TEACHER PAY CUT 7.8%

Twin Falls School Board makes decision on 4-1 vote

By Ben Botkin
Times-News writer

The Twin Falls School Board on Friday decided that the only realistic way to weather the downturn in state funding is to use furlough days to slash teacher pay by an average of 7.8 percent.

The school board made its decision with a 4-1 vote, with Trustee Richard Crowley dissenting. The decision includes the following cuts: 14 furlough days for the upcoming school year, ending an optional 192nd contract day and a reduction in the pay teachers get for taking on extra duties like coaching.

The board also imposed furlough days on administrators, with the goal being for the furlough days to amount to the 7.8 percent reduction in salary spending. For students, the furlough days will result in a reduction of four full days of school and four current half days.

The school is expecting a reduction of $2.64 million in state funding for the next fiscal year, a reflection of the Legislature's overall statewide cut of 7.5 percent, or $128.5 million, from the public schools budget in response to declining state revenues. The cuts will take effect in July, when the state's fiscal year 2011 begins.

Annette McFarlin, left, wipes away tears as she sits with fellow Vera C. O'Leary teachers Paula Chapman, center, and Diann Roberts during the meeting on teacher contracts Friday morning at Canyon Ridge High School auditorium.

HOW OTHER SCHOOL DISTRICTS HAVE FARED

Cassia County School District: Eight furlough days for teachers and 12 furlough days for administrators, which represents cuts of 4 percent for teachers and 6.3 percent for administrators.
Gooding School District: Six furlough days for teachers, representing a 3.6 percent pay reduction. Administrators will have a 4.35 percent pay reduction and the superintendent will have a 5.7 percent pay reduction.

Jerome School District: Teachers will have 10 furlough days and experience a 1 percent reduction in salary scale, amounting to a 6.2 percent reduction in salary spending.

Minidoka County School District: The reduction of one day for all employees will reduce salary expenses by .67 percent. The school district had made additional cuts after declaring a fiscal emergency last year.

College basketball coaching legend John Wooden dies

By Beth Harris
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — John Wooden, college basketball's gentlemanly Wizard of Westwood who built one of the greatest dynasties in all of sports at UCLA and became one of the most revered coaches ever, has died. He was 99.

The university said Wooden died Friday night of natural causes at Ronald Reagan UCLA Medical Center, where he had been hospitalized since May 26.

With his signature rolled-up game program in hand, Wooden led the Bruins to 10 NCAA championships, including an unmatched streak of seven in a row from 1967 to 1973.

Over 27 years, he won 620 games, including 88 straight during one historic stretch, and coached many of the game's greatest players such as Bill Walton and Lew Alcindor — later known as Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

As a coach, he was a groundbreaking trendsetter who demanded his players be in great condition so they could play an up-tempo style not well-known on the West Coast at the time.

But the Wizard's legacy extended well beyond that.

He was the master of the simple one- or two-sentence homily, instructive little messages best presented in his famous "Pyramid of Success," which remains must-read material, not only for fellow coaches but for anyone in a leadership position in American business.

He taught the team game and had only three hard-and-fast rules — no profanity, tardiness or criticizing fellow teammates. Layered beneath that seeming simplicity, though, were a slew of life lessons — primers on everything from how to put on your socks correctly to how to maintain poise: "Not being thrown off stride in how you behave or

Mower dispute ends in theft, gun charges

By Eric Larsen
Times-News writer

A Twin Falls man faces felony charges of attempted grand theft and aggravated assault with a deadly weapon for an alleged attempt to repossess a riding lawnmower from a Twin Falls couple.

Erik R. Jonsson, 37, was arrested Wednesday by Twin Falls police after he and two other men allegedly hatched a plan to repossess a riding lawnmower from a Creek View Drive residence.

Shortly before 5:30 p.m. Wednesday, Twin Falls County Sheriff's Senior Investigator Kelly Hassani was dispatched on a call that a man had pulled a gun on a resident, according to court records.

Hassani's sworn affidavit states that as soon as deputies arrived at the scene, a man later identified as Jonsson walked to the street with his hands raised above his head. He was detained in handcuffs while police questioned suspects, and was later arrested.

At the scene, one of the suspects told Hassani that Jonsson had called him and another man to help him repossess the lawnmower.

According to the report, "Erik then told the two men ... to go and say to the woman riding the lawnmower that they hit her pickup with their pickup. When the woman (got) off the mower Erik would run and take the lawnmower. The two then would follow Erik with the pickup and when they are at a safe distance from the victim, they would load the lawnmower on the truck."

The caper didn't unfold according to plan.

According to the report, after the two men told the

T.F. County Republican official accuses chairwoman of illegally filling vacancy

By Nick Coltrain
Times-News writer

A Twin Falls County Republican committeeman is asking for the resignation of the party's county chairwoman and for Wednesday's organization meeting to be voided because of what he said is an illegal appointment that shifted the entire outcome of the meeting.

Twin Falls County Republican Central Committeeman Gregory Nemitz, a self-described troublemaker, alleged that Chairwoman Gretchen Clelland appointed a new committeeman to fill a vacancy without having the authority to do so.

According to the county Republican committee's bylaws, in the case of vacancies, the chairman has the authority to appoint a replacement on a temporary basis until the committee's next meeting.

State party rules, however, state the county committee needs to vote to appoint someone to a vacancy and that its rules must be compatible with the state committee's bylaws. The Republican Party of Idaho is having its legal counsel look at the matter, said Jonathan Parker, its executive director. He gave no timeline for a decision.

The determination of which set of rules take precedence is the heart of the matter. Nemitz said the state party's rules take precedence; Clelland said the county's bylaws govern the matter because the central committee voted her that authority.

"The laws that are closest to the committee are the ones that we go by," Clelland said. "We followed our county bylaws and did what was right."

But by appointing a new precinct committeeman, Jim Fort, before the meeting, several votes became ties that Clelland then broke — including the committee's vote for her position. The chairwoman position is what keeps her on the committee as it is; she lost her bid for committeewoman in the May 25 primary election.

"It was not simply about the chairman's vote. It was about the entire meeting, it was about this one appointment that skewed the entire meeting," Nemitz said.

He said it was his duty to his precinct to report things that he doesn't think are right. And because he thinks the appointment proved pivotal to several other appointments the committee voted on that night, he is asking for a new meeting. He also asked that Clelland and Fort be made examples of by stepping down or being removed from office.

"Furthermore, to discourage and prevent such outrageous behavior in the future, and prevent fraud upon the voters of Twin Falls County, I demand that Gretchen Clelland and Jim Fort be prosecuted to the fullest extent of the law for their illegal activities," he wrote in the complaint, which precinct committeewoman Liz Niccum also signed.

Parker said it is an internal party matter and state officials told him they wouldn't be involved.

"What you are as a person is far more important than what you are as a basketball player," was one of Wooden's key messages.

Wooden began his career as a teacher during the Great Depression and was still teaching others long past retirement. He remained a fixture at UCLA games played on a court named after him and his late wife, Nell, and celebrated his 99th birthday with a book he co-authored on how to live life and raise children.

Asked in a 2008 interview the secret to his long life, Wooden replied: "Not being afraid of death and having peace within yourself. All of life is peaks and valleys. Don't let the peaks get too high and the valleys too low."

Asked what he would like God to say when he arrived at the pearly gates, Wooden replied, "Well done."

Even with his staggering accomplishments, he remained humble and gracious. He said he tried to live by advice from his father: "Be true to yourself, help others, make each day your masterpiece, make friendship a fine art, drink deeply from good books — especially the Bible, build a shelter against a rainy day, give thanks for your blessings and pray for guidance every day."

While he lived his father's words, many more lived his. Those lucky enough to play for him got it first hand, but there was no shortage of Wooden sayings making the rounds far away from the basketball court.

"Learn as if you were to live forever; live as if you were to die tomorrow," was one.

"Don't give up on your dreams, or your dreams will give up on you," was another.

Born Oct. 14, 1910, near Martinsville, Ind., on a farm that didn't have electricity or indoor plumbing, Wooden's life revolved around sports from the time his father built a baseball diamond among his wheat, corn and alfalfa. Baseball was his favorite sport, but there was also a basketball hoop nailed in a hayloft. Wooden played there countless hours with his brother, Maurice, using any kind of ball they could find.

He led Martinsville High School to the Indiana state basketball championship in 1927 before heading to Purdue, where he was All-America from 1930-32. The Boilermakers were national champions his senior season, and Wooden, nicknamed "the Indiana Rubber Man" for his dives on the hardwood, was college basketball's player of the year.

But it wasn't until he headed west to Southern California that Wooden really made his mark on the game.

Wooden guided the Bruins to seven consecutive titles from 1967 through 1973 and a record 88-game winning streak in the early 1970s. From the time of his first title following the 1963-64 season through the 10th in 1974-75, Wooden's Bruins were 330-19, including four 30-0 seasons.

The bespectacled former high school teacher ended up at UCLA almost by accident. Wooden was awaiting a call from the University of Minnesota for its head coaching job and thought he had been passed over when it didn't come. In the meantime, UCLA called, and he accepted the job in Los Angeles.

Minnesota officials called later that night, saying they couldn't get through earlier because of a snowstorm, and offered him the job. Though Wooden wanted it more than the UCLA job, he told them he already had given UCLA his word and could not break it.

The Bruins were winners right away after Wooden took over as coach at UCLA's campus in Westwood in 1949, although they were overshadowed by Bill Russell and the University of San Francisco, and later Pete Newell's teams at California.

At the time, West Coast teams tended to play a slow, plodding style. Wooden quickly exploited that with his fast-breaking, well-conditioned teams, who wore down opponents with a full-court zone press and forever changed the style of college basketball.

Still, it would be 16 seasons before Wooden won his first NCAA championship with a team featuring Walt Hazzard that went 30-0 in 1964.

funding for the 2012 fiscal year, Crowley said it's a risk that must be taken.

Trustees in the majority, while voting for the measures, made it clear that they didn't want to make the cuts but felt there was no other choice.

"This stinks," said Trustee Kenney Young. "It's the last thing on my mind when I go to bed at night."

School officials' comments came after a closed-door meeting to discuss the negotiations.

"There's heartfelt consternation as far as making this decision," said Bryan Matsuoka, chairman of the school board, after the meeting.

The Twin Falls Education Association on Friday expressed educators' frustration about the cuts in a press release.

It said the association was prepared to accept eight furlough days and had recommended cut-reducing measures such as tapping into a general fund surplus or using a proposed emergency levy based on increased student enrollment.

"Teacher representatives said Friday afternoon that the administration seemed set as early as January to impose salary cuts, and that even signs of an improving economy did not sway the administration nor the board from using a temporary economic downturn to force long-term changes to educators' pay and benefit packages" the release stated.

For individual teachers,

there was a realization that tough times are ahead.

Justin Pehrson, a history teacher at Canyon Ridge High School, said that while he understands that the budget is tight, the drastic level of the cuts will make it difficult for teachers.

"It makes it difficult for a lot of us to survive with the current bills that we have," he said.

He added: "Nobody likes a pay cut. Nobody likes to realize that your pay is going down and you're going to be doing the same amount of work for less."

"It really does drag morale down," Pehrson added, "and it makes people worried about what does the future hold?"

Annette McFarlin, a teacher at Vera C. O'Leary Middle School who has been an educator for 15 years, said she'll look for a part-time job to supplement her income. Her husband is also a teacher, and the cuts combined will mean a loss of about $800 a month for their household, she said.

"This year has been the most stressful year I've ever had as an educator," she said.

The first in her family to get a master's degree, McFarlin said her grandparents told her that if she gets an education, no one can take it away. "I want to make an impact on students' lives and it's just a sad day," she said. "It's a sad day for education."

woman they'd hit her pick-up, she went in the house to inform her husband while Jonsson allegedly started driving the lawnmower away. Jonsson told deputies that as he drove away, he noticed the serial number on the lawnmower was different than the one he sought, so he stopped.

The husband came out of the house, the report states, and allegedly caught up with Jonsson, pushed him off the lawnmower and scuffled with him until they were separated.

Jonsson told Hassani that at that point he "feared for his life and pulled his gun to protect himself," according to the report.

The husband relented and called police, according to the report, as Jonsson allegedly ran to a second riding lawnmower alongside the residence to check its serial number. The husband told deputies that at that time Jonsson threw the gun in the shrubs, according to the report, which states that deputies allegedly found "a 22 long rifle fold up gun in the shrubs on the ground" when they arrived.

Jonsson allegedly told deputies that he was repossessing the lawnmower for the second time, after the husband hadn't paid him money owed for it.

Hassani's report states that Jonsson told deputies that, as the owner of an auto sales business, he had repossessed "up to 50 cars in the past" and admitted he expected an altercation on Wednesday, which was why he brought the two men with him for protection.

However, "they did not do their job," Jonsson allegedly told deputies.

According to online court records, the other two suspects haven't been charged with crimes for the alleged incident.

Jonsson posted $10,000 bond on Thursday, according to court records, and is scheduled for an 8:15 a.m. Friday preliminary hearing in front of 5th District Magistrate Judge Roger Harris in Twin Falls.

State denies burglary sentence appeal of Olivia Schultz

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — The Idaho Court of Appeals on Tuesday affirmed a decision handed down by former Cassia County 5th District Judge Monte B. Carlson. Olivia Kay Schultz, 35, had appealed her 2006 conviction on a burglary charge that she pleaded guilty to and received eight years in the state penitentiary with two years determinate and retained jurisdiction. After the period of retained jurisdiction, the court suspended Shultz' sentence and placed her on probation for three years. The court later revoked her probation for violation of the terms and executed the original sentence with retained jurisdiction. Following the second period of retained jurisdiction, the court relinquished jurisdiction and ordered execution of the prison sentence.

