toyed with. The problems afflicting America are too grave to tolerate the cynical, cling-to-power-at-all-costs cynicism of Arlen Specter and other Capitol Hill Machiavellis. The choices voters make in their desperate quest for authenticity are not always wise or well grounded in reality. But politicians and pundits — obsessively calculating partisan advantage like Scrooge counted shillings — will ignore at their own peril the stirrings of idealism among voters in both parties."

I really hope he is right. Winston Churchill famously observed that, "You can always trust the Americans. In the end, they will do the right thing, after they have eliminated all the other possibilities." Is that still true for our generation? We're going to find out. The time for bluffing ourselves is over. Are we going to do what it takes to fix our country, or are we going to be remembered as the generation that received more poker chips from their parents than any other and then had to turn around and toss a single chip to their kids and tell them to put it on "Lucky 21" — and hope for the best.

GOP ignores past anti-immigrant debacles

The Arizona Republican Party, following hard-fought primaries, plans a victory dinner in Phoenix on Aug. 27. There is a perfect speaker: former California Gov. Pete Wilson.

Arizona Republicans believe they're riding a big anti-illegal immigration wave to success in November. Wilson can regale them with how he pursued a similar strategy in 1994, winning reelection with 55 percent of the vote after embracing Proposition 187 to cut off state-funded education and health programs for children of illegal immigrants.

Wilson might also remind his political neighbors that since then the only other member of his party to win a major statewide election is the pro-immigration Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger; the Democrats have swept every presidential contest in the Golden State since then; Republicans had captured California in six of the previous seven presidential contests and five of the seven most recent gubernatorial races.

Thanks to Wilson, the Republican brand is anathema to much of the fast-growing Hispanic vote in California.

"There are a lot of similarities between what's happening in Arizona and what happened in California in 1994," says Sergio Bendixen, a political pollster and consultant specializing in the Hispanic vote. "That made California a deep blue state (as in Democratic) and Republicans are making the same mistake now trying to benefit on anti-immigration."

Al Hunt

There is short-term allure. Polls in Arizona and nationally show support for a measure signed into law by the state's governor last month that allows police to detain anyone who can't produce proof of citizenship when stopped for infractions as minor as running a red light, or deemed suspicious.

The catalysts for the Arizona law were the huge number of undocumented workers flowing into that state in recent years, and some highly publicized crimes, including the murder of a rancher near the border. Arizona Republicans claim they are taking action because the federal government has abdicated its responsibilities.

Politicians in other states are embracing the anti-immigrant push; the leading Republican gubernatorial candidate in Colorado wants an Arizona-type law in his state, and it's a dominant issue in the California Republican gubernatorial primaries. In Florida, second-generation immigrant Marco Rubio is straining to embrace a pro-immigration posture while still supporting the Arizona law. Rubio's discomfort reflects awareness that Hispanics have a much different view of this measure.

An NBC News/Wall Street Journal survey earlier this month showed that while non-Latinos back the Arizona law by almost 2-to-1, 70 percent of Hispanic voters oppose it and 8-in-10 say they believe it's likely to lead to discrimination against legal immigrants.

Resentment is likely to endure among Latinos, while the attention of supporters moves to other issues. Hispanics are the fastest-growing U.S. voting bloc, comprising 7.4 percent of the electorate in the last presidential election, double their proportion 20 years earlier. Similar growth is expected over the next few decades.

If this growing vote continues to go 2-to-1 or more Democratic, as it did in the last presidential race, Republicans face a huge long-term problem.

To be sure, the federal government needs to devote a lot more resources to the Arizona border. The number of personnel patrolling the Mexican border has more than doubled over the last decade to 20,000, although the most porous spots are in Arizona. It would be better to step up enforcement in conjunction with a liberalized immigration law, though it can't wait for that.

Republicans, however, delude themselves in thinking this pitched anti-immigration rhetoric and actions can be overcome by appealing to the cultural conservatism of many Hispanics on issues such as abortion and gay and lesbian rights. "I've never met a Hispanic who came to this country because they wanted to marry a gay or get an abortion," Bendixen says.

Even some conservative Republicans, such as former Florida Governor Jeb Bush, warn of the political peril of the Arizona law.

In 1994, when many Republicans in California and elsewhere were celebrating Wilson's anti-immigration triumph, there were similar warnings from a few prescient politicians, such as the late Jack Kemp, who said this was the "modern equivalent of the know-nothing party of the last century." Kemp was ignored; his party paid a price.

RETAILERS WANT YOU TO PAY SO THEY CAN PROFIT

Congress wants to cut retailers a break on what they pay to accept debit cards.
It would certainly help retailers' bottom line.

YOU pay for your debit card?

This anti-consumer amendment — passed without debate or hearing — must not stand.

“For a lesson in what might happen, [Bill Hardekopf, CEO of LowCards.com] points to Australia, which slashed interchange fees in 2003.... banks reduced credit card reward programs, increased annual fees and required customers to pay credit card bills sooner.”

—USA Today, 5/25/10

“When new laws decrease fees, you’d think most people would end up better off. Yet the much-ballyhooed new regulation on credit card interchange fees may end up doing ordinary consumers more harm than good.”

—Motley Fool, 5/24/10

“Somehow I doubt that merchants would throw a parade and immediately cut all prices by half a percentage point on every item on the day this bill goes into effect, if it comes to pass.... It will be hard for merchants to point to the vague idea of less-steep increases and satisfy angry customers who may suddenly be paying $10 a month for a checking account or earning half as many debit card rewards...”

—The New York Times, 5/21/10

“The bad news for consumers: Banks are expected to respond to the regulatory shake-up with more fees on basic services such as checking accounts.... It isn’t clear, though, if merchants will pass along their savings on so-called interchange fees to customers.”

—The Wall Street Journal, 5/21/10

“But even if the amendment becomes law, it’s unclear whether savings from reductions in debit card swipe fees would trickle down to consumers in the form of lower prices, or would largely be kept by merchants.”

Buhl building a vision for economic viability

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Does Buhl need a recreation district? A community health center? Neighborhood clean-up days?

Those are just some of the ideas being ruminated by the Buhl Economic Council and up for discussion during a meeting Thursday night.

The BEC, an arm of the Buhl Chamber of Commerce, is holding the meeting so community members can help create a long-term plan for the city.

“The idea is that we produce a written document with goals the community can get behind and support,” said John O’Conner, who is organizing the meeting with the BEC. “We want to find out what the community wants Buhl to be.”

The meeting, which will be held from 7 to 9 p.m. at the Buhl High School cafeteria, will continue where the BEC left off last fall, when the organization launched the program, Building Buhl’s Future.

“In that plan we outlined a few items that we wanted to accomplish as a community. We accomplished some of those thing, like building the new high school and completing the downtown beautification,” O’Conner said.

By developing a plan, he said, the city will be better equipped to accommodate current residents and businesses while laying the foundation to attract new growth.

BEC Member Steve Kaatz said the community will help define, “what business Buhl needs and wants.”

“We need growth but we need the right kind of growth,” Kaatz said.

After the community gives input the BEC will develop a small task-force to work out the details presented during the meeting. The task force will discuss how viable each idea is, the costs involved, and how long it would take to complete.

That committee will then present a formal plan to the community for consideration.

“Through the various meetings we will prioritize each goal and hopefully recruit volunteers to help get things accomplished. These things take time and they take work,” Kaatz said.

The BEC hired KMP Planning to design a workable plan that will act as BEC’s blueprints.

Buhl Mayor Tom McCauley said the city is already promoting neighborliness and property ownership. The city completed a successful April clean-up month, where it provided dump trucks and trash dumpsters at little to no cost for resident use.

The city also launched a Facebook page, trying to harbor connections in the community.

“It’s reaching out and helping your neighbor, the older lady who can’t physically mow her lawn and can’t afford to have someone else mow it. When we create those neighborhoods where everyone helps each other, that is a draw for new residents and companies looking to relocate. Buhl, in a lot of ways, is that community,” McCauley said.

Finding a remedy for resort recession

KETCHUM — Two weeks ago an ad hoc marketing committee offered a prescription for what ails Sun Valley’s economy.

This week the cities of Ketchum and Sun Valley are trying to figure out how best to take that medicine.

At issue: Whether to form a new board to come up with a new marketing strategy for Sun Valley, while refocusing the Sun Valley/Ketchum Chamber and Visitor Bureau’s efforts on maximizing visitors’ experience so they’ll spend more money while in the area and return. “The Chamber is attempting too much with too diffuse a focus,” said Jim Knight, who chaired the ad hoc Sun Valley-Ketchum Region Marketing Committee.

Sun Valley Mayor Wayne Willich told the City of Ketchum he is proposing to cut the amount his city gives the Chamber to $60,000.

The city gave the Chamber $321,000 this fiscal year. Willich would give $400,000 to the proposed marketing board.

Sun Valley council members will weigh in on his proposal when they begin planning the budget for the next fiscal year at 10 a.m. Thursday in Sun Valley council chambers.

The Chamber received $290,000 this year from the City of Ketchum, $255,000 from the Idaho Travel Council, $120,000 from business memberships and $80,000 from events.

The marketing board, as envisioned by the marketing committee, would have a representative from each city and Sun Valley Company, as well as two at-large members. The board and its paid chief marketing officer, would be overseen by the two cities and Sun Valley Company.

Economy strengthens behind building and manufacturing sectors

By Alan Zibel
and Martin Crutsinger
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — The economic recovery gained strength on the biggest rise in construction spending in nearly a decade and the 10th straight month of expansion for the manufacturing sector.

Temporary government incentives fueled most of the construction spending increases in April. Industry spending rose 2.7 percent with gains in all major sectors, the Commerce Department said Tuesday.

In a separate report Tuesday, the Institute for Supply Management, a trade group of purchasing executives, said its manufacturing index dipped slightly in May.

But the 59.7 reading was well above the 50 level that indicates expansion.

Construction spending was boosted by a homebuyer tax credit, which helped residential construction surge 4.4 percent in April. The tax credit expired at the end of April.

Government spending also rose on the strength of federal support. The 2.4 percent increase was aided by the economic stimulus program that Congress passed in February 2009. State and local spending jumped 2.3 percent and federal spending rose 2.9 percent.

The other major sector, nonresidential construction, climbed 1.7 percent. That marked the first advance in this category since March 2009.

U.S. Attorney General Eric Holder speaks to media in New Orleans, Tuesday. Holder said that federal authorities have opened criminal and civil investigations into the nation's worst oil spill.

Gusher costing fishermen and BP millions in losses

PORT FOURCHON, La. — Attorney General Eric Holder said Tuesday that federal authorities have opened criminal and civil investigations into the nation’s worst oil spill, and BP lost billions in market value when shares dropped in the first trading day since the company failed yet again to plug the gusher.

Investors presumably realized the best chance to stop the leak was months away and there was no end in sight to the cleanup. As BP settled in for the long-term, Holder announced the criminal probe, though he would not specify the companies or individuals that might be targeted.

