

IHSAA confirms cuts in athletic events

Many Idaho high school teams will play fewer games next year

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

It was expected, and in the end it was unanimous. The Idaho High School Activities Association passed its final vote Wednesday to reduce the number of athletic events the state's public schools can enter during the 2010-11 school year. Trimming the number of events for all activities except those that traditionally generate revenue — football, basketball and volleyball — is expected to save thousands of dollars in transportation costs per school district.

Jerome High School Athletic Director and IHSAA board member Ty Jones said the Jerome School District stands to save around $15,000 in travel costs with the cuts. Combining that with already-scheduled changes on the district level could increase those savings. "When you figure we cut out Madison (High School) for girls basketball and picked up Filer, we could gain some money there," he said. Jones added that having fewer event dates for the sports affected won't have a significant impact on district athletics revenue, as the events were non-guaranteed home dates, except for baseball and softball. A previous vote on the measure passed in April, following a special session to discuss ways the IHSAA could help school districts meet slashed budgets in the wake of the Legislature's $128.5 million cut to public education funding for the 2011 fiscal year that begins in July. Two votes are required to pass any changes in IHSAA protocol. In this case, the second vote was essentially only held because the rules demanded it. "It was unanimous, and there was no discussion," Jones said of Wednesday's final vote. "It was pretty much a formality." Former Minico High School athletic director Tim Perrigot said he didn't have exact numbers available Wednesday but anticipated the change will lead to savings for the Minidoka County School District. "I think it's going to affect

Probation ordered for Buhl councilman's DUI charge

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

Buhl City Council President Regie Finney is on probation.

On April 2, Finney, 48, was arrested and subsequently charged with excessive driving under the influence in Buhl.

On Wednesday in Twin Falls County 5th District Magistrate Court, Finney was sentenced to two years of probation, ordered to wear a SCRAM ankle bracelet that detects alcohol consumption, and assessed a fine and probation fees.

Although Finney's blood-alcohol concentration was not available Wednesday, an excessive DUI charge applies to a BAC higher than .21. For Idaho drivers, the legal BAC limit is .08.

As a participant in the Twin Falls County DUI Court program, Finney represented himself before Magistrate Judge Howard Smyser.

Smyser explained the charges against Finney, and the Buhl resident then admitted his guilt.

Smyser then went over how the program works. The judge said Finney will face additional sanctions if he violates the terms of his sentence. Finney will serve 12 months of supervised probation, followed by 12 months that will be unsupervised.

If Finney breaks his probation, he will be given the opportunity to give his side of the story but can't have an attorney represent him. Ultimately, Smyser would determine a new sentence.

"Whatever choice I make, you're literally stuck with it," Smyser said before asking Finney if he still wanted to be a DUI Court member.

"Yes, sir," Finney said. "Glad to have you in our court," Smyser said.

Finney has said the issue hasn't affected his duties to the city. He's served on the council for nearly a decade and was re-elected in November for a two-year term.

National organization looks to support military families

The list was simple. The trouble with communication. That they need to make sacrifices. That they worried about their parents. And so on.

But the 11 items were of the utmost importance to the 30 teenagers in the room. The list represented their worries over and troubles of their parents' deployments and military lives.

"A lot of people aren't aware of the stresses put on these kids," Operation: Military Kids Program Assistant Ann Dallas said.

Operation: Military Kids is a national program designed to give children of military families a support network of others experiencing similar issues regarding a family member's deployment. It offers camps and the opportunity for the kids to speak at community events to educate the public on the situations they face.

But, due to outreach issues, there were no kids of deploying Idaho Army National Guardsmen at Wednesday's event, Dallas said. Privacy concerns stop the organization from getting the

Looks like 2010 might be political year of the woman

By Liz Sidoti

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's looking like a new "year of the woman" in politics.

Eighteen years after a few glass ceilings were broken, hundreds of female candidates have set their sights on Congress, governorships and state legislatures, and a significant number racked up big wins in Tuesday's primaries. Republican women, in particular, served notice to the old boys of the party. In California, two wealthy businesswomen who had reached the highest ranks of the corporate world, Meg Whitman and Carly Fiorina, captured the GOP nomination for governor and Senate. In Nevada,

Longtime women's club donates history to Cassia Co. Museum

By Laurie Welch
Times-News writer

BURLEY — When several Cassia County women started a home demonstration club to increase their homemaking skills in 1955, they didn't realize the friendships they formed would still be thriving more than 50 years later.

Twylla Hunt, one of two original members of the Cheerful Doers Club, said the club was an offshoot of the Sunshine Home Demonstration Club of their mothers and aunts.

"They encouraged us to start our own club rather than join theirs," Hunt said.

Hunt said at one time there were as many as 17 home demonstration clubs in Cassia County. The Cheerful Doers Club is the last one still formally organized.

The clubs were affiliated with University of Idaho Extension services, which offered home demonstration lessons. The groups set up booths each year at the fair, where the members entered their canning and sewing projects.

"It's the fair's centennial this year and we've been organized half that time," said original club member Rachel Larson.

The group on Wednesday donated six scrapbooks full of the club's history to the Cassia County Museum.

Museum Curator Valerie Bowen said the home demonstration clubs were a big part of the county fair. The scrapbooks will be used in the museum's first temporary exhibit, put together in honor of the fair's centennial.

Hunt said members originally considering naming the club Eats and Treats. But some said it sounded too much like a 4-H name, so it was scrapped.

Along with learning canning, cooking and sewing skills the women met monthly and shared their lives.

"What we really got out of it was fellowship and friends for life," said member Gay Neiwert.

Hunt said at one point there were five pregnant club members.

"We decorated our booth around the kids," Hunt said. "Because that's what we produced that year."

Buhl schools pin their hopes on levy

By Blair Koch
Times-News correspondent

BUHL — Buhl School District officials hope a supplemental levy will make up for next year's projected $712,000 budget cut.

Voters will decide June 17 whether to provide the district with $466,000 per year for two years to shore up funding and preserve programs.

The district has already reduced pay by 6.6 percent and slashed the budget for supplies, technology and book purchases. Transportation costs were also cut in the face of declining state funding for public education.

After opting into a statewide financial-emergency declaration and negotiating with the Buhl Education Association for just more than a month, the district signed teacher contracts on May 25. Teachers are now contracted to 177.46 days, compared to 190 days before, and students will lose four to five days in the classroom for a total of 170.

Superintendent Byron Stutzman argued students will actually get more classroom hours next year because the district is going to a seven-period day. If the levy doesn't pass, he said, the district will have to cut spending further. "We'll have to look at cutting programs," Stutzman said.

"I don't even want to talk about it, but we're talking sports, music, theater and other extracurricular activities. Everything would be up for consideration ... but that isn't something we want to do."

The levy rate increase would cost homeowners $31.55 a year for every $100,000 in assessed value.

It would finance textbook purchases, minimize budget cuts to maintenance and grounds crews, partially restore classroom supply purchases, update outdated computers and technology at the elementary school, and update staff and student information systems to meet Idaho State Department of Education requirements.

The levy would also "buy back" six teacher days through school improvement and staff development. A dozen district teachers, including BHS Technology Director Susie Jones, are spending this week in Pocatello for training. Any fresh teaching ideas and professional-development strategies they learn will then be honed during the six days the levy would provide.

"What we'll bring back is a template that any teacher can look at ... for guidance and specific strategies," Jones said.

About 20 districts are included in the professional development, designed to help educators align teaching with state standards.

"We ended our contract negotiations on good enough terms that we can come back ... and start recon-ociling," BEA President Renee Orth said.

I-84 eastbound Declo ramps close Friday

Times-News

The eastbound Interstate 84 Exit 216 ramp north of Declo will be closed to traffic Friday, the Idaho Transportation Department announced.

The ramp will be closed from approximately 7 a.m. to midnight as roadway rehabilitation between Burley and the Interstate 86 junction continues.

Only the eastbound off-ramp will be closed while the section of the roadway rehabilitation is completed, according to ITD. Eastbound traffic will need to use Exit 211 or 227 to access the Declo area.

The closure is part of 15 miles of rehabilitation work on I-84 between mileposts 207 and 222 performed by two contractors. Knife River Corporation Northwest of Boise is the contractor for the $12.8-million section between Burley and Declo.

Drivers are urged to follow all traffic-control devices throughout the construction zone, yield to through traffic while entering I-84 and use caution to avoid existing potholes and ruts. The speed limit has been reduced to 45 mph through the construction zone.

That didn't stop the organization from showing the children of active and reserve military families how the Guard's deployment will affect the community. The teens circled

Program assistant Barry Lockard started calling out professions — lawyers, doctors, postal workers. With each profession, a group of kids walked off, representing the loss the community

The teens said the program helped them with their parents' deployments — it gave them experience talking about their issues and helped them make friends in similar situations.

Primaries

tea party-backed state legislator Sharron Angle seized the GOP Senate nod and will face Democratic Leader Harry Reid. South Carolina State Rep. Nikki Haley brushed aside allegations of infidelity and an ethnic slur to grab the commanding spot in the GOP gubernatorial runoff.

One of the night's biggest winners was two-term Arkansas Sen. Blanche Lincoln, who scored a narrow victory over liberal Democrat Lt. Gov. Bill Halter in a primary runoff. Joining these women were Roxanne Conlin, who won the Democratic Senate nomination in Iowa, and Elizabeth Mitchell, Maine's Democratic nominee for governor.

Mitchell is the first woman in the nation to serve as both state Senate president and state House speaker.

In 1992, voters sent record numbers of women to Congress — 24 to the House and five to the Senate.

Women angered by the predominantly male Senate's questioning of Anita Hill, who had accused Supreme Court nominee Clarence Thomas of sexual harassment, decided to make their point by ousting the men.

That same year, Bill Clinton ran as a change candidate and defeated President George H.W. Bush.

Fast forward to 2010.

Despite their strides — 17 women are in the Senate, 75 in the House, including the first female Speaker, Nancy Pelosi — politics remains a man's world. That could benefit this year's female candidates as a frustrated electorate has rejected the establishment and sent a few incumbents packing.

"Many woman are running and taking advantage of this moment," said Debbie Walsh, director of the Center for American Women and Politics at Rutgers University. "When voters are looking for something new and something different, women can really fit that bill because they aren't the status quo, they look different."

Again it's a change election — and women represent change.

Two years ago, Sarah Palin was the first woman on a Republican presidential ticket and Hillary Rodham Clinton came tantalizingly close to winning the Democratic presidential nomination.

Today, two women sit on the Supreme Court and a third, Elena Kagan, is likely to join them.

Across the country, female candidates have legitimate shots of winning Senate races in Connecticut, Colorado, Missouri and New Hampshire, and gubernatorial contests in Arizona, New Mexico, Florida and Oklahoma. Many more are seeking House seats and a place in state legislatures.

As of this month, the Center for American Women and Politics counted 23 female Senate candidates, 216 House contenders and 23 gubernatorial hopefuls. Another 26 were vying for lieutenant governor jobs, and 77 for other statewide offices.

Consider the race for the Democratic nomination for an open Arkansas congressional seat. State Sen. Joyce Elliott, the chamber's Democratic majority leader, beat state House Speaker Robbie Willis in a runoff. She's black in a state with deep-seated racial tensions. But she shrugs off the notion that she can't win.

"This is no normal year. People are more open to my message than they might be closed-minded to my race," Elliott has said.

That may be the case for gender as well.

In some cases, Tuesday's victors have been climbing the political ladder for years and decided to seize the opportunity for higher office as voters crave change.

Utah judge denies motion for condemned inmate

By Jennifer Dobner
Associated Press writer

SALT LAKE CITY — Lawyers for a death row inmate scheduled for execution by a firing squad on June 18 failed Wednesday to persuade a federal judge to block a commutation hearing because the process is riddled with conflict.

The emergency hearing in U.S. District Court came hours after attorneys for Ronnie Lee Gardner argued an appeal of the case before the Utah Supreme Court — asking justices to vacate Gardner's death sentence.

It's unclear when the state's high court will rule.

But the federal court's Chief Judge Tena Campbell said Gardner failed to prove he could not get a "fair and impartial hearing" before Utah's Board of Pardons and Parole.

A two-day hearing before the board is set to begin on today.

In court papers filed in U.S. District Court late Tuesday, attorney Andrew Parnes argued that the board's process was tainted because lawyers that represent the board work for the Utah attorney general's office — the same entity that sought Gardner's death war-

A third set of attorneys from the same office also advise the Utah Department of Corrections, Parnes said.

"We get a request from one attorney from the attorney general's office and then we get a ruling from another attorney in the attorney general's office," he told Campbell.

Parnes had asked Campbell to delay the commutation process and order the attorney general's office to resolve the conflict.

But Campbell said it appeared the attorney gen-

Earlier Wednesday, Gardner's lawyers asked the Utah Supreme Court to vacate his death sentence and send the case back to state court for a new sentencing hearing. They contend that mitigating evidence developed for Gardner's federal appeal should be heard in state court.

Gardner's attorneys said the court also could reduce Gardner's sentence to life in prison.

State attorneys argue Gardner's appeal has come too late.

Gardner, 49, was convicted of capital murder and sentenced to death for the 1985 fatal shooting of Michael Burdell during a botched escape attempt at the old Salt Lake City courthouse.

He chose a five-man firing squad over lethal injection as the method of execution.

Larry King's wife taken to hospital after apparent OD

PROVO, Utah — A spokesman for Larry King said Wednesday that the talk-show host's wife is recovering after an apparent prescription drug overdose last month in Utah.

Emergency medical workers were called to Shawn King's home in Provo on May 28. Her father dialed 911 after finding the 50-year-old woman in her bed, breathing but not responding when he tried to wake her, according to a transcript of the emergency call, which was released through an open-records request Wednesday.

Karl Engemann told the dispatcher that he thought she may have taken too much medication for anxiety or depression.

Officers who responded to the call found several prescription bottles, including Ambien and anti-anxiety medication, that had been filled within 10 days but were empty, according to a police report. It also said there was a handwritten note that indicated she had taken the pills intentionally.

Another note expressed Shawn King's desire to be buried in Utah, police said. The report did not include any mention of why Shawn King may have wanted to harm herself. Engemann had told the dispatcher that he did not suspect it was a suicide attempt.

The Kings filed for divorce in April, but Larry King released a statement through his spokesman, Howard Rubenstein, saying "reports that we have fought are absolutely false."

Shawn King is Larry King's seventh wife. The couple has been married since 1997 and has two sons. "Our marriage is still together, and I am staying very close to our children, who we love immensely," Larry King said. "We shall go through this difficult time intact as a family."

Man's unsolved slaying haunts friends, family

POCATELLO (AP) — On the anniversary of his slaying, the family and friends of an American Indian man killed outside a bar remain hopeful that his killer will be found.

Lorne Red Elk, 56, was found with massive head trauma in the parking lot of Duffy's Tavern on June 14, 2009. Doctors removed him from life support three days later.

Jeani Walesch, his girlfriend, told the Idaho State Journal that she wants to make sure Red Elk — a gentle giant of a man, in her words — doesn't become another cold case, fading and forgotten as the years stretch on.

She said Red Elk's death shocked her so profoundly, she has little memory of events for about a month after his death.

"When you lose somebody to something like this, it's like a big, black cloud behind you at all times," she said. "It's never gone."

Pocatello police say their homicide cases are never closed. "If we get something, we work on it," police Capt. Terry Felsman said.

Red Elk, a Sioux Indian from Poplar, Mont., worked as a bouncer at Duffy's, an unpretentious club three blocks south of the tracks in this historic Union Pacific railroad town. Minutes after he left for the night, he was found on the asphalt, his head bashed in.

No arrests were made, though police ruled his death a homicide.

Although two local businessmen each put up $1,000 in reward money for information leading to his killer's capture, in addition to the $1,000 offered by the Pocatello police, no breaks emerged. Walesch grew concerned the case had been downgraded to a suspicious death and moved to the back burner of police priorities.

Authorities say that's not the case, contending they meet monthly to discuss all cold cases.

"Two months ago, we met with the prosecutor's office," Felsman said. "We had a slide presentation, we went over everything we had!"

As the anniversary of Red Elk's death approaches, Walesch said a tribute at Duffy's and a more formal event in Red Elk's Montana hometown are planned. She'll travel to Poplar for the formal ceremony and remembrance.

"His family reunion and annual powwow in Montana is July 17th," she said. "They do a ceremony called 'The Wiping of the Tears' because the Sioux mourn for a year!"

For Rex Rammell, home may be where the votes are

GRANGEVILLE (AP) — For erstwhile Idaho gubernatorial candidate Rex Rammell, home may be where his voters are.

Rammell, a veterinarian who ran second in May 25's Republican gubernatorial primary to Gov. C.L. "Butch" Otter, may be moving from eastern Idaho to northcentral Idaho's Idaho County.

It was one of just two counties won last month by Rammell, who ran as the darling of tea party Republicans.

He got 1,510 votes in Idaho County, Otter only won 1,296.

While campaigning, Rammell says he took a liking to the region's geography, its big game and its people — especially those who picked him.

He told the Lewiston Tribune, "I'm popular up there."

He also says there's a shortage of large-animal veterinarians. He plans to spend the summer, to see if he wants to stay for good.

Ground water levels drop in Columbia plateau aquifer

By Kevin McCullen
Tri-City Herald

TRI-CITIES, Wash. — Ground water levels declined over the past quarter-century in 83 percent of 470 wells measured in the sprawling Columbia Plateau Regional Aquifer system in southeastern Washington, northeastern Oregon and western Idaho, a new report from the U.S. Geological Survey found.