Shultz appealed those actions, saying the court didn't order a psychological evaluation before her sentencing and erred in relinquishing jurisdiction after the second period of retained jurisdiction, as well as by failing to reduce the sentence.

"Our appellate standard of review and the factors to be considered when evaluating the reasonableness of a sentence are well established," the court opinion states. "Applying these standards and, again, having reviewed all the records in this case, we can not say that the district court abused its discretion either in relinquishing jurisdiction or in ordering execution of Shultz's original sentence without modification."

In conclusion, the court opinion states, "The district court did not err by failing to order a psychological evaluation. The district court did not err by relinquishing jurisdiction and ordering execution of the original sentence without modification. Shultz' judgment of conviction and sentence are affirmed."

Idaho jobless rate drops for third straight month

By Joshua Palmer
Times-News writer

South-central Idaho's unemployment rate remained mostly unchanged in May compared to the previous month, despite the state posting a lower jobless rate for the third consecutive month.

The Twin Falls metropolitan area, which includes surrounding communities, reported that its unemployment rate increased one-tenth of a percentage point to 7.8 percent. The unemployment rate in the Burley metropolitan area increased three-tenths of a percentage point to 7.2 percent.

Based on the seasonally adjusted projections, about 100 more people are unemployed compared to the previous month.

The regional unemployment rate is still more than two full percentage points higher than May 2009.

The statewide seasonally adjusted unemployment rate edged down another tenth of a percentage point to a forecasted 9 percent in May as employers across the economy took on new workers in what was close to a normal seasonal pattern.

It was the third month in a row Idaho's jobless rate has fallen after 31 straight monthly rate increases dating back to August 2007. And while May's rate was down from its peak of 9.5 percent in February, it still remained higher than at any other time since June 1983.

"The decline was modest, but it continues what appears to be a downward trend and another sign the worst of the recession may be past," said Idaho

Department of Labor Senior Analyst Eduardo Silva, who develops the monthly unemployment rate forecast.

Nationally, the unemployment rate dropped two-tenths of a point to 9.7 percent. May was the 104th consecutive month – eight years and eight months – that Idaho's unemployment has been below the national rate.

Idaho employers hired nearly 10 percent more workers in May than they did in May 2009, boosting private sector employment by more than 5,000 over April. Government added another 2,000 jobs – mostly due to demand for census workers.

More than half of Idaho's counties posted declines in unemployment rates from

Significant fuel savings possible for cars, SUVs

By Joan Lowy
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — A prestigious research panel has concluded that technology already widely available could significantly cut fuel consumption by cars and light trucks without sacrificing safety or performance.

With some technologies, the fuel consumption by passenger cars, sport-utility vehicles, minivans and light trucks can be reduced by nearly half, but at a price — anywhere from a few hundred dollars to several thousand dollars per vehicle, the National Research Council said in a report released Thursday.

Critics of offshore drilling pounced on the findings as further evidence that there is a host of options beyond drilling for solving the nation's energy woes.

Said Trevor Jones, chairman of the panel that wrote the report: "Consumers will need to consider the trade-offs between higher vehicle prices and saving fuel and money at the gas pump."

The report, which looked at three-types of automotive engines, found:

— The full combination of improved technologies could reduce fuel consumption by 29 percent in medium and large cars and pickup trucks with conventional engines at an added cost to consumers of about $2,200.

— Switching to diesel engines and components could yield fuel savings of about 37 percent at an added cost of $5,900 per vehicle.

— Gas-electric hybrid engines and components could reduce fuel as much as 43 percent at an increase of $6,000 per vehicle.

Tony Hayward, chief executive of BP, views the oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico from a helicopter. In addition to leading the company's efforts to plug the gushing oil well a mile down, he's been trying to placate an increasingly angry public and a skeptical government.

BP assures investors it can cover spill costs

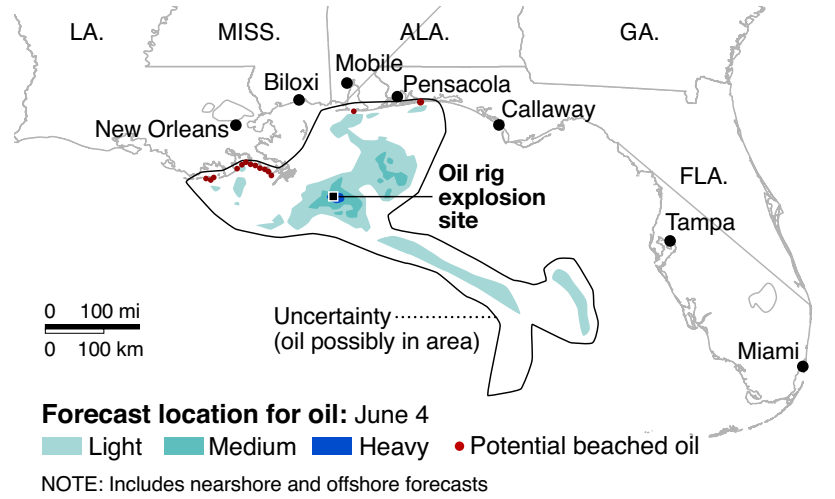

By Chris Kahn
and Jane Wardell
Associated Press writers

LONDON — BP Chief Executive Tony Hayward on Friday apologized to investors for the Gulf oil spill and assured them the company had "considerable firepower" to cover the cost.

Investors seeking an estimate of that cost, or an update on future dividend payouts, were left wanting however. BP has spent more than $1 billion so far containing and cleaning up the oil, but it also faces untold liabilities. Its dividend has become a political sensitive subject.

Hayward struck a penitent tone in BP's first comprehensive update to shareholders since the April 20 rig explosion. He received a warmer response on the call than in many public forums in recent weeks. At least one politician, from Louisiana, has called for BP to fire Hayward.

"We will work tirelessly to rebuild the confidence of the American people, and of the world, in BP," Hayward said. He was trying to reassure skittish investors who have lost more than $70 billion in the last six weeks, telling them BP would have money left over for a dividend after covering the spill costs.

"We will work tirelessly to rebuild the confidence of the American people, and of the world, in BP?"

— BP Chief Executive Tony Hayward

Hayward noted that hundreds of thousands of shareholders "rely on their investment on BP to their financial security and in many cases their retirement income."

Major institutional shareholders such as Wellington Management and State Farm Mutual Automobile Insurance Co. declined to comment after the call. BP Chairman Carl-Henric Svanberg said Hayward has the support of BP's board of directors. Eleven workers died in the blast and the ruptured well continues to spew 500,000 to 1 million gallons of oil everyday.

Walmart trumpets moves to improve sales

By Chuck Bartels
Associated Press writer

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Walmart Stores Inc.'s chief executive told shareholders Friday that the company is positioning itself for 20 years of worldwide growth and that it plans to hire another half-million employees over the next five years.

The company also unveiled a new $15 billion stock buy-back. But it was short on specifics on how it will improve weak sales at its U.S. Walmart stores as the rest of the retail industry, including its key competitor Target Corp., has started to heat up.

Walmart, which already has 2 million employees, has been trying to shake off effects of the recession. In between celebrity performances at its annual extravaganza, executives said the

Forklift rodeos and the nation's longest car wash

Burley boasts best forklift drivers this side of the Mississippi

Most employees would be discouraged from creating an obstacle course at their place of work and then speeding through it on a forklift.

That's not the case at Dot Foods in Burley, where employees hone their skills by conducting a Forklift Rodeo.

And, by all accounts, they are pretty darn good.

Three forklift operators from Dot Foods' Burley distribution center are headed to the company's Grand National Forklift Rodeo Finals in Mt. Sterling, Ill. on June 24 after winning first place in the Burley qualifying finals. They are Bret Beabout, Nick Blayney and

"Each of our winners demonstrated precision, speed and knowledge of the equipment, all of which are qualities necessary to compete in the national event," said Terry Andrew, Dot's Idaho HR manager.

Nation's longest carwash to open in Twin Falls

Rocket Express, the longest carwash in the nation, according to the Western Carwash Association, will open at 4 p.m. June 10.

The owners invited Twin Falls

Mayor Don Hall, Chamber of Commerce ambassadors, the city council and other business developers to attend the ribbon cutting.

As part of the grand opening celebration, Rocket Express will offer members of the community a free car wash if they obtain a coupon at www.rocketexpress.com.

 — Grand Isle, La., resident Susan Felio Price on her oil-ravaged island

Ysursa shines light on anti-Bradbury campaign

CHEERS: To Idaho Secretary of State Ben Ysursa, for dropping the hammer on two groups that staged a shadowy, last-minute campaign against Idaho Supreme Court candidate John Bradbury just before the May 25 election.

On Thursday, Ysursa fined them $1,900 for failure to comply with laws that aim to shed light on where candidates get their financial backing.

“Timely pre-election disclosure is the essence of the law, and when it doesn’t happen we take it seriously,” the secretary of state said.

Bradbury, a 2nd District judge, was challenging incumbent Justice Roger Burdick. Burdick won with 58 percent of the vote.

The anti-Bradbury groups were funded by Malaleuca Inc. owner Frank VanderSloot of Idaho Falls.

Idaho Citizens for Justice was fined $1,300 for two violations, including failure to report an expenditure of $1,000 or more within 48 hours of the primary.

Citizens for Commonsense Solutions was fined $600. The group accepted contributions and spent money before it had a treasurer certified by the state.

This wasn’t the first time the deep-pocketed VanderSloot has paid for advertising campaigns against judges and other candidates for public office of whom he disapproves. But maybe next time he’ll play by the rules.

JEERS: How can Tom Sullivan handle the taxpayers’ money when he can’t handle his own?

The Tetonian businessman, who won the Democratic primary election on May 25 and will challenge Republican U.S. Sen. Mike Crapo in the fall, owes the Internal Revenue Service and the Idaho Tax Commission hundreds of thousands of dollars in unpaid taxes.

“I have this hanging over me, but there are an awful lot of people in Idaho that have this hanging over them,” Sullivan told the Idaho Statesman. “I’ve lived it. I understand it. I’ve climbed out of it. I’ll do it again. And I’m going to help Idaho do it, too.”

We don’t find his logic persuasive.

Sullivan owes the IRS between $470,000 and $525,000 and the Idaho Tax Commission between $215,000 and $220,000.

He was recruited by the Idaho Democratic Party to challenge Crapo, but he didn’t disclose his debt until just before the primary.

On March 8, the first day for candidates to file for office,

Idaho filed a lien against Sullivan and his wife, Kelly, for $190,938 in taxes, a $27,686 penalty and $8,475 in interest.

Sullivan said he has a payment plan with the state: $1,000 a month. He said he’s negotiating with the IRS. He said he cut his federal obligation by about $96,000 because of recent losses from his credit card processing business, Ivan Financial.

Sullivan said he sold part of Ivan Financial’s portfolio in April 2008 for $6.5 million. He then paid off a $2.5 million line of credit with the First National Bank of Arizona and bought an eight-unit office park in Driggs, paying $1.3 million cash.

He said he planned to draw on his line of credit to pay his income taxes in April 2009. But the FDIC seized the bank in July 2008, and Sullivan said neither the successor bank, Mutual of Omaha Bank, nor other banks would restore his credit.

It seems to us that Sullivan out to get his own finances in order before he thinks about tackling the country’s.

CHEERS: To Twin Falls County Sheriff’s Deputy Kelly Wilson, for going the extra mile to save three abused horses.

The animals were rescued from Kenji Akagi’s property in December. They were found with three other horses that had all starved to death. Akagi was convicted of six counts of misdemeanor cruelty to animals in March.

Since then, Wilson had made it his mission to nurse them back to health, feeding them twice a day. The three horses all rate between a four and a five on the nine-point health scale, according to Wilson.

That’s healthy enough for a new beginning. Molly, a sorrel; Ginger, a paint, and Matt, a palomino, will be auctioned off today to cover the costs on their rehabilitation.

“I’d just like them to go to a good home,” Wilson said.

LETTERS OF THANKS

A wonderful service for young athletes

I would like to thank the Cassia Regional Medical Center Physical Therapy Department and the Burley Medical Community who volunteered their time to perform the screening athletic physicals for the youth of our community.

On two different evenings, medical providers took time out of their busy practices to do athletic physicals for more than 175 Cassia County junior high and high school students. The $10 fee that was charged for this event was generously donated back to the student’s athletic department.

Thank you on behalf of all the youth who participated. This was a wonderful service that you provided to the young athletes residing in our community.

Wood River displays true Idaho hospitality

On behalf of the Puget Sound Fraternal Order of Leatherheads Society (FOOLS) and Rescue City, I would like to once again express our humble appreciation for the invitation to participate in the highly successful Second Annual Advanced Firefighter Hands On Training Conference on May 1 and 2 in Hailey.

The communities of the Wood River Valley displayed to us all true Idaho hospitality during our stay. Jared Larna once again proved his extreme dedication and passion for training by assembling a weekend of serious hands-on training delivered by an instructor cadre from fire departments all over Washington State. Although the majority of students were locals, some students traveled from three different states and more than a dozen different fire department agencies. A huge thank you to the Larna family (especially Amber), Hailey Fire Department, Sawtooth FOOLS, Friedman Memorial Airport, Alpine Tree Service and all others whom supported this event.

We look forward to being back next year. Keep training and stay safe!

The storyteller loses his story line

The oil won’t stop flowing, but the magic has

It’s not a good narrative arc: The man who walked on water is now ensnared by a crisis under water.

One little hole a mile deep on the ocean floor, so deep it seems like hell spewing up its sulfurous smoke, has turned the thrilling saga of “The One” into the gurgling horror of “The Abyss.” (Thank goodness James Cameron, the director of “The Abyss,” came to Washington Tuesday to help the administration figure out how to cap the BP well. What’s next? Sending down the Transformers and Megan Fox?)