“We will closely examine the actions of those involved in the spill. If we find evidence of illegal behavior, we will be extremely forceful in our response,” Holder said in New Orleans.

The company’s share price, which has fallen steadily since the start of the disaster, took a turn for the worse Tuesday, losing 15 percent to $6.13 on the London Stock Exchange.

That was the lowest level in more than a year. The shares have now lost more than a third of their value, wiping some $63 billion off BP’s value, since the explosion at the Deepwater Horizon oil rig six weeks ago. BP said early Tuesday it had spent $990 million so far on fighting and cleaning the spill, with multiple lawsuits for damages yet to be tallied.

The National Oceanographic and Atmospheric Administration also announced that almost one-third of federal waters — or nearly 76,000 square miles — in the Gulf were closing to commercial and recreational fishing because of the spill.

With the ambitious “top kill” abandoned over the weekend, BP’s hope to stanch the leak lies with two relief wells that won’t be finished until at least August. The company is, however, trying another risky temporary fix to contain the oil and siphon it to the surface by sawing through the leaking pipe and putting a cap over the spill.

After several failed attempts to divert or block the well, BP’s latest attempt involves cutting the broken riser pipe, making it spew as much as 20 percent more oil into the water for days while engineers try to position a cap over the opening.

Gas hunters will explore further in western Idaho

The Associated Press

LEWISTON — Canadian companies snooping in western Idaho for natural gas say they’ll drill 10 production wells this summer or in early fall in hopes of hitting the jackpot.

Bridge Resources Corp. and Paramax Resources Ltd., both of Calgary, recount favorable findings from three of five wells they’ve drilled so far near Payette and New Plymouth.

Idaho has long been thought of as a natural gas and oil desert, with neighboring states like Wyoming to the east reaping the rewards of an energy-rich geology. But Bridge and Paramax are hoping to prove history and conventional wisdom wrong and turn Idaho at least into a minor player.

About 150 oil and gas wells were drilled in Idaho between 1903 and 1988, but none moved into commercial production.

Bridge Resources Vice President Tom Stewart says one of the larger wells drilled so far produced natural gas flows at rates that were better than expected. He says the next step will be to “define the prospect.” Complete seismic tests, get a better understanding of underground structures that may be characteristic of natural gas fields, then pick the most appropriate sites for new wells. Drilling should begin again in late summer or early fall.

Commission OKs ‘snowmelt tariff’ for Intermountain Gas

Times-News

Intermountain Gas Company will be allowed to interrupt service to customers who use snowmelt equipment during periods when natural gas is in short supply, the Idaho Public Utilities Commission said Tuesday.

Natural-gas fired snow-melting equipment is used largely in the Wood River area, where it is installed under driveways and on rooftops to prevent snow and ice build-up. Intermountain Gas officials say the equipment uses an “inordinate amount of natural gas compared to more conventional uses.”

When natural gas use is at its peak, snow-melt equipment competes with other customers for the limited amount that can flow through the distribution system.

New residential and commercial customers who have snowmelt equipment would receive a discounted rate in exchange for their service being interrupted. Existing customers can volunteer to receive the lower rate in exchange for their willingness to have service interrupted.

The PUC will require Intermountain to notify customers with snowmelt equipment when service will be interrupted.

Charlat said he was uneasy with Sun Valley Company receiving the benefit of the marketing board if it does not contribute any money for the marketing board.

While the company might not put money toward the board, it's spending 4 percent on marketing if average, said Marketing committee member Bill Wright. And the community is realizing the benefits of the people it brings in.

There are plenty of marketing strategies that could be considered. Bill White pointed out how every subscriber to the Los Angeles Times received an offer on Memorial Day from Aspen.

“They're giving away this many trips,” he said, holding up one finger. “But If Aspen can afford to give away this many trips, and do a giant promotion, and can afford to do the same.”

Aspen also has eight to 10 sponsors, including American Express and Sun Valley doesn't have any, said Wright. “That's third-party money that could be achieved.”

Ketchum Council Member Baird Gourlay said it's no secret that both cities have been critical of the Chamber's marketing impact.

“But I know the Chamber does a lot of good things and it needs to be funded,” he said. “Maybe it would make sense to make the Chamber a member of the board so it would have some participation.”

Chamber President Rob Santa said the Chamber was grateful for “a great many excellent points.” But, he added, “We figure there's probably a way to do without creating a new organization.”

The Dow Jones Industrial fell 112.61, or 1.1 percent, to 10,024.02. The Standard & Poor's 500 index fell 18.70, or 1.7 percent, to 1,070.71, while the Nasdaq composite index fell 34.71, or 1.5 percent, to 2,222.33.

About four stocks fell for every one that rose on the New York Stock Exchange, where consolidated volume came to 5.3 billion shares compared with 5.1 billion Friday.

Volume was light because some traders were away for a long Memorial Day holiday. Light volume can intensify swings in the market.

Bond prices rose, sending interest rates lower. The yield on the benchmark 10-year Treasury note fell to 3.27 percent from 3.29 percent late Friday.

The Russell 2000 index of smaller companies fell 20.65, or 3.1 percent, to 640.96.

The dollar rose against most other major currencies, while gold rose. Overseas, Britain's FTSE 100 fell 0.5 percent, Germany's DAX index rose 0.3 percent, and France's CAC-40 slipped 0.1 percent. Asian markets fell following a report that China's manufacturing industry slowed last month. Hong Kong's Hang Seng fell 1.4 percent, while Japan's Nikkei stock average lost 0.6 percent.

Al-Qaida: No. 3 official killed with family

By Kimberly Dozier
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Al-Qaida announced Monday that its No. 3 official, Mustafa al-Yazid, had been killed along with members of his family — perhaps one of the most severe blows to the terror movement since the U.S. campaign against al-Qaida began. A U.S. official said al-Yazid was believed to have died in a U.S. missile strike.

A statement posted on an al-Qaida Website said al-Yazid, which it described as the organization's top commander in Afghanistan, was killed along with his wife, three daughters, a grandchild and other men, women and children but did not say how or where.

The statement did not give an exact date for al-Yazid's death, but it was dated by the Islamic calendar month of "Jemadi al-Akhar," which falls in May.

A U.S. official in Washington said word was "spreading in extremist circles" of his death in Pakistan's tribal areas in the past two weeks.

His death would be a major blow to al-Qaida, which in December "lost both its internal and external operations chiefs," the official said on condition of anonymity because of the sensitivity of the information.

Al-Yazid

The Egyptian-born al-Yazid, also known as Sheik Saeed al-Masri, was a founding member of al-Qaida and the group's prime conduit to Osama bin Laden and Ayman al-Zawahri. He was key to day-to-day control, with a hand in everything from finances to operational planning, the U.S. official said.

Al-Yazid has been reported killed before, in 2008, but this is the first time his death has been acknowledged by the militant group on the Internet.

Two Pakistani intelligence officials, speaking on condition of anonymity because they were not authorized to talk to the media, said al-Yazid died in a U.S. missile strike on May 21 in the North Waziristan tribal area.

Soon after the attack, officials reported that two foreigners were among the 10 people killed, but did know their identities. Five women and two children were also wounded in the attack, which occurred in the village of Boya near the main town in the area, Miran Shah.

The intelligence officials said they received word of al-Yazid's death last week and confirmed it by speaking to local tribal elders and Taliban members. They said their sources had not seen al-Yazid's body and did not know where he was buried.

Japan's prime minister steps down over base row

TOKYO (AP) — Embattled Japanese Prime Minister Yukio Hatoyama said Wednesday he was resigning over his broken campaign promise to move a U.S. Marine base off the southern island of Okinawa.

The prime minister faced growing pressure from within his own party to resign ahead of July's upper house elections. His approval ratings had plummeted over his bungled handling of the relocation of the Marine Air Station Futenma, reinforcing his public image as an indecisive leader.

Hatoyama is the fourth

Japanese prime minister to resign in four years.

Until Tuesday night, Hatoyama insisted he would stay on while intermittently holding talks with key members of his Democratic Party of Japan. But on Wednesday morning, after eight months in office, Hatoyama faced the nation to say he was stepping down.

"Since last year's elections, I tried to change politics in which the people of Japan would be the main characters," he told a news conference broadcast nationwide. But he conceded his efforts weren't understood.

Agatha deaths rise to 179 in C. America

By Juan Carlos Llorca
Associated Press writer

GUATEMALA CITY — Villagers used hoes and pick axes to hunt for victims of landslides that have killed at least 179 people in Central America while officials in Guatemala's capital tried to cope with a vast sinkhole that swallowed a clothing factory.

Thousands remained homeless and dozens still missing following the season's first tropical storm. Rescue crews struggled to reach isolated communities to distribute food and water.

"This is a total tragedy," said Jose Vicente Samayoa, president of a neighborhood group in Amatitlan, a flooded town south of Guatemala's capital.

Officials in Guatemala reported 152 dead but said 100 people were still missing. In the department of Chimaltenango — a province west of Guatemala City — landslides buried rural Indian communities and killed at least 60 people.

Curious onlookers also gathered at a massive and almost perfectly circular sinkhole that swallowed an entire intersection in Guatemala City over the weekend, gulping down a clothing factory but causing no deaths or injuries.

Authorities estimate the hole is 66 feet wide and

A sinkhole is seen Monday in downtown Guatemala City. Authorities blamed the vast hole, which swallowed an intersection and a three-story building, on heavy rains from tropical storm Agatha.

nearly 100 feet deep, but they are still investigating what caused it.

Nearly 125,000 people were evacuated in Guatemala and thousands more fled their homes in neighboring Honduras, where the death toll rose to 17 after two youths disappeared while bathing in a turbulent river despite official warnings to stay away from swollen waterways.

Most schools also resumed classes on Tuesday in Honduras.

In El Salvador, 11,000 people were evacuated. The death toll rose to 10 and two others were missing, President Mauricio Funes said Monday night.

About 95 percent of the country's roads were affected by landslides, but most remained open, Transportation Minister Gerson Martinez said. He said 179 bridges had been wrecked.

Agatha made landfall near the Guatemala-Mexico border on Saturday with tropical storm winds of up to 45 mph. It dissipated the following day over the mountains of western Guatemala.

The rising death toll is reminding nervous residents of Hurricane Mitch, which hovered over Central America for days in 1998, causing flooding and mudslides that killed nearly 11,000 people and left more than 8,000 missing and unaccounted for.

Rescue efforts in Guatemala have been complicated by a volcanic eruption Thursday near the capital that blanketed parts of the area with ash.

Commercial flights were expected to resume Tuesday at Guatemala's international airport.

Israel, Egypt ease Gaza blockade after deadly raid

By Josef Federman
Associated Press writer

JERUSALEM — Israel and Egypt signaled a temporary easing of the Gaza Strip blockade following harsh international condemnation of the deadly Israeli raid on an aid flotilla en route to the sealed-off Palestinian territory.