The steepest drops occurred in the deepest basalt aquifer in the 44,000-square-mile plateau. Smaller declines were recorded in shallower aquifers that receive recharge water from irrigation, precipitation or discharge from rivers or wells, according to the survey.

Hydrologists compared readings taken in 1984 with measurements recorded in 2009 for the report, which was released this week.

Declines were reported throughout the Columbia Plateau, but were more widespread in parts of the Yakima River Basin, in western Lincoln, eastern Grant and southwestern Adams counties, and in the Pullman-Moscow area.

Average annual declines over the 25 years in the Moscow-Pullman area, which taps ground water for municipal water supplies, averaged more than 1 foot per year, the survey found.

Irrigation accounted for much of the use elsewhere, the survey said.

The average annual decline in the Grande Ronde basalt unit — the oldest and deepest level of the aquifer tapped for water use — averaged 2 feet a year over the period. Thickness of the basalt in the Grande Ronde may be greater than 15,000 feet near the central part of the basin, according to the survey.

Declines also occurred in the Yakima River Basin because of heavy pumping from the Wanapum basalt unit, which averages up to 1,200 feet thick, the survey said.

But the drop was less in the shallower Overburden unit, at less than 0.3 feet per year, the survey said.

Overall, results of the study — launched to assess ground water levels in the plateau and identify trends in storage and use — came as no surprise to hydrologists for the U.S. Geological Survey, said Sue Kahle, project manager for the agency.

“Water level declines have been tracked for many years in smaller (areas). This the first time we looked at the Columbia Plateau as a whole,” Kahle said.

Historically, ground water levels in the regional aquifer system have dropped since the 1930s.

The study “confirms some of the concerns swirling around for years,” said Joye Redfield-Wilder, a spokeswoman for the Washington Department of Ecology in Yakima.

Darryll Olsen of the Columbia-Snake River Irrigators Association, which represents agricultural interests and irrigation districts in Eastern Washington, said the most interesting part of the survey is the decline in water levels in the Grande Ronde unit.

Water levels dropped by more than 100 feet in some of the 136 Grande Ronde unit wells where measurements were taken, with declines greater than 25 feet measured in 60 percent of the wells, the survey said.

“I’d like to know what is going on in the Grande Ronde,” Olsen said.

Nez Perce tribe sues over Lewiston irrigation plan

LEWISTON, Idaho (AP) — The Nez Perce Tribe is again challenging a plan that decides how much water is diverted from Webb and Sweetwater creeks to a Lewiston irrigation district, saying it does not leave enough for the threatened steelhead.

The Lewiston Tribune reported the tribe filed a federal lawsuit against the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration’s fisheries division on Tuesday in Moscow.

Tribal Chairman McCoy Oatman argues the agency’s plan prioritizes water for lawns and landscaping for residents of Lewiston Orchards over the needs of the fish.

In April, the federal agency issued a new plan that requires 2.5 cubic feet of water per second be allowed to flow past a diversion dam on Sweetwater Creek from June through October, while leaving 1 cfs in Webb Creek. The tribe successfully challenged an earlier plan.

The Webb and Sweetwater creeks have been designated critical habitat for steelhead, and they also supply water for the irrigation district.

“Once again, NOAA fisheries has issued a (Lewiston Orchards Project biological opinion) that prioritizes water for suburban lawns and landscaping over the flows and critical habitat that Snake River steelhead require,” said tribal Chairman McCoy Oatman.

The irrigation system is owned by the U.S. Bureau of Reclamation and operated by the district. Patrons routinely face water rationing during hot summer months. When the plan was released in April, LOID manager Barney Metz also found fault with it, saying the amount of water allocated for steelhead would make it difficult for customers to receive their share of water.

The tribe, irrigation district and county and city officials have been working to get congressional funding for a pumping station that would bring water to the region from a nearby river and lake. That station would cost about $20 million to build, and as much as $730,000 to operate each year.

Judge dismisses Arizona charges against polygamist leader Jeffs

By Felicia Fonseca
Associated Press writer

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. — A Mohave County judge on Wednesday dismissed all Arizona charges against polygamist leader Warren Jeffs after a prosecutor said continuing with the charges would be “impractical.”

Judge Steven Conn granted Mohave County Attorney Matt Smith’s motion to dismiss the four charges of sexual misconduct with a minor with prejudice, meaning they cannot be refiled on the same set of facts.

Smith said the two alleged victims in the cases no longer want to proceed with prosecution in Arizona.

In his motion filed earlier Wednesday, he said Jeffs has already served more time in Arizona than he would receive upon conviction, more serious charges are pending against Jeffs in Texas, and Jeffs has had significant medical problems while jailed in Kingman.

“It would be impractical and unnecessary to spend taxpayer money on this defendant under all the above mentioned circumstances,” Smith wrote.

Jeffs’ attorney, Mike Piccarreta, said he appreciates Smith “fulfilling his ethical duties and dismissing all remaining prosecutions” against Jeffs.

The court ordered the sheriff’s office to transport Jeffs back to Utah, where his 2007 convictions on two counts of rape as an accomplice are on appeal to the Utah Supreme Court. He was sentenced to two consecutive terms of five years to life in prison for the charges, which involved Jeffs’ role in the 2001 spiritual marriage of an underage follower to her then-19-year-old cousin. Smith noted that Texas has started extradition proceedings, but Conn said Arizona had only temporary custody of Jeffs until the charges against him were resolved. Any such proceeding must be initiated with Utah, not Arizona, Conn said.

Jeffs, the former leader of the Fundamentalist Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, was moved to Kingman from the Utah State Prison in February 2008.

Lots of hyperbole in debate over immigration

Is one Idahoan in 14 an illegal alien? The Idaho Freedom Foundation, a right-wing public policy advocacy group, says that may be true — and that the cost to Idaho taxpayers runs hundreds of millions of dollars a year.

If there really are more than 100,000 undocumented workers in Idaho, that will come as a surprise to state policymakers — and most everybody else.

In 2005, Pew Hispanic Research Center estimated there were 25,000-40,000 illegal aliens in the state.

But the fact is, nobody really knows.

“No. 1, they’re illegal, so no one has an accurate count,” state Sen. Mike Jorgenson, R-Hayden Lake. “I would say it’s a safe bet that the number is somewhere in excess of 80,000.”

Jorgenson, of course, is an anti-immigration hawk who backed legislation that would have penalized Idaho employers for hiring illegal aliens. He was defeated for renomination to a fourth term in the May 25 Republican primary.

He has said there may be as many as 40,000 illegal aliens working in the dairy industry alone.

The Federation of Americans for Immigration Reform believes there are about 40,000 illegal immigrants — total — in Idaho.

Jorgenson has an ax to grind on this issue, so it’s not surprising his guesstimate is on the high side. He’s convinced the state should take action against illegal aliens.

But unless Congress comes up with comprehensive immigration reform, just about anything Idaho does will be ineffective. Like Arizona, there’s no way Idaho can unilaterally stem the influx of illegals.

Ramping up the criminalization of immigration on the state level isn’t the answer. Getting a hand on the entry of illegal aliens into the United States is.

Our view: Is it realistic to think the number of illegal aliens in Idaho is equivalent to the population of Twin Falls, Jerome and Lincoln counties combined?

What do you think? We welcome viewpoints from our readers on this and other issues.

Mega-disasters: Never say never

The BP oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico is the latest of several recent disastrous events for which the country, or the world, was unprepared. Setting aside terrorist attacks, where the element of surprise is part of the plan, that still leaves the Indian Ocean tsunami of 2004, Hurricane Katrina in 2005, the global economic crisis that began in 2008 and the earthquake in Haiti in January.

In all these cases, observers recognized the existence of catastrophic risk but deemed it to be small. Many other risks like this are lying in wait, whether a lethal flu epidemic, widespread extinctions, nuclear accidents, abrupt global warming that causes a sudden and catastrophic rise in sea levels, or a collision with an asteroid.

There is a natural tendency to postpone preventive action against dangers that are likely to occur at some uncertain point in the future, especially if prevention is expensive, and especially because there is so much else to do in the here and now.

Our tendency to procrastinate is aggravated by three additional circumstances: when fixing things after the fact seems like a feasible alternative to preventing disaster in the first place; when the people responsible have a short time horizon; and when the risk is uncertain in the sense that no objective probability can be attached to it.

All these forces came together to permit the economic crisis, despite abundant warnings from reputable sources, including economists and financial journalists. Risky financial practices were highly profitable, and giving them up would have been costly to financial firms and their executives and shareholders. The Federal Reserve and most academic economists believed incorrectly that in the event of a crash, remedial measures would be enough to jump-start the economy. Meanwhile, depending on how they were compensated, many financial executives had a limited horizon; they were not worried about a collapse years down the road because they expected to be securely wealthy by then.

This in turn discouraged the appointed officials of the Federal Reserve and other regulatory agencies from taking such measures. “We’ve never had a decline in housing prices on a nationwide basis,” Ben Bernanke, then chairman of President George W. Bush’s Council of Economic Advisers, said in 2005. It happened the next year.

Finally, with no reliable probability estimate of a financial collapse available, it seemed natural and perhaps even sensible to wait and see, hoping that with the passage of time, at least some of the uncertainty about risks to the economy would dissipate.

The BP oil leak reveals a similar pattern, though not an identical one. One difference is that the companies involved must have known that in the event of an accident on a deepwater rig, prompt and effective remedies for an oil leak would be unlikely. But the risk of such an accident could not be quantified, and it was believed to be low because there hadn’t been many serious accidents involved in deepwater drilling.

But other forces were similar in the leak and the financial crisis. If deepwater oil drilling had been forbidden or greatly curtailed, the sacrifice of corporate profits and of consumer welfare would have been great. The regulators who could have insisted on greater preventive efforts were afflicted with the usual short horizons of government officials.

The horizon of the private actors was foreshortened as well. Stockholders often don’t worry about the risks taken by the firms in which they invest, because diversified stock holdings can help insulate them. Managers worry more, but they are not personally liable for the debts of the firms they oversee and, more important, the danger to their own livelihood posed by seemingly small threats is not enough to discourage risk-taking. It seems that no one has much incentive to adopt or even call for safeguards against low-probability, but potentially catastrophic, disasters.

It would be nice to be able to draw up a complete list of disaster possibilities, rank them by their expected cost, decide how much we want to spend on preventing each one and proceed down the list until the total cost of prevention equals the total expected cost averted. But that isn’t feasible.

A politician who proposed a campaign of preventing asteroid collisions with Earth, for example, would be ridiculed and probably voted out of office. Yet, planetary scientist John S. Lewis has estimated that there is a 1 percent chance of an asteroid of one or more kilometers in diameter hitting the Earth in a millennium, and that such a hit would probably kill on the order of 1 billion people. That works out to 10,000 deaths per year, far exceeding the annual deaths from airplane crashes.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Advice for morning runners, walkers

Thank you, Kerry Clark, safety manager at Boise Packaging, and Corey Vasquez who wrote a letter to the editor concerning early morning runners and walkers not wearing reflective clothing.

I couldn’t help but think there was a need for more information on run safety.

As a former track coach, I would tell runners to face traffic and always run defensively. Run two abreast with no oncoming traffic. If a car is coming, it was their responsibility to run single file.

The “laws” on the book regarding running on public highways and roads are: Idaho Code 49-708:

1. If a sidewalk is available, you cannot be on the roadway.
2. If on a roadway, must be on the shoulder as far as practicable from the edge of the roadway.
3. If no shoulder, as near as practicable to outside edge of roadway.
4. If two lanes, on left side.
5. If on roadway, pedestrian must yield right of way to vehicles.

If walking or running at dusk or before dawn, make wise choices. Run facing the traffic and be aware of what is going on around you. More so if you are listening to music.

Dan Bristol, Heyburn chief of police, states it is not illegal to carry pepper spray or mace when a person runs, bikes or walks and then to use it if a dog (or human) comes at you. He stated that one ought to make sure a threat is eminent though and not just an annoyance.

Boise Packaging gave out about 70 vests.

Thank you, Kerry, Corey and Boise Packaging, for addressing this issue and bringing it to our attention. Thanks for making a difference in the safety of our community. I wanted you to know I appreciate the reflective vests I picked up for myself and friends.

Not all state land leaseholders are rich

The recent editorial

(“Enough is Enough”) claims that state land leaseholders are “wealthy and influential.” I would like to set the record straight that not all leaseholders are wealthy people.

This is now the second time that this newspaper has generally referred to leaseholders as “wealthy.” Maybe a little history lesson about the cottage leases would be helpful.

For decades, leases for cottage sites were extraordinarily affordable, which allowed families of average means the ability to afford such sites. For example, when my grandparents built their cabin using local materials in the early 1940s, the lease was around $40 a year. The cottage leases remain affordable for many “average” Idahoans. However, if the leases are raised to the rates beloved by the attorney general, families who have been able to afford the leases will be priced out and, ironically, only the wealthy will be able to afford them.

This paper cannot have it both ways. It cannot in one instance decry the “wealthy” who lease state land while at the same time praise the attorney general for his stance. I urge Idahoans reading this editorial to remember that the State Land Board leases all types of land for different uses, including for livestock, mining and yes, recreational cottages. The purpose of such leases is to grant to the beneficiaries the maximum long-term return, as the recent editorial correctly stated.

However, requiring lessees to pay double or triple the lease amount from previous years will result in empty cottage sites that may only be reoccupied by — the wealthy. Reasonable lease rates result in the reliable long-term profits for the state, which is good for the schools, the state and yes, the lessees.

Irresponsible editorials like this only lead to misconception among our citizens. I would urge this paper once again to do its research before making blanket generalizations about a group of people it knows nothing about.

OTHER VIEWS

Here's what Idaho newspapers are saying about ...

... GOP's tin ear

Lewiston Tribune

Republican voters say Idaho lawmakers reduced the public school budget too deeply. So why did a GOP-dominated Legislature proceed with the cuts?

That question stems from the Idaho Statesman's recent poll. It asked voters likely to vote in last week's Republican primary what they thought of the Legislature's decision to cut public education spending by $128 million, about 7.5 percent, in order to balance the budget.

The poll found:

* 46 percent disapproved of the cuts, 38 percent approved and 16 percent were unsure.

* 45 percent would disapprove of additional cuts, 43 percent would approve and 12 percent were unsure.

But only 24 percent said Idaho exempts too many transactions from the sales tax. Lifting those exemptions would raise more dollars for schools. Another 46 percent believe the number of sales tax exemptions is about right.

What's striking here is that these are Republican voters — conservatives who would presumably be inclined toward reducing spending rather than more taxes to balance Idaho's recession-battered budget. Throw in a healthy percentage of Democratic voters — people who support schools even at the price of higher taxes — and the verdict on the 2010 Idaho Legislature becomes even harsher.

Nor is the Statesman poll out of sync with other findings.

Through the years, Boise State University's public policy survey consistently found Idahoans rating public education as their No. 1 or No. 2 priority.

Now you can argue that unlike lawmakers, voters don't confront the tough decision of where to find the money for education in tough times.

Until now.

Across Idaho, ordinary people — even those in high unemployment areas such as Orofino — are willingly subjecting themselves to property tax increases.

Those taxes offset — but not totally replace — the loss of state support for their schools. Idahoans dread the property tax, but they've concluded it's either pay more tax on their homes or watch their children's range of school opportunities — including sports — wither away.

So how did the people's representatives get such a fundamental issue so wrong? ...

For starters, the bulk of Republican lawmakers are the product of their party's primary election. The voters dominating those decisions are more partisan and more conservative than the people who vote in November ... But once that primary is over, so is the contest for Idaho's Legislature. By not filing candidates in nearly four dozen of Idaho's 105 legislative seats, Democrats ceded control of the Legislature to the GOP.

Throw in the fact that many Republican lawmakers are insulated by the powers of incumbency and the ready access to campaign cash that comes with it.

And add to it one more cold reality: There is a chance that Idaho Democrats — who occupy only seven of the 35 seats in the Senate and 18 of the 70 House slots — may lose ground in November.

Nothing precludes a one-party system from representing the views of the people. But if it doesn't, there's little ordinary people can do about it.

... the rubber meets the road

Idaho Press-Tribune, Nampa

When the Idaho Legislature finalized its budgets for the 2010 session, it reduced spending on public education by $130 million from the previous year — a 7.5 percent cut. Education had been spared the axe last year, in large part due to federal stimulus money, but wasn't so lucky this year.

Lawmakers did what they could to ease the blow, allowing districts to shift money that had previously been reserved for things such as computers and supplies to other, more urgent needs. But deeper cuts were inevitable.

There is no easy, graceful way to reduce spending at the rate needed to balance the books. Lawmakers were wise to declare a financial emergency for all school districts, which enables them to negotiate pay cuts for teachers even if the districts aren't close to exhausting all their funds.

So now it's up to individual districts to decide how they'll make ends meet, and that's the best way to handle a tough situation. And now we're starting to see how that's going to play out locally ... School districts will need to find creative ways to use their reduced dollars and still maintain high standards. Despite the state's funding issues, Idaho students have shown general improvement on test scores in the last few years. Continuing that trend in these times will require all the ingenuity our school boards, teachers and administrators can provide.

... the road worriers

Moscow-Pullman Daily News

Protecting the environment can be tough on your vehicle.

The push to go green is gradually catching on, and while that's good for the air we breathe and the land we live on, the roads we drive on are taking a hit.

Between fuel-efficient cars ... and low-mileage trips, Washington and Idaho are hurting for money to take care of its roads.