With as much as 34 million gallons of oil inking the Gulf of Mexico, “Yes we can” has been downgraded to “Will we ever?”

It’s impossible not to feel sorry for President Obama, pummeled by the cascading disasters, at home and abroad, unleashed by two war-mongering oil men — plus scary escalations by Israel, Iran and North Korea. (Dick Cheney’s dark influence is still belching like the well. BP just brought on a new public relations executive: Anne Womack-Kolton, who served as Cheney’s campaign press secretary in 2004 and worked in W’s White House and at the Energy Department.)

Obama wanted to be a transformative president and now the presidency is transforming him.

Instead of buoyant, he seems put upon. Instead of the fairy dust of hopefulness, there’s the bitter draught of helplessness.

His battle against water is taking on biblical — even Job-like — proportions.

Besides the roiling water below, the skies opened from above and gusting, lightning-streaked rains drowned the president’s plans to give a Memorial

Maureen Dowd

Day speech at the Lincoln cemetery near Chicago. On the evening news, pictures of the president standing under an umbrella shooing people off the soggy field were a sad contrast to the wildly sentimental Joe Biden presiding, hand on heart, over a sunny and moving Memorial Day commemoration at Arlington National Cemetery.

After suffering more indignities — a SUV in his motorcade blew a tire on I-55 outside of Chicago — a tired-looking Obama returned to Andrews Air Force Base at 7:30 Monday night and went to an area called the “tactical fitness center” to give his remarks to 150 or so subdued service members who had been rounded up by the White House advance team.

As The Washington Post’s Anne Kornblut wryly wrote in her pool report:

“It has been years since President Obama attended a rally like the one that took place here Monday night:

sparingly attended, thrown together at the last minute, involving people who were not expecting to be there. We’re partying like it’s Obama circa 2005.”

The oil won’t stop flowing, but the magic has.

Barack Obama is a guy who is accustomed to having stuff go right for him. He’s gotten a lot of breaks: two opponents in his U.S. Senate race in Illinois felled by personal scandals; a mismanaged presidential campaign by Hillary Clinton; an economic collapse that set the stage for a historic win, memorably described by the satiric Onion newspaper as “Black Man Given Nation’s Worst Job.”

Reporters grilled Robert Gibbs at his White House briefing on Tuesday about the president’s strange inability to convey passion over a historical environmental disaster. This was underscored by Obama’s perfunctory drop-by to a sanitized beach in Grand Isle, La. Despite his recent ode about growing up near an ocean, he didn’t bother to meet with the regular folks who have lost their seafaring livelihoods.

After Gibbs asserted that his boss was “enraged” at BP, CBS News’ Chip Reid skeptically pressed: “Have we really seen rage from the president on this? I think most people would say no.”

“I’ve seen rage from him, Chip,” Gibbs insisted. “I have.”

Reid asked for an exact definition of what constitutes emotion for Obama:

“Can you describe it? Does he yell and scream? What does he do?”

Gibbs mentioned the words “clenched jaw” and the president’s admonition to “plug the damn hole.” How does a man who invented himself as a force by writing one of the most eloquent memoirs in political history lose control of his own narrative?

In “Dreams From My Father,” Obama showed passion, lyricism, empathy and an exquisite understanding of character and psychological context — all the qualities that he has stubbornly resisted showing as president. It was a book that promised a president who could see into the hearts of other people. But there’s so much you don’t learn about candidates in campaigns, even when they seem completely exposed.

This president has made it clear that he’s not comfortable outside whatever domain he’s defined. But unless he wants his story to be marred by a pattern of passivity, detachment, acquiescence and compromise, he’d better seize control of the story line of his White House years. Woe-is-me is not an attractive narrative.

PERU

Dutch suspect returned to Peru

LIMA — A young Dutch man who is suspected in the 2005 disappearance of a U.S. teenager Natalee Holloway was returned to Peru on Friday to face charges in the slaying of a woman in his hotel room.

Police in neighboring Chile handed Joran van der Sloot over to Peruvian Interpol agents at the border city of Tacna. Officials there put a bulletproof vest on the 22-year-old and immediately took him to a police station for medical tests.

Van der Sloot said he is innocent in the murder of 21-year-old Stephany Flores but acknowledged having met her at a casino in Peru's capital, said deputy Chilean investigative police spokesman Fernando Ovalle.

He also remains the prime suspect in the disappearance of Alabama teen Natalee Holloway on the Dutch Caribbean island of Aruba. Flores was killed five years to the day after Holloway disappeared. On Thursday, prosecutors in the U.S. charged van der Sloot with extortion in connection with the Holloway case.

Wearing the same black-hooded sweat shirt and khaki pants in which he was arrested the day before, van der Sloot was handcuffed and placed aboard a police Cessna 310 in the Chilean capital, Santiago, on Friday morning. A fixture on television crime shows after Holloway's disappearance in Aruba, the 22-year-old did not speak to or look at reporters who called to him Friday as he was escorted onto the plane.

Millionaire's rocket blasts off

CAPE CANAVERAL — A multimillionaire's test rocket blasted off on its maiden voyage Friday and successfully reached orbit in a dry run for NASA's push to go commercial.

SpaceX's Falcon 9 rocket achieved Earth orbit nine minutes into the flight as planned, according to the company.

"All in all, this has been a good day for SpaceX and a promising development for the U.S. space program, as we make progress toward expanding the human presence in space," launch commentator Robyn Ringuette announced from the company's headquarters in Hawthorne, Calif.

SpaceX's brand new rocket soared off its launch pad into thin clouds at mid-afternoon, carrying a mock-up of the company's spacecraft, named Dragon. The goal was to put the capsule into a 155-mile-high orbit, which it did.

"Essentially a bull's-eye," a company spokeswoman said.

The first attempt to launch the rocket was aborted in the final few seconds earlier in the afternoon.

NASA hopes to use the Falcon-Dragon combo for hauling cargo and possibly astronauts to the International Space Station, once the shuttles retire later this year or early next. The first supply run could come next year.

ISRAEL

Country vows to stop aid ship near Gaza

JERUSALEM — Israel vowed Friday to keep an Irish aid ship from breaching its blockade of the impoverished Gaza Strip, appealing to pro-Palestinian activists to dock at an Israeli port and avoid another showdown at sea.

The new effort to break the blockade will test Israel's resolve as it faces a wave of international outrage over its deadly naval raid of another aid ship earlier this week.

Activists on board the Irish boat, including a Nobel Peace Prize laureate, insisted they would not resist if Israeli soldiers tried to take over their vessel. They said they expected the 1,200-ton Rachel Corrie to reach Gaza by late Saturday morning.

Diplomatic fallout and protests across Europe and the Muslim world have increased pressure to end the embargo Israel imposed after the Islamic militant Hamas group seized power in Gaza three years ago. The blockade has plunged the territory's 1.5 million residents deeper into poverty and sharply raised Mideast tensions as the U.S. makes a new push for regional peace.

Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu told his Cabinet on Thursday the Irish boat would not be allowed to reach Gaza. On Friday, Israel's foreign minister said the policy had not changed.

SOUTH KOREA

S. Korea seeks UN action against N. Korea

UNITED NATIONS — South Korea officially referred North Korea to the U.N. Security Council Friday over the sinking of a navy ship that killed 46 sailors, taking its strongest step ever toward making the communist North face international punishment.

South Korea's U.N. Ambassador Park In-kook handed over a letter to Mexico's U.N. Ambassador Claude Heller, the current Security Council president, asking for a response from the U.N.'s most powerful body to deter "any further provocations."

Heller said he will circulate it to the 14 other council members and then initiate consultations "to give an appropriate answer to this request." He will talk to council members before setting a date for the first closed-door council discussion, Mexico's U.N. spokesman Marco Morales said.

Despite a history of being attacked by North Korea, Seoul has never taken Pyongyang to the Security Council for an inter-Korean provocation, indicating now that it wants to take the matter beyond the Korean peninsula.

AFGHANISTAN

Conference calls for talks with Taliban

KABUL — Afghan President Hamid Karzai got a boost Friday from a national conference of tribal, religious and civic leaders for his plans to approach the Taliban to talk peace. Karzai's more difficult challenge: convincing insurgent leaders and the Obama administration.

The United States supports overtures to lower-level militants but thinks talks with top leaders will go nowhere until NATO-led and Afghan forces are successful in weakening the Taliban and strengthening the Afghan government in Kandahar province and elsewhere in the south.

Anger grows as disaster reaches Panhandle beaches

PENSACOLA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — The smell of oil hangs heavy in the sea air. Children with plastic shovels scoop up clumps of goo in the waves. Beachcombers collect tarballs as if they were seashells.

The BP catastrophe arrived with the tide on the Florida Panhandle's white sands Friday as the company worked to adjust a cap over the gusher in a desperate and untested bid to arrest what is already the biggest oil spill in U.S. history. The widening scope of the slow-motion disaster deepened the anger and despair just as President Obama arrived for his third visit to the stricken Gulf Coast.

The oil has now reached the shores of four Gulf states — Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Florida — turning its marshlands into death zones for wildlife and staining its beaches rust and crimson in an affliction that some said brought to mind the plagues and punishments of the Bible.

"In Revelations it says the water will turn to blood," said P.J. Hahn, director of coastal zone management for Louisiana's Plaquemines Parish. "That's what it looks like out here — like the Gulf is bleeding. This is going to choke the life out of everything."

He added: "It makes me want to cry."

Six weeks after the April 20 oil rig explosion that killed 11 workers, the well

AP photo

A crew picks up oil that washed up along Pensacola Beach, Fla., Friday. Waves of gooey tar blobs were washing ashore in growing numbers on the white sand of the Florida Panhandle as a slick from the BP spill drifted closer to shore.

has leaked somewhere between 22 million and 47 million gallons of oil, according to government estimates.

A device resembling an upside-down funnel was lowered over the blown-out well a mile beneath the sea late Thursday to try to capture most of the oil and direct it to a ship on the surface.

But crude continued to escape into the Gulf through vents designed to prevent ice crystals from clogging the cap. Engineers hoped to close several vents throughout the day.

"Progress is being made, but we need to caution against overoptimism," said

Coast Guard Adm. Thad Allen, the government's point man for the crisis. Early in the day, he guessed that the cap was collecting 42,000 gallons a day — less than one-tenth of the amount leaking from the well. Since it was installed, it had collected about 76,000 gallons, BP said in a tweet Friday night.

Similarly, later in the day, in a visit to Louisiana, Obama said it was "way too early to be optimistic" about the latest attempt to stanch the spill.

One unanswered question was whether the cap fit snugly. BP sheared off the well pipe before installing the cap but was unable to make a smooth cut. As the operation went on at the bottom of the Gulf of Mexico, the effect of the BP spill was increasingly evident.

Swimmers at Pensacola Beach rushed out of the water after wading into the mess, while other beachgoers inspected the clumps with fascination, some taking pictures. Children were seen playing with the globs as if they were Play-Doh.

David Lucas of Jonesville, La., and a group of friends abruptly cut their visit short after wading into oily water. "It was sticky brown globs out there," Lucas said after he and the others cleaned their feet and left.

Recall raises questions about promotional glasses

MILLVILLE, N.J. (AP) — A recall of 12 million cadmium-tainted "Shrek" drinking glasses sold by McDonald's raises questions about the safety of millions of similar cheap promotional products that have been sitting in Americans' kitchen cabinets for years.

Only glasses produced for the latest "Shrek" movie are included in the voluntary recall announced Friday by the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission, but they were made by a company that McDonald's has worked with for 15 years. And many other companies make similar glassware with cartoon characters or other designs baked in.

"It could have been any glass company," said Ron Biagi, an executive with Arc International, which made the glasses. "We all do the same thing using materials from the same suppliers."

McDonald's said the U.S.-made glasses met federal guidelines for cadmium under testing conducted by a CPSC-approved lab. CPSC spokesman Scott Wolfson, however, said the glasses fall short of standards for the toxic metal that the agency is in the process of developing.

The CPSC warned consumers to immediately stop using the glasses McDonald's sold as part of a promotional campaign for the movie "Shrek Forever After." The fast-food giant said it issued the recall "in an abundance of caution" and "in light of CPSC's evolving assessment of standards for consumer products."

McDonald's USA spokesman Bill Whitman said he thought the glasses were safe, but were recalled "to ensure that our customers receive safe products from us."

U.S. admits royal birthday blunder

WASHINGTON (AP) — But will she be amused?

The State Department has conceded committing a diplomatic faux pas by sending birthday greetings to Britain's Queen Elizabeth II a week early.

Spokesman P.J. Crowley allowed that a congratulatory message from Secretary of State Hillary Rodham Clinton sent Friday on what the department thought was the eve of the queen's official birthday had been premature.

Buhl library's reading program starts soon

The Buhl Public Library's Teen Summer Reading program, "Make Waves," will be from 12:30 to 2 p.m. Wednesdays. The free six-week series starts this Wednesday and runs to July 14. Teens in sixth grade and above have the opportunity to learn the many ways water affects everyday living.

Local speakers will share their experience and insights with water. There will be prizes, snacks, friends and sharing. Teens that complete the program will have the opportunity to win a free paperback book provided by the library's community partners, Buhl Kiwanis and the West End Men's Association, who have been supporting teen summer reading since the very first program in 2005.

Here are the scheduled programs:

June 9: "Hey, Aqualung" will feature Twin Falls' Dive Magic, who will share insights and stories about scuba diving and what it's really like below the surface of the waves.