Egypt said it was freely opening its border with Gaza for the first time in more than a year to allow in humanitarian aid, setting off a mad rush to the crossing by thousands of residents, while an Israeli official said there is an "ongoing dialogue" with the international community on how to expand the amount of goods entering the area.

At the same time, Israel began expelling some of the nearly 700 activists it rounded up in the naval raid, and strongly rejected criticism that its tactics were heavy-handed. The government said late Tuesday it would deport almost all of them within the next two days, but about 50 would be held for investigation into their part in the violence at sea.

A group of 124 activists from nations without diplomatic relations with Israel was deported to Jordan before sunrise Wednesday, Israeli officials said.

Israel pledged to halt a new attempt by pro-Palestinian groups to sail more ships into Gaza, and claimed some of the arrested activists carried weapons and large quantities of cash, raising questions about whether they were mercenaries.

Worldwide condemnation has been flooding in since Israeli naval commandos halted the aid flotilla in international waters overnight Monday, setting off a melee that left nine activists dead and dozens wounded. Turkey, an unofficial backer of the flotilla, has led the criticism, accusing Israel of committing a "massacre," and the U.N. Security Council demanded an impartial investigation.

Ditching gluten?

Here are options to make menu planning easier

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

Chad Manderscheid knows his grains.

The Albion-based baker can tell curious eaters about how milling speed affects flour quality, how protein interacts with yeast, how altitude can alter the end result. And that knowledge gives Manderscheid a head start on the gluten-free bread recipe he's developing.

Manderscheid and a handful of other south-central Idaho commercial bakers hope to woo new gluten-free customers with wheat-free baked goods. The result: a few more options for folks who watch their flours.

Gluten is a protein found in wheat, barley and rye and affects elasticity in baked goods. It also causes a severe autoimmune reaction in people who have celiac disease. Symptoms vary but include fatigue, diarrhea, abdominal discomfort and anemia.

The only treatment for celiac is a lifelong gluten-free diet, which alleviates symptoms but doesn't offer a lot of cake or cookie options.

But Idaho bakers are starting to take notice.

"There are so many gluten-intolerant people in the Magic Valley that don't know where to buy gluten-free that tastes good and doesn't cost and arm or leg," wrote Deby Asmussen in an e-mail to the Times-News. Asmussen started her Gooding-based business, Serenity's Treasures, three years ago and added glutenfree goods two years ago after repeated customer inquiries.

Most of the businesses, like Hagerman Manna and Albion Bed and Breakfast, started as typical bakeries that specialized in wheat products. As they learned more about gluten-free diets, they experimented with recipes and added products to their lines.

Because people with celiac disease are so sensitive to gluten, cross-contamination with wheat is a concern,

A different model of market

Wood River Sustainability Center aims to nurture community

By Ariel Hansen
Times-News writer

HAILEY — It's hard to nail down exactly what the Wood River Sustainability Center is. It's a farmers market, a co-op, a gathering place for farmers and foodies, a classroom and, hopefully by fall, a commercial kitchen.

It's also the dream of Melinda and Dick Springs, who operate a farm near Picabo. They were looking for additional cold storage for their community-supported agriculture operation when they heard about an old barn available in downtown Hailey.

"Melinda looked at me and said, 'This is a lot more than freezer space,'" Dick said. Peering into the dark corners and high ceilings of the old structure, they saw potential.

BUY, SELL, LEARN AND CONNECT

The Wood River Sustainability Center is at 308 S. River St. in Hailey, in the big white barn. It is open 1-5 p.m. Wednesdays and Fridays, and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturdays, and can be reached at 309-3360. Contact Dick or Melinda Springs for information about selling or about classes.

The barn doesn't look like any grocery store you've been in, with its rustic wood beams and folding tables laden with basil and tomato starts. In the back room, mismatched chairs cozy up around a potbellied stove and tables stacked with pamphlets and books.

"We call ourselves a center rather than a store because we want information and ideas to be exchanged," Dick said. Melinda said the couple is trying to help consumers reconnect with farmers: "We're going by inches away from that feeling that food comes from a shelf on a store."

Ric Lum, who owns a new Ketchum restaurant that specializes in seasonal food, Delicious Revolution, said the center feels similar to co-ops from several decades ago, and another producer compared the center to a Grange hall. "It centralizes the energy of the farmers, they have a place to come," Lum said.

Farmers pay a small fee — either a percentage of their sales or $25 per month, whichever is less — to sell at the market, and there are no requirements for the amount of produce or the days that it must be available. The center is open three days a week, so both producers and consumers have more options. And farmers can choose to barter or trade their products rather than sell them, which is especially appealing to those with home gardens who might have just a few extra baskets of zucchini one week.

"I don't have to make the commitment to the farmers market when I may or may not have anything (to sell)," said Don McQuary of Hailey, who is in his second year farming on a small commercial scale and is quick to say he's still learning.

Thinking about soup for summer

By Jim Romanoff

For The Associated Press

The perfect bowl of soup makes a satisfying meal that's filling, yet low in calories and high in nutrition. But in the heat of summer, most people give it a pass.

This recipe for chilled zucchini and green bean soup could change your mind about soup in summer.

Sauteed zucchini and sweet onions are simmered with two kinds of beans, then pureed into a soup that's creamy without being fatty. A swirl of store-bought basil pesto and a dollop of reduced-fat sour cream provide a luxurious finish.

The soup can be served at room temperature or chilled, so it makes a nice cooling lunch or entree on a hot summer evening.

Plus, this recipe makes a good template for what a healthy soup should be: based on a reduced sodium broth and packed with low-calorie, nutritious and filling vegetables.

Using beans, such as the edamame in this soup, provides an added bonus of hunger-satisfying protein and dietary fiber.

Beans make an excellent base for soups that will seem rich. Combine them with a bit of broth or water, and puree to get velvety smooth results. If you like, use convenient canned beans, but be sure to rinse them under cold water to wash away some of the salt that is in the canning liquid.

To complete the meal, serve this soup with a salad and some crunchy whole-grain pita chips or breadsticks.

CHILLED ZUCCHINI AND GREEN BEAN SOUP WITH A PESTO SWIRL

Start to finish: 1 hour (15 minutes active). Servings: 6.

- 2 tablespoons extra-virgin olive oil
- 1 small sweet onion, chopped
- 1 pound zucchini, ends trimmed and thinly sliced
- 4 cups reduced-sodium chicken broth
- 10-ounce package frozen shelled edamame
- 1/2 pound green beans, ends trimmed
- 1/2 teaspoon salt, or to taste
- 1/4 teaspoon ground white pepper, or to taste
- 1/4 cup store-bought basil pesto
- 1/2 cup reduced-fat sour cream (optional)

In a large saucepan over medium-high, heat the oil. Add the onion and zucchini and saute until very soft, about 10 minutes.

Add the chicken broth and bring to a boil. Stir in edamame and green beans and simmer, uncovered, until the vegetables are soft, about 20 minutes. Remove from the heat and cool for 15 minutes.

Transfer the soup, in batches if necessary, to a blender or food processor. Puree, then season with salt and pepper.

Serve soup chilled or at room temperature. When serving, divide the soup among 6 bowls and swirl a spoonful of pesto into each. Top with sour cream, if desired.

larger-scale farmers connect with the resources they need, but they are also eager to turn consumers into producers.

On a recent Friday afternoon, for example, Dick stood chatting with a mother and daughter, part-time Wood River Valley residents, who came in wanting advice on how to start a garden. With other customers waiting to make purchases, he asked the pair to come back at 5 p.m. — he would go out to their property with them to help plan their space after the center closed for the day, he said.

A commercial kitchen, which the Springs hope to have in place by fall, will be another way help those with small operations to grow. For example, many cooks are learning how to can and preserve at home, but to legally sell those preserves, they must can in a certified commercial kitchen.

The center is also coordinating with Sawtooth Botanical Garden to offer classes on a variety of gardening and food-related topics. A recent "Gardening 101" class, Dick said, attracted 40 students, 18 of whom were putting in a garden for the first time.

The center is not a non-profit, in part because of the paperwork required, Melinda said with a smile. Although there is some volunteer labor, employees are paid.

The couple evaluates everyone who is interested in selling at the center, mostly because they want customers to feel welcome to contact sellers, to visit their farms or ask questions.

"We are careful about products we bring in here, because we want them to represent our philosophy," Melinda said.

At its heart, that philosophy is about community — locals supporting locals.

"I think people are embracing this, slowly but surely," she said. "It gives people a sense that they're doing the right thing; they feel good."

Frozen meats in many varieties are a winter mainstay at the Wood River Sustainability Center. The center also offers vegetables and fruit, honey, herbs, preserves, eggs, seeds, plant starts and other items from local producers.

Dick Springs helps a customer add dirt to a tomato start. He is eager to offer advice and assistance to both beginning and more experienced gardeners, and hopes to nurture a community of consumers and producers who support each other.

More people, products are gluten-free

By Melissa Davlin
Times-News writer

So why are shoppers seeing more gluten-free foods in southern Idaho grocery stores?
Doctors are seeing more patients with celiac disease, in which gluten — a protein found in wheat, barley and rye — triggers an autoimmune response that damages the digestive system and affects nutrient absorption.
A 2009 study from Mayo Clinic and University of Minnesota Researchers reports celiac disease is four times more common today than it was in the 1950s. Researchers examined almost 10,000 frozen blood samples, taken from U.S. Air Force recruits between 1948 and 1954. Just 0.2 percent of those samples contained the antibody that indicates celiac disease, compared with 0.9 percent of people who have the antibody now.
“It is indeed well documented that all autoimmune (and allergic) disorders are on the rise worldwide, but limited to developed areas,” wrote Stefano Guandalini, founder and medical director of the University of Chicago Celiac Disease Center, in an e-mail interview with the Minneapolis Star-Tribune. “In general, it is safe to say the rates about double every 20 years or so.”
One possible explanation for the increase: the “hygiene theory.” In other words, as a society we're just too clean. As a result, the immune system, largely controlled by the gut, receives inadequate stimulation, Guandalini said. The study authors also speculate that environmental changes, including how producers grow and process grains, could contribute.

Mary Ordway, owner of Sta-Well Health Food Store in Twin Falls, has her own ideas based on Internet reading she did after her sister fell ill in 2009. Prescriptions like antibiotics, medical steroids and birth control pills, combined with poor diets, kill off the intestine's good flora and allow yeast to attach to the intestinal wall, Ordway said. The yeast eats away at the intestine, causing leaky gut syndrome, in which toxins, yeast, allergens and other substances permeate the intestinal linings. When those substances leak into the blood stream, the infection becomes systemic and can cause autoimmune disorders like celiac disease, rheumatoid arthritis and lupus.
Leaky gut syndrome is a controversial diagnosis, and there is no proven link between it and other diseases — although natural paths like North Carolina-based nutritionist Elizabeth Lipski maintain there is a connection. But the explanation makes sense to Ordway, who said she also had the systemic yeast infection and successfully treated it with diet change and supplements.