Idaho currently has a 25-cent-per-gallon fuel tax, and Washington is at 37.5 cents, with a chunk of that tax money going to cities and counties for local road maintenance. The rest of the money typically goes to transportation partnership projects, highway projects and road safety and congestion relief projects.

It makes sense that when we fill up, part of the money we pour into the pump goes back to our roads. After all, the vehicles we are filling up are driven on roads, so a user-tax is the way to go.

But every time we purchase a vehicle that gets good gas mileage, it means we aren't paying as much of a gas tax. That's nice on our pocketbooks but not so great for our roads ...

We aren't advocating that folks go back to gas-guzzlers ... But we do need to think about how to take care of our roads ...

We don't know what the solution is. Maybe it's a tax increase, a levy or a giant donation-based car wash put on by the transportation departments. What we do know is we need to start having discussions now before our roads go from hazardous to deadly.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Salary cut should not impact education

In Saturday's paper in the story about the meeting of the school district and the cutting of teachers' wages, a local school teacher was quoted as saying "It was a sad day for education."

We all know that times are tough these days. I personally took a volunteer cut in pay this year. I saw that in order to keep my job it would be necessary to take a decrease in pay for, hopefully for a short time. I personally know what a cut in pay can do to a household.

I'd like to know why the school teachers feel they are exempt from contribution necessary to help cut spending? Are they an integral part of our children's future? Of course. Is their job more important than some other people in the Magic Valley and Idaho who had cuts in pay? No.

I feel empathy toward the people in my community that don't have a job and have to look forward to their benefits coming to a complete stop. Or the many who have completely lost jobs with no prospect of work on the horizon.

Our school teachers have all the necessary things to educate our children. They have their educations and they have resources already available in the classroom. Are they the newest, greatest books and material? No, but they are probably not that old that they can't still be utilized. And, they still have jobs.

It offends me when teachers say it is a "sad day for education." It may be a "sad day" for Ms. McFarlin's family, but her pay should not reflect how she educates our children. One has nothing to do with the other. What is a sad day for our children is when the level of their education depends on the salaries of their teachers.

Local GOP can't just change the rules

Chairman Clelland's defense of her illegal appointment of Jim Fort as committeeman for TF-12 Precinct is disingenuous. She claims that the central committee can pass any bylaws and they will be valid, regardless of Idaho GOP rules and regardless of Idaho statutes.

Let us examine a "for instance." Suppose the county central committee amended the bylaws to say that all newly elected committeemen shall be officially notified of the county committee reorganization assembly via a postcard that is put in the mail in the afternoon of the same day the assembly is to be held. No prior notice is to be given to newly elected committeemen, especially in the case where the meeting location is changed from the location officially filed with and reported to the Idaho GOP in Boise. Would Chairman Clelland defend the "for instance" above as perfectly proper and legal, because of her opinion that the local county bylaws trump Idaho GOP rules and Idaho laws?

Perhaps you, Mr. Editor, should have your reporter ask her what she would do in that "for instance," considering my "Official Notice" postcard was postmarked the afternoon of the same day of the assembly. I got it in the mail two days after that assembly met at a location that was different from the location officially filed with and reported to the Idaho GOP in Boise.

Shame on teens who trashed business

Parents: School is barely over. Do you know where your children are at night?

Shame on the small teenager and friends who completely trashed my husband's office building last Thursday night, June 3. I say small because it was a small window that you had to be lifted up to in order to enter the building. You then proceeded to overturn all of his carefully catalogued reference files and periodicals, swipe everything off counters and shelves, then empty all of his personal files in his office onto the floor, along with trashing his desk. From front to back, the floor was covered. Then you took tools to try to break into the other two businesses down the street to no avail. The tools were later found tossed in the alley.

Do you really get a good feeling after you have vandalized a business? I suggest that perhaps you could use your excess energy in performing a random act of kindness instead every day.

Study: Millions forced to wait for food stamp benefits

By Michelle Roberts and Justin Juozapavicius
Associated Press writers

SAN ANTONIO — When Amanda Vaca's husband lost his job, the couple took stock of their finances and drew a startling conclusion: They could not afford to feed their four young children.

So Vaca filled out an application for food stamps. Then, the wait began. A month passed, then two. In some weeks, the food simply ran out.

"There was several occasions where I didn't have breakfast to cook them or all there was was noodles," said Vaca, a customer-service representative in Fort Worth who got laid off shortly after her husband. They waited three months for assistance.

The recession has landed millions of hungry families in similar straits, forcing them to endure long waits for help buying basic groceries. A review by The Associated Press found that dozens of food-stamp programs in 39 states left at least a quarter of applicants waiting weeks or months for food aid, some in areas that were not particularly hard hit by the economic downturn.

Federal law requires applications for food stamps to be reviewed within 30 days of being filed, and even faster for the poorest families. Failure to do so can subject agencies to federal sanctions and lawsuits, but individual families are largely at the mercy of their local administrators.

Among the excuses for the delays were overburdened bureaucracies, staff shortages or program rules. But that makes little difference to parents with hungry children.

"It got to that point where there was nothing. It was scary. It was very, very stressful," Vaca said. "We went to churches to get food, food banks or whatever. I was always searching for places to get food."

In fiscal 2009, Texas left about a third of its applicants waiting more than 30 days for food assistance, the worst among states examined by the

"It got to that point where there was nothing. It was scary. ... We went to churches to get food, food banks or whatever. I was always searching for places to get food."

— Amanda Vaca, a mother of four in Fort Worth, Texas, who had to wait three months to get food stamps after her husband lost his job

AP, even though Texas was spared the brunt of the recession.

In Rhode Island, nearly a quarter of new applications were delayed. In Florida, Colorado and Nevada, about one-fifth of applications were processed late.

In the months since those problems arose, some agencies have improved their processing systems, but application delays persist in many places.

Vaca spent days pleading by phone and in person for someone to look at her application. At one point, a frazzled office manager took her to a back room to show her piles of unprocessed applications. Her family eventually was approved for food stamps and received retroactive benefits for the months they were waiting.

A record 40 million people — one in eight Americans — now rely on Supplemental Nutrition Assistance, the official name of the modern food stamp program, which began in 1961. The number of participating households increased by one-fifth in fiscal 2009, and many states' food-stamp rolls grew by a third or more.

"Never in our lifetimes have these programs been so urgently needed," said Kevin Cancannon, undersecretary of the Department of Agriculture, which oversees food stamps.

The government uses a complicated formula for determining eligibility, but a family of four must earn less than $2,389 per month. The federal government funds the full cost of benefits and half the administrative costs, a total of $53.77 billion in fiscal 2009. The average monthly payout is $275 per household.

Food stamp payments work much like a debit card at grocery stores and some farmers' markets. The money is good for groceries such as produce, meat, dairy and bread products, along with snack foods and nonalcoholic drinks. The money cannot be used for alcohol or household goods like toilet paper or pet food.

State and local governments, though they pay only a small percentage of the overall program costs, administer the aid and are allowed to add extra eligibility requirements. Some have added things like fingerprints or notarized documents as fraud-prevention measures. Cancannon said some of those rules create additional hurdles that needlessly slow aid to needy families.

Man in trouble over summons covered with obscenities

YUMA, Ariz. (AP) — An Arizona man who bluntly expressed his displeasure about being called to jury duty has landed himself in legal hot water.

Timothy Michael Jones was ordered to appear Tuesday in court to explain why he sent back a jury questionnaire with obscenities written in black marker. He failed to show and Yuma County Superior Court Judge Andrew Gould issued a bench warrant. Jones now faces a charge of indirect criminal contempt, which carries possible penalties of six months in jail and a fine of up to $300.

Court records show Jones was sent the jury summons last month.

Fans lift Carrie Underwood to 2 CMT Awards wins

By Chris Talbott
Associated Press writer

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — The fans love Carrie Underwood and they proved it again during the CMT Music Awards.

The former "American Idol" champ won Wednesday night's top honor, video of the year for "Cowboy Casanova," and CMT performance of the year for "Temporary Home" two months after making history by winning her second Academy of Country Music Awards entertainer of the year. Both awards are chosen by fans tuned into the live shows.

She was the night's only multiple winner.

"They were there before I had anything, an album, a record deal, a tour or anything like that," Underwood said after the show. "They built me from the ground up."

AP photo
Carrie Underwood performs at the 2010 CMT Awards, Wednesday in Nashville, Tenn.

The CMT Awards, which are chosen exclusively by fan voting, were another salute to some of country music's top young stars. Lady Antebellum continued its scorching run by winning group video of the year for the trio's crossover hit "Need You Now" and Miranda Lambert taking female video of the year for "White Liar," her first No. 1 song.

"Tonight's all about the fans," trio member Dave Haywood said after receiving the belt buckle trophy given to winners. "Thank you fans!"

Lambert followed up three wins at the ACM Awards with yet another win. She jumped up and pumped her fists as she made her way through the crowd and shouted, "My first buckle! This rocks!" when she reached the stage.

Lambert's "White Liar" video features the red-hot singer ditching her dishonest husband-to-be at the alter for his cheating ways. It was the first time she put on a wedding dress. The second time will come when she weds fiancé Blake Shelton.

"Let's just hope that my next wedding doesn't end up like that video," she told the crowd.

Keith Urban won male video of the year for "Til Summer Comes Around." After sending a shoutout to his wife, actress Nicole Kidman, who attended the awards, he turned serious and talked of the oil spill in the Gulf of Mexico.

"I want to send my deepest love to all the families around the gulf, who are going for an insane time right now," Urban said.

A few minutes later Urban lit up the stage with a scorching guitar duel with John Mayer as the two played "Hit The Ground Runnin'." "John Mayer and Keith Urban making love on guitars," the show's host, Kid Rock, said.

It was one of the hottest performances in a night full of them.

The CMT Music Awards usually skew lighthearted and with the rowdy Kid Rock hosting, things quickly got interesting.

The good times started immediately when he was joined on stage by surprise guest Hank Williams Jr., who rarely attends awards shows, Trace Adkins, Zac Brown, Jamey Johnson, Randy Houser, Martina McBride and Kellie Pickler for a medley of "Cowboy," "Bawitdaba" and "Good Ol' Boys."

Kid Rock called Williams, "My rockin' rebel father Bocephus," before saying: "Does anybody realize how hard it is to get Bocephus out of the house? I don't think you understand this. The party has just begun."

The surprises continued later when "Saturday Night Live" star Kenan Thompson showed up in a green dress and red wig doing his Reba McEntire impersonation. He sang a few lines of a Reba song, then was joined on stage by the real McEntire.

GAO: Idahoans pay lowest rates for high-risk insurance

Times-News

BOISE — According to a report from the U.S. Government Accountability Office, or GAO, Idahoans pay the lowest rates nationwide for high-risk pool plans. Idaho's risk pool has been in operation since 2001.

Department of Insurance Director Bill Deal said, "The success of Idaho's program is a result of having a stable source of funding and responsible supervision by a qualified board of directors."

Consumers insured by the high-risk pool are those whose health situations would normally cause them to be denied coverage.

"Collaboration between the legislature and the insurance industry has created a product that is unique among high-risk pools. We are financially sound and benefits are priced competitively," said Hyatt Erstad, chairman of the high-risk pool board.

Currently, Idaho's approximately 1,500 policyholders are still paying 25 percent more than the standard rate — even with assistance from the high-risk pool.

The GAO reports the median state pool rate for a 50-year-old male non-smoker in 2008 was $6,288 per year. The rate for Idaho's most commonly purchased plan was $3,300 while the rate for Oklahoma's most popular plan was $10,176.

Senator Dean Cameron, a member of the high risk pool board, would prefer the rates be lower but says, "Idaho's reform efforts and the appropriate use and management of the high risk pool have been instrumental in holding rates at this level."

More employees jump ship as economy improves

By Christopher Leonard and Christopher Rugaber
Associated Press writers

One sign of better economic times is when more people start finding jobs. Another is when they feel confident enough to quit them.

More people quit their jobs in the past three months than were laid off — a sharp reversal after 15 straight months in which layoffs exceeded voluntary departures. The trend suggests the job market is finally thawing.

Some of the quitters are leaving for new jobs. Others have no firm offers. But their newfound confidence about landing work is itself evidence of more hiring and a strengthening economy.

"There is a century's worth of evidence that bears out this view that quits rise and layoffs fall as the job market improves," said Steven Davis, an economist at the University of Chicago.

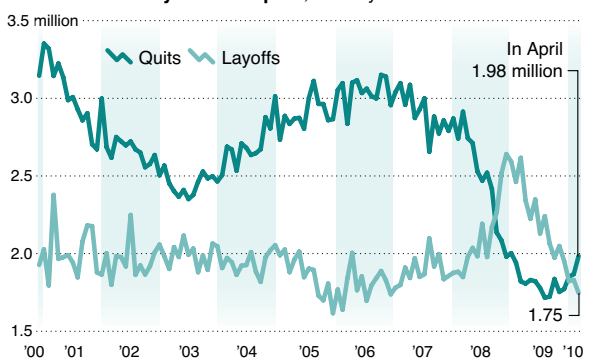

Still, the number of people quitting their jobs is nowhere near what it was before the recession. Economists expect the

Laid-off workers can't find jobs, start businesses

NEW YORK — Instead of full-time work, many laid off workers are getting jobs as freelancers or independent contractors, and in the process have the role of entrepreneur thrust onto them. They suddenly have to deal not only with a change in status, but also details like choosing a business entity and paying self-employment taxes, the sort of minutiae that's someone else's problem when you're an employee.

Here is a look at the issues:

FROM JOB-SEEKER TO COMPANY FOUNDER

Darren Drewitz, who had worked for an ad agency in Austin, Texas, describes himself as "another statistic" of the recession, having been let go because of the weak advertising market. With 18 years of experience he had hopes of finding another position. But the salaries he was offered were too low. Or, he was told, "you're overqualified."

While he was looking, freelance work started coming his way. Former clients, colleagues, friends and relatives asked Drewitz for marketing help. So Drewitz had some income coming in while he continued to look for a job.

At some point, he realized there might be enough business for him to work for himself. Right now, he's doing market research work, but in time hopes to have a full-service advertising business.

Kerry McManama was laid off from her job as a copywriter at a Boston design firm in March 2009. She also started looking for full-time work, and found nothing. Like Drewitz, though, McManama was approached with offers of freelance work.

It turned out that she was making more during those three days of work than she had made full-time before. And McManama realized that the thing to do was find work to fill the other two days of the work week.

IDAHO ROUNDUP

Otter tries to make hay with China trip

BOISE — Idaho Gov. C.L. "Butch" is trying to make hay with his trade mission to China.

The Republican chief executive is being accompanied on this trip to the Far East by the owner of a hay terminal in Dubois.

Richard Larsen, the owner, says he's signed a new deal to sell hay to Shanghai Bright Dairy Corp.

Larsen says the transaction will create five jobs in Dubois at the facility he owns with his brother.

The Idaho Statesman reports this pact resumes a business relationship between Larsen and the Chinese company that had fallen apart when hay prices escalated two years ago.

Larsen says Otter helped mend fences between the two sides.

He also says it's a win-win situation for his community: The more hay the Chinese buy, the more he can buy from neighboring farmers.

Landsat satellite advisers to gather in Boise this month

An international team of scientists and engineers advising federal officials on the next generation of earth resource satellites will gather in Boise in mid-June.

Two Idaho-based members of the team, University of Idaho water resources engineer Rick Allen and Idaho Department of Water Resources retired administrator Anthony Morse, will host 20 colleagues on the international team.

U.S. Geological Survey and NASA officials will confer with the team about the design and progress of the next earth resource satellite, Landsat 8, scheduled for launch late next year.

The Idaho Water Resources Department, Morse and Allen were honored last year by Harvard University's Ash Center for Democratic Governance and Innovation for their use of Landsat data to monitor agricultural water use in Idaho.

The science team's mission is to find similar uses for the satellite data, advise U.S. Geological Survey and NASA officials about future satellite needs and develop new ways to monitor land use and ecological changes.

BP lied to Feds in response plan

BP's 2009 Regional Response Plan, approved by the federal government, vastly understated dangers and overstated the company's ability to respond to a spill.

CLAIM	REALITY
BP "has the capability to respond ... to a worst case discharge" of oil.	 Six weeks after rig explosion, BP has not stopped leaking oil.
BP could marshal more than enough boats to scoop up all the oil before it reached shore.	 Oil reached shore within weeks of the spill.
BP said its response could skim, suck up or otherwise remove 20 million gallons of oil each day from the water.	 That is about how much leaked first six weeks of spill; the slick now covers about 3,300 square miles.
Only a 21 percent chance of oil reaching the Louisiana coast within a month of a spill.	 An oily sheen reached the Mississippi River delta nine days after the April 20 rig explosion.
BP's site plan regarding birds, sea turtles or endangered marine mammals claimed "no adverse impacts."	 More than 400 oiled birds have been treated, while dozens have been found dead and covered in crude.
Professor Peter Lutz is listed as a national wildlife expert.	 He died in 2005.
Under the heading 'sensitive biological resources,' the plan lists marine mammals including walrus, sea otters, sea lions and seals.	 None live anywhere near the Gulf.

BP and claims process anger gulf residents

Some locals see dark parallels to Katrina aftermath

By Brian Skoloff and Ray Henry
Associated Press writers

GRAND ISLE, La. — The financial toll of the oil spill disaster in the Gulf of Mexico escalated Wednesday as BP's stock plummeted to a 14-year low and fishermen, businesses and property owners who have filed damage claims with the company angrily complained of delays, excessive paperwork and skimpy payments that have put them on the verge of going under.