June 16: "Navigating the Currents" will feature Idaho Guide Service from Twin Falls, who will share expertise on easy gliding and exhilarating whitewater rafting.

June 23: Lt. Daron Brown from the Twin Falls County Sheriff's Office will be here as part of "Search and Rescue — There When Needed." Brown will share stories about this volunteer organization that does so much to help people who are lost, stranded and injured. From rappelling off the canyon to underwater diving, its members risk their own lives to save others. He'll also be sharing some safety tips to keep teens out of harm's way.

June 30: "Sea Faring Stories of Olde" will feature the mysteries of the sea as told in stories, poems, legends and myth — dating from early times to current days, and including Davy Jones' Locker, Poseidon, Wreckers, Selkies and Titanic. Cynthia Toppen will lead this session on looking at the various tales connected to the sea in books and movies and, just perhaps, creating some stories of their own.

July 7: "Arrgh ... There Be Pirates Here" will be led by Amanda Hatfield. She will hoist the Jolly Roger and set sail to explore the world of pirates. Who were they? Who are they now? From good to bad, heroes to villains and everything between, pirates have been a part of the lore of the sea since the beginnings of time.

July 14: "Surf's Up Beach Party" will be the last program. It is sort of a water carnival. Bring your beach blanket and come prepared. Crafts, food and water provided.

Information: Buhl Public Library, 543-6500.

Music club names officers, plans fundraisers

The Burley Music Club held its annual Lilac Luncheon May 17 at the Burley Best Western Inn. Most club members were dressed in orchid or lavender dresses.

President Linda Croft opened with a welcome, and the hymn "Joyful, Joyful, We Adore Thee" was led by Karen Taylor, with Joy Hurst at the piano. Invocation was given by Audrey Hobson, followed by lunch.

Deanna Davis then introduced the program, "Snake River Hayride" with Gary Bench and Art Smith. Art sang some Johnny Cash numbers: "I Walk the Line," "Welcome to My World" and "Four Walls." Gary did his own composition of "Sunflower" and others. The group did a sing-along with them.

Officers released were Edie Adams and Donna Oliver.

Others present were Jackie Handy and Dora Heward, with special guest Evelyn Bierman. Absent was second vice president of membership, Verlie Burch.

The music club is doing fundraisers to earn money for scholarships for students. An indoor garage sale will be held Friday and Saturday at the Overland Shopping Center.

On June 18 and 19, Gary Bench is organizing a cowboy poetry program for 7 p.m. at the Senior Citizens Heritage Center in Burley. Tickets may be purchased from any music club member, or call Gary at Nuts & Things.

Linda presented board members with potted petunias before adjourning the meeting.

When speeding and stop signs collide

Q: I was pulling out from a stop sign and saw a pickup coming, but it seemed to be far enough that I could pull out safely. I pulled out and the pickup ran into me. To make a long story short I got a ticket for failure to yield from the stop sign. I felt that the pickup was speeding because if it had gone the speed limit (25 mph) then a crash could have been avoided. Could I win taking my ticket to court?

A: Yes, you could win, but you could also lose. The cost to you to go to court is nothing until you lose your case. The reason I say this is that you must yield from a stop sign no matter how fast the other vehicle might have been going.

I know it might not seem fair, but the easy fact to prove in your case is that you failed to yield from the stop sign. The officer can sometimes determine the speed of the vehicle if that officer has the proper crash investigation training. It is sad to say but most officers don't have all the training when it comes to crash investigations. The training takes the officer off the road for at least two weeks, and in city law enforcement there are usually never enough crash incidents to retain the knowledge gained. Once again, speed would only come to your defense in civil court, and even there the majority would be held to you being the cause of the crash.

The best advice I can give when stopping at a stop sign is to stop, count to 3 (out loud or in your head, it makes no difference) and if it is still clear to proceed then do so. If you are not sure, then wait and err on the side of caution. It might save you more than just $75.

Abou-bakr receives P.E.O. scholar award

Ami Abou-bakr, a 1996 Twin Falls High School graduate and valedictorian, was one of 84 recipients of a $15,000 P.E.O. International Scholar Award presented at the Idaho State P.E.O. Convention in May.

P.E.O. International established the Scholar Awards in 1991 to provide substantial merit-based awards for U.S. and Canadian women who are pursuing a doctoral-level degree or are engaged in post-doctoral research at an accredited college, university or institution.

Abou-bakr, sponsored by Chapter BE, Twin Falls, is a 2001 graduate of Georgetown University's School of Foreign Service and a 2007 graduate of the University of London's School of Oriental and African Studies. She expects to complete her Ph.D in public policy from King's College London in spring 2011, with her dissertation focused on how public-private partnerships can make a very tangible and important difference in the ability of the United States to respond to terrorist attacks, if not avoid them altogether.

Her mother, Karen Goodrich, accepted the award on her behalf. In a letter of appreciation to Linda Tuley of Twin Falls, first vice president of P.E.O.'s Idaho chapter, Abou-bakr wrote, "It is a real privilege to be counted among the very capable, impressive women who receive this award. ... I think it shows tremendous wisdom and insight by P.E.O. to have such a focused award. I am extremely grateful ... on a number of levels."

Are Pap tests still necessary after a hysterectomy?

DEAR DR. GOTT: I had ovarian cancer and had a complete hysterectomy two years ago. My cancer was in the first stage, and, thankfully, I did not need chemo or radiation.

My surgeon continues to schedule me for Pap smears/internal exams yearly and says I will need to have this done for the rest of my life, but I don't understand why. When I ask him, he gets short with me and says to "look it up on the Internet." This does not make sense to me. Even my family doctor was surprised that I must continue to have Pap smears after having a complete hysterectomy.

ASK
Dr. Peter Gott

Can you shed some light on this? Thank you.

DEAR READER: First things first. Find another surgeon/gynecologist. A huffy attitude and saying "Look it up on the Internet" is never an appropriate response to a concerned patient's question, especially one who has a diagnosis of cancer. All patients deserve respect and simple politeness. Physicians dealing with cancer patients should realize this above all others because of the justified high emotions often associated with the diagnosis.

Now, onto your question. There are two types of hysterectomy: total and partial (also known as supracervical). A partial hysterectomy removes the uterus and leaves the cervix intact. A total hysterectomy removes both the uterus and the cervix. In each procedure, the ovaries and fallopian tubes may be removed as well, depending on the reason for the hysterectomy.

I assume your "complete" hysterectomy is a total one. Also, because of your ovarian cancer, it is given that your ovaries and fallopian tubes would have been removed as well, since they were the source of the cancer and the reason for undergoing the procedure.

cancer often begins with surgery to remove the ovaries, fallopian tubes, uterus, nearby lymph nodes and a fold of fatty abdominal tissue. Tissue and abdominal fluid samples are also taken to determine the stage of cancer and if additional treatments may be required. Depending on the results, chemotherapy and/or radiation are typically ordered. This is especially true for more advanced cases.

Unless you had a partial hysterectomy, a Pap smear, which tests for cervical cancer, doesn't make any sense because you don't have a cervix. However, because I am neither a gynecologist nor a surgeon, I must defer a final answer to the specialists.

Find a gynecologist with whom you feel comfortable. You can even make a "get acquainted" visit to determine whether he or she is someone you truly wish to see. Once you have found the specialist of your choice, provide him or her with your medical records. Then sit down to discuss what type of hysterectomy you had, the type of testing you should undergo to monitor your ovarian cancer until you enter remission, and whether Pap smears are necessary in your case.

Also, remember to eat well, exercise, get plenty of rest, and keep stress to a minimum to increase and/or maintain your quality of life. This may also help with any symptoms of menopause, such as hot flashes, mood swings, weight gain and more, that you may be experiencing following your hysterectomy.

To provide related information, I am sending you copies of my Health Reports "Menopause" and "An Informed Approach to Surgery." Other readers who would like copies should send a self-addressed stamped No. 10 envelope and a $2 check or money order for each copy to Newsletter, P.O. Box 167, Wickliffe, OH 44092-0167. Be sure to mention the title(s) or print an order form off my website at www.AskDrGottMD.com.

Reaching out to the unchurched

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

It's a challenge that has confronted churches for centuries — how to reach the unchurched or those who, for one reason or another, have stopped attending church services.

Some churches, better financed than others, have a number of programs designed to draw new members. But no matter their size one thing all churches have in common is their desire to bring others into the fold. And what's most important in doing that, area church leaders say, is building relationships of love.

Larry Vedder, pastor of Immanuel Lutheran Church in Twin Falls, which operates a school and hosts a weekly radio program, says the church's programs are a great way to reach out to the community. He said most of his church's new members over the past three years — about 60 percent — is because of its school and 65-year-old radio program.

"We need to reach into the community and, with all churches, maintain the relationships that we have," Vedder said. "Having a large Christian school and child development center, we impact 450 kids every day and, through them, their families."

The church also has an outreach committee — "which has been elevated to board status," Vedder said — that aims to reach lapsed or potential church members.

The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints encourages its members to be "missionary-minded" by building relationships with neighbors, sharing Gospel messages, and inviting people to church activities. The church also has its Home Teaching program, which aims to get priesthood leaders inside church members' homes to instruct and invite.

Besides Home Teaching, the church has implemented a program where leaders from individual wards and stakes visit the homes of lapsed church members, said Terry McCurdy, area spokesman for the LDS church. Besides expressing appreciation and concern, he said, the leaders see if there's anything they can do to help the individual or family and usually invites them to church activities.

"I think it really helps,"

A special temple exhibit featuring a 1:32 scale replica of the Salt Lake LDS Temple is on display in the South Visitors Center at Temple Square in Salt Lake City. The hope is the replica — replete with cutaway walls and views of detailed depictions of the building's layout and rooms — will help visitors better understand the temples of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

LDS CHURCH UNVEILS SMALL-SCALE TEMPLE MODEL

By Scott Taylor
Deseret News

Visitors can get a glimpse of what the Salt Lake LDS Temple looks like on the inside from this replica on display at Temple Square in Salt Lake City.

SALT LAKE CITY — Twelve decades after the completion and dedication of its Salt Lake Temple, the LDS Church is opening up the iconic Mormon landmark to the public for tours — in a virtual, visual and small-scale way.

With the actual 117-year-old gray-granite temple serving as a fitting backdrop, a 1/32nd-scale Salt Lake Temple model more than 7 feet tall was unveiled recently by church leaders in the Temple Square South Visitors' Center.

And the hope is the replica — replete with cutaway walls and views of detailed depictions of the building's layout and rooms — will help visitors better understand the temples of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

"Many people think our temples are like great halls or cathedrals," said Elder William R. Walker of the Quorums of the Seventy and executive director of the church's temple department. "Actually, they have a number of rooms designated for certain functions such as marriages, baptisms and instructional sessions."

Before temples are dedicated and then used by only LDS Church members in good standing, they are available for public visits in open-house tours that draw tens of thousands to hundreds of thousands of visitors.

LDS leaders anticipate that many times more than those numbers of people will "tour" the existing Salt Lake Temple during the lifetime of the new replica.

"This replica will show the millions of visitors who come to Temple Square the beauty and majesty of this sacred and historic building," said Elder Richard G. Hinckley of the Quorums of the Seventy and executive director of the church's missionary department.

Once temples are dedicated, they are used by church members for sacred purposes and ceremonies. "But this exhibit will provide the public with a glimpse of the interior and a feeling of the spirit that is present there," Hinckley added.

The south and east exterior walls of the model have been cut away, allowing replicated views of many of the temple's rooms, such as the large assembly hall, areas where the First Presidency and Quorum of the Twelve meet regularly, the baptistry and other ordinance rooms.

The model is intricately detailed, with paintings, furniture and even working chandeliers and lamps imitating what is found inside the Salt Lake Temple.

Constructed by Peter McCann Architecture Models of Toronto, the replica building required 16 modelers and five months of elaborate efforts.

"Some of the detail is so fine that we had to find people that were capable of doing it at that scale," said Joseph Coulas, the firm's project manager.

The new permanent exhibit includes kiosks showing high-definition photos and videos of the temple's rooms, with narration providing explanation of purposes and diagrams showing where the rooms are located on the model. The presentation is modeled after what is shown and explained in a typical open-house tour of an LDS temple.

Construction on the Salt Lake Temple began in 1853 and was completed in 1893, with dedication on April 6 of that year. It was the sixth temple built by the LDS Church and is the fourth-oldest of the 132 temples currently in operation.

Just prior to its dedication, the Salt Lake Temple was toured by a reported 5,000 city officials, businessmen

Many clergy ill-prepared for retirement

By Dave Carpenter
Associated Press writer

CHICAGO — Clergy seem an unlikely group to be facing a retirement security crisis.

They generally are looked up to by their parishioners as wise and frugal. Their pay, although modest, is enough to get by on. And they typically are provided with housing during their careers.

Yet many find themselves in a financial quandary as they approach or reach retirement, squeezed by challenges that sometimes exceed those of other professionals. Often lacking home equity and a pension, some are struggling to get by and others are staying on the job longer.

The root of the problem is not just limited pay or retirement compensation, according to the Rev. Dr. Bert White, a retired Methodist clergyman and lecturer at Boston University. It's a lack of financial literacy among people who really need to take control of their personal finances or risk ending up in dire straits.

"Clergy are so focused on the hereafter, but we should know more about planning for life after work," White says.

The Rev. Richard Matthews, 72, a retired Methodist minister from Gilford, N.H., finds himself in a financial plight he never imagined possible.

After 46 years in the ministry, he receives just $1,200 a month in retirement income, most from Social Security. He is on food stamps and had to turn his thermostat down to 52 last winter so he could afford to pay his heating bill.

Matthews' annual pay package was about $75,000 when he retired from full-time duty in 2005 — about half in salary and the rest for housing and other benefits. Yet his pension income is only about $300 a month.