“If your intestines aren't healthy, nothing is,” Ordway said.
No matter the cause, where does that leave people diagnosed with celiac disease?
The outlook isn't grim. Gluten-free product sales increased 74 percent from 2004 to 2009, according to media and market research firm Nielson Co.
But gluten-wary shoppers still have to be careful and read labels. The Food and Drug Administration requires companies to label whether their products contain the eight most common allergens — eggs, fish, crustacean shellfish, soy, wheat, peanuts, tree nuts and milk — but not gluten.
While many national food producers voluntarily label their gluten-free products, like Ore-Ida french fries, Mission tortilla chips, Nesquik chocolate milk and Chex cereal, the FDA doesn't provide guidelines for gluten-free labeling. Furthermore, the absence of wheat on the label doesn't make a product gluten-free, as the protein can be found in dozens of ingredients derived from wheat, barley or rye, including malt extract, brewer's yeast and edible starch.
The Milwaukee Journal Sentinel contributed to this report.

CELIAC SUFFERERS UNITE

The Celiac Support Group of Magic Valley meets at 7 p.m. on the fourth Tuesday of each month. Locations change month to month, so watch the “To Do For You” calendar in the Healthy & Fit section, Mondays in the Times-News. Information: Pat Corle, 731-9079.

REPORTER'S
NOTEBOOK

These days, Magic Valley is a fine place to go gluten-free

Three months after I wrote my first gluten-free article for the Times-News' Food section, the issue became personal for me.
After being sick for six years, and increasingly ill in the past six months, I finally got a diagnosis of celiac disease in mid-April. When the doctor told my husband, Nate Poppino, and me, I felt enormous relief — celiac was preferable to the other potential causes of my malaise — then immediately thought of the article I had written and the celiac patients I had talked to in January. I left the office elated but had no idea what I would eat for dinner. We ended up going to Maxie's Pizza & Pasta, remembering from my original article that it offered gluten-free crust.
I call the following month my gluten-free honeymoon. After years of countless pills and tests and doctor visits, and considering what we thought was making me sick, I was grateful to have a disease that can be controlled with diet alone. Just days after ditching wheat, I felt better than I had since high school. Between Sta-Well, the Asian Food Market and Fred Meyer, gluten-free groceries were easier to find than I had anticipated.
Most importantly, I also had the energy to cook. I made wheat-free pizzas, coffee cakes and pastas, and even tweaked a flourless peanut butter cookie recipe to make it my own. Nate and I enjoyed plenty of naturally gluten-free food, like dahl, baked potatoes, polenta, corn tortillas and soup.
But like so many love affairs, my infatuation with gluten-free foods burned out, and reality set in. I fell into a rut and ate little more than gluten-free spaghetti, nachos and stir-fry. My favorite restaurants were out of the question, as were indulgences like Girl Scout cookies, Oreos and Krispy Kremes. Sayonara, potlucks. Hello, obsessive label reading.
Even worse, I've had several accidental gluten exposures, whether through cross-contamination, failing to wash my hands thoroughly after feeding the cats — their kibble contains wheat — or stupidly assuming products are gluten-free when they're not. And I had no idea until recently that several brands of soap, hand sanitizer and lotion have wheat-derived ingredients.
Those careless mistakes are so easy to make, but costly. Even kissing Nate after he drinks a beer can be enough to make me fatigued and sick to my stomach for days. Why go through so much trouble to avoid food I love if I'm going to get glutened anyway?
Then I remember how sick I was, how much better I feel now, and how comparatively easy it is to be gluten-free today. More cookbooks and products are coming out all the time, like Betty Crocker's gluten-free line or Blue Diamond Nut-Thins crackers, which are available at many Magic Valley grocery stores. The availability of local baked goods pleasantly surprised me, too. I recently tried bread by Deby Asmussen of Serenity's Treasures in Gooding. It was the first bread I'd tried since my diagnosis, and it was much, much better than I had anticipated. I had to stop myself from eating the whole loaf in one sitting.
I'm still figuring out this disease, and I've felt my share of self-pity. But when the urge comes to feel sorry for myself, I instead try to count my blessings in the crumbs of my flourless peanut butter cookies.

Chris Mottern

One of God's special angels has passed from our lives. Chris Mottern, 75, a longtime resident of Twin Falls and beloved mother, grandmother, sister, aunt and friend, departed this life at her home Wednesday, May 26, 2010, after a courageous battle with cancer. The memory of her radiant smile, cheerful personality, gentle nature and sense of adventure will be forever in our hearts.

Chris was born July 8, 1934, in Harrison, Ark., one of five sisters and one brother. As a toddler, she moved with her family to Idaho. She was a 1952 Filer High School graduate and was a leader in many school organizations and activities. Soon after finishing high school, she moved to Twin Falls and was employed by Barnard Auto Company. Later, she was hired by her eventual husband, Ben Mottern, at the Rogerson Restaurant. Chris and Ben were married in 1955 and remained a fun-loving and devoted couple until Ben's passing in 2004. Their years of marriage were filled with raising four beautiful children, co-owning a successful restaurant business with their dear friends, Ted and Jennie Smith, traveling, cheering on their favorite sports teams and enjoying shared interests.

Throughout her lifetime, Chris' first priority was supporting her children's and grandchildren's activities. She was involved in their 4-H groups; decorating barn stalls and showing horses and dogs; car-pooling to dance lessons and recitals; watching sporting events of her children, grandchildren, many nieces and nephews and friends; spending hours with the Rogerson Coffee Shop Giants Little League baseball team; and helping out with any school activity where she was needed. Her last outing, 11 days before she died, was attending her grandson, Alex's, graduation from Lighthouse High School.

After her children were grown, Chris pursued a career in the hotel industry. Hired as a sales manager at the Canyon Springs Inn of Twin Falls, she was soon promoted to the position of general manager. Her career highlight was having the opportunity to establish and serve as the director of hotel management at the College of Southern Idaho for 12 years, where she was awarded Outstanding Technical Staff Person.

Chris was full of adventure and everyone wanted to be with her. She loved to go for a long ride and end up in a place no one would have imagined visiting on that outing. She had a passion to explore the outdoors and take in the beauty of nature, to return to places that made an early impression on her to reflect the past and an excitement to visit new destinations. Getting into the car and traveling to a CSI basketball tournament 2,000 miles away during a snow storm or following the University of Idaho Vandals to a football game wherever their schedule took them was perfectly normal for Chris! Just as exuberant as she was for adventure, she welcomed the precious moments of solitude.

Kathleen Karen Lavens James

JEROME — Kathleen Karen Lavens James, with all her eloquence and beautiful grace, left our presence and rode home to her beloved husband on Sunday, May 30, 2010.

Karen was an amazing woman who lived an extraordinary life. She repeatedly gave her gift of influence to her family and to so many young minds and her beautiful, charismatic personality will be deeply missed. Karen is now free from the frontal temporal lobe dementia that had held her captive in recent years.

Born Sept. 30, 1942, at St. Valentine's Hospital in Wendell, Idaho, Karen was the fourth child of Kenneth and Naomi Lavens of Jerome. She spent her childhood years attending the Canyonside rock schoolhouse south of Jerome, and it must have been there that she first felt the magnetism of education for it would be her lifelong craft. Karen graduated from Jerome High School in 1960 and then attended Idaho State College in Pocatello, Idaho. She was an active member in the Gamma Phi Beta National Sorority.

Perhaps the crown jewel of Karen's successful life came in 1961 and 1962 as she respectively won the titles of Miss Rodeo Idaho and Miss Rodeo America. Farm-raised and an excellent horsewoman, Karen was a natural choice for the elite honor and represented the great sport of rodeo with perfection. Soon thereafter, Karen met and fell in love with Jerry Callen James of Twin Falls. The inseparable and horse-loving duo married on Aug. 28, 1964, and then attended Utah State University in Utah, where they both competed on the university's rodeo team. Karen graduated with an English degree and the two returned home to the Magic Valley to pursue their dreams of owning and operating a small family ranch.

Karen obtained her first teaching position in Filer and, after one year, began teaching senior English for the Jerome School District. The couple soon bought their dream home and acreage south of Jerome and began raising a family. Karen spent the next 33 years positively influencing young minds in her classroom at Jerome High School. She interpreted Shakespeare, Chaucer, Salinger and Milton in a friendly, down-to-earth style that was all her own and always a favorite in the halls of JHS. In addition to college preparatory senior English, Karen taught photography and supervised the annual staff. Karen raised three children, Joni, Justin and Julee, and when she wasn't teaching, she was masterfully fulfilling multiple demanding roles as rancher's wife, mother, bookkeeper and cook as the family grew and the living years flew by too fast.

In 1992, Karen and Jerry launched a successful auctioneering business known as JMA Auctioneers. Karen lost her beloved husband, Jerry, to an enduring battle with cancer in 1997 and then retired from her extremely honorable teaching position in 2000. Ever the go-getter, Karen soon thereafter enrolled in auctioneering school in Billings, Mont., where she graduated first in her class. She then continued the successful JMA Auctioneers until her health declined to the point that she had to set the gavel down and focus on family and quality time.

Karen is survived by her three children, Joni Smith, Justin James and Julee Smith; sister, Jackie Larsen; her brother, Dr. Tim Lavens of Calgary, Alberta, Canada; grandchildren, Callen, Naomi, Cole and Nykell Smith, Abby, J.W., Bryar and Sawyer James, Brock and Trey Smith, and two other grandsons on the way; and many nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by her parents; two sisters, Beverly Smith and Patty Jones; and aunt, Bunny Meeks.

A celebration of Karen's life will be held at 2 p.m. Friday, June 4, at the Jerome High School auditorium. Friends may visit from 6 to 8 p.m. Thursday, June 3, at the Hove-Robertson Funeral Chapel in Jerome. Burial will follow at the Jerome Cemetery. A scholarship fund has been established in Karen's honor at D.L. Evans Bank in Jerome.

Comments and memories of Karen are welcomed at www.facebook.com/group.php?gid1312953702.

Cora Lucille Beem Lloyd

Cora Lucille Beem Lloyd, 91, passed away Friday, May 28, 2010, in Twin Falls.

Lucille was born in Filer, Idaho, on Sept. 19, 1918. She was the eldest of five children of Grover C. Beem and Cora L. Lovett. Lucille graduated from Filer High School in 1936 and from Albion State Normal School in 1938. After graduating from Albion, she taught elementary school in Springfield, Idaho. While in Springfield, she met the love of her life, William J. "Bill" Lloyd. Bill had received a Bachelor of Science degree in forestry from the University of Idaho-Moscow in 1938. They married in Filer, Idaho, on June 23, 1940, and moved to West Yellowstone, Mont., where Bill worked in Yellowstone National Park. Bill later worked for the United States Department of Agriculture, and his career took them to the Seattle, Wash., area; Denver, Colo.; Milwaukee, Wis.; Philadelphia, Pa.; Fort Worth, Texas; and Washington, D.C.