The oil company captured an ever larger share of the crude gushing from the bottom of the sea and began bringing in more heavy equipment to help in the effort, including a production ship and a tanker from the North Sea that will allow the system to process larger quantities of oil and better withstand tropical storms.

The containment efforts played out as investors deserted BP amid fears that the company might be forced to suspend dividends, end up in bankruptcy and find itself overwhelmed by the cleanup costs, penalties, damage claims and lawsuits generated by the biggest oil spill in U.S. history.

Shrimpers, oystermen, seafood businesses, out-of-work drilling crews and the tourism industry all are lining up to get paid back the billions of dollars washed away by the disaster, and tempers have flared as locals direct outrage at BP over what they see as a tangle of red tape.

"Every day we call the adjuster eight or 10 times. There's no answer, no answering machine," said

Regina Shipp, who has filed $33,000 in claims for lost business at her restaurant in Alabama. "If BP doesn't pay us within two months, we'll be out of business. We've got two kids."

An Alabama property owner who has lost vast sums of rental income angrily confronted a BP executive at a town meeting. The owner of a Mississippi seafood restaurant said she is desperately waiting for a check to come through because fewer customers come by for shrimp po-boys and oyster sandwiches.

Some locals see dark parallels to what happened after Hurricane Katrina, when they had to wait years to get reimbursed for losses.

"It really feels like we are getting a double whammy here. When does it end?" said Mark Glago, a New Orleans lawyer who is representing a fishing boat captain in a claim against BP.

BP spokesman Mark Proegler disputed any notion that the claims process is slow or that the company is dragging its feet.

Proegler said BP has cut the time to process claims and issue a check from 45 days to as little as 48 hours, provided the necessary documentation has been supplied. BP officials acknowledged that while no claims have been denied, thousands and thousands of claims had not been paid by late last week because the company required more documentation.

At the bottom of the sea, the containment cap on the ruptured well is capturing 630,000 gallons a day and pumping it to a ship at the surface, and the amount could nearly double by next week to roughly 1.17 million gallons, said Coast Guard Adm. Thad Allen, who is overseeing the crisis for the government.

Oil spill response plans severely flawed

By Justin Pritchard, Tamara Lush and Holbrook Mohr
Associated Press writers

NEW ORLEANS — Glaring errors and omissions in BP's oil spill response plans have exposed a slapdash effort to follow environmental rules, outraging Gulf Coast residents who can see on their beaches how unprepared the company was.

BP PLC's 582-page regional spill plan for the Gulf, and its 52-page, site-specific plan for the Deepwater Horizon rig vastly understate the dangers posed by an uncontrolled leak and vastly overstate the company's preparedness to deal with one, according to an Associated Press analysis. The lengthy plans were approved by the federal government last year before BP drilled its ill-fated well.

Louisiana Gov. Bobby Jindal was incensed Wednesday after reading the AP story and said BP has been reactive — not proactive — all along.

"Look, it's obvious to everybody in south Louisiana that they didn't have a plan, they didn't have an adequate plan to deal with this spill," Jindal said. "They didn't anticipate the BOP (blowout preventer) failure. They didn't anticipate this much oil hitting our coast. From the very first days, they kept telling us, 'Don't worry, the oil's not going to make it to your coast!'"

Among the glaring errors in the report: A professor is listed in BP's 2009 response plan for a Gulf of Mexico oil spill as a national wildlife expert. He died in 2005.

The plan lists cold-water marine mammals including walrus, sea otters, sea lions and seals as "sensitive biological resources." None of those animals live anywhere near the Gulf.

Also, names and phone numbers of several Texas A&M University marine life specialists are wrong. So are the numbers for marine mammal stranding network offices in Louisiana and Florida, which are disconnected.

"The AP report paints a picture of a company that was making it up as it went along, while telling regulators it had the full capability to deal with a major spill," Sen. Bill Nelson, D-Fla., wrote in an e-mail to the AP. "We know that wasn't true."

Nelson said he and Sen. Barbara Boxer, D-Calif., have asked for a criminal investigation into some of the company's claims.

Earlier this month, the federal government announced criminal and civil investigations into the Gulf of Mexico oil spill. Attorney General Eric Holder has not said who might be targeted in the probes into the largest oil spill in U.S. history.

Legal experts say that to file criminal charges, the Justice Department will have to find evidence that BP or other companies involved in the deadly oil rig explosion and subsequent spill orchestrated a coverup, destroyed key documents or lied to government agents. Charges and civil penalties can be brought under a variety of environmental protection laws.

In its Deepwater Horizon plan, the British oil giant stated: "BP Exploration and Production Inc. has the capability to respond, to the maximum extent practicable, to a worst case discharge, or a substantial threat of such a discharge, resulting from the activities proposed in our Exploration Plan."

In the spill scenarios detailed in the documents, fish, marine mammals and birds escape serious harm; beaches remain pristine; water quality is only a temporary problem. And those are the projections for a leak about 10 times worse than what has been calculated for the ongoing disaster.

Rep. Darrell Issa of California, the top Republican on the House Oversight and Government Reform committee, is investigating failures by the federal Minerals Management Service, which regulates oil rigs. He said Wednesday that if there had been a serious effort to reform the agency, the "mistakes" in BP's report would have been caught.

"This is yet another example of MMS acting as a rubber stamp for industry, and industry settling for the lowest possible standard of safety at the expense the environment and economic vitality of the Gulf region," he said.

BP spokesman Daren Beaudou said the response plans will be reviewed "so that we can determine what worked well and what needs improvement."

"Thus far we have implemented the largest spill response in history and many, many elements of it have worked well. However, we are greatly disappointed that oil has made landfall and impacted shorelines and marshes. The situation we are dealing with is clearly complex, unprecedented and will offer us much to learn from," Beaudou said.

The plans contain wildly false assumptions about oil spills. BP's proposed method to calculate spill volume judging by the darkness of the oil sheen is way off. The internationally accepted formula would produce estimates 100 times higher.

The Gulf's loop current, which is projected to help eventually send oil hundreds of miles around Florida's southern tip and up the Atlantic coast, isn't mentioned in either plan.

The website listed for Marine Spill Response Corp. — one of two firms that BP relies on for equipment to clean a spill — links to a defunct Japanese-language page.

In early May, at least 80 Louisiana state prisoners were trained to clean birds by listening to a presentation and watching a video. It was a work force never envisioned in the plans, which contain no detailed references to how birds would be cleansed of oil.

Poll: Support plunges for offshore drilling

The Washington Post

Just a quarter of Americans back expanding offshore drilling in the wake of the BP oil spill, and most fault federal regulators for the environmental disaster in the Gulf of Mexico, according to a new Washington Post-ABC News poll.

Before the spill, the Obama administration lifted the moratorium on drilling in U.S. coastal waters as a way to address the country's energy needs. But most Americans now want fewer offshore wells (31 percent) or the amount kept at current levels (41 percent).

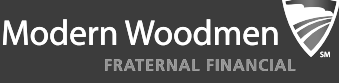

Perhaps as a consequence of the spill, public support for oil and gas drilling in general is also significantly lower than it was a year ago. And as Americans have become increasingly skeptical about such exploration, some elected representatives are now questioning what the government is doing to ensure that offshore exploration can take place safely.

On Wednesday at a Senate Energy and Natural Resources Committee hearing, the panel's chairman, Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M., said the Gulf oil spill underscores a failure of both BP and the federal government.

"It's clear that prior to the explosion at the Deepwater Horizon rig neither the companies involved nor the government adequately appreciated or prepared for the risks involved in a deep-water drilling operation of this type," Bingaman said.

The new Post-ABC poll reveals a widespread perception that poor federal regulation was at fault in the spill. About 63 percent point a finger at inadequate enforcement of regulations, and 55 percent see an overall weak regulatory structure.

Infection-control lapses plague outpatient surgical centers

By Nicole Ostrow, Bloomberg News

Infection-control blunders are common at outpatient surgical centers, where procedures such as colonoscopies take place, according to research suggesting millions of patients may be at risk of contagion.

cited for lapses, such as lack of hand washing and failure to disinfect blood-glucose meters, researchers said Tuesday in the Journal of the American Medical Association. Several million patients annually may be exposed to infection at the more than 5,000 centers in the U.S., according to an accompanying editorial.

patient centers, as distinct from hospitals. About 1.7 million infections occur annually at hospitals, leading to about 100,000 deaths for in-patients, according to an April report by the Agency for Healthcare Research and Quality. The most-common infections at hospitals are of the urinary tract, surgical sites or the bloodstream, the earlier research found.

of infection control it can put patients at risk,' said Melissa Schaefer, the lead study author and a medical officer in the Division of Healthcare Quality Promotion at the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, in Atlanta, in a telephone interview. 'We don't have any information to suggest that these findings in these three states are unique to these three states or these facilities.'

More than 6 million procedures are performed each year at ambulatory surgical centers, whose numbers have soared in the past decade, the researchers said. The number of outpatient-surgery facilities certified by Medicare, the federal health program for the elderly and disabled, jumped 50 percent from 2001 and to 2008, reaching more than 5,000, the authors wrote.

BIRD WATCHING IS JUST ONE OF MANY THINGS TO DO CLOSE TO HOME

Canada geese fly overhead at the Hagerman Wildlife Management Area, a site popular for many varieties of birds and waterfowl.

ANDREW WEEKS/Times-News

By Andrew Weeks
Times-News writer

Now that the weather is warming, people are looking for ways — and areas — to get outdoors. Perhaps you're one of those people.

It's a good thing you live in south-central Idaho. You don't have to break the budget or travel far to enjoy the great outdoors, which sit practically in your own backyard — from bird watching and camping to scenic drives and leisurely picnics.

Here are a few suggestions to whet your appetite for the summer season:

Birding

Wildlife Management Areas are popular places to view birds and other wildlife. One of my favorites is the Hagerman WMA, where I've encountered ducks, geese, pheasants and a variety of colorful birds and other wildlife.

The site, home to Oster Ponds, also offers anglers an easy catch of yellow and rainbow trout.

Other WMAs you might want to visit include Niagara Springs, Billingsley Creek and Cottonwood.

Another birding venue is the City of Rocks National Reserve in Almo, which also includes more than 1,400 acres of rock climbing, wildflower viewing, hiking and horseback riding.

Camping

A number of camping venues are available across south-central Idaho. Here's just a couple of ideas:

About four miles north of Ketchum on Sun Valley Road is the Boundary Creek campground.

Kill two birds with one stone — camp and get your hiking in at the same time.

A bird rests in a tree at the Hagerman Wildlife Management Area.

ANDREW WEEKS/Times-News

The site, which sits along Trail Creek, features eight campsites with fire pits and picnic tables, and sits close to Corral Creek and Proctor Mountain trails.

Information: 481-2481.

Lake Walcott, about 11 miles northeast of Rupert, offers plenty of campsites, picnic shelters, paved trails and fishing opportunities. It also is a popular place for windsurfing.

Information: 679-4793.

Lakes and Reservoirs

Visiting a lake or reservoir offers boating, camping, fishing and water skiing opportunities.

For boating or fishing you can't go wrong with Salmon Falls Creek or Magic reservoirs, where the fishing is starting to pick up. If you're in the mood for bass, perch, trout or walleye, cast your lines at either place for success. Water skiing is fun at Anderson Ranch Reservoir.

Other waters in south-central Idaho include Brownlee Reservoir, Lake Walcott, Mormon Reservoir and Wilson Lake, to name a few.

Trail riding

You probably already know about it, but the Devil's Corral north of the

Devin Fries, 10, has fun with his dirt bike March 18 near Indian Springs Road in the South Hills.

Perrine Bridge in Jerome offers acres of land for off-road fun.

One of the more popular places to trail ride is the South Hills. The trails, most of them family-friendly, offer scenic views of dense forests to desert landscapes. Keep an eye open, as there are plenty of bluebirds and other wildlife.

Head to the Sawtooth National Forest north of Fairfield and you'll encounter more challenging trails and, according to off-road fans, enhanced scenery. The area offers trails in a variety of lengths, from five to 100 miles.

One popular spot in the Fairfield Ranger District is the Wilson Flat ATV trail system, which includes about 11 miles of loop trails designed for all-terrain vehicles. The trails offer views of Anderson Ranch Reservoir, the South Fork of the Boise River and surrounding area.

Information: 764-3202.

Parks and picnics

If you're looking to get away for an afternoon picnic, there are plenty of parks to choose from. Most cities have their own community parks, which usually also include playgrounds for children.

Favorites are the parks with matured trees that offer abundant shade from summer's heat. If not trees, how about picnic shelters, which you'll find at Centennial Waterfront Park in Twin Falls. The park, nestled in the Snake River Canyon, sits next to the Snake River.

Shoshone Falls, also in Twin Falls, offers plenty of shade, trails, wildlife and, of course, scenic views of the falls. Nearby Dierkes Lake offers picnic opportunities, fishing and even rock climbing.

Scenic drives

The Thousands Springs Scenic Byway, a 67-mile drive from Buhl to Bliss, is known across the region, and has many interesting stops along the way, including hot springs, fishing venues, ancient fossil beds and Oregon Trails sites.

You likely won't see thousands of springs at the Thousand Springs site, but it's an impressive sight nonetheless, offering an abundance of waterfalls along the Snake River Canyon.

Water from the springs comes from the Snake River Plains Aquifer, one of the largest groundwater systems in the world. Water travels thousand of miles under southern Idaho's porous volcanic rock and emerges from the springs into the cliffs, where it then cascades to the river below.

You can see waterfalls from U.S. Highway 30 near Hagerman, but RV and tent camping is available at certain area sites, as are boat tours.

Information: 837-4505.

Mont. dam to overflow to help ancient fish spawn

By Nicholas K. Geranios
Associated Press writer

SPOKANE, Wash. — The latest effort to save North America's largest freshwater fish from extinction begins this week when water is spilled over Montana's Libby Dam to encourage the ancient fish to spawn for the first time in more than three decades.

The wild Kootenai River white sturgeon, a toothless beast from the days of dinosaurs, has a large head, armor-like scales, can reach 19 feet long and top 1,000 pounds. It takes 20 or 30 years for white sturgeon to mature and reproduce.

An isolated population of the bottom-feeding behemoths lives along a stretch of the Kootenai that passes through Montana, Idaho and British Columbia, Canada. The construction of Libby Dam in 1974 stopped the river from flooding Bonners Ferry, Idaho, but also prevented the high water flows that triggered the sturgeon to move upriver and spawn.

Before the dam, there were an estimated 10,000 Kootenai sturgeon. Fewer than 500 mature adults of spawning age remain.

The effort this week will spill up to 10,000 cubic feet of water per second over the dam in a huge waterfall for up to seven days, in what scientists hope will push the sturgeon to more productive spawning grounds in Idaho. The water will spill from Koocanusa Reservoir into the Kootenai River, where scientists hope the sturgeon will swim to the Bonners Ferry area.

The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers on Tuesday began sending more water through the dam's turbines, in preparation for opening spill gates on Thursday.

"The idea is to recreate more of the natural, spring conditions," said Michael Milstein of the U.S. Bonneville Power Administration, which markets the power from the dam. "That is believed to be a factor that led sturgeon upriver to spawn." It's not known if the ploy will work. Scientists will track the sturgeon to see if they are moving and spawning, said Nola Leyde of the Army Corps.

Biologists say the wild fish could become extinct within the next decade unless a fix is found. But sturgeon will not disappear from the river.

Idaho's Kootenai Tribe of Indians has stocked the river since the 1990s with thousands of hatchery-raised sturgeon. But the Endangered Species Act requires a species to reproduce naturally in order to be considered recovered.

"The goal is to have a self-sustaining population," Milstein said. Even with the increased spillover from the dam, the Kootenai River would rise to less than half its historical levels.

There are 24 species of sturgeon worldwide; most are threatened with extinction. The plan to save the fish in the Kootenai came out of a 2008 settlement with environmentalists who sued the federal government for failing to take action.

Noah Greenwald, endangered species director for the group behind the lawsuit, the Center for Biological Diversity, said they hope the spill will work.

"Time is really running out for the sturgeon," he said. "They have not spawned in any real numbers since 1974."

A rainbow trout emerges from the water after being released into Bear Lake in Garden City, Utah.

Utah Division of Natural Resources worker Wes Pearce rinses out the tanks of a fish transport truck May 24 after releasing rainbow trout into Bear Lake in Garden City, Utah.

Rainbow trout restocked in Bear Lake

GARDEN CITY, Utah (AP) — The Division of Wildlife Resources has restocked rainbow trout in Bear Lake for the first time in about 25 years.

Wildlife officials released about 5,000 of the fish into the lake near the Bear Lake State Park Marina. They hope to create fishing opportunities for people who plan to fish from the shore this summer.

It's hard to catch fish from the shore at Bear Lake during summers because the lake's native cutthroat trout population moves to deeper waters as it warms up, said DWR fisheries biologist Scott Tolentino.

But he said rainbow trout will stay close to shore.

"It's a good spot for the public to come out here and fish," Tolentino said. "We were lucky to get the fish this year."

Wildlife officials had stopped stocking rainbow trout, which are nonnative to Utah, in the 1980s because they were concerned that the fish were crossbreeding with Bear Lake Bonneville cutthroat trout, Tolentino said. The Bonneville cut-throat are a subspecies that's unique to the lake.

But hatchery scientists have learned how to hatch and raise sterile rainbow trout. The trout stocked in Bear Lake this year cannot reproduce, Tolentino said.

Three tanks full of fish were transported May 24 in a tanker truck from a hatchery in Mantua and were deposited in the lake via a long white tube.

DWR plans to release another 5,000 on June 30. "These fish are put here to catch and keep," Tolentino said.