Stock investments once worth $200,000 were eroded in the market meltdowns of 2000 and 2008, and he had to use most of what was left to pay off a mortgage after selling his home at a loss this year.

"I went into this profession not expecting to become a wealthy person," he says. "I went into this expecting that I would be cared for by the church and the congregations that I served, only to find that when we get to the end of the road ... I'm no longer cared for. That's very difficult to swallow."

Matthews admits to some bitterness at both the church for his meager pension and at "greedy" hedge funds that mismanaged his money. He is moving later this month to Sweden, where he founded and headed a church for 10 years, so he can afford health insurance.

A senior minister at a small to medium-sized U.S. church receives average pay of $70,300, according to a survey by the National Association of Church Business Administration.

About 13 percent of respondents reported not receiving any retirement benefits at all, while churches are making very small contributions to the retirement plans of many others, according to the interdenominational Christian organization.

A pervasive attitude toward retirement within the profession has long been that God will take care of it, ministers and others say.

When White was being ordained 40 years ago, his bishop told him "Bert, you won't ever make any money as a clergyman but you'll always have a great retirement plan."

"I said, 'Oh, really?'" the minister recalls. "He said,

Pope on 3-day visit to Cyprus

By Victor L. Simpson
Associated Press writer

PAPHOS, Cyprus — Greek Cypriot leaders made a blistering attack on Turkey for its occupation of northern Cyprus as Pope Benedict XVI began a pilgrimage to the divided island Friday bringing a message of peace to the region.

Addressing Benedict, the head of Cyprus' Orthodox Church, Archbishop Chrysostomos II said that "Turkey has barbarously invaded and conquered by force of arms 37 percent of our homeland."

Chrysostomos said that Turkey "continues to carry out its obscure plans which include the annexation of the land now under military occupation, and then a conquest of the whole of Cyprus?"

His comments came as Benedict began a sensitive three-day day visit to Cyprus, an island divided between ethnic Turks and Greeks and viewed by the Vatican as a bridge between Europe and the Middle East.

Chrysostomos also said the Turks "ruthlessly sacked" Christian artworks, saying they were seeking to make Greek and Christian culture disappear from the north. He urged the pope's help to ensure protection of the sacred Christian monuments and in the struggle against the Turks.

The pope did not respond to the archbishop's remarks. Instead, in his comments at an archaeological site where St. Paul is said to have preached in the 1st century and to have been whipped by Roman soldiers, Benedict spoke of the cooperation between Catholics and Orthodox Christians.

Asked the pope's reaction to the speech, Vatican spokesman the Rev. Federico Lombardi said Benedict was aware of the archbishop's views but that he had not come to Cyprus to take political positions.

The spokesman also said that while there are no plans for Benedict to visit the Turkish-occupied north he may meet with a Muslim delegation from the area before he departs for Rome Sunday evening.

RELIGION LETTERS

Mother Nature and the doomsayers

Often we hear someone say, why does God let bad things happen to good people? One thing we do know — the only power manmade gods have is over the people that worship them. They have no power over Mother Nature, for she has always been the giver and the taker and has never paid any attention to all the doomsayers.

WILLIAM HAFNER
Twin Falls

Church is here to spread God's message

This letter is a reaction to the Saturday religion article, "Young adults choose a different kind of faith." As is the case with many media articles, it starts with dramatic statements intended to get a reaction from the reader. She says religion shouldn't tell you how to live your life. What in the world does this person think religion is for?

The church is here to spread God's message as given in the Bible, first on how to be saved and second on how to live a God-pleasing life. Next, this person says everyone will go to heaven. While this may be a comforting thought, it is purely a manmade belief of what someone thinks God should do. God clearly says in the Bible that those who believe in Jesus as their Savior will be saved.

Third, the article refers to one of the most common complaints about religion — that of hypocrisy. The church is made up of sinful humans. Are there hypocrites in services? Of course there are, but most failings are due to people having moments of weakness, just as we all have. Most churches are made up of people doing the best they can.

Reaching

McCurdy said. "One of the challenges I see today in the Magic Valley and throughout the world is people are not actively involved in religion of any sort; there's been a movement away from church activity. The LDS church is really making an effort to reach out to those who are not participating ... it's proven to be very fruitful."

Mark Sjostrom, pastor of Grace Baptist Church in Twin Falls, said his church does not have any special programs that reach the unchurched but that emphasis is on motivating individual members to be proactive in building relationships and inviting others to church.

The church also has a website that has prompted some newbies to visit church services, he said, but building relationships is always more personal and effective. He said relationships should be built on a community level, at soccer games and other events.

Jeff Humphrey, pastor of

New Hope Christian Fellowship, echoed the same sentiments, noting that the church also reaches out in service to those in and outside the church.

"One of our primary ways is that we have a food bank here to serve the community," Humphrey said.

The food bank is a great way to let others know the church cares about individuals and families, he said, "especially in these tough economic times." The church serves between 600 and 800 people a month through the food bank, he said.

"The model that Jesus gave us is that he built relationships with people, and shared God's love to people," said Humphrey, who leads a multi-generational church. Church members need to do the same thing, he said, "whether it be with neighbors, work mates, or people at the grocery store."

"Loving people and loving God is what it's all about."

Clergy

'Yeah, it's eternal life after you die.'

It's important, though, for clergy to have their earthly affairs in order. White plans to deliver that message at a financial literacy and retirement planning seminar he is organizing on June 23 at the Boston University School of Management.

Their unpreparedness has a ripple effect that extends to the parishioners they counsel, from the pulpit or in private, and beyond the church.

"Clergy people have a profound multiplier effect," says Zvi Bodie, professor of finance at Boston University, who will be speaking to the clergy about investing. "Everybody goes to them for advice about everything, including finances. So it's particularly important to make sure that they have basic financial understanding."

Much like they give counsel, he says, clergy shouldn't be afraid to seek help with their own retirement security from a financial planner.

SW Idaho to ID illegal immigrants by fingerprints

BOISE (AP) — Southwestern Idaho law enforcement agencies will compare fingerprints of suspected criminals with records kept by the FBI and the U.S. Department of Homeland Security to help identify people who are in the country illegally.

Ada and Canyon counties will be the first in Idaho to use the so-called "Secure Communities" program.

It uses information-sharing technology to help U.S. Immigration and Customs Enforcement identify illegal immigrants when they are fingerprinted and booked on criminal charges.

The information will be shared on immigrants who are in the United States both legally and illegally.

"We want to make sure that our local law enforcement partners know as much as possible about the people in their custody," said Steven Branch, field office director for the Immigration and Customs Enforcement's Salt Lake City Office of Detention and Removal, which includes Idaho.

Ada County Sheriff Gary Raney said the program will help his officers identify criminal illegal immigrants in jail, return them to their countries of origin when appropriate, and prevent them from committing further crimes.

"I take seriously our responsibility to protect the public by identifying criminals and preventing them from committing additional crimes," Raney said. "Secure Communities is a valuable tool that will help us identify criminal aliens in our jail, return them to their country of origin and prevent them from committing further crimes in our community."

Whitebarks in Pioneers get protection from beetles

KETCHUM (AP) — A project to protect whitebark pine trees from attack by mountain pine beetles will expand into the Little Wood River drainage in central Idaho after a U.S. Forest Service worker found enormous trees and clusters in the high alpine landscape.

Sawtooth National Forest north zone botanist Deb Taylor found the trees in a remote area of the Pioneer Mountains while surveying for a fuels reduction project last summer.

"It's so close and it's so wild," Taylor told the Idaho Mountain Express. "Some of these trees I found are 28 feet around."

The Sawtooth Whitebark Pine Restoration Project will adorn the trees with 3,000 "verbenone pouches" that contain a synthetic pheromone to trick beetles into thinking the trees are already full of beetles.

The trees help trap high-elevation snowfall, an important water source in the West.

Nuts from the trees are an important source of food for wildlife. Red squirrels harvest cones from the trees and store them on the ground in stashes called middens, some of which are discovered by black bears and, in regions where they are present, grizzly bears.

Whitebark pines can be found in Wyoming, Montana, Idaho, Washington, Oregon, California, Nevada and western Canada. They thrive in higher, colder and windier environments than other trees in the Rockies and can live more than 1,000 years.

The central Idaho project is also protecting whitebark pines in the Soldier, Smoky and Boulder mountains, some 2,000 whitebarks in all.

Whitebark pines for a century have suffered from blister rust, a fungus from Europe. The trees also are vulnerable to beetles, which have killed millions of acres of forests across the Rockies in recent years.

Surveys of the Yellowstone region last year showed whitebark pine mortality as high as 70 percent.

The Natural Resources Defense Council earlier this year filed a lawsuit seeking federal protection of the trees after the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service didn't respond to a petition the group filed in 2008.

Minnick on familiar ground

By Jessie L. Bonner
Associated Press writer

BOISE — U.S. Rep. Walt Minnick finds himself on familiar ground as he prepares for a heated battle over Idaho's nationally targeted 1st Congressional District seat.

Minnick became the first Idaho Democrat sent to Congress since 1992 when in 2008, he ousted Republican U.S. Rep. Bill Sali, a former state lawmaker who alienated GOP moderates with his brusque style and extreme political positions.

Now Republicans have set their sights on districts like Idaho's 1st, where Republican presidential candidate John McCain won with 62 percent of the vote in 2008, as they try to win back 40 or more House seats in an effort to seize control of the House.

As Minnick launches his re-election campaign with stops in northern and western Idaho, he's facing a challenge from Republican state Rep. Raul Labrador, a conservative state lawmaker who won the support of Idaho's biggest tea party organization for his experience and right-leaning positions.

Like onetime Minnick rival Sali, Labrador has a willingness to buck his party to fight for his conservative principles. Last year, he criticized the Republican governor's plan to raise gas taxes to fund highway repairs.

But while district voters grew tired of Sali's style, Labrador has touted his ability to get along with members from both parties.

"I'm not sure that I would compare Raul Labrador to Bill Sali," said state Rep. James Ruchti, a Pocatello Democrat. "They're very different people, they use different methods to achieve their goals. However, Raul's brand of conservative has its own way of alienating people."

Minnick, a 67-year-old Harvard-educated former Nixon White House aide who made millions as a Boise forest products executive, likely expected a much different contest a month ago, when Marine reservist Vaughn Ward had been an early front-runner in the GOP primary.

"I do think the contrast is sharper between me and Raul than it would have been against Vaughn Ward," Minnick said. "I think my position has been strengthened by the fact that I'm running against someone who is so far right, so extreme on so many of these issues."

Minnick said he's among some 50 fiscally conservative House Democrats in the "Blue Dog Coalition" who last week said they wouldn't vote for new programs, renewing old programs or renewing tax breaks unless they were paid for.

Allred campaign manager moving to advisory role

BOISE — Democratic gubernatorial hopeful Keith Allred's campaign manager is stepping aside and taking an unpaid role as his senior adviser.

Betty Richardson, the former U.S. attorney from Idaho, last year recruited Allred to run against Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter in November's general election.

With the May 25 primary over, Allred said Friday he and Richardson agreed on her move into a statewide advisory role.

In a letter to supporters, Allred said, "With her guidance, we will keep our momentum rolling."

Matt Compton, now Allred's deputy campaign manager, will move into Richardson's post.

Her departure is the second high-profile staff change for Allred since he began campaigning last year.

Kassie Cerami, his former field director and a leader of Barack Obama's 2008 campaign in Idaho, previously left due to health reasons.

Idaho tax collectors ask for $11M to cover refunds

BOISE — Idaho tax collectors want another $11 million transfer from the state general fund to bolster the account they use to write refund checks to taxpayers.

There's a meeting Tuesday of the Board of Examiners, which includes Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter, on this latest Idaho Tax Commission request.

It comes after two similar transfers since March totaling $45 million were needed to ease cash flow problems caused as more people get tax refunds than actually pay into the account.

Such maneuvers have helped avoid big refund delays.

But as the Tax Commission borrows more and more, that increases the likelihood Idaho will have to resort to reserve accounts to balance the books once fiscal year 2010 ends June 30.

Otter has access to $107 million in reserves if he needs them to balance the budget, as is required by law.

Clemency decision pending for Idaho soldier

IDAHO FALLS — The attorney for an Idaho soldier convicted of killing an unarmed Iraqi says a decision on whether to grant the soldier clemency is expected within the next two weeks.

Evan Vela, a U.S. Army sniper, is serving a 10-year sentence after being convicted in 2008 of killing an Iraqi citizen and planting an AK-47 rifle on the dead man's body. Vela admitted to the killing, though he said he was following orders issued by his superiors.

Attorney Dan Conway said a hearing Thursday before the five-member U.S. Army Clemency and Parole Board "went well." The Post Register reports that Conway is optimistic that Vela could be released from military prison.

Heavy rain causes floods, damage on state highways

BOISE — Western and central Idaho counties were hit by heavy rain Friday, causing damage and flooding.

Highways in Valley, Adams and Washington counties suffered washouts, mudslides and debris deposits under bridges.

Idaho Transportation Department officials deployed work crews to clear up the problems.

By mid-afternoon Friday, there were shoulder washouts on State Highway 55 near New Meadows.

Two lanes of traffic were open, with caution signs in place.

High water in Brownlee Creek, northwest of Cambridge, also created a minor shoulder washout next to Idaho 71. The creek was threatening to flood the highway at multiple locations, though it remained open.

And in Cottonwood Creek, about three miles south of Council, high water was flooding U.S. Highway 95. One lane of traffic was open, with flaggers directing cars.

30-year sentence for husband in Valentine's Day killing

LEWISTON — A judge has handed a 30-year prison sentence to a Lewiston man convicted of murdering his wife on Valentine's Day last year.