Bill was the chief forester of the United States when he retired. Bill and Lucille retired to Twin Falls, Idaho, in 1979 and built their own home. They also had a home in Mesa, Ariz., where they enjoyed mild winters and were involved in many social activities. While raising their three sons, Lucille worked part time in libraries and school cafeterias. While living in Milwaukee, Wis., she attended the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee. Lucille enjoyed gardening, crochet handiwork, camping, playing the organ, reading, playing cards, socializing with family and friends, and traveling. She and Bill traveled to most U.S. national parks, most states of the USA and to many foreign countries, but Idaho — home — was her favorite place.

Lucille enjoyed her life to the fullest and was our constant, quiet, background hostess at family gatherings. She was our family's heart at our gatherings, and she will be missed beyond description. She leaves us a legacy of loving her family and the strength of her purposeful, positive life.

Lucille was predeceased by her parents, Grover and Cora Beem; her husband, William J. Lloyd; her brother, Isaac Beem; and her sister, Mary Louise Holste. Lucille is survived by her three sons, William Harold Lloyd of Buhl, Idaho; Ronald Lynn Lloyd of Las Vegas, Nev.; and Robert Michael Lloyd of Snoqualmie, Washington; 12 grandchildren; and 27 great-grandchildren of Washington, Idaho, Utah, New Mexico, Maryland and Maine; and her sisters, Kathryn Harding of Hayden Lake, Idaho, and Margaret Ann Behrens of Wendell, Idaho.

A visitation will be held at 7 p.m. Friday, June 4, at the Farnsworth Mortuary, 1343 S. Lincoln Ave. in Jerome, Idaho, followed by a graveside service at 11 a.m. Saturday, June 5, at the Springfield-Sterling Cemetery in Springfield, Idaho.

Donald J. Zitterkopf

Donald J. Zitterkopf, 79 of Twin Falls, died Thursday, May 27, 2010, at his home.

Donald was born Jan. 27, 1931, at Scottsbluff, Neb., the son of Jake and Marie Ashenbrener Zitterkopf. At a young age, he moved with his family to Twin Falls, where he was raised and educated. He served for four years in the U.S. Air Force. Upon his discharge, Don returned to Twin Falls, where he worked as a self-taught carpenter for many years. He enjoyed building and could repair anything. He married Julene Hankins on April 15, 1956.

He is survived by his wife, Julene Zitterkopf of Twin Falls; two sons and daughters-in-law Harry and Gerri Zitterkopf and Dale and Robin Zitterkopf, all of Twin Falls; one grandson, Michael Zitterkopf; and five step grandchildren, Brett (Karen) Tolman, Shawna (John) McCall, Kelly (Bill) Hunter, Bryce Tolman and Haley Tolman; one brother and sister-in-law, Bob and Betty Lou Zitterkopf of Pocatello, Idaho; and one sister and brother-in-law, Mary and Carl Ash of Nampa, Idaho. Don was preceded in death by his parents, Jake and Marie Zitterkopf; and one sister, Betty Irene Kuder.

A graveside service will be held at 11 a.m. Thursday, June 3, at Sunset Memorial Park, with Pastor Dale Metzger of the Rock Creek Community Church officiating. Memorial contributions in Don's name may be made to the American Cancer Society. To offer condolences to Don's family or share a memory of Don, please visit www.whitemortuary.com.

Eddie Laren Nichols

Heaven has received one awesome mechanic, carpenter and fixer of all things in need of repair, leaving us here, to try to learn how to repair our broken hearts, one beat at a time.

Eddie Laren Nichols, 67, of Filer, Idaho, died Monday, May 24, 2010, at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center, surrounded by his family.

Ed was self-employed as a truck driver. He was a quiet and shy man until you started discussing his favorite subjects: anything with four wheels and an engine. You could always find him in his "Club House," the shop, rebuilding vintage cars, inventing some contraption, helping a friend tinker on some gadget or watching NASCAR. Eddie loved traveling, hunting and fishing. But most of all he loved camping with his family and friends. Eddie would be the one with the Dutch oven, cooking the spiciest food you ever dared lay your tongue to.

Eddie is survived by his wife, Barbara (Olson); daughters, Linda (Frank) Fowler of Camas Valley, Ore., and Cindy Hine; sons, Phillip Olson, Don (Kim) Olson and Michael (Angel) Olson, all of Twin Falls, and Richard (Christie) Olson of Clarksville Tenn.; and his son of the heart, Lee Hall of Twin Falls; sister, Brenda (Bill) Householder of Glide, Ore.; brother, Harry "Buzzy" (Julie) Nichols of Winston, Ore.; 14 grandchildren; and 13 great-grandchildren. He was preceded in death by his parents, Betty Gay (Parrot) and Edgar Nichols; grandson, Trevor Hine; and his "Gold Dust Twin," Frank McCreary.

There will be no service at Ed's request. In lieu of flowers, we would love for you to fill your tank up with gas and head to your favorite place to enjoy the great outdoors, just as Ed would have been doing this glorious weekend. Ed, you were an amazing man and we were very blessed to have had you in our lives. You touched us all in a positive way and you will be greatly missed. Continue on your journey knowing that we all loved you very much.

Donna (Jordan) Stayner

Donna (Jordan) Stayner, loving wife, mother and friend, passed away peacefully at her home Wednesday, May 26, 2010.

Donna was born Nov. 17, 1938, in Chesley, Okla., to Hassell and Maxine Jordan. Donna spent most of her young life in Oklahoma but moved to Castleford, Idaho, during her senior year of high school and graduated from Castleford High School in 1956. In 1959, Donna married her soul mate, Noel Stayner, in Twin Falls, Idaho, and has been married to him ever since, surpassing 50 years last year. During this wonderful relationship, they had three loving children, Mark, Marty and Michelle.

During Donna's distinguished career, she enjoyed working in all aspects of the business world; however, she was most comfortable performing the duties of a bookkeeper and a secretary for many employers in the Magic Valley. Donna enjoyed many different activities during her life, including camping with her family, reading, cooking and cross-stitch. She enjoyed entertaining in her beautiful back yard and, most of all, she enjoyed spending time with her grandchildren. No one ever went hungry when they visited Donna's house. She loved to cook, and she will always be remembered by her family and friends for her wonderful homemade jam and cinnamon rolls.

Donna is survived by her husband, Noel; son, Marty; daughter, Michelle with husband, Brett Green and their two children, Brandon and Makenna Green; her mother, Maxine Jordan; one brother, Gerald Jordan; and a sister, Pat Howard; along with numerous nieces and nephews. Donna is preceded in death by her son, Mark; her father, Hassell Jordan; and two brothers, Ernie and Rickie Jordan.

The family would like to issue a special thank you to St. Luke's Chemotherapy Laboratory for the loving care they provided Donna during her illness and to Dr. Baker and Dr. Symington for all of the care and compassion they showed to Donna over the last year. The family would also like to issue a big "thank you!" to a special family member, Rhonda Barlogi, for always being there and for her loving care and support.

In lieu of flowers, the family asks that donations be made to the Cancer Society or to your favorite charity.

In loving remembrance, a celebration of life will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday, June 5, at Parke's Magic Valley Funeral Home, 2551 Kimberly Road in Twin Falls. All friends and family are welcome.

GOODING — Margery Stroud, 82, was born in Gooding, Idaho, on Jan. 13, 1928. She left this earth to be with her beloved Savior on Monday, May 31, 2010, at home with her family after a valiant battle with cancer.

After graduating from Bliss High School in 1946, she worked in Boise for two years for Salt Lake Hardware Company and then married her high school sweetheart, Herb Stroud, on July 31, 1948, in Gooding. They together raised three children on a farm in Bliss, Linda (Bob) Belkowski of Mesquite, Nev., Diane Hart of Seattle, Wash., and Steve (Leata) Stroud of Gooding. Margery was very involved with the Bliss Community Church; a chartered member Audrey Lucile Moore, 83, of Twin Falls, passed away Saturday, May 29, 2010, at St. Luke's Magic Valley Medical Center.

Audrey was born Oct. 8, 1926, at Los Angeles, Calif., to Charles and Jane MacFarlane Anderson Kerr. She attended John Marshall High School in Los Angeles and UCLA. She has been married to Jim Moore for 48 years, and they have raised four children, two sons, Bruce and Eric, and two daughters, Claudia and Julianne. Prior to moving to Twin Falls in January of 1992, she and Jim lived with their family for more than 30 years in Corona del Mar, Calif. (Newport Beach).

Her career as a highly organized office manager and corporate officer spanned nearly four decades, first with private medical offices, followed by owning and operating, with her husband, two retail home centers and one wholesale lumber yard. They were located in Costa Mesa and Huntington Beach, Calif. (ABC Lumber, American Building Centers and Tool, and Nail Lumber Co.)

Among her fondest memories of the period was the way her many famous patients/clients liked to tease her. The last time she saw John Wayne, he said, "You better go easy on my bill Li'l Audrey, 'cause I support about 52 people and need all the help you can give me." She played classical piano nearly every day from the age of 5 until just a few weeks ago. She was an avid reader of close to 2,000 novels, biographies and histories. She has left instructions to donate her book collection to the Twin Falls Library.

For more than 30 years, she found great pleasure sailing their many boats with family and friends. From May through November, they would sail the Pacific waters off Newport Beach to Catalina. Distant sailing included many voyages among the Caribbean Sea Islands and trips to the Polynesian Kingdom of Tonga, preceded a few years earlier cruising many islands of Tahiti. Non-sailing trips were to Maui for two weeks prior to Thanksgiving each year. She always said, "If I can't retire in Tonga, I'll take Maui." She and Jim are life members of The Bahia Corinthian Yacht Club in Corona del Mar, Calif.

Audrey is survived by her loving husband, James Harrison Moore; her remaining son, Eric Norman Poulson; a daughter, Julianne Moore Yates; a grandson, Robert "Bear" Kregger, all residing in Twin Falls, Idaho. She was preceded in death by one son, Bruce W. Poulson; and a daughter, Claudia Moore Carlson; her parents, Charles Kerr and Jane Kerr; her beloved mother-in-law, Lucile Rule Moore.

Audrey's wishes were to be cremated and, at an appropriate and convenient time, have her cremated remains disburSED over the Pacific waters between Newport Beach and Catalina where the dolphins play. She also requested there be no celebration of life until that event. Cremation is under the direction of Serenity Funeral Chapel in Twin Falls.

Don Price

BURLEY — The Burley area lost a longtime resident and friend to many when Don Price, 72, passed peacefully away Sunday, May 30, 2010, in Boise after a brave battle with leukemia.