Troubled Idaho teens get lift from angling program

By Eric Barker
The Lewiston Tribune

BOVILL — Joe plunges a narrow shovel into the rich black soil beside a rushing creek, drops a sedge into the hole and packs it tight.

He repeats the move several times, until his satchel of riparian plants is empty. Joe is one in a group of about 10 teenage boys with troubled pasts clad in hip waders and sweatshirts getting dirty in the headwaters of the East Fork of the Potlatch Creek.

He and the rest of the boys are helping a habitat improvement crew from the Idaho Department of Fish and Game plant riparian vegetation along the creek as it meanders through a meadow. Not too long ago adult steelhead returned to the small creek to spawn. The plants the boys are dropping into holes will help stabilize the stream's banks, reduce erosion and provide shade for the young steelhead that will soon emerge from redds on the creek's gravelly bottom.

The young fish will need a healthy environment if they are to mature, make their way to the Pacific Ocean and eventually return to spawn. As they rear in the stream, they will learn how to feed, how to dart away from predators and generally how to survive and thrive.

The boys are learning similar life lessons that will help them cope with the outside world once they are released. But it will be largely up to them to use the skills they are learning to build their own healthy environments so they can survive in what can seem to be a hostile world. Each is a resident at the Idaho Juvenile Correction Facility in Lewiston. This day they are on a field trip and working with mentors from the Kelly Creek Flycasters, a Lewiston-Clarkston-based fly-fishing club.

The mentors have been meeting with the boys — whose last names are being withheld because they are juveniles — for weeks, teaching them the basics of fly fishing. The students have learned about the life cycle of salmon, trout and steelhead. They've been taught to tie flies and fishing knots. They've been schooled in fly casting and just a few days ago, spent a few hours fly fishing at the Birling Pond in North Lewiston. For most of them it was their first experience fly fishing and one they had to earn with good behavior and marked progress toward the ulti-

"To me it's pretty cool to get out here and do something that is going to help, rather than just taking up space. It gives us an opportunity to apply some of the things we have been taught."

— Joe Douglas of Orofino, one of the instructors of the teens

Residents at the Idaho Juvenile Corrections Center in Lewiston learn fly fishing with mentors from the Kelly Creek Flycasters on May 25. Graduates of the fly-fishing program were presented with fly rods and reels to continue their efforts when they are released.

mate goal of winning their release.

"To me it's pretty cool to get out here and do something that is going to help, rather than just taking up space," Joe says. "It gives us an opportunity to apply some of the things we have been taught."

Those things are not just about fish habitat and biology. The lessons include working together, communicating with strangers and even trusting adults.

Joe says his family likes to camp along the North Fork of the Clearwater River and he is eager to show off his newly acquired fly-fishing skills once he is released. The Kelly Creek Flycasters hope he does just that and finds fly fishing far more enticing than the allure of drugs, violence or a host of other illegal activities.

But the adults know not all the boys will be converts to the sport they hold so dear. Instead, if the boys simply gain some confidence and learn patience and discipline that will transfer to other aspects of their lives, the effort of the mentors will pay dividends.

That is what one of the instructors, Joe Douglas of Orofino, tells them during one of the fly-tying lessons.

"You can apply the same kind of effort and discipline to anything in your lives and pass it on," he says.

The boys drink in the lessons. Fly tying can be tricky but several of them take to it quickly. For them it is a welcome break from the structured life in the facility, which includes school and various group therapy sessions.

Led by Will Godfrey, of Lewiston, the Kelly Creek Flycasters are in their fourth year of mentoring residents of the facility. The program covers several weeks. It starts with simple hands-on classroom sessions and progresses to fly casting and eventually a fishing trip. But none of the boys know that when they start.

"I can't tell them in two weeks you are going to go down and catch fish," says Terry Lewis, a unit manager at the facility. "That is a security thing. It's under the premise if they know ahead of time they can set something up."

Despite the concerns, Lewis is thrilled the way the program seems to grab the boys. At a fly-casting outing at Hells Gate State Park he remarks at the attention span the boys are displaying.

"Every kid down there is engaged with an adult separate from the facility. They are building communication skills. They are getting mentoring. I love it."

When the boys are gathered together for a fly-casting contest, Lewis notices one of them cock his cap sideways. The move is not welcomed.

"See now, that is street behavior," he says and motions to one of his colleagues to correct the boy. But before he can another boy points out the error. Lewis smiles. The boys have been learning not only to correct their own mistakes but to support their peers as well.

Stars move slowly, but not immeasurably

To the unaided eye, stars appear immobile. A time traveler transported back to the Bronze Age would find every constellation apparently unchanged in the intervening millennia.

SKYWATCH

Chris Anderson

Of course, stars do move, typically at hundreds of miles per second.

But, because of their enormous distances, their motion is undetectable, just as a distant supersonic jet appears to crawl across the sky.

Telescopes can measure the apparent motions of nearby stars by photographing their changing positions from year to year, known as "proper motion." The star with the greatest proper motion, Barnard's Star, shifts about three thousandths of a degree annually (equal to the diameter of a penny seen from a quarter-mile away).

But that's not the whole story. Proper motion reveals nothing about the star's motion towards or away from us, known as radial velocity. Radial velocity is revealed by the Doppler Effect — the star's light appears bluer if approaching, redder if receding. Unlike proper motion, this shift is undiminished by distance. So, in principle, the radial velocity of a far-flung galaxy can be measured as easily as a nearby star. A star's true "space motion" is a combination of its proper motion and radial velocity.

Although most galaxies in the universe are receding from the Milky Way, our nearest large neighbor, the Andromeda Galaxy, is approaching (at about 70 miles per second). The popular astronomy press is fond of describing the resulting collision and merger between the two, a few billion years hence. But the fact is we don't know if such a collision is in the cards, because, at 2.5 million light years away, Andromeda's immeasurably small proper motion (no greater than 60 miles per second) may still be large enough to result in a clean miss.

Public meetings and hunting regulations

Question: "I saw a notice the department will be holding some public meetings to discuss changes in big game hunting regulations. What's that all about? Isn't it a little late to be changing big game regulations so near the big game hunting seasons?"

Answer: The notices you are talking about referred to meetings to gather public input about proposed "non-biological rule changes" for next year's big game hunting season. I will discuss what "non-biological" means a bit later in this column.

To understand about these meetings and why they are being held now, you must understand Idaho law and

ASK THE OFFICER

about how state agencies must undergo the rule-making process.

The Idaho Administrative Procedure Act (APA), title 67 chapter 52 of Idaho Code, sets forth a specific process for rule making that applies to all state agencies.

Generally, the APA requires state agencies to gather input from the public under very specific time schedules before any proposed changes may be adopted by their boards or commissions. In addition, all adopted, amended or repealed rules proposed by any state agency must be approved by the Legislature before they become "final and effective."

A waiver of some of the time requirements under APA allows Fish and Game commissioners to adopt temporary rules setting seasons and bag limits in the spring for hunting seasons in the fall. However, other aspects of the hunting and fishing rules such as methods of harvest or gear restrictions called "non-biological rules" must follow current APA requirements.

This requires the department to seek public comment about hunting related "non-biological" rules during June. This public input will be used by the Fish and Game Commission at its next meeting to develop temporary rules pending legislative approval. The temporary rules adopted at these meetings will not go into effect until 2011, at the conclusion of the legislative session.

Some of the non-biological rules that will be examined at these public meetings include changes in the Landowner Appreciation Program, implementation of Bonus Points program, changes in big game muzzleloader rules, changes in methods of take for wolves and bears, changes in rules to allow sale of native reptiles, and changes in shooting from boats for upland game. The list of non-biological changes being examined is extensive and too lengthy for this column. Specific rules will be discussed in future columns.

In the nearly 30 years I've worked for the sportsmen of Idaho, this group of non-biological change proposals are the most significant potential changes to big game hunting I've ever seen contemplated. For that reason I strongly urge all hunters to take the time to review the non-biological rule agenda items and provide your public comment.

You can review agenda topics and provide public comment either online at the department's website below or attend the public open house meeting to discuss topic agenda items with department employees at the Magic Valley Regional office on June 21, anytime between 8 a.m. and 7:30 p.m.

FISHING REPORT

Fishing from the shore at Magic Reservoir is a good activity to try right now. Anglers report consistently catching 2- to 3-pound trout from the bank and from boats. Small mouth bass haven't shown up yet; perch are spotty and brown trout are in the channel.

At Salmon Falls Creek Reservoir the cutthroat-rainbow hybrid trout are keeping anglers busy. Most are catching the 3- to 4-pound trout from the boat and banks using worms. Walleye fishing is spotty and fish are generally small. Regulars say it needs to be warmer for walleye fishing to come on strong.

At Anderson Ranch fisherman are catching bass up to 3½ pounds. Many anglers are using 4-inch rubber black ringworms or grubs that are salty, and jigs with chartreuse tails. People fishing from the shore for trout are consistently catching fish more than 12 inches long. Anglers after kokanee are having some success.

Now that streams are open to fishing, anglers are heading to Silver Creek and South Fork of the Boise River, but the Big Wood River is running high right now. Hatches are sporadic. Most anglers are opting for nymphs and have good success.

Ponds throughout the region are regularly stocked and provide a good opportunity for beginner and experienced anglers alike.

F&G Commission delays closure on the Clearwater

Idaho Fish and Game Commission delayed the closing of chinook salmon fishing on the upper main stem of the Clearwater River and Middle Fork Clearwater until further notice.

Heavy rains in the past week have made the Clearwater and its tributaries unfishable, and that means anglers have harvested few fish in the river upstream of the Orofino Bridge.

Fishery managers project that anglers will catch fewer hatchery chinook in the Clearwater River drainage by June 13 than previously anticipated.

To make up for the lost harvest opportunity, Fish and Game asked the commission to extend the season on the main Clearwater River upstream of the Orofino Bridge to the South Fork, and on the Middle Fork Clearwater. Fish and Game will monitor the harvest closely and may close the fishery on short notice sometime after June 20.

Anglers discover simplicity, stealth and exercise in fishing kayaks

By Sam Cook
Duluth News Tribune

DULUTH, Minn. — Some evenings, Rob Roningen doesn't want to mess with launching his big boat and trolling Lake Superior with a few friends and eight or 10 rods.

So, he loads up his 14-foot fishing kayak, plops it in the big lake and trolls along under his own power with a couple of rods.

"I've caught a few fish," Roningen says. "It's a blast."

Forrest Rieder of Superior, Wis., understands the blast part. Like Roningen, he's been using a fishing kayak for about four years, mostly on inland Wisconsin lakes where he fly fishes for bass, northern pike and muskies.

"I like the stealth, the peacefulness, the closeness to the water," says Rieder, 57.

Roningen and Rieder have discovered the growing popularity of fishing kayaks — stable watercraft that come with features designed for anglers.

"The whole idea is landing a big fish in a small craft," says Scott Neustel of the Ski Hut in Duluth, which sells the crossover watercraft.

Fishing kayaks are 14 to 16 feet long, shorter than most sea kayaks meant for touring on Lake Superior but longer than the popular recreational kayaks meant for a cabin at the lake.

Fishing kayaks come with rod holders, anchor tenders and optional platforms for fishing electronics. They're wide and stable. Some models are sit-on-tops. Others are sit-insides. All are paddled with standard, double-blade kayak paddles. They range in price from $800 to $1,000.

"People have found kayak fishing can be a real effective way to fish rivers and larger bodies of water near river mouths," Neustel said. "I have a couple of friends who fly-fish out of kayaks. A lot of people use float-tubes, but in larger water, you can cover more water (in a kayak)."

That's one thing Rieder likes.

"I'm telling you — the speed," he says. "I can paddle across Lake Nebagamon from the Dairy Queen landing to the beach in three minutes."

Fishing kayaks are not meant for the canoe country, with its portages between lakes. Fishing kayaks are not designed for portaging, and they're not as light as most Kevlar canoes. Still, Roningen gets around in his Mad River Synergy 14.

"I use it both on Lake Superior and inland lakes," he said. "I've taken it with me up to Canada and Red Lake and out to the Apostles (Apostle Islands)."

He puts a little weight and a lure on one line and trolls a shallow-running plug on the other line. Then he just paddles along.

Catching a fish in a kayak is much different than in a boat, he says.

"You're right there next to it," he said. "You bring it up, and you're eyeball-to-eyeball with it. You get hold of 'em, and it gets interesting."

Neither Roningen nor Rieder uses a net.

"It's just another thing," Rieder says. "I like to keep things simple."

Before he had his fishing kayak, Rieder fished solo from a tandem canoe. Riding higher in the water, it was more difficult to control in a wind. After fighting the wind in a canoe while fishing in Belize one day, Rieder tried a fishing kayak the next. Paddling in a stiff wind was "a dream," he says. "It was much faster paddling, and the wind had no effect."

Some kayaks come with a trolling-motor mount.

"To me, that takes away the spirit of the whole thing," Neustel says. "If you have a motor, why be fishing out of a kayak?"

For Roningen, fishing from a kayak is neither better nor worse than fishing from a boat.

"You're not covering the amount of water," he says. "With my other boat, I'm using eight or 10 lines, but you're not getting the exercise or the experience of being in the kayak."

BLM offers teacher workshop and field trips for students

Over the next two years, the U.S. Bureau of Land Management's Burley Field office and the Twin Falls County Historic Preservation Commission will host educational events to celebrate the 200th anniversary of the 1811 Astorian Expedition led by Wilson Price Hunt.

During the 2010 and 2011 fiscal years, fourth- and eighth-grade students from area schools will attend a two-day BLM Take it Outside field trip to BLM lands, including portions of the Milner/Cauldron Linn sites. The field trips are sponsored by the BLM in partnership with the county preservation commission, Idaho State University and the College of Southern Idaho.

In conjunction with the field trips, a teacher workshop is also planned for June 18 and 19.

"The First Encounters" is a one-credit, two-day professional development workshop that will provide educators with an overview of the Astorian fur traders — including Wilson Price Hunt and Robert Stuart, the first Americans of European descent to explore and document southern Idaho.

The workshop is designed to provide teachers with an opportunity to gain essential background on this historic event and prepare and develop lesson plans to be used for the field trips.

Ronald James, an anthropologist and Twin Falls teacher who has researched and written on the Astorians, will present historical and anthropological background. The schedule:

- Day one: The teachers will meet from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. in the library at the Herrett Center for Arts and Science on the College of Southern Idaho campus for lecture/presentation, discussion and lesson/unit planning development.

- Day two: Field trip to Milner/Cauldron Linn area to tour where Hunt's party met disaster, including a probable cache site. The tour may also include the Rock Creek Station-Stricker Homesite.

Course requirements include:

- Attendance and participation.
- Teachers will be expected to produce lesson and unit plans for use in their classrooms.

- It is highly recommended that all participants get a copy of "Astoria and Empire" by James Ronda.

Fit female questions what is causing shortness of breath

DEAR DR. GOTT: I am concerned about blocked arteries. I am 60 years old, 5-feet-5 and weigh 115 pounds. I exercise three times a week, do 400 stairs a day and walk two miles. My total cholesterol is 180, and the good/bad ratios are within good limits. I don't have any problems with my blood pressure. I have an annual physical exam and blood workups.

However, lately, when doing my stairs, I experience occasional shortness of breath. I have a family history of stroke through my mother and father. Could I possibly have some type of blockage, even though all signs and tests appear normal? Should I request a stress test at my next physical?

DEAR READER: Yes, you should. While you don't mention your diet, I can only assume it is a healthful one. Otherwise, it's likely that your HDL, LDL and total cholesterol levels would be out of the normal range. You mention routine exams and lab work but don't indicate that you have ever had a baseline EKG. You exercise extensively but have a positive family history that could be of concern. And you are 60. My guess is that you are a young 60, but because you even question the possibility of blocked arteries, you should request a stress test. Your physician should order one because of your age and the shortness of breath.

A final possibility is that your problem is arising directly from your lungs. Request a chest X-ray and evaluation for possible pulmonary disease.

To provide related information, I am sending you a copy of my Health Report

"Coronary Artery Disease." DEAR DR. GOTT: Please explain where the idea of drinking "eight glasses of water a day" comes from. I have found no logical explanation.

DEAR READER: Water makes up almost 60 percent of a person's body weight and is vital for our well-being. It flushes toxins from the system, carries nutrients to all cells and keeps us properly hydrated. So how much is too much?

There is no scientific basis for the amount of fluids a person should ingest. Eight glasses of water daily is simply an easy rule of thumb. The recommendation for all fluid intake is 9 cups for women and 13 cups for men. This includes coffee, tea, milk, breakfast juices, soup broth and so forth. Keep in mind that we lose almost four cups of fluids daily because of sweating, urination, bowel movements and breathing. Then there's humidity, illness, the occasional fever and exercise to consider. People who live in humid areas, have specific disorders or are physically active may require additional fluids because they sweat more than someone sitting behind a desk.

Unless a medical condition or daily routine dictates diligent attention to fluid consumption, it certainly isn't necessary to keep a checklist. Don't allow yourself to become dehydrated; drink when you are thirsty. If you plan to hike, jog, play tennis, or perform physical activity, take along a water bottle and hydrate periodically.

A good rule of thumb is to hydrate at appropriate times throughout the day and include a glass of water with meals. If your diet is a healthful one, you should have your fluid intake covered adequately.

Peter H. Gott is a retired physician and the author of several books.