A Nez Perce County jury had convicted Gary Mallory II of strangling Mabie Mallory, a 48-year-old woman who married him three months before her death.

The Lewiston Tribune reports that the 30-year sentence handed down by District Judge Carl Kerrick on Thursday is less than the life in prison without parole that prosecutors recommended. But it is three times the mandatory minimum required by statute.

Mallory will serve two years for felony domestic battery, followed by an additional 28 years to life on the first-degree murder charge. If he is released, Mallory will be under state supervision for the rest of his life.

ARIZONA

Mexican spotted owl habitat protection upheld

PHOENIX — An appeals court says a U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service decision to designate 8.6 million acres in four western states as critical habitat for an endangered owl will stand.

Friday's decision by a panel of the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals upholds a 2008 ruling by federal judge in Phoenix.

The ruling found that critical habitat in Arizona, Utah, Colorado and New Mexico for the Mexican spotted owl was designated correctly.

The Arizona Cattle Growers' Association had argued that the government incorrectly designated lands as "occupied" by the owl and improperly analyzed the economic impacts of its actions.

Utah high court denies death row inmate's appeal

SALT LAKE CITY — The Utah Supreme Court has denied a man's appeal of his death warrant two weeks before he is scheduled to be executed by firing squad.

The high court on Friday upheld a lower court's ruling that Ronnie Lee Gardner cannot challenge the signing of the warrant. The five-member court agreed with prosecutors that a sentence can be appealed but not an order to carry out that sentence.

HOSTED BY
KEN ROY 731-6665

DEAR ABBY: I'm working on a school project with several other girls, but I have an issue with one of them. "Sara" wanted to write the paper for our project, which is a huge part of our grade. Once she started writing it, we all realized she wasn't very good at it. I felt I could do a better job, and asked if I could do it instead — or help critique and edit it. Sara refuses.

I don't want to start a fight or anything, but this is a large part of my grade, and the project is being entered in a contest that I really want to win. Is there a way I can get her to let me help, or should I just let it go?

— REALLY WANTS TO WIN IN OHIO

DEAR REALLY WANTS TO WIN: I'm sure your desire to win the contest is no less strong than that of your teammates. Who submits the paper should be a decision that the majority of you agree on. Discuss your concerns with them and take a vote.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I recently had dinner with two other couples. As soon as the meal was finished, the woman on my left turned her back to me and leaned forward so I could neither see nor converse with the person sitting to her left. She remained like that for the duration of the dinner party.

Our friends say she wasn't angry or upset with me. She has done the same thing in other group gatherings, always with the same friend over whom she "hovers." She will whisper to this friend and exclude everyone else.

I honestly don't think she is aware of how rude she is being. Any idea how I might approach her without hurting her feelings?

— BLOCKED AT THE PARTY

DEAR BLOCKED: The next time it happens, speak up and say, "Excuse me, but I'm isolated over here! Would you mind if I change places with your friend, so I can participate in a conversation while you two talk?" And in the future, because this happens regularly, their preference for talking only to each other should be taken into consideration when the seating is arranged.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 27-year-old woman. Three weeks ago, I found out that my boyfriend of five months, "Louie," and I are going to have a baby. This was not planned, and not a happy revelation.

Louie and I are beginning to cope, and friends are really helping. My parents, however, are not. They are pushing me to marry Louie before the baby comes. I explained that I don't want that stigma and that I would like to have a big wedding later, perhaps in 2012.

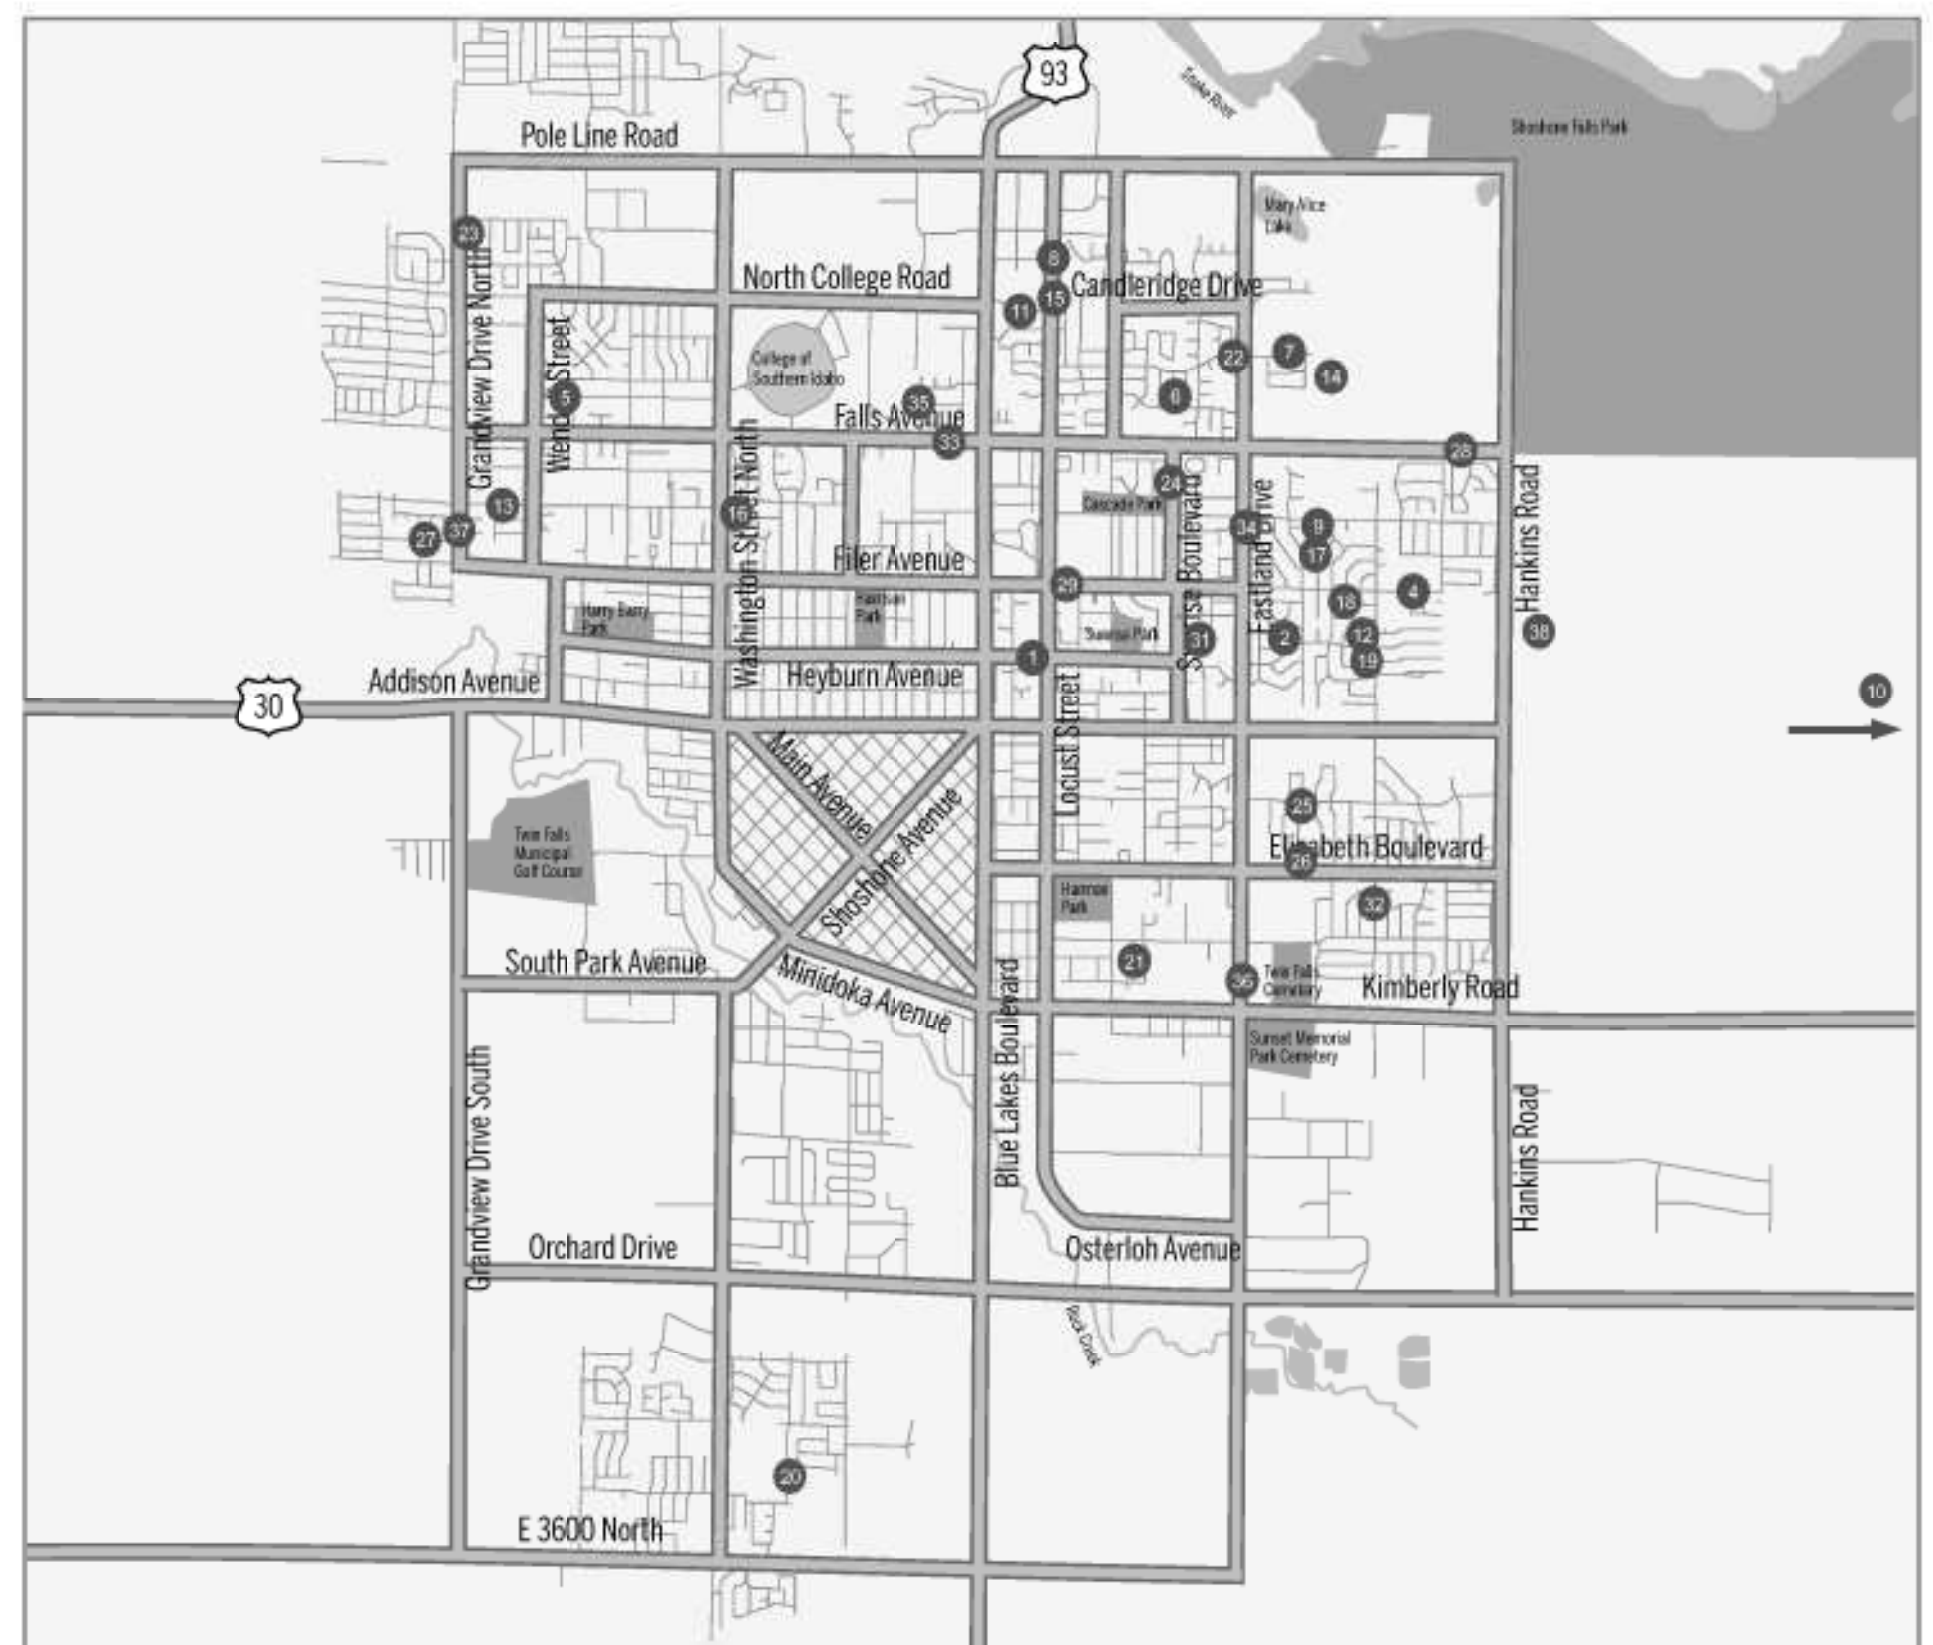

My parents disagree and want nothing to do with a big wedding down the road since I won't marry Louie now. This will be their first grandchild, and they are ruining the experience by stressing me out. By the way, because of financial hardship, I currently live at home with them. What should I do?