Don was born Nov. 20, 1937, in Challis, Idaho, to Frank and Dora (Gini) Price. He moved with his family to Twin Falls in 1942 and then to Burley in 1946, where he lived the rest of his life. Don graduated from Burley High School in 1956. He married Verna Mozell Ross on May 22, 1957 in Burley. They enjoyed 41 faithful years together and were blessed with five children. After graduating from high school, Don worked as a carpenter until 1962, when he was hired at Western Seeds in Heyburn. Don worked for Western Seeds as the warehouse foreman until his retirement in 2002.

Don was an avid outdoorsman. The time spent hunting and fishing with his family and friends was most precious to him. His love for the outdoors was passed on to his children and grandchildren. He enjoyed golfing and bowling and belonged to various leagues over the years and made many lasting friendships at the lanes and on the links. It was with great pleasure that he celebrated with them at the clubhouse after his long-awaited hole-in-one last summer. Don also got to share a moment of perfection with his bowling buddies as they watched him finish a perfect 300 game just a few years ago.

He was preceded in death by his wife; both parents; and a sister, Norma. He is survived by his brother and best friend, Jerry Price and his wife, Patsy of Burley; his children, David (Julie) of Idaho Falls, Rick (Denise) of Boise, Randy (Shelly) of Lubbock, Texas, Brad (Ronna) of Pinehurst and Taunya (Robert) Foster of Boise. Also left to cherish his memory are 16 grandchildren and four great-grandchildren, as well as 18 nephews and nieces.

The family extends special thanks to Dr. Law and the fine nursing staff at St. Luke's Hospital in Boise. Don lived with his daughter, Taunya and her husband, Robert, during his illness and the rest of his family wish to send great thanks and appreciation for the loving way they let him face this final challenge with grace and dignity, surrounded by those that loved and respected him. He will be missed by many and not soon forgotten.

The funeral will be held at 1 p.m. Thursday, June 3, at Morrison Funeral Home, 188 S. Highway 24 in Rupert, with Pastor David Lind officiating. Burial will follow in the Pleasant View Cemetery. Friends may call from 6 to 8 p.m. Wednesday, June 2, and noon until 12:45 p.m. prior to the service Thursday at Morrison Funeral Home and.

The family suggests memorials be made to the Rocky Mountain Elk Foundation, 5705 Grand Creek Road, Missoula, MT 59809, or to the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society. Services are under the direction of Morrison Funeral Home.

nephews. She was preceded in death by her parents, Pete and Louise Huyser; sisters, Ada Devlin and Rosemary Stucker; and brothers, Donald Huyser and Bob Huyser.

The funeral will be held at 11 a.m. Friday, June 4, at the First Christian Church in Gooding. Private family inurnment will follow. In lieu of flowers, donations can be made to the First Christian Church in Gooding.

North offense erupts to win 11-man game in runaway

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

BURLEY — The line is as old as the Civil War itself, but once again the South failed to rise — at least at the 33rd Annual North-South All-Star Shrine 11-man football game, in which the North team won 35-7 at Burley High School.

The North dominated the game with four unanswered scores, putting touchdowns on the board in every quarter except the first. The familiar connection of Jerome’s quarterback-receiver tandem of Cameron Stauffer and Gus Callen accounted for two touchdowns: a 35-yard TD pass in the second quarter and a 49-yard score in the third.

“We knew coming in that we wanted to put a lot of points on the board,” Callen said, crediting the play of the offensive linemen.

Jerome’s Ross Hillier scampered for 35 yards for the North’s second touchdown. Following the North’s second score, the offense was flagged for a dead-ball unsportsman-like-like conduct after celebrating in the end zone by sitting in rows on the ground and pretending to row a boat. At least that’s what it looked like.

For the final score, Pete Coats caught a 19-yard touchdown pass on a wide-receiver pass from Jerome’s Billy Wight. Minico’s Coltin Johnson converted all four extra-point kicks.

The South struck first as Marco Avelar of Buhl hauled in a touchdown pass from Declo’s Jeremy Jenkins during the first quarter.

The South came close to scoring in the last minutes of the first half, but Minico’s Keelan McCaffrey intercepted Jenkins’ fourth-down throw in the end zone amid a pack of North and South players. McCaffrey picked off another pass in the fourth quarter as well as blocking a field goal attempt by Buhl’s Armondo Arroyo in the late minutes. For his efforts, McCaffrey was named the North’s Defensive MVP.

“We were just doing simple stuff,” McCaffrey said. “I did my job and came down with it, twice.”

Jenkins was the South’s Offensive MVP, and Buhl player Brian Schofield earned the honors on defense.

Ultimately, the night was about giving back, and Twin Falls’ Brett Korhing put it best: “Our focus was on the kids. For us, it was a great time to help out and play one more game.”

Linemen reach paydirt as South wins 8-man game

BURLEY — Raft River linemen Braden Ottley and Austin Zollinger spent most of their high school careers blocking for the quick little guys.

At the 33rd Annual North-South All-Star Shrine 8-man football game Tuesday, the big guys got some of the glory for a change.

Ottley hauled in a touchdown pass and Zollinger had a 2-point conversion as the South rolled to a 36-6 victory.

“It was a lot of fun,” Zollinger said. “I got to meet a lot of people that I didn’t like during football season, like a bunch of the Oakley and Lighthouse kids. But I’m pretty good friends with them now.”

Old enemies coming together to form bonds as teammates is just one feel-good aspect every year at the Shrine games, which raise funds for Shriners Hospitals.

But maybe “enemies” is putting it too blatantly.

“I don’t know if you make enemies playing against each other, but you’re not the best of friends,” said North’s Tayln Henslee of Hagerman. “You get everybody on the same team, and you become like a big family. It’s pretty awesome how in a week and a half kids can come from six different teams, pull everything together and come out and play.”

Henslee, who was named North’s Offensive MVP, scored his team’s only touchdown, a 5-yard romp in the second quarter. The over-matched North squad kept it close until midway through the third quarter when they ran out of steam.

CSI stars Nielson, Griffin garner NJCAA honors

Nielson commits to play for Utah

By Bradley Guire
Times-News writer

Add a few more Eagles to the NJCAA All-America list.

College of Southern Idaho softball players Generra Nielson and Mikkell Griffin were named to the NJCAA All-America third team recently, marking the third straight year in which CSI was represented.

“That’s awesome,” said Griffin, who first leaned the news from a phone interview. “It’s a big honor. I didn’t even think about anything nationally (for awards). I thought it was cool just to get all-region.”

Both she and Nielson were also named to the All-Region 18 first team and tournament team in May.

Head coach Nick Baumert said it’s always an honor to have players named All-America.

“It’s a reward for the hard work our kids put in,” he said. “Both had a good year, especially with (Nielson) having the near-300 strikeouts and Mikkell having the 20 home runs and her stolen-base numbers as well.”

Nielson finished 2010 with 28-9 record, a 1.88 ERA, seven shutouts and 293 strikeouts (427 career), while Griffin ended the season with a .480 batting average with 74 RBIs and 18 stolen bases. Griffin has already signed to return for her sophomore season.

Nielson and Griffin join Rachel Evans (2008), Megan (Zimmerman) Gardner (2009) and Cassi Merrill (2009) among Eagles earning All-America honors.

In addition, Nielson confirmed that she has committed to play for the University of Utah.

“I love that it was close to my family in Blanding and close to my family in Twin Falls,” she said. “I liked the

Federer stunned by Soderling at French Open

The Associated Press

PARIS — His French Open reign suddenly over, his record streak of 23 consecutive Grand Slam semifinals done, too, Roger Federer paused briefly as he trudged off court at dusk, acknowledging the fans’ applause with a polite smile and a quick wave.

He’s certainly not used to bidding adieu so soon.

Bothered by the pouring rain and his big-hitting foe, the top-seeded Federer wasted a lead and plenty of openings Tuesday, succumbing to No. 5 Robin Soderling of Sweden 3-6, 6-3, 7-5, 6-4 in the quarterfinals at Roland Garros. If Soderling’s name sounds familiar, it’s because he stunned four-time champion Rafael Nadal in the French Open’s fourth round last year, before losing to Federer in the final.

For the first time in six years, the men’s semifinals at a major tennis tournament will not involve 16-time Grand Slam champion Federer.

“They all come to an end at some stage. You hope they don’t happen, but they do. It was a great run,” Federer said, before injecting a little humor by adding with a wry smile: “Now I’ve got the quarterfinal streak going, I guess.”

Look at it this way: Federer had won 117 matches in a row in the first five

Slimmer Roethlisberger back in Steelers practice

The Associated Press

PITTSBURGH — A slimmed-down Ben Roethlisberger whistled practice passes to his receivers for the first time in five weeks, and a teammate didn’t need to watch video tape to know what he’d just seen.

“He’s been working hard at home,” defensive end Brett Keisel said. “He wants to be great this year. So, hopefully, he will.”

Even if considerable repair work needs to be done, on the field and off it.

The two-time Super Bowl champion quarterback didn’t talk to reporters after practicing Tuesday for the first time since drawing a six-game suspension April 21 for violating the NFL’s personal conduct policy.

The penalty resulted from a Georgia college student’s allegation that Roethlisberger sexually assaulted her in a nightclub, and though he does not face criminal charges in the case, NFL commissioner Roger Goodell said the quarterback’s drinking and carousing failed to meet the league’s expectations for player behavior.

LeBron says Cavaliers have edge in free agency

CLEVELAND (AP) — One month from the start of the NBA's free agency frenzy, LeBron James said he's not close to making any decision. However, he has handi-capped his field of suitors. The Cleveland Cavaliers lead the pack. In his first interview since the Cavs' season ended with a shocking, second-round loss to Boston, James told CNN's Larry King that Cleveland has "an edge" to re-sign him when the greatest collection of free agents in league history hits the open market on July 1. King, who interviewed James at the two-time MVP's home near Akron on Tuesday, asked the superstar if Cleveland has "an edge going in?"

"Absolutely," James said in a portion of the interview released by the network. "Because, you know, this city, these fans, I mean, have given me a lot in these seven years. And, you know, for me, it's comfortable. So I've got a lot of memories here. And so it does have an edge."

"It's going to be a very interesting summer and I'm looking forward to it."

Also during the interview, which will air Friday on CNN's "Larry King Live," James said he can't wait for July 1 to arrive and that he has not yet decided where he'll sign.

"I'm far from close," he was quoted as saying in a transcript posted on WEWS-TV's website in Cleveland. "July is still a month away, less than a month away. I've thought about it, but I haven't began to strategize exactly."

James also made his first comments about former Cavs coach Mike Brown, who was fired in the aftermath of Cleveland's startling loss to the Celtics. James said he was sorry to see Brown let go after five seasons.

"He was a great coach, five great years we had together and we turned a franchise that hadn't seen a lot of things in a lot of years," James said.

"But ultimately, we both, myself and Mike Brown, didn't accomplish what we wanted to, and that was (win) the NBA championship. And I think we wanted it more than anybody else.

"So it's unfortunate. I wish him the best and I think he's going to have a great coaching career."