Holloway suspect targeted in FBI sting, not arrested

Senate committee asks agency head for explanation

By Pete Vost and Samantha Gross
Associated Press writers

WASHINGTON — The FBI thought it was closing in on Joran Van der Sloop in the notorious Natalee Holloway missing-teenager case, and he was videotaped and paid $25,000 in a sting operation. But when the agency delayed his arrest to help build a criminal case, he took the money and headed for Peru, where authorities say he now has confessed to killing a different young woman.

The investigation of Van der Sloop in the Alabama teenager's case simply was not far enough along to have him arrested, the FBI and the U.S. attorney's office in Birmingham said Wednesday.

Senate Judiciary Committee chairman Patrick Leahy asked FBI Director Robert Mueller for an explanation of "exactly what happened in this case and the basis for all actions taken by the FBI."

Holloway disappeared on the island of Aruba on May 30, 2005. Van der Sloop is being held in Peru in connection with the killing, exactly five years later, of 21-year-old business student Stephany Flores, the daughter of a Peruvian circus promoter and former race car driver. Flores was found beaten to death, her neck broken, in the 22-year-old Dutchman's hotel room. Police said the two met playing poker at a casino.

Federal law enforcement officials and a private investigator said the work on Holloway's disappearance was revived in April when van der Sloop reached out to a lawyer for Holloway's mother and requested $250,000 in exchange for disclosing the location of the young woman's body on the island of Aruba.

He got $25,000, and the private investigator says the suspect was taped saying he pushed her down, she hit her head and died. But the statement from the FBI and U.S. attorney's office said the law enforcement probe "was not sufficiently developed to bring charges prior to the time Van der Sloop left Aruba."

Aruba authorities have been frustrated in their efforts to prosecute van der Sloop because they have been unable to find her remains.

According to the private investigator, Bo Dietl, messages started coming in to John Kelly, a lawyer for the Holloway family who had hired Dietl, around Easter of this year from Van der Sloop. Van der Sloop, for years the prime suspect in Holloway's disappearance, wanted to give details of where Holloway was buried and how she died.

The family said they wanted closure and Kelly contacted the FBI, which sent 10 to 12 agents to Aruba to meet Kelly, Dietl said Wednesday in an interview with The Associated Press.

They set up a sting operation and told Van der Sloop he would receive $25,000 immediately and $225,000 more once the body was found.

Kelly and Van der Sloop met in a hotel room in Aruba and were secretly videotaped by the FBI. Van der Sloop said on tape that after Holloway died, he contacted his father who helped him bury the body, the investigator said.

Van der Sloop's father died in January.

"He wanted to come clean, but he also wanted money," said Dietl. "So now, not knowing if this was true or not, if there was a chance of recovering the body, we wanted to do that."

Under surveillance by the FBI, he and Van der Sloop went to where the body supposedly was buried.

No body has been found.

Border showdown

Mexicans chase U.S. agents after boy shot

By Christopher Sherman and Olivia Torres
Associated Press writers

CIUDAD JUAREZ, Mexico — Pointing their rifles, Mexican security forces chased away U.S. authorities investigating the shooting of a 15-year-old Mexican by a U.S. Border Patrol agent on the banks of the Rio Grande, the FBI and witnesses told The Associated Press on Wednesday.

The killing of the Mexican by U.S. authorities — the second in less than two weeks — has exposed the distrust between the two countries that lies just below the surface, and has enraged Mexicans who see the death of the boy on Mexican soil as an act of murder.

Shortly after the boy was shot, Mexican soldiers arrived at the scene and pointed their guns at the Border Patrol agents across the riverbank while bystanders screamed insults and hurled rocks and firecrackers, FBI spokeswoman Andrea Simmons said. She said the agents were forced to withdraw.

"It pretty quickly got very intense over on the Mexican side," she said, adding that FBI agents showed up later and resumed the investigation, even as Mexican authorities pointed guns at them from across the river.

A relative of the dead boy who had been playing with him told the AP that the Mexicans — who he described as federal police, not soldiers — pointed their guns only when the Americans waded into the mud in an apparent attempt to cross into Mexico.

The Mexican authorities accused the Americans of trying to recover evidence from Mexican soil and threatened to kill them if they crossed the border, prompting both sides to draw their guns, said the 16-year-old boy who asked not to be further identified for fear of reprisal.

The confrontation occurred Monday night over the body of Sergio Adrian Hernandez Huereca, who died of his wounds beside the column of a railroad bridge connecting Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, and El Paso, Texas.

Each government has made veiled accusations suggesting misconduct on the part of the other's law enforcement agents.

Hernandez was found 20 feet into Mexico, and an autopsy revealed that the fatal shot was fired at a relatively close range, according to Arturo Sandoval, a spokesman for the Chihuahua state attorney general's office. Mexican authorities said a .40 caliber shell casing was found near the body, suggesting that the Border Patrol agent might have crossed into Mexico to shoot the boy.

That would violate the rules for Border Patrol agents, who are supposed to stay on the U.S. side — and could open the agent to a Mexican homicide prosecution.

A U.S. official close to the investigation told the AP that authorities have a video showing that the Border Patrol agent did not cross into Mexico. In fact, the official said, the video shows what appear to be members of Mexican law enforcement crossing onto the U.S. side, picking something up and returning to Mexico. The official was not cleared to speak about the video and spoke only on condition of anonymity.

Iran dismisses new sanctions over nuclear program

By Edith M. Lederer
Associated Press writer

UNITED NATIONS — The U.S. and its allies scored a long-sought victory Wednesday by pushing through new U.N. sanctions over Iran's nuclear program, punishments Tehran dismissed as "annoying flies, like a used tissue."

The sanctions target Iran's powerful Revolutionary Guard, ballistic missiles and nuclear-related investments. Oil exports, the lifeblood of Iran's economy, are not affected because targeting them would have cost the U.S. essential support from Russia and China.

President Obama said the sanctions are the toughest Iran has ever faced. They required several months of difficult negotiations by the five veto-wielding permanent U.N. Security Council members — the U.S., Russia, China, Britain and France — and non-member Germany. This is the fourth round of sanctions aimed at getting Iran into serious discussions on its nuclear ambitions.

"Actions do have consequences, and today the Iranian government will face some of those consequences," Obama said. He left the door open to diplomacy but said Iran "will find itself more isolated, less prosperous and less secure" unless it meets its obligations under the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty.

Iranian President Mahmoud Ahmadinejad, on an official visit in Tajikistan, dismissed the new resolution.

"From right and from left, they adopt sanctions, but for us they are annoying flies, like a used tissue," he said.

Tehran insists its program is peaceful and aimed at producing nuclear energy. The U.S. and its allies say Iran is trying to produce nuclear weapons; they want Iran to suspend uranium enrichment and start negotiations aimed at ensuring that it uses nuclear technology only for peaceful purposes.

The new resolution bans Iran from pursuing "any activity related to ballistic missiles capable of delivering nuclear weapons," bars Iranian investment in activities such as uranium mining and prohibits Iran from buying several categories of heavy weapons including attack helicopters and missiles. Iran, however, already has most of what it would need to make a weapon.

Iran's top nuclear negotiator, Saeed Jalili, warned that "choosing the option of confrontation will bring Iran's resolute response," according to Iran's official news agency. He did not elaborate.

Iran's U.N. Ambassador Mohammad Khazaee accused the United States, Britain and their allies of abusing the Security Council to attack Iran.

"No amount of pressure and mischief will be able to break our nation's determination to pursue and defend its legal and inalienable rights," Khazaee said. "Iran is one of the most powerful and stable countries in the region and never bowed — and will never bow — to the hostile actions and pressures by these few powers and will continue to defend its rights."

U.S. Ambassador Susan Rice dismissed Khazaee's statement as "ridiculous ... reprehensible, offensive, and inaccurate" and declared that "these sanctions are as tough as they are smart and precise."

Tough as leather: Oldest shoe steps out after 5,500 years

By Randolph E. Schmid
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — About 5,500 years ago someone in the mountains of Armenia put his best foot forward in what is now the oldest leather shoe ever found.

It'll never be confused with a penny loafer or a track shoe, but the well-preserved footwear was made of a single piece of leather, laced up the front and back, researchers reported Wednesday in PLoS One, a journal of the Public Library of Science.

Worn and shaped by the wearer's right foot, the shoe was found in a cave along with other evidence of human occupation. The shoe had been stuffed with grass, which dated to the same time as the leather of the shoe — between 5,637 and 5,387 years ago.

"This is great luck," enthused archaeologist Ron Pinhasi of University College Cork in Cork, Ireland, who led the research team.

"We normally only find broken pots, but we have very little information about the day-to-day activity" of these ancient people. "What did they eat? What did they do? What did they wear? This is a chance to see this ... it gives us a real glimpse into society," he said in a telephone interview.

Previously the oldest leather shoe discovered in Europe or Asia was on the famous Otzi, the "Iceman" found frozen in the Alps a few years ago and now preserved in Italy. Otzi has been dated to 5,375 and 5,128 years ago, a few hundred years more recent than the Armenian shoe.

Otzi's shoes were made of deer and bear leather held together by a leather strap. The Armenian shoe appears to be made of cowhide, Pinhasi said.

Older sandals have been found in a cave in Missouri, but those were made of fiber rather than leather.

The shoe found in what is now Armenia was found in a pit, along with a broken pot and some wild goat horns.

But Pinhasi doesn't think it was thrown away. There was discarded material that had been tossed outside the cave, while this pit was inside in the living area. And while the shoe had been worn, it wasn't worn out.

It's not clear if the grass that filled the shoe was intended as a lining or insulation, or to maintain the shape of the shoe when it was stored, according to the researchers.

The Armenian shoe was small by current standards — European size 37 or U.S. women's size 7 — but might have fit a man of that era, according to Pinhasi.

He described the shoe as a single piece of leather cut to fit the foot. The back of the shoe was closed by a lace passing through four sets of eyelets. In the front, 15 pairs of eyelets were used to lace from toe to top.

There was no reinforcement in the sole, just the one layer of soft leather. "I don't know how long it would last in rocky terrain," Pinhasi said.

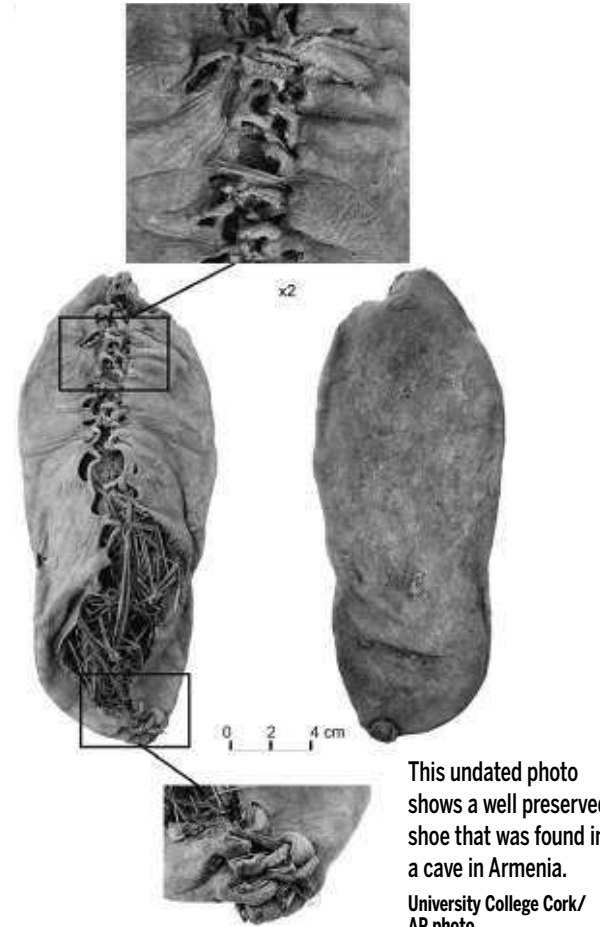

He noted that the shoe is similar to a type of footwear common in the Aran Islands, west of Ireland, up until the 1950s. The Irish version, known as "pampooties" reportedly didn't last long, he said.

"In fact, enormous similarities exist between the manufacturing technique and style of this (Armenian) shoe and those found across Europe at later periods, suggesting that this type of shoe was worn for thousands of years across a large and environmentally diverse region," Pinhasi said.

While the Armenian shoe was soft when unearthed, the leather has begun to harden now that it is exposed to air, Pinhasi said.

Oh, and unlike a lot of very old shoes, it didn't smell.

Pinhasi said the shoe is currently at the Institute of Archaeology in Yerevan, but he hopes it will be sent to laboratories in either Switzerland or Germany where it can be treated for preservation and then returned to Armenia.

Ann Kontos

RUPERT — Ann Kontos, beloved wife, mother and daughter, passed from this life Monday, June 7, 2010, in Rupert, Idaho.

She was born Feb. 17, 1962, in Blackfoot, Idaho. She was the third of six children of Joyce and Gerald Simmons. Her years of schooling were all done in the Minidoka County School system, and she graduated from Minico High School in May 1980. Upon graduation and while working at King's in Rupert, she put herself through cosmetology school and graduated a year later. She worked as a beautician for a short time in Boise and then returned to Rupert and worked as a beautician for the next 10 years.

On April 26, 1983, she met the love of her life, John Kontos, at a church dinner. They spent that summer dating and then he left the area to go to graduate school. He returned at Thanksgiving to ask her to marry him and they were sealed for time and all eternity on March 21, 1984, in the Salt Lake Temple of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. He then hauled her to Montana for the next two-plus years while he finished his graduate work. Upon his graduation, they returned to Rupert and have made it their home for the past 24 years.

Ann gave up cutting hair two months prior to their first son coming into their lives on May 22, 1991. They had gone through a great deal to start a family and were truly blessed by the arrival of Andrew John. She remained at home as a homemaker and mother and the family grew again on Nov. 14, 1995, with the arrival of Rhett G.

She continued to be a stay-at-home mom until nine years ago when she went to work at Rupert Elementary School as a part-time reading aide, then as an instructional aide, library aide and, for the past three years, a secretary. She truly loved meeting and greeting people as they came into the school and loved the children. One of her great joys was the kids saying "Hi" to her when she was out in the community.

Her greatest love was spending time with her husband and two sons. She will always be remembered for her countless hours of service to family and friends. Other hobbies included gardening, golf, stamping, family vacations and following her sons' exploits on various sports fields and the swim team. She and John loved spending time in their yard and she had just finished planting her flowers prior to her passing.

She was a lifelong member of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints and served in many capacities—Sunday School teacher, counselor in the Relief Society and Young Women's organizations and also as president of the Young Women's organization. She loved the young women and the leaders that she served with.

She is survived by her husband, John of 26 years; her sons, Andrew and Rhett; her parents, Joyce and Gerald Simmons of Rupert; and her siblings, Chuck (Karen) Simmons of Rupert, Jay (Stacey) Simmons of Meridian, Karen (Kasey) Arritt of Rexburg, Jean (Wayne) Stevenson of Meridian and Megan (Paul) Hanson of Twin Falls; and numerous aunts, uncles, cousins, nieces and nephews. She was preceded in death by her grandparents, father-in-law, George Kontos; and brother-in-law, Greg Kontos; and two extremely special friends, Sheila Swenson and Nancy Saurey.

The funeral will be held at 2 p.m. Saturday, June 12, at the Rupert LDS 7th Ward Church, 324 E. 18th St., with Bishop Kelly Bessire officiating. Burial will follow at the Rupert Cemetery. A viewing for family and friends will be from 6 to 8 p.m. Friday, June 11, and 1 to 1:45 p.m. prior to the service Saturday at the church. Services are under the direction of Hansen Mortuary in Rupert.

In lieu of flowers, donations may be made to the Rupert Elementary Library or the Rupert Aquatic Center in her name.

Alma Alice Bentzinger

JEROME — Alma Alice Bentzinger (formerly Davis) joined her Heavenly Father early Tuesday morning, June 8, 2010, due to complications from pneumonia.

Alma, 78 years old, was born in Boise, Idaho, on Sept. 30, 1931, to Florence Eastman Davis and Floyd Davis, both of Iowa. Alma grew up with her brothers, Clarence and Merle, both deceased. Her father preceded her in death when Alma was 6 years old, and her mother, Florence, was remarried to Webster King in 1937. Alma attended grade school at Meridian Grade School and Amity Grade School, and then graduated from Meridian High School with the Class of 1949.

She met her "one true love," LeRoy Bentzinger, in school and married him in Meridian on Feb. 25, 1951. Alma was an exceptionally graceful wife and mother to three children, Gale Bentzinger in 1952 (surviving), Connie (Tom Davis) in 1954 (surviving) and Mark Bentzinger in 1960 (who preceded her in death). She has eight grandchildren and 11 great-grandchildren.

Crocheting was her favorite pastime, and she made hundreds of beautiful creations for us to enjoy. Playing bridge, visiting with friends over coffee and keeping her grandchildren occupied baking bread, swimming in the lake and playing cards also kept her busy.

As a homemaker, she worked full time raising her three children. Our family was blessed with such a dedicated, loving and strong mother, grandmother, wife and sister. Alma cooked for the children of Jerome School District for 12 years between 1982 and 1994. Alma was active on the election boards, worked the 1970 Census, and was instrumental in the founding of the South Fork Boise River Senior Center with her husband, LeRoy. Alma and LeRoy split their time between Pine and Jerome, Idaho, from 1980 on and built a home in Pine in 1992. The fresh mountain air always smelled good to her and she always welcomed the handpicked wildflower bouquets.

Mom and Grandma: Thank you for your love, guidance and companionship. We'll dearly miss you, but you'll forever remain in our hearts.