— MAMA-TO-BE IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR MAMA-TO-BE: At 27 you are an adult, and presumably able to make important decisions for yourself. Do not allow yourself to be rushed into a loveless marriage that could lead to more children and a subsequent divorce. If you and Louie are still together in 2012, you can have the wedding of your dreams then. But please be aware that your parents are under no obligation to pay for it.

Dear Abby is written by Abigail Van Buren, also known as Jeanne Phillips, and was founded by her mother, Pauline Phillips. Write Dear Abby at www.DearAbby.com or P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, CA 90069.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"If we do not find anything pleasant, at least we shall find something new."
— Voltaire

I have been remiss in failing to mention the death last year of one of the most influential bridge players in the world. Al Roth revolutionized American bidding in the 1950s. He invented the negative double, as well as countless other cornerstones of modern bidding, and was a fascinating writer and problem-setter. Here is one of his best problems.

You are in four spades (reached after an auction reeking of the 1950s). West leads a top diamond, which you duck. You win the next diamond as East pitches the heart eight. You lead out the spade ace, cross to the spade king, then play a third trump. To your surprise it is East who discards, pitching the heart six. Play on!

You draw the third round of trumps and deduce from the discards that East started life with six hearts and four clubs. Your only chance for a 10th trick is to get a ruff in hand. How do you manage it?

The solution is to cash the heart ace, take the club king and ace, and lead toward the club queen. West pitches a diamond, so you win the queen and lead the fourth club, pitching your losing diamond. East wins his club jack (West discarding another diamond) and has only hearts to lead. What can West do? If he ruffs, you have the last two tricks, so he must discard. You win the heart king, ruff dummy's diamond, and concede trick 13 to both opponents.

ANSWER: You should balance with a takeout double. Yes, you have a flat hand, but when the opponents are almost guaranteed to have eight or more hearts between them, your side is equally likely to have at least an eight-card fit. Nobody ever got rich at bridge by letting the opponents have the hand cheaply when both sides have a fit.

After trying many rides, Pehrson at home in Late Models

By Linda Brittsan
Times-News correspondent

Street Stocks, Pony Stocks, Modifieds, Trucks, Late Models — Magic Valley Speedway driver Dan Pehrson has been behind the wheel of them all.

Pehrson’s driving evolution began innocently enough when he entered a rookie race in the Street Stocks division at the fledgling speedway in 1989. Pehrson soon was asked to join a crew and later part-time driving duties followed as well.

“Then I decided maybe I wanted to do that full time, so I built a Pony Stock,” Pehrson recalled. “I bought a 1972 Ford Pinto, raced it for four years and did pretty well with it. It was fun times back then with that class.”

Even with a fondness for the Pony Stocks class, the lure of the high-speed modifieds, introduced at MVS in 1995, were too tempting for Pehrson to pass up. He tackled the series for three sea-

Dan Pehrson, left, goes over the inner workings of his Mr. Gas Late Models Series car with crewmembers Jack Morrison, center, and Courtney Gard before time trials earlier this season. Pehrson will be on the track tonight at Magic Valley Speedway.

Pepsi presents this evening’s thrills, highlighted by twin 50-lap main-event races for the Mr. Gas Late Models. The NAPA Street Stocks, Brennan’s Carpet Pony Stocks, Quale’s Electronics Hornet and Jr. Stingers drivers will also take the track with the chance to advance in the points standings. Additionally, Hilex Poly will host spectator drags at intermission. Bring your street car or truck, driver’s license and proof of insurance to get in on the competition. pretty neat so I got into those. It gave us lots of opportunities to go to different places like Salt Lake, Irwindale (Calif.) Mesa Merin, (Calif.) and the Bullring in Las Vegas.

“Traveling to different tracks is interesting. You know the local competitors — how you stack up with them, but when you go somewhere else, it’s with a whole different group of people and it shows you what you can do with them and we did well.”

Pehrson still holds the record qualifying time of 16.417 seconds with the Pro Trucks Series at Rocky Mountain Raceway near Salt Lake City, set in 2006.

But after nine years of traveling in the truck circuit, Pehrson, Director of Parts and Service at Con Paulos Volkswagen-Mazda in Twin Falls, felt the need to stick closer to home. It was time

Tougher Gasol lifts L.A. in finals

By Greg Beacham
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — Pau Gasol used to spend this week in Paris each year, sitting in the shade at Roland Garros and watching Rafael Nadal torment his opponents on the clay courts.

Gasol’s gracious summers ended when the Los Angeles Lakers acquired Gasol just over two years ago from the woebegone Memphis Grizzlies, putting him in the thick of the NBA finals for the past three seasons.

His good friend Rafa is on his own these days — and judging by Gasol’s performance in Game 1 against the Boston Celtics, the 7-foot Spaniard is growing into a world-beater himself.

“I love tennis, but this is really the way I’d prefer to spend the early part of the summer,” Gasol said.

Gasol showcased his evolving toughness with every rebound and big defensive play in the Lakers’ 102-89 victory in Thursday’s opener. He had 23 points and 14 rebounds while leading the Lakers’ physical game with a stifling, aggressive performance against Kevin Garnett, who dominated their matchup in the clubs’ 2008 finals meeting.

“I had to get myself mentally and physically ready for those types of challenges,” Gasol said Friday after the Lakers’ workout at Staples Center. “Just to be able to deliver and play the way I can perform, I had to work throughout these two years to be the kind of player that I am today.”

The Celtics don’t have Gasol to kick around any more, and it’s giving the Lakers an early advantage. Game 2 is Sunday night at Staples Center.

Although the current Gasol, who turns 30 next month, is a sharp-elbowed low-post player who rarely backs away from a physical confrontation, he realizes he was marked as a marshmallow from the moment he joined the NBA in 2001.

Pac-10 plus Big 12 equals smoke but no fire

By Chris Dufresne
Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — If you believe swirling reports, that 2014 Rose Bowl featuring Pacific 10 Conference champion Texas Tech vs. Big Ten Conference champion Missouri in Channel 206 could really be something.

Advertisers, you know, drool over the television markets in Lubbock and Columbia.

If you believe the Rose Bowl game used to be a tradition unlike any other — except maybe the Masters — you missed the Rose Bowl joining the Bowl Championship Series in 1998 and then, one year, Washington State playing Oklahoma in Pasadena the same season USC and Iowa played in South Florida.

The sea change in college football began years ago, not this week, but the waters keep getting choppy.

“We’re a very interested spectator,” said Rose Bowl CEO Scott McKibben, whose game is obligated to host the Pac-10 and Big Ten champions no matter what.

Some swirling reports, it should be noted, circle closer to the truth than others. ESPN reported NCAA sanctions on USC would come down Friday, which was news to USC and the NCAA. Two outlets Thursday reported John Wooden had died, which was different than him being gravely ill.

Not every “scoop” out there is a dart looking for a board, though, so you had to take heed an Internet report from Orangebloods.com claiming the Pac-10 was poised to extend offers to six Big 12 schools.

Texas, Texas A&M, Oklahoma, Oklahoma State, Texas Tech and Colorado joining the Pac-10? Book me on the first Pullman from Pullman to Stillwater.

But is it true? The answer is no, at least for now. Big 12 commissioner Dan Beebe said Friday he’s convinced his league will remain relatively intact amid reports the Big Ten is sending out feelers to Texas.

Wait, what happened to Texas to the Pac-10? And can Texas go anywhere, pigskin politically, without sidekick Texas A&M? OK, deep breath time.

There isn’t going to be a blockbuster announcement from the Pac-10 meetings this weekend in San Francisco, and if there is we’ll be the first to say we had it right Friday but things changed.

What is actually happening is panic in college-land, as conferences try to anticipate the next move by the Big Ten, which is eventually — Commissioner Jim Delany says December at the earliest — expected to expand to as many as 16 schools.

That doesn’t mean the rest of the world can afford to sit still.

Everyone remembers 2003, when the Atlantic Coast Conference’s raiding of Miami, Virginia Tech and

Is it time for more replay in baseball?

By Ben Walker
Associated Press writer

A bouncing ball to the right side of the infield, a flip to the bag, a surprising safe call by the umpire, and a furious manager.

Nah, not the play in Detroit. We’ve seen that enough. This one came a few hours later in Seattle, far from the eye of a sports media storm.

“The replays showed he’s out, bottom line,” Minnesota manager Ron Gardenhire fumed after the winning run on that disputed play Wednesday night. “It’s all out there for you, just go watch the replays.”

Which is exactly what Major League Baseball intends to do. Stung by the blown call that cost Armando Galarraga a perfect game, commissioner Bud Selig said he would look at the big picture — the possibility of expanding the use of video reviews.

The subject is certain to get addressed when Selig’s blue-ribbon panel holds its next meeting on Thursday.

“I guarantee it,” said Los Angeles Dodgers manager Joe Torre, part of the specially picked committee. “I’m sure it’s going to be added to the agenda.”

And so starts another great debate in baseball.

“There are so many close calls in a game, so where do you draw the line?” Chicago White Sox pitcher Mark Buehrle wondered. “Stolen bases, guys tagged out at home, so many plays at first base that are bang-bang plays, where do you draw the line?”

Added New York Yankees shortstop Derek Jeter: “When does it stop, when does it start? Do you have a

Fowler leads, Woods makes cut at Memorial

By Doug Ferguson
Associated Press writer

DUBLIN, Ohio — Rickie Fowler, the new kid in golf, gave himself a chance Friday to be the next kid to win on the PGA Tour.

The 21-year-old Fowler ran off three straight birdies late in his round for a 6-under 66 to tie the 36-hole record at the Memorial Tournament and take a three-shot lead over Justin Rose into the weekend at soggy Muirfield Village.

Fowler was at 13-under 131. That tied the tournament record set by Scott Hoch in 1987.

Youth has been all the rage on the PGA Tour over the last month, with Rory McIlroy winning at Quail Hollow two days before his 21st birthday, and Jason Day winning the Byron Nelson Championship two weeks ago at age 22.

They both turned pro three years ago. Fowler didn’t turn pro until last summer, yet he already has lost in a playoff last fall and finished one shot behind in the Phoenix Open in February.

“Just being in contention the few times I have over the last eight months, this is by far the best I’ve felt,” Fowler said.

Defending champion Tiger Woods is starting to feel a little better, too.

Woods was just inside the projected cut line when he started, and with his lackluster play on a course that can penalize errant shots, there was some question whether he would be around for all four rounds in his final event before the U.S. Open.

Those questions didn’t last long. He birdied three of the opening five holes, then ran off three straight birdies on his front nine to offset the few mistakes for a 69. He was at 3-under 141, 10 shots behind, but still playing.

“I hit more good shots today than I did yesterday, and really putted well,” Woods said.

Phil Mickelson, who has another chance to become No. 1 with a victory, was headed in that direction with a birdie-birdie-eagle stretch on the front nine, only to give it back by missing one par putt after another on the back nine. He closed with two straight birdies for a wild round of 71 that put him at 6-under 138, still in the game but seven shots behind.

“It’s frustrating for me because I played very well and didn’t shoot the number I thought I should,” Mickelson said.

Jim Furyk missed a short birdie putt on the final hole and had to settle for a 67, leaving him in the group at 9-under 135 that included Tim Petrovic, who earlier in the day matched Fowler’s 66.

Flyers beat Chicago to even series

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Mike Richards, Matt Carle and Claude Giroux all scored first-period goals and the Philadelphia Flyers hung on to beat the Chicago Blackhawks 5-3 on Friday night to even the Stanley Cup finals at 2-all.

Game 5 is Sunday night in Chicago.

Jeff Carter scored an empty-netter in the final seconds to help the Flyers become the first team this series to win a game by more than one goal. The Flyers, trying to win their first title since 1975, nearly let the win slip away in the third.

Leading 4-1 early in the period, Chicago's Dave

Bolland and Brian Campbell scored late goals to slice the deficit to one.

The home team has won all four games this series — a factor that certainly favors the Blackhawks in Game 5.

Ville Leino also scored for the Flyers.

After the Blackhawks won a key faceoff, Bolland sent one past Michael Leighton for Chicago's first power-play goal of the game. They entered 0 for 6 and went 1 for 3 in Game 4.

The goal energized the Blackhawks. They didn't look beat down from having to rally and fight the Flyers for most of the first 60 minutes.

Campbell made it 4-3 when his shot appeared to deflect off Flyers defenseman Kimmo Timonen's stick, and silenced the Flyers crowd. His first goal of the series was upheld after a brief review and gave the Blackhawks a glimmer of hope for a monster upset.

It was just too late.

Chicago pulled Antti Niemi for the man-advantage but Carter slid in the empty-netter and tense crowd exhaled and celebrated.

Now it's off to Chicago.

Philadelphia hadn't held a two-goal lead in the final all series until the first period Richards, the Flyers captain, had been as quiet on the ice in the final as he can be with the press.

His first goal of the final was a memorable one. Richards chased Blackhawks defenseman Niklas Hjalmarsson from behind the net and struck with a quick steal. His backhanded flip toward the net stunned Niemi for his seventh goal of the playoffs and a 1-0 lead only 4:35 into the game.

In a series where goals were exchanged like the final was played at a swap meet, the Flyers got a rare cushion late in the period. Carle scored his first goal of the postseason, when he buried a rebound from inside the right circle.

Wainwright gem carries Cards

ST. LOUIS — Adam Wainwright threw a two-hitter for his first career shutout to lead the St. Louis Cardinals to an 8-0 win over the Milwaukee Brewers on Friday night.

Colby Rasmus hit a two-run homer for St. Louis, which won for the sixth time in eight games. The Cardinals also snapped a four-game home losing streak against the Brewers, who have won 13 of their last 17 at Busch Stadium.