Before sitting down with King, James had not talked any media members since the Cavs were eliminated by the Celtics, who then knocked off Orlando and will meet the Los Angeles Lakers in the finals starting Thursday.

James believes the Celtics can beat the Lakers and win their 18th NBA title.

He also plans to meet with Dwyane Wade, Chris Bosh and others in a star-studded summit of free agents to talk about their future plans.

"I am the ringleader," James told King.

The New York Knicks, Chicago Bulls, New Jersey Nets and Los Angeles Clippers are among a group of teams expected to make a strong push for James, who is humbled by all the attention as well as recent comments by New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg, who wants him to sign with the Knicks, and President Barack Obama, who would like to see him step into Michael Jordan's shadow with the Bulls.

James seemed intrigued by the Clippers and the chance to play near Hollywood.

"They've got some really good players. Some really nice, solid pieces that, if they add a free agent here or a free agent there, it could be a really good team. It's a great city. But at the same time, it's not always about the city. It's about winning. If you put me and Bosh on the same team, if you put me and Dwayne Wade on the same team, a lot of teams would be much better. You know, the Cavs would be much better."

And while he'll consult with advisers, family and friends, James said the choice of his next team will up to one person.

"It's going to be me," he said. "I'm going to have to sit down and say 'Where do you want to play?'"

James has spent all seven seasons as a pro with the Cavs, who offered him a contract extension last year and can give him $30 million more than any other team in a maximum-length deal.

Yankees get past Orioles

NEW YORK — Miguel Tejada's two-out, two-run throwing error allowed Javier Vazquez to win a stellar matchup with Brian Matusz, and the New York Yankees beat the Baltimore Orioles 3-1 Tuesday night.

Tejada, playing his first season at third base, fielded Alex Rodriguez's sharp grounder off reliever David Hernandez in the seventh inning, but his throw to first bounced in the dirt and Ty Wigginton couldn't stretch far enough to scoop it.

Curtis Granderson hit a solo homer in the fifth inning.

Baltimore lost its sixth in a row.

Philadelphia with their 17th win in the last 21 games, including seven in a row. They haven't been in first this late in the season since 2005, the last of their record 14 straight division titles.

REDS 9, CARDINALS 8

ST. LOUIS — Scott Rolen homered twice and the Cincinnati Reds overcame a rough outing by Johnny Cueto, recovering for a victory over the Cardinals.

Jonny Gomes' RBI single and Drew Stubbs' go-ahead sacrifice fly off Blake Hawksworth put the Reds ahead to stay in the seventh inning after Brendan Ryan's two-run double put the Cardinals ahead 8-7 the inning before.

PIRATES 3, CUBS 2

PITTSBURGH — Neil Walker hit his first major league home run to put the Pirates ahead in the eighth and Pittsburgh beat the Cubs for the seventh time this season.

Walker, who grew up in Pittsburgh's suburbs and was the Pirates' first-round draft choice in 2004, hit a 0-1 pitch from Ted Lilly (1-5) into the seats in the deepest part of the ballpark in left-center with Andrew McCutchen on and one out.

MARLINS 6, BREWERS 4

MIAMI — Jorge Cantu hit a go-ahead double in the seventh inning as Florida became the latest team to rough up Trevor Hoffman, sending the Marlins over the Brewers.

Hoffman, baseball's career saves leader, took over with the score 3-all. Chris Coghlan led off with a double and scored on Cantu's hit, and Ronny Paulino added a two-run single.

ASTROS 8, NATIONALS 7

HOUSTON — Lance Berkman singled in two runs with two out in the ninth against NL saves leader Matt Capps as the Astros answered Washington's late rally with one of their own.

The Nationals grabbed a 7-6 lead with a two-run rally against Houston closer Matt Lidle on RBI singles from Roger Bernadina and Ian Desmond.

"First three quarters we were with them, then we got dogged," Henslee said. "We didn't have enough players. They were able to sub kids in and keep up with it and we just couldn't. ... "It was competitive, but it's just a game to have fun. It's the last time suiting up for high school football. It was awesome,"

The Lighthouse Christian connection got South on the board first as quarterback Evan Aardema hooked up with Zane Jessor on a 24-yard touchdown. Later on, their Lighthouse teammate Aaron Borchardt scored on a 15-yard run. The other South QB, Derek Bates of Murtaugh, threw two touchdown passes to Raft River Trojans — a 5-yarder to Ottley, and then a 14-yard strike to H.D. Tuckett. Another Trojan, Rio Manning, found pay dirt on a 4-yard rushing TD.

But the highlight of the night went to the men in the trenches. After South scored its final touchdown that gave it a comfortable lead in the fourth quarter, the coaches called for the fumblerooski. Zollinger, who was named the South's Offensive MVP, lined up at guard. Bates took the snap, laid it on the ground and Zollinger scooped it up and did the rest, carrying a heap of North defenders into the end zone.

"We practiced it a couple of times, but it never worked in practice," Zollinger said. "I was supposed to wait and let the play develop. I just sat there for a bit and once I saw the opening I just picked it up and took it the two yards."

Does the play prove Zollinger should have carried the ball more during his high school career?

"No, no it doesn't,"

Zollinger laughed.

The game's Defensive MVP awards went to Carey's Dillon Simpson for the North, and Castleford's Ethan Tverdy for the South.

World Cup organizers: We have delivered

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — World Cup organizers insisted Tuesday they have delivered on all their promises and said ticket sales are approaching the record set at the 1994 tournament in the United States.

“We are closer and closer to the best World Cup ever in terms of ticketing, which was USA in 1994, so it’s an amazing result in South Africa,” FIFA secretary general Jerome Valcke said.

About 3.6 million tickets were sold for the 1994 tournament.

Valcke’s statement was unthinkable six weeks ago when the event was beset by ticketing problems, with a massive 500,000 seats still unsold. South African sales have received a huge boost after FIFA agreed to over-the-counter releases, where fans could finally buy tickets for cash. Organizers say they sold 100,000 tickets in less than two days last week.

Following a final meeting of its board before the World Cup kicks off, the organizing committee also said the tournament’s 10 stadiums were ready and had all been tested.

“That we are on the verge of something truly unique and memorable is undoubted,” local organizing committee chairman Irvin Khoza said at a media briefing in Johannesburg. “There were many who questioned the scale of our ambitions, but we have proved them wrong.”

The newfound confidence was echoed by FIFA president Sepp Blatter, who also attended the meeting at the luxurious Sandton Sun Hotel, and said organizers had done “a great job.”

However, a South African workers’ union said earlier Tuesday it wanted people to boycott the June 10 World Cup Kickoff Concert, FIFA’s first official event of the tournament.

The Creative Workers’ Union of South Africa said it is still unhappy that not enough local artists have been included in the concert’s line-up.

Critics also say there are still outstanding transport problems, with fans experiencing traffic gridlock and long delays in recent test games at Soccer City in Johannesburg and the Mbombela Stadium in Nelspruit.

And Valcke conceded last week’s ticketing problems _ where systems crashed and caused frustration and delays for fans — were “not very professional.”

Meyer healthy after chest pain diagnosed as esophageal spasms

SANDESTIN, Fla. — Florida coach Urban Meyer is taking medication, feeling “fantastic” and hoping his chest pain is history.

Speaking at the Southeastern Conference’s annual spring meetings Tuesday, Meyer said doctors have diagnosed the chest pain that bothered him the last three years as esophageal spasms.

Although he declined to discuss his health in further detail, he said he is taking medication and that his heart is completely healthy.

“The biggest thing is I wanted to find out what those darn chest pains were and I did,” Meyer said. “It’s esophageal spasms and they’ve got me on some medications. I’ve just got to be smarter in the future, and I’m going to be. I’m not going to let that happen again.

“But the biggest thing was all that was related to what the heck were those pains going through my chest. Once you find out what it is, life gets a little better quickly.”

Meyer briefly resigned in late December, citing health concerns three weeks after he was rushed to a hospital with chest pain. He changed his mind the following day and instead decided to take a leave of absence following Florida’s bowl game.

Meyer said the diagnosis came in January, and he’s been pain free since.

“It all relates to one pain, and that was waking up every morning with a toothache in your chest for the last three years and that’s all related to one thing,” Meyer said. “And so, since late January is the last time I had any issues at all with that.”

Esophageal spasms often cause chest pain that can be confused for angina, causing the fear of a heart problem if undiagnosed. Symptoms can also include difficulty

JUDGE SAYS LEACH SUIT AGAINST TEXAS TECH CAN GO ON

LUBBOCK, Texas — Former Texas Tech football coach Mike Leach can move forward with a lawsuit claiming breach of contract over his firing, which followed allegations of player mistreatment, a judge ruled Tuesday.

State District Judge William C. Sowder struck down Texas Tech’s claim of sovereign immunity from the breach of contract claim. But Sowder upheld the university’s sovereign immunity against the lawsuit’s other claims, which included libel, slander and violation of Texas’ Whistleblower Act.

The university fired Leach on Dec. 30, two days after suspending him amid allegations he mistreated a player with a concussion. Leach has denied mistreating Adam James and suspects an $800,000 bonus he was to have received Dec. 31 was the reason he was fired.

James, the son of former NFL player and ESPN analyst Craig James, has said his coach twice ordered him to stand for hours while confined in a dark place during practice.

Leach’s legal team said in a statement that Sowder’s ruling “validates” Leach’s position in the lawsuit. Leach’s attorneys claimed he is owed $9 million under the breach of contract claim.

“While we understand Texas Tech’s desire to enforce the defense of sovereign immunity, we do not understand Tech’s continued refusal to acknowledge its obligations to Mike Leach especially in light of Judge Sowder’s ruling,” the statement said.

BIG 12 OFFICIALS URGE TEAMS TO STAY TOGETHER

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — With speculation swirling about Missouri and Nebraska being targets for possible Big Ten expansion, commissioner Dan Beebe opened the Big 12’s spring meetings Tuesday with a plea for staying together.

At the same time, Beebe agreed there was little chance the Big 12’s future would be decided before the meetings adjourn on Friday afternoon. No decision by Missouri, Nebraska or anybody else about leaving the conference is expected for several months.

“I want to talk frankly about whether there’s a date certain that our institutions can commit to the conference so that we know who’s on board as we go forward,” Beebe told a news conference.

He said he hopes to get long-term commitments from his members before the meetings close Friday.

“I don’t know if that’s realistic,” he said.

Beebe and others such as Kansas athletic director Lew Perkins will be urging that the conference remain intact.

“We have described the fact that we have a great conference that has provided a lot of benefit to all our institutions,” said Beebe. “I think we have a tremendous group of institutions that have benefited greatly (from the Big 12).”

The Big Ten, enriched by its own cable network, has indicated it is looking into adding teams and said in December it would take 12-18 months for the conference to decide what it is going to do.