Please join us in remembrance and a celebration of her life at Hove-Robertson Funeral Chapel in Jerome on Friday, June 11, at 1:30 in the afternoon. In lieu of flowers donations may be made to the South Fork Boise River Senior Center Memorial Fund, 350 Pine-Featherville North Road, Pine, ID 83647.

Jack Harrison, survivor of Great Escape, dies at 97

By Robert Barr
Associated Press writer

LONDON — Jack Harrison, who survived the Great Escape plot by Allied prisoners in a German prison in World War II, has died at age 97, his family said.

Harrison died Friday at Erskine veterans' home in Bishopton, Scotland.

As one of the camp's gardeners, Harrison helped dispose of the dirt excavated from three escape tunnels. He was 98th on the list of some 200 inmates designated to make the escape on March 24, 1944, but only 76 got away before guards detected the breakout and raised the alarm.

The breakout was celebrated in the 1963 film "The Great Escape" starring Steve McQueen and James Garner.

Only three men managed to reach safety. Adolf Hitler ordered the execution of 50 recaptured escapers, and 23 others were returned to custody.

British news reports said Harrison was believed to be the last survivor of the plot, but this could not be confirmed. In addition to the 200 men who won places in the escape queue through a drawing, others were also involved in preparations.

"I guess it was a blessing in disguise I never made it through, as most were shot," Harrison said in an interview last year with the Scottish Sun newspaper.

"But the main purpose wasn't just to escape. It was to outfox the Germans. It was a huge moral victory. It humiliated Hitler and gave the Nazis a bloody nose."

Of the three tunnels dug by prisoners, two had been found by guards and closed before the escape attempt.

When the escape was detected, Harrison said he had to quickly burn his disguise as a Siemens engineer and get back into his prison uniform.

"I was to be a Hungarian electrician so I became Aleksander Regenyi, who was employed by a German firm," he recalled.

Harrison was a Royal Air Force pilot who was shot down and captured in November 1942 on his first mission, a raid on the Dutch port of Den Helder. He was taken to Stalag Luft III prison near Sagan in eastern Germany — now Zagan, Poland.

After the war, Harrison resumed his teaching career. He retired in 1975 as director of education for the Isle of Bute.

"To others he was considered a war hero, but to us he was much more than that. He was a family man first and foremost as well as a church elder, Rotarian, scholar, traveler and athlete," his son Chris and daughter Jane said in a statement.

They said Harrison took up marathon running in his seventies to raise money for charity.

Brazil: Man accused of jailing daughter, having kids with her

By Bradley Brooks
Associated Press writer

RIO DE JANEIRO — A man in a remote fishing village in Brazil kept his daughter imprisoned for 12 years, raped her repeatedly and had seven children with her, police said Wednesday.

The man is also accused of abusing a young girl he had with his daughter.

Police allege that Jose Agostinho Pereira, 54, kept his daughter, now 28, under virtual house arrest in a two-room, thatched-roof hut near a tiny fishing village in northeastern Brazil.

An officer who aided in the arrest said the home was located in such a remote, jungle area that the only way to reach it was by using canoes. Authorities said the children appeared to suffer from malnutrition and could barely communicate with others. Most were unclothed.

The alleged abuse began when Pereira's wife left him in 1998, said police inspector Jair Lima de Paiva.

Pereira has been in jail since Tuesday in the city of Pinheiro in Maranhao state, about 1,400 miles north of Rio de Janeiro. Charges have not been filed against him. Under Brazilian law, prosecutors only file charges after police have ended their investigation.

It was not immediately known if Pereira had a lawyer.

Paiva said Pereira kept his daughter and the children in nearly complete isolation in the countryside near the village of Experimento, about 50 miles outside of Pinheiro.

While the exact ages of the children — four girls and three boys — were not known as none of their births were registered, police believe they range in age from 2-months-old to 12.

"None of them were allowed to leave the house. None can read, they can barely communicate with other people," said Paiva. "They were all threatened with their lives if they tried to escape or tell anyone about the situation."

Paiva said police were tipped off about Pereira's alleged crimes by an anonymous phone call.

Officers from Pinheiro were sent to the remote area about 10 days ago, where they located Pereira's house, kept it under observation for a few days and then arrested him.

"He confessed to everything," said a police officer who helped arrest Pereira, speaking on condition of anonymity, as he was not authorized to discuss the case.

Pereira's daughter and the seven children are now under the care of the government's protective services.

Prep softball, VB tournaments set to be condensed

Wrestling start moved up a week

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

There may not be another gauntlet-style path to a softball or volleyball state championship.

The Idaho High School Activities Association passed an initial vote Wednesday on condensing the state volleyball and softball tournament brackets from a true double-elimination to a modified double-elimination bracket that mirrors the basketball tournaments.

The volleyball tournament would remain a two-day tournament, while the softball tournament would shorten from three days to two.

Support for the measure was nearly unanimous.

"We figured it out in volleyball alone the IHSAA is saving over $7,000 for the state tournaments (on the two-day schedule rather than a three-day schedule). The saving between both of those sports is going to be somewhere in the neighborhood of the $10,000," said Jerome athletic director Ty Jones, who is an IHSAA board member. "With softball, if it passes the second reading, that's one less night in a motel that you have to stay, plus meals. ... It came down to cost."

One area coach expressed disappointment in the proposed change, offering a potential solution to keep the double-elimination format and cut a day off the softball tournament schedule.

"I like the format. The way it's set up now is that it gives you a chance if you do have a bad game and you still are maybe the best team in the state you have a chance to come around and win it," said Kimberly softball and girls basketball coach Rich Bishop. "If they wanted to go to a two-day tournament they could still keep it the same way it is — we only play the one game on the Thursday, so you could make it all-day Friday and all-day Saturday. You're able to play multiple games in a day and be OK."

Bishop's Bulldogs benefited from the double-elimination bracket to win the Class 3A softball title last month, but he insists his feelings aren't affected by that.

"Being a coach in both types of formats, it is nice to be able to have that. We ended up playing Buhl for the seventh time, and they played well and beat us, but the girls were able to have some motivation. ... They deserved a state championship and proved it by beating the teams they did and beating them the way they did," he said. "I

Let the good times roll

Bruins' Wagner shines in sprints

By Mike Christensen
Times-News writer

Mercedes went to college. Madi tore her ACL. The Bowcut twins went to Canyon Ridge.

With that, the Bruins' Fantastic Five was dissolved. The lone remaining member: Brooke Wagner.

With her four sprinting partners gone, the Twin Falls junior needed some training competition. She found it in the form of the Bruins' boys track team.

"I got really close with the boys," said Wagner. "It felt good to beat them. They'd always say, 'Oh we're so fast, we're boys.' Then I'd wipe the track with them."

Those humbled boys weren't alone. Wagner set a Class 4A state record of 12.4 seconds in the 100 meters, won the 200 in 25.32 seconds and nabbed silver medals in the 400 and 4x400 relay. That impressive May weekend capped a stellar season for the 2010 Times-News Track and Field Female Athlete of the Year.

The Bruin girls finished second at state for the second straight year "largely because of her," according to Twin Falls coach Marty Grindstaff.

Wagner won four golds at state in 2009, teaming up Mercedes Blackwood, Madi Worst, Brianna Bowcut and Danielle Bowcut to win the 4x100, 4x200 and 4x400 relays. She also claimed gold in the 400.

While she anchored this year's 4x400 team to second place, she snatched the spotlight in the individual sprints this year. In the 100 and 200, Wagner edged out Columbia's Alex Van Halder for gold. She nearly swept all three sprints, coming in just behind rival Ali Eisenbeiss of Bishop Kelly in the 400.

"At first when I came across I was kind of upset," Wagner said of the race. "But when I saw my time, I cut off a second and a half from my winning time last year and I ran an all-around PR, so I can't be upset with myself for running the best that I can run. Ali pulled out an amazing time with a (56.59)."

The only thing that changes as fast as Wagner's position on the track is her hair color. This season it went from brown to purple to red to blue to bleach blonde. At state, she wore her blonde locks in cornrows.

Vandal football penalized by NCAA

Six scholarships lost
For the Times-News

The University of Idaho football team lost six scholarships for the 2010 season after its academic progress rate landing below the NCAA minimum for the most recent reporting cycle.

The Vandals' initial scholarships for the 2010 class were reduced by three to 22, while the maximum allowed for the team in 2010 is 79 of a possible 85.

Idaho's APR of 905 is below the NCAA standard of 925 (of a possible 1,000). Idaho media relations credited the result to six student-athletes who both left the program during the 2008-09 year and were not academically eligible at the time of their departure.

"I'm not concerned about those who don't have the character or commitment to stay with the program," Idaho coach Robb Akey said. "I'm concerned about the ones who do stay. They need to earn their degrees. That's why they came to the University of Idaho."

Akey's team graduated 11 of 12 players in 2009-10 and 15 of 18 in 2008-09.

"We'll continue to work on our APR but the bottom line is graduation," Idaho athletic director Spear said, noting Idaho graduates 92 percent of its student-athletes who complete their eligibility.

Said Akey: "As much as I hate to lose any scholarships, we cannot let a rule I struggle with hold us hostage and keep us from running a strong program. Our APR will continue to improve. I believe we are doing a good job of managing it."

Minico goes 0-2 on Day 1 of RBI tourney

By Ryan Howe
Times-News writer

RUPERT — Packing 23 games in four days can make for a long week for those working the gate, concessions or field crew at Warburton Field.

But every year, Minico's RBI Tournament serves its purpose: giving kids as much playing experience as possible.

"I'm glad we put it on every year," said Minico's K.J. Redder. "All the kids here like it and it's a good experience. Every team that comes here is pretty competitive and it's really fun."

It's been said that nothing is more fun than winning, although Minico didn't make that happen on Wednesday. The Spartans fell 9-6 to the Pocatello Regulators and 12-6 to Brigham City (Utah).

"Today was a rough day," Redder said. "Our hitting was decent, I thought we swung it pretty well. We had a few errors here and there in the field, but other than that I didn't think we did too bad for the first games."

CSI's Huber, Filer's Gerrish get MLB call

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

Travis Huber knew it was coming, but he still grew increasingly nervous as round after round on the final day of the Major League Baseball First-Year Player Draft concluded without hearing his name announced.

With four rounds left he was finally able to exhale.

Huber, the College of Southern Idaho's closer, was taken in the 47th round (1,427th overall selection) by the Florida Marlins, the same organization that took then-CSI closer Tyler Curtis a season ago.

"They called me a few days ago and said they were going to draft me and that it would be sometime in the later rounds, on the second or third day," said Huber, who was waiting alongside CSI coach Boomer Walker when his name was finally called.

"I was a little bit nervous toward the end, but they said they'd draft me and they were true to their word. Once

Donnelley wood bat tourney opens today

By David Bashore
Times-News writer

Seven teams will descend on the two Twin Falls high schools for the three-day Donnelley Sports Wood Bat Tournament, which gets started today at both Twin Falls and Canyon Ridge.

Three area teams — the Twin Falls Cowboys, Twin Falls Hawks and Kimberly Astros — join Meridian, Boise, Marsh Falls and Blackfoot in the tourney field.

"It's great to play with the wood bats, and we enjoy playing teams that we don't normally get to play," said Kimberly coach Tom Myers. "It's going to be a fun tournament."

The Cowboys are back to defend their title against six rivals, up from three from a season ago.

Teams will play with wood bats rather than customary aluminum, which forces them to play small ball and advance runners rather than waiting for that deep ball in the gap, or the much-loved home run.

"Even the older kids have a harder time hitting it out of the park with the wood bats," said Twin Falls Cowboys coach Mark Schaal. "It evens up the fields a little bit and gives some of the younger clubs a chance to compete if you can play the small ball. We just like teaching that short game and that's how we're going to beat some of those better clubs down the road anyway."

Teams will get three games apiece, with the Twin Falls Cowboys playing four — the last one against the Boise Capitals won't count,

Pierce looks for better game, less foul trouble

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Celtics watched the misery unfold again, a poor performance that was tough to take the first time around.

As video played of Tuesday night's 91-84 loss to the Los Angeles Lakers, Tony Allen noticed another audience member, Paul Pierce, wasn't enjoying himself.

"He seemed pretty upset today in the film session," Allen said Wednesday. "I just saw his gestures. It kind of looked like he felt he could do more."

Pierce certainly has plenty of room for improvement in Game 4 of the NBA finals tonight. He made just four shots before tossing in a meaningless layup with 5.1 seconds left and finished with 15 points, two rebounds and two assists. In Game 2, the Celtics won 103-94 in spite of him as he missed nine of 11 shots and scored just 10 points after leading the team in the regular season with an 18.3 average.

Minco led until the fifth inning when Pocatello tied it. The Regulators took the lead with three more runs in the sixth, when the game was called early due to the time limit rule.

"I think we could have beat them, but they called it," Redder said. "I think any other day we could have had 'em."

Against Brigham City, Minico dug itself a hole by giving up six runs on seven hits in the second inning.

"We got down and then kind of coasted," said Redder, who hit a two-run homer in the third.

Starting pitcher Suede Denker went 5 1-3 innings, giving up 13 hits. Andrew Frank batted 2-for-3 and Casey Christiansen had a three-run double.

In other RBI Tournament action Wednesday, Tyler Anderson of the Pocatello Regulators homered three times to lead his team in a pair of wins, including a 13-3 victory over Brigham City.

Chicago Blackhawks forward Marian Hossa lifts the Stanley Cup after the Blackhawks defeated the Philadelphia Flyers 4-3 in overtime Wednesday in Philadelphia to win the Stanley Cup Finals 4 games to 2. It was the third straight trip to the Finals for Hossa, who lost with Pittsburgh two years ago and with Detroit last year.

Kane's OT goal wins Cup for Blackhawks

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — There was no red light, just Blackhawks flying over the boards in celebration.

Sticks and helmets were thrown, scattered all over the ice and still no signal for a goal.

After a brief review, there was no dispute — the Chicago Blackhawks were the Stanley Cup champions.

Patrick Kane sneaked the puck past Michael Leighton 4:10 into overtime and stunned Philadelphia to lift the Blackhawks to a 4-3 overtime win in Game 6 on Wednesday night for their first championship since 1961.

No one but the Blackhawks appeared to know what was going on for a few frozen moments. Kane and his linemates seemed the only players on the ice who knew the puck found the side of the net. The goal light never went on, but that didn't stop most of the Blackhawks from storming the ice and mobbing each other in celebration.

The review was a short one and Kane will go down as scoring one of the biggest winners in team history.

"I was just hoping to God it was just an actual goal," said captain Jonathan Toews, the Conn Smythe Trophy winner as play-off MVP. "They came back hard in the third and we just stuck with it."

Kane raised his arms right away and skated behind the net, knowing the goal was good. While the Flyers sat on the bench in stunned silence with confused looks, the Blackhawks began to celebrate in their own end around goaltender Antti Niemi.

"I knew it went in right away," Kane said. "What a feeling. I can't believe it. We just won the Stanley Cup. I can't believe this just happened. ... It's something you dream about, scoring the final goal in the Stanley Cup finals."

Before reaching the group hug, Kane stooped to pick up some loose ice shavings — looking like a mischievous kid on Christmas ready to throw a snowball in the backyard.

"There's so many great things about winning a Stanley Cup. This is it," Toews said. "This is the best feeling you can ever get. I just can't believe it's happened."

Toews was first to touch the Cup, taking it from commissioner Gary Bettman and hoisting it above his head in triumph. Marian Hossa, whose last two attempts at a title were denied the last two years with Detroit and Pittsburgh, was next. He lifted it and bench-pressed the big trophy, snapping his head back in exhilaration.

"I'm so happy I finally did it," Hossa said. "We couldn't just put our heads down. We had to work, and we knew we could do it."

The Blackhawks completed their revival from the bottom of the NHL to holding the silver trophy on the strength of rising stars Kane and Toews.

Niemi was solid in goal to help the Blackhawks wrap up their most successful season since Bobby Hull and Stan Mikita led the way 49 years ago.

Homers aplenty as Cubs win

MILWAUKEE — Derrek Lee hit his 300th homer, Marlon Byrd and Geovany Soto each connected twice and the Chicago Cubs showed some surprising pop to power past the Milwaukee Brewers 9-4 on Wednesday night.

Chicago's five homers marked its biggest outburst this season and were more than the Cubs hit in the previous nine games combined.

All the offense helped starter Carlos Zambrano (2-4) win his first game since returning to the rotation and overshadowed the fact that he wasn't very sharp again.

NATIONALS 7, PIRATES 5

WASHINGTON — Ryan Zimmerman grounded a go-ahead single off the shin of Pittsburgh reliever D.J. Carrasco in the seventh inning and the Washington Nationals, still buzzing after Stephen Strasburg's dazzling debut, beat the Pirates.

REDS 6, GIANTS 3

CINCINNATI — Leadoff man Orlando Cabrera got the NL's top offense going with three doubles and a single and Aaron Harang rebounded from his shortest start of the season, leading the Cincinnati Reds over the San Francisco Giants.

ASTROS 6, ROCKIES 2, 10 INNINGS

DENVER — Carlos Lee hit a grand slam with two outs in the 10th inning to provide the winning margin.

Lee connected for his 15th career slam, launching the first pitch from Matt Belisle (1-3) to deep left field. The win was the seventh in nine games this month for the Astros.

AMERICAN LEAGUE INDIANS 11, RED SOX 0

CLEVELAND — Justin Masterson beat his former team by pitching a two-hitter for his first career shutout.

Travis Hafner hit his 10th career grand slam — first since May 7, 2007 — in an eight-run eighth inning against Boston's bullpen.