Wainwright (8-3) struck out eight, walked one, and retired the last 18 hitters he faced after a leadoff walk to Prince Fielder in the fourth inning. He is 5-0 at home and has allowed just two earned runs in his last three starts covering 21 innings.

Randy Wolf (4-5) gave up five earned runs in 6 2/3 innings. He struck out four and walked four in Milwaukee's fifth loss in six games.

PHILLIES 3, PADRES 2

PHILADELPHIA — Roy Halladay pitched seven innings in his first start since his perfect game, working out of trouble to lead Philadelphia.

Shane Victorino homered and scored the go-ahead run on Jayson Werth's two-out, bases-loaded walk against Mat Latos (5-4) in the fifth.

Halladay (8-3) allowed 10 hits and walked one, but held San Diego to two runs in his first game since his gem against the Florida Marlins last Saturday.

METS 4, MARLINS 3

NEW YORK — R.A. Dickey won his third straight start to help New York improve its impressive record at Citi Field.

After the Mets fought back from a three-run deficit, Francisco Rodriguez retired slugger Hanley Ramirez with runners at second and third for his 11th save in 14 chances.

ASTROS 3, CUBS 1

HOUSTON — Felipe Paulino struck out seven in eight effective innings, outpitching Carlos Zambrano and helping Houston to a fourth straight win.

Michael Bourn had three hits and scored twice and Lance Berkman drove in two runs.

and Willie Harris followed with a sacrifice fly for Washington.

Tyler Clippard (8-3) earned the win for working a scoreless seventh inning, allowing one hit. Matt Capps closed the ninth for his 18th save in 21 chances.

AMERICAN LEAGUE RED SOX 11, ORIOLES 0

BALTIMORE — Clay Buchholz pitched a five-hitter for his second career shutout, Marco Scutaro homered and scored three runs, and Boston ruined the managerial debut of Juan Samuel.

Kevin Youkilis and Adrian Beltre also homered for the Red Sox, who have won six straight on the road.

Buchholz (8-3) walked one and struck out two in his third career complete game and first shutout since he no-hit the Orioles on Sept. 1, 2007. The right-hander is 5-0 with a 0.99 ERA in his last five starts and has won nine successive starts on the road, a streak that began last August.

BLUE JAYS 6, YANKEES 1

TORONTO — Jose Bautista hit two towering home runs and Edwin Encarnacion also connected for Toronto.

Brett Cecil (6-2) pitched eight innings for the Jays, matching a career high. He allowed one run and five hits while improving to 4-0 with a 1.52 ERA in his past four starts.

Bautista led off the second with a drive off A.J. Burnett (6-3) that went off the facing of the third deck in left, his career high 17th. He went deep again in the fourth, finding the same area again for a two-run shot.

ROYALS 7, TIGERS 3

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Jason Kendall had three hits and three RBIs to help Bruce Chen earn his first win as a starter since Aug. 6.

Scott Podsednik went 2 for 3 and scored three times for the Royals, who finished with 13 hits. David DeJesus drove in two runs.

RANGERS 9, RAYS 6

ARLINGTON, Texas — Rookie Justin Smoak homered and had a career-high three hits, Josh Hamilton had a homer and two doubles, and Texas rallied from an early four-run deficit.

Vladimir Guerrero added a three-run double in his return to the lineup after missing two games because of a swollen left eye.

INDIANS 10, WHITE SOX 1

CHICAGO — Justin Masterson repeatedly escaped trouble to snap an 11-decision losing streak and Johnny Peralta hit a pair of two-run doubles.

Masterson (1-5), acquired from Boston last July 31 in the Victor Martinez trade, hadn't won in 17 starts since beating the Los Angeles Angels on Aug. 20. He came within two of the club-record 13 straight losses set by Guy Morton in 1914.

Nadal must beat Soderling for title

PARIS (AP) — All Rafael Nadal cares about is winning a fifth French Open championship.

Doesn't matter how he's played until now.

Doesn't matter that he can regain the No. 1 ranking with one more victory.

And, the Spaniard insists, it certainly doesn't matter to him one bit that in Sunday's final, he gets a chance to face the only man he's lost to at Roland Garros, Sweden's Robin Soderling. The tantalizing prospect of a Nadal-Soderling rematch with a Grand Slam title on the line is something for others to ponder.

"I never believe (in) revenge," Nadal said after he and Soderling won their semifinals Friday. "I will be as happy or as disappointed if I lose to Robin or to any other player. I don't think this is going to change the way I'll approach the match."

Perhaps that's true. Still, there's one key stat that won't go away: Nadal boasts a 37-1 career record at the French Open, with Soderling responsible for the lone setback, upsetting the four-time champion in the fourth round a year ago en route to a runner-up finish.

"It's always good to have beaten a player before. I know that I can beat him. I showed it," said Soderling, who knocked off defending champion Roger Federer in the quarterfinals Tuesday. "But, again, every match is a new match, and every match is different."

Friday's two semifinals hardly could have contrasted more.

First came the No. 5-seeded Soderling's grueling, serve-it-and-slug-it victory over No. 15 Tomas Berdych of the Czech Republic, a 6-3, 3-6, 5-7, 6-3, 6-3 test that required 31 1/2 hours. Then came the No. 2-seeded Nadal's far-less-competitive 6-2, 6-3, 7-6 (6) win over No. 22 Jurgen Melzer of Austria.

With the sun shining, and the temperature climbing above 80 degrees, the 6-foot-4 Soderling and the 6-foot-5 Berdych traded big, quick shots. They have similar games, relying mainly on powerful serves — Berdych pounded 21 aces, Soderling 18 — and forehands that zip through the air.

WILLIAMSES WIN DOUBLES TITLE

PARIS (AP) — Venus and Serena Williams won their fourth consecutive major doubles title Friday at the French Open.

"A Williams slam," Serena called it.

The sisters earned their 12th Grand Slam title by beating Katarina Srebotnik and Kveta Peschke 6-2, 6-3.

"It's really tough when you play one Williams," Venus said. "When you play two, it's really not an easy win."

The sisters will be ranked No. 1 in doubles for the first time next week in a partnership that began in the 1980s. They laughed as they reminisced about learning to play doubles.

"My dad told Venus to cross more, and so I think she got upset, and she crossed when the person was serving," Serena said.

"I remember that," Venus said. "Our older sister was serving."

It's the siblings' second French Open doubles championship, with the other coming in 1999. For several years they played little doubles, but they plan to keep playing together at the major tournaments.

Both were troubled by double-faults at important moments, including Berdych's on a break point that put Soderling ahead 4-2. It was only the sixth game of a match that would contain 48, yet Berdych called that the closest thing to a turning point.

flag that you throw from the bench for challenges?"

Heck, how about having a computer-simulated box call balls-and-strikes, like they do on TV?

"I don't know about that instant replay stuff. We might as well just build robots and put 'em out there." Washington slugger Adam Dunn said.

Remember, it was a rash of missed calls in the middle of the 2008 season that prompted baseball to join the electronic-eye age within a few months — the NFL, NBA, NHL, NCAA, NASCAR and Grand Slam tennis already used replay in some form by then.

For now, only questionable home run calls get a second look. But after a postseason filled with umpiring mistakes, the admission by Jim Joyce that he botched what should've been the final out in Galarraga's gem might spur more action.

"I think that's going to be the play that brings instant replay into baseball," fan Jeff Corr said at Fenway Park.

A day after the Twins lost on that 10th-inning play at second base, Gardenhire had calmed down.

"I'm not going to get involved in that stuff. Can't do anything about it. It is what it is. If they want to make changes to help the game then that's fine," he said.

Deciding what to do and getting it done are different issues. Any additional replay needs approval from the unions representing players and umpires.

Locking down the technical aspects could take more time. As it stands, camera angles are different at each park, limiting the looks that umpires get.

Pac-10

Big 12 schools need a fallback plan if the league is going to lose Missouri and Nebraska to the Big Ten, so it's no surprise Pac-10 rumors leaked out of Big 12 meetings.

The Pac-10 is in a position of strength, a vastly undervalued league with tons of upside. It hired Larry Scott as commissioner last year to overturn rocks in search for revenue.

The Pac-10 is not looking to raid the Big 12; it's sort of the other way around. "Our phone is ringing off the hook," Scott said Thursday.

Schools and conferences that could be left standing after Big Ten musical chairs see the Pac 10 as a possible landing spot. So the Pac-10 is looking at all options

— why would it not?

It could stay at 10, increase by two, or yes, merge with the Big 12.

It could have a championship game, or not.

If college someday soon evolves into four 16-team super conferences, the Pac-10 is going to be one of them.

This is all about money, of course. The revolution began in the 1980s when the Supreme Court ruled the NCAA couldn't control college football rights, which turned power over to the conferences, which led to free enterprise and, eventually, the BCS.

The recent trip-wire was the Big Ten Network, suddenly, becoming very profitable. It can now offer members more than $20 million per year in revenue, more than double what Pac-10 schools receive.

Burton and Busch: no hard feelings after Charlotte run-in LONG POND, Pa. (AP) — Jeff Burton jokes he gets all the drama in his life he needs from his 14-year-old daughter, he doesn't need a feud with Kyle Busch to add to the heartburn.

So forgive the veteran driver if he's not exactly in the mood to add his name to the growing list of drivers who find themselves at odds with the NASCAR's resident bad boy.

Is Burton still a little annoyed at Busch for knocking him out of contention at the end of last week's race at Charlotte? Sure. Just don't expect Burton to go looking for retribution on Sunday at Pocono.

"I'm not interested in a weekly confrontation," Burton said Friday. "I don't like yearly confrontations much less weekly. I'm here to race Pocono and go out and win this race and I know he is too."

It's what they were doing following the final restart Charlotte Motor Speedway last Sunday. Both cars were running in the top 10 when Busch ran out of room trying to squeeze underneath Burton and ended up slicing Burton's left front tire.

Burton immediately checked up and tumbled through the field to a 25th-place finish. He angrily chased down Busch on pit road immediately following the race, a rare public display of anger by one of NASCAR's most respected and level-headed drivers.

Looking back, Burton admits he may have stepped over the line. He's not exactly sorry about it.

"I felt better," he said. So much so Burton was over it by Monday morning. That might not have happened a decade ago, when every perceived slight would be chronicled and stored away for later use. These days Burton has more pressing

KYLE BUSCH TAKES POLE AT POCONO

LONG POND, Pa. (AP) — Kyle Busch will start his 200th career Sprint Cup race at the front of the field.

Winner of two of the last four races, Busch turned a lap at 169,485 mph Friday to win the pole for Sunday's NASCAR race at Pocono Raceway and extend a midseason hot streak that has lifted him to second in the points standings.

Now the driver that fans love to hate hopes to parlay his first pole at the 2.5-mile-long Tricky Triangle into a respectable finish. His best finish at Pocono was fourth in 2005, and he has needs to worry about: namely trying to keep his No. 31 Richard Childress Racing Chevrolet inside the top 12 in points.

Burton is eighth in the standings halfway through the 26-race regular season and can't become preoccuat stake.

"I like racing with Kyle and I don't have any problems with Kyle," said Burton, who will start 13th on Sunday.

"He knows exactly how I feel and we can talk about it." Not that the two are going to hug it out anytime soon. Both say there's no need. Besides, if Busch had to spend time trying to patch things up with every driver he's ticked off, he'd never make it out of the hauler and onto the track.

Last week it was Burton. The week before it was Joe Gibbs Racing teammate Denny Hamlin, who Busch said he was going to "kill" after Hamlin knocked Busch out of the way during the All-Star race.

The circumstances of these run-ins hardly seem to ped with trying to find Busch's No. 18 Toyota during a race to exact a little payback. There's too much matter. Busch has no illusions about where the blame will fall whenever he mixes it up with an opposing driver.

"You know I don't get the benefit of the doubt, ever," Busch said while letting out a little laugh. "So it's all my fault?"

Greg Biffle didn't exactly disagree, likening Busch's move to trying to wedge a semi into a narrow parking spot at the supermarket.

"It just won't fit," Biffle said. "You can't do it."

The timing of the incident just a few laps from the checkered flag of the grueling 600-mile race didn't help matters.

"It's like running a 26-mile marathon and 300 feet from the finish a guy trips you," Biffle said. "It's a lot to do to get let down."

to transfer the No. 72 he'd always displayed on the sides of his race vehicles to yet another class.

"Back when I took the Pinto apart, in the floor board was a 1972 silver dollar and I thought, 'That's got to be a sign,' so I've stuck with the 72 all this time."

Now in his third season, Pehrson and the No. 72 car have found a secure home with the Mr. Gas Late Models Series.

Additionally his two sons, Casey Pehrson, 29, and Mitch Pehrson, 26, have found their own niche — at least for now.

"Casey raced a Hornet last year and just caught the bug," Dan Pehrson said. "This year he built a Street Stock car and he's impressed me quite a bit. Mitch has followed us from day one. He ran with the Hornets for a while then he joined the Marines. When he got back he decided to put together a Street Stock car. Hopefully it will be ready this weekend."

However, Dan Pehrson's main focus this evening will be on the twin 50-lap main events scheduled for the Late Models. He will have two shots at a trip to the winner's circle as he pursues a series championship.

"The hardest track I've had trying to get set up for is Magic Valley," he said. "My home track and it gives me the most trouble. I can go to different tracks and be really competitive and close on set up, but I always struggle with Magic Valley. I have thousands of laps there but

"That's the thing about racing. No matter what you plan on or how you think the strategy is going to lay out, once the green flag flies, all plans are out the window. You just have to go with what you've got and you don't ever know what that other driver is going to do either.

"It's just a high-speed chess game."