Last year, Big 12 schools divided between $7 million and $12 million depending on how many appearances they made on regional and national TV. That means Texas usually pockets the biggest share, with the likes of Missouri lagging behind.

Meanwhile, Big Ten schools share equally and came away with more than $20 million each.

Adding to the Big 12’s distress are reports that Colorado could be looking at the Pac-10 and Texas might be checking out other options.

rounds at majors, dating to a loss to Gustavo Kuerten in the third round at the French Open on May 29, 2004 (Federer advanced twice when opponents withdrew).

“I mean, I respect everyone, but I’m always — how do you say? — I’m honest enough to myself that I know I can win them all,” said Federer, who would cede his No. 1 ranking if Nadal wins the title.

Among the many reasons why Tuesday’s result was so unexpected is that Federer was 12-0 against Soderling, having won 28 of the 30 sets they’d played.

So who, exactly, would have thought Soderling could win three sets in a single day?

Well, Soderling, for one. “Even though I lost so many times, I always have a chance to win,” said the 25-year-old Soderling, who’d never been past the third round at a Grand Slam tournament until last year’s French Open. “I always believe that I can win. This is a big win, but it’s not the final. Still have at least one more match to play, and I don’t want to celebrate too much.”

Federer gave Soderling credit for playing well, but also said he thought the damp conditions favored the underdog’s style.

“He was able to hit consistently through the ball on the offensive and put them close to the lines,” Federer said, “and that’s something that was impressive.”

He also knew full well that if he’d played a little better himself, he’d be preparing for another semifinal.

Instead, it will be Soderling vs. Berdych, who advanced to his first Grand Slam semifinal by beating No. 11 Mikhail Youzhny of Russia 6-3, 6-1, 6-2. In Wednesday’s men’s quarterfinals, Nadal meets No. 19 Nicolas Almagro of Spain, and No. 3 Novak Djokovic of Serbia faces No. 22 Jurgen Melzer of Austria.

In Tuesday’s women’s quarterfinals, No. 17 Francesca Schiavone gave Italy its first female semifinalist at the French Open since 1954 by knocking off No. 3 Caroline Wozniacki of Denmark 6-3, 6-2. Schiavone now plays No. 5 Elena Dementieva, who defeated No. 19 Nadia Petrova 2-6, 6-2, 6-0 in an all-Russian quarterfinal.

in voluntary practices April 19 and 20, but was barred from working out again until he underwent a league-ordered behavioral evaluation and was cleared by Goodell to resume team activities. The commissioner still hasn’t decided if Roethlisberger’s suspension will be reduced to four games.

The consensus among Roethlisberger’s teammates: Good to have him back, now let’s move on — even if they realize that can’t possibly happen for months.

“We’re all trying to get over this. I think we’re all already over this, we want to get ready for the season,” said lineman Willie Colon, the only Steelers teammate known to have been with Roethlisberger the night of the incident in Georgia back in early March. “We’ve got a lot of people we got to knock down. Our focus is being world champs again, and that’s where we’re all headed to.”

Roethlisberger, wearing a white No. 7 jersey atop a yellow practice shirt, took all the snaps with the starters during the 90-minute practice, partly because Byron Leftwich had a previously scheduled commitment and missed the voluntary practice. Coach Mike Tomlin also departed early for the same reason and didn’t answer questions.

You may have more in common than you think.

Today is Wednesday, June 2, the 153rd day of 2010. There are 212 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight:

On June 2, 1953, Queen Elizabeth II of Britain was crowned in Westminster Abbey, 16 months after the death of her father, King George VI.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this date:

In 1897, Mark Twain, 61, was quoted by the New York Journal as saying from London that "the report of my death was an exaggeration."

In 1924, Congress passed a measure that was then signed by President Calvin Coolidge granting American citizenship to all U.S.-born American Indians.

In 1941, baseball's "Iron Horse," Lou Gehrig, died in New York of a degenerative disease, amyotrophic lateral sclerosis; he was 37.

In 1946, Italy held a referendum which resulted in the Italian monarchy being abolished in favor of a republic.

In 1966, the U.S. space probe Surveyor 1 landed on the moon and began transmitting detailed photographs of the lunar surface.

In 1969, the American destroyer USS Frank E. Evans was struck and cut in two by the Australian aircraft carrier Melbourne during naval exercises in the South China Sea; 74 crew members from the Frank E. Evans were killed.

In 1975, Vice President Nelson Rockefeller said his commission had found no widespread pattern of illegal activities at the Central Intelligence Agency.

In 1979, Pope John Paul II arrived in his native Poland on the first visit by a pope to a Communist country.

In 1986, for the first time, the public could watch the proceedings of the U.S. Senate on television as a six-week experiment of televised sessions began.

In 1990,

IF JUNE 2 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: You may yearn for a romantic escapade this month and while it is entirely possible to have an enjoyable vacation or get-away in the next four weeks, you could be expected to attend group activities that interfere with your timetable. September would be a better time for a trip or fun-filled holiday. In October, you become more serious and more ambitious so that is a time to tackle a disciplined study or start a diet. The first half of February is the very best time to begin any very important project because your judgment is at its best and you will receive all the help you need to be a success at whatever you tackle.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Busy people get busier. You seem to attract extra responsibilities when you already have a lot to do. You might feel challenged to cope with all your duties and there is little time available for relaxation.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Confusing circumstances on the career front may cause concern. Wait patiently for a temporary whirlwind of puzzling trouble to blow over before you take action, as things may be as they appear.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Partners are particularly adept at procuring hidden information. Someone may share confidential news with you, but do not spread it around. You might find that not everything you hear is true.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You may be deceiving yourself into thinking things are better than they are. This is a good day to educate yourself; go to the library or scan the Internet for more information before you make a final decision.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do not cross the line drawn in the sand, because the sands will blow away soon. It is tempting to bristle at every imagined challenge to your authority. Concerns about a significant other may hamper progress.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Someone might be deliberately pushing your buttons. You can short circuit any attempts to cause annoyance by being as sweet and understanding as possible. Don't make any promises or commitments.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Fears and worries can prevent you from making the best use of your time. Loved ones might give your concerns the cold shoulder. Postpone major decisions until next week when you have more energy.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): What is tough to accomplish today could be a breeze in just a few days. You might meet with resistance if you try to impose your will on others, or if you try to persuade someone of something.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Put on your thinking cap, but keep lips sealed. Although you may be inspired, others won't necessarily share your enthusiasm. A surefire way to become discouraged is to try to convince others of something important.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): If you act on wishful thinking, you may land at the bottom of a wishing well. It is a good time to write down your ideas, or investigate potential opportunities, but not the time to commit your cash.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Sidestep snares in your path. Opportunities to make additional money may be in the works, but even the best-laid schemes may backfire. Wait until you can deal with the details in a forthright manner.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Honesty is the best policy. That enthusiastic sparkle in your eyes might prove helpful when dealing with the public. Capitalize on your appeal but don't make major expenditures or key changes.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"There can be no progress (real, that is, moral) except in the individual and by the individual himself."
— Charles Baudelaire

In today's deal North's raise to two hearts was very heavy, but playing the forcing no-trump, he felt he was short of a limit raise and had at least shown values this way. With less, he would have bid one no-trump and then given preference to hearts.

West felt honor-bound to balance, but North redoubled to show extras, persuading South to bid the heart game — "to teach his opponents a sharp lesson."

West dithered between the black suits for a lead, but luck was not with him when he chose the spade queen. Declarer could see nine obvious tricks, but digging up the wherewithal for a 10th took some doing. One possibility would be to try to steal the diamond king, but in fact there is a sure-trick line, and South eventually observed that it would come from dummy's diamond spots.

Realizing that he had to preserve dummy's three entries until they were needed, he won the lead in hand, drew trumps with the ace and king, and then advanced the diamond king.

West won with the ace and switched belatedly to a club. South won in dummy, then played the diamond jack, discarding a club. In with the diamond queen, the defense could cash one club, but South's spade loser then vanished on the diamond 10.

On an initial club lead, this line would not have worked. West wins the first diamond and cashes the club winners. The defenders collect a diamond or a spade in the ending.

ANSWER: You have already shown a balanced positive but still have some extras. Your choice would be to drive to slam (with either a bid of six no-trump, or five no-trump to get partner to pick a slam). Alternatively, you could advance with four no-trump and let partner pass with a dead minimum. That would be my choice, given your sterile hand-pattern.

DEAR ABBY: My friends and neighbors thought I had the best husband, and our children thought he was the greatest dad. But on the day he died, I found out he had been having sex with another woman.

I went to visit him in the hospital and overheard the whole thing as he was talking to her. Abby, she was a prostitute. I knew money had been disappearing, but I never imagined anything like this.

Should I go on pretending to my adult children, or tell them the truth? They thought he was the best father in the whole world. Even though this happened more than five years ago, I continue to have nightmares over it.

— STILL HURTING IN BOSTON

DEAR ABBY
Jeane Phillips

DEAR HURTING: I see nothing positive to be gained by shattering your children's image of their father at this point. I'm sorry he failed you as a husband. However, for you to spend more of your life nursing hurt and disappointment is a waste of your precious time. Talk to your religious adviser or confide in a therapist. But do not bring this up with your children.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 76-year-old father of three sons and grandfather of five. The other night, I was dining out with my brother, one of my sons, his 31-year-old wife, and their two children, ages 5 and 7.

The server was standing next to me and the 5-year-old, poised to take our orders. My daughter-in-law was distracted by the 2-year-old, so I placed my order so the server would not be kept standing there.

My son chastised me for not waiting until his wife placed her order first. Embarrassed, I offered an apology. Was I wrong not to wait for my daughter-in-law to place her order? What would have been the proper thing to do?

— EMBARRASSED
IN GARFIELD, N.J.
DEAR EMBARRASSED:
Frankly, the "proper thing to do" in this case would have been for your son to save his criticism until he could talk to you privately, rather than embarrassing you in a public place. Ordinarily, the rule of thumb "ladies first" would apply when giving the dinner order. However, because your daughter-in-law was distracted, speaking up and telling the server what you wanted makes sense to me.

DEAR ABBY: The company where I work posted an ad online and at our state unemployment job board for a position that needed to be filled. The ad detailed simple but specific instructions that included asking applicants to write a cover letter to address certain questions. It also said — in large letters: “YOU MUST FOLLOW THESE DIRECTIONS OR YOU WILL NOT BE CONSIDERED FOR EMPLOYMENT.”

Of the 133 resumes we received, 76 did not contain the information that was requested. These applications were moved to an "Incomplete" file and not considered for hire. What's sad is that judging by their resumes alone, several of

With unemployment being what it is, I was surprised that the majority of the applicants did not comply with the simple instructions. Please advise your unemployed readers that a job is out there for them, but they must follow instructions.

— TRYING TO
TUMWATER, WASH.
DEAR TRYING TO BE HELPFUL: Consider it done.
Now I'll offer another suggestion: Always proofread what you have written to ensure there are no spelling or transposition errors.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.