RAYS 10, BLUE JAYS 1

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — David Price became the AL's first nine-game winner, backed by three Tampa Bay home runs, and the Rays beat the Toronto Blue Jays.

WHITE SOX 15, TIGERS 3

CHICAGO — Ramon Castro and Brent Lillibridge hit three-run homers and the Chicago White Sox, after critical comments by general manager Ken Williams, routed the Detroit Tigers.

YANKEES 4, ORIOLES 2

BALTIMORE — CC Sabathia allowed two runs over seven innings in another winning effort against the Baltimore Orioles, and Robinson Cano contributed three hits for the New York Yankees.

The Yankees bounced back from an early 2-0 deficit to win their 10th straight against Baltimore.

RANGERS 12, MARINERS 2

ARLINGTON, Texas — Josh Hamilton homered and drove in three runs, C.J. Wilson pitched seven effective innings and the Texas Rangers beat the Seattle Mariners.

Hamilton's two-run shot keyed a six-run burst in the second inning against Ian Snell (0-5). The Rangers are 7-2 against the Mariners this season.

TWINS 6, ROYALS 2

MINNEAPOLIS — Carl Pavano pitched eight strong innings, Delmon Young homered and the Minnesota Twins beat the Kansas City Royals.

Joe Mauer hit an RBI double and Jason Kubel had two hits to back Pavano (6-6), who lost three of his previous four starts.

Strasmania overload after rookie's 14K debut

WASHINGTON (AP) — The baseball world rubbed its eyes Wednesday morning, shook its head and thought: "Did that really happen?"

Restaurants in the nation's capital started renaming menu items after a certain young pitcher, including one place that is now serving a "Strasburger" with 14 pickles — one for each strikeout.

In Cleveland, where the sequel plays on Sunday, the box office had a run on tickets — 3,000 sold in less than 24 hours.

And, yes — no foolin' — the topic was even raised on the floor of the U.S. Senate.

Baseball has an overnight sensation. His name is Stephen Strasburg.

"We can only hope and pray that his arm holds up," Senate Republican Leader Mitch McConnell said during an exchange with Democrat Harry Reid of Nevada, "and that he has the kind of career that everyone is anticipating. There was literally electricity in the air. It was an exciting event, and it was great to be there."

Oregon dismisses QB Masoli

EUGENE, Ore. — Suspended Oregon quarterback Jeremiah Masoli was kicked off the team Wednesday, two days after a police officer cited him for marijuana possession and driving infractions.

In a statement, the university said Masoli was dropped because he did not "adhere to obligations" outlined by coach Chip Kelly. The coach, through a spokesman, declined to comment.

A Springfield police officer cited Masoli late Monday on charges of possessing less than one ounce of marijuana, driving with a suspended license and failure to stop when entering a roadway, said Sgt. Tom Borchers of the Springfield Police Department.

Masoli can either pay a fine or contest the accusations at a June 24 court appearance, Borchers said.

Kelly suspended Masoli in March for the entire 2010 season after the QB pleaded guilty to burglary for his role in the theft of laptops and a guitar from a fraternity. Masoli remained on scholarship and practiced with the team this spring in hopes of returning for the 2011 season.

Masoli has one season of eligibility remaining.

Masoli threw for 2,147 yards and 15 touchdowns last season. He also rushed for 668 yards and 13 touchdowns in a season that ended with a Rose Bowl loss to Ohio State.

The San Francisco native finished his Oregon career with 1,386 rushing yards, the most ever by a Ducks quarterback.

NEBRASKA DECISION ON BIG TEN COULD COME FRIDAY

OMAHA, Neb. — Nebraska could be on its way to the Big Ten by Friday.

The university's Board of Regents on Wednesday evening amended the agenda for its previously scheduled Friday meeting to include a briefing from chancellor Harvey Perlman and athletic director Tom Osborne on conference alignment. The regents then could vote to leave the Big 12.

Osborne said a decision has not been finalized, and he declined comment when asked whether the Big Ten had formally invited Nebraska to join the league.

Shawn Watson, the offensive coordinator for Nebraska's football team, said Osborne hasn't given the athletic department staff an indication which way the school will go.

Watson said Osborne met with the staff last Friday to tell them about last week's Big 12 meetings and to "get a feel" for what the staff thinks about the Big 12 and Big Ten.

Since then, Watson said, Osborne hasn't updated the staff on developments.

The university issued a statement Wednesday night to counter media reports that regents met informally Wednesday and had already agreed to a move to the Big Ten.

Officials, however, do want a quick resolution on the future of the Huskers' athletic programs, whether that means staying with several longtime rivals in the Big 12 or leaving for the Big Ten.

MICHIGAN RECRUIT DORSEY DENIED ADMISSION TO SCHOOL

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Michigan athletic director Dave Brandon says Florida prep football star Demar Dorsey has been informed he will not be admitted to the school.

Brandon told The Associated Press on Wednesday the decision was made by the university's office of undergraduate admissions.

The highly touted defensive back was one of the top players coach Rich Rodriguez signed in February. Michigan's secondary has struggled the past two years.

The 6-foot, 175-pound Dorsey starred at Lauderdale Lakes High school.

out from the crowd — "I wear fun things to school like a pink rain coat," she said — Wagner noticed the bright red hair of one of her older sister's friends last spring. Wagner instantly wanted to turn her dishwater blonde hair the same hue, but her mother wasn't so sure.

"If I win state, can I dye my hair bright red?" Wagner asked her mom. Mom agreed. "Then I got four gold medals and she said, 'You can dye it whatever color you want.'"

Since then it's been red, magenta and hot pink to go with the track season's array of colors. But nothing makes her stand out like her speed in the three sprints, all of which she likes for different reasons.

100: "I love the feeling of getting out the blocks. When you have a great block start you just feel that explosion. It's something you can't even imagine."

200: "The 200 is kind of somewhere in between. You finish and you're kind of tired. You've got to get good block starts, but you've got to have endurance."

400: "That 400, I hate it so much. It's so awful. Sometimes when I come across that finish line I don't

"That 400, I hate it so much. It's so awful. Sometimes when I come across that finish line I don't even want to stop because I know how much pain I'm going to be in and that I'm going to be throwing up all over. But it's the race I get most nervous for, so that's probably an indication I like it the most, but secretly."

even want to stop because I know how much pain I'm going to be in and that I'm going to be throwing up all over. But it's the race I get most nervous for, so that's probably an indication I like it the most, but secretly. It's a secret love-hate relationship."

Wagner loves spending time in the weight room and said her daily squat and power clean reps were pivotal in improving her 100 time from 12.8 seconds to 12.4 during the course of the season.

Molding her muscular frame has always been a passion. She was a state gymnastics champion at age 12, shines in soccer and cross country at TFHS and will spend June 17-20 in Lake Placid, N.Y. at a U.S. Bobsled and Skelton Federation Camp. After four days of screening and tests, she'll learn if she advances to a September camp. That could ultimately land her a chance to train for the Olympics in Park City, Utah.

Her ideal: Run track for Utah State University in Logan and train for the bobsled in Park City.

As for her senior year on the cinders, she'd love to sweep all three sprints.

"That'd be nice," she said. "If I can't win them all, if there's a girl that's better than me, I just want to get my times to the best they can be for colleges to see. That's my main goal is to be able to move on to college running or college soccer. ... The good times are what I'm shooting for."

So far, she's finding them on and off the track.

The understand why it can't happen in basketball, but you want it where eventually the best teams come out on top. That happens in a double-elimination tournament."

A final vote for amending the tournaments is scheduled for Aug. 4.

Two other items pertinent to District IV were formally approved Wednesday.

The start date for the wrestling season was moved to Nov. 15, up a week, in order to increase the number of wrestlers who will have fulfilled practice requirements ahead of the opening match date of the season.

Jones said with the Thanksgiving holiday wedged in the first week of practice, some wrestlers are out of town and as a result don't log enough practice days to be eligible immediately when competition starts.

Also, the 2010-11 state tournament sites were confirmed. Sunway Soccer Complex in Twin Falls will host the Class 3A soccer tournaments in October, while all the volleyball tournaments will be held at various District IV sites as well.

they said my name it was a big relief."

Huber went 2-2 as a freshman in 20 relief appearances, posting a 2.27 ERA and five saves. He has signed a NJCAA National Letter of Intent to return to Twin Falls next season.

He said he intends to honor that commitment unless blown away with a contract offer.

"I haven't been pitching very long, and I feel I have a lot of room to improve," Huber said. "There's no better place than CSI to do it."

Huber is in Twin Falls for the summer, taking summer classes and working to improve his fastball — which typically touches 90 mph but cracked 92 in the Region 18 Tournament — and his overall strength.

Still, he called getting drafted "an awesome deal."

Also getting the awesome deal was former Filer pitcher Paul Gerrish, selected in the 42nd round (1,263rd overall) by the Houston Astros.

Gerrish has a 1-3 record with a 4.57 ERA this season at TCU. He led Filer to the 2005 Class 3A state championship alongside Tyler Knigge, a junior who was drafted Tuesday in the 12th round by the Philadelphia Phillies.

Gerrish, who is preparing along with his Horned Frog teammates to face Texas in the NCAA Division Super Regional round for the second straight season, could not be reached for comment Wednesday evening.

The contract deadline for amateur players with remaining college eligibility is Aug. 16. As a senior, Gerrish is not bound to that deadline in any negotiations with the Astros. They will hold his rights until one week before the 2011 draft.

LEGAL NOTICE

The Idaho Department of Fish and Game was informed by the Bureau of Fisheries and Regional fishery managers that, through May 30, weekly angler surveys indicate that about 56 percent of the State's harvest share of hatchery Chinook salmon greater than or equal to 24 inches total length (adults) returning to the Clearwater River drainage was harvested. By June 6, anglers likely will have harvested about 80 percent of the State's share of adult Chinook salmon. The majority of that harvest has occurred downstream of the Orofino Bridge.

To provide opportunity in fisheries in the South Fork Clearwater and Lochsa rivers to harvest adult Chinook salmon the Bureau of Fisheries recommends closing the North Fork Clearwater River and the mainstem Clearwater River Chinook salmon fisheries downstream of the Orofino Bridge effective the end of fishing on June 6, 2010. The Bureau of fisheries also recommends closing the Chinook salmon fisheries in the mainstem Clearwater River from the Orofino Bridge upstream to the South Fork Clearwater and in the Middle Fork Clearwater River effective the end of fishing June 13, 2010.

Pursuant to his authority under Idaho Code Section 36-106(e)(6) (A), the Idaho Department of Fish and Game Director hereby closes the Chinook salmon fisheries in the North Fork Clearwater River and the mainstem Clearwater River downstream of the Orofino Bridge effective the end of fishing on June 6, 2010. The Director also closes the Chinook salmon fisheries in the mainstem Clearwater River upstream of the Orofino Bridge to the South Fork Clearwater River and in the Middle Fork Clearwater River effective the end of fishing on June 13, 2010.

Sudoku is a number-placing puzzle based on a 9x9 grid with several given numbers. The object is to place the numbers 1 to 9 in the empty squares so that each row, each column and each 3x3 box contains the same number only once. The difficulty level of the Conceptis Sudoku increases from Monday to Sunday.

DEAR ABBY: My parents told me that a member of their congregation carries a licensed gun when he's in church. He is not a law enforcement officer or a private security guard, but keeps the gun on him "for protection." When I asked what the pastor has to say about this, I was told, "He doesn't know or can't do anything about it."

I suggested that Mom and Dad speak to the congregation board of directors because they are legally and financially responsible for the church. They refused even though they are not happy about this gun issue.

DEAR ABBY
Jeanne Phillips

My parents have a long history of complaining about things but doing nothing to resolve them. I feel that if someone needs to carry a gun at all times, I don't want to be in his presence. If he's the target of an assassination, the killer might shoot the wrong person. I will not set foot in the church as long as that man is there. I'm not sure what bothers me more — that this man is packing heat or that my parents have valid concerns and won't speak out. What do you think?

— GUN-SHY INN.Y.C.
DEAR GUN-SHY: If the man has a license to carry the gun, then he is breaking no laws. You are certainly within your rights to refrain from being in his presence. If your parents were really concerned about their safety, they would either talk to the pastor or go somewhere else to worship. Because they have done neither, I think you should let it go.

DEAR ABBY: I am the oldest of three. Our mother was verbally and physically abusive while we were growing up. I now suspect she suffered from bipolar disorder, but back then no one had any idea what it was or how to treat it. Her behavior drove our father away, leaving her to manage finances on her own. She made a miserable mess of it and, at 70, is still working so she can support herself. She wants to retire, but has almost nothing in savings. Because of the way she treated us, none of us wants much to do with her, and we are in no position to support her after she retires.

The problem, Abby, is that she has started laying an enormous guilt trip on my 22-year-old daughter and wants her to take her in. I caught wind of it and stepped in. There is no way my daughter should be burdened caring for her grandmother for the next 20 years. I feel bad that she has nowhere to go, but I feel she's reaping what she has sown. Am I wrong?

— GUILT TRIPPIN'
IN NEW HAMPSHIRE
DEAR GUILT TRIPPIN': No. But has your mother ever been diagnosed as bipolar? Is she on medications now that help her to control her behavior? If the answer is yes and she has tried to make amends, then perhaps you should try to be more forgiving and forthcoming. If the answer is no, then taking her in would be a disaster.

DEAR ABBY: My husband thinks it's hilarious to sneak up and scare the daylight out of me. I have told him repeatedly that I don't think it's funny and it triggers anxiety attacks, but he won't listen. I enjoy his playful personality, but the startling has to stop. Any suggestions?

— NOT LAUGHING
IN GREENVILLE, N.C.
DEAR NOT LAUGHING: Just this: What he's doing is immature and sadistic. Humor at the expense of others isn't "playful" — it is hostile. Because it is causing anxiety attacks, consult your doctor and let the doctor explain to your husband the reason that what he's doing is a bad idea.

IF JUNE 10 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: Too much of a good thing is just that. You might tend toward extravagance of thought and deed during the next six to eight weeks. Because you are prone to keeping up with the Joneses, you could lose ground pursuing something important or waste your time and money. October is a great month for a vacation or whirlwind romance, but romance might not be as pleasant during November, when you seem to have virtual blinders on and may only see what you want to see. Wait until February, when your instincts are more accurate, to make significant changes or decisions about investments, business or career.

HOROSCOPE
Jeraldine Saunders

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A wet blanket might be thrown on your ambitions. Don't start down any path that may prove too narrow for maneuvering or too limiting to your authority. Romance that looks promising could fizzle.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Allow others to carry part of the load for a while. Someone who likes to have control will enjoy it. Pay attention to ingenious ideas that can make your money grow and write them down for future reference.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Avoid the vicious circle of needing to work hard to please others that leaves you with little time to spend with those you love. Strike a happy balance between necessities that your life revolves around.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Working behind the scenes is to your advantage. There may be enormous pressure to excel and plenty of people will notice if you don't meet deadlines. You will be wise to maintain a low profile.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may need to tiptoe around some landmines where your love life or career is concerned. Things may be going on that escape your notice. Trusted friends are your best guides through tricky situations.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Take a rain check on a shopping spree or public appearance. Celestial aspects make this a poor day to formulate agreements or spend money. Lunch dates with fascinating new prospects could fall flat.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The blame game isn't much fun. You might notice that people are quick to criticize and slow to give praise. Rather than picking apart someone's ideas or performance try being positive and supportive.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Push may be coming to shove in the business world. Don't start anything of importance today that could affect your career. Soon you have an opportunity to take a needed rest from grueling tasks.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Make your mark in the business world, but avoid signing contracts or making deals. People are sensitive to inadvertent slights, so open your book of etiquette and be on your best behavior.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Dot your i's and cross your t's. Don't give anyone an excuse to criticize you or your work. You might find that people, including yourself, are more intense than usual and more likely to look for faults.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Resentment can result when natural urges are stifled. Take a long, hard look at situations that concern you at the moment. Accept the necessity of keeping exuberance and impetuosity under control.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Concentrate on what ever needs your attention. If you can work without interruption, much can be accomplished. Be sure to offer a detached and balanced viewpoint if someone needs advice.

THE ACES ON BRIDGE® Bobby Wolff

"Fate, Time, Occasion, Chance and Change? To these All things are subject but eternal Love."
— Percy Shelley

At the Dyspeptics Club, South has admitted, under duress, that he carries a rabbit's foot for luck. He says that this has no influence on what cards he holds; it is just that he gets more out of them. When confronted with this theory North snorted loudly and commented that South's ability to throw tricks away almost rivaled his ability to be dealt more high cards than he deserved. Today's deal is an example.

In six diamonds South won the opening heart lead, drew trumps, and stalled around for a while before taking the club finesse, unsuccessfully.

Because South was trying to use this deal to demonstrate that he was actually an unlucky player, North stopped him.

"If you had bothered to take advantage of all your chances, you would have made the slam instead of going down," he said. Do you see why?

After the heart lead, declarer takes his other top heart to pitch a spade from dummy, ruffs a heart, cashes the two top spades, and leads a diamond to the king. East can win his singleton ace but must then give declarer a ruff-sluff or play a club back into the tenace.

Even if it is West who has the singleton diamond ace, he will be forced to lead a club, and thus increase declarer's chances of playing the club suit for no loser.

And if a defender does have ace-doubleton of diamonds, declarer can fall back on the club finesse as a last resort.

ANSWER: In this position a double from you would be card-showing, not penalties, because it is made under the trump suit. So there is no real likelihood of your partner passing for penalties. That being so, settle for simplicity and bid one no-trump, which rates to be the best part-score for your side.
